| Value of the individual | Bond ServantTo cover the debt in 1933 and future debt, the corporate government determined and established the value of the future labor of each individual in its jurisdiction to be $630,000. A bond of $630,000 is set on each Certificate of Live Birth. The certificates are bundled together into sets and then placed as securities on the open market. These certificates are then purchased by the Federal Reserve and/or foreign bankers. The purchaser is the “holder” of “Title.” This process made each and every person in this jurisdiction a bond servant. | FreebornFreemanFreeholderSovereign“We the people...”                                                            |

|                | 9. Experimentation on citizens without their consent.  Corporate government steals your money and gets credit for helping others with it. Politicians in return create more such programs to get more votes. Eventually there is no more to collect and give. Everyone becomes takers and there are no givers. The government then collapses within. That is why democracy never survives, because the looters eventually outnumber the producers. |                              |

| Minting of money                                      | The government must borrow before FRN's are printed. The FRB pays 2½ ¢ per FRN note printed whether $1 or $1000. The U.S. in-turn pays FRB interest indefinitely for each outstanding note or representation of a note. With electronic banking FRN's are created out of nothing and nothing being printed. What a deal!                                                                      | Coinage started in 1783. The first paper currency was issued in 1862. "Silver Certificates" last printed in 1957. Coinage of Silver coins for circulation ended with the 1964 coins. Redemption of "Silver Certificates" ended on June 24, 1968. |

1 Some of our readers have written us to inquire about our use of the term “United States of America” in the above table by
 2 reporting that they studied the term “United States of America” in federal statutes and implementing regulations and could
 3 not find where it is legally defined. In fact, it is not defined but is referenced in federal law within the following contexts:

- 4 • 28 C.F.R. §0.64-1
- 5 • 28 C.F.R. §0.96b

6 Even though the term “United States of America” is nowhere defined in federal law, we use it to refer to the collection of 7 sovereign states of the Union which form our “republic”. The federal zone is technically not part of our “republic” because
 8 the Bill of Rights, which is the first ten Amendments to the Constitution, forms the essence of the republic and it does not 9 apply within the federal zone.

10 4.5.3 The Federal Zone

11 In 1818, the Supreme Court stated that:

12 “The exclusive jurisdiction which the United States have in forts and dock-yards ceded to them, is derived from 13 the express assent of the states by whom the cessions are made. It could be derived in no other manner; because 14 without it, the authority of the state would be supreme and exclusive therein,” 3 Wheat., at 350, 351.
 15 U.S. v. Bevans, [16 U.S. 336 (1818), reaff. 19 U.S.C.A., section 1401(h).]

16 The above case establishes that the federal government only has jurisdiction over federal property that it owns within the 17 states or coming under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. In other places, it has no legislative or judicial
 18 jurisdiction. Places coming under the sovereignty or exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government under 1:8:17
 19 of the Constitution include the District of Columbia, federal territories, and enclaves within the state and we call these areas
 20 “the federal zone” throughout this book. When Congress is operating in its exclusive jurisdiction over the “federal zone”, it
 21 is important to remember that the U.S. Government has full authority to enact legislation as private acts pertaining to its 22 boundaries, and it is not a state of the union because it exists solely by virtue of the compact/constitution that created it. The 23 U.S. Constitution does not say that the District of Columbia must guarantee a Republican form of Government to its own
 24 subject citizens within its territories. (See Hepburn & Dundas v. Ellzey, 6 U.S. 445(1805); Glaeser v. Acacia Mut. Life Ass'n.,

 2 Kaplus, 368 F.2d. 431 (1966), among others).

3 Within the federal zone, there are areas where the Bill of Rights (the first ten amendments) applies and areas where it does
 4 not. The best place to go for a clarification of where it applies is the Supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244
 5 (1901). Below are quotes from that case establishing that we have two national governments:

6 "The idea prevails with some -- indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar -- that we have in this country
 7 substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its
 8 restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising
 9 such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise."
 10 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), supra.]

11 The U.S. Constitution limits federal government jurisdiction over the state Citizens using the Bill of Rights. The federal
 12 government has unlimited powers over federal citizens within territories of the United States because it is acting outside of 13 the Constitution. Administrative laws are private acts, also called "special law", and are not applicable to state Citizens. The 14 Internal Revenue Code is administrative law and "special law". Here are some more quotes from Downes that reinforce our

16 "Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98, was an action of trespass or, as appears by the original
 17 record, replevin, brought in the circuit court for the District of Columbia to try the right of Congress to impose a
 18 direct tax for general purposes on that District. 3 Stat. at L. 216, chap. 60. It was insisted that Congress could
 19 act in a double capacity: in one as legislating [182 U.S. 244, 260] for the states; in the other as a local legislature
 20 for the District of Columbia. In the latter character, it was admitted that the power of levying direct taxes might
 21 be exercised, but for District purposes only, as a state legislature might tax for state purposes; but that it could
 22 not legislate for the District under art. 1, 8, giving to Congress the power 'to lay and collect taxes, imposts, and
 23 excises,' which 'shall be uniform throughout the United States,' inasmuch as the District was no part of the 24 United States. It was held that the grant of this power was a general one without limitation as to place, and
 25 consequently extended to all places over which the government extends; and that it extended to the District of 26 Columbia as a constituent part of the United States. The fact that art. 1, 2, declares that 'representatives and 27 direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states . . . according to their respective numbers' furnished a
 28 standard by which taxes were apportioned, but not to exempt any part of the country from their operation. 'The 29 words used do not mean that direct taxes shall be imposed on states only which are represented, or shall be
 30 apportioned to representatives; but that direct taxation, in its application to states, shall be apportioned to
 31 numbers.' That art. 1, 9, 4, declaring that direct taxes shall be laid in proportion to the census, was applicable
 32 to the District of Columbia, 'and will enable Congress to apportion on it its just and equal share of the burden,
 33 with the same accuracy as on the respective states. If the tax be laid in this proportion, it is within the very words
 34 of the restriction. It is a tax in proportion to the census or enumeration referred to.' It was further held that the 35 words of the 9th section did not 'in terms require that the system of direct taxation, when resorted to, shall be
 36 extended to the territories, as the words of the 2d section require that it shall be extended to all the states. They 37 therefore may, without violence, be understood to give a rule when the territories shall be taxed, without imposing 38 the necessity of taxing them.'"

39 "There could be no doubt as to the correctness of this conclusion, so far, at least, as it applied to the District
 40 of Columbia. This District had been a part of the states of Maryland and [182 U.S. 244, 261] Virginia. It had 41 *been subject to the Constitution, and was a part of the United States[***]. The Constitution had attached to it*
 42 irrevocably. There are steps which can never be taken backward. The 43 tie that bound the states of Maryland and Virginia to the Constitution could not be dissolved, without at least
 44 the consent of the Federal and state governments to a formal separation. The mere cession of the District of 45 Columbia to the Federal government relinquished the authority of the states, but it did not take it out of the 46 United States or from under the aegis of the Constitution. Neither party had ever consented to that construction
 47 of the cession. If, before the District was set off, Congress had passed an unconstitutional act affecting its 48 inhabitants, it would have been void. If done after the District was created, it would have been equally void; in
 49 other words, Congress could not do indirectly, by carving out the District, what it could not do directly. The
 50 District still remained a part of the United States, protected by the Constitution. Indeed, it would have been a
 51 fanciful construction to hold that territory which had been once a part of the United States ceased to be such by 52 being ceded directly to the Federal government."

54 "Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform
 55 to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or 56 conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every state
 57 in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of 58 Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by
 59 representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of

Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights."

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

Based on the above and further reading of Downes, we can reach the following conclusions about the applicability of the Constitution within United States the country:

1. That the District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states;
2. That territories are not states within the meaning of Rev. Stat. 709, permitting writs of error from this court in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question;
3. That the District of Columbia and the territories are states as that word is used in treaties with foreign powers, with respect to the ownership, disposition, and inheritance of property;
4. That the territories are not within the clause of the Constitution providing for the creation of a supreme court and such inferior courts as Congress may see fit to establish;
5. That the Constitution does not apply to foreign countries or to trials therein conducted, and that Congress may lawfully [182 U.S. 244, 271] provide for such trials before consular tribunals, without the intervention of a grand or petit jury;
6. That where the Constitution has been once formally extended by Congress to territories, neither Congress nor the territorial legislature can enact laws inconsistent therewith, or retract the applicability of the Constitution to those territories.
7. That Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 of the Constitution authorizing duties, imposts, and excises (indirect taxes) empowers congress to apply these taxes throughout the sovereign 50 Union states, and not just on federal land. Here is the quote from Downes confirming that:

"In delivering the opinion [Loughborough v. Blake, 5 Wheat. 317, 5 L.Ed. 98], however, the Chief Justice made certain observations which have occasioned some embarrassment in other cases. 'The power,' said he, 'to lay and collect duties, imposts, and excises may be exercised, and must be exercised, throughout the United States. Does this term designate the whole, or any particular portion of the American empire? Certainly this question can admit but of one answer. It is the name given to our great Republic which is composed of states and territories. The District of Columbia, or the territory west of the Missouri, is not less within the United States than Maryland or Pennsylvania; and it is not less necessary, on the principles of our Constitution, that uniformity in the imposition of imposts, duties, and excises should be observed in the one than in the other. Since, then, the power to lay and collect taxes, which includes direct taxes, is obviously coextensive with the power to lay and collect duties, imposts, and excises, and since the latter extends throughout the United States, it follows that the power to impose direct taxes also extends through- [182 U.S. 244, 262] out the United States.' So far as applicable to the District of Columbia, these observations are entirely sound. So far as they apply to the territories, they were not called for by the exigencies of the case."

The only limitation on the above powers to impose indirect excise taxes throughout the United States* (the country) is that appearing in the statutes and the requirement of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution. The Constitution only authorizes federal jurisdiction over foreign commerce with other countries and not intrastate commerce (commerce within a state). The Constitution forbids federal jurisdiction over exports from states under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 5 of the Constitution. The only thing left for the federal government to tax and regulate under the Constitution, under these circumstances, is imports from outside the country, which is what "foreign commerce" means. The feds can impose duties, imposts, and excises only on imports or profit derived from imports. The imports, however, must be done by corporations or else they are not taxable.

8. Once a state is accepted into the union of states united under the Constitution, all lands in the state at that time are then covered by the Constitution in perpetuity excepting land under federal jurisdiction (enclaves). If the federal government then chooses to purchase state lands back after the state joins the union to set up a federal enclave, such as a military base or federal courthouse or national park, then the land that facility resides on that formerly was governed by the Constitution continues in perpetuity to be governed by the Constitution, even though it then becomes subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution.
9. States east of the Mississippi had very little land that continued under federal jurisdiction at the time they were admitted to the union as states of the Union. Therefore, nearly the entire state in these cases is covered by the Constitution. The opposite is true in states west of the Mississippi, where large portions continued under federal jurisdiction after these territories were admitted as states. Those areas that were federal enclaves at the date of admission which continue to this day to be under federal jurisdiction are not subject to the Constitution or the Bill of Rights.

10. Direct federal taxes and rights conferred by the Bill of Rights are mutually exclusive. You will note that when a new state is admitted to the Union, its lands then irrevocably have the Constitution attached to them and are covered by the Bill of Rights while at the same time, a new requirement to apportion all direct taxes is added in the former territory. The reason is that once people have rights, they become sovereign and at that point, it becomes impossible for the federal government under the Bill of Rights and Constitutional protections to encroach on those rights by trying to collect direct taxes because direct taxes then must be apportioned to each state as required under Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3, and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the Constitution. This is consistent with the Supreme Court's ruling in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900):

"Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange."
[Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)]

We now summarize the above findings graphically to make them crystal clear and useful in front of a judge and jury in court:

IMPORTANT: Those areas listed above where there are no Constitutional rights are the only areas where direct income taxes under Subtitle A can be applied to individuals without apportionment and without violating (clauses 1:9:4 and 1:2:3 of) the Constitution. Everyplace else, it isn't a tax, but a donation.

The federal zone, or federal "United States**", is the area of land over which the Congress exercises an unrestricted, exclusive legislative jurisdiction. The Congress, however, does not have unrestricted, exclusive legislative jurisdiction over any of the 50 sovereign states. It is bound by the chains of the Constitution. This point is so very important, it bears repeating throughout the remaining chapters of this book and it also explains why the use of the word "State" in the Internal Revenue Code doesn't by default (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (10)) mean one of the 50 sovereign states of the union. As in the apportionment rule for direct taxes and the uniformity rule for indirect taxes, Congress cannot join or divide any of the 50 sovereign states without the explicit approval of the Legislatures of the state(s) involved. This means that Congress cannot unilaterally delegate such a power to the President. Congress cannot lawfully exercise (nor delegate) a power which it simply does not have.

For further evidence of what constitutes the "federal zone" and a "State" within the IRC, we refer you to the fascinating analysis found in section 5.2.8 entitled "'State' in the Internal Revenue Code means 'federal State' and not a Union State'".

1 Lastly, let us carefully clarify the important distinctions between “States”, “territories”, and “states” in the context of federal
 2 statutes to make our analysis crystal clear. Remember that federal “territories” and “States” are synonymous as per 4 U.S.C.
 3 §110\(d\). Keep in mind also that Indian reservations, while considered “sovereign nations” are also federal “States”:

5 Your ZIP Code determines which ZIP Code region you live in. ZIP Code regions are federal areas and are part of the federal
 6 zone. The IRS has adopted the ZIP Code regions as IRS regions. If you accept mail that has a ZIP Code on it, you are treated
 7 as though you reside in a federal territory and thus are subject to the IRS and all other municipal laws of the District of 8 Columbia.

9 4.5.4 The Buck Act of 1940 (4 U.S.C. Sections 105-111)

10 This section documents how the Federal Government has deceitfully tried to get jurisdiction over sovereign Americans and 11 everything they own using a piece of legislation called the Buck Act, found in 4 U.S.C. Sections 105-111.

12 4.5.4.1 The united States of America

13 The united States of America includes the 50 sovereign and independent states of who are freely and voluntarily associated 14 together in a union. It does NOT include the "District of Columbia," which was created by the Constitution of the Union
 15 as the legal home or “seat” of the "federal" government. That government was intended to be a "servant" to the Union states,
 16 not their "Master!"

17 In order for the Federal Government to tax an American of one of the several states of the Union, they had to create a
 18 contractual nexus. This contractual nexus is a combination of "Social Security" and their status as an statutory “employee”,
 19 which is a code word for an elected or appointed officer of the United States Government. The Federal government always 20 does everything according to principles of law.

21 In 1935, the federal government instituted Social Security. The Social Security Board then, created 10 Social Security
 22 Districts creating a "Federal Area" which covered the several states like an overlay.

In 1939, the federal government instituted the "Public Salary Tax Act of 1939," which is a municipal law of the District of Columbia, taxing all Federal and State government employees and those who live and work in any "Federal area."

Now, the federal government knows it cannot tax those nationals of the United States who live and work outside the territorial jurisdiction of Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 (1:8:17), or Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 (4:3:2) of the U.S. Constitution. So in 1940, Congress passed the "Buck Act" 4 U.S.C.S. 105-111. In Section 110(e), this Act allowed any department of the federal government to create a "Federal Area" for imposition of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, the imposition of this tax is at 4 U.S.C.S. section 111, and the rest of the taxing law is in Title 26, The Internal Revenue Code. The Social Security Board had already created an overlay of a "Federal Area."

As a result, our sneaky federal government created Federal "States" within its tax legislation which are exactly "look like" but in fact aren't the same as states of the Union. These pseudo federal "States" occupy the same territory and boundaries, but whose names are capitalized versions of the Sovereign States, and in fact only encompass a very small subset of the land within the states of the Union. This land is referred to as "federal areas" or "federal enclaves".

(Remember that Proper Names and Proper Nouns in the English language have only the first letter Capitalized.) For example, the Federal "State" of ILLINOIS is overlaid upon the Sovereign state of Illinois. Further, it is designated by the Federal abbreviation of "IL", instead of the Sovereign State abbreviation of "Ill." So too is Arizona designated "AZ" instead of the lawful abbreviation of "Ariz.", "CA" instead of "Calif.", etc. If you use a two-letter CAPITALIZED abbreviation, you are declaring that the location is under the jurisdiction of the "federal" government instead of the powers of the "Sovereign" state.

As a result of creating these "shadow" federal "States", the Federal government assumes that every area is a "Federal Area," and that the Citizens therein are "U.S. citizens" under "acts of Congress" and federal statutes.

TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
4 U.S.C.S. section 110(d).

"The term 'State' includes any Territory or possession of the United States."

4 U.S.C.S. section 110(e).

"The term Federal area means any lands or premises held or acquired by or for the use of the United States or any department, establishment, or agency of the United States; any federal area, or any part thereof, which is located within the exterior boundaries of any State, shall be deemed to be a Federal area located within such State."

There is no reasonable doubt that the federal "State" is imposing directly an excise tax under the provisions of 4 U.S.C.S. §105 which states in pertinent part:

"Section 105. State and so forth, taxation affecting Federal areas; sales and use tax"

"(a) No person shall be relieved from liability for payment of, collection of, or accounting for any sales or use tax levied by any State, or by any duly constituted taxing authority therein, having jurisdiction to levy such tax, on the ground that the sale or use, with respect to which tax is levied, occurred in whole or in part within a Federal area; and such State or taxing authority shall have full jurisdiction and power to levy and collect any such tax in any Federal area, within such State to the same extent and with the same effect as though such area was not a Federal area."

"Irrespective of what tax is called by state law, if its purpose is to produce revenue, it is income tax or receipts tax under the Buck Act [4 U.S.C.S. sections 105-110]."

Thus, the question comes up, what is a "Federal area?" A "Federal area" is any area designated by any agency, department, or establishment of the federal government. This includes the Social Security areas designated by the Social Security Administration, any public housing area that has federal funding, a home that has a federal bank loan, a road that has federal funding, and almost everything that the federal government touches though any type of aid. Springfield v. Kenny, (1951 App.) 104 NE2d. 65.

This "Federal area" attaches to anyone who has a social security number or any personal contact with the federal or state governments. When you fill out a W-4 withholding form, which is entitled "Employee Withholding Certificate", you identify yourself as an elected or appointed federal statutory "employee" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and voluntarily establish federal jurisdiction over your property and person. Thus, the federal government has usurped Sovereignty of the People and state Sovereignty by creating these federal areas within the boundaries of the states under the authority of the Federal Constitution, Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 (4:3:2), which states:

Federal Constitution, Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2

"2. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State."

4.5.4.2 The "SHADOW" States of the Buck Act

Therefore, the "U.S. citizens" [citizens of the District of Columbia] under federal statutes and "acts of Congress" who reside in one of the states of the union, are classified as "property" and franchises of the federal government as an "individual entity" Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193, 80 L.Ed. 1143, 56 S.Ct. 773. Under the "Buck Act" 4 U.S.C.S. sections 105-111, the federal government has created a "Federal area" within the boundaries of all the states. This area is similar to any territory that the federal government acquires through purchase or conquest, thereby imposing federal territorial law upon those in this "Federal area." Some people believe that federal territorial law is evidenced by the Executive Branch's yellow fringed merchant law flag (see Federal Courts for an explanation) flying in schools, offices and all courtrooms. We do not agree with this conclusion and neither do the federal courts.

To avoid federal jurisdiction, you must live on land in one of the states in the Union of states, not in any "Federal State" or "Federal area", nor can you be involved in any activity that would make you subject to "acts of Congress" or federal statutes. You must be very careful on all government forms you fill out that ask if you are a "U.S. citizen" to clarify exactly what that means so that you aren't confused with persons who come under the jurisdiction of federal statutes. You cannot have a valid Social Security Number, a [federal zone] "resident" driver's license, or a motor vehicle registered in your name. You cannot have a "federal" bank account, a Federal Register Account Number relating to Individual persons [SSN], (see Executive Order Number 9397, November 1943), or any other known "contract implied in fact" that would place you within any "Federal area" and thus within the territorial jurisdiction of the municipal laws of Congress. Remember, all Acts of Congress are territorial in nature and only apply within the territorial jurisdiction of Congress. (See American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U.S. 347, 356-357 (1909); U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217, 222, 94 L.Ed. 3, 70 S.Ct. 10 (1949); New York Central R.R. Co. v. Chisholm, 268 U.S. 29, 31-32, 69 L.Ed. 828, 45 S.Ct. 402 (1925)).

There has been created a fictional "Federal State within a state". See Howard v. Sinking Fund of Louisville, 344 U.S. 624, 73 S.Ct. 465, 476, 97 L.Ed. 617 (1953); Schwartz v. O'Hara TP. School Dist., 100 A. 2d. 621, 625, 375 Pa. 440. (Compare also 31 C.F.R. Parts 51.2 and 52.2, which also identify a fictional State within a state.)

This entire scheme was accomplished by passage of the "Buck Act", (4 U.S.C.S. Secs. 105-111), to implement the application of the "Public Salary Tax Act" of 1939 to workers within the private sector. This subjects all private sector workers (who have a Social Security number) to all state and federal laws "within this State", a "fictional Federal area" overlaying the land in California and in all other states in the Union. In California, this is established by California Form 590, Revenue and Taxation. All you have to do is to state that you live in California. This establishes that you do not live in a "Federal area" and that you are exempt from the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 and also from the California Income Tax for residents who live "in this State".

The following definition is used throughout the several states in the application of their municipal laws which require some form of contract for proper application. This definition is also included in all the codes of California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and New York:

"In this State" or "in the State" means within the exterior limits of the State ... and includes all territories within such limits owned or ceded to the United States of America."

This definition concurs with the "Buck Act" (supra) which states:

CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

"110(d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States."

"110(e) The term "Federal area" means any lands or premises held or acquired by or for the use of the United States or any department, establishment, or agency of the United States; and any Federal area, or any part thereof, which is located within the exterior boundaries of any State, shall be deemed to be a Federal area located within such State."

Then some of the states enacted legislation giving themselves what is called "concurrent jurisdiction" over lands ceded to the federal government. Here is an example from the California Statutes:

California Government Code,
Section 119: Territorial Jurisdiction

119. Exclusive jurisdiction shall be and the same is hereby ceded to the United States over and within all of the territory which is now or may hereafter be included in those several tracts of land in the State of California set aside and dedicated for park purposes by the United States as "Kings Canyon National Park"; saving however to the State of California the right to serve civil or criminal process within the limits of the aforesaid park in suits or prosecutions for or on account of rights acquired, obligations incurred, or crimes committed in said State outside of said park; and saving further to the said State the right to tax persons and corporations, their franchises and property on the lands included in said park, and the right to fix and collect license fees for fishing in said park; and saving also to the persons residing in said park now or hereafter the right to vote at all elections held within the county or counties in which said park is situate. The jurisdiction granted by this section shall not vest until the United States through the proper officer notifies the State of California that it assumes police jurisdiction over said park.

Then, to really lock down their control, the federal government created an artificial PERSON to whom they could address all of their demands. This person is YOUR NAME in ALL CAPITAL LETTERS! Whenever you receive a letter from the government addressed in ALL CAPITAL LETTERS (such as "JOHN SMITH" instead of the proper English language "John Smith") they are addressing a legal fiction, a "straw man," whom they assume they OWN.

Since they are going on the assumption that they OWN this "straw man" (which they actually do not -- and you can learn how you can take TITLE to this "straw man") they assume that whatever money comes in to the property ("straw man") belongs to the master (government).

What you are experiencing is an unprecedented GRAB for power by the "federal" government! In fact, Agents of the "federal" government have NO jurisdiction within the borders of these separate and sovereign united States, or over the "straw man" -- unless you give it to them!

4.6 The Constitution is Supposed to Make You the Sovereign and The Government Your Servant<sup>126</sup>

The premise of this section is that the purpose of our U.S. Constitution is to make the government into our servant and us into the sovereign. You as the sovereign are not bound by the Constitution, but the people who work in government are because they took an oath to support and defend it. The taking of that oath makes them the servant and you the master and creates a fiduciary relationship between the two of you that is enforceable in a court of law if your rights are injured. You never took that oath and you never signed any instrument agreeing to be bound by it.

For the subsections within this section, we rely again on the writings of Lysander Spooner and his wonderful and brilliant essay entitled No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority, Lysander Spooner. Specifically, we derive most of the rest of this section and its subsections from sections IV through XIX of that essay which appears on our website at:

Lysander Spooner's writings will really get you thinking, and he has a unique, common sense, and lucid way of expressing himself which we enjoyed so thoroughly that we thought we would repeat it here for your reading pleasure. 2 basis of most of contemporary Libertarian thought.

3 We have taken the liberty to edit Mr. Spooner's remarks slightly to remove the notion that the Constitution does not in
4 actuality bind government servants, because the result of that aspect of his conclusions in their effect on our society would
5 be tyranny, pure chaos, anarchy, and lawlessness, and this would clearly serve the interests of no one and harm everyone as
6 a collective. Likewise, there is nothing to be gained and everything to be lost by society in undermining the value and the 7 virtue of a written constitution, since the Constitutional Republic we have has been quite effective to date in maintaining the 8 blessings of liberty far better than any previous know system of government. Along those more constructive lines of inquiry,
9 we believe that oaths of public office can and should be improved to increase the level of personal accountability that
10 government servants have toward their constituents so as to remove the defects and complaints that Lysander expresses
11 regarding oaths of office later in section 4.6.8. On the other hand, Lysander Spooner believes that because the Constitution
12 does such a poor job holding our public servants accountable, that our only defense is trial by jury. He wrote an essay entitled 13 An Essay on Trial by Jury describing this aspect of his beliefs that we have posted on our website at:

An Essay on Trial By Jury, Lysander Spooner
<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/SpoonerLysander/TrialByJury.txt>

14 For the purposes of subsequent discussion, we use the term "citizen" only as a convenience to refer to the sovereign people
15 inhabiting a body politic, but in a more general sense, we mean everyone who inhabits a country, including both citizens and 16 aliens.

17 4.6.1 The Constitution does not bind citizens

18 The constitution not only binds no citizens now, but it never did bind any citizens. It never bound citizens, because it was 19 never agreed to by citizens in such a manner as to make it, on general principles of law and reason, binding upon them.

20 It is a general principle of law and reason, that a written instrument binds no one until he has signed it. This principle is so
21 inflexible a one, that even though a man is unable to write his name, he must still "make his mark," before he is bound by a
22 written contract. This custom was established ages ago, when few men could write their names; when a clerk -- that is, a man
23 who could write -- was so rare and valuable a person, that even if he were guilty of high crimes, he was entitled to pardon,
24 on the ground that the public could not afford to lose his services. Even at that time, a written contract must be signed; and
25 men who could not write, either "made their mark," or signed their contracts by stamping their seals upon wax affixed to the 26 parchment on which their contracts were written. Hence the custom of affixing seals, that has continued to this time.

27 The laws holds, and reason declares, that if a written instrument is not signed, the presumption must be that the party to be
28 bound by it, did not choose to sign it, or to bind himself by it. And law and reason both give him until the last moment, in
29 which to decide whether he will sign it, or not. Neither law nor reason requires or expects a man to agree to an instrument,
30 until it is written; for until it is written, he cannot know its precise legal meaning. And when it is written, and he has had the 31 opportunity to satisfy himself of its precise legal meaning, he is then expected to decide, and not before, whether he will agree
32 to it or not. And if he do not THEN sign it, his reason is supposed to be, that he does not choose to enter into such a contract.
33 The fact that the instrument was written for him to sign, or with the hope that he would sign it, goes for nothing.

34 Where would be the end of fraud and litigation, if one party could bring into court a written instrument, without any signature,
35 and claim to have it enforced, upon the ground that it was written for another man to sign? that this other man had promised
36 to sign it? that he ought to have signed it? that he had had the opportunity to sign it, if he would? but that he had refused or
37 neglected to do so? Yet that is the most that could ever be said of the Constitution. [1] The very judges, who profess to derive 38 all their authority from the Constitution -- from an instrument that nobody ever signed -- would spurn any other instrument,
39 not signed, that should be brought before them for adjudication. [1] The very men who drafted it, never signed it in any way
40 to bind themselves by it, AS A CONTRACT. And not one of them probably ever would have signed it in any way to bind
41 himself by it, AS A CONTRACT.

42 Moreover, a written instrument must, in law and reason, not only be signed, but must also be delivered to the party (or to 43 someone for him), in whose favor it is made, before it can bind the party making it. The signing is of no effect, unless the 44 instrument be also delivered. And a party is at perfect liberty to refuse to deliver a written instrument, after he has signed it.
45 The Constitution was not only never signed by anybody, but it was never delivered by anybody, or to anybody's agent or 46 attorney. It can therefore be of no more validity as a contract, then can any other instrument that was never signed or delivered.

4.6.2 The Constitution as a Legal Contract

As further evidence of the general sense of mankind, as to the practical necessity there is that all men's IMPORTANT contracts, especially those of a permanent nature, should be both written and signed, the following facts are pertinent.

For nearly two hundred years -- that is, since 1677 -- there has been on the statute book of England, and the same, in substance, if not precisely in letter, has been re-enacted, and is now in force, in nearly or quite all the States of this Union, a statute, the general object of which is to declare that no action shall be brought to enforce contracts of the more important class, UNLESS THEY ARE PUT IN WRITING, AND SIGNED BY THE PARTIES TO BE HELD CHARGEABLE UPON THEM. [At this point there is a footnote listing 34 states whose statute books Spooner had examined, all of which had variations of this English statute; the footnote also quotes part of the Massachusetts statute.]

The principle of the statute, be it observed, is, not merely that written contracts shall be signed, but also that all contracts, except for those specially exempted -- generally those that are for small amounts, and are to remain in force for but a short time -- SHALL BE BOTH WRITTEN AND SIGNED.

The reason of the statute, on this point, is, that it is now so easy a thing for men to put their contracts in writing, and sign them, and their failure to do so opens the door to so much doubt, fraud, and litigation, that men who neglect to have their contracts -- of any considerable importance -- written and signed, ought not to have the benefit of courts of justice to enforce them. And this reason is a wise one; and that experience has confirmed its wisdom and necessity, is demonstrated by the fact that it has been acted upon in England for nearly two hundred years, and has been so nearly universally adopted in this country, and that nobody thinks of repealing it.

We all know, too, how careful most men are to have their contracts written and signed, even when this statute does not require it. For example, most men, if they have money due them, of no larger amount than five or ten dollars, are careful to take a note for it. If they buy even a small bill of goods, paying for it at the time of delivery, they take a receipted bill for it. If they pay a small balance of a book account, or any other small debt previously contracted, they take a written receipt for it.

Furthermore, the law everywhere (probably) in our country, as well as in England, requires that a large class of contracts, such as wills, deeds, etc., shall not only be written and signed, but also sealed, witnessed, and acknowledged. And in the case of married women conveying their rights in real estate, the law, in many States, requires that the women shall be examined separate and apart from their husbands, and declare that they sign their contracts free of any fear or compulsion of their husbands.

Such are some of the precautions which the laws require, and which individuals -- from motives of common prudence, even in cases not required by law -- take, to put their contracts in writing, and have them signed, and, to guard against all uncertainties and controversies in regard to their meaning and validity. And yet we have what purports, or professes, or is claimed, to be a contract -- the Constitution -- made eighty years ago, by men who are now all dead, and who never had any power to bind US, but which (it is claimed) has nevertheless bound three generations of men, consisting of many millions, and which (it is claimed) will be binding upon all the millions that are to come; but which nobody ever signed, sealed, delivered, witnessed, or acknowledged; and which few persons, compared with the whole number that are claimed to be bound by it, have ever read, or even seen, or ever will read, or see. And of those who ever have read it, or ever will read it, scarcely any two, perhaps no two, have ever agreed, or ever will agree, as to what it means.

Moreover, this supposed contract, which would not be received in any court of justice sitting under its authority, if offered to prove a debt of five dollars, owing by one man to another, is one by which -- AS IT IS GENERALLY INTERPRETED BY THOSE WHO PRETEND TO ADMINISTER IT -- all men, women and children throughout the country, and through all time, surrender not only all their property, but also their liberties, and even lives, into the hands of men who by this supposed contract, are expressly made wholly irresponsible for their disposal of them. And we are so insane, or so wicked, as to destroy property and lives without limit, in fighting to compel men to fulfill a supposed contract, which, inasmuch as it has never been signed by anybody, is, on general principles of law and reason -- such principles as we are all governed by in regard to other contracts -- the merest waste of paper, binding upon nobody, fit only to be thrown into the fire; or, if preserved, preserved only to serve as a witness and a warning of the folly and wickedness of mankind.

4.6.3 How the Constitution is Administered by the Government

1 It is no exaggeration, but a literal truth, to say that, by the Constitution -- NOT AS I INTERPRET IT, BUT AS IT IS
2 INTERPRETED BY THOSE WHO PRETEND TO ADMINISTER IT -- the properties, liberties, and lives of the entire
3 people of the United States are surrendered unreservedly into the hands of men who, it is provided by the Constitution itself,
4 shall never be "questioned" as to any disposal they make of them.

5 Thus the Constitution (Art. I, Sec. 6) provides that, "for any speech or debate (or vote), in either house, they (the senators and 6 representatives) shall not be questioned in any other place."

7 The whole law-making power is given to these senators and representatives (when acting by a two-thirds vote); [1] and this
8 provision protects them from all responsibility for the laws they make. [1] And this two-thirds vote may be but two-thirds of 9 a quorum -- that is two-thirds of a majority -- instead of two-thirds of the whole. The Constitution also enables them to secure
10 the execution of all their laws, by giving them power to withhold the salaries of, and to impeach and remove, all judicial and 11 executive officers, who refuse to execute them.

12 Thus the whole power of the government is in their hands, and they are made utterly irresponsible for the use they make of 13 it. What is this but absolute, irresponsible power?

14 It is no answer to this view of the case to say that these men are under oath to use their power only within certain limits; for
15 what care they, or what should they care, for oaths or limits, when it is expressly provided, by the Constitution itself, that 16 they shall never be "questioned," or held to any responsibility whatever, for violating their oaths, or transgressing those limits?

17 Neither is it any answer to this view of the case to say that the men holding this absolute, irresponsible power, must be men
18 chosen by the people (or portions of them) to hold it. A man is none the less a slave because he is allowed to choose a new
19 master once in a term of years. Neither are a people any the less slaves because permitted periodically to choose new masters.
20 What makes them slaves is the fact that they now are, and are always hereafter to be, in the hands of men whose power over
21 them is, and always is to be, absolute and irresponsible. [2] [2] Of what appreciable value is it to any man, as an individual,
22 that he is allowed a voice in choosing these public masters? His voice is only one of several millions.

24 irresponsible dominion. The two are identical; the one necessarily implies the other. Neither can exist without the other. If,
25 therefore, Congress have that absolute and irresponsible law-making power, which the Constitution -- according to their
26 interpretation of it -- gives them, it can only be because they own us as property. If they own us as property, they are our 27 masters, and their will is our law. If they do not own us as property, they are not our masters, and their will, as such, is of no
28 authority over us.

29 But these men who claim and exercise this absolute and irresponsible dominion over us, dare not be consistent, and claim
30 either to be our masters, or to own us as property. They say they are only our servants, agents, attorneys, and representatives.
31 But this declaration involves an absurdity, a contradiction. No man can be my servant, agent, attorney, or representative, and 32 be, at the same time, uncontrollable by me, and irresponsible to me for his acts. It is of no importance that I appointed him,
33 and put all power in his hands. If I made him uncontrollable by me, and irresponsible to me, he is no longer my servant, agent,
34 attorney, or representative. If I gave him absolute, irresponsible power over my property, I gave him the property. If I gave 35 him absolute, irresponsible power over myself, I made him my master, and gave myself to him as a slave. And it is of no
36 importance whether I called him master or servant, agent or owner. The only question is, what power did I put in his hands?
37 Was it an absolute and irresponsible one? or a limited and responsible one?

38 For still another reason they are neither our servants, agents, attorneys, nor representatives. And that reason is, that we do not
39 make ourselves responsible for their acts. If a man is my servant, agent, or attorney, I necessarily make myself responsible
40 for all his acts done within the limits of the power I have intrusted to him. If I have intrusted him, as my agent, with either
41 absolute power, or any power at all, over the persons or properties of other men than myself, I thereby necessarily make
42 myself responsible to those other persons for any injuries he may do them, so long as he acts within the limits of the power I
43 have granted him. But no individual who may be injured in his person or property, by acts of Congress, can come to the 44 individual electors, and hold them responsible for these acts of their so-called agents or representatives. This fact proves that 45 these pretended agents of the people, of everybody, are really the agents of nobody.

46 If, then, nobody is individually responsible for the acts of Congress, the members of Congress are nobody's agents. And if 47 they are nobody's agents, they are themselves individually responsible for their own acts, and for the acts of all whom they
48 employ. And the authority they are exercising is simply their own individual authority; and, by the law of nature -- the highest

1 of all laws -- anybody injured by their acts, anybody who is deprived by them of his property or his liberty, has the same right
 2 to hold them individually responsible, that he has to hold any other trespasser individually responsible. He has the same right
 3 to resist them, and their agents, that he has to resist any other trespassers.

4 4.6.4 If the Constitution is a Contract, why don't we have to sign it and how can our predecessors bind us to it 5 without our signature?

6 It is plain, then, that on general principles of law and reason -- such principles as we all act upon in courts of justice and in
 7 common life -- the Constitution is no contract; that it binds nobody, and never did bind anybody; and that all those who
 8 pretend to act by its authority, are really acting without any legitimate authority at all; that, on general principles of law and
 9 reason, they are mere usurpers, and that everybody not only has the right, but is morally bound, to treat them as such.

10 If the people of this country wish to maintain such a government as the Constitution describes, there is no reason in the world
 11 why they should not sign the instrument itself, and thus make known their wishes in an open, authentic manner; in such 12 manner as the common sense and experience of mankind have shown to be reasonable and necessary in such cases; AND IN 13 SUCH MANNER AS TO MAKE THEMSELVES (AS THEY OUGHT TO DO) INDIVIDUALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR 14 THE ACTS OF THE GOVERNMENT. But the people have never been asked to sign it. And the only reason why they have 15 never been asked to sign it, has been that it has been known that they never would sign it; that they were neither such fools
 16 nor knaves as they must needs have been to be willing to sign it; that (at least as it has been practically interpreted) it is not
 17 what any sensible and honest man wants for himself; nor such as he has any right to impose upon others. It is, to all moral 18 intents and purposes, as destitute of obligations as the compacts which robbers and thieves and pirates enter into with each
 19 other, but never sign.

20 If any considerable number of the people believe the Constitution to be good, why do they not sign it themselves, and make 21 laws for, and administer them upon, each other; leaving all other persons (who do not interfere with them) in peace? Until 22 they have tried the experiment for themselves, how can they have the face to impose the Constitution upon, or even to
 23 recommend it to, others? Plainly the reason for absurd and inconsistent conduct is that they want the Constitution, not solely 24 for any honest or legitimate use it can be of to themselves or others, but for the dishonest and illegitimate power it gives them
 25 over the persons and properties of others. But for this latter reason, all their eulogiums on the Constitution, all their 26 exhortations, and all their expenditures of money and blood to sustain it, would be wanting.

27 4.6.5 Authority delegated by the Constitution to Public Servants

28 The Constitution itself, then, being of no authority, on what authority does our government practically rest? On what ground
 29 can those who pretend to administer it, claim the right to seize men's property, to restrain them of their natural liberty of 30 action, industry, and trade, and to kill all who deny their authority to dispose of men's properties, liberties, and lives at their 31 pleasure or discretion?

32 The most they can say, in answer to this question, is, that some half, two-thirds, or three-fourths, of the male adults of the 33 country have a TACIT UNDERSTANDING that they will maintain a government under the Constitution; that they will 34 select, by ballot, the persons to administer it; and that those persons who may receive a majority, or a plurality, of their ballots,
 35 shall act as their representatives, and administer the Constitution in their name, and by their authority.

36 But this tacit understanding (admitting it to exist) cannot at all justify the conclusion drawn from it. A tacit understanding
 37 between A, B, and C, that they will, by ballot, depute D as their agent, to deprive me of my property, liberty, or life, cannot 38 at all authorize D to do so. He is none the less a robber, tyrant, and murderer, because he claims to act as their agent, than he 39 would be if he avowedly acted on his own responsibility alone.

40 Neither am I bound to recognize him as their agent, nor can he legitimately claim to be their agent, when he brings no
 41 WRITTEN authority from them accrediting him as such. I am under no obligation to take his word as to who his principals
 42 may be, or whether he has any. Bringing no credentials, I have a right to say he has no such authority even as he claims to 43 have: and that he is therefore intending to rob, enslave, or murder me on his own account.

44 This tacit understanding, therefore, among the voters of the country, amounts to nothing as an authority to their agents. Neither
 45 do the ballots by which they select their agents, avail any more than does their tacit understanding; for their ballots are given
 46 in secret, and therefore in such a way as to avoid any personal responsibility for the acts of their agents.

1 No body of men can be said to authorize a man to act as their agent, to the injury of a third person, unless they do it in so
2 open and authentic a manner as to make themselves personally responsible for his acts. None of the voters in this country
3 appoint their political agents in any open, authentic manner, or in any manner to make themselves responsible for their acts.
4 Therefore these pretended agents cannot legitimately claim to be really agents. Somebody must be responsible for the acts of
5 these pretended agents; and if they cannot show any open and authentic credentials from their principals, they cannot, in law
6 or reason, be said to have any principals. The maxim applies here, that what does not appear, does not exist. If they can show
7 no principals, they have none.

8 But even these pretended agents do not themselves know who their pretended principals are. These latter act in secret; for 9 acting by secret ballot is acting in secret as much as if they were to meet in secret conclave in the darkness of the night. And
10 they are personally as much unknown to the agents they select, as they are to others. No pretended agent therefore can ever
11 know by whose ballots he is selected, or consequently who his real principles are. Not knowing who his principles are, he 12 has no right to say that he has any. He can, at most, say only that he is the agent of a secret band of robbers and murderers, 13 who are bound by that faith which prevails among confederates in crime, to stand by him, if his acts, done in their name, shall 14 be resisted.

15 Men honestly engaged in attempting to establish justice in the world, have no occasion thus to act in secret; or to appoint
16 agents to do acts for which they (the principals) are not willing to be responsible.

17 The secret ballot makes a secret government; and a secret government is a secret band of robbers and murderers. Open 18 despotism is better than this. The single despot stands out in the face of all men, and says:

- 19 1. I am the State.
- 20 2. My will is law.
- 21 3. I take the responsibility of my acts.
- 22 4. The only arbiter I acknowledge is the sword.
- 23 5. If anyone denies my right, let him try conclusions with me.

24 But a secret government is little less than a government of assassins. Under it, a man knows not who his tyrants are, until 25 they have struck, and perhaps not then. He may GUESS, beforehand, as to some of his immediate neighbors. But he really
26 knows nothing. The man to whom he would most naturally fly for protection, may prove an enemy, when the time of trial

28 This is the kind of government we have; and it is the only one we are likely to have, until men are ready to say: We will
29 consent to no Constitution, except such an one as we are neither ashamed nor afraid to sign; and we will authorize no
30 government to do anything in our name which we are not willing to be personally responsible for.

31 4.6.6 Voting by Congressmen

32 What is the motive to the secret ballot? This, and only this: Like other confederates in crime, those who use it are not friends,
33 but enemies; and they are afraid to be known, and to have their individual doings known, even to each other. They can 34 contrive to bring about a sufficient understanding to enable them to act in concert against other persons; but beyond this they
35 have no confidence, and no friendship, among themselves. In fact, they are engaged quite as much in schemes for plundering
36 each other, as in plundering those who are not of them. And it is perfectly well understood among them that the strongest
37 party among them will, in certain contingencies, murder each other by the hundreds of thousands (as they lately did do) to
38 accomplish their purposes against each other. Hence they dare not be known, and have their individual doings known, even 39 to each other. And this is avowedly the only reason for the ballot: for a secret government; a government by secret bands of 40 robbers and murderers. And we are insane enough to call this liberty! To be a member of this secret band of robbers and 41 murderers is esteemed a privilege and an honor! Without this privilege, a man is considered a slave; but with it a free man!
42 With it he is considered a free man, because he has the same power to secretly (by secret ballot) procure the robbery,
43 enslavement, and murder of another man, and that other man has to procure his robbery, enslavement, and murder. And this 44 they call equal rights!

45 If any number of men, many or few, claim the right to govern the people of this country, let them make and sign an open
46 compact with each other to do so. Let them thus make themselves individually known to those whom they propose to govern.
47 And let them thus openly take the legitimate responsibility of their acts. How many of those who now support the Constitution,

1 will ever do this? How many will ever dare openly proclaim their right to govern? or take the legitimate responsibility of
2 their acts? Not one!

3 4.6.7 Our Government is a band of criminal extortionists acting without legal authority!

4 It is obvious that, on general principles of law and reason, there exists no such thing as a government created by, or resting
5 upon, any consent, compact, or agreement of "the people of the United States" with each other; that the only visible, tangible,
6 responsible government that exists, is that of a few individuals only, who act in concert, and call themselves by the several
7 names of senators, representatives, presidents, judges, marshals, treasurers, collectors, generals, colonels, captains, etc., etc.

8 On general principles of law and reason, it is of no importance whatever that these few individuals profess to be the agents
9 and representatives of "the people of the United States"; since they can show no credentials from the people themselves; they
10 were never appointed as agents or representatives in any open, authentic manner; they do not themselves know, and have no
11 means of knowing, and cannot prove, who their principals (as they call them) are individually; and consequently cannot, in 12 law or reason, be said to have any principals at all.

13 It is obvious, too, that if these alleged principals ever did appoint these pretended agents, or representatives, they appointed
14 them secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to avoid all personal responsibility for their acts; that, at most, these alleged
15 principals put these pretended agents forward for the most criminal purposes, viz.: to plunder the people of their property,
16 and restrain them of their liberty; and that the only authority that these alleged principals have for so doing, is simply a TACIT
17 UNDERSTANDING among themselves that they will imprison, shoot, or hang every man who resists the exactions and 18 restraints which their agents or representatives may impose upon them.

19 Thus it is obvious that the only visible, tangible government we have is made up of these professed agents or representatives
20 of a secret band of robbers and murderers, who, to cover up, or gloss over, their robberies and murders, have taken to
21 themselves the title of "the people of the United States"; and who, on the pretense of being "the people of the United States,"
22 assert their right to subject to their dominion, and to control and dispose of at their pleasure, all property and persons found
23 in the United States.

24 4.6.8 Oaths of Public Office

25 On general principles of law and reason, the oaths which these pretended agents of the people take "to support the 26 Constitution," are of no validity or obligation. And why? For this, if for no other reason, viz., THAT THEY ARE GIVEN
27 TO NOBODY in particular. There is no privity (as the lawyers say) -- that is, no mutual recognition, consent, and agreement 28 -- between those who take these oaths, and any other persons.

29 If I go upon Boston Common, and in the presence of a hundred thousand people, men, women and children, with whom I
30 have no contract upon the subject, take a verbal but not written oath that I will enforce upon them the laws of Moses, of 31 Lycurgus, of Solon, of Justinian, or of Alfred, that oath is, on general principles of law and reason, of no obligation. It is of 32 no obligation, not merely because it is intrinsically a criminal one, BUT ALSO BECAUSE IT IS GIVEN TO NOBODY, and 33 consequently pledges my faith to nobody. It is merely given to the winds.

34 It would not alter the case at all to say that, among these hundred thousand persons, in whose presence the oath was taken,
35 there were two, three, or five thousand male adults, who had SECRETLY -- by secret ballot, and in a way to avoid making
36 themselves INDIVIDUALLY known to me, or to the remainder of the hundred thousand -- designated me as their agent to 37 rule, control, plunder, and, if need be, murder, these hundred thousand people. The fact that they had designated me secretly,
38 and in a manner to prevent my knowing them individually, prevents all privity between them and me; and consequently 39 makes it impossible that there can be any contract, or pledge of faith, on my part towards them; for it is impossible that I can 40 pledge my faith, in any legal sense, to a man whom I neither know, nor have any means of knowing, individually.

41 So far as I am concerned, then, these two, three, or five thousand persons are a secret band of robbers and murderers, who 42 have secretly, and in a way to save themselves from all responsibility for my acts, designated me as their agent; and have,
43 through some other agent, or pretended agent, made their wishes known to me. But being, nevertheless, individually unknown
44 to me, and having no open, authentic contract with me, my oath is, on general principles of law and reason, of no validity as
45 a pledge of faith to them. And being no pledge of faith to them, it is no pledge of faith to anybody. It is mere idle wind. At 46 most, it is only a pledge of faith to an unknown band of robbers and murderers, whose instrument for plundering and

1 murdering other people, I thus publicly confess myself to be. And it has no other obligation than a similar oath given to any
2 other unknown body of pirates, robbers, and murderers.

3 For these reasons the oaths taken by members of Congress, "to support the Constitution," are, on general principles of
4 law and reason, of no validity based on the way they are administered now. They are not only criminal in themselves, and
5 therefore void; but they are also void for the further reason THAT THEY ARE GIVEN TO NOBODY.

6 It cannot be said that, in any legitimate or legal sense, they are given to "the people of the United States"; because neither the 7 whole, nor any large proportion of the whole, people of the United States ever, either openly or secretly, appointed or
8 designated these men as their agents to carry the Constitution into effect. The great body of the people -- that is, men, women,
9 and children -- were never asked, or even permitted, to signify, in any FORMAL manner, either openly or secretly, their 10 choice or wish on the subject. The most that these members of Congress can say, in favor of their appointment, is simply this:
11 Each one can say for himself:

12 I have evidence satisfactory to myself, that there exists, scattered throughout the country, a band of men, having a tacit
13 understanding with each other, and calling themselves "the people of the United States," whose general purposes are to control
14 and plunder each other, and all other persons in the country, and, so far as they can, even in neighboring countries; and to kill
15 every man who shall attempt to defend his person and property against their schemes of plunder and dominion. Who these
16 men are, INDIVIDUALLY, I have no certain means of knowing, for they sign no papers, and give no open, authentic evidence
17 of their individual membership. They are not known individually even to each other. They are apparently as much afraid of 18 being individually known to each other, as of being known to other persons. Hence they ordinarily have no mode either of 19 exercising, or of making known, their individual membership, otherwise than by giving their votes secretly for certain agents
20 to do their will. But although these men are individually unknown, both to each other and to other persons, it is generally
21 understood in the country that none but male persons, of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, can be members. It is also
22 generally understood that ALL male persons, born in the country, having certain complexions, and (in some localities) certain
23 amounts of property, and (in certain cases) even persons of foreign birth, are PERMITTED to be members. But it appears
24 that usually not more than one half, two-thirds, or in some cases, three-fourths, of all who are thus permitted to become
25 members of the band, ever exercise, or consequently prove, their actual membership, in the only mode in which they ordinarily
26 can exercise or prove it, viz., by giving their votes secretly for the officers or agents of the band. The number of these secret
27 votes, so far as we have any account of them, varies greatly from year to year, thus tending to prove that the band, instead of 28 being a permanent organization, is a merely PRO TEMPORE affair with those who choose to act with it for the time being.
29 \ The gross number of these secret votes, or what purports to be their gross number, in different localities, is occasionally
30 published. Whether these reports are accurate or not, we have no means of knowing. It is generally supposed that great frauds
31 are often committed in depositing them. They are understood to be received and counted by certain men, who are themselves
32 appointed for that purpose by the same secret process by which all other officers and agents of the band are selected.
33 According to the reports of these receivers of votes (for whose accuracy or honesty, however, I cannot vouch), and according 34 to my best knowledge of the whole number of male persons "in my district," who (it is supposed) were permitted to vote, it
35 would appear that one-half, two-thirds or three-fourths actually did vote. Who the men were, individually, who cast these 36 votes, I have no knowledge, for the whole thing was done secretly. But of the secret votes thus given for what they call a
37 "member of Congress," the receivers reported that I had a majority, or at least a larger number than any other one person.
38 And it is only by virtue of such a designation that I am now here to act in concert with other persons similarly selected in
39 other parts of the country. \ It is understood among those who sent me here, that all persons so selected, will, on coming
40 together at the City of Washington, take an oath in each other's presence "to support the Constitution of the United States."
41 By this is meant a certain paper that was drawn up eighty years ago. It was never signed by anybody, and apparently has no
42 obligation, and never had any obligation, as a contract. In fact, few persons ever read it, and doubtless much the largest
43 number of those who voted for me and the others, never even saw it, or now pretend to know what it means. Nevertheless, it
44 is often spoken of in the country as "the Constitution of the United States"; and for some reason or other, the men who sent
45 me here, seem to expect that I, and all with whom I act, will swear to carry this Constitution into effect. I am therefore ready 46 to take this oath, and to co-operate with all others, similarly selected, who are ready to take the same oath.

47 This is the most that any member of Congress can say in proof that he has any constituency; that he represents anybody; that
48 his oath "to support the Constitution," IS GIVEN TO ANYBODY, or pledges his faith to ANYBODY. He has no open,
49 written, or other authentic evidence, such as is required in all other cases, that he was ever appointed the agent or
50 representative of anybody. He has no written power of attorney from any single individual. He has no such legal knowledge
51 as is required in all other cases, by which he can identify a single one of those who pretend to have appointed him to represent
52 them. Certainly, we as a society can and should structure our system of government to improve upon this serious defect in

1 the taking of oaths of public office by making all oaths into written affidavits rather than administering them only in a verbal
2 manner.

3 Of course his oath, professedly given to them, "to support the Constitution," is, on general principles of law and reason, an
4 oath given to nobody. It pledges his faith to nobody. If he fails to fulfill his oath, not a single person can come forward, and 5 say to him, you have betrayed me, or broken faith with me.

6 No one can come forward and say to him: I appointed you my attorney to act for me. I required you to swear that, as my
7 attorney, you would support the Constitution. You promised me that you would do so; and now you have forfeited the oath
8 you gave to me. No single individual can say this.

9 No open, avowed, or responsible association, or body of men, can come forward and say to him: We appointed you our 10 attorney, to act for us. We required you to swear that, as our attorney, you would support the Constitution. You promised us
11 that you would do so; and now you have forfeited the oath you gave to us.

12 No open, avowed, or responsible association, or body of men, can say this to him; because there is no such association or 13 body of men in existence. If anyone should assert that there is such an association, let him prove, if he can, who compose it.
14 Let him produce, if he can, any open, written, or other authentic contract, signed or agreed to by these men; forming
15 themselves into an association; making themselves known as such to the world; appointing him as their agent; and making
16 themselves individually, or as an association, responsible for his acts, done by their authority. Until all this can be shown, no
17 one can say that, in any legitimate sense, there is any such association; or that he is their agent; or that he ever gave his oath
18 to them; or ever pledged his faith to them.

19 On general principles of law and reason, it would be a sufficient answer for him to say, to all individuals, and to all pretended
20 associations of individuals, who should accuse him of a breach of faith to them:

21 I never knew you. Where is your evidence that you, either individually or collectively, ever appointed me your
22 attorney? that you ever required me to swear to you, that, as your attorney, I would support the Constitution? or
23 that I have now broken any faith that I ever pledged to you? You may, or you may not, be members of that secret
24 band of robbers and murderers, who act in secret; appoint their agents by a secret ballot; who keep themselves
25 individually unknown even to the agents they thus appoint; and who, therefore, cannot claim that they have any
26 agents; or that any of their pretended agents ever gave his oath, or pledged his faith to them. I repudiate you
27 altogether. My oath was given to others, with whom you have nothing to do; or it was idle wind, given only to the 28 idle winds. Begone!

29 By no means are we suggesting, based on this section, that we should scrap our current system of government based on 30 written Constitutions and go back to the stone age. We don't mean to be hypercritical without offering concrete solutions to 31 the systemic defects that we describe. The fiduciary duty created by written Constitutions between public officers and their
32 constituents is a very useful legal tool that should be exploited to its fullest to ensure a high degree of accountability for public
33 officers and public servants to their constituents. On the other hand, this section raises some very serious defects and issues
34 within our current system of government relating to public oaths and we can't know how to fix something until we know
35 what is broke. Based on the discussion in this section, we therefore suggest the following remedies to address the deficiencies
36 noted and to improve our system of republican government:

- 37 • Public records of individual voters and how they voted should be maintained. This will allow the public officer to 38 know who he is accountable to. This would also help to ensure that vote fraud can easily be verified by individual
39 voters. The information system that maintains this information should carefully protect the privacy of individuals 40 and it should be accessible on the world wide web.
- 41 • Affidavits containing oaths of public office should be a matter of public record which is maintained by a public
42 recorder and should be made available to the public on the world wide web without charge
- 43 • Oaths of public office should clearly state that public officers and public servants have a fiduciary relationship with 44 the persons they serve and define the terms of that fiduciary relationship. See section 4.1 earlier for further details
45 on fiduciary relationships. They should also clearly identify the specific laws at the time of the oath that describe 46 and circumscribe the limits of the authority delegated to the officer or agent.
- 47 • Any public official caught destroying or ordering the destruction of affidavit evidence of their oath of public office
48 should be promptly fired from office, surrender their retirement, be prosecuted criminally, and disbarred from ever 49 holding public office again.

4.6.9 Tax Collectors

For the same reasons, the oaths of all the other pretended agents of this secret band of robbers and murderers are, on general principles of law and reason, equally destitute of obligation. They are given to nobody; but only to the winds.

The oaths of the tax-gatherers and treasurers of the band, are, on general principles of law and reason, of no validity. If any tax gatherer, for example, should put the money he receives into his own pocket, and refuse to part with it, the members of this band could not say to him: You collected that money as our agent, and for our uses; and you swore to pay it over to us, or to those we should appoint to receive it. You have betrayed us, and broken faith with us.

It would be a sufficient answer for him to say to them:

I never knew you. You never made yourselves individually known to me. I never came by oath to you, as individuals. You may, or you may not, be members of that secret band, who appoint agents to rob and murder other people; but who are cautious not to make themselves individually known, either to such agents, or to those whom their agents are commissioned to rob. If you are members of that band, you have given me no proof that you ever commissioned me to rob others for your benefit. I never knew you, as individuals, and of course never promised you that I would pay over to you the proceeds of my robberies. I committed my robberies on my own account, and for my own profit. If you thought I was fool enough to allow you to keep yourselves concealed, and use me as your tool for robbing other persons; or that I would take all the personal risk of the robberies, and pay over the proceeds to you, you were particularly simple. As I took all the risk of my robberies, I propose to take all the profits. Begone! You are fools, as well as villains. If I gave my oath to anybody, I gave it to other persons than you. But I really gave it to nobody. I only gave it to the winds. It answered my purposes at the time. It enabled me to get the money I was after, and now I propose to keep it. If you expected me to pay it over to you, you relied only upon that honor that is said to prevail among thieves. You now understand that that is a very poor reliance. I trust you may become wise enough to never rely upon it again. If I have any duty in the matter, it is to give back the money to those from whom I took it; not to pay it over to villains such as you.

4.6.10 Oaths of naturalization given to aliens

On general principles of law and reason, the oaths which foreigners take, on coming here, and being "naturalized" (as it is called), are of no validity. They are necessarily given to nobody; because there is no open, authentic association, to which they can join themselves; or to whom, as individuals, they can pledge their faith. No such association, or organization, as "the people of the United States," having ever been formed by any open, written, authentic, or voluntary contract, there is, on general principles of law and reason, no such association, or organization, in existence. And all oaths that purport to be given to such an association are necessarily given only to the winds. They cannot be said to be given to any man, or body of men, as individuals, because no man, or body of men, can come forward WITH ANY PROOF that the oaths were given to them, as individuals, or to any association of which they are members. To say that there is a tacit understanding among a portion of the male adults of the country, that they will call themselves "the people of the United States," and that they will act in concert in subjecting the remainder of the people of the United States to their dominion; but that they will keep themselves personally concealed by doing all their acts secretly, is wholly insufficient, on general principles of law and reason, to prove the existence of any such association, or organization, as "the people of the United States"; or consequently to prove that the oaths of foreigners were given to any such association.

4.6.11 Oaths given to secessionists and corporations

On general principles of law and reason, all the oaths which, since the war, have been given by Southern men, that they will obey the laws of Congress, support the Union, and the like, are of no validity. Such oaths are invalid, not only because they were extorted by military power, and threats of confiscation, and because they are in contravention of men's natural right to do as they please about supporting the government, BUT ALSO BECAUSE THEY WERE GIVEN TO NOBODY. They were nominally given to "the United States." But being nominally given to "the United States," they were necessarily given to nobody, because, on general principles of law and reason, there were no "United States," to whom the oaths could be given. That is to say, there was no open, authentic, avowed, legitimate association, corporation, or body of men, known as "the United States," or as "the people of the United States," to whom the oaths could have been given. If anybody says there was such a corporation, let him state who were the individuals that composed it, and how and when they became a corporation. Were Mr. A, Mr. B, and Mr. C members of it? If so, where are their signatures? Where the evidence of their membership? Where the record? Where the open, authentic proof? There is none. Therefore, in law and reason, there was no such corporation.

1 On general principles of law and reason, every corporation, association, or organized body of men, having a legitimate
 2 corporate existence, and legitimate corporate rights, must consist of certain known individuals, who can prove, by legitimate
 3 and reasonable evidence, their membership. But nothing of this kind can be proved in regard to the corporation, or body of 4 men, who call themselves "the United States." Not a man of them, in all the Northern States, can prove by any legitimate
 5 evidence, such as is required to prove membership in other legal corporations, that he himself, or any other man whom he
 6 can name, is a member of any corporation or association called "the United States," or "the people of the United States," or,
 7 consequently, that there is any such corporation. And since no such corporation can be proved to exist, it cannot of course be
 8 proved that the oaths of Southern men were given to any such corporation. The most that can be claimed is that the oaths
 9 were given to a secret band of robbers and murderers, who called themselves "the United States," and extorted those oaths.
 10 But that is certainly not enough to prove that the oaths are of any obligation.

11 4.6.12 Oaths of soldiers and servicemen

12 On general principles of law and reason, the oaths of soldiers, that they will serve a given number of years, that they will
 13 obey the orders of their superior officers, that they will bear true allegiance to the government, and so forth, are of no
 14 obligation. Independently of the criminality of an oath, that, for a given number of years, he will kill all whom he may be 15 commanded to kill, without exercising his own judgment or conscience as to the justice or necessity of such killing, there is
 16 this further reason why a soldier's oath is of no obligation, viz., that, like all the other oaths that have now been mentioned,
 17 IT IS GIVEN TO NOBODY. There being, in no legitimate sense, any such corporation, or nation, as "the United States,"
 18 nor, consequently, in any legitimate sense, any such government as "the government of the United States," a soldier's oath
 19 given to, or contract made with, such a nation or government, is necessarily an oath given to, or contract made with, nobody.
 20 Consequently such an oath or contract can be of no obligation.

21 4.6.13 Treaties

22 On general principles of law and reason, the treaties, so called, which purport to be entered into with other nations, by persons
 23 calling themselves ambassadors, secretaries, presidents, and senators of the United States, in the name, and in behalf, of "the 24 people of the United States," are of no validity. These so-called ambassadors, secretaries, presidents, and senators, who claim
 25 to be the agents of "the people of the United States" for making these treaties, can show no open, written, or other authentic
 26 evidence that either the whole "people of the United States," or any other open, avowed, responsible body of men, calling
 27 themselves by that name, ever authorized these pretended ambassadors and others to make treaties in the name of, or binding
 28 upon any one of, "the people of the United States," or any other open, avowed, responsible body of men, calling themselves
 29 by that name, ever authorized these pretended ambassadors, secretaries, and others, in their name and behalf, to recognize 30 certain other persons, calling themselves emperors, kings, queens, and the like, as the rightful rulers, sovereigns, masters, or 31 representatives of the different peoples whom they assume to govern, to represent, and to bind.

32 The "nations," as they are called, with whom our pretended ambassadors, secretaries, presidents, and senators profess to make 33 treaties, are as much myths as our own. On general principles of law and reason, there are no such "nations." That is to say,
 34 neither the whole people of England, for example, nor any open, avowed, responsible body of men, calling themselves by 35 that name, ever, by any open, written, or other authentic contract with each other, formed themselves into any bona fide,
 36 legitimate association or organization, or authorized any king, queen, or other representative to make treaties in their name,
 37 or to bind them, either individually, or as an association, by such treaties.

38 Our pretended treaties, then, being made with no legitimate or bona fide nations, or representatives of nations, and being
 39 made, on our part, by persons who have no legitimate authority to act for us, have intrinsically no more validity than a 40 pretended treaty made by the Man in the Moon with the king of the Pleiades.

41 4.6.14 Government Debts

42 On general principles of law and reason, debts contracted in the name of "the United States," or of "the people of the United 43 States," are of no validity. It is utterly absurd to pretend that debts to the amount of twenty-five hundred millions of dollars
 44 are binding upon thirty-five or forty millions of people [the approximate national debt and population in 1870], when there
 45 is not a particle of legitimate evidence -- such as would be required to prove a private debt -- that can be produced against 46 any one of them, that either he, or his properly authorized attorney, ever contracted to pay one cent.

47 Certainly, neither the whole people of the United States, nor any number of them, ever separately or individually contracted 48 to pay a cent of these debts.

1 Certainly, also, neither the whole people of the United States, nor any number of them, every, by any open, written, or other
2 authentic and voluntary contract, united themselves as a firm, corporation, or association, by the name of "the United States,"
3 or "the people of the United States," and authorized their agents to contract debts in their name.

4 Certainly, too, there is in existence no such firm, corporation, or association as "the United States," or "the people of the 5 United States," formed by any open, written, or other authentic and voluntary contract, and having corporate property with 6 which to pay these debts.

7 How, then, is it possible, on any general principle of law or reason, that debts that are binding upon nobody individually, can
8 be binding upon forty millions of people collectively, when, on general and legitimate principles of law and reason, these 9 forty millions of people neither have, nor ever had, any corporate property? never made any corporate or individual contract?
10 and neither have, nor ever had, any corporate existence?

11 Who, then, created these debts, in the name of "the United States"? Why, at most, only a few persons, calling themselves
12 "members of Congress," etc., who pretended to represent "the people of the United States," but who really represented only 13 a secret band of robbers and murderers, who wanted money to carry on the robberies and murders in which they were then 14 engaged; and who intended to extort from the future people of the United States, by robbery and threats of murder (and real 15 murder, if that should prove necessary), the means to pay these debts.

16 This band of robbers and murderers, who were the real principals in contracting these debts, is a secret one, because its
17 members have never entered into any open, written, avowed, or authentic contract, by which they may be individually known
18 to the world, or even to each other. Their real or pretended representatives, who contracted these debts in their name, were 19 selected (if selected at all) for that purpose secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to furnish evidence against none of the 20 principals INDIVIDUALLY; and these principals were really known INDIVIDUALLY neither to their pretended
21 representatives who contracted these debts in their behalf, nor to those who lent the money. The money, therefore, was all
22 borrowed and lent in the dark; that is, by men who did not see each other's faces, or know each other's names; who could not 23 then, and cannot now, identify each other as principals in the transactions; and who consequently can prove no contract with 24 each other.

25 Furthermore, the money was all lent and borrowed for criminal purposes; that is, for purposes of robbery and murder; and for 26 this reason the contracts were all intrinsically void; and would have been so, even though the real parties, borrowers and
27 lenders, had come face to face, and made their contracts openly, in their own proper names.

28 Furthermore, this secret band of robbers and murderers, who were the real borrowers of this money, having no legitimate
29 corporate existence, have no corporate property with which to pay these debts. They do indeed pretend to own large tracts of 30 wild lands, lying between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and between the Gulf of Mexico and the North Pole. But, on 31 general principles of law and reason, they might as well pretend to own the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans themselves; or the 32 atmosphere and the sunlight; and to hold them, and dispose of them, for the payment of these debts.

33 Having no corporate property with which to pay what purports to be their corporate debts, this secret band of robbers and 34 murderers are really bankrupt. They have nothing to pay with. In fact, they do not propose to pay their debts otherwise than 35 from the proceeds of their future robberies and murders. These are confessedly their sole reliance; and were known to be such 36 by the lenders of the money, at the time the money was lent. And it was, therefore, virtually a part of the contract, that the 37 money should be repaid only from the proceeds of these future robberies and murders. For this reason, if for no other, the 38 contracts were void from the beginning.

39 In fact, these apparently two classes, borrowers and lenders, were really one and the same class. They borrowed and lent
40 money from and to themselves. They themselves were not only part and parcel, but the very life and soul, of this secret band
41 of robbers and murderers, who borrowed and spent the money. Individually they furnished money for a common enterprise;
42 taking, in return, what purported to be corporate promises for individual loans. The only excuse they had for taking these so-
43 called corporate promises of, for individual loans by, the same parties, was that they might have some apparent excuse for 44 the future robberies of the band (that is, to pay the debts of the corporation), and that they might also know what shares they
45 were to be respectively entitled to out of the proceeds of their future robberies.

46 Finally, if these debts had been created for the most innocent and honest purposes, and in the most open and honest manner,
47 by the real parties to the contracts, these parties could thereby have bound nobody but themselves, and no property but their

1 own. They could have bound nobody that should have come after them, and no property subsequently created by, or belonging
2 to, other persons.

3 4.6.15 Our rulers are a secret society!

4 The Constitution having never been signed by anybody; and there being no other open, written, or authentic contract between
5 any parties whatever, by virtue of which the United States government, so called, is maintained; and it being well known that
6 none but male persons, of twenty-one years of age and upwards, are allowed any voice in the government; and it being also
7 well known that a large number of these adult persons seldom or never vote at all; and that all those who do vote, do so
8 secretly (by secret ballot), and in a way to prevent their individual votes being known, either to the world, or even to each
9 other; and consequently in a way to make no one openly responsible for the acts of their agents, or representatives, -- all these
10 things being known, the questions arise: WHO compose the real governing power in the country? Who are the men, THE 11 RESPONSIBLE MEN, who rob us of our property? Restrain us of our liberty? Subject us to their arbitrary dominion? And 12 devastate our homes, and shoot us down by the hundreds of thousands, if we resist? How shall we find these men? How shall 13 we know them from others? How shall we defend ourselves and our property against them? Who, of our neighbors, are 14 members of this secret band of robbers and murderers? How can we know which are THEIR houses, that we may burn or 15 demolish them? Which THEIR property, that we may destroy it? Which their persons, that we may kill them, and rid the 16 world and ourselves of such tyrants and monsters?

17 These are questions that must be answered, before men can be free; before they can protect themselves against this secret
18 band of robbers and murderers, who now plunder, enslave, and destroy them.

19 The answer to these questions is, that only those who have the will and power to shoot down their fellow men, are the real
20 rulers in this, as in all other (so-called) civilized countries; for by no others will civilized men be robbed, or enslaved.

21 Among savages, mere physical strength, on the part of one man, may enable him to rob, enslave, or kill another man. Among 22 barbarians, mere physical strength, on the part of a body of men, disciplined, and acting in concert, though with very little 23 money or other wealth, may, under some circumstances, enable them to rob, enslave, or kill another body of men, as 24 numerous, or perhaps even more numerous, than themselves. And among both savages and barbarians, mere want may 25 sometimes compel one man to sell himself as a slave to another. But with (so-called) civilized peoples, among whom 26 knowledge, wealth, and the means of acting in concert, have become diffused; and who have invented such weapons and 27 other means of defense as to render mere physical strength of less importance; and by whom soldiers in any requisite number,
28 and other instrumentalities of war in any requisite amount, can always be had for money, the question of war, and 29 consequently the question of power, is little else than a mere question of money. As a necessary consequence, those who
30 stand ready to furnish this money, are the real rulers. It is so in Europe, and it is so in this country.

31 In Europe, the nominal rulers, the emperors and kings and parliaments, are anything but the real rulers of their respective 32 countries. They are little or nothing else than mere tools, employed by the wealthy to rob, enslave, and (if need be) murder
33 those who have less wealth, or none at all.

34 The Rothschilds, and that class of money-lenders of whom they are the representatives and agents -- men who never think of 35 lending a shilling to their next-door neighbors, for purposes of honest industry, unless upon the most ample security, and at
36 the highest rate of interest -- stand ready, at all times, to lend money in unlimited amounts to those robbers and murderers,
37 who call themselves governments, to be expended in shooting down those who do not submit quietly to being robbed and 38 enslaved.

39 They lend their money in this manner, knowing that it is to be expended in murdering their fellow men, for simply seeking 40 their liberty and their rights; knowing also that neither the interest nor the principal will ever be paid, except as it will be
41 extorted under terror of the repetition of such murders as those for which the money lent is to be expended.

42 These money-lenders, the Rothschilds, for example, say to themselves: If we lend a hundred millions sterling to the queen
43 and parliament of England, it will enable them to murder twenty, fifty, or a hundred thousand people in England, Ireland, or 44 India; and the terror inspired by such wholesale slaughter, will enable them to keep the whole people of those countries in 45 subjection for twenty, or perhaps fifty, years to come; to control all their trade and industry; and to extort from them large
46 amounts of money, under the name of taxes; and from the wealth thus extorted from them, they (the queen and parliament)
47 can afford to pay us a higher rate of interest for our money than we can get in any other way. Or, if we lend this sum to the 48 emperor of Austria, it will enable him to murder so many of his people as to strike terror into the rest, and thus enable him to

1 keep them in subjection, and extort money from them, for twenty or fifty years to come. And they say the same in regard to
2 the emperor of Russia, the king of Prussia, the emperor of France, or any other ruler, so called, who, in their judgment, will
3 be able, by murdering a reasonable portion of his people, to keep the rest in subjection, and extort money from them, for a
4 long time to come, to pay the interest and the principal of the money lent him.

5 And why are these men so ready to lend money for murdering their fellow men? Solely for this reason, viz., that such loans
6 are considered better investments than loans for purposes of honest industry. They pay higher rates of interest; and it is less
7 trouble to look after them. This is the whole matter. The question of making these loans is, with these lenders, a mere question
8 of pecuniary profit. They lend money to be expended in robbing, enslaving, and murdering their fellow men, solely because,
9 on the whole, such loans pay better than any others. They are no respecters of persons, no superstitious fools, that reverence
10 monarchs. They care no more for a king, or an emperor, than they do for a beggar, except as he is a better customer, and can 11 pay them better interest for their money. If they doubt his ability to make his murders successful for maintaining his power,
12 and thus extorting money from his people in future, they dismiss him unceremoniously as they would dismiss any other
13 hopeless bankrupt, who should want to borrow money to save himself >from open insolvency.

14 When these great lenders of blood-money, like the Rothschilds, have loaned vast sums in this way, for purposes of murder,
15 to an emperor or a king, they sell out the bonds taken by them, in small amounts, to anybody, and everybody, who are disposed
16 to buy them at satisfactory prices, to hold as investments. They (the Rothschilds) thus soon get back their money, with great
17 profits; and are now ready to lend money in the same way again to any other robber and murderer, called an emperor or king,
18 who, they think, is likely to be successful in his robberies and murders, and able to pay a good price for the money necessary
19 to carry them on.

20 This business of lending blood-money is one of the most thoroughly sordid, cold-blooded, and criminal that was ever carried
21 on, to any considerable extent, amongst human beings. It is like lending money to slave traders, or to common robbers and
22 pirates, to be repaid out of their plunder. And the men who loan money to governments, so called, for the purpose of enabling 23 the latter to rob, enslave, and murder their people, are among the greatest villains that the world has ever seen. And they as 24 much deserve to be hunted and killed (if they cannot otherwise be got rid of) as any slave traders, robbers, or pirates that ever
25 lived.

26 When these emperors and kings, so-called, have obtained their loans, they proceed to hire and train immense numbers of 27 professional murderers, called soldiers, and employ them in shooting down all who resist their demands for money. In fact,
28 most of them keep large bodies of these murderers constantly in their service, as their only means of enforcing their extortions.
29 There are now [1870], I think, four or five millions of these professional murderers constantly employed by the so-called 30 sovereigns of Europe. The enslaved people are, of course, forced to support and pay all these murderers, as well as to submit 31 to all the other extortions which these murderers are employed to enforce.

32 It is only in this way that most of the so-called governments of Europe are maintained. These so-called governments are in 33 reality only great bands of robbers and murderers, organized, disciplined, and constantly on the alert. And the so-called 34 sovereigns, in these different governments, are simply the heads, or chiefs, of different bands of robbers and murderers. And 35 these heads or chiefs are dependent upon the lenders of blood-money for the means to carry on their robberies and murders.
36 They could not sustain themselves a moment but for the loans made to them by these blood-money loan-mongers. And their 37 first care is to maintain their credit with them; for they know their end is come, the instant their credit with them fails.
38 Consequently the first proceeds of their extortions are scrupulously applied to the payment of the interest on their loans.

39 In addition to paying the interest on their bonds, they perhaps grant to the holders of them great monopolies in banking, like
40 the Banks of England, of France, and of Vienna; with the agreement that these banks shall furnish money whenever, in sudden
41 emergencies, it may be necessary to shoot down more of their people. Perhaps also, by means of tariffs on competing imports,
42 they give great monopolies to certain branches of industry, in which these lenders of blood-money are engaged. They also,
43 by unequal taxation, exempt wholly or partially the property of these loan-mongers, and throw corresponding burdens upon
44 those who are too poor and weak to resist.

45 Thus it is evident that all these men, who call themselves by the high-sounding names of Emperors, Kings, Sovereigns,
46 Monarchs, Most Christian Majesties, Most Catholic Majesties, High Mightinesses, Most Serene and Potent Princes, and the 47 like, and who claim to rule "by the grace of God," by "Divine Right" -- that is, by special authority from Heaven -- are 48 intrinsically not only the merest miscreants and wretches, engaged solely in plundering, enslaving, and murdering their fellow
49 men, but that they are also the merest hangers on, the servile, obsequious, fawning dependents and tools of these blood-money
50 loan-mongers, on whom they rely for the means to carry on their crimes. These loan-mongers, like the Rothschilds, laugh in

1 their sleeves, and say to themselves: These despicable creatures, who call themselves emperors, and kings, and majesties, and
2 most serene and potent princes; who profess to wear crowns, and sit on thrones; who deck themselves with ribbons, and
3 feathers, and jewels; and surround themselves with hired flatterers and lickspittles; and whom we suffer to strut around, and
4 palm themselves off, upon fools and slaves, as sovereigns and lawgivers specially appointed by Almighty God; and to hold
5 themselves out as the sole fountains of honors, and dignities, and wealth, and power -- all these miscreants and imposters
6 know that we make them, and use them; that in us they live, move, and have their being; that we require them (as the price
7 of their positions) to take upon themselves all the labor, all the danger, and all the odium of all the crimes they commit for
8 our profit; and that we will unmake them, strip them of their gewgaws, and send them out into the world as beggars, or give 9 them over to the vengeance of the people they have enslaved, the moment they refuse to commit any crime we require of 10 them, or to pay over to us such share of the proceeds of their robberies as we see fit to demand.

11 4.6.16 The agenda of our public servants is murder, robbery, slavery, despotism, and oppression

12 Now, what is true in Europe, is substantially true in this country. The difference is the immaterial one, that, in this country,
13 there is no visible, permanent head, or chief, of these robbers and murderers who call themselves "the government." That is
14 to say, there is no ONE MAN, who calls himself the state, or even emperor, king, or sovereign; no one who claims that he
15 and his children rule "by the Grace of God," by "Divine Right," or by special appointment from Heaven. There are only
16 certain men, who call themselves presidents, senators, and representatives, and claim to be the authorized agents, FOR THE
17 TIME BEING, OR FOR CERTAIN SHORT PERIODS, OF ALL "the people of the United States"; but who can show no
18 credentials, or powers of attorney, or any other open, authentic evidence that they are so; and who notoriously are not so; but
19 are really only the agents of a secret band of robbers and murderers, whom they themselves do not know, and have no means 20 of knowing, individually; but who, they trust, will openly or secretly, when the crisis comes, sustain them in all their 21 usurpations and crimes.

22 What is important to be noticed is, that these so-called presidents, senators, and representatives, these pretended agents of all
23 "the people of the United States," the moment their exactions meet with any formidable resistance from any portion of "the 24 people" themselves, are obliged, like their co-robbers and murderers in Europe, to fly at once to the lenders of blood money,
25 for the means to sustain their power. And they borrow their money on the same principle, and for the same purpose, viz., to
26 be expended in shooting down all those "people of the United States" -- their own constituents and principals, as they profess
27 to call them -- who resist the robberies and enslavements which these borrowers of the money are practicing upon them. And
28 they expect to repay the loans, if at all, only from the proceeds of the future robberies, which they anticipate it will be easy
29 for them and their successors to perpetrate through a long series of years, upon their pretended principals, if they can but 30 shoot down now some hundreds of thousands of them, and thus strike terror into the rest.

31 Perhaps the facts were never made more evident, in any country on the globe, than in our own, that these soulless blood-
32 money loan-mongers are the real rulers; that they rule from the most sordid and mercenary motives; that the ostensible
33 government, the presidents, senators, and representatives, so called, are merely their tools; and that no ideas of, or regard for,
34 justice or liberty had anything to do in inducing them to lend their money for the war [i.e, the Civil War]. In proof of all this,
35 look at the following facts.

36 Nearly a hundred years ago we professed to have got rid of all that religious superstition, inculcated by a servile and corrupt
37 priesthood in Europe, that rulers, so called, derived their authority directly from Heaven; and that it was consequently a
38 religious duty on the part of the people to obey them. We professed long ago to have learned that governments could rightfully
39 exist only by the free will, and on the voluntary support, of those who might choose to sustain them. We all professed to have 40 known long ago, that the only legitimate objects of government were the maintenance of liberty and justice equally for all.
41 All this we had professed for nearly a hundred years. And we professed to look with pity and contempt upon those ignorant,
42 superstitious, and enslaved peoples of Europe, who were so easily kept in subjection by the frauds and force of priests and 43 kings.

44 Notwithstanding all this, that we had learned, and known, and professed, for nearly a century, these lenders of blood money
45 had, for a long series of years previous to the war, been the willing accomplices of the slave-holders in perverting the 46 government from the purposes of liberty and justice, to the greatest of crimes. They had been such accomplices FOR A
47 PURELY PECUNIARY CONSIDERATION, to wit, a control of the markets in the South; in other words, the privilege of 48 holding the slave-holders themselves in industrial and commercial subjection to the manufacturers and merchants of the North
49 (who afterwards furnished the money for the war). And these Northern merchants and manufacturers, these lenders of blood-
50 money, were willing to continue to be the accomplices of the slave-holders in the future, for the same pecuniary
51 considerations. But the slave-holders, either doubting the fidelity of their Northern allies, or feeling themselves strong enough

1 to keep their slaves in subjection without Northern assistance, would no longer pay the price which these Northern men
2 demanded. And it was to enforce this price in the future -- that is, to monopolize the Southern markets, to maintain their
3 industrial and commercial control over the South -- that these Northern manufacturers and merchants lent some of the profits
4 of their former monopolies for the war, in order to secure to themselves the same, or greater, monopolies in the future. These
5 -- and not any love of liberty or justice -- were the motives on which the money for the war was lent by the North. In short,
6 the North said to the slave-holders: If you will not pay us our price (give us control of your markets) for our assistance against
7 your slaves, we will secure the same price (keep control of your markets) by helping your slaves against you, and using them
8 as our tools for maintaining dominion over you; for the control of your markets we will have, whether the tools we use for 9 that purpose be black or white, and be the cost, in blood and money, what it may.

10 On this principle, and from this motive, and not from any love of liberty, or justice, the money was lent in enormous amounts,
11 and at enormous rates of interest. And it was only by means of these loans that the objects of the war were accomplished.

12 And now these lenders of blood-money demand their pay; and the government, so called, becomes their tool, their servile,
13 slavish, villainous tool, to extort it from the labor of the enslaved people both of the North and South. It is to be extorted by 14 every form of direct, and indirect, and unequal taxation. Not only the nominal debt and interest -- enormous as the latter was 15 -- are to be paid in full; but these holders of the debt are to be paid still further -- and perhaps doubly, triply, or quadruply
16 paid -- by such tariffs on imports as will enable our home manufacturers to realize enormous prices for their commodities;
17 also by such monopolies in banking as will enable them to keep control of, and thus enslave and plunder, the industry and
18 trade of the great body of the Northern people themselves. In short, the industrial and commercial slavery of the great body
19 of the people, North and South, black and white, is the price which these lenders of blood money demand, and insist upon,
20 and are determined to secure, in return for the money lent for the war.

21 This programme having been fully arranged and systematized, they put their sword into the hands of the chief murderer of 22 the war, [undoubtedly a reference to General Grant, who had just become president] and charge him to carry their scheme
23 into effect. And now he, speaking as their organ, says, "LET US HAVE PEACE."

24 The meaning of this is: Submit quietly to all the robbery and slavery we have arranged for you, and you can have "peace."
25 But in case you resist, the same lenders of blood-money, who furnished the means to subdue the South, will furnish the means
26 again to subdue you.

27 These are the terms on which alone this government, or, with few exceptions, any other, ever gives "peace" to its people.

28 The whole affair, on the part of those who furnished the money, has been, and now is, a deliberate scheme of robbery and
29 murder; not merely to monopolize the markets of the South, but also to monopolize the currency, and thus control the industry
30 and trade, and thus plunder and enslave the laborers, of both North and South. And Congress and the president are today the 31 merest tools for these purposes. They are obliged to be, for they know that their own power, as rulers, so-called, is at an end,
32 the moment their credit with the blood-money loan-mongers fails. They are like a bankrupt in the hands of an extortioner.
33 They dare not say nay to any demand made upon them. And to hide at once, if possible, both their servility and crimes, they
34 attempt to divert public attention, by crying out that they have "Abolished Slavery!" That they have "Saved the Country!"
35 That they have "Preserved our Glorious Union!" and that, in now paying the "National Debt," as they call it (as if the people
36 themselves, ALL OF THEM WHO ARE TO BE TAXED FOR ITS PAYMENT, had really and voluntarily joined in 37 contracting it), they are simply "Maintaining the National Honor!"

38 By "maintaining the national honor," they mean simply that they themselves, open robbers and murderers, assume to be the 39 nation, and will keep faith with those who lend them the money necessary to enable them to crush the great body of the people
40 under their feet; and will faithfully appropriate, from the proceeds of their future robberies and murders, enough to pay all
41 their loans, principal and interest.

42 The pretense that the "abolition of slavery" was either a motive or justification for the war, is a fraud of the same character
43 with that of "maintaining the national honor." Who, but such usurpers, robbers, and murderers as they, ever established
44 slavery? Or what government, except one resting upon the sword, like the one we now have, was ever capable of maintaining 45 slavery? And why did these men abolish slavery? Not from any love of liberty in general -- not as an act of justice to the 46 black man himself, but only "as a war measure," and because they wanted his assistance, and that of his friends, in carrying 47 on the war they had undertaken for maintaining and intensifying that political, commercial, and industrial slavery, to which
48 they have subjected the great body of the people, both black and white. And yet these imposters now cry out that they have
49 abolished the chattel slavery of the black man -- although that was not the motive of the war -- as if they thought they could

1 thereby conceal, atone for, or justify that other slavery which they were fighting to perpetuate, and to render more rigorous
2 and inexorable than it ever was before. There was no difference of principle -- but only of degree -- between the slavery they
3 boast they have abolished, and the slavery they were fighting to preserve; for all restraints upon men's natural liberty, not
4 necessary for the simple maintenance of justice, are of the nature of slavery, and differ >from each other only in degree.

5 If their object had really been to abolish slavery, or maintain liberty or justice generally, they had only to say: All, whether
6 white or black, who want the protection of this government, shall have it; and all who do not want it, will be left in peace, so
7 long as they leave us in peace. Had they said this, slavery would necessarily have been abolished at once; the war would have
8 been saved; and a thousand times nobler union than we have ever had would have been the result. It would have been a
9 voluntary union of free men; such a union as will one day exist among all men, the world over, if the several nations, so
10 called, shall ever get rid of the usurpers, robbers, and murderers, called governments, that now plunder, enslave, and destroy

12 Still another of the frauds of these men is, that they are now establishing, and that the war was designed to establish, "a 13 government of consent." The only idea they have ever manifested as to what is a government of consent, is this -- that it is 14 one to which everybody must consent, or be shot. This idea was the dominant one on which the war was carried on; and it is 15 the dominant one, now that we have got what is called "peace."

16 Their pretenses that they have "Saved the Country," and "Preserved our Glorious Union," are frauds like all the rest of their
17 pretenses. By them they mean simply that they have subjugated, and maintained their power over, an unwilling people. This
18 they call "Saving the Country"; as if an enslaved and subjugated people -- or as if any people kept in subjection by the sword
19 (as it is intended that all of us shall be hereafter) -- could be said to have any country. This, too, they call "Preserving our 20 Glorious Union"; as if there could be said to be any Union, glorious or inglorious, that was not voluntary. Or as if there could 21 be said to be any union between masters and slaves; between those who conquer, and those who are subjugated.

22 All these cries of having "abolished slavery," of having "saved the country," of having "preserved the union," of establishing
23 "a government of consent," and of "maintaining the national honor," are all gross, shameless, transparent cheats -- so
24 transparent that they ought to deceive no one -- when uttered as justifications for the war, or for the government that has
25 succeeded the war, or for now compelling the people to pay the cost of the war, or for compelling anybody to support a
26 government that he does not want.

27 The lesson taught by all these facts is this: As long as mankind continue to pay "national debts," so-called -- that is, so long
28 as they are such dupes and cowards as to pay for being cheated, plundered, enslaved, and murdered -- so long there will be
29 enough to lend the money for those purposes; and with that money a plenty of tools, called soldiers, can be hired to keep 30 them in subjection. But when they refuse any longer to pay for being thus cheated, plundered, enslaved, and murdered, they 31 will cease to have cheats, and usurpers, and robbers, and murderers and blood-money loan-mongers for masters.

32 4.7 The U.S.A. is a Republic, not a Democracy<sup>127</sup>

33 "The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government..."

34 Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution is particularly interesting because it's one of the few sections of the 35 Constitution which expressly mandate specific obligations for the Federal Government. In contrast, read Article 1, Section
36 8, Clause 1:

37 United States Constitution
38 Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1

39 "The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, duties, Imposts and Excises to pay the Debts and 40 provide for the common Defense and general Welfare of the United States..."

41 Note that while this section grants Congress the power to "lay and collect Taxes," etc., it does not mandate that Congress
42 shall do so. If Congress wants to "lay and collect taxes," they can; they have the power to do so. But if Congress doesn't 43 want to "lay and collect taxes," they don't have to; they can refuse to exercise their power of taxation.

1 But under Article 4, Section 4, Congress has no such discretion. They must “guarantee every State in this Union a Republican
2 Form of Government...” The federal mandate for a “Republican Form of Government” is echoed in Article 1, Section 2 of
3 the Texas Constitution which reads:

4 “INHERENT POLITICAL POWER; REPUBLIC FORM OF GOVERNMENT. All political power is inherent in
5 the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their benefit. The faith of
6 the people of Texas stands pledged to the preservation of a republican form of government, and subject to this
7 limitation only, they have at all times the inalienable right to alter, reform or abolish their government in such
8 manner as they may think expedient.”

9 In other words, the only form of government that can ever be lawful in Texas is a “republican form of government”. Texans
10 can change their State government any way we please, any time we please, “subject to one limitation only”—that we preserve
11 a “republican form of government”—no matter what. Several other state constitutions include similar guarantees of a
12 “republican form of government”. It seems that early Texans also thought a “republican form of government” was absolutely 13 vital.

14 4.7.1 Republican mystery

15 Problem is, what is a “republican form of government”? I’ve been intrigued by that question for several years, but a clear
16 definition of the concept has persistently eluded me. For example, according to the 1st Edition of Black’s Law Dictionary
17 (published in 1891):

19 government by representatives chosen by the people. Cooley, Const. Law 194.”
20 [Black’s Law Dictionary, First Edition, 1891]

21 Gee, that’s about as helpful as defining “black” as a “dark color”. You’d think they could be a bit more precise, no? If
22 there was a concise definition there, I wasn’t smart enough to see it. I kept wondering why such an important concept was 23 so poorly defined. After all, isn’t it a fundamental rule of lexicography that definitions don’t include the word being defined?
24 If so, why did Black’s use “republican form” to define “republican government”? Were they merely negligent or intentionally
25 trying to obscure the concept?

26 Black’s Fourth Edition (published in 1968) provide virtually the same definition of “republican government” as Black’s 1st
27 (1891). Once again, we’re essentially told that “republics” are very “republican”. That’s not very elucidating. I couldn’t
28 believe that “representation” was all the founders sought to guarantee in Article 4 Section 4 of the Constitution. After all,
29 virtually every form of government—even dictatorships and communists—have some kind of “representation” for the people.

30 I simply couldn’t believe the Founders wasted quill and ink on Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution to simply 31 mandate that the government allow the people to have representatives. A “Republican form of Government” had to mean
32 much more. Further, the mysterious failure to concisely define a concept as fundamental and mandatory as “Republican 33 Form of Government” implied that the meaning might be so important that it was intentionally obscured.

34 4.7.2 Military Intelligence

35 I read comparative definitions of “democracy” and “republic” in U.S. Government Training Manual No. 2000-25 for Army
36 officers (published by the War Department on November 30, 1928). Those definitions illustrate that in 1928, democracy was 37 officially viewed as dangerous and our military was sworn to defend our “Republic”:

38 DEMOCRACY: A government of masses. Authority derived through mass meeting or any other form of “direct”
39 expression. Results in mobocracy. Attitude toward property is communistic—negating property rights. Attitude
40 toward law is that the will of the majority shall regulate, whether it be based upon deliberation or governed by 41 passion, prejudice, and impulse, without restraint or regard to consequences. Results in demagogism, license,
42 agitation, discontent, anarchy.

43 REPUBLIC: Authority is derived through the election by the people of public officials best fitted to represent 44 them. Attitude toward property is respect for laws and individual rights, and a sensible economic procedure.
45 Attitude toward law is the administration of justice in accord with fixed principles and established evidence, with 46 a strict regard to consequences. A great number of citizens and extent of territory may be brought within its
48 reason, justice, contentment, and progress...[Emph. Add.]

[U.S. Government Training Manual No. 2000-25 for Army officers (published by the War Department on November 30, 1928)]

These military definitions were improvements over Black's 1st and Fourth Editions. We can tell that the Army regarded “democracy” as contemptible and “republic” as noble, but otherwise, the essential meaning of “republican form of government” remained elusive.

4.7.3 Sovereign Power

My search for the meaning of “republic”, “democracy” and “republican form of government” ended with Black's 7th Edition (1999). Unlike previous editions, Black's 7th doesn't even define “republican government”—but it does offer an illuminating definition of:

“REPUBLIC. N. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who exercise that power. It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such as a king, emperor, czar, or sultan).”

Ohh, that's a beauty! I'd read that definition several times since 1999 without recognizing the inherent implications. But once I saw the implied meaning, I was electrified. First, note that definition focuses on “sovereign power”. Who “holds” sovereign power? The answer to that question provides the essential distinction between a republic, a democracy, and a monarchy (and probably all other forms of government).

But what is “sovereign power”? It's pretty obvious that the words “sovereign,” “king” and “monarchy” are so closely associated as to be almost synonymous. Further, in Western civilization, whenever one or more individuals hold “sovereign power,” it's almost certain that such power flows from God. For example, to be an earthly “sovereign” (King), one must gain the authority of sovereignty from God. This is the fundamental premise for the “divine right of kings” (sovereigns). God is the source of all “divine” rights. All other sources of authority are transient and simply based on raw power, survival of the fittest, and the idea that “might makes right” (“right” meaning “sovereign power”). Without a claim of divine origin of right, such “sovereign” powers are subject to constant challenge by anyone who believes his personal power is comparable or superior to that of the existing King. But gilded with the presumption of divine origin and implied Godly approval, “sovereign powers” can't be lawfully challenged by any mortal man. Such powers are, by definition, superior to any form of man-made (secular) political powers.

The idea that sovereign powers flow directly from God is consistent with the “Declaration of Independence” which reads in part:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights...” [Emph. Added]
[Declaration of Independence]

Clearly, just as the “divine rights” of English kings flowed from God, so did our “unalienable Rights”. Further, if “all men [including kings] are created equal,” then it follows that whatever “divine rights” were accorded to kings by God in 1776 must be equal to whatever “unalienable Rights” were simultaneously granted to “all men” by God as established by the “Declaration of Independence”. After all, if all men (kings and commoners) are created equal, their God-given rights must likewise be equal. Ergo, “unalienable Rights” and “divine rights” should be synonymous. If so, any “divine right” that was recognized in English law as belonging to English kings in 1776 should also be included among the bundle of “unalienable Rights” accorded to Americans by the 1776 Declaration.

4.7.4 Government's Purpose

The third sentence of the “Declaration of Independence” reads:

“That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.” [Emph. add.]

Here we see the primary purpose of our “Form of Government”: “to secure these rights”. What “rights”?

1 Answer: The “unalienable Rights” (including Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness) mentioned in the Declaration’s
 2 previous (second) sentence. Thus—if “unalienable,” “divine,” and “sovereign” rights are virtually synonymous—then the
 3 primary legitimate purpose for our government is to “secure” our God-given, unalienable (sovereign) Rights.

4 And who, pray tell, is the recipient of the Declaration’s sovereign/unalienable Rights? Is it We the People in a collective
 5 sense? Or is it We the People in an individual sense? The correct answer is “individual”. Below is a U.S. Supreme Court
 6 cite that backs this conclusion up from Penhallow v. Doane’s, 3 U.S. 54, 3 Dall. 54, 1 L.Ed. 507 (1795):

7 “The great distinction between Monarchies and Republics (at least our Republics) in general is, that in the former
 8 the monarch is considered as the sovereign, and each individual of his nation a subject to him, though in some
 9 countries with many important special limitations: This, I say, is generally the case, for it has not been so
 10 universally. But in a Republic, all the citizens, as such, are equal, and no citizen can rightfully exercise any 11 authority over another, but in virtue of a power constitutionally given by the whole community, and such
 12 authority when exercised, is in effect an act of the whole community which forms such body politic. In such 13 governments, therefore, the sovereignty resides in the great body of the people, but it resides in them not as so
 15 [Penhallow v. Doane’s, 3 U.S. 54, 3 Dall. 54, 1 L.Ed. 507 (1795)]

16 God endows me with “certain unalienable Rights,” and He endows you with “certain unalienable Rights” and He endows
 17 each of our neighbors with “certain unalienable Rights”. At the moment of creation, each of us —as individuals—are equally
 18 “endowed by our Creator” with “certain unalienable Rights”. The idea that we are endowed individually (rather than 19 collectively) with identical sets of sovereign/unalienable Rights is further supported by the State constitutions and the Bill of 20 Rights which make it clear that virtually all of our sovereign/unalienable Rights are held as individuals.

21 4.7.5 Who holds the sovereign power?

22 OK—big deal, hmm? We hold our unalienable Rights as “individuals”. Someone alert the media. Well, actually, it is a big
 23 deal because—if you’ll recall—the Black’s 7th definition of “republic” implies that the essential distinction between a 24 monarchy, a republic and a democracy is determined by who holds the “sovereign powers”:

25 “REPUBLIC. n. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who
 26 exercise that power. It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as 27 an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such 28 as a king, emperor, czar, or sultan). “
 29 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, Emph. added]

30 Therefore, what is a republic and (by implication) a “Republican Form of Government”? Black’s 7th does not expressly 31 answer that question but it does provide enough contrasting definitions to allow us to deduce the mysterious meaning of 32 “republic”.

33 First, a monarchy is the most easily understood form of government since the sovereign powers are held exclusively by one
 34 individual—the king. He alone has God-given, unalienable Rights. All others are “subjects” who have no legal authority or 35 right to resist the King’s will. However, distinguishing between a democracy and a republic is more subtle. Black’s 7th
 36 explains that in both a democracy and a republic, the sovereign powers are held by the people. Therefore, the first time you
 37 read that definition, you may be both confused and reassured. In either case, you see that the “people” hold the sovereign
 38 powers. OK, sounds great. We the People. Of the people, by the people, for the people. People, people, people. Sounds
 39 just like the all-American answer we’d expect to hear because we’ve been told all our lives that, in this country, the people
 40 are sovereign.

41 Uh-huh. But if you read the phrase defining a democracy again, you’ll see that “people” is qualified by “as an organized
 42 whole.” I believe that qualification is the key to understanding republic. If the “people” in a democracy hold sovereign
 43 power as an “organized whole,” they hold that power as a collective. Unlike a monarchy where one individual (the king)
 44 holds all sovereign power, in a democracy the sovereign power is held by the collective or as a group. But—in a democracy
 45 no individual holds any sovereign power.

46 OK. Black’s 7th defines “republic” as a system of government in which the “people hold sovereign power.” So if a monarchy
 47 has one sovereign individual...and a democracy no sovereign individuals.. then it would seem to follow that in a republic...all
 48 individuals hold sovereign power! Do you see the difference between a democracy and a republic? In both forms of 49 government, the people hold the sovereign power—but in the democracy those powers are held by the people as a collective,
 50 while in the republic, those powers are held by the people as individuals.

4.7.6 Individually-held God-given unalienable Rights

Thus, a “republic” is a system of government which recognizes that each person is individually “endowed by his Creator with certain unalienable Rights.” I am individually endowed, you are individually endowed, our neighbors are each individually endowed. Why is this individual endowment important? Because it doesn’t matter how the majority votes in a republic—they can’t arbitrarily deprive a single individual of his sovereign/unalienable Rights to “Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness” unless some of those unalienable Rights have been expressly delegated to government through the Constitution.

In a republic, the majority can’t vote to incarcerate (or execute) all the Jews, Blacks’ Japanese or patriots. Why? Because in a republic “All men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights”—and no man or collection of men (not even a massive democratic majority) can arbitrarily deprive any individual (even if he’s a “kike,” “nigger,” “gook,” “political extremist” or “religious fundamentalist”) of his God-given, unalienable Rights. Why? Because in the American republic, every man holds the position of “sovereign” (one who enjoys the “divine rights of kings”). The American republic is essentially a nation of kings. Thus, as per the Declaration of Independence, a “Republican Form of Government” is one which recognizes and “secures” each individual’s “sovereign powers”—his individually-held, God-given, unalienable Rights.<sup>128</sup>

4.7.7 A republic’s covenant

In a republic, every individual’s unalienable Rights cannot be violated or arbitrarily denied by any mortal man or democratic majority—unless that individual first violates his covenant with God. This principle is based on the premise that our “unalienable Rights” are conditional; they are given to each of us by God on condition that we obey the balance of God’s laws (like “Thou shalt not kill”, “thou shalt not steal”, etc). If an individual chooses to violate God’s law, he breaches his covenant with God, and his claim to God’s protections, blessings, and endowment of “unalienable Rights” is forfeit. For example, if it can be proved in a court of law that a particular individual has broken his covenant with God to “not kill,” that individual forfeits his own unalienable Right to Life and may be lawfully executed. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth...do unto others as you would have government do unto you.

However, in a republic, execution cannot be lawfully imposed on isolated individuals or groups who haven’t individually breached their covenant with God. Why? Because that individual has God-given, unalienable Rights. Those individually-held rights are the basis for his defense. That’s the foundation for his presumption of innocence. Why? Because the votes and opinions of all mankind taken together are trivialities when compared to God. If God endows an individual with a particular Right, the whole of mankind lacks sufficient collective authority to arbitrarily revoke or violate that right—unless that individual has first breached his covenant with God.

4.7.8 Divine endowment

This Biblical interpretation may seem like so much “holy rolling,” but it has great significance in a “Republican Form of Government”. For example, in a republic, you can only be charged with a crime if you injure the person or property of another sovereign individual. So long as you don’t injure, rob or kill another sovereign (and thereby violate his God-given, unalienable Rights), there is no crime. In a republic, there can be no crimes “against the state” (the collective)—only against God. Likewise, except for certain biblical prohibitions (like working on the Sabbath), there are no “victimless crimes” in a republic. However, in a democracy, the majority (or their presumed agent, the government) can vote that any act is a crime (hate speech, for example) even if no individual’s life, person or property is damaged. Thus, “victimless crimes” and “crimes against the state” (which are almost impossible in a true republic) are common under democracy. Why? Because there are no legitimate victims in a democracy. Why? Because, in a democracy, no individual has any unalienable Rights.

Without rights, you can’t be a victim; there’s nothing to damage. For example, to shoot a homo sapiens without unalienable Rights is legally indistinguishable from killing a cow. Without God-given, unalienable Rights, there’s nothing intrinsic to violate. Sure, the democracy may vote that murder is wrong (at least when committed against the majority). But that democratic collective can likewise vote that murdering Jews, Blacks, homosexuals, patriots—or even specific individuals like Jesus Christ—is quite alright. As citizens of a democracy, we each have no more individual rights than cows. Without individually-held, God-given rights “secured” by a “Republican Form of Government,” we have no intrinsic value and may <sup>128</sup> Not every “republic” conforms to this definition. For example, the former “Union of Soviet Socialist Republics” claimed to be composed of “Republics,” but merely used that word as a political label. Those “republics” were actually collectives where sovereign power was held by the collective, not individuals.

1 be fairly characterized as “human resources”. In a democracy, we have no individually-held, unalienable Rights to shield us
2 against the arbitrary will of the majority or their agents: government.

3 Think not? Ask Vickie Weaver about her unalienable Right to Life in our fair “democracy”. FBI hitman Lon Horiuchi
4 simply shot her in the head like any other dumb animal. Why? Because, as a citizen of a democracy (where the sovereign
5 powers are held by the collective), Vickie Weaver had no individual right to Life. Same was true for the Branch Davidians.
6 Same is true for you and for me. In a democracy, there are no individually-held, unalienable Rights so we are all individually
7 defenseless against the majority and/or the government. Look at the ranchers and farmers in Klamath Falls, Oregon. They’re
8 losing their homes to save some suckerfish. They’re shocked to learn that our government doesn’t recognize or secure their 9 “unalienable Rights to Life, Liberty and pursuit of Happiness” (property).

10 But the truth is that—as citizens of a democracy—those individual ranchers don’t have any unalienable Rights to their 11 property. The democracy has “spoken” (if only by its silence). The majority has presumptively ruled (at least, they haven’t 12 complained loudly) that endangered suckerfish are more important than the “suckers” who allowed themselves to become 13 citizens of a democracy. The citizens of Klamath Falls are learning that, as a tiny minority in a national democracy, they are 14 as defenseless as Jews in a Nazi concentration camp.

15 4.7.9 Democracies must by nature be deceptive to maintain their power

16 This doesn’t mean that a democratic government can do virtually anything it wants. It has to be careful and crafty. It can’t 17 murder so many citizens or steal so much property that the majority of citizens of the democracy wake up and vote to stop
18 government from killing or robbing individuals. So a democratic government has to be sneaky. It has to control public
19 opinion. It has to follow (almost worship) the public opinion polls. It can only implement so much abuse as the public will 20 endure without actually getting angry enough to vote the S.O.B.’s out. As a result, the only thing a democracy fears is public 21 exposure.

22 Conversely, in a republic, it’s simply unlawful for an FBI hitman to kill a woman holding a baby and get away with it. In a
23 republic, government officials can’t flambe’ a bunch of kids in Waco and walk away with promotions and a fat pension. In 24 a republic, you can’t effectively “seize” another person’s property by declaring that property can no longer be used to raise
25 cattle if that use adversely affects the lowly suckerfish. In a republic, individuals have unalienable Rights; suckerfish don’t.
26 Thus, the rights of individuals are superior to the interests of suckerfish. In a republic, neither a 99% democratic majority
27 nor the Gates of Hell can lawfully prevail over the God-given, unalienable Rights with which every individual is endowed.
28 See the difference?

29 In a monarchy, one individual holds the sovereign powers. In a democracy, no individual holds sovereign powers. But in a
30 republic only, all individuals hold “sovereign powers” (God-given, unalienable Rights).

31 Where would you rather live? Where only one individual had sovereign powers? Where no individual had sovereign powers?
32 Or where all individuals (including you) have sovereign powers?

33 4.7.10 Democratic disabilities

34 “The very purpose of a Bill of Rights was to withdraw certain subjects from the vicissitudes of political 35 controversy, to place them beyond the reach of majorities and officials and to establish them as legal principles
36 to be applied by the courts. One’s right to life, liberty, and property, to free speech, a free press, freedom of 37 worship and assembly, and other fundamental rights may not be submitted to vote; they depend on the outcome
38 of no elections.”

39 [West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 63 S.Ct. 1178 (1943)]

40 Black’s Law Dictionary, 7th Edition defines “democracy” as a system of government in which, “the people or community as 41 an organized whole wield the sovereign power”—but do so in the capacity of a single, artificial collective—not as an
42 association of individual “sovereigns”. Thus, democracy is a collectivist political philosophy characterized by a lack of 43 individually-held, God given, “unalienable Rights”. In other words, it is socialism or worst yet communism, at its extreme.
44 Also note that the logical correlative of the collective rights of the “group” is the absence of rights for each individual. This 45 absence of individually-held, God-given rights is the central feature of all collectivist philosophies (communism, socialism, 46 etc.) since these systems presume that “sovereign power” is held by the collective, but not by any individuals. Therefore, by 47 definition, no citizen of a democracy can hold God-given, “unalienable Rights” to Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness”
48 as an individual. Why? Because if a democracy recognized the legitimacy of individual rights as God-given and thus superior

1 to any claim of “collective” rights, the power of the democracy and majority rule over specific individuals or minorities would
 2 disappear. By simply invoking his God-given, unalienable Rights, any individual could thumb his nose at virtually any vote
 3 by the democratic majority. So long as I have an unalienable Right to Life, it matters not if 250 million Americans all vote
 4 to hang me. So long as I am individually “endowed by my Creator with certain unalienable Rights,” I can tell the whole
 5 world to “stuff it” by simply invoking my individually-held, unalienable Rights.

6 The implications of who holds sovereignty within our system of republican government forms the basis for our system of
 7 jurisprudence. Because individuals rather than collective groups or the government, are the holders of divinely endowed
 8 rights, then they are the only ones who can have a legal remedy in the courts for an invasion or injury of those rights. Groups
 9 and government cannot be identified in a republic as an “injured party”. This is why you can go into court in our country and
 10 demand a verified affidavit from an injured party, and if the state cannot produce one, then they cannot prosecute you for a
 11 crime. Stated another way, there must be a real, flesh and blood victim of a crime in order for the state to prosecute for a
 12 violation of a criminal law. If the state prosecutes someone for any other type of crime, it is called a malum prohibitum:

13 Malum prohibitum. A wrong prohibited; a thing which is wrong because prohibited; an act which is not
 14 inherently immoral, but becomes so because its commission is expressly forbidden by positive law; an act
 15 involving an illegality resulting from positive law. Compare Malum in se.
 16 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 960]

17 As we will explain later in section 4.5.3, the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1902)
 18 that Constitutional rights (the Bill of Rights) and direct taxes on natural people are mutually exclusive and cannot coexist.
 19 We believe this is because the entire Bill of Rights would have to be destroyed to eliminate all the conflicts of law that would 20 result. On the other hand, ask yourself if a tax crime can have a real, flesh and blood individual victim for a tax that is 21 voluntary to begin with? The answer is no, and that is one of many reasons why income tax laws consistent with the 22 Constitution and the Bill of Rights can never be lawfully imposed against real flesh and blood people, who are the sovereigns
 23 in our society. Furthermore, citizens simply can’t be the sovereigns unless they have individual rights. Consequently, public
 24 servants in our government simply can never be greater than the sovereigns they serve because that would turn the bedrock
 25 of our political system upside down. The Federalist Paper No. 78 written by Alexander Hamilton, one of our founding fathers,
 26 clearly explains these observations:

27 “No legislative act contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy
 28 (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people
 29 are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not
 30 authorize, but what they forbid...[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could
 31 intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far
 32 more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the 33 legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The 34 interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must 35 be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the 36 two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute.” –
 37 [Alexander Hamilton (Federalist Paper # 78) ]

38 Do you now see our point about the implications of who holds sovereign power? By definition, a democracy can’t work—
 39 can’t exercise the arbitrary authority of the majority over the minority—can’t even exist where unalienable Rights are granted
 40 to individuals by the supreme authority of God. And at least coincidentally, according to Brock Chisholm, former Director
 41 of the UN’s World Health Organization,

42 “To achieve world government, it is necessary to remove from the minds of men, their individualism, loyalty to 43 family traditions, national patriotism and religious dogmas.”

44 Do you see how a democracy—which denies both individual rights and the God that granted them—could diminish the 45 republican forces of individualism and faith that would naturally resist one world government? Do you see how a “democratic 46 form of government” might be ideal for implementing a New World Order? In fact, if you’ll read the United Nation’s 47 “Universal Declaration of Human Rights” (adopted Dec. 10, 1948), you’ll see that Article 21(b) explains the basis of the 48 U.N.’s one-world government:

49 “The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government; this shall be expressed in periodic and
 50 genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent
 51 free voting procedures.” [Emph. added]
 52 [Universal Declaration of Human Rights, United Nations, Adopted Dec. 10, 1948, Article 21(b)]

1 The basis for the authority of all U.N. governments isn't God, but the "will of the people" as expressed in "periodic elections"
 2 (rather than fixed constitutions). That's democracy, folks. And that 1948 U.S. "Declaration" is probably the political
 3 foundation for the world's 20th century march toward our "beloved" democracy. Think not? Read Article 29(2) of the same
 4 U.N. "Declaration":

5 "In the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone shall be subject only to...the rights and freedoms of 6 others...in a democratic society."
 7 [Universal Declaration of Human Rights, United Nations, Adopted Dec. 10, 1948, Article 21(b)]

8 In other words, despite the considerable list of rights which the U.N.'s "Declaration" claims to provide for all individuals,
 9 those individually-held "human rights" are absolutely subject to the "rights and freedoms of others". Note that "others" is 10 plural. Thus, the individual's rights are always subject to that of the group, of the collective. In other words, whenever two 11 or more are gathered in the U.N.'s name, a single person's claim to "individual rights" is meaningless.

12 A collectivist form of government, the U.N. democracy is fundamentally indistinguishable from communism and
 13 socialism.<sup>129</sup> More importantly, by rejecting the concept of individually-held, unalienable Rights, every democracy
 14 (including the U.N., the New World Order and/ or the United States) must likewise reject the source of those unalienable
 15 Rights: God.

16 Like all collectivist political systems, democracies must be atheistic. Although a particular democracy may allow its subjects
 17 to engage in some religious activity, none of those religious principles can be officially recognized or given any authority by 18 the collectivist state. (Can you say "separation of church and state," boys and girls?)

19 4.7.11 Collective self-destruction

20 "Do not follow the crowd [majority] in doing wrong. When you give testimony in a lawsuit, do not pervert justice 21 by siding with the crowd, and do not show favoritism to a poor man in his lawsuit."
 22 [Exodus 23:2, Bible, NIV]

23 But democracies aren't merely dangerous to individuals, they're even dangerous to the collective because—without 24 individually-held, unalienable Rights—there is no defense against unlimited government growth, taxation, regulation or 25 oppression. A massive, unlimited New World Order (or American bureaucracy) is the inevitable expression and consequence 26 of the principles of democracy.

27 Consider: In 1978, William E. Simon (Secretary of the Treasury in the Nixon and Ford administrations) complained that the 28 federal expenditures exceeded $1 billion a day. Twenty-three years later, our federal government spends about $56 billion
 29 per day. Of course, our economy has grown since 1978, and inflation has reduced the value of $56 billion in today's dollars
 30 to about $20 billion in 1978 dollars.

31 Still, did federal expenditures (and taxes, regulations, and intrusion into private lives) grow at least ten-fold in the last quarter
 32 century because the citizens of our "democracy" voted for that growth? Or did it grow because in a democracy, we have no
 33 claim to the individual rights that would automatically inhibit such extraordinary government growth?

34 In a "Republican Form of Government"—where individually held, God-given rights are presumed and "secured"—
 35 government can't grow except by the express will of the people as demonstrated through constitutional amendments. But in 36 a democracy, where there are no God-given, individual rights to inhibit government growth, the will of the collective is 37 expressed only every two years in the form of elections. Once elected, our "representatives" are endowed to vote for virtually 38 anything and everything they want since they're presumed to enjoy the support of the majority of the collective. Unless the 39 people complain bitterly and even vote against incumbents—without individually-held, God-given rights, there is not 40 restriction on government growth in a democracy.

41 In a democracy, government can take your guns. They can take your kids, your property and your cash. In fact, they can
 42 take your life. Every one of those "takings" (and thousands more) are possible and absolutely legal because subjects of a
 43 democracy have no individually-held, unalienable Rights to protect them against arbitrary exercise of government power.

<sup>129</sup> If you read Article 22 of the U.N.'s "Declaration": "Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security..." Does this imply that modern "social security" is a U.N. program? Is it possible that mere possession of a Social Security card is construed as evidence of your status as subject in an international democracy?

1 If it's lawful for government to take virtually anything it wants from subjects of the democratic collective, then it's certainly
 2 lawful for government to create and enlarge as many bureaucracies and enforcement agencies as it deems necessary to
 3 implement the unrestricted takings. Do you see my point? God-given, unalienable Rights don't merely protect us as
 4 individuals from government oppression, they are the fundamental bulwarks that protects the whole country against the
 5 growth of massive, government bureaucracies. The road to world democracy without the restraining influences of republican
 6 government is a road to totalitarian socialism and communism and self-destruction. Below is just one example of how that 7 might happen:

8 "A democracy cannot exist as a permanent form of government. It can only exist until the voters discover that
 9 they can vote themselves money from the Public Treasury. From that moment on, the majority always votes for 10 the candidate promising the most benefits from the Public Treasury with the result that a democracy always 11 collapses over loose fiscal policy always followed by dictatorship."
 12 [Alexander Fraser Tytler, "The Decline and Fall of the Athenian Republic"]

13 4.7.12 The "First" Bill of Rights?

14 So what is the "Republican Form of Government" that's mandated by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution?

15 Answer: A system of government that recognizes the God-given, unalienable Rights of individuals. And what did the 16 "Declaration of Independence" say was the fundamental purpose for all just government? "To secure these rights ...." Which 17 rights? The "unalienable Rights" given to each individual by God and referenced in the previous sentence of the Declaration.

18 Thus, the first obligation of the "Republican Form of Government" mandated by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal
 19 Constitution is to secure God-given, unalienable Rights to individuals. Not to secure rights to the collective or some king—
 20 but to secure unalienable Rights to every individual. And note that while, "among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of 21 Happiness"—this general list of unalienable Rights is not exhaustive. It is obvious that there are other, unspecified
 22 unalienable Rights which must also be "secured" by government. If so, Article 4, section 4 of the Federal Constitution might 23 be viewed as the original "Bill of Rights".

24 Consider: The Federal Constitution was adopted in 1789. The Bill of Rights (first ten amendments) was adopted in 1791.
 25 But, in 1791, some people argued against adopting the Bill of Rights because 1) all unalienable Rights were protected under 26 the Constitution; and 2) by expressly specifying some Rights, government might later be able to argue that other rights which 27 were not specified did not exist or were not protected.

28 Until recently, I viewed those 18th century arguments as unconvincing. But now that I see that a "Republican Form of 29 Government" is one that recognizes and "secures" all God-given, unalienable Rights, I also see that Article 4, Section 4 of 30 the Federal Constitution (and similar sections in State constitutions) seem to guarantee all unalienable Rights to all
 31 individuals.

32 Thus, the 1791 Bill of Rights may have truly been unnecessary, redundant or even counterproductive. Worse, by focusing 33 on the specific rights enumerated in the first ten amendments, we may have lost sight of the "mother lode" of unalienable
 34 Rights: the Article 4, Section 4 guarantee of a "Republican Form of Government" (one that "secures" our unalienable Rights).

35 By focusing on each specific right in the Bill of Rights, it's become possible for democratic government to whittle away at 36 each right whenever political conditions allow them to do so. They don't attack all our rights at once; they simply whittle
 37 away a little at "due process" today, "freedom of speech" tomorrow, and the right to "keep and bear arms" next month. In a
 38 sense, it's arguable that the Bill of Rights might allow government to "divide and conquer" our rights on a one-by-one basis
 39 and thereby slowly "cook" our freedoms like so many frogs. However, such cannibalism seems strictly prohibited under 40 Article 4, Section 4 guarantee of a "Republican Form of Government".

41 4.7.13 The mandate remains

42 So far as we know, the last President to refer to this country as a "republic" was John F. Kennedy. Since then, all presidents
 43 have referred to the United States only as a "democracy"—a political system which, by definition, cannot recognize the 44 unalienable Rights and sovereign powers of individuals. Does our current government secure our God-given, unalienable
 45 Rights? Obviously not.

1 Obvious conclusion? We no longer live in a republic. Instead, we're entrapped in a democracy where unalienable Rights
2 are not recognized or "secured" and no individual or minority is safe from the majority's/government's arbitrary exercise of
3 power or oppression. Nevertheless, Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution is still there, un-amended, and mandating
4 that "The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government..."

5 So we seem to have a constitutional conflict. Our Federal and (some) State constitutions mandate a republic, but our
6 government only provides a democracy. This conflict between the Article 4, Section 4 mandate for a "Republican Form of 7 Government" and our modern democracy can successfully be exploited as a defense against government oppression. We
8 suspect that a defendant who 1) understands the full meaning of a "Republican Form of Government" and 2) demands that
9 the Article 4, Section 4 guarantee of such government be enforced—may raise a constitutional conflict or "political question"
10 too embarrassing for most prosecutors to face. If so, cases against defendants might "disappear" if those defendants
11 essentially argued that, as individuals "endowed with certain unalienable Rights," they could not be subject to the statutes,
12 regulations and enforcement activities of a democracy—which, by definition, denies unalienable Rights.

13 More importantly, any government official who has taken an Oath of Office to support and defend the Constitution is duty
14 bound to "guarantee" a "Republican Form of Government" and the attendant "unalienable Rights". Therefore, if an official
15 sought to impose rules or regulation upon you that were based on democratic principles rather than unalienable Rights—that 16 official might violate his Oath of Office and incur personal liability.

17 So, if you claim you still have the unalienable Rights referenced in the "Declaration of Independence" and seemingly 18 guaranteed by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution, will government publicly admit that it's not so? Even if
19 government can prove that you don't have unalienable Rights, you're not in a "state of this Union," or the Republic is long
20 dead, they'd be unlikely to make those admissions publicly since doing so could alert the democratic majority that they've 21 been betrayed. Once "officially alerted of their loss of individual rights, the public might rise up and vote (the democracy's
22 one remaining "right") to restore the Republican Form of Government.<sup>130</sup>

23 Ironically, democracy only works if the public has no idea of what kind of mess they're really in. If your courtroom defense
24 threatens to "sound the alarm," gov-co may decline to prosecute. Further, I suspect that most government prosecutions for 25 minor offenses (traffic, family law, etc.) take place in courts of equity rather than law. One axiom of equity jurisdiction is 26 that the plaintiff must have "clean hands" to initiate a case in equity. So what would happen if the government tried to sue
27 or indict you in a court of equity and you advised the court that the government's "hands" were "unclean" since it was
28 operating as a democracy rather than the "Republican Form of Government" mandated by the Federal and (possibly) State
29 constitutions? Could failure to provide a "Republican Form of Government" cost government its standing to sue in equity?

30 Similarly, Article 4, Section 4 might not only offer an intriguing defense against government prosecution, it might even
31 provide a basis for aggressively suing a governmental entity or official that violated or refused to "secure" our unalienable
32 Rights. Until Federal and State constitutions are amended to remove the republican mandate, there appears to be no wiggle-
33 room, no excuse for not providing the People with a "Republican Form of Government". If so, any governmental agent or 34 agency that's put on proper notice of their constitutionally-mandated duty to provide us with a "Republican Form of 35 Government"—and nevertheless continues to prosecute us as a subject of the unauthorized democracy—might be personally
36 exposed to financial and even criminal liability. More, intentional failure to provide a "Republican Form of Government" is 37 arguably treason (a hanging offense). In fact, it's arguable that (like all collectivist political systems) democracy itself is 38 anathema to the Declaration of Independence, treason to the Constitution, and blasphemy to God.

39 Faced with charges that they've knowingly refused to provide a "Republican Form of Government" and "secure" our 40 "Unalienable Rights," what could government agents do? Admit to a jury that the American people haven't had any 41 unalienable Rights since the 1930's? I don't think so. But even if they made that admission, would the jury believe them?
42 Probably not. And therein lies the great vulnerability of a democracy imposed through deceit and enforced public ignorance.
43 Government secretly imposed the democracy, because they knew the American people would never accept it, if they 44 understood that abandoning the republic meant abandoning their unalienable Rights. As a result, government is in the 45 awkward position of a teenage boy who brings a hooker home while his folks are on vacation. If his parents come home
46 early, the kid must either hide the whore or pass her off as his history teacher—but he can't possibly admit that he's got a
47 whore in the house. Likewise, our government can't openly admit it's brought the disease-bearing whore of democracy into our republic. Ohh, she's here alright, but all gov-co can do is act innocent, keep a big supply of condoms handy and hope we don't find out she's not our long-lost Aunt.

4.7.14 What shall we do?

How can we eject the democratic bitch? The "Declaration of Independence" offers guidance:

*"That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends [securing our unalienable Rights], it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. [Emph. and bracket added]

In short, we have an unalienable Right (some say, "duty") to abolish the democracy which denies our individually-held, God-given Rights. Based on the Article 4, Section 4 "guarantee," we can demand restoration of the "Republican Form of Government" that secures our unalienable Rights. Such overthrow won't happen soon since a successful referendum against democracy is a "political question" that will require a massive effort to educate the public to the blessings of a Republic and the disabilities of democracy.

However, for now, we can begin that educational process by simply challenging government to provide the "Republican Form of Government" that's guaranteed by our Federal and (some) State constitutions. As our understanding grows, and more people begin to defend themselves based on the constitutional guarantee of a "Republican Form of Government," we might see atheist democracy begin to crack, then crumble like the Berlin wall did when Communism fell.

4.7.15 Sorry, Mr. Franklin, "We're All Democrats Now"

This section was derived from a speech by Congressman Ron Paul delivered in the House of Representatives on January 29, 2003. It very powerfully illustrates the disabilities of democracies, how we have violated the intent of the founding fathers in our retreat from the Constitutional Republic they endowed us with, and what we need to do to fix the problem. Ron Paul has since retired from political life, but you can visit America's Liberty Committee website at the address below:

4.7.15.1 Introduction

At the close of the Constitutional Convention in 1787, Benjamin Franklin told an inquisitive citizen that the delegates to the Constitutional Convention gave the people "a Republic, if you can keep it." We should apologize to Mr. Franklin. It is obvious that the Republic is gone, for we are wallowing in a pure democracy against which the Founders had strongly warned.

Madison, the father of the Constitution, could not have been more explicit in his fear and concern for democracies. "Democracies," he said, "have ever been spectacles of turbulence and contention; have ever been found incompatible with personal security or the rights of property; and have in general been as short in their lives as they have been violent in their death."

If Madison's assessment was correct, it behooves those of us in Congress to take note and decide, indeed, whether the Republic has vanished, when it occurred, and exactly what to expect in the way of "turbulence, contention, and violence." And above all else, what can we and what will we do about it?

The turbulence seems self-evident. Domestic welfare programs are not sustainable and do not accomplish their stated goals. State and federal spending and deficits are out of control. Terrorism and uncontrollable fear undermine our sense of well-being. Hysterical reactions to dangers not yet seen prompt the people- at the prodding of the politicians- to readily sacrifice their liberties in vain hope that someone else will take care of them and guarantee their security. With these obvious signs of a failed system all around us, there seems to be more determination than ever to antagonize the people of the world by pursuing a world empire. Nation building, foreign intervention, preemptive war, and global government drive our foreign policy. There seems to be complete aversion to defending the Republic and the Constitution that established it.

1 The Founders clearly understood the dangers of a democracy. Edmund Randolph of Virginia described the effort to deal with
2 the issue at the Constitutional Convention:

3 "The general object was to produce a cure for the evils under which the United States labored; that in tracing
4 these evils to their origins, every man had found it in the turbulence and follies of democracy."

5 These strongly held views regarding the evils of democracy and the benefits of a Constitutional Republic were shared by all
6 the Founders. For them, a democracy meant centralized power, controlled by majority opinion, which was up for grabs and 7 therefore completely arbitrary.

8 In contrast, a Republic was decentralized and representative in nature, with the government's purpose strictly limited by the 9 Constitution to the protection of liberty and private property ownership. They believed the majority should never be able to 10 undermine this principle and that the government must be tightly held in check by constitutional restraints. The difference
11 between a democracy and a republic was simple. Would we live under the age-old concept of the rule of man or the 12 enlightened rule of law?

13 A constitution in and by itself does not guarantee liberty in a republican form of government. Even a perfect constitution
14 with this goal in mind is no better than the moral standards and desires of the people. Although the United States Constitution
15 was by far the best ever written for the protection of liberty, with safeguards against the dangers of a democracy, it too was 16 flawed from the beginning. Instead of guaranteeing liberty equally for all people, the authors themselves yielded to the 17 democratic majority's demands that they compromise on the issue of slavery. This mistake, plus others along the way,
18 culminated in a Civil War that surely could have been prevented with clearer understanding and a more principled approach
19 to the establishment of a constitutional republic.

20 Subsequently, the same urge to accommodate majority opinion, while ignoring the principles of individual liberty, led to 21 some other serious errors. Even amending the Constitution in a proper fashion to impose alcohol prohibition turned out to be
22 a disaster. Fortunately this was rectified after a short time with its repeal.

23 But today, the American people accept drug prohibition, a policy as damaging to liberty as alcohol prohibition. A majority
24 vote in Congress has been enough to impose this very expensive and failed program on the American people, without even 25 bothering to amend the Constitution. It has been met with only minimal but, fortunately, growing dissent. For the first 150
26 years of our history, when we were much closer to being a true republic, there were no federal laws dealing with this serious
27 medical problem of addiction.

28 The ideas of democracy, not the principles of liberty, were responsible for passage of the 16th Amendment. It imposed the 29 income tax on the American people and helped to usher in the modern age of the welfare/warfare state. Unfortunately, the 30 16th Amendment has not been repealed, as was the 18th. As long as the 16th Amendment is in place, the odds are slim that 31 we can restore a constitutional republic dedicated to liberty. The personal income tax is more than symbolic of a democracy;
32 it is a predictable consequence.

33 4.7.15.2 Transition to Democracy

34 The transition from republic to democracy was gradual and insidious. Its seeds were sown early in our history. In many ways,
35 the Civil War and its aftermath laid the foundation for the acute erosion that took place over the entire 20th century. Chronic
36 concern about war and economic downturns- events caused by an intrusive government's failure to follow the binding
37 restraints of the Constitution- allowed majority demands to supersede the rights of the minority. By the end of the 20th
38 century, majority opinion had become the determining factor in all that government does. The rule of law was cast aside,
39 leaving the Constitution a shell of what it once was- a Constitution with rules that guaranteed a republic with limited and 40 regional government and protection of personal liberty. The marketplace, driven by voluntary cooperation, private property
41 ownership, and sound money was severely undermined with the acceptance of the principles of a true democracy.

42 Unfortunately, too many people confuse the democratic elections of leaders of a republic for democracy by accepting the rule
43 of majority opinion in all affairs. For majorities to pick leaders is one thing. It is something quite different for majorities to 44 decide what rights are, to redistribute property, to tell people how to manage their personal lives, and to promote undeclared,
45 unconstitutional wars.

1 The majority is assumed to be in charge today and can do whatever it pleases. If the majority has not yet sanctioned some
2 desired egregious action demanded by special interests, the propaganda machine goes into operation, and the pollsters relay
3 the results back to the politicians who are seeking legitimacy in their endeavors. The rule of law and the Constitution have 4 become irrelevant, and we live by constant polls.

5 This trend toward authoritarian democracy was tolerated because, unlike a military dictatorship, it was done in the name of
6 benevolence, fairness, and equity. The pretense of love and compassion by those who desire to remold society and undermine
7 the Constitution convinced the recipients, and even the victims, of its necessity. Since it was never a precipitous departure
8 from the republic, the gradual erosion of liberty went unnoticed.

9 But it is encouraging that more and more citizens are realizing just how much has been lost by complacency. The resolution
10 to the problems we face as a result of this profound transition to pure democracy will be neither quick nor painless. This
11 transition has occurred even though the word “democracy” does not appear in the Constitution or in the Declaration of 12 Independence, and the Founders explicitly denounced it.

13 Over the last hundred years, the goal of securing individual liberties within the framework of a constitutional republic has 14 been replaced with incessant talk of democracy and fairness.

15 Rallying support for our ill-advised participation in World War I, Wilson spoke glowingly of “making the world safe for 16 democracy,” and never mentioned national security. This theme has, to this day, persisted in all our foreign affairs. Neo-
17 conservatives now brag of their current victories in promoting what they call “Hard Wilsonism.”

18 A true defense of self-determination for all people, the necessary ingredient of a free society, is ignored. Self-determination
19 implies separation of smaller government from the larger entities that we witnessed in the breakup of the Soviet Union. This 20 notion contradicts the goal of pure democracy and world government. A single world government is the ultimate goal of all

22 4.7.15.3 Current Understanding

23 Today the concepts of rights and property ownership are completely arbitrary. Congress, the courts, presidents and 24 bureaucrats arbitrarily “legislate” on a daily basis, seeking only the endorsement of the majority. Although the republic was 25 designed to protect the minority against the dictates of the majority, today we find the reverse. The republic is no longer 26 recognizable.

27 Supporters of democracy are always quick to point out one of the perceived benefits of this system is the redistribution of 28 wealth by government force to the poor. Although this may be true in limited fashion, the champions of this system never 29 concern themselves with the victims from whom the wealth is stolen. The so-called benefits are short-lived, because 30 democracy consumes wealth with little concern for those who produce it. Eventually the programs cannot be funded, and the 31 dependency that has developed precipitates angry outcries for even more “fairness.” Since reversing the tide against liberty 32 is so difficult, this unworkable system inevitably leads to various forms of tyranny.

33 As our republic crumbles, voices of protest grow louder. The central government becomes more authoritarian with each crisis.
34 As the quality of education plummets, the role of the federal government is expanded. As the quality of medical care collapses,
35 the role of the federal government in medicine is greatly increased. Foreign policy failures precipitate cries for more
36 intervention abroad and an even greater empire. Cries for security grow louder, and concern for liberty languishes.

37 Attacks on our homeland prompt massive increase in the bureaucracy to protect us from all dangers, seen and imagined. The 38 prime goal and concern of the Founders, the protection of liberty, is ignored. Those expressing any serious concern for 39 personal liberty are condemned for their self-centeredness and their lack of patriotism.

40 Even if we could defeat al Qaeda- which surely is a worthwhile goal- it would do little to preserve our liberties, while ignoring 41 the real purpose of our government. Another enemy would surely replace it, just as the various groups of barbarians never 42 left the Roman Empire alone once its internal republican structure collapsed.

43 4.7.15.4 Democracy Subverts Liberty and Undermines Prosperity

1 Once it becomes acceptable to change the rules by majority vote, there are no longer any limits on the power of the 2 government. When the Constitution can be subverted by mere legislative votes, executive orders or judicial decrees,
3 constitutional restraints on the government are eliminated. This process was rare in the early years of our history, but now it
4 is routine.

5 Democracy is promoted in the name of fairness in an effort to help some special-interest group gain a benefit that it claims it
6 needs or is entitled to. If only one small group were involved, nothing would come of the demands. But coalitions develop,
7 and the various groups ban together to form a majority to vote themselves all those things that they expect others to provide
8 for them.

9 Although the motivating factor is frequently the desire for the poor to better themselves through the willingness of others to
10 sacrifice for what they see as good cause, the process is doomed to failure. Governments are inefficient and the desired goals
11 are rarely achieved. Administrators, who benefit, perpetuate the programs. Wealthy elites learn to benefit from the system in 12 a superior fashion over the poor, because they know how to skim the cream off the top of all the programs designed for the 13 disadvantaged. They join the various groups in producing the majority vote needed to fund their own special projects.

14 Public financing of housing, for instance, benefits builders, bureaucrats, insurance companies, and financial institutions, while 15 the poor end up in drug-infested, crime-ridden housing projects. For the same reason, not only do business leaders not object
16 to the system, but they also become strong supporters of welfare programs and foreign aid. Big business strongly supports
17 programs like the Export/Import Bank, the IMF, the World Bank, farm subsidies, and military adventurism. Tax-code
18 revisions and government contracts mean big profits for those who are well-connected. Concern for individual liberty is 19 pushed to the bottom of the priority list for both the poor and rich welfare recipients.

20 Prohibitions placed in the Constitution against programs that serve special interests are the greatest threat to the current system
21 of democracy under which we operate. In order for the benefits to continue, politicians must reject the rule of law and concern
22 themselves only with the control of majority opinion. Sadly, that is the job of almost all politicians. It is clearly the motivation
23 behind the millions spent on constant lobbying, as well as the billions spent on promoting the right candidates in each election.
24 Those who champion liberty are rarely heard from. The media, banking, insurance, airlines, transportations, financial 25 institutions, government employees, the military-industrial complex, the educational system, and the medical community are
26 all dependent on government appropriations, resulting in a high-stakes system of government.

27 Democracy encourages the mother of all political corruption- the use of political money to buy influence. If the dollars spent
28 in this effort represent the degree to which democracy has won out over the rule of law and the Constitution, it looks like the 29 American republic is left wanting. Billions are spent on the endeavor.

30 Money in politics is the key to implementing policy and swaying democratic majorities. It is seen by most Americans, and 31 rightly so, as a negative and a danger. Yet the response, unfortunately, is only more of the same. More laws tinkering with 32 freedom of expression are enacted, in hopes that regulating sums of private money thrown into the political system will curtail
33 the abuse. But failing to understand the cause of the problem, lack of respect for the Constitution, and obsession with 34 legislative relativity dictated by the majority serve only to further undermine the rule of law.

35 We were adequately warned about the problem. Democracies lead to chaos, violence and bankruptcy. The demands of the 36 majority are always greater than taxation alone can provide. Therefore, control over the monetary and banking system is 37 required for democracies to operate. It was no accident in 1913, when the dramatic shift toward a democracy became 38 pronounced, that the Federal Reserve was established. A personal income tax was imposed as well. At the same time, popular
39 election of Senators was instituted, and our foreign policy became aggressively interventionist. Even with an income tax, the 40 planners for war and welfare (a guns and butter philosophy) knew that it would become necessary to eliminate restraints on
41 the printing of money. Private counterfeiting was a heinous crime, but government counterfeit and fractional-reserve banking
42 were required to seductively pay for the majority's demands. It is for this reason that democracies always bring about currency
43 debasement through inflation of the money supply.

44 Some of the planners of today clearly understand the process and others, out of ignorance, view central-bank money creation
45 as a convenience with little danger. That's where they are wrong. Even though the wealthy and the bankers support paper 46 money- believing they know how to protect against its ill effects- many of them are eventually dragged down in the economic 47 downturns that always develop.

1 It's not a new era that they have created for us today, but more of the same endured throughout history by so many other
2 nations. The belief that democratic demands can be financed by deficits, credit creation and taxation is based on false hope
3 and failure to see how it contributes to the turbulence as the democracy collapses.

4 Once a nation becomes a democracy, the whole purpose of government changes. Instead of the government's goal being that
5 of guaranteeing liberty, equal justice, private property, and voluntary exchange, the government embarks on the impossible
6 task of achieving economic equality, micromanaging the economy, and protecting citizens from themselves and all their
7 activities. The destruction of the wealth-building process, which is inherent in a free society, is never anticipated. Once it's 8 realized that it has been undermined, it is too late to easily reverse the attacks against limited government and personal liberty.

9 Democracy, by necessity, endorses special-interest interventionism, inflationism, and corporatism. In order to carry out the 10 duties now expected of the government, power must be transferred from the citizens to the politicians. The only thing left is 11 to decide which group or groups have the greatest influence over the government officials. As the wealth of the nation
12 dwindles, competition between the special-interest groups grows more intense and becomes the dominant goal of political 13 action. Restoration of liberty, the market and personal responsibility are of little interest and are eventually seen as impractical.

14 Power and public opinion become crucial factors in determining the direction of all government expenditures. Although both 15 major parties now accept the principles of rule by majority and reject the rule of law, the beneficiaries for each party are 16 generally different- although they frequently overlap. Propaganda, demagoguery, and control of the educational system and 17 the media are essential to directing the distribution of the loot the government steals from those who are still honestly working 18 for a living.

19 The greater problem is that nearly everyone receives some government benefit, and at the same time contributes to the 20 Treasury. Most hope they will get back more than they pay in and, therefore, go along with the firmly entrenched system.
21 Others, who understand and would choose to opt out and assume responsibility for themselves, aren't allowed to and are
22 forced to participate. The end only comes with a collapse of the system, since a gradual and logical reversal of the inexorable
23 march toward democratic socialism is unachievable.

24 Soviet-style communism dramatically collapsed once it was recognized that it could no longer function and a better system
25 replaced it. It became no longer practical to pursue token reforms like those that took place over its 70-year history.

26 The turmoil and dangers of pure democracy are known. We should get prepared. But it will be the clarity with which we 27 plan its replacement that determines the amount of pain and suffering endured during the transition to another system.
28 Hopefully, the United States Congress and other government leaders will come to realize the seriousness of our current
29 situation and replace the business-as-usual attitude, regardless of political demands and growing needs of a boisterous
30 majority. Simply stated, our wealth is running out, and the affordability of democracy is coming to an end.

31 History reveals that once majorities can vote themselves largesse, the system is destined to collapse from within. But in order
32 to maintain the special-interest system for as long as possible, more and more power must be given to an ever-expanding
33 central government-which of course only makes matters worse.

34 The economic shortcomings of such a system are easily understood. What is too often ignored is that the flip side of delivering 35 power to government is the loss of liberty to the individual. This loss of liberty causes exactly what the government doesn't 36 want- less productive citizens who cannot pay taxes.

37 Even before 9/11, these trends were in place and proposals were abundant for restraining liberty. Since 9/11, the growth of 38 centralized government and the loss of privacy and personal freedoms have significantly accelerated.

39 It is in dealing with homeland defense and potential terrorist attacks that the domestic social programs and the policy of 40 foreign intervention are coming together and precipitating a rapid expansion of the state and erosion of liberty. Like our social 41 welfarism at home, our foreign meddling and empire building abroad are a consequence of our becoming a pure democracy.

42 4.7.15.5 Foreign Affairs and Democracy

43 The dramatic shift away from republicanism that occurred in 1913, as expected, led to a bold change of purpose in foreign 44 affairs. The goal of "making the world safe for democracy" was forcefully put forth by President Wilson. Protecting national 45 security had become too narrow a goal and selfish in purpose. An obligation for spreading democracy became a noble

1 obligation backed by a moral commitment, every bit as utopian as striving for economic equality in an egalitarian society
2 here at home.

3 With the growing affection for democracy, it was no giant leap to assume that majority opinion should mold personal
4 behavior. It was no mere coincidence that the 18th Amendment- alcohol prohibition- was passed in 1919.

5 Ever since 1913, all our presidents have endorsed meddling in the internal affairs of other nations and have given generous
6 support to the notion that a world government would facilitate the goals of democratic welfare or socialism. On a daily basis,
7 we hear that we must be prepared to spend our money and use our young people to police the entire world in order to spread
8 democracy. Whether in Venezuela or Columbia, Afghanistan or Pakistan, Iraq or Iran, Korea or Vietnam, our intervention is 9 always justified with a tone of moral arrogance that “it’s for their own good.”

10 Our policymakers promote democracy as a cure-all for the various complex problems of the world. Unfortunately, the 11 propaganda machine is able to hide the real reasons for our empire building. “Promoting democracy” overseas merely 12 becomes a slogan for doing things that the powerful and influential strive to do for their own benefit. To get authority for 13 these overseas pursuits, all that is required of the government is that the majority be satisfied with the stated goals- no matter
14 how self-serving they may be. The rule of law, that is, constitutional restraint, is ignored. But as successful as the policy may 15 be on the short run and as noble as it may be portrayed, it is a major contributing factor to the violence and chaos that 16 eventually come from pure democracy.

17 There is abundant evidence that the pretense of spreading democracy contradicts the very policies we are pursuing. We preach
18 about democratic elections, but we are only too willing to accept some for-the-moment friendly dictator who actually
19 overthrew a democratically elected leader or to interfere in some foreign election.

20 This is the case with Pakistan’s Mushariff. For a temporary alliance, he reaps hundreds of millions of dollars, even though
21 strong evidence exists that the Pakistanis have harbored and trained al Qaeda terrorists, that they have traded weapons with 22 North Korea, and that they possess weapons of mass destruction. No one should be surprised that the Arabs are confused by 23 our overtures of friendship. We have just recently promised $28 billion to Turkey to buy their support for Persian Gulf War
24 II.

25 Our support of Saudi Arabia, in spite of its ties to al Qaeda through financing and training, is totally ignored by those obsessed
26 with going to war against Iraq. Saudi Arabia is the furthest thing from a democracy. As a matter of fact, if democratic elections
27 were permitted, the Saudi government would be overthrown by a bin Laden ally.

28 Those who constantly preach global government and democracy ought to consider the outcome of their philosophy in a
29 hypothetical Mid-East regional government. If these people were asked which country in this region possesses weapons of 30 mass destruction, has a policy of oppressive occupation, and constantly defies UN Security council resolutions, the vast 31 majority would overwhelmingly name Israel. Is this ludicrous? No, this is what democracy is all about and what can come 32 from a one-man, one-vote philosophy.

33 U.S. policy supports the overthrow of the democratically elected Chavez government in Venezuela, because we don’t like 34 the economic policy it pursues. We support a military takeover as long as the new dictator will do as we tell him.

35 There is no creditability in our contention that we really want to impose democracy on other nations. Yet promoting 36 democracy is the public justification for our foreign intervention. It sounds so much nicer than saying we’re going to risk the 37 lives of our young people and massively tax our citizens to secure the giant oil reserves in Iraq.

38 After we take over Iraq, how long would one expect it to take until there are authentic nationwide elections in that country?
39 The odds of that happening in even a hundred years are remote. It’s virtually impossible to imagine a time when democratic 40 elections would ever occur for the election of leaders in a constitutional republic dedicated for protection of liberty any place
41 in the region.

42 4.7.15.6 Foreign Policy, Welfare, and 9/11

43 The tragedy of 9/11 and its aftermath dramatize so clearly how a flawed foreign policy has served to encourage the 44 majoritarians determined to run everyone’s life.

1 Due to its natural inefficiencies and tremendous costs, a failing welfare state requires an ever-expanding authoritarian
2 approach to enforce mandates, collect the necessary revenues, and keep afloat an unworkable system. Once the people grow
3 to depend on government subsistence, they demand its continuation.

4 Excessive meddling in the internal affairs of other nations and involving ourselves in every conflict around the globe has not
5 endeared the United States to the oppressed of the world. The Japanese are tired of us. The South Koreans are tired of us. The 6 Europeans are tired of us. The Central Americans are tired of us. The Filipinos are tired of us. And above all, the Arab 7 Muslims are tired of us.

8 Angry and frustrated by our persistent bullying and disgusted with having their own government bought and controlled by 9 the United States, joining a radical Islamic movement was a natural and predictable consequence for Muslims.

10 We believe Bin Laden when he takes credit for an attack on the West, and we believe him when he warns us of an impending
11 attack. But we refuse to listen to his explanation of why he and his allies are at war with us.

12 Bin Laden's claims are straightforward. The U.S. defiles Islam with military bases on holy land in Saudi Arabia, its initiation
13 of war against Iraq, with 12 years of persistent bombing, and its dollars and weapons being used against the Palestinians as 14 the Palestinian territory shrinks and Israel's occupation expands. There will be no peace in the world for the next 50 years or 15 longer if we refuse to believe why those who are attacking us do it.

16 To dismiss terrorism as the result of Muslims hating us because we're rich and free is one of the greatest foreign-policy frauds
17 ever perpetrated on the American people. Because the propaganda machine, the media, and the government have restated this 18 so many times, the majority now accept it at face value. And the administration gets the political cover it needs to pursue a 19 "holy" war for democracy against the infidels who hate us for our goodness.

20 Polling on the matter is followed closely and, unfortunately, is far more important than the rule of law. Do we hear the pundits
21 talk of constitutional restraints on the Congress and the administration? No, all we ever hear are reassurances that the majority
22 supports the President; therefore it must be all right.

23 The terrorists' attacks on us, though never justified, are related to our severely flawed foreign policy of intervention. They 24 also reflect the shortcomings of a bureaucracy that is already big enough to know everything it needs to know about any 25 impending attack but too cumbersome to do anything about it. Bureaucratic weaknesses within a fragile welfare state provide 26 a prime opportunity for those whom we antagonize through our domination over world affairs and global wealth to take
27 advantage of our vulnerability.

28 But what has been our answer to the shortcomings of policies driven by manipulated majority opinion by the powerful elite?
29 We have responded by massively increasing the federal government's policing activity to hold American citizens in check
30 and make sure we are well-behaved and pose no threat, while massively expanding our aggressive presence around the world.
31 There is no possible way these moves can make us more secure against terrorism, yet they will accelerate our march toward 32 national bankruptcy with a currency collapse.

33 Relying on authoritarian democracy and domestic and international meddling only move us sharply away from a
34 constitutional republic and the rule of law and toward the turbulence of a decaying democracy, about which Madison and 35 others had warned.

36 Once the goal of liberty is replaced by a preconceived notion of the benefits and the moral justifications of a democracy, a
37 trend toward internationalism and world government follows.

38 We certainly witnessed this throughout the 20th century. Since World War II, we have failed to follow the Constitution in 39 taking this country to war, but instead have deferred to the collective democratic wisdom of the United Nations.

40 Once it's recognized that ultimate authority comes from an international body, whether the United Nations, NATO, the WTO,
41 the World Bank, or the IMF, the contest becomes a matter of who holds the reins of power and is able to dictate what is 42 perceived as the will of the people (of the world). In the name of democracy, just as it is done in Washington, powerful
43 nations with the most money will control UN policy. Bribery, threats, and intimidation are common practices used to achieve
44 a "democratic" consensus-no matter how controversial and short-lived the benefits.

1 Can one imagine what it might be like if a true worldwide democracy existed and the United Nations were controlled by a
2 worldwide, one man/one vote philosophy? The masses of China and India could vote themselves whatever they needed from
3 the more prosperous western countries. How long would a world system last based on this absurdity? Yet this is the principle
4 that we're working so hard to impose on ourselves and others around the world.

5 In spite of the great strides made toward one-world government based on egalitarianism, I'm optimistic that this utopian
6 nightmare will never come to fruition. I have already made the case that here at home powerful special interests take over
7 controlling majority opinion, making sure fairness in distribution is never achieved. This fact causes resentment and becomes 8 so expensive that the entire system becomes unstable and eventually collapses.

9 The same will occur internationally, even if it miraculously did not cause conflict among the groups demanding the loot
10 confiscated from the producing individuals (or countries). Democratic socialism is so destructive to production of wealth that 11 it must fail, just as socialism failed under Soviet Communism. We have a long way to go before old-fashioned nationalism is 12 dead and buried. In the meantime, the determination of those promoting democratic socialism will cause great harm to many 13 people before its chaotic end and we rediscover the basic principle responsible for all of human progress.

14 4.7.15.7 Paying for Democracy

15 With the additional spending to wage war against terrorism at home, while propping up an ever-increasing expensive and
16 failing welfare state, and the added funds needed to police the world, all in the midst of a recession, we are destined to see an
17 unbelievably huge explosion of deficit spending. Raising taxes won't help. Borrowing the needed funds for the budgetary 18 deficit, plus the daily borrowing from foreigners required to finance our ever-growing current account deficit, will put 19 tremendous pressure on the dollar.

20 The time will come when the Fed will no longer be able to dictate low interest rates. Reluctance of foreigners to lend, the 21 exorbitant size of our borrowing needs, and the risk premium will eventually send interest rates upward. Price inflation will 22 accelerate, and the cost of living for all Americans will increase. Under these conditions, most Americans will face a decline
23 in their standard of living.

24 Facing this problem of paying for past and present excess spending, the borrowing and inflating of the money supply has
25 already begun in earnest. Many retirees, depending on their 401k funds and other retirement programs, are suffering the ill-
26 effects of the stock market crash- a phenomenon that still has a long way to go. Depreciating the dollar by printing excessive
27 money, like the Fed is doing, will eventually devastate the purchasing power of those retirees who are dependent on Social 28 Security. Government cost-of-living increases will never be able to keep up with this loss. The elderly are already unable to 29 afford the inflated costs of medical care, especially the cost of pharmaceuticals.

30 The reality is that we will not be able to inflate, tax, spend or borrow our way out of this mess that the Congress has delivered
31 to the American people. The demands that come with pure democracy always lead to an unaffordable system that ends with 32 economic turmoil and political upheaval. Tragically, the worse the problems get, the louder is the demand for more of the 33 same government programs that caused the problems in the first place- both domestic and international. Weaning off of 34 government programs and getting away from foreign meddling because of political pressure are virtually impossible. The 35 end comes only after economic forces make it clear we can no longer afford to pay for the extravagance that comes from 36 democratic dictates.

37 Democracy is the most expensive form of government. There is no "king" with an interest in preserving the nation's capital.
38 Everyone desires something, and the special-interest groups, banding together, dictate to the politicians exactly what they
39 need and want. Politicians are handsomely rewarded for being "effective," that is, getting the benefits for the groups that 40 support them. Effectiveness is never measured by efforts and achievements in securing liberty, even though it's the most 41 important element in a prosperous and progressive world.

42 Spending is predictable in a democracy, especially one that endorses foreign interventionism. It always goes up, both in 43 nominal terms and in percentage of the nation's wealth. Paying for it can be quite complicated. The exact method is less
44 consequential than the percent of the nation's wealth the government commands. Borrowing and central-bank credit creation
45 are generally used and are less noticeable, but more deceitful, than direct taxation to pay as we go. If direct taxation were 46 accomplished through monthly checks written by each taxpayer, the cost of government would immediately be revealed. And 47 the democratic con game would end much more quickly.

1 The withholding principle was devised to make paying for the programs the majority demanded seem less painful. Passing
2 on debt to the next generation through borrowing is also a popular way to pay for welfare and warfare. The effect of inflating
3 a currency to pay the bills is difficult to understand, and the victims are hard to identify. Inflation is the most sinister method
4 of payment for a welfare state. It, too, grows in popularity as the demands increase for services that aren't affordable.

5 Although this appears to be a convenient and cheap way to pay the bills, the economic consequences of lost employment,
6 inflated prices, and economic dislocation make the long-term consequences much more severe than paying as we go. Not
7 only is this costly in terms of national wealth, it significantly contributes to the political chaos and loss of liberty that
8 accompany the death throes of a doomed democracy.

9 This does not mean that direct taxes won't be continuously raised to pay for out-of-control spending. In a democracy, all
10 earned wealth is assumed to belong to the government. Therefore any restraint in raising taxes, and any tax cuts or tax credits,
11 are considered "costs" to government. Once this notion is established, tax credits or cuts are given only under condition that 12 the beneficiaries conform to the democratic consensus. Freedom of choice is removed, even if a group is merely getting back
13 control of that which was rightfully theirs in the first place.

14 Tax-exempt status for various groups is not universal but is conditioned on whether their beliefs and practices are compatible
15 with politically correct opinions endorsed by the democratic majority. This concept is incompatible with the principles of 16 private-property ownership and individual liberty. By contrast, in a free society all economic and social decision-making is 17 controlled by private property owners without government intrusion, as long as no one is harmed in the process.

18 4.7.15.8 Confusion Regarding Democracy

19 The vast majority of the American people have come to accept democracy as a favorable system and are pleased with our 20 efforts to pursue Wilson's dream of "making the world safe for democracy." But the goals of pure democracy and that of a 21 constitutional republic are incompatible. A clear understanding of the difference is paramount, if we are to remain a free and 22 prosperous nation.

23 There are certain wonderful benefits in recognizing the guidance that majority opinion offers. It takes a consensus or 24 prevailing attitude to endorse the principles of liberty and a Constitution to protect them. This is a requirement for the rule of 25 law to succeed. Without a consensus, the rule of law fails. This does not mean that the majority or public opinion measured
26 by polls, court rulings, or legislative bodies should be able to alter the constitutional restraints on the government's abuse of 27 life, liberty, and property. But in a democracy, that happens. And we know that today it is happening in this country on a
28 routine basis.

29 In a free society with totally free markets, the votes by consumers through their purchases, or refusals to purchase, determine
30 which businesses survive and which fail. This is free-choice "democracy" and it is a powerful force in producing and bringing 31 about economic efficiency. In today's democracy by decree, government laws dictate who receives the benefits and who gets 32 shortchanged. Conditions of employment and sales are taxed and regulated at varying rates, and success or failure is too often
33 dependent on government action than by consumers' voting in the marketplace by their spending habits. Individual consumers
34 by their decisions should be in charge, not governments armed with mandates from the majority.

35 Even a system of free-market money (a redeemable gold-coin standard) functions through the principle of consumers always 36 voting or withholding support for that currency. A gold standard can only work when freely converted into gold coins, giving 37 every citizen a right to vote on a daily basis for or against the government money.

38 4.7.15.9 The Way Out

39 It's too late to avoid the turbulence and violence that Madison warned about. It has already started. But it's important to 40 minimize the damage and prepare the way for a restoration of the republic. The odds are not favorable, but not impossible.
41 No one can know the future with certainty. The Soviet system came to an abrupt end with less violence than could have ever
42 been imagined at the height of the Cold War. It was a pleasant surprise.

43 Interestingly enough, what is needed is a majority opinion, especially by those who find themselves in leadership roles-
44 whether political, educational, or in the media that rejects democracy- and support the rule of law within the republic. This 45 majority support is essential for the preservation of the freedom and prosperity with which America is identified.

1 This will not occur until we as a nation once again understand how freedom serves the interests of everyone. Henry Grady
2 Weaver, in his 1947 classic, "The Mainspring of Human Progress," superbly explains how it works. His thesis is simple.
3 Liberty permits progress, while government intervention tends always to tyranny. Liberty releases creative energy;
4 government intervention suppresses it. This release of energy was never greater than in the time following the American
5 Revolution and the writing of the U.S. Constitution.

6 Instead of individual activity being controlled by the government or superstitious beliefs about natural and mystical events,
7 activity is controlled by the individual. This understanding recognizes the immense value in voluntary cooperation and
8 enlightened self-interests. Freedom requires self-control and moral responsibility. No one owes anyone else anything and
9 everyone is responsible for his or her own acts. The principle of never harming one's neighbor, or never sending the 10 government to do the dirty work, is key to making the system tend toward peaceful pursuits and away from the tyranny and
11 majority-induced violence. Nothing short of a reaffirmation of this principle can restore the freedoms once guaranteed under 12 the Constitution. Without this, prosperity for the masses is impossible, and as a nation we become more vulnerable to outside 13 threats.

14 In a republic, the people are in charge. The Constitution provides strict restraints on the politicians, bureaucrats and the 15 military. Everything the government is allowed to do is only done with explicit permission from the people or the 16 Constitution. Today, it's the opposite. The American people must get permission from the government for their every move, 17 whether it's use of their own property or spending their own money.

18 Even the most serious decision, such as going to war, is done while ignoring the Constitution and without a vote of the 19 people's representatives in the Congress. Members of the global government have more to say about when American troops
20 are put in harm's way than the U.S. Congress.

21 The Constitution no longer restrains the government. The government restrains the people in all that they do. This destroys
22 individual creative energy, and the "mainspring of human progress" is lost. The consequences are less progress, less
23 prosperity, and less personal fulfillment.

24 A system that rejects voluntary contracts, enlightened self-interest, and individual responsibilities permits the government to 25 assume these responsibilities. And the government officials become morally obligated to protect us from ourselves,
26 attempting to make us better people and setting standards for our personal behavior. That effort is already in full swing. But 27 if this attitude prevails, liberty is lost.

28 When government assumes the responsibility for individuals to achieve excellence and virtue, it does so at the expense of 29 liberty, and must resort to force and intimidation. Standards become completely arbitrary, depending on the attitude of those 30 in power and the perceived opinion of the majority. Freedom of choice is gone. This leads to inevitable conflicts with the 31 government dictating what one can eat, drink or smoke. One group may promote abstinence, the other tax-supported condom
32 distribution. Arguments over literature, prayer, pornography, and sexual behavior are endless. It is now not even permissible
33 to mention the word "God" on public property. A people who allows its government to set personal moral standards, for all
34 non-violent behavior, will naturally allow it to be involved in the more important aspects of spiritual life. For instance, there
35 are tax deductions for churches that are politically correct, but not for those whose beliefs that are considered out of the 36 mainstream. Groups that do not meet the official politically correct standards are more likely to be put on a "terrorist" list.

37 This arbitrary and destructive approach to solving difficult problems must be rejected if we ever hope to live again in a society
38 where the role of government is limited to that of protecting liberty.

39 The question that I'm most often asked when talking about this subject is, "Why do our elected leaders so easily relinquish
40 liberty and have such little respect for the Constitution?" The people of whom I speak are convinced that liberty is good and 41 big government is dangerous. They are also quite certain that we have drifted a long way away from the principles that made
42 America great, and their bewilderment continuously elicits a big "Why?"

43 There's no easy answer to this and no single explanation. It involves temptation, envy, greed, and ignorance, but worst of all,
44 humanitarian zeal. Unfortunately, the greater the humanitarian outreach, the greater the violence required to achieve it. The 45 greater the desire to perform humanitarian deeds through legislation, the greater the violence required to achieve it. Few
46 understand this. There are literally no limits to the good deeds that some believe need to be done. Rarely does anyone question
47 how each humanitarian act by government undermines the essential element of all human progress- individual liberty.

1 Failure of government programs prompts more determined efforts, while the loss of liberty is ignored or rationalized away.
2 Whether it's the war against poverty, drugs, terrorism, or the current Hitler of the day, an appeal to patriotism is used to
3 convince the people that a little sacrifice of liberty, here and there, is a small price to pay.

4 The results, though, are frightening and will soon become even more so. Poverty has been made worse, the drug war is a
5 bigger threat than drug use, terrorism remains a threat, and foreign wars have become routine and decided upon without 6 congressional approval.

7 Most of the damage to liberty and the Constitution is done by men and women of good will who are convinced they know
8 what is best for the economy, for others, and foreign powers. They inevitably fail to recognize their own arrogance in 9 assuming they know what is the best personal behavior for others. Their failure to recognize the likelihood of mistakes by 10 central planners allows them to ignore the magnitude of a flawed central government directive, compared to an individual or 11 a smaller unit of government mistake.

12 C. S. Lewis had an opinion on this subject:

13 "Of all tyrannies a tyranny sincerely exercised for the good of its victim may be the most oppressive. It may be
14 better to live under robber barons than under omnipotent moral busybodies. The robber baron's cruelty may 15 sometimes sleep, his cupidity may at some point be satiated, but those who torment us for our own good will 16 torment us without end for they do so with the approval of their own conscience."

17 A system that is based on majority vote rather than the strict rule of law encourages the few who thrive on power and exerting
18 authority over other people's lives, unlike the many driven by sincere humanitarian concerns. Our current system rewards
19 those who respond to age-old human instincts of envy and greed as they gang up on those who produce. Those individuals
20 who are tempted by the offer of power are quick to accommodate those who are the most demanding of government-giveaway
21 programs and government contracts. These special-interest groups notoriously come from both the poor and the rich, while 22 the middle class is required to pay.

23 It's not just a coincidence that, in the times of rapid monetary debasement, the middle class suffers the most from the inflation
24 and job losses that monetary inflation brings. When inflation is severe, which it will become, the middle class can be 25 completely wiped out. The stock market crash gives us a hint as to what is likely to come as this country is forced to pay for 26 the excesses sustained over the past 30 years while operating under a fiat monetary system.

27 Eric Hoffer, the longshoreman philosopher, commented on this subject as well: "Absolute power corrupts even when 28 exercised for humane purposes. The benevolent despot who sees himself as a shepherd of the people still demands from 29 others the submissiveness of sheep."

30 Good men driven by a desire for benevolence encourage the centralization of power. The corruptive temptation of power is 31 made worse when domestic and international interventions go wrong and feed into the hate and envy that invade men's souls
32 when the love of liberty is absent.

33 Those of good will who work to help the downtrodden do so not knowing they are building a class of rulers who will become 34 drunk with their own arrogance and lust for power. Generally only a few in a society yield to the urge to dictate to others,
35 and seek power for the sake of power and then abuse it. Most members of society are complacent and respond to propaganda,
36 but they unite in the democratic effort to rearrange the world in hopes of gaining benefits through coercive means and
37 convince themselves they are helping their fellow man as well. A promise of security is a powerful temptation for many.

38 A free society, on the other hand, requires that these same desires be redirected. The desire for power and authority must be
39 over one's self alone. The desire for security and prosperity should be directed inward, rather than toward controlling others.
40 We cannot accept the notion that the gang solution endorsed by the majority is the only option. Self-reliance and personal 41 responsibility are crucial.

42 But there is also a problem with economic understanding. Economic ignorance about the shortcomings of central economic 43 planning, excessive taxation and regulations, central bank manipulation of money, and credit and interest rates is pervasive
44 in our nation's capital. A large number of conservatives now forcefully argue that deficits don't matter. Spending programs
45 never shrink, no matter whether conservatives or liberals are in charge. Rhetoric favoring free trade is canceled out by special-
46 interest protectionist measures. Support of international government agencies that manage trade, such as the IMF, the World
47 Bank, the WTO, and Nafta politicizes international trade and eliminates any hope that free-trade capitalism will soon emerge.

1 The federal government will not improve on its policies until the people coming to Washington are educated by a different
2 breed of economists than those who dominate our government-run universities. Economic advisors and most officeholders
3 merely reflect the economics taught to them. A major failure of our entire system will most likely occur before serious thought
4 is given once again to the guidelines laid out in the Constitution.

5 The current economic system of fiat money and interventionism (both domestic and international) serves to accommodate
6 the unreasonable demands for government to take care of the people. And this, in turn, contributes to the worst of human 7 instincts: authoritarian control by the few over the many.

8 We, as a nation, have lost our understanding of how the free market provides the greatest prosperity for the greatest number.
9 Not only have most of us forgotten about the invisible hand of Adam Smith, few have ever heard of Mises and Hayek- two 10 individuals who understood exactly why all the economic ups and downs of the 20th century occurred, as well as the cause
11 of the collapse of the Soviet Union.

12 But worst of all, we have lost our faith in freedom. Materialistic concerns and desire for security drive all national politics.
13 This trend has sharply accelerated since 9/11.

14 Understanding the connection between liberty, prosperity, and security has been lost. The priorities are backwards. Prosperity
15 and security come from liberty. Peace and the absence of war come as a consequence of liberty and free trade. The elimination
16 of ignorance and restraints on do-goodism and authoritarianism in a civilized society can only be achieved through a
17 contractual arrangement between the people and the government- in our case, the U.S. Constitution. This document was the 18 best ever devised for releasing the creative energy of a free people while strictly holding in check the destructive powers of 19 government. Only the rule of law can constrain those who, by human instinct, look for a free ride while delivering power to 20 those few, found in every society, whose only goal in life is a devilish desire to rule over others.

21 The rule of law in a republic protects free-market activity and private-property ownership and provides for equal justice under 22 the law. It is this respect for law and rights over government power that protects the mainspring of human progress from the 23 enemies of liberty. Communists and other socialists have routinely argued that the law is merely a tool of the powerful
24 capitalists. But they have it backwards. Under democracy and fascism, the pseudo-capitalists write the laws that undermine
25 the Constitution and jeopardize the rights and property of all citizens. They fail to realize it is the real law, the Constitution
26 itself, which guarantees rights and equal justice and permits capitalism, thus guaranteeing progress.

27 Arbitrary, ever-changing laws are the friends of dictators. Authoritarians argue constantly that the Constitution is a living
28 document, and that rigid obedience to ideological purity is the enemy we should be most concerned about. They would have 29 us believe that those who cherish strict obedience to the rule of law in the defense of liberty are wrong merely because they
30 demand ideological purity. They fail to mention that their love of relative rights and pure democracy is driven by a rigid
31 obedience to an ideology as well. The issue is never rigid beliefs versus reasonable friendly compromise. In politics, it's 32 always competition between two strongly held ideologies. The only challenge for men and women of good will is to decide 33 the wisdom and truth of the ideologies offered.

34 Nothing short of restoring a republican form of government with strict adherence to the rule of law, and curtailing illegal
35 government programs, will solve our current and evolving problems.

36 Eventually the solution will be found with the passage of the Liberty Amendment. Once there is serious debate on this 37 amendment, we will know that the American people are considering the restoration of our constitutional republic and the 38 protection of individual liberty.

39 4.7.16 Summary and Conclusion

40 "Democracy is indispensable to socialism."
41 [V.I. Lenin]

42 "Democracy is the road to socialism."
43 [Karl Marx]

44 "The goal of socialism is communism."
45 [V.I. Lenin]

To summarize what we have just learned in this section:

1. Unlike monarchies and democracies, only a true Republic can “secure” God-given, unalienable Rights to all individuals.
2. A “Republican Form of Government” is guaranteed to every “State of the Union” by Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution (and also some current State constitutions).
3. Contrary to those constitutional guarantees, our current government operates as a democracy which, by definition, recognizes the people’s rights as a single collective, but denies their God-given unalienable Rights as individuals.
4. The conflict between the de jure constitutionally-mandated “Republican Form of Government” and our de facto democracy may provide a powerful strategy for challenging government enforcement programs which—implemented under the guise of democracy—ignore any individual’s claim of God-given, unalienable Rights under the mandatory Republic.
5. It is in the best interests of our elected officials to claim we have a democracy rather than a Republic, because this allows them to expand their power and influence and control without the constraints imposed by a constitution that limits their power.
6. When transforming a Christian republic into a totalitarian democracy, the sequence of events is as follows:
  - a. Eliminate religious references from public life, politics, and public schools.
  - b. Disconnect us with our Christian heritage and the source of our sovereignty: God
  - c. Eliminate school choice and vouchers and provide financial incentives to put children in public schools.
  - d. Institute laws to punish individuals for practicing law without a license to make the legal profession into a priesthood and a monopoly that can charge whatever the market will stand for their services. This will also effectively deny legal representation to the 2/3 of individuals on average who can’t afford lawyers, so that when the government legally terrorizes individuals for insisting on their rights, they will be defenseless in court.
  - e. Institute high taxes so that both parents have to work, which leaves the government free to brain wash the kids in public schools and keep the parents in financial slavery so they don’t have time to watch their government and litigate to protect their rights.
  - f. Appoint corrupt judges who will ignore constitutional rights and protections, especially as it pertains to collection and enforcement of taxes.
  - g. Institute public policy through tax legislation (social engineering).
  - h. Punish those who challenge government authority in court by sanctions, fines, and attorney fee awards, even though this amounts to a violation of the First Amendment right to petition government for a redress of grievances.
  - i. Undermine sovereignty of jurors by making them legally ignorant and preventing discussing law in the courtroom, in order to transform our government from a government of laws to a government of men.

And now let’s summarize the strategy we suggest based on the above information and conclusions:

- The “unalienable Rights” granted by God and declared in the “Declaration of Independence” are the constitutionalist’s “holy grail”. These are the rights to travel, to own firearms, to raise your children without government interference, to engage in any occupation that you desire, to worship God without restriction and to enjoy the “freedom” that every patriot seeks but hasn’t found since the 1930’s.
- A “Republican Form of Government” is one that “secures” our God-given, individually-held “unalienable Rights”.
- Article 4, Section 4 of the Federal Constitution mandates that, “The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government...”
- Virtually every government official has taken an Oath of Office to support and defend the Federal Constitution.
- The Oath of Office should obligate all government officials to support and defend a “Republican Form of Government” that “secures” our “unalienable Rights”.
- Any official who knowingly supports and defends a democracy that denies your unalienable Rights may be personally liable for violating his Oath of Office, violating the Constitution, and committing criminal acts including treason. If two or more officials knowingly work together to deny or deprive you of your unalienable Rights and a Republican Form of Government, they may be guilty of conspiracy.

If the analysis in this section is generally correct, legal arguments based on a thoroughly researched and properly presented demand for a “Republican Form of Government” may be powerful. More research must be done, but for now, it’s likely that this argument will stand up in court.

4.8 Police Powers

To fully understand our Constitutional government of balanced and limited powers, you must understand the concept of “police powers”. First, let’s define the term:

“Police power. An authority conferred by the American constitutional system in the Tenth Amendment, U.S. Const., upon the individual states, and, in turn, delegated to local governments, through which they are enabled to establish a special department of police; adopt such laws and regulations as tend to prevent the commission of fraud and crime, and secure generally the comfort, safety, morals, health, and prosperity of the citizens by preserving the public order, preventing a conflict of rights in the common intercourse of the citizens, and insuring to each an uninterrupted enjoyment of all the privileges conferred upon him or her by the general laws.

The power of the State to place restraints on the personal freedom and property rights of persons for the protection of the public safety, health, and morals or the promotion of the public convenience and general prosperity. The police power is subject to limitations of the federal and State constitutions, and especially to the requirement of due process. Police power is the exercise of the sovereign right of a government to promote order, safety, security, health, morals and general welfare within constitutional limits and is an essential attribute of government. Marshall v. Kansas City, Mo., 355 S.W.2d. 877, 883.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1156]

Police powers:

1. Attach to the territory of the sovereign power who provides them.
2. Are designed to prevent harmful acts which injure the equal rights of all.
3. Are always implemented using the criminal and not civil laws.
4. Cannot be delegated to or shared with any other government or abrogated to private companies.
5. Do not require the “consent” of those against whom the criminal laws are enforced. Civil laws, on the other hand, do require “consent of the governed”.

[Declaration of Independence]

6. Do not require “domicile” or “residence” in order to be enforced against those who are protected.

In nearly all cases, “police powers” and “legislative jurisdiction” are synonymous terms. Nearly all “Acts of Congress” are “private laws” or “special laws” that only apply within federal territories and not to states of the Union. This is discussed in greater detail in section 5.4 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 and its subsections.

Both state and the federal governments under our Constitutional system possess police powers within their own respective jurisdictions:

1. States within their own borders, but generally not on land ceded to the federal government, including any area within the “federal zone”.
2. Federal government to all its territories and possessions and the enclaves that it owns within the union states consisting of lands ceded by the state legislature to the federal government. These areas are called the “federal zone” in this book. The states of the union are not regarded as “territories” of the federal government. Instead, they are the equivalent of sovereign nations who have delegated a portion of their power to the federal government but who collectively reserve sovereignty over that government.

“By the Tenth Amendment, ‘the powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people.’ Among the powers thus reserved to the several states is what is commonly called the ‘police power,’-that inherent and necessary power, essential to the very existence of civil society, and the safeguard of the inhabitants of the state against disorder, disease, poverty, and crime. 'The police power belonging to the states in virtue of their general sovereignty,' said Mr. Justice STORY, delivering the judgment of this court, 'extends over all subjects within the territorial limits of the states, and has never been conceded to the United States.' Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Pet. 539, 625. This is well illustrated by the recent adjudications that a statute prohibiting the sale of illuminating oils below a certain fire test is beyond the constitutional power of congress to enact, except so far as it has effect within the United States (as, for instance, in the District of Columbia) and without the limits of any state; but that it is within the constitutional power of a state to pass such a statute, even as to oils manufactured under letters patent from the United States. U.S. v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41; Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U.S. 501. [135 U.S. 100, 128] The police power includes all measures for the protection of the life, the health, the property, and the welfare of the inhabitants, and for the promotion of good order and the public morals. It covers the suppression of nuisances, whether injurious to the public health, like unwholesome trades, or to the public morals, like gambling-houses and lottery tickets. Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 62, 87; Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U.S. 659; Phalen v. Virginia, 8 How. 163, 168; Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814. This power, being essential to the maintenance of the authority of local government, and to the safety and welfare of the people, is inalienable. As was said by Chief Justice WAITE, referring to earlier decisions to the same effect: 'No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. The supervision of both these subjects of governmental power is continuing in its nature, and they are to be dealt with as the special exigencies of the moment may require. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them. For this purpose the largest legislative discretion is allowed, and the discretion cannot be parted with any more than the power itself.' Stone v. Mississippi, 101 U.S. 814, 819. See, also, Butchers' Union, etc., Co. v. Crescent City, etc., Co., 111 U.S. 746, 753, 4 S.Sup.Ct.Rep. 652; New Orleans Gas Co. v. An example of the exercise of police powers is the enactment of criminal laws to protect citizens and inhabitants from crime and other injurious activities. Exercise of police powers encompasses such things as the regulation of intoxicating liquors, public health, vaccination programs, healthcare, and many other subjects. Within the federal government, the function of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (BATF), for instance, is to exercise general police powers within the federal zone only over alcohol, tobacco, and firearms and this power is conferred under Title 27 of the U.S. Code. At one time, federal police powers over alcohol extended into states of the Union under the Eighteenth Amendment, but this amendment was subsequently repealed with the passage of the 21st Amendment. The Drug Enforcement Agency, or DEA, has exclusive federal jurisdiction over drug trafficking inside the federal zone. These federal agencies, however, have no jurisdiction over such activities that are exclusively within a state. The minute that such activities cross state borders and become interstate commerce, these agencies obtain jurisdiction under the Commerce Clause found in the Constitution under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3.

In some cases, a delegation of authority to enforce criminal or tax code may occur by the federal government, whereby federal legislation is enacted to permit the laws of federal "States" laws to apply to federal enclaves within a federal "State". These federal "States" are in fact territories of the United States, as shown in 4 U.S.C. §110(d). An example of such legislation is the Buck Act of 1940, codified in 5 U.S.C. §105-113. This Act gave authority to federal territories (called federal "States" in federal law) only to impose their income taxes on business activities exclusively within federal enclaves located within federal territories. The act DID NOT and CANNOT authorize states of the Union to impose direct taxes within federal enclaves, because this would:

1. Break down the separation of powers between the state and federal governments.
2. Violate the mandate in Article 4, Section 4 of the Constitution to provide a "Republican form of government".
3. Force people in federal territories to serve two masters (state and federal), which violates God's laws found in Luke 16:13.
4. Create collusion and conspiracy against the rights of people in federal territories by the state and federal government. It also incentivizes states of the Union to pretend like their citizens live in federal enclave so that they can steal money from them. This coordinated theft of the sovereign people's income is done using the Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration (A.C.T.A.) between the Secretary of the Treasury and states of the Union. All the states now have been bribed by the federal government to pretend like their citizens live in federal territories and come under the Buck Act.

The Buck Act, in fact, is the exclusive authority for the income and sales taxes in most states of the Union. That's right, income and sales taxes in most states are only authorized inside the federal zone on nonresidents of each state! A person who lives in a federal enclave within a state is "nonresident" to the state.

The important thing that you need to know about police powers is that they are required in order to enforce tax laws. You can't outlaw something by passing a criminal statute against it unless you have police powers within the region you are trying to tax. An example of such criminal statutes are 26 U.S.C. §§7201-7217, which are the criminal provisions of the Internal Revenue Code that most people in the states of the union “think” apply to them but in fact do not. Why? Because the federal government has no police powers within the borders of the states unless they are exercising powers specifically granted to them by the Constitution. Even the Supreme Court agrees with this conclusion:

“It should never be held that Congress intends to supersede or by its legislation suspend the exercise of the police powers of the States, even when it may do so, unless its purpose to effect that result is clearly manifested.”
 Reid v. Colorado, [187 U.S. 137, 148 (1902)]

“The principle thus applicable has been frequently stated. It is that the Congress may circumscribe its regulation and occupy a limited field, and that the intention to supersede the exercise by the State of its authority as to matters not covered by the federal legislation is not to be implied unless the Act of Congress fairly interpreted is in conflict with the law of the State. See Savage v. Jones, 225 U.S. 501, 533.”

“If Congress is authorized to act in a field, it should manifest its intention clearly. It will not be presumed that a federal statute was intended to supersede the exercise of the power of the state unless there is a clear manifestation of intention to do so. The exercise of federal supremacy is not lightly to be presumed.”

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”
 Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

With regard to that last quote, the Internal Revenue Code is classified as “legislation”. The ability to directly tax natural persons within the 50 states of the union was never conferred upon the federal government anywhere in the Constitution, Sixteenth Amendment or otherwise. As a matter of fact, in Chapter 3, we cited several Supreme Court rulings stating specifically that the Sixteenth Amendment “conferred no new powers of taxation” (see Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916) and many others). We will reiterate this fact for you later in section 5.2.11 and we will also show in section 5.1.1 that the only type of taxation authorized by the Constitution within states of the Union is indirect excise taxes on privileged artificial entities such as corporations and partnerships who are involved only in foreign or interstate commerce under Art. 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.

To summarize the findings of this section on police powers, we will present in the table below a list of definitions. This table clarifies the distinctions between the various terms relating to “States”, “states”, and “United States” in the various state and federal laws so that the impact of the separation of police powers between federal and state governments can be clearly seen in a meaningful way:

4.9 "Domicile" and "Residence"

A very important subject to study as the origin of all government civil statutory jurisdiction is the subject of domicile. Domicile is an EXTREMELY important subject to learn because it defines and circumscribes:

1. The boundary between what is legislatively "foreign" and legislatively "domestic" in relation to a specific jurisdiction. Everyone domiciled OUTSIDE a specific jurisdiction is legislatively and statutorily "foreign" in relation to that civil jurisdiction. Note that you can be DOMESTIC from a CONSTITUTIONAL perspective and yet ALSO be FOREIGN from a legislative jurisdiction AT THE SAME TIME. This is true of the relationship of most Americans with the national government.
2. The boundary between what is LEGAL speech and POLITICAL speech. For everyone not domiciled in a specific jurisdiction, the civil law of that jurisdiction is POLITICAL and unenforceable. Since real constitutional courts cannot entertain political questions, then they cannot act in a political capacity against nonresidents.

So let us begin our coverage of this MOST important subject.

4.9.1 Domicile: You aren't subject to civil statutory law without your explicit voluntary consent

The purpose of establishing government is solely to provide "protection". Those who wish to be protected by a specific government under the civil law must expressly consent to be protected by choosing a domicile within the civil jurisdiction of that specific government.

1. Those who have made such a choice and thereby become "customers" of the protection afforded by government are called by any of the following names under the civil laws of the jurisdiction they have nominated to protect them:
  - 1.1. "citizens", if they were born somewhere within the country which the jurisdiction is a part.
  - 1.2. "residents" (aliens) if they were born within the country in which the jurisdiction is a part
  - 1.3. "inhabitants", which encompasses both "citizens", and "residents" but excludes foreigners
  - 1.4. "persons".
  - 1.5. "individuals".
2. Those who have not become "customers" or "protected persons" of a specific government are called by any of the following names within the civil laws of the jurisdiction they have refused to nominate as their protector and may NOT

4 2.3. "stateless persons"

5 2.4. "in transitu"

6 2.5. "transient"

7 2.6. "sojourner"

8 In law, the process of choosing a domicile within the jurisdiction of a specific government is called "animus manendi". That 9 choice makes you a consenting party to the "civil contract", "social compact", and "private law" that attaches to and therefore
10 protects all "inhabitants" and things physically situated on or within that specific territory, venue, and jurisdiction. In a sense
11 then, your consent to a specific jurisdiction by your choice of domicile within that jurisdiction is what creates the "person",
12 "individual", "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant" which is the only proper subject of the civil laws passed by that government.
13 In other words, choosing a domicile within a specific jurisdiction causes an implied waiver of sovereign immunity, because 14 the courts admit that the term "person" does not refer to the "sovereign":

15 "Since in common usage, the term person does not include the sovereign, statutes not employing the phrase are 16 ordinarily construed to exclude it."

17 [United States v. Cooper Corporation, 312 U.S. 600 (1941)]

18 "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law for it is the author and source of law;"

19 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

20 "There is no such thing as a power of inherent Sovereignty in the government of the United States. In this country
21 sovereignty resides in the People, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution
22 entrusted to it: All else is withheld."

23 [Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

24 Those who have become customers of government protection by choosing a domicile within a specific government then owe
25 a duty to pay for the support of the protection they demand. The method of paying for said protection is called "taxes". In 26 earlier times this kind of sponsorship was called "tribute".

27 Even for civil laws that are enacted with the consent of the majority of the governed, we must still explicitly and individually
28 consent to be subject to them as a person "among those governed" before they can be enforced against us.

29 "When a change of government takes place, from a monarchical to a republican government, the old form is
30 dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their
31 allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not
32 entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That
33 the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule
34 upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by
35 nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"

36 [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

37 This requirement for the consent to the protection afforded by government is the foundation of our system of government,
38 according to the Declaration of Independence: consent of the governed. The U.S. Supreme Court admitted this when it said:

39 "The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the
40 other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does
41 not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole,
42 and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights
43 at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and
44 the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the
45 courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignty of the United
46 States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one
47 passes counterfeit coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and
48 the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom
49 it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or
50 bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which

51 *owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both. The citizen cannot

52 complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself

to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction."

How, then, did you “voluntarily submit” yourself to such a form of government and thereby contract with that government for “protection”? If people fully understood how they did this, many of them would probably immediately withdraw their consent and completely drop out of the corrupted, inefficient, and usurious system of government we have, now wouldn’t they? We have spent six long years researching this question, and our research shows that it wasn’t your citizenship as a “national” but not statutory “citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) that made you subject to their civil laws. Well then, what was it?

It was your voluntary choice of domicile!

In fact, the “citizen” the Supreme Administrative Court is talking about above is a statutory “citizen” and not a constitutional “citizen”, and the only way you can become subject to statutory civil law is to have a domicile within the jurisdiction of the sovereign. Below is a legal definition of “domicile”:

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a “domicile” therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

“This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects, his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable.”
 Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice the phrase “civil laws” above and the term “claim to be protected”. What they are describing is a contract to procure the protection of the government, from which a “claim” arises. Those who are not party to the domicile/protection contract have no such claim and are immune from the civil jurisdiction of the government. In fact, there are only three ways to become subject to the civil jurisdiction of a specific government. These ways are:

1. Choosing domicile within a specific jurisdiction.
2. Representing an entity that has a domicile within a specific jurisdiction even though not domiciled oneself in said jurisdiction. For instance, representing a federal corporation as a public officer of said corporation, even though domiciled outside the federal zone. The authority for this type of jurisdiction is, for instance, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
3. Engaging in commerce within the civil legislative jurisdiction of a specific government and thereby waiving sovereign immunity under:
  - 3.1. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. §1605.
  - 3.2. The Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court, which implements the Fourteenth Amendment. See International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945) .
  - 3.3. The Longarm Statutes of the state jurisdiction where you are physically situated at the time. For a list of such state statutes, see:
    - 3.3.1. SEDM Jurisdictions Database, Litigation Tool #09.003
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>
    - 3.3.2. SEDM Jurisdictions Database Online, Litigation Tool #09.004

We allege that if the above rules are violated then the following consequences are inevitable:

1. A crime has been committed. That crime is identity theft against a nonresident party and it involves using a person's legal identity as a "person" for the commercial benefit of someone else without their express consent. Identity theft is a crime in every jurisdiction within the USA. The SEDM Jurisdictions Database, Litigation Tool #09.003 indicated above lists identity theft statutes for every jurisdiction in the USA.
2. If the entity disregarding the above rules claims to be a "government" then it is acting instead as a private corporation and must waive sovereign immunity and approach the other party to the dispute in EQUITY rather than law, and do so in OTHER than a franchise court. Franchise courts include U.S. District Court, U.S. Circuit Court, Tax Court, Traffic Court, and Family Court, etc. Equity is impossible in a franchise court.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) ("The United States does business on business terms") (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) ("When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts for franchises, it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference . . . except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent") (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) ("The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf"); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) ("explaining that when the United States 'comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there").

See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 ("Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant"); O'Neill v. United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]ere [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party. [United States v. Winstar Corp. 518 U.S. 839 (1996)]

Below are some interesting facts about domicile that we have discovered through our extensive research on this subject:

1. Domicile is based on where you currently live or have lived in the past. You can't choose a domicile in a place that you have never physically been to.
2. Domicile is a voluntary choice that only you can make. It acts as the equivalent of a "protection contract" between you and the government. All such contracts require your voluntary "consent", which the above definition calls "intent". That "intent" expresses itself as "allegiance" to the people and the laws of the place where you maintain a domicile.

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."

3. Domicile cannot be established without a coincidence of living or having lived in a place and voluntarily consenting to live there "permanently".
4. Domicile is a protected First Amendment choice of political association. Since the government may not lawfully interfere with your right of association, they cannot lawfully select a domicile for you or interfere with your choice of domicile.
5. Domicile is what is called the "seat" of your property. It is the "state" and the "government" you voluntarily nominate to protect your property and your rights. In effect, it is the "weapon" you voluntarily choose that will best protect your property and rights, not unlike the weapons that early cavemen crafted and voluntarily used to protect themselves and their property.
6. The government cannot lawfully coerce you to choose a domicile in a place. A government that coerced you into choosing a domicile in their jurisdiction is engaging in a "protection racket", which is highly illegal. A coerced domicile it is not a domicile of your choice and therefore lawfully confers no jurisdiction or rights upon the government:

"Similarly, when a person is prevented from leaving his domicile by circumstances not of his doing and beyond his control, he may be relieved of the consequences attendant on domicile at that place. In Roboz (USDC D.C. 1963) [Roboz v. Kennedy, 219 F.Supp. 892 (D.D.C. 1963), p. 24], a federal statute was involved which precluded the return of an alien's property if he was found to be domiciled in Hungary prior to a certain date. It was found that Hungary was Nazi-controlled at the time in question and that the persons involved would have left Hungary (and lost domicile there) had they been able to. Since they had been precluded from leaving because of the political privations imposed by the very government they wanted to escape (the father was in prison there), the court would not hold them to have lost their property based on a domicile that circumstances beyond their control forced them to retain."

[Conflicts in a Nutshell, David D. Siegel and Patrick J. Borchers, West Publishing, p. 24]

7. Domicile is a method of lawfully delegating authority to a "sovereign" to protect you. That delegation of authority causes you to voluntarily surrender some of your rights to the government in exchange for "protection". That protection comes from the civil and criminal laws that the sovereign passes, because the purpose of all government and all law is "protection". The U.S. Supreme Court calls this delegation of authority "allegiance". To wit:

"Allegiance and protection [by the government from harm] are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance."

[Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. (21 Wall.) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

8. All allegiance must be voluntary, which is why only consenting adults past the age of majority can have a legal domicile. The following facts confirm this conclusion:
- 8.1. Minors cannot choose a domicile, but by law assume the domicile of their parents.
- 8.2. Incompetent or insane persons assume the domicile of their caregivers.
9. It is perfectly lawful to have a domicile in a place OTHER than the place you currently live. Those who find themselves in this condition are called "transient foreigners", and the only laws they are subject to are the criminal laws in the place they are at.

"Transient foreigner. One who visits the country, without the intention of remaining."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

10. There are many complicated rules of "presumption" about how to determine the domicile of an individual:
- 10.1. You can read these rules on the web at:

28 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Domicile (2003)

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Domicile-28CJS-20051203.pdf>

- 10.2. The reason that the above publication about domicile is so complicated and long, is that its main purpose is to disguise the voluntary, consensual nature of domicile or remove it entirely from the decisions of courts and governments so that simply being present on the king's land makes one into a "subject" of the king. This is not how a republican form of government works and we don't have a monarchy in this country that would allow this abusive approach to law to function.

"Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things. Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact [CONTRACT!]; allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure. Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is constitutional; allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is communicable; allegiance is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such essential differences, the doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither serve to controul, nor to elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most firmly established, the law most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the invincible power of truth, and the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the inherent rights of man.....The doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign...."

- 10.3. These rules of presumption relating to domicile may only lawfully act in the absence of express declaration of your domicile provided to the government in written form or when various sources of evidence conflict with each other about your choice of domicile.

10.4. The purpose for these rules are basically to manufacture the "presumption" that courts can use to "ASSUME" or "PRESUME" that you consented to their jurisdiction, even if in fact you did not explicitly do so. All such prejudicial presumptions which might adversely affect your Constitutionally guaranteed rights are unconstitutional, according to the U.S. Supreme Court:

1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. Vlandis v. Kline (1973) [412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process]

10.5. The purpose for these complicated rules of presumption is to avoid the real issue, which is whether you voluntarily consent to the civil statutory jurisdiction of the government and the courts in an area, because they cannot proceed civilly without your express consent manifested as a voluntary choice of domicile. In most cases, if litigants knew that all they had to do to avoid the jurisdiction of the court was to not voluntarily select a domicile within the jurisdiction of the court, most people would become "transient foreigners" so the government could do nothing other than just "leave them alone".

11. You can choose a domicile any place you want, so long as you have physically been present in that place at least once in the past. The only requirement is that you must ensure that the government or sovereign who controls the place where you live has received "reasonable notice" of your choice of domicile and of their corresponding obligation to protect you.

*The writers upon the law of nations distinguish between a temporary residence in a foreign country for a special purpose and a residence accompanied with an intention to make it a permanent place of abode. The latter is styled by Vattel [in his book The Law of Nations as] "domicile," which he defines to be "a habitation fixed in any place, with an intention of always staying there." Such a person, says this author, becomes a member of the new society at least as a permanent inhabitant, and is a kind of citizen of the inferior order from the native citizens, but is, nevertheless, united and subject to the society, without participating in all its advantages. This right of domicile, he continues, is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration. Vatt. Law Nat. pp. 92, 93. Grotius nowhere uses the word "domicile," but he also distinguishes between those who stay in a foreign country by the necessity of their affairs, or from any other temporary cause, and those who reside there from a permanent cause. The former he denominates "strangers," and the latter, "subjects." The rule is thus laid down by Sir Robert Phillimore:*

*There is a class of persons which cannot be, strictly speaking, included in either of these denominations of naturalized or native citizens, namely, the class of those who have ceased to reside [maintain a domicile] in their native country, and have taken up a permanent abode in another. These are domiciled inhabitants. They have not put on a new citizenship through some formal mode enjoined by the law or the new country. They are de facto, though not de jure, citizens of the country of their [new chosen] domicile.
Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893)]

Notice the phrase "This right of domicile. . . is not established unless the person makes sufficiently known his intention of fixing there, either tacitly or by an express declaration."

12. The process of notifying the government that you have nominated them as your protector occurs based on how you fill out usually government and financial forms that you fill out such as:

12.1. Driver's license applications. You cannot get a driver's license in most states without selecting a domicile in the place that you want the license from. See:

[Defending Your Right to Travel, Form #06.010
http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/DefYourRightToTravel.htm](http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/DefYourRightToTravel.htm)

12.2. Voter registration. You cannot register to vote without a domicile in the place you are voting.

12.3. Jury summons. You cannot serve as a jurist without a domicile in the jurisdiction you are serving in.

12.4. On financial forms, any form that asks for your "residence", "permanent address", or "domicile".

13. If you want to provide unambiguous legal notice to the state of your choice to disassociate with them and become a "transient foreigner" in the place where you live who is not subject to the civil laws, you can use the following free form:

We emphasize that there is no method OTHER than domicile available in which to consent to the civil statutory laws of a specific place. None of the following conditions, for instance, may form a basis for a prima facie presumption that a specific human being consented to be civilly governed by a specific municipal government:

1. Simply being born and thereby becoming a statutory “national” (per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)) of a specific country is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.
2. Simply living in a physical place WITHOUT choosing a domicile there is NOT an exercise of personal discretion or an express act of consent.

The subject of domicile is a complicated one. Consequently, we have written a separate memorandum of law on the subject if you would like to investigate this fascinating subject further:

4.9.2 “Subject to THE jurisdiction” in the Fourteenth Amendment

The phrase “Subject to THE jurisdiction” is found in the Fourteenth Amendment:

U.S. Constitution:
Fourteenth Amendment

Section. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.

The phrase “subject to THE jurisdiction” in the context of ONLY the Fourteenth Amendment:

1. Means “subject to the POLITICAL and not LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction”.

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only,—birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

2. Requires domicile, which is voluntary, in order to be subject ALSO to the civil LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction of the municipality one is in. Civil status always has domicile as a prerequisite.

In Udney v. Udney (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: ‘The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct from that of domicile.’ Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States, began by saying: ‘The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status.’ And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which ‘the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy—must depend,’ he yet distinctly recognized that a man’s political status, his country (patria), and his ‘nationality,—that is, natural allegiance,—‘may depend on different laws in different countries.’ Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word ‘citizen,’ not as equivalent to ‘subject,’ but rather

1 to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British
2 dominion are natural-born subjects.

- 5 3. Is a POLITICAL status that does not carry with it any civil status to which PUBLIC rights or franchises can attach.
6 Therefore, the term "citizen" as used in Title 26 is NOT this type of citizen, since it imposes civil obligations. All tax
7 obligations are civil in nature and depend on DOMICILE, not NATIONALITY. See District of Columbia v. Murphy,
8 314 U.S. 441 (1941) and:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002, Section 11.7

- 9 4. Is a product of PERMANENT ALLEGIANCE that is associated with the political status of "nationals" as defined in 8
10 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The only thing that can or does establish a political status is such allegiance.

11 8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

12 (a) As used in this chapter—

13 (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

17 Minor v. Happersett, [88 U.S. \(21 Wall.\) 162, 166-168 (1874)]

- 18 5. Is NOT a product of TEMPORARY allegiance owed by aliens who are sojourners temporarily in the United States and 19 subject to the laws but do not have PERMANENT allegiance. Note the phrase "temporary and local allegiance" in the 20 ruling below:

21 The reasons for not allowing to other aliens exemption 'from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are
22 *found' were stated as follows: When private individuals of one nation [states of the Unions are "nations" under
23 the law of nations] spread themselves through another as business or caprice may direct, mingling
24 indiscriminately with the inhabitants of that other, or when merchant vessels enter for the purposes of trade,
25 it would be obviously inconvenient and dangerous to society, and would subject the laws to continual
26 infraction, and the government to degradation, if such individuals or merchants did not owe temporary and
27 local allegiance, and were not amenable to the jurisdiction of the country. Nor can the foreign sovereign have*
28 any motive for wishing such exemption. His subjects thus passing into foreign countries are not employed by him,
29 nor are they engaged in national pursuits. Consequently, there are powerful motives for not exempting persons
30 of this description from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found, and no one motive for requiring
31 it. The implied license, therefore, under which they enter, can never be construed to grant such exemption. 7

33 In short, the judgment in the case of The Exchange declared, as incontrovertible principles, that the jurisdiction

46 "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the 47 United States and of the State wherein they reside."

48 The first observation we have to make on this clause is, that it puts at rest both the questions which we stated to
49 have been the subject of differences of opinion. It declares that persons may be citizens of the United States
50 without regard to their citizenship of a particular State, and it overturns the Dred Scott decision by making all
51 persons born within the United States and subject to its jurisdiction citizens of the United States. That its main 52 *purpose was to establish the citizenship of the negro can admit of no doubt. The phrase, "subject to its jurisdiction" was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign States born within the United States.

[Slaughterhouse Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

6. Relates only to the time of birth or naturalization and not to one's CIVIL status at any time AFTER birth or naturalization.
7. Is a codification of the following similar phrase found in the Civil Rights Act of 1866, 14 Stat. 27-30.

Civil Right Act of 1866, 14 Stat. 27

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States; and such citizens, of every race and color, without regard to any previous condition of slavery or involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall have the same right, in every State and Territory in the United States, to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, and give evidence, to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property, and to full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of person and property, as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains, and penalties, and to none other, any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding.
[SOURCE: <http://teachingamericanhistory.org/library/document/the-civil-rights-act-of-1866/>]

The only way one could be "not subject to any foreign power" as indicated above is to not owe ALLEGIANCE to a foreign power and to be a CONSTITUTIONAL "citizen of the United States".

8. Does NOT apply to people in unincorporated territories such as Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, etc.

"The Naturalization Clause has a geographic limitation: it applies "throughout the United States." The federal courts have repeatedly construed similar and even identical language in other clauses to include states and incorporated territories, but not unincorporated territories. In Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 21 S.Ct. 770, 45 L.Ed. 1088 (1901), one of the Insular Cases, the Supreme Court held that the Revenue Clause's identical explicit geographic limitation, "throughout the United States," did not include the unincorporated territory of Puerto Rico, which for purposes of that Clause was "not part of the United States." Id. at 287, 21 S.Ct. 770. The Court reached this sensible result because unincorporated territories are not on a path to statehood. See Boumediene v. Bush, 553 U.S. 723, 757-58, 128 S.Ct. 2229, 171 L.Ed.2d. 41 (2008) (citing Downes, 182 U.S. at 293, 21 S.Ct. 770). In Rabang v. I.N.S., 35 F.3d. 1449 (9th Cir.1994), this court held that the Fourteenth Amendment's limitation of birthright citizenship to those "born ... in the United States" did not extend citizenship to those born in the Philippines during the period when it was an unincorporated territory. U.S. Const., 14th Amend., cl. 1; see Rabang, 35 F.3d. at 1451. Every court to have construed that clause's geographic limitation has agreed. See Valmonte v. I.N.S., 136 F.3d. 914, 920-21 (2d Cir.1998); Lacap v. I.N.S., 138 F.3d. 518, 519 (3d Cir.1998); Licudine v. Winter, 603 F.Supp.2d. 129, 134 (D.D.C.2009).

Like the constitutional clauses at issue in Rabang and Downes, the Naturalization Clause is expressly limited to the "United States." This limitation "prevents its extension to every place over which the government exercises its sovereignty." Rabang, 35 F.3d. at 1453. Because the Naturalization Clause did not follow the flag to the CNMI when Congress approved the Covenant, the Clause does not require us to apply federal immigration law to the CNMI prior to the CNRA's transition date.

5 Lastly, the subject of this section is such an important and pervasive one in the freedom community that we have prepared
 6 an entire presentation on the subject matter which we highly recommend that you view, if any questions at all remain about 7 the meaning of the phrase "subject to the jurisdiction" in the Fourteenth Amendment:

Why the Fourteenth Amendment is Not a Threat to Your Freedom, Form #08.015
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

8 4.9.3 "reside" in the Fourteenth Amendment

9 "reside" in the Fourteenth Amendment means DOMICILE, not mere physical presence.

10 That newly arrived citizens "have two political capacities, one state and one federal," adds special force to their 11 claim that they have the same rights as others who share their citizenship.<sup>17</sup> Neither mere rationality nor some 12 intermediate standard of review should be used to judge the constitutionality of a state rule that discriminates
 13 against some of its citizens because they have been domiciled in the State for less than a year. The appropriate 14 standard may be more categorical than that articulated in Shapiro, see supra, at 8 9, but it is surely no less strict.

15 [. . .]

16 A bona fide residence requirement simply requires that the person does establish residence before demanding
 17 the services that are restricted to residents. The Martinez Court explained that "residence" requires "both 18 physical presence and an intention to remain [domicile]." see id., at 330, and approved a Texas law that 19 restricted eligibility for tuition-free education to families who met this minimum definition of residence, id., at 20 332 333.

21 While the physical presence element of a bona fide residence is easy to police, the subjective intent element is
 22 not. It is simply unworkable and futile to require States to inquire into each new resident's subjective intent to
 23 remain. Hence, States employ objective criteria such as durational residence requirements to test a new resident's
 24 resolve to remain before these new citizens can enjoy certain in-state benefits. Recognizing the practical appeal
 25 of such criteria, this Court has repeatedly sanctioned the State's use of durational residence requirements before
 26 new residents receive in-state tuition rates at state universities. Starns v. Malkerson, 401 U.S. 985 (1971),
 27 summarily aff'g 326 F. Supp. 234 (Minn. 1970) (upholding 1-year residence requirement for in-state tuition);
 28 Sturgis v. Washington, 414 U.S. 1057, summarily aff'g 368 F. Supp. 38 (WD Wash. 1973) (same). The Court has 29 declared: "The State can establish such reasonable criteria for in-state status as to make virtually certain that
 30 students who are not, in fact, bona fide residents of the State, but have come there solely for educational purposes,
 31 cannot take advantage of the in-state rates." See Vlandis v. Kline, 412 U.S. 441, 453 454 (1973). The Court has 32 done the same in upholding a 1-year residence requirement for eligibility to obtain a divorce in state courts, see
 33 Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393, 406 409 (1975), and in upholding political party registration restrictions that
 34 amounted to a durational residency requirement for voting in primary elections, see Rosario v. Rockefeller, 410
 36 [Saenz v. Roe, 526 U.S. 489, 119 S.Ct. 1430, 143 L.Ed.2d. 635 (1999)]

37 The implication of the above is that since DOMICILE is voluntary, even CONSTITUTIONAL nationality and state
 38 citizenship is voluntary. It also implies that one can be BORN in a place without being a STATUTORY "citizen" there, if 39 one does not have a domicile there. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

40 4.9.4 "Domicile" and "residence" compared

41 Now we'll examine and compare the word "domicile" with "residence" to put it into context within our discussion:

42 domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal
 43 establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super.
 44 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the 45 requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he 46 intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges. The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwellingplace or place of residence of a person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. See also Abode; Residence.

"Citizenship," "habitation," and "residence" are severally words which in particular cases may mean precisely the same as "domicile," while in other uses may have different meanings.

"Residence" signifies living in particular locality while "domicile" means living in that locality with intent to make it a fixed and permanent home. Schreiner v. Schreiner, Tex.Civ.App., 502 S.W.2d. 840, 843.

For purpose of federal diversity jurisdiction, "citizenship" and "domicile" are synonymous. Hendry v. Masonite Corp., C.A.Miss., 455 F.2d. 955.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

Note the word "permanent" used in several places above. Note also that in the above definition that the taxes one pays are based on their "domicile" and "residence". Here is what it says again:

"The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."

Below is what a famous legal publisher has to say about the term "residence" in relation to "domicile" and "citizenship":

The general rule is that a person can maintain as many residences in as many states or nations as he pleases, and can afford, but that only place can qualify as that person's "domicile". This is because the law must often have, or in any event has come to insist on, one place to point to for any of a variety of legal purposes.

A person's "domicile" is almost always a question of intent. A competent adult can, in our free society, live where she pleases, and we will take her "domicile" to be wherever she does the things that we ordinarily associate with "home": residing, working, voting, schooling, community activity, etc.

One resides in one's domicile indefinitely, that is, with no definite end planned for the stay. While we hear "permanently" mentioned, the better word is "indefinitely". This is best seen in the context of a change of domicile.

In the United States, "domicile" and "residence" are the two major competitors for judicial attention, and the words are almost invariably used to describe the relationship that the person has to the state rather than the nation. We use "citizenship" to describe the national relationship, and we generally eschew "nationality" (heard more frequently among European nations) as a descriptive term.
[Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition; David D. Siegel, West Publishing, 1994, ISBN 0-314-02952-4, pp. 14-15]

These issues are very important. To summarize the meaning of "domicile" succinctly then, one's "domicile" is their "legal home". One's "domicile" is the place where we claim to have political and legal allegiance to the courts and the laws. Since allegiance must be exclusive, then we can have only one "domicile", because no man can serve more than one master as revealed in Luke 16:13. Since the first four Commandments of the Ten Commandments say that Christians can only have allegiance to "God" and His laws in the Holy Book, then their only "domicile" is Heaven based on allegiance alone.

4.9.5 Christians cannot have an earthly "domicile" or "residence"

We said earlier that the word "domicile" implied a "permanent legal home". Now for the $64,000 question: "If you are a Christian and God says you are a citizen of heaven and not of earth, then where is your permanent domicile from a legal perspective? Where is it that you should 'intend' to live as a Christian?" The answer is that it is in heaven, and not anywhere on earth! Here are some reasons why:

"For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"
[Philippians 3:20]

[Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

1 "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,
 2 embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."
 3 [Hebrews 11:13]

4 "Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul..."
 5 [1 Peter 2:11]

6 Furthermore, if "the wages of sin is death" (see Romans 6:23) and you are guaranteed to die eventually and soon because of
 7 your sin, then can anything here on earth be called "permanent" in the context of God's eternal plan? Why would anyone
 8 want to "intend" to reside permanently in a place controlled mainly by Satan and which is doomed to eventual destruction?
 9 If you look in the book of Revelation, you will find that the earth will be completely transformed when Jesus returns to 10 become a new and different earth, so can our present earth even be called "permanent"? The answer is NO. To admit that
 11 your physical or spiritual "domicile" or your "residence" is here on earth and/or is "permanent" is to admit that there is no
 12 God and no Heaven and that life ends both spiritually and physically when you die! You are also admitting that the only
 13 thing even close to being permanent is the short life that you have while you are here. Therefore, as a Christian, you can't 14 have a "domicile" or a "residence" anywhere on the present earth from a legal perspective without blaspheming God.
 15 Consequently, it also means that you can't be subject to taxes upon your person based on having a "domicile" or "residence"
 16 in any earthly jurisdiction: state or federal. You are a child of God and you are His "bondservant" and "fiduciary" while you
 17 are here. Unless the government can tax "God", then it can't tax you acting as His agent and fiduciary:

18 "For this is the will of God, that by doing good you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men— as free, yet
 19 not using liberty as a cloak for vice, but as bondservants of God."
 20 [1 Peter 2:15-16, Bible, NKJV]

21 You are "just passing through". This life is only a temporary test to see whether you will evidence by your works the saving
 22 faith you have which will allow you to gain entrance into Heaven and the new earth God will create for you to dwell in 23 mentioned in Rev. 21:1.

25 "...the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere".
 26 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485, under "domicile"]

27 So once again as a Christian, the only place you should want to inhabit or "intend" to return to is Heaven, because the present
 28 earth is a temporal place full of sin and death that is ruled exclusively by Satan. Your proper biblical and legal "intent" as a
 29 person whose exclusive allegiance is to God should therefore be to return to Heaven and to leave the present corrupted earth
 30 as soon as possible and as God in His sovereignty allows. God has prepared a mansion for you to live in with the Father, and 31 that mansion cannot be part of the present corrupted earth:

32 "In My [Jesus'] Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a
 33 place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to Myself; that where I
 34 am, there you may be also. And where I go you know, and the way you know."
 35 [John 14:2-4, Bible, NKJV]

36 So why don't they teach these things in school? Remember who runs the public schools?: Your wonderful state government.
 37 Do you think they are going to volunteer to clue you in to the fact that you're the sovereign in charge of the government and 38 don't have to put up with being their slave, which is what their legal treachery has made you into? The only kind of 39 volunteering they want you to do is to volunteer to be subject to their corrupt laws and become a "taxpayer", which is a person
 40 who voluntarily enlisted to become a whore for the government as you will find out in chapter 5. Even many of our Christian
 41 schools have lost sight of the great commission and awesome responsibility they have to teach our young people the profound
 42 truths in the Bible and this book in a way that honors and glorifies God and allows them to be the salt and light of the world.

43 4.10 "Citizen" and "Resident"

44 Next, we must analyze the civil status of people in states of the Union. We will prove that they are not "citizens" or "residents"
 45 under the laws of Congress and consequently, that the only thing left for them to be is "non-resident non-persons".

46 4.10.1 "Resident" defined generally

1 We are all the time being asked “are you a resident of the state of Illinois?” (or whatever State) and we always answer “yes”.
2 But are we really? Let us take a much closer look and see.

3 Black’s Law Dictionary Sixth Edition, page 1309:

4 Resident. “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State
5 for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence
6 within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory
7 in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or 8 dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides
9 or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240 [Underlines added]

10 Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. Kelm v.
11 Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271 [Underline added]

12 Did you notice the distinct use of “the State” in the above definition? That was no accident. Below are a few clues to its

14 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(10\): State

15 The term “State” shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to 16 carry out provisions of this title.

18 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101\(a\)\(36\): State [citizenship and naturalization]

19 The term “State” includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United

22 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES

23 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES

24 Sec. 110. Same; definitions

25 (d) The term “State” includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

26 The above cites are definitions of “State” from federal law, but even most state income tax statutes agree with this definition!
27 Below is the California Revenue and Taxation Code definition of “State”:

28 California Revenue and Taxation Code

29 6017. “In this State” or “in the State” means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign] state of 30 California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

31 17018. “State” includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
32 [which don’t include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal areas within those states]

33 The sovereign 50 Union states are NOT territories or possessions of the “United States”. The states are sovereign over their 34 own territories. The “State” mentioned above in the California Revenue and Taxation Code is a federal enclave within the 35 exterior boundaries of the California Republic. People living within these areas are “residents” under the Internal Revenue
36 Code and in that condition, they live in the “federal zone”.

37 The document upon which the founders wrote our Constitution, and which is mentioned in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10,
38 confirms that the term “resident” refers ONLY to aliens domiciled within the territory of a nation. Below is what it says in
39 Book 1, Chapter 19, section 213, page 87:

40 “Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
41 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they
42 remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens.
43 They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have
44 been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and are 45 subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of

[The Law of Nations, Book I, Chapter 19, Section 213, Vattel, p. 87]

4.10.2 You’re NOT a STATUTORY “resident” if you were born or naturalized in America and are domiciled in a state of the Union protected by the Constitution

There is much which can be said about our earlier legally acceptable definition of the term “resident” from Black’s Law Dictionary, but one thing which is perfectly clear, nowhere does it say a word about a “resident” being a Citizen, of anything. As a matter of fact if you are not a citizen, then there is only one other thing you can be, and that is an alien. It does not matter what other name they might decide to call it. Here then is an example of its usage:

Let’s say, for whatever reason, you move to France for a time. First, it is obvious you are an alien to France. Right? After having moved to France you then become a resident of France.

Why are you a resident of France? Because you are now living there, but you still are not a citizen. Why are you not a citizen of France? Because you are an alien. So, it goes that a resident is an alien. Why? Because he is not a citizen, hence the term resident alien. Get it?

Now, the question becomes: what are you when you answer to the question “are you a resident of the state of Illinois?” like we do when we go to the Motor Vehicle Dept. Are you not declaring that you are an privileged person domiciled on federal territory or representing an office domiciled on federal territory and therefore devoid of rights? Well that is exactly what you are doing. Why is this important? Because, by either wrongfully declaring your domicile or citizenship or signing up for franchises only available to those who are ALREADY public offices in the government, we are surrendering all of our constitutional rights. [Whoops]

So, if you are a Citizen of any one of the several states of the Union, then you are not an alien and therefore not a “resident”. You then have your full Constitutional Rights, which includes the Right to “Liberty”, which is the Right to travel FREELY amongst the several States, untaxed and unlicensed.

You simply cannot regulate a Right. If you could it wouldn't be a Right, it would be a privilege. Our Creator granted these Rights to us, and no man or government can legislate or regulate an (unalienable) Right. The government can only legislate and regulate the exercise of benefits offered by their “statutes”, which can only offer immunities and privileges, but not bona fide Rights. Hence all the trickery to coerce you into saying you are something you are not.

We must stop looking to Webster's Dictionary for the legal definitions. Buy a copy of Black’s Law Dictionary – it is there that you will find a whole new world of meaning. The biggest trick of all has been to redefine common, every day terms to mean something else within the statute-laws, and you didn't know they did it [to you], did you.. that is, until you read this book?

[State v. Manuel, North Carolina, Vol. 20, Page 121 (1838)] [Underline added]

Think about it. The Constitution talks about Citizens. Why then do state governments feel the need to change it to “residents”? It just seems that to be clear and unambiguous, they would have used the same words and phrases already understood and accepted and stated as part of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

Oh, by the way, here is the definition of a resident alien:

Resident alien. “One, not yet a citizen of this country, who has come into the country from another with the intent to abandon his former citizenship and to reside here.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary Sixth Edition, p. 1309, underlines added]

Remember the phrase “transitory in nature” in the above definition of a resident? The nature part is the Creator. As a child of God we are merely traveling through life (“Liberty”), hopefully on our way to the great beyond, which is the transitory part.

1 But, if you claim to be a “resident” you are not a child of God and therefore not a Sovereign American of the State, and
 2 therefore an alien of God, who has NO CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS. This is accomplished when we accept the term
 3 “person” as underlined in the above definition of the term “resident”, and as you will also come to realize, this too is a trick
 4 to coerce you into subjection to government regulation.

5 4.10.3 You’re not a STATUTORY “citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code<sup>134</sup>

6 *“Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States** [under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and NOT the* 7 constitution], the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability.”
 8 [U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982).]

9 There are TWO contexts in which one may be a "citizen", and these two contexts are mutually exclusive and not overlapping:

- 10 1. Statutory: Relies on statutory definitions of "United States", which mean federal territory that is no part of any state of 11 the Union.
- 12 2. Constitutional. Relies on the Constitutional meaning of "United States", which means states of the Union and excludes 13 federal territory.

14 Within the field of citizenship, CONTEXT is everything in discerning the meaning of geographical terms. By “context”, we
 15 mean ONE of the two contexts as indicated above:

16 “Citizenship of the United States is defined by the Fourteenth Amendment and federal statutes, but the 17 requirements for citizenship of a state generally depend not upon

1 Committee held that the statutory requirement of citizenship of the Territory for a year before the election did not
 2 mean that the aspirant for office must also have been a United States citizen during that period. The report said:
 3 'It is the person, the individual, the man, who is [221 A.2d 435] spoken of, and who is to possess the qualifications
 4 of residence, age, freedom, &c. at the time he offers to vote, or is to be voted for * * *.' Upon the filing of the 5 report, and the submission of a resolution that the Delegate was entitled to his seat, the contestant of the 6 Delegate's election withdrew his protest, and the sitting Delegate was confirmed. Biddle v. Richard, Clarke and 7 Hall, Cases of Contested Elections in Congress (1834) 407, 410.

8 There is no express requirement in the Maryland Constitution that sheriffs be United States citizens. Voters must
 9 be, under Article I, Section 1, but Article IV, Section 44 does not require that sheriffs be voters. A person does
 10 not have to be a voter to be a citizen of either the United States or of a state, as in the case of native-born minors.
 11 In Maryland, from 1776 to 1802, the Constitution contained requirements of property ownership for the exercise
 12 of the franchise; there was no exception as to native-born citizens of the State. Steiner, Citizenship and Suffrage
 13 in Maryland (1895) 27, 31.

14 The Maryland Constitution provides that the Governor, Judges and the Attorney General shall be qualified voters,
 15 and therefore, by necessary implication, citizens of the United States. Article II, Section 5, Article IV, Section 2,
 16 and Article V, Section 4. The absence of a similar requirement as to the qualifications of sheriffs is significant.
 17 So also, in our opinion, is the absence of any period of residence for a sheriff except that he shall have been a
 18 citizen of the State for five years. The Governor, Judges and Attorney General in addition to being citizens of the
 19 State and qualified voters, must have been a resident of the State for various periods. The conjunction of the
 20 requisite period of residence with state citizenship in the qualifications for sheriff strongly indicates that, as in
 21 the authorities above referred to, state citizenship, as used in the constitutional qualifications for this office, was
 22 meant to be synonymous with domicile, and that citizenship of the United States is not required, even by
 23 implication, as a qualification for this office. The office of sheriff, under our Constitution, is ministerial in nature;
 24 a sheriff's function and province is to execute duties prescribed by law. See Buckeye Dev. Crop. v. Brown &
 25 Schilling, Inc., Md., 220 A.2d. 922, filed June 23, 1966 and the concurring opinion of Le Grand, C. J. in Mayor
 26 & City Council of Baltimore v. State, ex rel. Bd. of Police, 15 Md. 376, 470, 488-490 (1860).

27 It may well be that the phrase, 'a citizen of the State,' as used in the constitutional provisions as to qualifications,
 28 implies that a sheriff cannot owe allegiance to another nation. By the naturalization act of 1779, the Legislature
 29 provided that, to become a citizen of Maryland, an alien must swear allegiance to the State. The oath or
 30 affirmation provided that the applicant renounced allegiance 'to any king or prince, or any other State or
 31 Government.' Act of July, 1779, Ch. VI; Steiner, op. cit. 15. In this case, on the admitted facts, there can be no
 32 question of the appellant's undivided allegiance.

33 The court below rested its decision on its conclusion that, under the Fourteenth Amendment, no state may confer
 34 state citizenship upon a resident alien until such resident alien becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States.
 35 The court relied, as does not Board in this appeal, upon City of Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 F. 576, 581 (8th Cir.
 36 1893). In that case, an alien resident of Minnesota, who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the
 37 United States but had not been naturalized, brought a suit, based on diversity of citizenship, against the city in
 38 the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota under Article III, Section 2 of the United States
 39 Constitution which provides that the federal judicial power shall extend to 'Controversies between * * * a State,
 40 or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.' At the close of the evidence, the defendant moved
 41 to dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction, on the [221 A.2d 436] ground that the evidence failed to establish
 42 the allegation that the plaintiff was an alien. The court denied the motion, the plaintiff recovered judgment, and
 43 the defendant claimed error in the ruling on jurisdiction. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. Judge Sanborn,
 44 for the court, stated that even though the plaintiff were a citizen of the state, that fact could not enlarge or restrict
 45 the jurisdiction of the federal courts over controversies between aliens and citizens of the state. The court said:
 46 'It is not in the power of a state to denationalize a foreign subject who has not complied with the federal
 47 naturalization laws, and constitute him a citizen of the United States or of a state, so as to deprive the federal
 48 courts of jurisdiction * * *'

 50 federal Constitution. That a state cannot affect that jurisdiction by granting state citizenship to an unnaturalized
 51 alien does not mean it cannot make an alien a state citizen for other purposes. Under the Fourteenth Amendment
 52 all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens of the United States and of the state in which they
 53 reside, but we find nothing in Reum of any other case which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen
 54 of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdictions is involved. As the authorities referred to in
 55 the first portion of this opinion evidence, the law is to the contrary.

56 Absent any unconstitutional discrimination, a state has the right to extend qualification for state office to its
 57 citizens, even though they are not citizens of the United States. This, we have found, is what Maryland has done
 58 in fixing the constitutional qualifications for the office of sheriff. The appellant meets the qualifications which our 59 Constitution provides."

60 [Crosse v. Board of Sup'rs of Elections of Baltimore City, 221 A.2d. 431, 243 Md. 555 (Md., 1966) ]

1 The confusion over citizenship prevalent today is caused by a deliberate confusion of the above two contexts with each other
 2 so as to make every American appear to be a statutory citizen and therefore an public officer of the "United States Inc"
 3 government corporation. This fact was first identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as follows:

4 *"Under our own systems of polity, the term 'citizen', implying the same or similar relations to the government and
 5 to society which appertain to the term, 'subject' in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used
 6 is designed to apply to man in his individual character and to his natural capacities -- to a being or agent
 7 [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social, political, and moral
 8 obligations. It is in this acceptation only, therefore, that the term 'citizen', in the article of the Constitution,
 9 can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies
 10 between 'citizens' of different states. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate
 11 communities, and can by no violence of interpretation be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical,
 12 and invisible creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind,
 13 invisible and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a state, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms
 14 or the power of the above mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of 15 the United States."*

16 *"Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is
 17 it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment, for it is not liable to corporeal penalties -- that it can
 18 perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be
 19 arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be
 20 excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of
 21 the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a
 22 corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and
 23 endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from
 24 the decisions of the cases of Bank of the United States v. Deveaux and of Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad
 25 Company v. Letson afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled
 26 principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply
 27 founded experience; they are therefore ever consentaneous and in 28 harmony with themselves and with reason, and whenever abandoned as 29 guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering 30 uncertainty and confusion."*

31 [Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Company 55 U.S. 80, 99 (1852) from dissenting opinion by Justice Daniel]

33 *"The principal issue in this petition is the territorial scope of the term "the United States" in the Citizenship
 34 Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1 ("All persons born or naturalized in the
 35 United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein 36 they reside." (emphasis added)). Petitioner, who was born in the Philippines in 1934 during its status as a United
 37 States territory, argues she was "born ... in the United States" and is therefore a United States citizen.<sup>135</sup>*

38 *Petitioner's argument is relatively novel, having been addressed previously only in the Ninth Circuit. See Rabang
 39 v. INS, 35 F.3d 1449, 1452 (9th Cir.1994) ("No court has addressed whether persons born in a United States
 40 territory are born 'in the United States,' within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment."), cert. denied sub
 41 nom. Samidad v. INS, 515 U.S. 1130, 115 S.Ct. 2554, 132 L.Ed.2d. 809 (1995). In a split decision, the Ninth
 42 Circuit held that "birth in the Philippines during the territorial period does not constitute birth 'in the United
 43 States' under the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and thus does not give rise to United States
 44 citizenship." Rabang, 35 F.3d at 1452. We agree.<sup>136</sup>*

<sup>136</sup> For the purpose of deciding this petition, we address only the territorial scope of the phrase "the United States" in the Citizenship Clause. We do not consider the distinct issue of whether citizenship is a "fundamental right" that extends by its own force to the inhabitants of the Philippines under the doctrine of territorial incorporation. Dorr v. United States, 195 U.S. 138, 146, 24 S.Ct. 808, 812, 49 L.Ed. 128 (1904) ("Doubtless Congress, in legislating for the Territories would be subject to those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments." (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)); Rabang, 35 F.3d at 1453 n. 8 ("We note that the territorial scope of the phrase 'the United States' is a distinct inquiry from whether a constitutional provision should extend to a territory." (citing Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 249, 21 S.Ct. 770, 772, 45 L.Ed. 1088 (1901))). The phrase "the United States" is an express territorial limitation on the scope of the Citizenship Clause. Because we determine that the phrase "the United States" did not include the Philippines during its status as a United States territory, we need not determine the application of the Citizenship Clause to the Philippines under the doctrine of territorial incorporation. Cf. United States v. Verdugo-Urquidez, 494 U.S. 259, 291 n. 11, 110 S.Ct. 1056, 1074 n. 11, 108 L.Ed.2d 222 (1990) (Brennan, J., dissenting) (arguing that the Fourth Amendment may be applied extraterritorially, in part, because it does not contain an "express territorial limitation[ ]").

Despite the novelty of petitioner's argument, the Supreme Court in the Insular Cases<sup>137</sup> provides authoritative guidance on the territorial scope of the term "the United States" in the Fourteenth Amendment. The Insular Cases were a series of Supreme Court decisions that addressed challenges to duties on goods transported from Puerto Rico to the continental United States. Puerto Rico, like the Philippines, had been recently ceded to the United States. The Court considered the territorial scope of the term "the United States" in the Constitution and held that this term as used in the uniformity clause of the Constitution was territorially limited to the states of the Union. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8 ("[A]ll Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States." (emphasis added)); see Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 251, 21 S.Ct. 770, 773, 45 L.Ed. 1088 (1901) ("It can nowhere be inferred that the territories were considered a part of the United States. The Constitution was created by the people of the United States, as a union of States, to be governed solely by representatives of the States; ... In short, the Constitution deals with States, their people, and their representatives."); Rabang, 35 F.3d at 1452. Puerto Rico was merely a territory "appurtenant and belonging to the United States, but not a part of the United States within the revenue clauses of the Constitution." Downes, 182 U.S. at 287, 21 S.Ct. at 787.

The Court's conclusion in Downes was derived in part by analyzing the territorial scope of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits slavery and involuntary servitude "within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction." U.S. Const. amend. XIII, § 1 (emphasis added). The Fourteenth Amendment states that persons "born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside." U.S. Const. amend XIV, § 1 (emphasis added). The disjunctive "or" in the Thirteenth Amendment demonstrates that "there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are not part of the Union" to which the Thirteenth Amendment would apply. Downes, 182 U.S. at 251, 21 S.Ct. at 773. Citizenship under the Fourteenth Amendment, however, "is not extended to persons born in any place 'subject to [the United States] jurisdiction,' " but is limited to persons born or naturalized in the states of the Union. Downes, 182 U.S. at 251, 21 S.Ct. at 773 (emphasis added); see also id. at 263, 21 S.Ct. at 777 ("In dealing with foreign sovereignties, the term 'United States' has a broader meaning than when used in the Constitution, and includes all territories subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal government, wherever located.").<sup>138</sup>

Following the decisions in the Insular Cases, the Supreme Court confirmed that the Philippines, during its status as a United States territory, was not a part of the United States. See Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652, 678, 65 S.Ct. 870, 883, 89 L.Ed. 1252 (1945) ("As we have seen, [the Philippines] are not a part of the United States in the sense that they are subject to and enjoy the benefits or protection of the Constitution, as do the states which are united by and under it."); see id. at 673-74, 65 S.Ct. at 881 (Philippines "are territories belonging to, but not a part of, the Union of states under the Constitution," and therefore imports "brought from the Philippines into the United States ... are brought from territory, which is not a part of the United States, into the territory of the United States.").

Accordingly, the Supreme Court has observed, without deciding, that persons born in the Philippines prior to its independence in 1946 are not [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizens of the United States. See Barber v. Gonzales, 347 U.S. 637, 639 n. 1, 74 S.Ct. 822, 823 n. 1, 98 L.Ed. 1009 (1954) (stating that although the inhabitants of the Philippines during the territorial period were "nationals" of the United States, they were not "United States citizens"); Rabang v. Boyd, 353 U.S. 427, 432 n. 12, 77 S.Ct. 985, 988 n. 12, 1 L.Ed.2d. 956 (1957) ("The inhabitants of the Islands acquired by the United States during the late war with Spain, not being citizens of the United States, do not possess right of free entry into the United States." (emphasis added) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)).

The STATUTORY context for the term "citizen" described in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) relies on the geographical term "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), which means federal territory and not a state of the Union. Therefore, the "citizen" and "U.S. person" found in the Internal Revenue Code is a TERRITORIAL rather than a STATE citizen. For details on why STATUTORY "citizens" are all public officers and not private humans, read:

The U.S. Supreme Court has held in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\) that there are THREE different meanings and contexts for the word "United States". Hence, there are THREE different types of "citizens of the United States" as used in federal statutes and the Constitution. All three types of citizens are called "citizens of the United States", but each relies on a different meaning of the "United States". The meaning that applies depends on the context. For instance, the meaning of "United States" as used in the Constitution implies states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while the term "United States" within federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union. Here is an example demonstrating the Constitutional context. Note that they use "part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution", and the word "the" and the use of the singular form of "meaning" implies only ONE meaning, which means states of the Union and excludes federal territory:

"As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of the United States within the meaning of the Constitution."
[O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]

The U.S. Supreme Court and lower courts have also held specifically that:

1. The statutes conferring citizenship in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are a PRIVILEGE and not a CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT, and are therefore not even necessary in the case of state citizens.

"Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon their inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-11. If the Citizenship Clause guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes would have been unnecessary."
[Tuaua v. U.S.A., 951 F.Supp.2d. 88 (2013)]

2. A citizen of the District of Columbia is NOT equivalent to a constitutional citizen. Note also that the "United States" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code, for instance, includes the "District of Columbia" and nowhere expressly includes states of the Union in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). We therefore conclude that the statutory term "citizen of the United States" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 includes District of Columbia citizens and all those domiciled on federal territory "statutory citizens" and EXCLUDES those domiciled within states of the Union:

*"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens."*

3. An 8 U.S.C. §1401 "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" born on federal territory is NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment when it held:

"The Court today holds that Congress can indeed rob a citizen of his citizenship just so long as five members of this Court can satisfy themselves that the congressional action was not 'unreasonable, arbitrary,' ante, at 831; 'misplaced or arbitrary,' ante, at 832; or 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' ante, at 833. My first comment is that not one of these 'tests' appears in the Constitution. Moreover, it seems a little strange to find such 'tests' as these announced in an opinion which condemns the earlier decisions it overrules for their resort to cliches, which it describes as 'too handy and too easy, and, like most cliches, can be misleading'. Ante, at 835. That description precisely fits those words and clauses which the majority uses, but which the Constitution does not.

The Constitution, written for the ages, cannot rise and fall with this Court's passing notions of what is 'fair,' or 'reasonable,' or 'arbitrary.'[. . .]

The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *,' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth*

1 Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes
 2 the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the
 3 majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority
 4 reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the
 5 Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others.
 6 [ . . . ]

7 The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional
 8 action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.'
 9 The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view
 10 of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen,
 11 and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond
 12 the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground
 13 that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-
 14 conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law
 15 that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' 16 the statute must be constitutional.

17 [ . . . ]

18 Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S.
 19 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent,
 20 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the
 21 United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident
 22 that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional
 23 right, but only through operation of a federal statute.
 24 [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

25 The Internal Revenue Code relies on the statutory definition of "United States", which means federal territory. The term
 26 "citizen" is nowhere defined within the Internal Revenue Code and is defined twice within the implementing regulations at
 27 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 . Below is the first of these two definitions:

28 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

29 (c) Who is a citizen.

30 Every person born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen. For other rules
 31 governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and Nationality
 32 Act (8 U.S.C. 1401-1459). For rules governing loss of citizenship, see sections 349 to 357, inclusive, of such Act
 33 (8 U.S.C. 1481-1489), Schneider v. Rusk, (1964) 377 U.S. 163, and Rev.Rul. 70-506, C.B. 1970-2, 1. For rules
 34 pertaining to persons who are nationals but not citizens at birth, e.g., a person born in American Samoa, see
 35 section 308 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1408). For special rules applicable to certain expatriates who have lost
 36 citizenship with a principal purpose of avoiding certain taxes, see section 877. A foreigner who has filed his 37 declaration of intention of becoming a citizen but who has not yet been admitted to citizenship by a final order of 38 a naturalization court is an alien.

39 Notice the term "born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction", which means the exclusive legislative
 40 jurisdiction of the federal government within the District of Columbia and its territories and possessions under Article 1, 41 Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and Title 48 of the U.S. Code. If they meant to include states of the Union, they 42 would have used "their jurisdiction" or "the jurisdiction" as used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment instead of "its 43 jurisdiction".

44 "The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude 'within the United States,
 45 or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,' is also significant as showing that there may be places within the
 46 jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this amendment
 47 was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible interpretation
 48 that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it involves an 49 admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction of the United
 50 States.

51 Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that 'all persons born
 52 or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and 53 of the state wherein they reside.' Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States,
 54 which is not extended to persons born in any place 'subject to their jurisdiction.'
 55 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

1 The above definition of “citizen” applying exclusively to the Internal Revenue Code reveals that it depends on 8 U.S.C.
 2 §1401, which we said earlier in section 4.11.3 and its subsections means a human being and NOT artificial person born
 3 anywhere in the country but domiciled in the federal United States**/federal zone, which includes territories or possessions
 4 and excludes states of the Union. These people possess a special "non-constitutional" class of citizenship that is not covered
 5 by the Fourteenth Amendment or any other part of the Constitution.

6 People born in states of the Union are technically not STATUTORY “nationals and citizens of the United States” under 8
 7 U.S.C. §1401, but instead are STATUTORY “non-resident non-persons” with a legislatively but not constitutionally foreign
 8 domicile under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as follows:

9 (a) (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

10 In the case of "nationals" who are also statutory “non-resident non-persons” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), these are people
 11 who owe their permanent allegiance to the confederation of states in the Union called the "United States of America***" and
 12 NOT the "United States****", which is the government and legal person they created to preside ONLY over community
 13 property of states of the Union and foreign affairs but NOT internal affairs within the states..

14 The definition of “citizen of the United States” found in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 corroborates the above conclusions, keeping
 15 in mind that “United States” within that definition means the federal zone instead of the states of the Union. Remember:
 16 “United States” or “United States of America” in the Constitution means the states of the Union while “United States” in 17 federal statutes means the federal zone only and excludes states of the Union.

18 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen

19 (e)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin
 20 Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

21 Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa are all U.S. territories and federal “States” that are within the
 22 federal zone. They are not “states” under the Internal Revenue Code. The proper subjects of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle
 23 A are only the people who are born in these federal “States”, and these people are the only people who are in fact “citizens
 24 and nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).

25 The basis of citizenship in the United States is the English doctrine under which nationality meant “birth within allegiance of

28 “The supreme court of North Carolina, speaking by Mr. Justice Gaston, said: 'Before our Revolution, all free
 29 persons born within the dominions of the king of Great Britain, whatever their color or complexion, were native-
 30 born British subjects; those born out of his allegiance were aliens.' Upon the Revolution, no other change took 31 place in the law of North Carolina than was consequent upon the transition from a colony dependent on an
 32 European king to a free and sovereign [169 U.S. 649, 664] state.' 'British subjects in North Carolina
 33 became North Carolina freemen;' 'and all free persons born within the state are born citizens of the state.' The 34 term 'citizen,' as understood in our law, is precisely analogous to the term 'subject' in the common law, and 35 the change of phrase has entirely resulted from the change of government. The sovereignty has been 36 transferred from the man to the collective body of the people; and he who before was a 'subject of the king' is 37 now 'a citizen of the state.' State v. Manuel (1838) 4 Dev. & b. 20, 24-26. “
 38 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

39 In our country following the victorious Revolution of 1776, the “king” was therefore replaced by “the people”, who are 40 collectively and individually the “sovereigns” within our republican form of government. The group of people within 41 whatever “body politic” one is referring to who live within the territorial limits of that “body politic” are the thing that you 42 claim allegiance to when you claim “nationality” to any one of the following three distinctive political bodies:

- 43 1. A state the Union.
- 44 2. The country “United States”, as defined in our Constitution.
- 45 3. The municipal government of the federal zone called the “District of Columbia”, which was chartered as a federal 46 corporation under 16 Stat. 419 §1 and 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).

47 Each of the three above political bodies have “citizens” who are distinctively their own. When you claim to be a “citizen” of 48 any one of the three, you aren’t claiming allegiance to the government of that “body politic”, but to the people (the sovereigns)

1 that the government serves. If that government is rebellious to the will of the people, and is outside the boundaries of the
 2 Constitution that defines its authority so that it becomes a “de facto” government rather than the original “de jure” government
 3 it was intended to be, then your allegiance to the people must be superior to that of the government that serves the people. In 4 the words of Jesus Himself in John 15:20:

5 “Remember the word that I said to you, ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’”
 6 [John 15:20, Bible, NKJV]

7 The “master” or “sovereign” in this case, is the people, who have expressed their sovereign will through a written and
 8 unchangeable Constitution.

9 “The glory of our American system of government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects
 10 the people against the exercise of arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be 11 passed by the government it created, or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by 12 amendment or change of its provisions.”
 13 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 21 S.Ct. 770 (1901)]

14 This is a crucial distinction you must understand in order to fully comprehend the foundations of our republican system of 15 government. Let’s look at the definition of “citizen” according to the U.S. Supreme Court in order to clarify the points we 16 have made so far on what it means to be a “citizen” of our glorious republic:

17 “There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies
 18 an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons
 19 associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to 20 its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a
 21 compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

22 “For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a
 23 title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and
 24 ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the
 25 government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
 26 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 27 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the
 28 Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership
 29 of a nation, and nothing more.”

30 “To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is
 31 necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what
 32 were afterwards admitted to membership.”

33 “Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by ‘the people of the United
 34 States,’<sup>3</sup> and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before
 35 dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station
 36 among the powers of the earth,<sup>4</sup> and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they
 37 took the name of ‘the United States of America,’ entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with
 38 each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and general welfare, binding
 39 themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account
 40 of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever. 5”

41 “Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was
 42 adopted, became ipso facto a citizen-a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons
 43 associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has
 44 never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons
 45 were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”
 46 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874), emphasis added]

47 The thing to focus on in the above is the phrase “he owes allegiance and is entitled to its protection”. People domiciled in
 48 states of the Union have dual allegiance and dual nationality: They owe allegiance to two governments not one, so they are

“The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations,

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

Likewise, those people who live in a federal "State" like Puerto Rico also owe dual allegiance: one to the District of Columbia, which is their municipal government and which possesses the police powers that protect them, and the other allegiance to the government of the United States of America, which is the general government for the whole country. As we said before, Congress wears two hats and operates in two capacities or jurisdictions simultaneously, each of which covers a different and mutually exclusive geographical area:

1. As the municipal government for the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. All "acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are referred to as "private international law". This political community is called the "National Government".
2. As the general government for the states of the Union. All "acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are called "public international law". This political community is called the "Federal Government."

Each of the two capacities above has different types of "citizens" within it and each is a unique and separate "body politic". Most laws that Congress writes pertain to the first jurisdiction above only. Below is a summary of these two classes of "citizens":

| 1 | Municipal government of the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. Also called the "National Government" | "Federal zone"(District of Columbia + federal "States") | "Statutory citizens" or "citizens and nationals of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401                                                             |
| 2 | General government for the states of the Union. Also called the "Federal Government"                             | "United States of America"( 50 Union "states" )  | "Constitutional citizens", "nationals but not citizens of the United States" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), "non-resident non-persons" under federal law |

The U.S. Supreme Court recognized the above two separate political and legislative jurisdictions and their respective separate types of "citizens" when it held the following:

*"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided."*
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

Federal statutes and "acts of Congress" do not and cannot prescribe the STATUTORY citizenship status of human beings born in and domiciled in states of the Union and outside of the exclusive or general legislative jurisdiction of Congress. 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) comes the closest to defining their citizenship status, but even that definition doesn't address most persons born in states of the Union neither of whose parents ever resided in the federal zone. No federal statute or "act of Congress" directly can or does prescribe the citizenship status of people born in states of the Union because state law, and not federal law, prescribes their status under the Law of Nations.<sup>140</sup> The reason is because no government may write civil laws that apply outside of their subject matter or exclusive territorial jurisdiction, and states of the Union are STATUTORILY but not CONSTITUTIONALLY "foreign" to the United States government for the purposes of police powers and legislative jurisdiction. Here is confirmation of that fact which the geographical definitions within federal also CONFIRM:

"Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflict of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First, 'that every nation possesses an exclusive sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."

born subjects or others. The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon the laws and municipal regulation of the matter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent.' Story on Conflict of Laws, §23."

Congress is given the authority under the Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 to write "an uniform Rule of Naturalization" and they have done this in Title 8 of the U.S. Code called the "Aliens and Nationality", but they were never given any authority under the Constitution to prescribe laws for the states of the Union relating to citizenship by birth rather than naturalization. That subject is, and always has been, under the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union. Naturalization is only one of two ways by which a person can acquire citizenship, and Congress has jurisdiction only over one of the two ways of acquiring citizenship.

"The question, now agitated, depends upon another question; whether the State of Pennsylvania, since the 26th of March, 1790, (when the act of Congress was passed) has a right to naturalize an alien? And this must receive its answer from the solution of a third question; whether, according to the constitution of the United States, the authority to naturalize is exclusive, or concurrent? We are of the opinion, then, that the States, individually, still enjoy a concurrent authority upon this subject; but that their individual authority cannot be exercised so as to contravene the rule established by the authority of the Union.

"The true reason for investing Congress with the power of naturalization has been assigned at the Bar: --It was to guard against too narrow, instead of too liberal, a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship. Thus, the individual States cannot exclude those citizens, who have been adopted by the United States; but they can adopt citizens upon easier terms, than those which Congress may deem it expedient to impose.

"But the act of Congress itself, furnishes a strong proof that the power of naturalization is concurrent. In the concluding proviso, it is declared, 'that no person heretofore proscribed by any State, shall be admitted a citizen as aforesaid, except by an act of the Legislature of the State, in which such person was proscribed.' Here, we find, that Congress has not only circumscribed the exercise of its own authority, but has recognized the authority of a State Legislature, in one case, to admit a citizen of the United States; which could not be done in any case, if the power of naturalization, either by its own nature, or by the manner of its being vested in the Federal Government, was an exclusive power."

Many freedom fighters overlook the fact that the STATUTORY "citizen" mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 can also be a corporation, and this misunderstanding is why many of them think that they are the only proper subject of the Subtitle A federal income tax. In fact, a corporation is also a STATUTORY "person" and an "individual" and a "citizen" within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code.

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003); Legal encyclopedia]

Corporations, however, cannot be either a CONSTITUTIONAL "person" or "citizen" nor can they have a legal existence outside of the sovereignty that they were created in.

"Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States. 14

14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable "to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State." Orient Ins. Co. v. Dagg, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869). This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sec. 2. See also Selover, Bates & Co. v. Walsh, 226 U.S. 112, 126 (1912); Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U.S. 45 (1908); Liberty Warehouse Co. v. Tobacco Growers, 276 U.S. 71, 89 (1928); Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 244 (1936).

1 Consequently, the only corporations who are “citizens” and the only “corporate profits” that are subject to tax under Internal
 2 Revenue Code, Subtitle A are those that are formed under the laws of the District of Columbia, and not those under the laws
 3 of states of the Union. Congress can ONLY tax or regulate that which it creates as a VOLUNTARY franchise, and
 4 corporations are just such a franchise. Here is why:

5 “Now, a grant of corporate existence is a grant of special privileges to the corporators, enabling them to act for
 6 certain designated purposes as a single individual, and exempting them (unless otherwise specifically provided)
 7 from individual liability. The corporation being the mere creation of local law, can have no legal existence
 8 beyond the limits of the sovereignty where created. As said by this court in Bank of Augusta v. Earle, ‘It must
 9 dwell in the place of its creation and cannot migrate to another sovereignty.’ The recognition of its existence
 10 even by other States, and the enforcement of its contracts made therein, depend purely upon the comity of those 11 States—a comity which is never extended where the existence of the corporation or the exercise of its powers are 12 prejudicial to their interests or repugnant to their policy.”
 13 [Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

14 In conclusion, you aren't the STATUTORY “citizen” described in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 who is the proper subject of Internal
 15 Revenue Code, Subtitle A, nor are you a “resident” of the “United States” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) if you were born
 16 in a state of the Union and are domiciled there. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only applies to persons domiciled in the 17 federal zone and payments originating from within the United States government. If you are domiciled in a state of the Union,
 18 then you aren't domiciled in the federal zone. Consequently, the only type of person you can be as a human born in a state
 19 of the Union is:

- 20 1. A “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 21 2. A CONSTITUTIONAL "person".
- 22 3. A statutory “non-resident non-person”.
- 23 4. A common law “national” as described in Perkins v. Elg., 1939, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320.
- 24 5. NOT any of the following:
  - 25 5.1. "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**]"
  - 26 under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).
  - 27 5.2. A STATUTORY "person".
  - 28 5.3. An “alien” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3).
  - 29 5.4. A statutory "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
  - 30 5.5. A "National but not citizen of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408.
  - 31 5.6. A "U.S.[**] non-citizen national" under 8 U.S.C. §1452.

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020

33 You only become a statutory "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) when you surrender your PRIVATE,
 34 sovereign status and sovereign immunity by entering into contracts with the government, such as accepting a public office or
 35 a government "benefit".

36 The reason most Americans falsely think they owe income tax and why they continue to illegally be the target of IRS
 37 enforcement activity is because they file the wrong tax return form and thereby create false presumptions about their status
 38 in relation to the federal government. IRS Form 1040 is only for use by resident aliens, not those who are non-residents such 39 as state nationals. The "individual" mentioned in the upper left corner of the form is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) as 40 an "alien". STATUTORY "citizens" are not included in the definition. The only place this definition is expanded to include
 41 “citizens” is when they are abroad and accepting treaty benefits as described in 26 U.S.C. §911(d). It also constitutes fraud
 42 for a state national to declare themselves to be a resident alien. A state national who chooses a domicile in the federal zone
 43 is classified as a statutory "U.S.** citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) and NOT a "resident" (alien). It is
 44 furthermore a criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 for a state national to impersonate a statutory "U.S. citizen". The only
 45 tax return form a state national can file without committing fraud or a crime is IRS Form 1040NR, and even then he or she is 46 committing a fraud unless lawfully serving in a public office in the national government.

If you still find yourself confused or uncertain about citizenship in the context of the Internal Revenue Code after having read this section, you might want to go back and reread the following to refresh your memory, because these resources are the foundation to understanding this section:

Lastly, this section does NOT suggest the following LIES found on Wikipedia (click here, for instance) about its content:

Fourteenth Amendment

Some tax protesters argue that all Americans are citizens of individual states as opposed to citizens of the United States, and that the United States therefore has no power to tax citizens or impose other federal laws outside of Washington D.C. and other federal enclaves[7][20] The first sentence of Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment states:

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.

The power to tax of the national government extends to wherever STATUTORY "citizens" or federal territory are found, including states of the Union. HOWEVER, those domiciled in states of the Union are NOT STATUTORY "citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and the ONLY statutory "citizens" or STATUTORY "taxpayers" described in the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A or C are in fact PUBLIC OFFICERS within the national but not state government. We contend that Wikipedia, like most federal judges and prosecutors, are deliberately confusing and perpetuating the confusion between STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts in order to unlawfully enforce federal law in places that they KNOW they have no jurisdiction. 1. Statutory status under federal law:

1.1. “nationals” or “state nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

1.2. Not any of the following:

1.2.1. “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**]” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).

1.2.2. Statutory “nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

1.2.3. “nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 if not born in a federal possession.

1.2.4. “national of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).

1.3. If they were born in a federal possession, they are a “national, but not a citizen, of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1452 if they are domiciled in a federal possession.

1.4. Statutory “non-resident non-persons” relative to the legislative/statutory jurisdiction of the national and not federal government under Titles 4, 5, 26, 42, and 50 of the United States Code, but only if legally or physically present on federal territory. Statutory “non-resident non-person” status is a result of the separation of powers between the state and federal governments. One is “legally present” if they are either consensually conducting commerce within the United States government, have the statutory status of “citizen” or “resident, or are filling a public office within said government.

2. Constitutional status:

2.1. “citizens of the United States***” per the Fourteenth Amendment.

2.2. Not “aliens” from EITHER a STATUTORY or CONSTITUTIONAL perspective.

You can also find details on the above in the following pamphlet in our website:

Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The U.S. Supreme Court recognized that state citizens are non-resident non-persons under titles of the U.S. Code OTHER than Title 8 in the following ruling. What they are talking about below is welfare and franchise policy under Title 42 rather than Title 8 of the U.S. Code. The same would be true for “persons” under Title 26, which is a “trade or business” franchise that uses a different statutory definition for “United States” than Title 8:

*The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. For a host of constitutional and statutory provisions rest on the premise that a legitimate distinction between citizens and aliens may justify attributes and benefits for one class not accorded to the other,<sup>[12]</sup> and the class of aliens is itself a heterogeneous 79*79 multitude of persons with a wide-ranging variety of ties to this country.<sup>[13]</sup>

“Insofar as state welfare policy is concerned,<sup>24</sup> there is little, if any, basis for treating persons who are citizens of another State differently from persons who are citizens of another country. Both groups are noncitizens as far as the State’s interests in administering its welfare programs are concerned. Thus, a division by a State of the category of persons who are not citizens of that State into subcategories of United States citizens and aliens has no apparent justification, whereas, a comparable classification by the Federal Government is a routine and normally legitimate part of its business. Furthermore, whereas the Constitution inhibits every State’s power to restrict travel across its own borders, Congress is explicitly empowered to exercise that type of control over travel across the borders of the United States.<sup>25</sup>

country. Aliens may be immigrants or nonimmigrants. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(15). Immigrants, in turn, are divided into those who are subject to numerical limitations upon admissions and those who are not. The former are subdivided into preference classifications which include: grown unmarried children of citizens; spouses and grown unmarried children of aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence; professionals and those with exceptional ability in the sciences or arts; grown married children of citizens; brothers and sisters of citizens; persons who perform specified permanent skilled or unskilled labor for which a labor shortage exists; and certain victims of persecution and catastrophic natural calamities who were granted conditional entry and remained in the United States at least two years. 8 U.S.C. §§1153(a)(1)-(7). Immigrants not subject to certain numerical limitations include: children and spouses of citizens and parents of citizens at least 21 years old; natives of independent countries of the Western Hemisphere; aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence returning from temporary visits abroad; certain former citizens who may reapply for acquisition of citizenship; certain ministers of religion; and certain employees or former employees of the United States Government abroad. 8 U.S.C. §§1101(a)(27), 1151(a), (b). Nonimmigrants include: officials and employees of foreign governments and certain international organizations; aliens visiting temporarily for business or pleasure; aliens in transit through this country; alien crewmen serving on a vessel or aircraft; aliens entering pursuant to a treaty of commerce and navigation to carry on trade or an enterprise in which they have invested; aliens entering to study in this country; certain aliens coming temporarily to perform services or labor or to serve as trainees; alien representatives of the foreign press or other information media; certain aliens coming temporarily to participate in a program in their field of study or specialization; aliens engaged to be married to citizens; and certain alien employees entering temporarily to continue to render services to the same employers. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(15). In addition to lawfully admitted aliens, there are, of course, aliens who have entered illegally.

[24] We have left open the question whether a State may prohibit aliens from holding elective or important nonelective positions or whether a State may, in some circumstances, consider the alien status of an applicant or employee in making an individualized employment decision. The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

(10) State

The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

A "nonresident alien" is "nonresident" to the statutory "United States**" as defined in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), which simply means that they do not maintain a domicile in the District of Columbia or any federal territory. We call this area the "federal United States", the "United States**", or simply the "federal zone" for short, in this book. Some payroll people and accountants will try to tell you that it is nonsense to expect that the words mean what they say in the Internal Revenue Code, but you can see that there is no way to interpret the definition of "United States" any way

1 other than federal territory for the purposes of Subtitle A federal income taxes. The reason why this also must be the case is
2 that the Constitution and federal law both confine all persons holding public office to reside in the District of Columbia:

3 U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 8, Clause 17

11 Sec. 72. - Public offices: at seat of Government

12 All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere,
13 except as otherwise expressly provided by law

14 A “nonresident” who does not hold a public office in the United States government is not a statutory “person” or “individual”
15 and is not responsible for income tax withholding under Subtitle C of the Internal Revenue Code or for federal income taxes
16 under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. People or entities not holding public office also cannot be levied upon under 17 26 U.S.C. §6331(a). Those in the IRS who argue with this perspective are violating the following rules of statutory

20 "It is apparent that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory

To verify the conclusions of this section, we investigated a prominent payroll compliance education book and found the following comments in the book about “nonresident alien” tax withholding:

“In general, if an employer pays wages to nonresident aliens, it must withhold income tax (unless excepted by regulations), Social Security, and Medicare taxes as it would for a U.S. citizen. A Form W-2 must be delivered to the nonresident alien and filed with the Social Security Administration. Nonresident aliens’ wages are subject to FUTA tax as well.”
[Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance (2002), Payroll Technical Support Services, Panel Publishers, a Division of Aspen Publishers, Inc, p. IV-54. Available at: <http://panelpublishers.com/>]

The above is true, but very misleading. The above advice says “unless excepted by regulations”, and doesn’t mention what those regulations might be. It also uses the term “must be delivered and filed”. That is true for a public employer, but not a private employer, and it still does not obligate a private employee to do anything. The facts below clarify the comments above and the applicable regulations so that their meaning is crystal clear to the reader:

1. There are several regulations that DO exempt income of nonresident aliens. Most of these are documented later in section 5.6.13 and following. All income not “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States” or earned from labor outside the District of Columbia or federal United States is exempt from inclusion as “gross income” by regulation and exempt from withholding, but of course the above book conveniently didn’t mention that:

26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)(6)-1 Remuneration for services of nonresident alien individuals.

All remuneration paid after December 31, 1966, for services performed by a nonresident alien individual, if such remuneration otherwise constitutes wages within the meaning of §31.3401(a)-1 and if such remuneration is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is subject to withholding under section 3402 unless excepted from wages under this section. In regard to wages paid under this section after February 28, 1979, the term “nonresident alien individual” does not include a nonresident alien individual treated as a resident under section 6013 (g) or (h).

(b) Remuneration for services performed outside the [federal] United States.

Remuneration paid to a nonresident alien individual (other than a resident of Puerto Rico) for services performed outside the [federal] United States is excepted from wages and hence is not subject to withholding.

A portion of the regulation above is also confirmed by the statutory rules for computing taxable income found in 26 U.S.C. §861:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > Sec. 861.
Sec. 861. - Income from sources within the United States

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:

(3) Personal services

Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for labor or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from sources within the United States if -

(A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year,

(B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

(C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with -

(i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, or

2. That word “trade or business” above is statutorily defined in the Internal Revenue Code as the “functions of a public office”. This public office essentially amount to a business partnership with the federal government, whether as a federal “employee” or otherwise. These observations confirm once again that the only proper subject of the income tax are government employees who hold a public office.

26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(26\) : Definitions

"The term 'trade or business' includes the performance of the functions of a public office."

Public Office:

"Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are:

(1) Authority conferred by law,

(2) Fixed tenure of office, and

(5) Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are:

(a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.

(b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,

(c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.

(d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and

(e) Position must have some permanency."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1230]

3. 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-1 mentioned above also says that a person can only earn “wages” if they are an “employee”, which is a person holding a “public office” in the United States government” under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.

26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\)-1 Employee:

"...the term [employee] includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, a [federal] State, Territory, Puerto Rico or any political subdivision, thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term 'employee' also includes an officer of a corporation."

26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(a\)-1 Wages.

(a) In general. (1) The term "wages" means all remuneration for services performed by an employee for his employer unless specifically excepted under section 3401(a) or excepted under section 3402(e).

4. Absent a person literally holding a “public office” in the United States government, then the only other way they can earn “wages” is to have a voluntary withholding agreement in place called an IRS Form W-4. If they never volunteered, then they don’t earn “wages”.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term "wages" includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

1 (a) In general.

2 An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the
3 withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made
4 after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts
5 which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all
6 such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement
7 under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations
8 thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income
9 tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

- 10 5. If the private employer coerces the worker who is NOT a PUBLIC or statutory “employee” to sign an IRS Form W-4, 11 that doesn’t count as “volunteering”, because in that instance, they had a choice of either starving to death or committing
12 perjury under penalty of perjury on an IRS Form W-4. They would be committing perjury because they would be 13 submitting a W-4 that misrepresented their status as a federal “employee” and also misrepresented the fact that they 14 “volunteered”, when in fact they were simply coerced under threat of being fired or not being hired by their employer.
15 Here is what Alexander Hamilton said on this subject:

16 “In the general course of human nature, A POWER OVER A MAN’S SUBSISTENCE AMOUNTS TO A POWER 17 OVER HIS WILL.”
18 [Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper No. 79]

19 The tendency of employers to coerce their employees essentially into becoming liars just so they can feed their face may 20 explain the following comment by Will Rogers:

21 “Income tax has made more liars out of the American people than golf.”
22 [Will Rogers]

- 23 6. The regulations say a nonresident alien with no earnings connected with a “trade or business” and which do not originate 24 from federal territory is not subject to tax and not includible in “gross income”.:.

30 Income which is from sources without [outside] the United States [federal territory per 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9)
31 and (a)(10)], as determined under the provisions of sections 861 through 863, and the regulations thereunder,
32 is not included in the gross income of a nonresident alien individual unless such income is effectively
33 connected for the taxable year with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by that individual.
34 To determine specific exclusions in the case of other items which are from sources within the United States, see
35 the applicable sections of the Code. For special rules under a tax convention for determining the sources of 36 income and for excluding, from gross income, income from sources without the United States which is effectively
37 connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, see the applicable tax convention. For 38 determining which income from sources without the United States is effectively connected with the conduct of a
39 trade or business in the United States, see section 864(c)(4) and §1.864-5.

40 Examining the above Quick Reference to Payroll Compliance \(2002\) book once again, we find the following comments:

41 “In some cases, an Internal Revenue Code (IRC) section or a U.S. tax treaty provision will exclude payments to 42 a nonresident alien from wages. Such payments are not subject to the regular income tax withholding, so a Form
43 W-2 is not required. Instead, the payments are subject to withholding at a flat 30 percent or lower treaty rate,
44 unless exempt from tax because of a Code or treaty provision.”
45 [Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance (2002), Payroll Technical Support Services, Panel Publishers, a
46 Division of Aspen Publishers, Inc, p. IV-54. Available at: <http://panelpublishers.com/>]

47 The above comment is based on the content of 26 U.S.C. §871(a), which “appears” to impose a 30% flat rate on the “taxable
48 income” of nonresident aliens not “effectively connected with a trade or business” in the United States, which we said means
49 a “public office” in the United States government. As we said above, however, the underlying regulations at 26 C.F.R.
50 §1.872-2 exclude earnings of nonresident aliens originating outside federal territory. Therefore, such persons would be 51 “nontaxpayers” who do not need to withhold.

A number of other payroll reference books have exactly the same problem as this one. There are two other primary payroll reference books recommended by the American Payroll Association (APA), which are listed below, and both of them have exactly the same problem as the one we examined in this section.

1. The American Payroll Association \(APA\) publishes information for payroll clerks that is flat out wrong on the subject of nonresident withholding in the case of those not engaged in a “trade or business”. See the book entitled: The Payroll Source, 2002; American Payroll Association; Michael P. O’Toole, Esq.; ISBN 1-930471-24-6.
2. The other main source of payroll trade publications is RIA, which also publishes flat out wrong information about the subject of “nonresident aliens” not engaged in a “trade or business” in the following publications: Principles of Payroll Administration; 2004 Edition; Debra J. Salam, CPA & Lucy Key Price, CPP; RIA, 117 West Stevens Ave; Valhalla, NY 10595; ISBN 0-7913-5230-7.

Why don’t most payroll industry compliance books properly or completely address nonresident aliens not engaged in a “trade or business” with no earnings from federal territory or the United States government so as to tell the WHOLE truth about their lack of liability to withhold or report? Below are some insightful reasons that you will need to be intimately familiar with if you wish to educate the payroll department at your job without making enemies out of them:

1. They are bowing to IRS pressure and taking the least confrontational approach. If they told the WHOLE truth, they would probably be audited and attacked, so they omit the WHOLE truth from their manuals.
2. They are trying to make the payroll clerk’s job easy (cook book), so that everyone looks the same. Many payroll software programs don’t know what to do about nonresident aliens who have no Social Security Number, which can add considerably to the workload of the payroll clerk by forcing them to process these people manually.
3. The IRS Form W-8BEN can be used to stop withholding, but those who use it for this purpose must read and understand the regulations, which few payroll clerks have either the time or interest to do. The W-4, however, is the easiest and most convenient to use for the payroll clerks.
4. The IRS Publications conveniently do not discuss the loopholes in the regulations, because they want people to pay tax. Therefore, you must read, study, and understand the law yourself if you want to be free from the system, which few Americans are willing or even able to do.
5. Few Americans read or study the law and even among those who do bring up the issues raised in this book with payroll clerks and bosses. Therefore, those informed private employees who bring up such issues are looked upon as troublemakers and brushed off by payroll and management personnel.
6. Those payroll personnel who call the IRS to ask about the issues in this pamphlet are literally lied to by malicious and uninformed IRS personnel and told that they have to withhold at single zero rate. In fact, IRS employees are not even allowed to give advice and the federal courts have said that you can be penalized for relying on ANYTHING the IRS says, including on the subject of withholding. Read the fascinating truth for yourself:

Federal Courts and the IRS’ Own IRM Say IRS is NOT RESPONSIBLE for Its Actions or Its Words or For Following Its Own Written Procedures, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm>

Therefore, those non-resident non-persons who do not hold public office in the United States government and receive no payments from the U.S. government originating from federal territory do not earn taxable income, need not withhold, and need not file any federal tax return. Some people hear the word “nonresident alien” and assume that it means only “foreigners”. But we must ask the question how a foreigner from another country can serve in a public office of the United States government when the Constitution requires that the President can only be a “Natural Born Citizen” and senators and representatives must be “Citizens of the United States***”?

U.S. Constitution, Article II, Section 1, Clause 5

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 3, Clause 3

No Person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty Years, and been nine Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 2, Clause 2

No Person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty five Years, and been seven Years a Citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an Inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Based on the foregoing discussion, the income taxes collected under the authority of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code are simply a federal public officer kickback program disguised to “look” like a lawful tax. But in fact, the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment revealed by President Taft’s written address before Congress clearly shows the purpose of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code as simply a tax on federal government “employees” and nothing more. This federal employee kickback program disguised as a legitimate “income tax” on everyone was begin in 1862 during the exigencies of the Civil War and has continued with us since that day:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD - SENATE - JUNE 16, 1909
[From Pages 3344 – 3345]
The Secretary read as follows:
To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Again, it is clear that by the enactment of the proposed law the Congress will not be bringing money into the Treasury to meet the present deficiency. The decision of the Supreme Court in the income-tax cases deprived the National Government of a power which, by reason of previous decisions of the court, it was generally supposed that government had. It is undoubtedly a power the National Government ought to have. It might be indispensable to the Nation’s life in great crises. Although I have not considered a constitutional amendment as necessary to the exercise of certain phases of this power, a mature consideration has satisfied me that an amendment is the only proper course for its establishment to its full extent.

I therefore recommend to the Congress that both Houses, by a two-thirds vote, shall propose an amendment to the Constitution conferring the power to levy an income tax upon the National Government without apportionment among the States in proportion to population.

If you would like to learn more about the federal employee kickback program and exactly how it works, a whole book has been written just on this worthy subject, which you can obtain as follows:

IRS Humbug: IRS Weapons of Enslavement, Frank Kowalik, Universalistic Publishers, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1

The Pharisees who wrote the rather deceptive 2002 Quick Reference Guide to Payroll Compliance manual above weren’t telling a lie, but they also certainly left the most important points about tax liability of nonresident aliens undisclosed, and did not explain that people born in states of the Union are nonresident aliens under the tax code IF ANY ONLY IF they lawfully occupy an office in the United States government. This results in a constructive fraud and leaves the average reader, who is a “nonresident alien” and who was born in a state of the Union, with the incorrect presumption that he has a legal obligation to “volunteer” to participate in a corrupt and usurious federal “employee” kickback program. I would also be willing to bet that if you called up the author of the above article and asked him why he didn’t mention all the other details in this section, he would tell you that if he told the truth, he would have his license to practice law or his CPA certification pulled by the IRS or by a federal judge whose retirement benefits depend on maintaining the fraudulent and oppressive tax system we live under.

4.11 The TWO types of “residents”: FOREIGN NATIONAL under the common law or GOVERNMENT CONTRACTOR/PUBLIC OFFICER under a franchise

4.11.1 Introduction

As we pointed out earlier in section 4.12:

1. CONTEXT is extremely important in the legal field.
2. There are TWO main contexts in which legal terms can be used:
  - 2.1. CONSTITUTIONAL or common law: This law protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.

2.2. STATUTORY: This law protects primarily PUBLIC rights and franchises.

CONTEXT therefore has a HUGE impact upon the meaning of the legal term “resident”. Because there are two main contexts in which “resident” can be used, then there are TWO possible meanings for the term.

1. CONSTITUTIONAL or COMMON LAW meaning: A foreign national domiciled within the jurisdiction of the municipal government to which the term “resident” relates. One can be a “resident” under constitutional state law and a “nonresident” in relation to the national government because their civil domicile is FOREIGN in relation to that government. This is a product of the Separation of Powers Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court.
2. STATUTORY meaning: Means a man or woman who consented to a voluntary government civil franchise and by virtue of volunteering, REPRESENTS a public office exercised within and on behalf of the franchise. While on official duty on behalf of the government grantor of the franchise, they assume the effective domicile of the public office they are representing, which is the domicile of the government grantor, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). For instance, the effective domicile of a state franchisee is within the granting state and the domicile of a federal franchisee is within federal territory.

Most of the civil law passed by state and federal governments are civil franchises, such as Medicare, Social Security, driver licensing, marriage licensing, professional licensing, etc. All such franchises are actually administered as FEDERAL franchises, even by the state governments. Men and women domiciled within a constitutional state have a legislatively foreign domicile outside of federal territory and they are therefore treated as statutory “non-resident non-persons” in relation to the national government. Once they volunteer for a franchise, they consent to represent a public office within that civil franchise and their civil statutory status changes from being a statutory “nonresident alien” (26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)) to being a statutory “resident” (26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A)) in relation to federal territory and the national government under the specific franchise they signed up for.

Resident. “Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely transitory in nature. The word “resident” when used as a noun means a dweller, habitant or occupant; one who resides or dwells in a place for a period of more, or less, duration; it signifies one having a residence, or one who resides or abides. Hanson v. P.A. Peterson Home Ass’n, 35 Ill.App.2d. 134, 182 N.E.2d. 237, 240.

Word “resident” has many meanings in law, largely determined by statutory context in which it is used. [Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271]
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

Note the following critical statement in the above, admitting that sleight of hand is involved:

[Kelm v. Carlson, C.A.Ohio, 473, F.2d. 1267, 1271]”

1. A PHYSICAL or GEOGRAPHICAL place. This is the meaning that ignorant people with no legal training would naturally PRESUME that it means.
2. A LEGAL place, meaning a LEGAL PRESENCE as a “person” within a legal fiction called a corporation. For instance, an OFFICER of a federal corporation becomes a “RESIDENT” within the corporation at the moment he or she volunteers for the position and thereby REPRESENTS the corporation. Once they volunteer, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says they become “residents” of the government grantor of the corporation, but only while REPRESENTING said corporation:

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
Rule 17. Parties Plaintiff and Defendant; Capacity

(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

1 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
 2 (2) for a corporation, by the law under which it was organized; and
 3 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
 4 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
 5 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
 6 or laws; and
 7 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
 8 or be sued in a United States court.
 9 [SOURCE: <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcp/Rule17.htm>]

10 All federal corporations are “created” and “organized” under federal law and therefore are considered “residents” and 11 “domestic” in relation to the national government.

12 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
 13 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

14 (a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent
 15 thereof—

16 (4) Domestic

17 The term “domestic” when applied to a corporation or partnership means created or organized in the United
 18 States or under the law of the United States or of any State unless, in the case of a partnership, the Secretary
 19 provides otherwise by regulations.

20 It is also important to emphasize that ALL governments are corporations as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

21 “Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by 22 usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but 23 whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of 24 power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the 25 instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is 26 a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes ‘all 27 persons,’ ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst.
 28 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing
 29 of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of 30 individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. ‘No man shall be taken,’ ‘no man shall be disseised,’ without due process of law, is a
 31 principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal 32 government, by the amendments to the constitution.”
 33 [Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

34 Consequently, when one volunteers to become a public officer within a government corporation, then they acquire a “LEGAL 35 PRESENCE” in the LEGAL AND NOT PHYSICAL PLACE called “United States” as an officer of the corporation. In 36 effect, they are “assimilated” into the corporation as a legal “person” as its representative.

37 Earlier versions of the Treasury Regulations reveal the operation of the SECOND method for creating “residents”, which is 38 that of converting statutory aliens into statutory residents using government franchises:

39 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 Domestic, foreign, resident, and nonresident persons.

40 A domestic corporation is one organized or created in the United States, including only the States (and during 41 the periods when not States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii), and the District of Columbia, or under the 42 law of the United States or of any State or Territory. A foreign corporation is one which is not domestic. A 43 domestic corporation is a resident corporation even though it does no business and owns no property in the 44 United States. A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the 45 regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade
 46 or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or 47 business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a
 48 partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a 49 partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its 50 members or by the place in which it was created or organized.
 51 [Amended by T.D. 8813, Federal Register: February 2, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 21), Page 4967-4975]
 52 [SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-26cfr301.7701-5.pdf>]

53 The key statement in the above is that the status of “resident” does NOT derive from either nationality or domicile, but rather 54 from whether one is “purposefully and consensually” engaged in the FRANCHISE ACTIVITY called a “trade or business”.

This is consistent with the Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court, which requires “purposeful availment” in order to waive sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97:

“A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident foreign corporation, and a foreign corporation not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident foreign corporation. A partnership engaged in trade or business within the United States is referred to in the regulations in this chapter as a resident partnership, and a partnership not engaged in trade or business within the United States, as a nonresident partnership. Whether a partnership is to be regarded as resident or nonresident is not determined by the nationality or residence of its members or by the place in which it was created or organized.”

Incidentally, we were the first people we know of who discovered the above mechanisms and as soon as we exposed them on this website, the above regulation was quickly replaced with a temporary regulation to hide the truth. Scum bags!

The deliberately confusing and evasive definition of “resident” earlier in Black’s Law Dictionary is trying to obfuscate or cover up the above process by inventing new terms called “the State”, which they then refuse to define because if they did, they would probably start the second American revolution and destroy the profitability of the government franchise scam that subsidizes the authors within the legal profession! They are like Judas: Selling the truth for 20 pieces of silver.

What we want to emphasize in this section is that:

1. The word “resident” within most government civil law and ALL franchises actually means a government contractor, and has nothing to do with the domicile or nationality of the parties.
2. The “residence” of the franchisee is that of the OFFICE he or she occupies as a statutory “person”, “citizen”, or “resident”, and not his or her personal or physical location.

Finally, if you would like to know more about how VOLUNTARY participation in government franchises makes one a “resident”, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030, Sections 9.4, 10, and 13.5.2
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4.11.2 Definition of “residence” within civil franchises such as the Internal Revenue Code

The Treasury Regulations define the meaning of “resident” and “residence” as follows:

*Title 26: Internal Revenue
PART 1—INCOME TAXES
nonresident alien individuals
§ 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.*

(B) Residence defined.

An alien actually present in the United States<sup>**</sup> who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the United States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be promptly accomplished is a transient but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States, he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

One therefore may only be a “resident” and file resident tax forms such as IRS Form 1040 if they are “present in the United States”, and by “present” can mean EITHER:

1. PHYSICALLY present: meaning within the geographical “United States” as defined by STATUTE and as NOT commonly understood. This would be the United States<sup>**</sup>, which we also call the federal zone. Furthermore:
  - 1.1. Only human “persons” can physically be ANYWHERE. These are called “natural persons”.

- 1.2. Artificial entities, legal fictions, or other “juristic persons” such as corporations and public offices are NOT physical things, and therefore cannot be physically present ANYWHERE.
2. LEGALLY present: meaning that:
- 2.1. You have CONSENSUALLY contracted with the government as an otherwise NONRESIDENT party to acquire an office within the government as a public officer and a legal fiction. This can ONLY lawfully occur by availing oneself of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h) , which allows NONRESIDENTS to “elect” to be treated as RESIDENT ALIENS, even though not physically present in the “United States”, IF and ONLY IF they are married to a STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL “U.S. citizen” per 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c). If you are married to a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen who is NOT a STATUTORY citizen, this option is NOT available. Consequently, most of the IRS Form 1040 returns the IRS receives are FRAUDULENT in this regard and a criminal offense under 26 U.S.C. §§7206 and 7207.
- 2.2. The OFFICE is legally present within the “United States” as a legal fiction and a corporation. It is NOT physically present. Anyone representing said office is an extension of the “United States” as a legal person.

For all purposes other than those above, a nonresident cannot lawfully acquire any of the following “statuses” under the civil provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitles A through C because: 1. Domiciled OUTSIDE of the forum in a legislatively foreign state such as either a state of the Union or a foreign country; AND 2. Protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97.

1. “person”.
2. “individual”.
3. “taxpayer”.
4. “resident”.
5. “citizen”.

For more details on the relationship between STATUTORY civil statuses such as those above and one’s civil domicile, see:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002, Section 11
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4.11.3 “Resident” in the Internal Revenue Code “trade or business” civil franchise

The only type of “resident” defined in the Internal Revenue Code is a “resident alien”, as demonstrated below:

26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\) Resident alien

(b) Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

(1) In general

For purposes of this title (other than subtitle B) -

(A) Resident alien

An alien individual shall be treated as a resident of the United States with respect to any calendar year if (and only if) such individual meets the requirements of clause (i), (ii), or (iii):

(i) Lawfully admitted for permanent residence

Such individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time during such calendar year.

(ii) Substantial presence test

Such individual meets the substantial presence test of paragraph (3).

(iii) First year election

Such individual makes the election provided in paragraph (4).

Therefore, the terms “resident”, “alien”, and “resident alien” are all synonymous terms within the Internal Revenue Code. Most state income taxation statutes also use the same definition of “resident”, and therefore the same definition applies for state income taxes as well.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you believe we are wrong, then please show us a definition of the term “resident” within either the Internal Revenue Code or the implementing regulations that includes “citizens of the United States” as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401. There simply isn’t one! You are not free to “presume” or “assume” that “citizens of the United States” are also “residents” without the authority of a positive law that authorizes it. We’ll also give you the hint, that even the Internal Revenue Code is neither “positive law” nor does it have the “force of law” for most people, so you can't use it as legally evidence of anything. Presumptions are NOT legal evidence and violate due process of law when they become evidence without at least your consent in some form. To make this or any other assumption in a court of law would violate our right to "due process or law", because "presumption" or "assumption" of anything in the legal realm is a violation of due process. Everything must be proven with evidence, and that which is neither law nor which is explicitly stated cannot be presumed.

The only way you can come under the jurisdiction of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code is to meet one or more of the following criterias below:

1. Be a statutory "U.S. citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401) or "U.S. resident" 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A)) domiciled in the federal zone and temporarily abroad as a "qualified individual" under 26 U.S.C. §911. This person must take a tax treaty exemption under 26 C.F.R. §301.7701(b)-7 and have reportable "trade or business" earnings to even NEED such an exemption.
2. A statutory "U.S. person" as defined under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) residing on or BEING federal property or situated inside the "federal zone" and failing to take the "exemption" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d)(1) using the Form W-9 "Other" block. Click here for a summary of withholding and reporting requirements:

Sec. 7701. - Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(30) United States person

The term "United States person" means -

(A) a citizen or resident of the United States,

(B) a domestic partnership,

(C) a domestic corporation,

(D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and

(E) any trust if -

(i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust, and

(ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

The above statutory "U.S. person" is technically either an "alien" or a federal corporation only. A corporation can also be an "alien" if it was incorporated outside of federal jurisdiction but has a presence inside the federal zone. Under 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1, these are the only entities who are required to provide any kind of identifying number on their tax return! That regulation requires the furnishing of a "Taxpayer Identification Number" for these legal "persons", but 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3) says that Social Security Numbers are not to be treated as "Taxpayer Identification Numbers". Consequently, natural persons with a Social Security Number do not have to provide any kind of identifying number on their return because they aren't the proper subject of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. See section 5.4.17 later for further details on this scandal.

3. A "nonresident alien" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) who has income "effectively connected with a trade or business", which means a political office in the United States government under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii).

Under items 1 & 2 above, the STATUTORY terms "U.S. citizen" and "citizen of the United States" are technically only a federal corporation, as confirmed by the following:

1. The legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum confirms that corporations are treated in law as "citizens of the United States":

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."

[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

2. The definition of “income” as including only “corporate profit” under our Constitution limits the entire Internal Revenue Code to corporations only. See section 5.6.5 later for complete details on this subject.
3. The fact that “income” is only reportable and therefore taxable if it is received by a public officer within the national government and called “trade or business” earnings. See:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Human beings (people) who are “citizens of the United States” under the provisions of 8 U.S.C. §1401 are born only in the District of Columbia or federal territories or possessions. Federal territories and possessions are the only “States” within the Internal Revenue Code as confirmed by 4 U.S.C. §110(d). These statutory “citizens of the United States” cannot legally be classified as “residents”/“aliens” under the Internal Revenue Code and are not authorized by the code to “elect” to be treated as one either. The reason is because the purpose of law is to protect, and a person cannot elect to lose their constitutional rights and protection, even if they want to! However, by filing an IRS form 1040 or 1040A, they in effect make this illegal election anyway, and the IRS looks the other way and does not prosecute such unintentional deceit because they benefit financially from it. The pronouncements of the U.S. Supreme Court also identify this kind of constructive fraud on the part of the IRS as an invalid election if this unwitting choice did not involve fully informed consent. Did you know that you were agreeing to be treated as an “alien” by the IRS when you signed and sent in your first Form 1040 or 1040A?:

 [Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. 742 (1970)]

The reason Constitutional rights are being waived is because people who are “residents”/“aliens” within the federal zone have no constitutional rights in law. The only way to avoid this involuntary election is to instead either file nothing or to file a 1040NR form with the IRS instead of a 1040 or 1040A form. You will learn starting in the next section that people who are born in states of the Union are not “nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but are instead the equivalent of “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). They are also “nonresident aliens” under the Internal Revenue Code if serving in a public office and non-resident non-persons if not serving in a public office in the national government. “nonresident aliens” file only the 1040NR form if they file anything with the IRS. The rules for electing to be treated as a “resident” or “resident alien” are found in IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad. See the following sections for amplification on this subject: 5.5.2, 5.5.3, and 5.4.12.

IMPORTANT: If you were born in a state of the Union, NEVER, EVER file a 1040, 1040A, or 1040EZ form unless you want to throw your Constitutional rights in the toilet and commit a crime! See:

Why It’s a Crime for a State Citizen to File a 1040 Income Tax Return, Form #08.021
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

If you determine that you must file a tax form with the IRS, then the only thing you may send without misrepresenting your status, committing perjury, and sacrificing your sovereign “non-resident non-person” status:

1. 1040NR form with MANDATORY Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201
2. Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Long, Form #15.001
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
3. Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Short, Form #15.002
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Nonresident aliens cannot be penalized under the Internal Revenue Code because they don’t reside there and are not subject! When you send in the 1040NR form, make sure you attach the Tax Form Attachment, Form #04.201 to put yourself outside of federal jurisdiction

You will learn later in section 5.4.16 that the IRS has no legal authority to institute penalties against natural persons because of the prohibition against Bills of Attainder found in Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution, but they will try to illegally do it anyway. Since IRS likes to try to illegally penalize people for changing the “jurat” or perjury statement at the end of the 1040NR form, then you can accomplish the equivalent of physically modifying the words in the perjury statement by redefining the words in the statement or redefining the whole statement in its entirety in an attached letter. Physically changing the words in the statement is the only thing IRS incorrectly “thinks” they can penalize for, and especially if the return was completed and submitted outside of federal jurisdiction in a state of the Union and the perjury statement accurately reflects that fact. Remember that crimes can only be punished based on where they are committed, and if your perjury statement reflects the fact that you are outside of federal jurisdiction, then IRS can’t penalize you no matter how hard they try or how many threats they make.

So being a “resident of the State” under federal statutes above makes you a nonresident alien in your own state and an “alien” under federal jurisdiction who is the proper subject of both state and federal income taxes codes! Because as a “resident of the State” you are presumed to reside inside the federal zone, you don’t have any constitutional rights according to the U.S. supreme Court. Listen to the dissenting opinion from Justice Harlan in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) which ruled that the federal zone doesn’t have constitutional protections:

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

When you accept the false notion that you are “liable” for federal income taxes under Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code and subsequently file a 1040 tax return (bad idea!), you are admitting under penalty of perjury that you are an alien “individual” of your own country (not a “national” or “citizen”) who lives in the federal zone. The only definitions of “individual” found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) confirm that the only people who are “individuals” in the context of federal income taxes are “aliens”/“residents” residing in the federal “United States” or statutory “U.S.** citizens” abroad. That lie or mistake on the tax return you never should have submitted to begin with caused you to become the equivalent of a “virtual inhabitant” of the federal zone in law and from that point on you are treated as such by both the federal government and the state government, even if you don’t want to be and never intended to do this! Here is more proof showing that even if you weren’t located in the federal zone when you submitted the false 1040 return, you gave your tacit permission to be treated as a resident of the District of Columbia:

Sec. 7701. – Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside [the federal] United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to -

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or
(B) enforcement of summons.

What the above means is that if you filed a 1040 or 1040A form, you are telling the federal government that you are an “alien”/“resident” who lives in the federal zone and consequently, the courts will treat you like you have a domicile in the District of Columbia, which we call the District of Criminals. A similar provision appears under 26 U.S.C. §7408\(d\):

§7408. Action to enjoin promoters of abusive tax shelters, etc.

(d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Here is what the 2003 IRS Published Products Catalog says about the proper use of the form 1040A on page F-15, and notice is says it is only for “citizens” and “residents”, neither of which describe those born in and inhabiting states of the Union on land not under federal ownership:

Those who file that false 1040 form are admitting that they are living in the King’s Castle and from that point on, they better bow down to the king as slaves by paying “tribute” with all their earnings! Important about the above is the fact that “nationals” and “nonresident aliens” are not included in the phrase “citizens or residents”, because they are outside the jurisdiction of the federal courts! One more big reason why we don’t want to be a “U.S. citizen” in the context of federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401! That false 1040 tax return they submitted, which said “U.S. individual” at the top, became a contract with criminals from the “District of Criminals” (the “D.C.” in “Washington D.C.”) to take themselves out of the Constitutional Republic and out of the protections of the Bill of Rights. They united with or “married” Babylon the Great Harlot mentioned in Rev. 17 and 18 and they live where she lives: inside of a totalitarian socialist democracy devoid of constitutional rights and predicated solely on the love of money and luxury. They declared themselves to be an “employee” of the Harlot, and the false W-4 form they submitted proves that, because the upper left corner says “employee”, and the only people who are statutory “employees” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) work for the federal government. It is repugnant to the constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court and therefore they can only be referring to PUBLIC “employees”. They have therefore joined the “Matrix” and become a socialist federal serf. Welcome, comrade!”

“You were bought at a price; do not become slaves of men [and remember that government is made up of men].”
[1 Cor. 7:23, Bible, NKJV]

Who says we don’t live in a police state, and not many people even know about this because we have been so deceived by our public “dis-servants”. Can you see how insidious this lawyer deception is? The American people and our media are asleep at the wheel folks!...and it’s going to take a lot more to fix than blind and ignorant patriotism and putting an idiotic flag or bumper sticker on your car. That’s right: if you are a “resident of the United States” or of “the State”, then you’re a federal serf and a ward of the socialist government who is nonresident to his own state! You better to do what you’re told, pay your taxes, and shut up, BOY, or we’ll confiscate all your property, give you 40 lashes and send you to bed without dinner or a blanket. Watch out!

To summarize the preceding discussion of “resident”, for the purposes of taxation, one establishes that they are a “resident” of the federal zone by any of the following techniques:

1. Filing a form 1040 or 1040a or 1040EZ
2. Filling out a W-4 form, which is only for use by federal statutory “employees”, all of whom work only in the federal zone.
3. Claiming to be “U.S. citizen”, “U.S. resident”, or “U.S. person” on any federal form.

If you never did any of the above, then it can't be said that you ever consented to participate in the federal income tax system and the federal government has no jurisdiction or proof of jurisdiction over you for the purposes of Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. If they wrongfully proceed at that point over your objections by attempting unlawful collection and/or assessment actions against you in violation of 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) or the Constitution, then they:

1. Are involved in identity theft because they moved your legal identity under the I.R.C. to a physical place where you neither intend to live or actually live, which is the District of Columbia.
2. Are involved in:
  - 2.1. Racketeering in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1951.
  - 2.2. Extortion in violation of 18 U.S.C. §872.
  - 2.3. Conspiracy against rights in violation of, 18 U.S.C. §241.
3. Can and should be prosecuted individually for fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1001, kidnapping in violation of 18 U.S.C. §1201, and all of the above crimes under both state and federal law.

4.11.4 “resident”=government employee, contractor, or agent

The discussion in the preceding section brings out a very subtle point we would like to further expound upon, which is that “residence” is created ONLY through the operation of private law and your right to contract. We allege that the term “permanent” found in the definition of “domicile” in the previous section really means “consent” to the jurisdiction of the government. Below is the proof, right from the definitions within Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which is entitled “Aliens and Nationality”:

§ 1101. Definitions

(31) The term “permanent” means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

Note that the term “permanent” as used above has no relationship as to time, but instead can exist only in the presence of your voluntary consent. This is one of the implications of the Declaration of Independence, which states that “to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their JUST powers from the CONSENT of the governed.” What they are pointing out above is that what really makes the relationship “permanent” is your voluntary consent. This consent, the courts call “allegiance”. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the practical effect of choosing or consenting to a “domicile” within the jurisdiction of a specific “state”:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a [STATUTORY] citizen of the state wherein he resides [IS DOMICILED], the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties [e.g. CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!!] of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The only legitimate purpose of all law and government is “protection”. A person who selects or consents to have a “domicile” or “residence” has effectively contracted to procure “protection” of the “sovereign” or “state” within its jurisdiction. In exchange for the promise of protection by the “state”, they are legally obligated to give their allegiance and support. All allegiance must be voluntary and any consequences arising from compelled allegiance may not be enforced in a court of law. When you revoke your voluntary consent to the government’s jurisdiction and the “domicile” or “residence” contract, you change your status from that of a “domiciliary” or “resident” or “inhabitant” or “U.S. person” to that of a “transient foreigner”. Transient foreigner is then defined below:

 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1498]

Note again the language within the definition of “domicile” from Black’s Law Dictionary found in the previous section relating to the word “transient”, which confirms that what makes your stay “permanent” is consent to the jurisdiction of the “state” located in that place:

“Domicile. [...] The established, fixed, permanent, or ordinary dwellingplace or place of residence of a person, as distinguished from his temporary and transient, though actual, place of residence. It is his legal residence, as distinguished from his temporary place of abode; or his home, as distinguished from a place to which business or pleasure may temporarily call him. See also Abode; Residence.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many “residences” as you like, but you can have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and allegiance.

“No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.”
[Matt. 6:24, Bible, NKJV]

Remember, “resident” is a combination of two word roots: “res”, which is legally defined as a “thing”, and “ident”, which stands for “identified”.

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to “persona,” which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.*

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle’s Will, 11 A.D.2d 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res”; and proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) “Res” may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled “In re _____”.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1304-1306]

When you become a “resident” in the eyes of the government, you become a “thing” that is now “identified” and which is within their legislative jurisdiction and completely subject to it. Notice that a “res” is defined as the object of a trust above. That trust is the “public trust” created by the Constitution and all laws passed pursuant to it.

Executive Order 12731
“Part 1 -- PRINCIPLES OF ETHICAL CONDUCT

“Section 101. Principles of Ethical Conduct. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each Federal employee shall respect and adhere to the fundamental principles of ethical service as implemented in regulations promulgated under sections 201 and 301 of this order:

“(a) Public service is a public trust, requiring employees to place loyalty to the Constitution, the laws, and ethical principles above private gain.

TITLE 5--ADMINISTRATIVE PERSONNEL
CHAPTER XVI--OFFICE OF GOVERNMENT ETHICS
PART 2635--STANDARDS OF ETHICAL CONDUCT FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH--Table of Contents
Subpart A--General Provisions
Sec. 2635.101 Basic obligation of public service.

(a) Public service is a public trust. Each employee has a responsibility to the United States Government and its citizens to place loyalty to the Constitution, laws and ethical principles above private gain. To ensure that every citizen can have complete confidence in the integrity of the Federal Government, each employee shall respect and adhere to the principles of ethical conduct set forth in this section, as well as the implementing standards contained in this part and in supplemental agency regulations.

All those who swear an oath as “public officers” are also identified as “trustees” of the “public trust”:

1 "As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be
 2 exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer.<sup>141</sup>
 3 Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level
 4 of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under
 5 every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain
 6 from a discharge of their trusts.<sup>142</sup> That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political
 7 entity on whose behalf he or she serves.<sup>143</sup> and owes a fiduciary duty to the public.<sup>144</sup> It has been said that
 8 the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual.<sup>145</sup>
 9 Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public
 10 confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.<sup>146</sup>
 11 [63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

12 A person who is "subject" to government jurisdiction cannot be a "sovereign", because a sovereign is not subject to the law,
 13 but the AUTHOR of the law. Only citizens are the authors of the law because only "citizens" can vote.

14 "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system,
 15 while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people,
 16 by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power."
 17 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

18 The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if you have a "domicile" or "residence" in any earthly place or in any place
 19 other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you choose a "domicile" or "residence" any place on earth, then
 20 you become a "subject" in relation to that place and voluntarily forfeit your sovereignty. This is NOT the status you want to 21 have! A "resident" by definition MUST therefore be within the legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the
 22 government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their 23 legislative jurisdiction. All law is territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the 24 government or upon its franchises and contracts, which are "property" under its management and control. The only lawful
 25 way that government laws can reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed,
 26 mutual consent of the individual parties involved, and this field of law is called "private law".

27 "Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
 28 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
 29 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
 30 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
 31 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a
 32 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon
 33 the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and
 34 upon its own express or tacit consent." Story on Conflict of Laws §23."
 35 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

36 The very same principles as government operates under with respect to "resident" also apply to Christianity as well. When 37 we become Christians, we consent to the contract or covenant with God called the Bible. That covenant requires us to accept 38 Jesus Christ as our Lord and Savior. This makes us a "resident" of Heaven and "pilgrims and sojourners" (transient 39 foreigners) on earth:

40 "For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"

15 But He answered and said to the one who told Him, "Who is My mother and who are My brothers?" 49 And He

 18 [Matt. 12:46-50, Bible, NKJV]

19 By doing God's will on earth and accepting His covenant or private contract with us, which is the Bible, He becomes our 20 Father and we become His children. The law of domicile says that children assume the same domicile as their parents and 21 are legally dependent on them:

22 A person acquires a domicile of origin at birth.<sup>147</sup> The law attributes to every individual a domicile of origin,<sup>148</sup>
 23 which is the domicile of his parents,<sup>149</sup> or of the father,<sup>150</sup> or of the head of his family:<sup>151</sup> or of the person on whom
 24 he is legally dependent,<sup>152</sup> at the time of his birth. While the domicile of origin is generally the place where one
 25 is born<sup>153</sup> or reared,<sup>154</sup> may be elsewhere.<sup>155</sup> The domicile of origin has also been defined as the primary domicile
 26 of every person subject to the common law.<sup>156</sup>

29 The legal dependence they are talking about is God's Law, which then becomes our main source of protection and dependence
 30 on God. We as believers then recognize Jesus' existence as a "thing" we "identify" in our daily life and in return, He 31 recognizes our existence before the Father. Here is what He said on this subject as proof:

32 Confess Christ Before Men

33 "Therefore whoever confesses Me [recognizes My legal existence under God's law, the Bible, and acknowledges
 34 My sovereignty] before men, him I will also confess before My Father who is in heaven. But whoever denies Me
 35 before men, him I will also deny before My Father who is in heaven."

Let's use a simple example to illustrate our point in relation to the world. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you won't sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can't open an account for you. Before you sign the account agreement, the bank doesn't know anything about you and you don't have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an "alien". An "alien" is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help "customers", not "aliens". After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now become a "resident" of the bank. You are a "resident" because:

1. You are a "thing" that they can now "identify" in their computer system and their records because you have an "account" there. They now know your name and "account number" and will recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help.
2. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your "account". These things that they issued you are the "privileges" associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an agreement can avail themselves of such "privileges".
3. The account agreement gives you the "privilege" to demand "services" from the bank of one kind or another. The legal requirement for the bank to perform these "services" creates the legal equivalent of "agency" on their part in doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have "hired" them to perform a "service" that you want and need.
4. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another. For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance. The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of "agency" on your part in respect to the bank.
5. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the "contractual agency" created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement authorizes and in a mode or "forum" (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

The government does things exactly the same way. The only difference is the product they deliver. The bank delivers financial services, and the government delivers "protection" and "social" services. The account number is the social security number. You can't have or use a social security number and avail yourself of its benefits without consenting to the jurisdiction of the "contract" that authorized its' issuance, which is the Social Security Act found in Title 42 of the U.S. Code.

CALIFORNIA CIVIL CODE
 DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
 PART 2. CONTRACTS
 CHAPTER 3. CONSENT
Section 1589

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a [government benefit] transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations [and legal liabilities] arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

Therefore, you can't avail yourself of the "privileges" associated with the Social Security account agreement without also being a "resident" of the "United States", which means an alien who has signed a contract to procure services from the government. That contract can be explicit, which means a contract in writing, or implicit, meaning that it is created through your behavior. For instance, if you drive on the roads within a state, that act implied your consent to be bound by the vehicle code of that state. In that sense, driving a car became a voluntary exercise of your right to contract.

A mere innocent act can imply or trigger "constructive consent" to a legal contract, and in many cases, you may not even be aware that you are exercising your right to contract. Watch out! For instance, the criminal code in your state behaves like a contract. The "police" are simply there to enforce the contract. As a matter of fact, their job was created by that contract. This is called the "police power" of the state. If you do not commit any of the acts in the criminal or penal code, then you are not subject to it and it is "foreign" to you. You become the equivalent of a "resident" within the criminal code and subject to the legislative jurisdiction of that code ONLY by committing a "crime" identified within it. That "crime" triggers "constructive consent" to the terms of the contract and all the obligations that flow from it, including prison time and a court trial. This analysis helps to establish that in a free society, all law is a contract of one form or another, because it can only be passed by the consent of the majority of those who will be subject to it. The people who will be subject to the laws of a "state" are those with a "domicile" or "residence" within the jurisdiction of that "state". Those who don't have such a "domicile" or "residence" and who are therefore not subject to the civil laws of that state are called "transient foreigners".

We will build extensively upon this concept further, in sections 5.4 through 5.4.4.5 later. This is a very interesting subject that we find most people are simply fascinated with, because it helps to emphasize the “voluntary nature” of all law.

4.11.5 Why was the statutory “resident” under civil franchises created instead of using a classical constitutional “citizen” or “resident” as its basis?

After looking at the “resident” government contractor franchise scam, we wondered why they had to do this instead of simply using a classical constitutional “citizen” or “resident” with a domicile within the territory protected by a specific government as the basis for franchises. After careful thought and research, we found that there are many reasons they had to do this:

1. The Constitution forbids what is called “class legislation” relating to constitutional “citizens” or “residents”. The reason is that it violates the requirement for equal protection and equal treatment that is at the heart of the Constitution. Governments are NOT allowed to treat any subset of constitutional citizens or residents differently, or confer or grant “benefits”, and by implication “franchises”, to any SUBSET of them. If participation is in fact voluntary, there is no way they could even offer franchises to constitutional citizens without favoring one group over another and thereby creating an unconstitutional “title of nobility”. Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court described this violation after the first income tax was enacted and declared UNCONSTITUTIONAL by the U.S. Supreme Court:

“The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing intensity and bitterness. ‘If the court sanctions the power of discriminating taxation, and nullifies the uniformity mandate of the constitution,’ as said by one who has been all his life a student of our institutions, ‘it will mark the hour when the sure decadence of our present government will commence.’

The legislation, in the discrimination it makes, is class legislation. Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by reason of their birth, or wealth, or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses, and to general unrest and disturbance in society.”
[Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429 \(1895\)]

2. It has always been unconstitutional to abuse the government’s taxing power to pay private individuals. Classical constitutional citizens and residents are inherently PRIVATE individuals.

“His [the individual’s] rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”
[Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 \(1906\)]

Hence, the government cannot lawfully create any franchise “benefit” offered to PRIVATE constitutional citizens or residents that could be used to redistribute wealth between different groups of otherwise private individuals. For instance, they cannot tax the rich to give to the poor, as the U.S. Supreme Court indicated above and hence, cannot offer franchises to constitutional citizens or residents, or tie eligibility for the franchise to the status of constitutional citizen or resident.

“A tax, in the general understanding of the term and as used in the constitution, signifies an exaction for the support of the government. The word has never thought to connote the expropriation of money from one group for the benefit of another.”

[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 \(1874\)]

[Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

3. It has been repeatedly held as unconstitutional for governments to establish a “poll tax”. Poll taxes are fees required to be paid before one may vote in any election. Voting, in turn, is described as a “franchise”. Eligibility to vote is established by the coincidence of both nationality and domicile. If domicile instead of “residence” under a franchise were used as the criteria for income tax obligation, then indirectly the income tax would act for all intents and purposes as a “poll tax” and thereby quickly be declared as unconstitutional.

We conclude that a State violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment whenever it makes the affluence of the voter or payment of any fee an electoral standard. Voter qualifications have no relation to wealth nor to paying or not paying this or any other tax.<sup>157</sup> Our cases demonstrate that the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment restrains the States from fixing voter qualifications which invidiously discriminate. Thus without questioning the power of a State to impose reasonable residence restrictions on the availability of the ballot (see Pope v. Williams, 193 U.S. 621, 24 S.Ct. 573, 48 L.Ed. 817), we held in Carrington v. Rash, 380 U.S. 89, 85 S.Ct. 775, 13 L.Ed.2d. 675, that a State may not deny the opportunity to vote to a bona fide resident merely because he is a member of the armed services. 'By forbidding a soldier ever to controvert the presumption of non-residence, the Texas Constitution imposes an invidious discrimination in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.' Id., at 96, 85 S.Ct. at 780. And see Louisiana v. United States, 380 U.S. 145, 85 S.Ct. 817. Previously we had said that neither homesite nor occupation 'affords a permissible basis for distinguishing between qualified voters within the State.' Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 380, 83 S.Ct. 801, 808, 9 L.Ed.2d. 821. We think the same must be true of requirements of wealth or affluence or payment of a fee.

Long ago in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370, 6 S.Ct. 1064, 1071, 30 L.Ed. 220 the Court referred to 'the political franchise of voting' as a 'fundamental political right, because preservative of all rights.' Recently in Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 561—562, 84 S.Ct. 1362, 1381, 12 L.Ed.2d. 506, we said, 'Undoubtedly, the right of suffrage is a fundamental matter in a free and democratic society. Especially since the right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaired manner is preservative of other basic civil and political rights, any alleged infringement of the right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized.' There we were considering charges that voters in one part of the State had greater representation per person in the State Legislature than voters in another part of the State. We concluded:

A citizen, a qualified voter, is no more nor no less so because he lives in the city or on the farm. This is the clear and strong command of our Constitution's Equal Protection Clause. This is an essential part of the concept of a government of laws and not men. This is at the heart of Lincoln's vision of 'government of the people, by the people, (and) for the people.' The Equal Protection Clause demands no less than substantially equal state legislative representation for all citizens, of all places as well as of all races.' Id., at 568, 84 S.Ct. at 1385.

We say the same whether the citizen, otherwise qualified to vote, has $1.50 in his pocket or nothing at all, pays the fee or fails to pay it. The principle that denies the State the right to dilute a citizen's vote on account of his economic status or other such factors by analogy bars a system which excludes those unable to pay a fee to vote or who fail to pay.

4. Corrupt politicians through abuse of legal “words of art” had to make franchise participation at least “LOOK” like it was somehow connected to citizenship, even though technically it is not, in order to fool people into thinking that participation was mandatory by virtue of their nationality or domicile, even though in fact it is NOT. Therefore they confused the word “resident” and “residence” with a statutory status of a constitutional or classical “alien”, even though they are NOT the same.
5. Since you can only have a domicile in one place at a time, then if income taxes were based on domicile alone, you could only pay the tax to ONE municipal government at a time. Hence, you could NOT simultaneously owe both STATE and FEDERAL income tax at the same time. The only way to reconcile the conflict under such circumstances is to pay it to the state government only. On the other hand, if taxes are based on “residence” you could owe it to more than one government at a time if you had multiple “residences”. Therefore, they HAD to base the tax upon “residence” and not “domicile” and to make “residence” a product of your consent to contract with a specific government for services or protection under a specific franchise.

4.11.6 How the TWO types of “RESIDENTS” are deliberately confused

<sup>157</sup> Only a handful of States today condition the franchise on the payment of a poll tax. Alabama (Ala. Const., §§ 178, 194, and Amendments 96 and 207; Ala. Code Tit. 17, § 12) and Texas (Tex. Const., Art. 6, § 2; Vernon's Ann. Stat., Election Code, Arts. 5.02, 5.09) each impose a poll tax of $1.50. Mississippi (Miss. Const., §§ 241, 243; Miss. Code §§ 3130, 3160, 3235) has a poll tax of $2. Vermont has recently eliminated the requirement that poll taxes be paid in order to vote. Act of Feb. 23, 1966, amending Vt. Stat. Ann. Tit. 24, §701.

As we pointed out in the previous section, there is a vested financial interest in covetous governments deliberately confusing FOREIGN NATIONALS under the common law with CONTRACTORS under government franchises. Great pains have been taken over time to confuse these two because of these strong motivations to recruit more government franchisee contractors and thus increase revenues. We will discuss these mechanisms in this section.

“Residence” is deliberately confused with “domicile”, even though they are NOT equivalent and mutually exclusive under franchise statutes. “Residence” under the Internal Revenue Code “trade or business” franchise, for instance, means the abode of a statutory “alien” and DOES NOT include either “citizens” or even “nonresident aliens”.

The second technique is to confuse the word “reside” with “residence” or “domicile”. Reside simply means where one sleeps at night and has NOTHING to do with either their domicile OR their residence:

[Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1473]

You can RESIDE somewhere WITHOUT having EITHER a domicile or a residence there. Here is an example:

*There are no cases in California deciding whether a foreign corporation can “reside” in a county within the meaning of the recordation sections of the Code. There are cases, however, on the question whether a foreign corporation doing business in California can acquire a county residence within the state for the purpose of venue. The early cases held that such residence could not be acquired.<sup>1</sup> These cases were explained in Bohn v. Better Biscuits, Inc., 26 Cal.App.2d. 61, 78 P.2d. 1177,2 wherein it was finally established that a foreign corporation doing business in California, having designated its principal office pursuant to Section 405 of the California Civil Code provision (passed in 1929), could acquire a county residence in the state for the purpose of venue. The court in that case construed the venue provision of Section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure which reads as follows: “In all other cases, *** the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action, is the proper county for the trial of the action. *** If none of the defendants resides in the State, *** the action may be tried in any county which the plaintiff may designate in his complaint.”

*In relation to this section, the court held: “The plaintiff stresses the word ‘reside.’ It then contends that as the defendant is a foreign corporation having its principal place of business at Grand Rapids, Mich., that place is its residence and it may not be heard to claim that it resides at any other place. If by the use of the word ‘reside’ one means ‘domicil’ that contention would be sound. *** It is not claimed that there is anything in the context showing the word ‘reside’ was intended to mean ‘domicil.’ By approved usage of the language ‘reside’ means: ‘Live, dwell, abide, sojourn, stay, remain, lodge.’ *** By a long line of decisions it has been held that a domestic corporation resides at the place where its principal place of business is located. Walker v. Wells Fargo Bank, etc., Co., 8 Cal.2d. 447, 65 P.2d. 1299. The designation of the principal place of business of a domestic corporation is contained in its articles. Civ.Code, § 290 ***. The designation of the principal place of business of a foreign corporation in this state is contained in the statement which it is required to file in the office of the secretary of state before it may legally transact business in this state. Civ.Code, § 405 ***. Prior to the enactment of sections 405-406a *** a foreign corporation had no locus in this state. No statute required it to designate, by a written statement duly filed in the office of the secretary of state, the location of its principal place of business in the state. After the enactment of said sections, the principal place of business of foreign corporations as well as domestic corporations was fixed by law. When the reason is the same, the rule should be the same. Civ.Code, § 3511. It follows *** by reason of the enactment of section 405 et seq. of the Civil Code *** said section 395 of the Code of Civil Procedure *** applies to persons both natural and artificial and whether the corporation is a domestic or a foreign corporation.” Bohn v. Better Biscuits, Inc., 26 Cal.App.2d. 61, 64, 65, 78 P.2d. 1177, 1179, 80 P.2d. 484.*

[Western-Knapp Engineering Co. v. Gilbank, 129 F.2d. 135 (9th Cir., 1942)]

Keep in mind the following important facts about the above case:

1. “Reside” is where the corporation physically does business, not the place of its civil domicile.
2. One can “do business” in a geographic region without having a civil domicile there.
3. The corporation is a creation of and therefore component LEGALLY WITHIN the government that granted it, regardless of where it is physically located or where it does business. This is reflected in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b).
4. Those “doing business” in a specific geographical region are “deemed to be LEGALLY present” within the forum or civil laws they are doing business in, regardless of whether they have offices in that region under:
  - 4.1. The Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945).
  - 4.2. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97.

5. The fact that one “does business” within a specific region does not necessarily mean that you are “purposefully availing himself” under the laws of that region, and especially if the parties doing business have a contract between them REMOVING the government and its protections from their CIVIL relationship. How might this be done? They could have a “binding arbitration” agreement or contract that relegates all disputes to a private third party, for instance.
6. The civil statutory laws of a place are a social compact, and it would constitute eminent domain without compensation over those who have neither a “domicile” nor a “residence” in the region to impose or enforce these laws against them. That is the foundation of the Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court itself, in fact.
7. One can be legally present UNDER THE COMMON LAW while being NOT PRESENT under civil statutory law. That would be the condition of a nonresident foreign corporation such as the one in the case above.
8. “Residing” somewhere implies an effective legal “residence” under the Minimum Contacts Doctrine, U.S. Supreme Court ONLY if one is ALSO “doing business”, and ONLY for that specific transaction and for NO other purpose.

4.11.7 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 1: Opening a bank account

Let us give you a practical business example of this phenomenon in action whereby a person becomes a “resident” from a legal perspective by exercising their right to contract. You want to open a checking account at a bank. You go to the bank to open the account. The clerk presents you with an agreement that you must sign before you open the account. If you won’t sign the agreement, then the clerk will tell you that they can’t open an account for you. Before you sign the account agreement, the bank doesn’t know anything about you and you don’t have an account there, so you are the equivalent of an “alien”. An “alien” is someone the bank will not recognize or interact with or help. They can only lawfully help “customers”, not “aliens”. After you exercise your right to contract by signing the bank account agreement, then you now become a “resident” of the bank. You are a “resident” because:

1. You are a “thing” that they can now “identify” in their computer system and their records because you have an “account” there. A “res” is legally defined as a “thing”. They now know your name and “account number” and will recognize you when you walk in the door to ask for help. Hence “res-ident”.
2. You are the “person” described in their account agreement. Before you signed it, you were a “foreigner” not subject to it.
3. They issued you an ATM card and a PIN so you can control and manage your “account”. These things that they issued you are the “privileges” associated with being party to the account agreement. No one who is not party to such an agreement can avail themselves of such “privileges”.
4. The account agreement gives you the “privilege” to demand “services” from the bank of one kind or another. The legal requirement for the bank to perform these “services” creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on their part in doing what you want them to do. In effect, you have “hired” them to perform a “service” that you want and need.
5. The account agreement gives the bank the legal right to demand certain behaviors out of you of one kind or another. For instance, you must pay all account fees and not overdraw your account and maintain a certain minimum balance. The legal requirement to perform these behaviors creates the legal equivalent of “agency” on your part in respect to the bank.
6. The legal obligations created by the account agreement give the two parties to it legal jurisdiction over each other defined by the agreement or contract itself. The contract fixes the legal relations between the parties. If either party violates the agreement, then the other party has legal recourse to sue for exceeding the bounds of the “contractual agency” created by the agreement. Any litigation that results must be undertaken consistent with what the agreement authorizes and in a mode or “forum” (e.g. court) that the agreement specifies.

4.11.8 PRACTICAL EXAMPLE 2: Creation of the “resident” under a government civil franchise

When two parties execute a franchise agreement or contract between them, they are engaging in “commerce”. The practical consequences of the franchise agreement are the following:

1. The main source of jurisdiction for the government is over commerce.
2. The mutual consideration passing between the parties provides the nexus for government jurisdiction over the transaction.
3. If the exchange involves a government franchise offered by the national government:
  - 3.1. An “alienation” of private rights has occurred. This alienation:
    - 3.1.1. Turns formerly private rights into public rights.
    - 3.1.2. Accomplishes the equivalent of a “donation” of private property to a public use, public purpose, and public office in order to procure the “benefits” of the franchise by the former owner of the property.

- 1 3.2. Parties to the franchise agreement cannot engage in a franchise without implicitly surrendering governance over
 2 disputes to the government granting the franchise. In that sense, their effective domicile shifts to the location of 3 the seat of the government granting the franchise.
- 4 3.3. The parties to the franchise agreement mutually and implicitly surrender their sovereign immunity under the 5 Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\), which says that commerce within the legislative
 6 jurisdiction of the “United States” constitutes constructive consent to be sued in the courts of the United States.
 7 This is discussed in more detail in the previous section.

8 Another surprising result of engaging in franchises and public “benefits” that most people overlook is that the commerce it
 9 represents, in fact, can have the practical effect of making an “alien” or “nonresident” party into a “resident” for the purposes
 10 of statutory jurisdiction. Here is the proof:

11 In International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945), the Supreme Court held that a court may exercise
 12 personal jurisdiction over a defendant consistent with due process only if he or she has “certain minimum
 13 contacts” with the relevant forum “such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend ‘traditional notions of 14 fair play and substantial justice.’ ” Id. at 316 (quoting Milliken v. Meyer, 311 U.S. 457, 463 (1940)). Unless a 15 defendant’s contacts with a forum are so substantial, continuous, and systematic that the defendant can be 16 deemed to be “present” in that forum for all purposes, a forum may exercise only “specific” jurisdiction - that 17 is, jurisdiction based on the relationship between the defendant’s forum contacts and the plaintiff’s claim. The 18 parties agree that only specific jurisdiction is at issue in this case.

19 In this circuit, we analyze specific jurisdiction according to a three-prong test:

- 20 (1) The non-resident defendant must purposefully direct his activities or consummate some transaction with the 21 forum or resident thereof; or perform some act by which he purposefully avails himself of the privilege of 22 conducting activities in the forum, thereby invoking the benefits and protections of its laws;
 23 (2) the claim must be one which arises out of or relates to the defendant’s forum-related activities; and 24 (3) the exercise of jurisdiction must comport with fair play and substantial justice, i.e. it must be reasonable.

 26 1416, 1421 (9th Cir. 1987)). The first prong is determinative in this case. We have sometimes referred to it, in 27 shorthand fashion, as the “purposeful availment” prong. Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. Despite its label, this
 28 prong includes both purposeful availment and purposeful direction. It may be satisfied by purposeful availment
 29 of the privilege of doing business in the forum; by purposeful direction of activities at the forum; or by some 30 combination thereof.

31 We have typically treated “purposeful availment” somewhat differently in tort and contract cases. In tort cases,
 32 we typically inquire whether a defendant “purposefully direct[s] his activities” at the forum state, applying an
 33 “effects” test that focuses on the forum in which the defendant’s actions were felt, whether or not the actions
 34 themselves occurred within the forum. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 803 (citing Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S.
 35 783, 789-90 (1984)). By contrast, in contract cases, we typically inquire whether a defendant “purposefully avails
 36 itself of the privilege of conducting activities” or “consummate[s] [a] transaction” in the forum, focusing on 37 activities such as delivering goods or executing a contract. See Schwarzenegger, 374 F.3d. at 802. However, this
 38 case is neither a tort nor a contract case. Rather, it is a case in which Yahoo! argues, based on the First 39 Amendment, that the French court’s interim orders are unenforceable by an American court.
 40 [\[Yahoo! Inc. v. La Ligue Contre Le Racisme Et L’Antisemitisme, 433 F.3d. 1199 \(9th Cir. 01/12/2006\) \]](#)

41 Legal treatises on domicile also confirm that those who are “wards” or “dependents” of the state or the government assume
 42 the same domicile or “residence” as their care giver. The practical effect of this is that by participating in government 43 franchises, we become “wards” of the government in receipt of welfare payments such as Social Security, Medicare, etc. As 44 “wards” under “guardianship” of the government, we assume the same domicile as the government who is paying us the 45 “benefits”, which means the District of Columbia. Our domicile is whatever the government, meaning the “court” wants it
 46 to be for their convenience:

9 This change in domicile of those who participate in government franchises and thereby become “wards” of the government
10 is also consistent with the U.S. Supreme Court’s view of the government’s relationship to those who participate in government
11 franchises. It calls the government a “parens patriae” in relation to them!:

12 “The proposition is that the United States, as the grantor of the franchises of the company [a corporation, in 13 this case], the author of its charter, and the donor of lands, rights, and privileges of immense value, and as

23 One Congressman during the debates over the proposal of the Social Security Act in 1933 criticized the very adverse effects
24 of the franchise upon people’s rights, including that upon the domicile of those who participate, when he said:

25 Mr. Logan: "...Natural laws cannot be created, repealed, or modified by legislation. Congress should know there 26 are many things which it cannot do..."

27 "It is now proposed to make the Federal Government the guardian of its citizens. If that should be done, the 28 Nation soon must perish. There can only be a free nation when the people themselves are free and administer the 29 government which they have set up to protect their rights. Where the general government must provide work, and 30 incidentally food and clothing for its citizens, freedom and individuality will be destroyed and eventually the 31 citizens will become serfs to the general government..."

35 The Internal Revenue Code franchise agreement itself contains provisions which recognize this change in effective domicile

(d) Citizens and residents outside the United States If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in, and does not have his principal place of business in, any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated for purposes of this section as residing in the District of Columbia.

Since your Constitutional right to contract is unlimited, then you can have as many temporary and transient “residences” as you like, but you can have only one legal “domicile”, because your allegiance must be undivided or you will have a conflict of interest and allegiance.

“No one can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.”
 [Matt. 6:23-25, Bible, NKJV]

Now do you understand the reasoning behind the following maxim of law? You become a “subject” and a “resident” under the jurisdiction of a government’s civil law by demanding its protection! If you want to “fire” the government as your “protector”, you MUST quit demanding anything from it by filling out government forms or participating in its franchises:

Protectio trahit subjectionem, subiectio projectionem.
 Protection draws to it subjection, subjection, protection. Co. Litt. 65.
 [Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;
 SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By “res,” according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to “persona,” which is regarded as a subject of rights. “Res,” therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle’s Will, 11 A.D.2d. 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is “the res”; and proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) “Res” may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled “In re _____”.
 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1304-1306]

The “object, subject matter, or status” they are talking about above is the ALL CAPS incarnation of your legal birth name and the government-issued number, usually an SSN, that is associated with it. Those two things constitute the “straw man” or “trust” or “res” which you implicitly agree to represent at the time you sign up for any franchise, benefit, or “public right”. When the government attacks someone for a tax liability or a debt, they don’t attack you as a private person, but rather the collection of rights that attach to the ALL CAPS trust name and associated Social Security Number trust. They start by placing a lien on the number, which actually is THEIR number and not YOURS. That number associates PRIVATE property with PUBLIC TRUST property. Merriam-Webster’s Dictionary definition 5(b) for “Trust” is “office”:

“Trust; 5a(1): a charge or duty imposed in faith or confidence or as a condition of some relationship (2): something committed or entrusted to one to be used or cared for in the interest of another b: responsible charge or office c: CARE, CUSTODY <the child committed to her trust>.”
 [Merriam-Webster’s 11th Collegiate Dictionary]

20 C.F.R. §422.103(d) says the number is THEIR property. They can lien their property, which is public property in your temporary use and custody as a “trustee” of the “public trust”. Everything that number is connected to acts as private property donated temporarily to a public use to procure the “benefits” of the franchise. It is otherwise illegal to mix public property, such as the Social Security Number, with private property, because that would constitute illegal and criminal embezzlement in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.

1 "Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;'
 2 and to 'secure,' not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a
 3 man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it
 4 to his neighbor's injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor's benefit; second, that 5 if he devotes it to a public use, he gives to the public a right to control that
 6 USE; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take it upon payment of due 7 compensation.
 8 Budd v. People of State of New York, [143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

9 Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the practical effect of creating the trust and placing its "residence" or 10 "domicile" within the jurisdiction of the specific government or "state" granting the franchise:

11 "Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit
 12 or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth
 13 Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally
 14 reciprocal duties [e.g. CONTRACTUAL DUTIES!!] of protection by the state and of allegiance and support
 15 by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a
 16 political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of 17 the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
 18 Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

19 The implication is that you cannot be sovereign if either you or the entities you voluntarily represent have a "domicile" or 20 "residence" in any man-made government or in any place other than Heaven or the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth. If you
 21 choose a "domicile" or "residence" any place on earth, then you become a "subject" in relation to that place and voluntarily
 22 forfeit your sovereignty. This is NOT the status you want to have! A "resident" by definition MUST therefore be within the 23 legislative jurisdiction of the government, because the government cannot lawfully write laws that will allow them to 24 recognize or act upon anything that is NOT within their legislative jurisdiction.

25 All law is prima facie territorial in nature, and can act only upon the territory under the exclusive control of the government
 26 or upon its franchises, contracts, and real and chattel property, which are "property" under its management and control
 27 pursuant to Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. The only lawful way that government laws can 28 reach beyond the territory of the sovereign who controls them is through explicit, informed, mutual consent of the individual
 29 parties involved, and this field of law is called "private law".

30 "Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
 31 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
 32 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
 33 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
 34 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a
 35 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon
 36 the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and
 37 upon its own express or tacit consent.' Story on Conflict of Laws §23."

39 4.12 Citizenship Generally

40 Citizenship is something that very few Americans fully understand. We'll therefore devote the next twelve subsections to 41 covering this most important subject. The Supreme Court has said about citizenship the following, to emphasize the 42 importance of learning about this most important subject:

43 "Nobody can deny that the question of citizenship in a nation is of the most vital importance. It is a precious 44 heritage, as well as an inestimable acquisition;"
 45 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

46 Before we begin, let us clarify some important aspects about citizenship in general, whether it be state or federal. First of all,
 47 statutory citizenship results directly from a combination of two coinciding and interacting factors: domicile and intent. In 48 order to legally be a statutory "citizen", we must simultaneously be domiciled within the jurisdiction of a political body and
 49 do so with the specific intent of becoming a statutory "citizen" of that political body. Here is how one early federal court
 50 describes it:

51 "The fourteenth amendment does not make a resident in a state a citizen of such state, unless he intends, by 52 residence therein, to become a citizen."

1           “‘Citizenship’ and ‘residence,’ as has often been declared by the courts, are not convertible terms. Parker v.
 2 Overman 18 How. 141; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 648; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co., 109 U.S. 283; S.C.
 3 3 Sup.Ct.Rep. 207; Prentiss v. Barton, 1 Brock. 389. Citizenship is a status or condition, and is the result of 4 both act and intent. An adult person cannot become a citizen of a state by simply intending to, nor does anyone
 5 become such citizen by mere residence. The residence and the intent must co-exist and correspond; and
 6 though, under ordinary circumstances, the former may be sufficient evidence of the latter, it is not conclusive,
 7 and the contrary may always be shown; and when the question of citizenship turns on the intention with
 8 which a person has resided in a particular state, his own testimony, under ordinary circumstances, is entitled
 9 to great weight on the point.

10           [...]

11           “But, certainly, it was not the intention of the [Fourteenth] amendment to make any citizen of the United States
 12 a citizen of any particular state against his will, in which the exigencies of his business, his social relations or 13 obligations, or other cause, might require his presence for a greater or less length of time, without any intention
 14 on his part to become such citizen.

15           “The better opinion seems to be that a citizen of the United States is, under the amendment, prima facie a citizen
 16 of the state wherein he resides, and cannot arbitrarily be excluded therefrom by such state, but that he does not
 17 become a citizen of the state against his will, and contrary to his purpose and intention to retain an already
 18 acquired citizenship elsewhere. The amendment is a restraining on the power of the state, but not on the right of 19 the person to choose and maintain his citizenship or domicile; but it protects him in the exercise of that right by 20 *making him a citizen of that state in which he may choose to reside with such intention. In Robertson v. Cease,*
 21 97 U.S. 648, the court held that, for the purpose of giving the jurisdiction to the circuit court, an allegation that
 22 a party is a resident of a particular state is not equivalent to an allegation that he is a citizen thereof, for the
 23 reason, as suggested by Mr. Justice Harlan, that, even under the amendment, mere residence in a state does not
 24 necessarily or conclusively prove one to be a citizen thereof. And if an allegation of residence in a state is not
 25 necessarily, even under the amendment, the equivalent of an allegation of citizenship, then the mere fact of 26 residence in a state is not necessarily the equivalent of citizenship.”
 27           [Sharon v. Hill, 26 F. 337 (1885), Emphasis added]

28           The most important aspect of the citizenship equation above is intent, which is synonymous with consent, and the reason
 29 there must be intent is because citizenship must result from a voluntary and free choice. There is a lot of needless contention
 30 in the freedom movement revolving around a misunderstanding of this fundamental issue of the voluntary nature of 31 citizenship. People in the freedom movement argue all the time about being “subject to the jurisdiction of the United States”
 32 and how the Fourteenth Amendment forced them to become “citizens of the United States” as defined in section 1 of the 33 Fourteenth Amendment. This is all hogwash if you ask us, because in America, you are entitled by law to acquire and
 34 maintain whatever citizenship status you choose as an adult and can voluntarily renounce whatever aspects of your citizenship
 35 that you don’t want without the consent of your government, as long as you properly notify them of your choice with the 36 appropriate forms and correspondence.<sup>164</sup> This isn’t true in many other countries such as England, where subjects of the 37 Queen cannot renounce their British citizenship, but it is true here. The bottom line is that in America, you can be whatever
 38 type of citizen you choose so it’s meaningless to argue that the government forced you to do anything or invaded your rights.
 39 The ability to choose one’s citizenship status, as a matter of fact, is the essence of what it means to live in a free country. The 40 only basis that people have to complain in the context of citizenship is usually that their relative ignorance about citizenship
 41 issues has eliminated choices that they thought they were entitled to by right, and we have no one to blame but ourselves for 42 that problem.

43           Citizenship cannot be compelled and cannot be either accepted or expatriated under duress, because it amounts to a voluntary
 44 personal commitment of allegiance to a political body called a “state”. Those who are minors or mentally incompetent are
 45 technically unable to legally make such an informed and voluntary choice to have allegiance. Consequently, the citizenship
 46 of minors who are traveling with their parents or family is legally “presumed” to be the same as that of their parents. However,
 47 one important exception to this rule is that for the purposes of federal diversity jurisdiction, citizenship and domicile are 48 equivalent:

 50           [Hendry v. Masonite Corp., 455 F.2d. 955 (1972)]

51           Based on what we just learned, if we simply live somewhere but do not intend to be a “citizen” or a “resident”, then we are
 52 considered to be an “foreigner” or sometimes an “alien” where we are living and a “citizen” in the state we “intend” to live.
 53 For instance, if we are citizens of California but not a “citizen of the United States**” and then we take temporary employment

1 in Arizona but intend to remain California citizens, then we are “aliens” in Arizona and “citizens” in California so far as our
2 state citizenship. Understanding this critical distinction will become important in later sections.

3 After reading about the “federal zone” and the terms “United States” v. “United States of America” in the last few sections,
4 you may be a little confused. You may, for instance, now be saying to yourself:

5 “This is all just a little crazy. How can there be two jurisdictions within a single federal government? How can 6 these two distinct jurisdictions have their own types of citizenship?”

7 The fact is, even most of the legal profession doesn't know or fully understand this simple truth. There are those who do
8 understand this, for as you will come to see and realize, this is part of the scheme to trick us into accepting federal regulation,
9 which in turn gives them federal jurisdiction over us in the courts. This causes us to be outside the protection of our
10 Constitutional Rights and destroys the separation of powers between the States and the federal government that our founding
11 fathers put there for the protection of our liberties.

12 First, we must look at the legal facts of the matter. So, let us take a moment to review the Constitution. For a legally acceptable
13 copy please refer to the back of Black's Law Dictionary (6th addition) (available at your local library or courthouse law 14 library and sold at most bookstores).

15 Note the capitalization of the term Citizen all the way through the Constitution and the first thirteen Amendments. Thereafter
16 (from the Fourteenth Amendment on), it is shown in lower case only. Why? Some people explain this by saying that the 17 former is a sovereign American of the several States (“We the People...”) with Unalienable Rights granted to us by our Creator
18 and protected by the Constitution, while the latter is a Federal citizen of the United States with legislative Immunities and 19 Privileges only (No Rights). We do not agree with this assessment, however, because the term “United States” is not redefined
20 in the Fourteenth or subsequent amendments to mean something different.

21 Our federal government knows and understands this difference and so should we. Again, refer to Black's Law Dictionary,
22 Sixth Edition, for the definition of the Fourteenth Amendment:

23 *“The Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1868, creates or at least
24 recognizes for the first time a citizenship of the United States, as distinct from that of the states; forbids the making
25 or enforcement by any state of any law abridging the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States;
26 and secures all “persons” against any state action which results in either deprivation of life, liberty, or property
27 without due process of law....”
28 [Underlines added]*

29 Some people believe that the Fourteenth Amendment created a new and inferior status of citizenship (that of the federal 30 United States) but this is simply untrue, as you will learn by reading the following subsections. In fact, people born in states
31 of the Union are and always were “citizens of the United States***” under the Constitution and the Fourteenth Amendment
32 because of the following very significant consideration that most freedom fighters overlook:

33 *The term “United States” in the Constitution means the states of the Union collectively and excludes the federal 34 zone whereas “United States” in federal statutes and “acts of Congress”, including the Internal Revenue Code,
35 means the federal zone and excludes the states of the Union in most cases.”*

36 Most of the confusion that people have over their citizenship status derives very simply from a difference in meaning between 37 the term “United States” in the Constitution and “United States” in federal statutes. These two contexts have completely
38 different and opposing meanings. The context is so very important and is most often overlooked. This ignorance of the law
39 leads the freedom community to many irrational and unwarranted conclusions that have made it the deserving object of 40 ridicule and defeat in courts, the media, and political communities for decades. We must eliminate this ignorance and 41 confusion and demonstrate unity of purpose and understanding if we are to make any headway in the future to restore our 42 society to its de jure Constitutional foundation.

43 The implications of the confusion over the term “United States” appearing in the Constitution and federal statutes leads people
44 to false and very damaging conclusions, such as the following, none of which are true:

- 45 1. If a person is a “citizen of the United States” under section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, then they must also be a 46 “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under the Internal Revenue Code. In fact, these two types of 47 citizens are completely different and opposite, even though they have the same name.

- 1 2. If a person lives in a state of the Union, then they reside in the “United States” under the Internal Revenue Code and 2 under Title 8 of the U.S. Code.
- 3 3. Those people who are born outside the “United States” under federal statutes are “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
 4 This is simply not true. They are “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)(2) because “United States” means the District
 5 of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), and 8
 6 C.F.R. §215.1.

7 Note: It is significant that the word “persons” is in quotations. You will come to notice that they use the word “person” in all
 8 government (local, state and federal) applications and other documents to insinuate a living being, when in fact they are
 9 referring to a legislative, statutory entity, a “citizen of the United States”, a “federal citizen”, to be precise. It does not refer
 10 to a Sovereign American of any one of the several States. We should all remember this, because it is everywhere and it is 11 the difference between your Rights and Freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution and those Legislative Privileges under 12 Statute Laws, which are merely private contracts we are being coerced into with the government.

13 While the United States has no direct authority over a Sovereign American, neither does a state of the Union have authority
 14 over a “U.S. citizen” as defined in the federal statutes. This in part explains the difference in the term “STATE of ILLINOIS”
 15 with respect to the term Illinois Republic. The former is also a corporate entity created under the Buck Act of 1940 and is a 16 possession of the United States. Meanwhile, the Illinois Republic is the Sovereign State, one amongst the several states.

17 When Cornwallis surrendered on Oct 17, 1781 at the end of the Revolutionary War, did he surrender to THE UNITED
 18 STATES? No, in fact he surrendered 13 times, to the regiment leaders of each of the states. In 1783, Benjamin Franklin went 19 to France. There, a treaty was signed by King George's representative, which came to be known as The Treaty of Paris. In it,
 20 King George relinquished his sovereignty and passed it to The 13 FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, THE PEOPLE
 21 AND THEIR POSTERITY, FOREVER! Independent from England, and Independent from each other. They were then, and 22 are now, Republics, technically NATIONS. I recently found a copy of the Treaty of Paris on the United States Congress web
 23 page of international treaties. It is STILL recognized by International Law!

24 The Articles of Confederation had been written and approved in June of 1776, One month before Thomas Jefferson wrote
 25 the Declaration of Independence. Here is how some have described the purpose of both the Articles of Confederation and 26 the Constitution which followed it:

27 "The idea of State sovereignty was to ensure that the federal government would be kept in a box. The power of 28 the United States was to be scattered to the four corners of the country, to ensure that no man would have enough
 29 power to be a tyrant."
 30 [Howard, Webmaster of Freedom Hall]

31 "The capital and leading object of the Constitution was to leave with the States all authorities which respected
 32 their citizens only, and to transfer to the United States those which respected citizens of foreign or other States,
 33 to make us several as to ourselves, but one as to all others"
 34 [Thomas Jefferson; Letter to Judge William Johnson, June 12, 1823]

35 The important thing to note about the Articles of Confederation is that the sovereign states were referred to collectively as 36 the “United States of America” while the federal government they created was referred to as the “United States”. The 37 sovereign states, however, subsequently deemed that the Articles of Confederation needed refinement, so they convened the 38 First Constitutional Convention. After the Constitution was written, 9 of the 13 states were required to ratify it. Eleven 39 ratified it in 1787, two did not until 1789.

40 In the Constitution, congress was GRANTED 17 specific powers having to do with the states. Things like lay and collect
 41 taxes, coin money, declare war, establish post offices, and regulate commerce. For some of these items, like COLLECT
 42 TAXES, there are very specific rules that congress MUST follow.

43 There was another power granted to the congress, having to do with the seat of government. The continental congress did
 44 not want the federal government located in a particular state, lest that state gain some advantage. So it was written, that a ten
 45 mile square area of land be the seat of government, which is what we call today, the District of Columbia.

46 Congress was granted EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY over this area. This meant that, for District of Columbia,
 47 congress was kind of like a city government. It could pass laws, speed limits or what have you, but these laws were not
 48 binding on ordinary Americans outside the District.

1 But something SINISTER happened..

2 In 1884 there had been a case dealing with citizenship. The Fourteenth amendment had been ratified, and said, in part: All
3 persons born or naturalized in the United States, AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF, are citizens of the 4 United States and of the state wherein they reside. The case was called Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884) and the court said:

5 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES
6 AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely
7 subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY SUBJECT..."
8 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

9 Got that? COMPLETELY SUBJECT! What does "completely subject" mean? It means subject to the POLITICAL and not
10 LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction:

11 "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the United States is to be in no respect or degree subject
12 to the political jurisdiction of any other government."
13 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

14 As we said in section 4.5, in 1901 there was a case that came up in front of the Supreme Court called Downes v. Bidwell, 182
15 U.S. 244 (1901). It was a case about exports from Puerto Rico, which was a territory, and part of the area congress had 16 exclusive legislative authority over. The Court said:

17 "CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE
18 to the areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE

20 [...]

21 "The idea prevails with some -- indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar -- that we have in this country
22 substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its
23 restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising
24 such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise."

25 Note that they are not talking here about Constitutional protections for the land, the Constitution protects PEOPLE! This 26 was confirmed by another case called Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945).

27 SO, IF YOU ARE DOMICILED IN THE FEDERAL "UNITED STATES**", OR ARE A STATUTORY "CITIZEN
28 OF THE "UNITED STATES**", THE CONSTITUTION AND BILL OF RIGHTS DO NOT APPLY TO YOU!

29 So I ask again... ARE YOU A "CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES"?

30 If you say YES(!)...you have THROWN YOUR BILL OF RIGHTS IN THE TOILET!!!

31 The answer most likely is NO! The Fourteenth Amendment says ... "and subject to the jurisdiction thereof". If they meant
32 the jurisdiction of the 50 Union states, it would have read "and subject to their jurisdiction" as the Thirteenth Amendment
33 says regarding slavery. The jurisdiction of the United States** has been held over and over by the courts to be the District
34 of Columbia, territories, enclaves, any area of land the Federal government "OWNS". The Federal government does not
35 "OWN" the 50 Union states, it was CREATED by these States! If you are a regular AMERICAN, born in one of the 50
36 Union states, you are a NATURAL BORN CITIZEN, a Citizen of the state you were born in and a national of the United 37 *States***, one of "We The People".*

38 3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States and subject to
39 United States jurisdiction

40 "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if
41 his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country
42 provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other
43 country."
44 [3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999)]

1 The 50 Union states ARE NOT TERRITORIES and the UNITED STATES IS NOT SOVEREIGN OVER THEM!! Why
 2 would anyone want to be a federal citizen anyway? Some people say they can't vote in a national election without being a
 3 U.S. citizen, but if they aren't paying income taxes, who cares if they have representation?

4 (If we elect people in our state to REPRESENT US in the federal government anyway!!)

5 "Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the SOVEREIGN, statutes employing that term are
 6 ordinarily construed to exclude it"

7 [U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600 (1941); U.S. v. General Motors, 2 F.R.D. 528; U.S. v. United Mine Workers, 330
 8 U.S. 258 (1947)]

 10 SOVEREIGN, AND ADMIT THAT STATUTORY LAW IS NOT BINDING ON THEM.

11 We have prepared a series of deposition questions that focus on citizenship for use in an administrative due process hearing
 12 or an IRS deposition. You can use this series of questions to reveal the truth to the IRS and defeat most of their bogus
 13 arguments. These questions are found at:

16 4.12.1 Introduction

17 The purpose of the following subsections relating to citizenship is to establish with evidence the following facts:

- 18 1. That deception is often times caused by abuse, misuse, and purposeful misapplication of “words of art” and failing to 19 distinguish the context in which such words are used on government forms and in legal proceedings.
- 20 2. That there are two different jurisdictions and contexts in which the word “citizen” can be applied: statutory v.
 21 constitutional.
- 22 3. That the government purposefully tries to deceive constitutional citizens into falsely identifying themselves through 23 willful abuse of “words of art” into declaring themselves as statutory citizens on government forms and in legal
 24 pleadings. This causes a surrender of all constitutional rights and operates to their extreme detriment by creating lifetime
 25 indentured financial servitude and surety in relation to the government. This occurs because a statutory citizen maintains 26 a domicile on federal territory, and the Bill of Rights does not apply on federal territory.

27 "CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the 28 areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE
 29 JURISDICTION"

30 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

- 31 4. That once you falsely or improperly declare your status as that of statutory citizen, you are also declaring your domicile 32 to be within the District of Columbia pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) and 26 U.S.C. §7408(d).
- 33 5. That 8 U.S.C. §1401 defines a statutory “citizen of the United States”, where “United States” means the federal zone and 34 excludes states of the Union.
- 35 6. That the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 defines a constitutional “citizen of the United States”, where “United States”
 36 means states of the Union and excludes the federal zone.
- 37 7. That the term “citizen of the United States” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 of the constitution is NOT 38 equivalent and mutually exclusive to the statutory “citizen of the United States” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. Another
 39 way of restating this is that you cannot simultaneously be a constitutional “citizen of the United States” (Fourteenth 40 Amendment) and a statutory “citizen of the United States” (8 U.S.C. §1401).

 42 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states.*
 43 No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act
 44 of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. *It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States<sup>[***]</sup> except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States<sup>[*]</sup>, were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.*

 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

8. That the term “U.S. citizen” as used on federal and state forms means a statutory “citizen of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
9. That a human being born within and domiciled within a state of the Union and not within a federal territory or possession is:
- 9.1. A Fourteenth Amendment section 1 constitutional “citizen of the United States”.

*“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States<sup>[***]</sup>.’”*
 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

- 9.2. A “national” but not a “citizen” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) in respect to the federal government.
- 9.3. Not a statutory “citizen of the United States” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401.
10. That a person born within and domiciled within a state of the Union is a non-resident non-person and a “foreign sovereign” and part of a “foreign state” with respect to the United States Government. If they are engaged in a public office, they instead are a “nonresident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B).
11. That the federal government uses the exceptions to the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act found in 28 U.S.C. §1605(a)(2) to turn “nonresident aliens” into “resident aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) . It does this by offering commercial benefits to persons outside its jurisdiction and thereby making them “residents”.
12. That our government has a financial interest to deceive us about our true citizenship status in order to:
- 12.1. Encourage and expand the flow of unlawfully collected income tax revenues (commerce).
- 12.2. Expand its jurisdiction and control over the populace.
13. That the purpose of deliberate government deceptions about citizenship is to destroy the separation of powers between the states and the federal government that is the foundation of the Constitution of the United States of America and to destroy the protections of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. It does this by:
- 13.1. Using “social insurance” as a form of commerce that makes Americans into “resident aliens” of the District of Columbia, which is what “United States” is defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) .
- 13.2. Misleading Americans into falsely declaring their status on government forms as that of a “U.S. citizen”, and thereby losing their status as a “foreign state” under the provisions of 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3).
14. That if you are a concerned American, you cannot let this fraud continue and must act to remedy this situation immediately by taking some of the steps below.

If, after reading this document, you decide that you want to do something positive with the information you read here to improve your life and restore your sovereignty, the following options are available:

1. If you want to take an activist role in fighting this fraud, see:
2. If you want to contact the government to correct all their records describing your citizenship and tax status in order to remove all the false information about your status that you have submitted to them in the past, you may use the following excellent form for this purpose:

4.12.2 Sovereignty

Sovereignty is the status fought for and won by our forefathers from the British Empire, and has since become the birthright of all Natural Born Americans, and via our Constitution, we extend this status to foreign-born persons as well through our naturalization laws.

The term Sovereign is defined in Webster's Dictionary as:

"sovereign. 1. a: one possessing or held to possess sovereignty b: one that exercises supreme authority within a limited sphere c: an acknowledged leader: ARBITER ""
[Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 1128]

In Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, the word "Sovereign" is defined as

"Sovereign. A person, body, or state in which independent and supreme authority is vested; a chief ruler with supreme power; a king or other ruler in a monarchy."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1395]

At the time of the Revolution, the King of England was the sovereign and the people within the Colonies were his subjects. After the colonies won the war with Britain, the people wanted a different status, which did not call for them to serve any man, King or body government:

"The sovereignty has been transferred from one man to the collective body of the people - and he who before was a 'subject of the king' is now 'a citizen of the State.'"

There is a movement within our country by persons who are reclaiming the sovereignty that is rightfully inherent in the people of this land. By definition, as sovereigns, we are free to be and do anything we want. At first glance this seem to imply that the sovereign is free of all social and moral constraints. Without qualification this could lead to what might be termed Sovereign Immunity Syndrome, i.e., a condition whereby one believes he/she is the only sovereign and therefore is above the law, as opposed to a sovereign who is surrounded by a whole world of other sovereigns, each having been endowed with the same unalienable rights.

Common Law has two major governing precepts. First, as a sovereign one is free to be and do anything he/she pleases as long as whatever is done does not injure another sovereign in his/her person, character or property; and second, that the sovereign honor all contracts and agreements that were entered into knowingly, voluntarily and willingly. Here is the way one spirited Libertarian party member described this responsibility of those who are "sovereign":

"Your freedom to use your fist ends where my nose begins."

To have freedom as a sovereign requires ultimate personal responsibility. Because one becomes aware of his/her sovereignty does not grant license to ride rough shod over whoever gets in the way or whoever doesn't have the same awareness of his/her sovereignty. The genuine sovereign will give respect to all other sovereigns, even those who may not be currently aware that they are sovereign. There is no asking permission to be sovereign. If you were born and are a real flesh and blood human, you are sovereign. That does not however guarantee that the sovereignty potential has been actualized. There is a Latin term

1 in law, res ipsa loquitur, which means the thing speaks for itself. If one is truly living as a sovereign, it will speak for itself.
2 Unfortunately, in our land the vast majority are sovereigns who have yet to realize and actualize their potential.

3 Prior to the statutory maze that now curses the citizenry of this land we were subject to the law of the land. The United States,
4 by way of the Constitution, adopted the Common Laws of England. Caldwell v. Hill, 176 S.E. 383 (1934). The Law of the 5 Land means the Common Law Taylor v. Porter, (4 Hill) 140, 146, State v. Simon, (2 Spears) 761, 767.

6 The Constitution was adopted and made by people in their capacity as Sovereigns. They described themselves as “We the 7 People” in the document, and they capitalized all references to their name. Sovereigns are always capitalized within written
8 law. The words “We the People”, “Person”, and “Citizen” are all capitalized throughout the Constitution of the United States.
9 Therefore, as a whole, the United States emanates from the people and the laws and constitutions of the several states are 10 subordinate to the Constitution of the United States and the laws made pursuant to it.

11 The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They
12 both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who
13 hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 14 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
15 [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]
16

17 "Here [in America] sovereignty rests with the People."
18 [Chisholm v. Georgia, (2 Dall) 415, 472]
19

20 "To the Constitution of the United States the term SOVEREIGN is totally unknown. There is but one place where 21 it could have been used with propriety. But, even in that place it would not, perhaps, have comported with the 22 delicacy of those who ordained and established that Constitution. They might have announced themselves
23 'SOVEREIGN' people of the United States. But serenely conscious of the fact, they avoided the ostentatious
24 declaration."
25 [Chisholm v. Georgia, (2 Dall) 440, 455]

26 Thus, the People themselves, both singly or collectively, are sovereign, supra at 456, over both the State and the federal 27 government and are the true SOVEREIGNS within our society.

28 "It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal 29 government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their 30 respective states."
31 [Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

32 "The people of the state, as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly 33 belonged to the king by his own prerogative."
34 [Lansing v. Smith, (1829) 4 Wendell 9, (NY)]

35 The Privileges and Immunities of a Citizen of a state of the Union are completely different than those of a "citizen of the 36 United States", see K. Tashiro v Jordan, 201 Cal. 236, 246, 256 p. 545 (1927). The United States Supreme Court in National 37 City Bank v. Republic of China, 348 U.S. 356, 99 L.Ed. 389, 75 S.Ct. 423 (1955) stated at page 363:

38 "(a) The Court of Claims is available to foreign nationals (or their governments)..."

39 The Executive Branch's agency, the Internal Revenue Service, has also recognized this by stating in the Internal Revenue
40 Manual (I.R.M.), Section 35.18.10.1 that those who are “nationals” and therefore “nonresident aliens” and who wish to sue
41 the government for violations of the tax code MUST do so only in the Court of Claims and cannot file suit in Federal District
42 Court:

43 Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 35.18.10.1 (08-31-1982) District Courts

44 Section 1402(a)(1) of the Judicial Code (28 U.S.C. §1402(a)(1)) provides that if an action is brought against the 45 United States under section 1346(a) of the Judicial Code by an entity other than a corporation, it must be brought 46 in the judicial district where the plaintiff resides. Accordingly, where an individual resides outside of the [federal]
47 *United States (e.g., a nonresident alien), he or she may not bring a refund suit in a district court. *Malajalian v.
48 United States, 504 F.2d. 842 (1st Cir. 1974). These cases may be brought only in the Court of Claims.

1 This premise is based on the legal maxim that Sovereigns enjoy judicial immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities
2 Act (F.S.I.A.) and that no enforceable right exists against the Sovereign [the people] who makes the laws:

3 *"A sovereign is exempt from suit, not because of any formal conception or obsolete theory, but on the logical
4 and practical ground that there can be no legal right as against the authority that makes the law on which the 5 right depends."*

6 [Kawananakoa v. Polybank, 205 U.S. 349, 353]

7 It is undisputable that the Citizens of the several states United granted limited powers to the federal government, because the
8 people are vested with complete sovereignty. The Constitution of each state created the state, and the federal Constitution
9 created the federal government. The creation, which is the government so formed, cannot be greater than the Creator, which 10 is the sovereign People. State and federal governments, through the IRS or state revenue agencies, cannot destroy or 11 embarrass the sovereign people, whether it be their property, by takings, or their credit ratings, by manufacturing false debts
12 without legal authority. Only by voluntary consent and no enforcement authority whatsoever may they proceed against the 13 Sovereign People, or they proceed unlawfully and commit a tort.

14 "The great principle is this: because the constitution will not permit a state to destroy, it will not permit a law 15 involving the power to destroy."

16 [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514 (1830)]

17 Those who are truly "sovereign" cannot be the subject of any federal statute or "act of Congress" and in fact, their rights can't 18 even be defined or circumscribed by any law. The main purpose of law is to protect people's rights by controlling and limiting 19 and defining the delegated authority of public servants. Laws keep our "public servants" inside a box, but do not regulate or 20 control the People, who are their Masters. To even define rights is to limit them. Furthermore, all federal statutes that apply
21 to these public servants only have jurisdiction inside the federal zone anyway by default. Recall from our earlier discussion
22 that the federal zone is not covered by the Bill of Rights, so Congress had to write federal laws as a substitute for the Bill Of 23 Rights within the federal zone only. We should always remember who those laws exclusively apply to: those domiciled in 24 the federal zone, federal instrumentalities, public officers, and federal statutory "employees". This isn't you, my friend!
25 Laws control, and sovereigns can't be controlled, because according to the Supreme Court as stated above in Yick Wo v.
26 Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886), sovereignty is the source of law, not the object of it.

27 *"When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles on which they are 28 supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not 29 mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power. Sovereignty itself is, of 30 course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are 31 delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom
32 all government exists and acts. And the law is the definition and limitation of power. It is, indeed, quite true
33 that there must always be lodged somewhere, and in some person or body, the authority of final decision; and in 34 many cases of mere administration, the responsibility is purely political, no appeal lying except to the ultimate
35 tribunal of the public judgment, exercised either in the pressure of opinion, or by means of the suffrage. But the 36 fundamental rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, considered as individual possessions, are secured
37 by those maxims of constitutional law which are the monuments showing the victorious progress of the race in 38 securing to men the blessings of civilization under the reign of just and equal laws, so that, in the famous language
39 of the Massachusetts bill of rights, the government of the commonwealth 'may be a government of laws and not
40 of men.' For the very idea that one man may be compelled to hold his life, or the means of living, or any material
41 right essential to the enjoyment of life, at the mere will of another, seems to be intolerable in any country where 42 freedom prevails, as being the essence of slavery itself."*

43 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886)]

44 Remember who wrote the Constitution: "We the People". The Constitution is law, and you are a part of the group of sovereign
45 people it was written by and for: We the People.

46 *"And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom 47 under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and 48 sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial 49 agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The 50 Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible.
51 'We the People of the United States,' it says, 'do ordain and establish this Constitution.' Ordain and establish!
52 These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character
53 of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided
54 explicitly-'This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; ...
55 shall be the supreme Law of the Land.' (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus 56 declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is 57 not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal,*

1 clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required
 2 to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must
 3 apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat- [298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever the two conflict. In 4 the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great
 5 weight, Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the 6 court's opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry.
 8 [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

9 You are a Sovereign. The constitution excludes you from federal jurisdiction in all but a very few minor cases and protects
 10 your rights with the Bill of Rights. As you will learn later in section 4.12.12 et seq, this condition of "sovereign immunity"
 11 is exactly a condition of citizenship called "national" or "state national", which is defined in section 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
 12 The rights and privileges of "nationals" are nowhere limited in title 8 of the U.S. Code, and this is definitely no accident.
 13 Nowhere in the U.S. Code are duties or liabilities imposed upon "nationals" because they are sovereign. Do a search of the 14 U.S. Code for the word "national of the United States" and verify this for yourself if you like. The method for becoming a
 15 "national" and a "nonresident alien" under federal law as a person born outside of federal jurisdiction (the "United States" in 16 federal law) and in a state of the Union is nowhere described in federal law and this is no accident. These people are NOT
 17 subject to federal law or federal jurisdiction! That is what makes them sovereign to begin with. The only way a sovereign 18 can ever lose his or her sovereignty is one of the following four methods:

- 19 1. By injuring the equal rights of another sovereign, thereby forfeiting their own rights in the process, which then subjects
- 20 them to criminal and civil liability only towards the person they injured, and not towards the government.
- 21 2. By electing as a "nonresident alien" to be treated as an "alien" subject to federal jurisdiction, who is called a "resident"
- 22 within the Internal Revenue Code. This election is done under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g).
- 23 3. By misrepresenting our status to the government, and claiming to be "U.S. citizens" or "resident" on a government form,
- 24 both of which do not describe those born in states of the Union. Under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.),
- 25 28 U.S.C. §§1602-1611, "U.S. citizens" are exempted from being classified as "foreign sovereigns" and enjoying the
- 26 benefits of sovereign immunity. See 28 U.S.C. §1603(b) and 28 U.S.C. §1332(c) and (d).
- 27 4. Signing or consenting verbally to any contract with the government that causes us to surrender our rights. For instance,
- 28 anyone who has or uses a Socialist Security Number is "presumed" to be a "U.S. citizen":

29 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(g\)

30 (g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons--(1) General rule--(i) Social security
 31 number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue
 32 Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different
 33 status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such
 34 procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue
 35 Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service
 36 will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

37 The last three methods of losing our sovereignty above are usually done because of ignorance or stupidity. The first one is 38 accomplished through malice and violation of God's Holy laws. When we violate God's laws, our punishment is an eye for 39 an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, just as the Bible says. When you take away or violate other people's equal rights, you lose
 40 yours also. This loss of rights executed in the interests of public protection is the main source of most government jurisdiction
 41 over sovereigns. This approach, in fact, is the essence of equal protection of the laws that is the foundation of our system of 42 jurisprudence and of Jesus' "Golden Rule":

43 "Therefore, whatever you want men to do to you, do also to them, for this is the Law and the Prophets."
 44 [Jesus in Matt. 7:12, Bible, NKJV]

45 "But if any harm follows, then you shall give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, 46 burn for burn, wound for wound, stripe for stripe."
 47 [Exodus 21:23-25, Bible, NKJV]

48 When we injure the rights of a fellow sovereign, then we violate our contract or covenant with God Himself in the Bible to 49 love our neighbor. Those who love their neighbor don't hurt him. The essence of justice is not hurting our neighbor, and its 50 purpose is making sure we take responsibility when we do. See:

What Is "Justice"?, Form #05.050
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

This is a duty owed to God. Since our rights come from God and He protects them as the Divine judge, then we owe allegiance and have a personal duty to love and honor Him. As attorney Eduardo Rivera has said:

*"All rights come from duties."
[Dr. Eduardo Rivera]*

We restate the above by saying:

*"You can't own yourself until you agree to be COMPLETELY RESPONSIBLE for yourself. Ownership and responsibility ALWAYS go together. You aren't entitled to the 'benefits' of ownership until you are also willing to assume the DUTIES that produce those benefits."
[Family Guardian Fellowship]*

Therefore, don't foolishly go searching in federal statutes for a statute that limits or even defines your rights or duties as a Sovereign. The closest any federal statute can come is to give a name to your status. You don't need a federal statute to define your rights. The Bill of Rights and the Constitution afford all the definition necessary for your rights, and no vain statute (written by a covetous politician) is necessary to file a claim in any court for invasion of those rights by any government official. Remember? Your rights as a Sovereign don't come from any vain law passed by a bunch of greedy lawyers in the District of Columbia (Washington, D.C.) who sit around all day trying to invent new ways to steal more of your money. They come from God Himself!

"What right have you [in Congress, any judge in a federal court, or in any legislative body for that matter] to declare My [God's] statutes [write man's vain law], or take My covenant [the Bible] in your mouth, seeing you hate instruction and cast My words behind you? When you saw a thief [another politician or a greedy voter], you consented with him, and have been a partaker with adulterers. You give your mouth to evil, and your tongue frames deceit [in the tax code]. You [in the Department of Justice, see: <http://www.usdoj.gov/tax/TEN.htm>] sit and speak against your brother; you slander your own mother's son. These things you have done, and I kept silent; you thought that I was altogether like you; but I will reprove you, and set them in order before your eyes. Now consider this, you who forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver: Whoever offers praise glorifies Me; and to him who orders his conduct aright I will show the salvation of God."
[Psalm 50:16-23, Bible, NKJV]*

A true "sovereign" is immune from the jurisdiction of laws and courts. This immunity results mainly from any one of the following three factors:

1. Coming under the provisions of the "Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act" of 1976, codified in 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97 at: http://assembler.law.cornell.edu/uscode/html/uscode28/usc\_sup\_01\_28\_10\_IV\_20\_97.html
2. Diplomatic immunity found in 4 U.S.C. §112.
3. Being "foreign" to, or outside of the legislative and territorial and subject matter jurisdiction of the United States government.

A person who is a sovereign but doesn't know what his rights are and doesn't understand or read the law will quickly become a slave and a victim of shysters in the legal profession and be bilked of all of his property and wealth.

"A fool and his money are soon parted." [Benjamin Franklin]

That is why it is absolutely crucial for you to read and understand at least chapters 3 through 5 of this book: as protection for your rights:

*"Only the educated are free."
[Epicetus, Discourses]*

*"Knowledge will forever govern ignorance, and people who mean to be their own governors, must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives."
[James Madison]*

"...the greatest menace to freedom is an inert [passive, ignorant, and uneducated] people [who refuse, as jurists and voters and active citizens, to expose and punish evil in our government]"
Whitney v. California, [274 U.S. 357 (1927)]*

"The American people have always regarded education and acquisition of knowledge as matters of supreme importance which should be diligently promoted in order to maintain and protect their [liberty]. The Ordinance of 1787 declares: Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness [and liberty] of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged.

Meyer v. State of Nebraska, [262 U.S. 390 (1923)]

"And thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws of both [God and man], and shalt shew them the way wherein they must walk, and the work [of obedience to God] that they must do."
[Exodus 18:20, Bible, NKJV]

"My [God's] people are destroyed [and enslaved] for lack of knowledge [and the lack of education that produces it]."
[Hosea 4:6, Bible, NKJV]

4.12.3 "Statutory" v. "Constitutional" Citizens

STATUTORY citizenship is a CIVIL status that designates a person's domicile while CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship is a POLITICAL status that designates a person's nationality. Understanding the distinction between nationality and domicile is absolutely critical.

1. Nationality:

- 1.1. Is not necessarily consensual or discretionary. For instance, acquiring nationality by birth in a specific place was not a matter of choice whereas acquiring it by naturalization is.
- 1.2. Is a political status.
- 1.3. Is defined by the Constitution, which is a political document.
- 1.4. Is synonymous with being a "national" within statutory law.
- 1.5. Is associated with a specific COUNTRY.
- 1.6. Is called a "political citizen" or a "citizen of the United States in a political sense" by the courts to distinguish it from a STATUTORY citizen. See Powe v. United States, 109 F.2d. 147 (1940).

2. Domicile:

- 2.1. Always requires your consent and therefore is discretionary. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 2.2. Is a civil status.
- 2.3. Is not even addressed in the constitution.
- 2.4. Is defined by civil statutory law RATHER than the constitution.
- 2.5. Is in NO WAY connected with one's nationality.
- 2.6. Is usually connected with the word "person", "citizen", "resident", or "inhabitant" in statutory law.
- 2.7. Is associated with a specific COUNTY and a STATE rather than a COUNTRY.
- 2.8. Implies one is a "SUBJECT" of a SPECIFIC MUNICIPAL but not NATIONAL government.

Nationality and domicile, TOGETHER determine the political AND civil status of a human being. These important distinctions are recognized in Black's Law Dictionary:

"nationality – That quality or character which arises from the fact of a person's belonging to a nation or state. Nationality determines the political status of the individual, especially with reference to allegiance; while domicile determines his civil [statutory] status. Nationality arises either by birth or by naturalization."
[Black's Law Dictionary (6th ed. 1990), p. 1025]

President Barack Obama affirmed our assertions that there are TWO components to your citizenship status at the end of his State of the Union address given on 2/12/2013:

President Obama Recognizes separate POLITICAL and LEGAL components of citizenship, Exhibit #01.013
EXHIBITS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>
DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Exhibits/EX01.013.mp4>

The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed the above when they held the following. Note they key phrase "political jurisdiction", which is NOT the same as legislative/statutory jurisdiction. One can have a political status of "citizen" under the constitution while NOT being a "citizen" under federal statutory law because not domiciled on federal territory. To have the status of "citizen" under federal statutory law, one must have a domicile on federal territory:

1            “This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, -birth and naturalization. The
 2 persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the
 3 jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to
 4 the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the
 5 Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate
 6 allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time
 7 of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth
 8 cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the 9 naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
 10 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

11            “This right to protect persons having a domicile, though not native-born or naturalized citizens, rests on the firm
 12 foundation of justice, and the claim to be protected is earned by considerations which the protecting power is not
 13 at liberty to disregard. Such domiciled citizen pays the same price for his protection as native-born or naturalized
 14 citizens pay for theirs. He is under the bonds of allegiance to the country of his residence, and, if he breaks
 15 them, incurs the same penalties. He owes the same obedience to the civil laws. His property is, in the same
 16 way and to the same extent as theirs, liable to contribute to the support of the Government. In nearly all respects,
 17 his and their condition as to the duties and burdens of Government are undistinguishable.”
 18 Fong Yue Ting v. United States, [149 U.S. 698 (1893) ]

19 Notice in the last quote above that they referred to a foreign national born in another country as a “citizen”. THIS is the 20 “citizen” that judges and even tax withholding documents are really talking about, rather than the “national” described in the 21 constitution.

22 Domicile and NOT nationality is what imputes a status under the tax code and a liability for tax. Tax liability is a civil
 23 liability that attaches to civil statutory law, which in turn attaches to the person through their choice of domicile. When you
 24 CHOOSE a domicile, you elect or nominate a protector, which in turn gives rise to an obligation to pay for the civil protection
 25 demanded. The method of providing that protection is the civil laws of the municipal (as in COUNTY) jurisdiction that you 26 chose a domicile within.

27            “domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and 28 principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith,
 29 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's 30 home are the requisites of establishing a “domicile” therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place
 31 to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one
 32 residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual
 33 residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise
 34 the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”
 35 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

36 Later versions of Black's Law Dictionary attempt to cloud this important distinction between nationality and domicile in
 37 order to unlawfully and unconstitutionally expand federal power into the states of the Union and to give federal judges
 38 unnecessary and unwarranted discretion to kidnap people into their jurisdiction using false presumptions. They do this by 39 trying to make you believe that domicile and nationality are equivalent, when they are EMPHATICALLY NOT. Here is an 40 example:

41            “nationality – The relationship between a citizen of a nation and the nation itself, customarily involving
 42 allegiance by the citizen and protection by the state; membership in a nation. This term is often used 43 synonymously with citizenship.”
 44 [Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 2004)]

45 Federal courts regard the term “citizenship” as equivalent to domicile, meaning domicile on federal territory.

46            “The words “citizen” and citizenship,” however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L. & W.R.
 47 Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557.”
 48 [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 310]

49 Hence:

- 50 1. The term “citizenship” is being stealthily used by government officials as a magic word that allows them to hide their 51 presumptions about your status. Sometimes they use it to mean NATIONALITY, and sometimes they use it to mean
 52 DOMICILE.

2. The use of the word “citizenship” should therefore be AVOIDED when dealing with the government because its meaning is unclear and leaves too much discretion to judges and prosecutors.
3. When someone from any government uses the word “citizenship”, you should:
  - 3.1. Tell them NOT to use the word, and instead to use “nationality” or “domicile”.
  - 3.2. Ask them whether they mean “nationality” or “domicile”.
  - 3.3. Ask them WHICH political subdivision they imply a domicile within: federal territory or a constitutional state of the Union.

A failure to either understand or apply the above concepts can literally mean the difference between being a government pet in a legal cage called a franchise, and being a free and sovereign man or woman.

4.12.3.1 CONTEXT is EVERYTHING in the field of citizenship

Citizenship terms are defined by the CONTEXT in which they are used. There are TWO contexts: STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL.

Citizenship of the United States is defined by the Fourteenth Amendment and federal statutes, but the requirements for citizenship of a state generally depend not upon definition but the constitutional or statutory context in which the term is used. Risewick v. Davis, 19 Md. 82, 93 (1862); Halaby v. Board of Directors of University of Cincinnati, 162 Ohio St. 290, 293, 123 N.E.2d 3 (1954) and authorities therein cited.

The decisions illustrate the diversity of the term's usage. In Field v. Adreon, 7 Md. 209 (1854), our predecessors held that an unnaturalized foreigner, residing and doing business in this State, was a citizen of Maryland within the meaning of the attachment laws. The Court held that the absconding debtor was a citizen of the State for commercial or business purposes, although not necessarily for political purposes. Dorsey v. Kyle, 30 Md. 512, 518 (1869), is to the same effect. Judge Alvey, for the Court, said in that case, that 'the term citizen, used in the formula of the affidavit prescribed by the 4th section of the Article of the Code referred to, is to be taken as synonymous with inhabitant or permanent resident.'

*Other jurisdictions have equated residence with citizenship of the state for political and other non-commercial purposes. In re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443, 446 (1863), held that the Wisconsin statute designating 'all able-bodied, white, male citizens' as subject to enrollment in the militia included an unnaturalized citizen who was a resident of the state. 'Under our complex system of government,' the court said, 'there may be a citizen of a state, who is not a citizen of the United States in the full sense of the term.' McKenzie v. Murphy, 24 Ark. 155, 159 (1863), held that an alien, domiciled in the state for over ten years, was entitled to the homestead exemptions provided by the Arkansas statute to 'every free white citizen of this state, male or female, being a householder or head of a family * * *'. The court said: 'The word 'citizen' is often used in common conversation and writing, as meaning only an inhabitant, a resident of a town, state, or county, without any implication of political or civil privileges; and we think it is so used in our constitution.' Halaby v. Board of Directors of University, supra, involved the application of a statute which provided free university instruction to citizens of the municipality in which the university is located. The court held that the plaintiff, an alien minor whose parents were residents of and conducted a business in the city, was entitled to the benefits of that statute, saying: 'It is to be observed that the term, 'citizen,' is often used in legislation where 'domicile' is meant and where United States citizenship has no reasonable relationship to the subject matter and purpose of the legislation in question.'*

Closely in point to the interpretation of the constitutional provision here involved is a report of the Committee of Elections of the House of Representatives, made in 1823. A petitioner had objected to the right of a Delegate to retain his seat from what was then the Michigan Territory. One of the objections was that the Delegate had not resided in the Territory one year previous to the election in the status of a citizen of the United States. An act of Congress passed in 1819, 3 Stat. 483 provided that 'every free white male citizen of said Territory, above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided therein one year next preceding' an election shall be entitled to vote at such election for a delegate to Congress. An act of 1823, 3 Stat. 769 provided that all citizens of the United States having the qualifications set forth in the former act shall be eligible to any office in the Territory. The Committee held that the statutory requirement of citizenship of the Territory for a year before the election did not mean that the aspirant for office must also have been a United States citizen during that period. The report said: 'It is the person, the individual, the man, who is [221 A.2d 435] spoken of, and who is to possess the qualifications of residence, age, freedom, &c. at the time he offers to vote, or is to be voted for * * *'. Upon the filing of the report, and the submission of a resolution that the Delegate was entitled to his seat, the contestant of the Delegate's election withdrew his protest, and the sitting Delegate was confirmed. Biddle v. Richard, Clarke and Hall, Cases of Contested Elections in Congress (1834) 407, 410.

1 There is no express requirement in the Maryland Constitution that sheriffs be United States citizens. Voters must
 2 be, under Article I, Section 1, but Article IV, Section 44 does not require that sheriffs be voters. A person does
 3 not have to be a voter to be a citizen of either the United States or of a state, as in the case of native-born minors.
 4 In Maryland, from 1776 to 1802, the Constitution contained requirements of property ownership for the exercise
 5 of the franchise; there was no exception as to native-born citizens of the State. Steiner, Citizenship and Suffrage
 6 in Maryland (1895) 27, 31.

7 The Maryland Constitution provides that the Governor, Judges and the Attorney General shall be qualified voters,
 8 and therefore, by necessary implication, citizens of the United States. Article II, Section 5, Article IV, Section 2,
 9 and Article V, Section 4. The absence of a similar requirement as to the qualifications of sheriffs is significant.
 10 So also, in our opinion, is the absence of any period of residence for a sheriff except that he shall have been a
 11 citizen of the State for five years. The Governor, Judges and Attorney General in addition to being citizens of the 12 State and qualified voters, must have been a resident of the State for various periods. The conjunction of the
 13 requisite period of residence with state citizenship in the qualifications for sheriff strongly indicates that, as in
 14 the authorities above referred to, state citizenship, as used in the constitutional qualifications for this office, was
 15 meant to be synonymous with domicile, and that citizenship of the United States is not required, even by
 16 implication, as a qualification for this office. The office of sheriff, under our Constitution, is ministerial in nature;
 17 a sheriff's function and province is to execute duties prescribed by law. See Buckeye Dev. Crop. v. Brown &
 18 Schilling, Inc., Md., 220 A.2d. 922, filed June 23, 1966 and the concurring opinion of Le Grand, C. J. in Mayor
 19 & City Council of Baltimore v. State, ex rel. Bd. of Police, 15 Md. 376, 470, 488-490 (1860).

20 It may well be that the phrase, 'a citizen of the State,' as used in the constitutional provisions as to qualifications,
 21 implies that a sheriff cannot owe allegiance to another nation. By the naturalization act of 1779, the Legislature
 22 provided that, to become a citizen of Maryland, an alien must swear allegiance to the State. The oath or
 23 affirmation provided that the applicant renounced allegiance 'to any king or prince, or any other State or
 24 Government.' Act of July, 1779, Ch. VI; Steiner, op. cit. 15. In this case, on the admitted facts, there can be no
 25 question of the appellant's undivided allegiance.

26 The court below rested its decision on its conclusion that, under the Fourteenth Amendment, no state may confer
 27 state citizenship upon a resident alien until such resident alien becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States.
 28 The court relied, as does not Board in this appeal, upon City of Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 F. 576, 581 (8th Cir.
 29 1893). In that case, an alien resident of Minnesota, who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the
 30 United States but had not been naturalized, brought a suit, based on diversity of citizenship, against the city in
 31 the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota under Article III, Section 2 of the United States
 32 Constitution which provides that the federal judicial power shall extend to 'Controversies between * * * a State,
 33 or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.' At the close of the evidence, the defendant moved
 34 to dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction, on the [221 A.2d 436] ground that the evidence failed to establish
 35 the allegation that the plaintiff was an alien. The court denied the motion, the plaintiff recovered judgment, and
 36 the defendant claimed error in the ruling on jurisdiction. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. Judge Sanborn,
 37 for the court, stated that even though the plaintiff were a citizen of the state, that fact could not enlarge or restrict
 38 the jurisdiction of the federal courts over controversies between aliens and citizens of the state. The court said:
 39 'It is not in the power of a state to denationalize a foreign subject who has not complied with the federal
 40 naturalization laws, and constitute him a citizen of the United States or of a state, so as to deprive the federal
 41 courts of jurisdiction * * *.'

42 Reum dealt only with the question of jurisdiction of federal courts under the diversity of citizenship clause of the
 43 federal Constitution. That a state cannot affect that jurisdiction by granting state citizenship to an unnaturalized
 44 alien does not mean it cannot make an alien a state citizen for other purposes. Under the Fourteenth Amendment
 45 all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens of the United States and of the state in which they
 46 reside, but we find nothing in Reum of any other case which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen
 47 of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdictions is involved. As the authorities referred to in 48 the first portion of this opinion evidence, the law is to the contrary.

49 Absent any unconstitutional discrimination, a state has the right to extend qualification for state office to its
 50 citizens, even though they are not citizens of the United States. This, we have found, is what Maryland has done
 51 in fixing the constitutional qualifications for the office of sheriff. The appellant meets the qualifications which our 52 Constitution provides.

53 [Crosse v. Board of Sup'rs of Elections of Baltimore City, 221 A.2d. 431, 243 Md. 555 (Md., 1966) ]

54 4.12.3.2 Comparison of STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen" with CONSTITUTIONAL "U.S.*** citizen" on the 55 subject of voting

56 In the Jones Act of 1917, also known as the Organic Act of 1917, Congress extended U.S. citizenship to persons
 57 then living in Puerto Rico, and to persons born in Puerto Rico thereafter. See Jones Act, 39 Stat. 951 (1917). For 58 voting rights, however, the status of a U.S. citizen living in the U.S. territory of Puerto Rico is not identical to 59 that of a U.S. citizen living in a State. Article IV of the Constitution empowers Congress "to dispose of and make 60 all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory... belonging to the United States." U.S. Const. art. 4, 61 §3. In the Insular Cases, decided in 1901,2 and in a series of subsequent decisions, the Supreme Court has 62 held that because territories such as Puerto Rico belong to the United States but are not "incorporated into the United States as a body politic," Dorr v. United States, 195 U.S. 138, 143 (1904); see also Balzac v. People of Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298, 304-05 (1922). Congress's regulation of the territories under Article IV is not "subject to all the restrictions which are imposed upon [Congress] when passing laws for the United States," Dorr, 195 U.S. at 142; see also Jose A. Cabranes, Citizenship and the American Empire 45-51 (1979); Juan R. Torruella, The Supreme Court and Puerto Rico: The Doctrine of Separate and Unequal 40 -74 (1985). Congress's power in the territories is not unlimited; territorial regulations must comport with those basic principles "so fundamental [in] nature" that they form "the basis of all free government." Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 291 (1901) (White, J., concurring). But such principles Page 123 of fundamental justice do not incorporate all the mandates of the Bill of Rights. See Balzac, 258 U.S. at 304-05; Dorr, 195 U.S. at 149; Territory of Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U.S. 197, 211, 217-18 (1903).

Citizens living in Puerto Rico, like all U.S. citizens living in U.S. territories, possess more limited voting rights than U.S. citizens living in a State. Puerto Rico does not elect voting representatives to the U.S. Congress. It is represented in the House of Representatives by a Resident Commissioner who is "entitled to receive official recognition... by all of the departments of the Government of the United States," but who is not granted full voting rights. See 48 U.S.C. §891; see also Juan R. Torruella, Hacia Donde vas Puerto Rico?, 107 Yale L.J. 1503, 1519-20 & n.105 (1998) (reviewing Jose Trias Monge, Puerto Rico: The Trials of the Oldest Colony in the World (1997)). In addition, citizens residing in Puerto Rico do not vote for the President and Vice President of the United States. Indeed, the Constitution does not directly confer on any citizens the right to vote in a presidential election. Article II, section 1 provides instead that "[e]ach state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors," whose function is to select the President. The Constitution thus confers the right to vote in presidential elections on electors designated by the States, not on individual citizens. See Bush v. Gore, 121 S.Ct. 525, 529 (2000). Accordingly, no U.S. citizen, whether residing in a State or territory or elsewhere, has an expressly declared constitutional right to vote for electors in presidential elections. See McPherson v. Blacker, 146 U.S. 1, 25 (1892) ("The clause under consideration does not read that the people or the citizens shall appoint, but that 'each state shall....'"). Despite the fact that the Constitution confers the power to appoint electors on States rather than on individual citizens, most U.S. citizens have a limited, constitutionally enforceable right to vote in presidential elections as those elections are currently configured. The States have uniformly exercised their Article II authority by delegating the power to appoint presidential (and vice-presidential) electors to U.S. citizens residing in the State to be exercised in democratic elections. In so delegating the power to appoint electors, States are barred under the Constitution from delegating that power in any way that "violates other specific provisions of the Constitution." Williams v. Rhodes, 393 U.S. 23, 29 (1968); see also Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780, 794-95 n.18 (1983). U.S. citizens who are residents of Puerto Rico and the other U.S. territories have not received similar rights to vote for presidential electors because the process set out in Article II for the appointment of electors is limited to "States" and does not include territories. U.S. territories (including Puerto Rico) are not States, and therefore those Courts of Appeals that have decided the issue have all held that the absence of presidential and vice-presidential voting rights for U.S. citizens living in U.S. territories does not violate the Constitution. See Igartua de la Rosa v. United States, 32 F.3d. 8, 9-10 (1st Cir. 1994) (per curiam) ("Igartua I"); Attorney General of the Territory of Guam v. United States, 738 F.2d. 1017, 1019 (9th Cir. 1984) ("Since Guam... is not a state, it can have no electors, and plaintiffs cannot exercise individual votes in a presidential election."); see also Igartua de la Rosa v. United States, 229 F.3d. 80, 83-85 Page 124 (1st Cir. 2000) (per curiam) ("Igartua II") (reaffirming the holding of Igartua I).

The question we face here is a slightly different one -- not whether Puerto Ricans have a constitutional right to vote for the President, but rather whether Equal Protection is violated by the UOCAVA, in that it provides presidential voting rights to former residents of States residing outside the United States but not to former residents of States residing in Puerto Rico. Like the First Circuit, we answer this question in the negative. See Igartua I, 32 F.3d. at 10-11. Plaintiff contends that because of the distinctions it draws among various categories of U.S. citizens, the UOCAVA is subject to strict scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause. Defendants argue in response that application of strict scrutiny is inappropriate, and that the application of strict scrutiny is precluded by the Supreme Court's decision in Harris v. Rosario, 446 U.S. 651, 651-52 (1980) (per curiam) (holding that under Article IV, section 3, Congress "may treat Puerto Rico differently from States so long as there is a rational basis for its actions"); see also Califano v. Gautier Torres, 435 U.S. 1, 3 n.4 (1978) (per curiam) (suggesting that "Congress has the power to treat Puerto Rico differently and that every federal program does not have to be extended to it"). But see Lopez Lopez v. Aran, 844 F.2d. 898, 913 (1st Cir. 1988) (Torruella, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part).

Given the deference owed to Congress in making "all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory" of the United States, U.S. Const. art. IV §3, we conclude that the UOCAVA's distinction between former residents of States now living outside the United States and former residents of States now living in the U.S. territories is not subject to strict scrutiny. As then-Judge Ginsburg observed in Quiban v. Veterans Administration, 928 F.2d. 1154, 1160 (D.C. Cir. 1991), "[t]o require the government... to meet the most exacting standard of review... would be inconsistent with Congress's '[l]arge powers' [under Article IV] to 'make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory... belonging to the United States.'" Id. (citations omitted). We need not decide, however, the precise standard governing the limits of Congress's authority to confer voting rights in federal elections on former residents of States now living outside the United States while not conferring such rights on former residents of States now living in a U.S. Territory. For we conclude that regardless whether this distinction is appropriately analyzed under rational basis review or intermediate scrutiny, or under some alternative analytic framework independent of the three-tier standard that has been established in Equal Protection cases, see Gautier Torres, 435 U.S. at 3 n.4 ("Puerto Rico has a relationship with the United States 'that has no parallel in our history.'" (quoting Examining Bd. v. Flores de Otero, 426 U.S. 572, 596 (1976))),

1 Congress may distinguish between those U.S. citizens formerly residing in a State who live outside the U.S., and
 2 those who live in the U.S. territories. The distinction drawn by the UOCAVA between U.S. citizens moving from
 3 a State to a foreign country and U.S. citizens moving from a State to a U.S. territory is supported by strong
 4 considerations, and the statute is well tailored to serve these considerations. For one thing, citizens who move
 5 outside the United States, many of whom are United States military service personnel, might be completely
 6 excluded from participating in the election of governmental officials in the United States but for the UOCAVA.
 7 In contrast, citizens of a State who move to Puerto Rico may vote in local elections for officials of Puerto Rico's
 8 government (as well as for the federal post of Resident Commissioner). In this regard, it is significant to note that
 9 in excluding citizens who move from a State to Puerto Rico from the statute's benefits, the UOCAVA treats them
 10 in the same manner as it treats citizens of a State who leave that State to establish residence in another State.
 11 Had Romeu left New York to become a resident of Florida, he would similarly not have been permitted to exercise
 12 the right created by the UOCAVA to vote in the federal elections conducted in New York. And if a citizen of Puerto
 13 Rico took up residence outside the United States, the UOCAVA would entitle that citizen to continue, despite her
 14 foreign residence, to participate in Puerto Rico's elections for the federal office of Resident Commissioner.
 15 Congress thus extended voting rights in the prior place of residence to those U.S. citizens who by reason of their
 16 move outside the United States would otherwise have lacked any U.S. voting rights, without similarly extending
 17 such rights to U.S. citizens who, having moved to another political subdivision of the United States, possess voting
 18 rights in their new place of residence. See McDonald v. Board of Election Comm'rs, 394 U.S. 802, 807, 809
 19 (1969) (upholding absentee voting statutes that were "designed to make voting more available to some groups
 20 who cannot easily get to the polls," without making voting more available to all such groups, on the ground that 21 legislatures may "take reform 'one step at a time'" (quoting Williamson v. Lee Optical of Oklahoma, Inc., 348
 22 U.S. 483, 489 (1955)); see also Bush v. Gore, 121 S.Ct. 525, 550 (2000) (Ginsburg, J., dissenting) (531 U.S. at 23 ---, 121 S.Ct. at 539) (citing and quoting McDonald and Williamson); Katzenbach v. Morgan, 384 U.S. 641, 657
 24 (1966) (applying to voting rights reform legislation the rule that "a statute is not invalid under the Constitution
 25 because it might have gone farther than it did" (internal quotation marks omitted)). Moreover, if the UOCAVA
 26 had done what plaintiff contends it should have done - namely, extended the vote in federal elections to U.S.
 27 citizens formerly citizens of a State now residing in Puerto Rico while not extending it to U.S. citizens residing in
 28 Puerto Rico who have never resided in a State - the UOCAVA would have created a distinction of questionable
 29 fairness among Puerto Rican U.S. citizens, some of whom would be able to vote for President and others not,
 30 depending whether they had previously resided in a State. The arguable unfairness and potential divisiveness of 31 this distinction might be exacerbated by the fact that access to the vote might effectively turn on wealth. Puerto
 32 Rican voters who could establish a residence for a time in a State would retain the right to vote for the President
 33 after their return to Puerto Rico, while Puerto Rican voters who could not arrange to reside for a time in a State
 34 would be permanently excluded. In sum, the considerations underlying the UOCAVA's distinction are not
 35 insubstantial. As a result, we hold that Congress acted in accordance with the requirements of the Equal
 36 Protection Clause in requiring States and territories to extend voting rights in federal elections to former resident
 37 citizens residing outside the United States, but not to former resident citizens residing in either a State or a 38 territory of the United States.

40 Note that the court admits above that when administering territories, the source of Constitutional authority derives from 41 Article IV of the constitution rather than Article III.

42 In the Insular Cases, decided in 1901,2 and in a series of subsequent decisions, the Supreme Court has held that 43 because territories such as Puerto Rico belong to the United States but are not "incorporated into the United 44 States as a body politic," Dorr v. United States, 195 U.S. 138, 143 (1904); see also Balzac v. People of Porto
 45 Rico, 258 U.S. 298, 304-05 (1922), Congress's regulation of the territories under Article IV is not "subject to 46 all the restrictions which are imposed upon [Congress] when passing laws for the United States," Dorr, 195
 47 U.S. at 142; see also Jose A. Cabranes, Citizenship and the American Empire 45-51 (1979); Juan R. Torruella, 48 The Supreme Court and Puerto Rico: The Doctrine of Separate and Unequal 40 -74 (1985).

49 Article IV deals with the community property of the states of the Union held in trust for, and on behalf, of that Union by the 50 national government. Territorial federal district courts in these areas derive ALL of their authority from Article IV, not
 51 Article III. This is also confirmed by examining 28 U.S.C. Chapter 5 legislative notes
 52 (<https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/28/part-I/chapter-5>). The creation of a district court MUST identify the 53 constitutional source of its authority. If it mentions NO constitutional source, then the only possible source is Article IV.
 54 The ONLY district court which EXPRESSLY invokes Article III of the constitution is the district court of Hawaii. ALL of 55 the other district courts are Article IV ONLY:

56 Pub. L. 86-3, § 9(a), Mar. 18, 1959, 73 Stat. 8, provided that:

57 "The United States District Court for the District of Hawaii established by and existing under title 28 of the 58 United States Code shall thenceforth be a court of the United States with judicial power derived from article III,
 59 section 1, of the Constitution of the United States; Provided, however, That the terms of office of the district
 60 judges for the district of Hawaii then in office shall terminate upon the effective date of this section and the 61 President, pursuant to sections 133 and 134 of title 28, United States Code, as amended by this Act, shall appoint,
 62 by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, two district judges for the said district who shall hold office
 63 during good behavior."

This subject is VERY important. An entire encyclopedic coverage this subject appears in the following:

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
<https://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm>

The above document concludes that nearly all district courts are operating in an Article IV capacity, and as such, may preside only over cases involving government property found within the exterior limits of their district. If the case does NOT involve property in their district, then the court has not jurisdiction. Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 also concludes that all franchises consist of LOANS of government property. Hence, these courts are setup to administer such franchises executed ONLY on federal territory subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress. If you are NOT a franchisee or you are not standing on federal territory WHILE executing the office of franchisee, then they can have NO territorial or in personam jurisdiction.

“The Constitution permits Congress to dispose of and to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States. This power applies as well to territory belonging to the United States within the States, as beyond them. It comprehends all the public domain, wherever it may be. The argument is, that the power to make ‘ALL needful rules and regulations’ ‘is a power of legislation,’ ‘a full legislative power;’ ‘that it includes all subjects of legislation in the territory,’ and is without any limitations, except the positive prohibitions which affect all the powers of Congress. Congress may then regulate or prohibit slavery upon the public domain within the new States, and such a prohibition would permanently affect the capacity of a slave, whose master might carry him to it. And why not? Because no power has been conferred on Congress. This is a conclusion universally admitted. But the power to ‘make rules and regulations respecting the territory’ is not restrained by State lines, nor are there any constitutional prohibitions upon its exercise in the domain of the United States within the States; and whatever rules and regulations respecting territory Congress may constitutionally make are supreme, and are not dependent on the situs of ‘the territory.’”
 [Dred Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. 393, 509-510 (1856)]

HOWEVER, the License Tax Cases establishes that the national government MAY NOT establish any taxable franchises within the borders of a constitutional state:

“Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize a trade or business within a State in order to tax it.”
 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

SO, those engaging in such NATIONAL franchises must be physically located on federal territory within the borders of the district in order to be subject to the jurisdiction of nearly all federal district courts. Thus, even if one IS a STATUTORY “national and citizen of the United States[**]” franchisee under 8 U.S.C. §1401, the federal district courts would only have jurisdiction over acts committed within exclusive federal jurisdiction within the exterior limits of the district and affecting people and property there. It would NOT apply to anything happening in the exclusive jurisdiction of a state of the Union, excepting possibly infractions of state officers against their constitutional rights under the Fourteenth Amendment an 28 U.S.C. §1983 and actions against foreigners and nonresidents in foreign countries.

Any deviation from the jurisdictional rules in this section constitutes criminal identity theft, as described in:

4.12.3.3 How STATUTORY “citizens” convert to CONSTITUTIONAL “citizens”

A STATUTORY “citizen” from a territory or possession such as Puerto Rico or Guam is NOT equivalent to a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen. In fact, those from federal territory are considered “foreigners” in relation to states of the Union:

“Constitutionally, only those born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens. Const.Amdt. XIV. The power to fix and determine the rules of naturalization is vested in the Congress. Const.Art. I, sec. 8, cl. 4. Since all persons born outside of the [CONSTITUTIONAL] United States, are “foreigners,”[1] and not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, the statutes, such as § 1993 and 8 U.S.C.A. §601 [currently 8 U.S.C. §1401], derive their validity from the naturalization power of the Congress. Elk v. Wilkins, 1884, 112 U.S. 94, 101, 5 S.Ct. 41, 28 L.Ed. 643; Wong Kim Ark v. U. S., 1898, 169 U.S. 649, 702, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890. Persons in whom citizenship is vested by such statutes are naturalized citizens and not native-born citizens. Zimmer v. Acheson, 10 Cir. 1951, 191 F.2d. 209, 211; Wong Kim Ark v. U. S., supra.”
[Ly Shew v. Acheson, 110 F.Supp. 50 (N.D. Cal., 1953)]

FOOTNOTES:

[1] See Boyd v. State of Nebraska ex rel. Thayer, 1892, 143 U.S. 135, 12 S.Ct. 375, 36 L.Ed. 103; U.S. v. Harbanuk, 2 Cir. 1933, 62 F.2d. 759, 761.

Notice the language “Since all persons born outside of the [CONSTITUTIONAL] United States[***], are ‘foreigners’”. STATUTORY “citizens” or STATUTORY “nationals” born on federal territory are “foreign” and “alien” in relation to a CONSTITUTIONAL state. The same thing applies to Indians living on reservations.

The above case doesn’t say this, but the reverse is ALSO true: Those born in CONSTITUTIONAL states are “foreign” and therefore “alien” in relation to STATUTORY “States” and federal territory. That’s where the idea comes from to call state nationals “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) in relation to a tax that only applies on federal territory within the STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL “United States” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d). THIS is the DEEP DARK secret that federal courts ruling on tax enforcement in states of the Union POSTIVELY REFUSE to discuss because if they did, it would blow up the ENTIRE tax system. This subject is what Tip Oneill called “The Third Rail of Politics”. The “Third Rail of Politics” deal with subjects that will either get you fired, reduce your pay, or impede your ability to get promoted. It applies to judges just as readily as politicians, even though judges are not supposed to act in a political capacity. It will be like pulling hens teeth to get them to talk about this subject:

Third rail of politics

The third rail of a nation's politics is a metaphor for any issue so controversial that it is "charged" and "untouchable" to the extent that any politician or public official who dares to broach the subject will invariably suffer politically.

It is most commonly used in North America. Though commonly attributed to Tip O'Neill,<sup>[1]</sup> Speaker of the United States House of Representatives during the Reagan presidency, it seems to have been coined by O'Neill aide Kirk O'Donnell in 1982 in reference to Social Security.<sup>[2]</sup>

The metaphor comes from the high-voltage third rail in some electric railway systems. Stepping on this usually results in electrocution, and the use of the term in politics relates to the risk of "political death" that a politician would face by tackling certain issues.

Below is an example proving that STATUTORY “nationals” can be CONSTITUTIONAL “aliens”, where the petitioner was a Filipino citizen and a STATUTORY “national of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). Even then, they identified him as an “alien”:

The petitioner urges finally that the requirement of "entry" is implicit in the 1931 Act. Citing Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698, he argues that the bounds of the power to deport aliens are circumscribed by the bounds of the power to exclude them, and that the power to exclude extends only to "foreigners" and does not embrace Filipinos admitted from the Islands when they were a territory of the United States. It is true that Filipinos were not excludable from the country under any general statute relating to the exclusion of "aliens." See Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U.S. 1, 12-13; Toyota v. United States, 268 U.S. 402, 411.

But the fallacy in the petitioner's argument is the erroneous assumption that Congress was without power to legislate the exclusion of Filipinos in the same manner as "foreigners." This Court has held that ". . . the power to acquire territory by treaty implies not only the power to govern such territory, but to prescribe upon what terms the United States will receive its inhabitants, and what their status shall be . . . ." Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 279.<sup>[2]</sup> Congress not only had, but exercised, ~~433~~<sup>433</sup> the power to exclude Filipinos in the provision of § 8 (a) (1) of the Independence Act, which, for the period from 1934 to 1946, provided:

"For the purposes of the Immigration Act of 1917, the Immigration Act of 1924 (except section 13 (c)), this section, and all other laws of the United States relating to the immigration, exclusion, or expulsion of aliens, citizens of the Philippine Islands who are not citizens of the United States shall be considered as if they were aliens. For such purposes the Philippine Islands shall be considered as a separate country and shall have for each fiscal year a quota of fifty. . . ." 48 Stat. 462, 48 U.S. C. (1934 ed.) § 1238.

The 1931 Act plainly covers the situation of the petitioner, who was an alien, and who was convicted of a federal narcotics offense. Cf. United States ex rel. Eichenlaub v. Shaughnessy, 338 U.S. 521. We therefore conclude that the petitioner was deportable as an alien under that Act. The judgment is Affirmed."

MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS, dissenting.

No matter how the case is viewed, the 1931 Act is applicable only to aliens who had made an "entry" in this country.

This Filipino came to the United States in 1930 and he has never left here. If the spirit of the 1931 Act is to be observed, he should not be lumped with all other "aliens" who made an "entry." The Filipino alien, who came here while he was a national, stands in a class by himself and should remain there, until and unless Congress extends these harsh deportation measures to his class.

Rabang v. Boyd, 353 U.S. 427 (1957); SOURCE: [https://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=9072441037225227210]

The Filipino referenced above was both an “alien” and a “national” at the same time! How can this be? The answer is that each word applies to a different context. He was a CONSTITUTIONAL alien and a STATUTORY “national” at the SAME TIME. He was alien to states of the Union (United States***) but still a member of the NATION United States*.

The naturalization they are talking about above in Ly Shew v. Acheson, 110 F.Supp. 50 (N.D. Cal., 1953) in the context of territories and possessions is STATUTORY naturalization rather than CONSTITUTIONAL naturalization when it is done to people in a territory or possession that REMAINS a territory or possession and not a CONSTITUTIONAL state. On the other hand, when or if that territory becomes a CONSTITUTIONAL state, these same territorial STATUTORY “citizens” must AGAIN be collectively naturalized, but this time it is a CONSTITUTIONAL naturalization rather than a STATUTORY naturalization. When states join the Union under the Constitution, they convert from territories to CONSTITUTIONAL States and the people in them are CONSTITUTIONALLY naturalized by act of congress, and that naturalization is the equivalent of that found in 8 U.S.C. §1421. Here is the proof from the Boyd case footnoted from in Ly Shew above:

It is too late at this day to question the plenary power of Congress over the Territories. As observed by Mr. Justice Matthews, delivering the opinion of the court in Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U.S. 15, 44: "It rests with Congress to say whether, in a given case, any of the people, resident in the ~~170~~<sup>170</sup> Territory, shall participate in the election of its officers, or the making of its laws; and it may, therefore, take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it as it may deem expedient. The right of local self-government, as known to our system as a constitutional franchise, belongs, under the Constitution, to the States and to the people thereof, by whom that Constitution was ordained, and to whom by its terms all power not conferred by it upon the government of the United States was expressly reserved. The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the Territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty which restrain all the agencies of government, state and national; their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States... If we concede that this discretion in Congress is limited by the obvious purposes for which it was conferred, and that those purposes are satisfied by measures which prepare the people of the Territories to become States in the Union, still the conclusion cannot be avoided, that the act of Congress here in question is clearly within that justification."

Congress having the power to deal with the people of the Territories in view of the future States to be formed from them, there can be no doubt that in the admission of a State a collective naturalization may be effected in accordance with the intention of Congress and the people applying for admission.

Admission on an equal footing with the original States, in all respects whatever, involves equality of constitutional right and power, which cannot thereafter be controlled [by STATUTES of congress], and it also involves the adoption as citizens of the United States of those whom Congress makes members of the political community, and who are recognized as such in the formation of the new State with the consent of Congress.

They don't say this either, but if a CONSTITUTIONAL state leaves the Union as they did in the civil war, its citizens become foreign nationals. If that state is then recaptured through armed force as it was in the Civil War, the state becomes a territory and the citizens revert back to being privileged territorial citizens until the state votes to rejoin the Union.

The following aspect of the above case was later overruled in Downes v. Bidwell, where they concluded that the Constitution DOES NOT by default apply in federal territory and only applies in constitutional states, and that Congress must expressly extend its application to a specific territory in order for it to apply:

"The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the Territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty which restrain all the agencies of government, state and national;"

To summarize what we have learned in this section from examining the relationship between territories and states of the Union:

1. Possessions and Territories are listed in Title 48 of the U.S. Code.
2. Federal territories are STATUTORY "States" under 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and under most acts of Congress.
3. There are no territories left. Puerto Rico used to be a territory but subsequently became a possession.
4. CONSTITUTIONAL states of the Union are foreign and alien in relation to STATUTORY "States".
5. CONSTITUTIONAL citizens or nationals are aliens in relation to federal territories and possessions, which is the area that the income tax is limited to.
6. A STATUTORY "non-citizen national of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1408 from a possession is an ALIEN within a constitutional state and can be deported if he commits crimes. Rabang v. Boyd, 353 U.S. 427 (1957). An example of such a possession is American Samoa or Swain's Island. The Philippines also used to be a possession but was later emancipated.
7. STATUTORY "national" status is a revocable privilege and franchise granted legislatively by Congress and originating from the naturalization powers of Congress. See Form #05.006, Section 6.8.
8. STATUTORY "national" status is a component of being EITHER a STATUTORY "citizen" or a STATUTORY "non-citizen national of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1408.
9. When a possession is granted independence, it's inhabitants convert from "non-citizen nationals of the United States**" to BOTH STATUTORY aliens and CONSTITUTIONAL aliens in relation to the national government.
10. STATUTORY "nationals and citizens of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are much more complicated than all the others.
  - 10.1. An example of such a party is someone born in Puerto Rico.
  - 10.2. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U.S. 1 (1904) that such parties are NOT CONSTITUTIONAL "aliens", but did so not by looking at whether they were CONSTITUTIONAL "nationals", but whether Congress made them CONSTITUTIONAL "aliens" or not. Therefore, CONSTITUTIONAL "nationals" and STATUTORY "nationals" are NOT synonymous and their relationship is defined by statute, and not organic law. By default, at least, we can say that they are foreign and alien in relation to each other, but Congress can alter that by statute.

Counsel for the Government contends that the test of Gonzales' rights was citizenship of the United States and not alienage. We do not think so, and, on the contrary, are of opinion that if Gonzales were not an alien within the act of 1891, the order below was erroneous.

Conceding to counsel that the general terms "alien," "citizen," "subject," are not absolutely inclusive, or completely comprehensive, and that, therefore, neither of the numerous definitions of the term "alien" is necessarily controlling, we, nevertheless, cannot concede, in view of the language of the treaty and of the act of April 12, 1900, that the word "alien," as used in the act of 1891, embraces the citizens of Porto Rico.

We are not required to discuss the power of Congress in the premises; or the contention of Gonzales' counsel that the cession of Porto Rico accomplished the naturalization of its people; or that of Commissioner Degetau, in his excellent argument as amicus curiae, that a citizen of Porto Rico, under the act of 1900, is necessarily a citizen of the United States. The question is the narrow one whether Gonzales was an alien within the meaning of that term as used in the act of 1891.

10.3. In most cases, as in the present, those from Puerto Rico are NOT designated as CONSTITUTIONAL aliens, but that condition is NOT a result of their STATUTORY citizenship. As such, they are treated as being neither STATUTORY “aliens” nor “CONSTITUTIONAL “aliens” and cannot therefore be deported if they are physically in a CONSTITUTIONAL state and commit a crime.

11. In order to convert from a STATUTORY “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to a CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen” under the Fourteenth Amendment, one must be naturalized under the authority of 8 U.S.C. §1421 and Constitution Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4.
12. When territories become states, Congress “collectively naturalizes” everyone in the territory by legislative act to convert them from STATUTORY “citizens” to CONSTITUTIONAL “citizens”. This converts the citizenship from a STATUTORY privilege to a CONSTITUTIONAL right.
13. The “citizens” and “residents” mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code and are STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL. Hence, states of the Union are FOREIGN and ALIEN in relation to these people. See section 4.12.3.10 later.

Lastly, if you would like an excellent history of the extraterritorial application of the protections of the Constitution outside of CONSTITUTIONAL states of the Union, we highly recommend the following case. The case doesn’t, however, discuss the extraterritorial reach of the Fourteenth Amendment to territories, unfortunately:

4.12.3.4 LEGAL/STATUTORY CIVIL status v. POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL Status

The following cite from U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark confirms our research on citizenship, by admitting that there are TWO components that determine citizenship status: NATIONALITY and DOMICILE.

In Udry v. Udry (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States, began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy—must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural allegiance,—may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.

 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ;
 SOURCE: http://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=3381955771263111765]

So:

1. The Constitution is a POLITICAL and not a LEGAL document. It therefore determines your POLITICAL status rather than your LEGAL/STATUTORY status.
2. Nationality determines your POLITICAL STATUS and whether you are a "subject" of the country.
3. DOMICILE determines your CIVIL and LEGAL and STATUTORY status. It DOES NOT determine your POLITICAL status or nationality.
4. Being a constitutional "citizen" per the Fourteenth Amendment is associated with nationality, not domicile.
5. Allegiance is associated with nationality, not domicile. Allegiance is what makes one a "subject" of a country.
6. Your municipal rights, meaning statutory CIVIL rights, associate with your choice of legal domicile, not your nationality or what country you are a subject of or have allegiance to.
7. Being a statutory "citizen" is associated with domicile, not nationality, because it is associated with being an inhabitant RATHER than a "subject".
8. A statutory "alien" under most acts of Congress is a person with a foreign DOMICILE, not a foreign NATIONALITY. By "foreign", we mean:
  - 8.1. Constitutional context: OUTSIDE of COUNTRY United States*.
  - 8.2. Statutory context: OUTSIDE of federal territory and the exclusive federal jurisdiction, and NOT outside the Constitutional United States*** (states of the Union).

The above is also completely consistent with the following article on this website:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

We know that "nationality" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship are NOT the same. So, much like the "Chicken and the Egg" analogy -- what happens first, nationality or 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship? Or does that occur simultaneously? It might at first appear from the analysis in this pamphlet that 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship also applies to inhabitants of unincorporated and unorganized territory, but as pointed out by the court in Wong Kim Ark, supra., the domicile determines civil status, thus 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship on U.S. Territory is inferior to that of 14th Amendment Constitutional citizenship on the Union -- but only by virtue of domicile. Change domicile and improve/denigrate your legal status either for the better or worse, as the case may be.

"Nationality" therefore cannot be the same thing as Constitutional citizenship, because citizens of American Samoa and Swains Island are not Constitutional Citizens according to the courts, yet they have the following statuses:

1. Political Status:
  - 1.1. "national" of the United States* - 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
  - 1.2. "national of the United States**" – 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
  - 1.3. "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).
2. Civil Status: "national but not citizen of the United States** at birth" - 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452.

So it must be concluded that nationality and Constitutional (e.g. Fourteenth Amendment) citizenship are NOT the same.

From the above article and the Supreme Court's own analysis above, it follows that that a "national of the United States***" (state citizen) cannot be a "citizen" or "resident" under federal statutory law without one of the following two conditions existing:

1. You are physically present on federal territory AT SOME POINT, AND legally domiciled there. This means the government as moving party has the burden of proving that you submitted a form indicating a "permanent address" in the statutory but not constitutional "United States", and that YOU MEANT that the "United States" indicated meant

1 federal territory not within any state of the Union. This is impossible if you attach the following to every government
2 form that you sign:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 3 2. You are representing a government entity that is domiciled on federal territory, such as a federal and not state
4 corporation, as a public officer, for instance. Hence, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) MUST apply. BUT they
5 must produce evidence that you are lawfully occupying said public office and may not PRESUME that you do. Simply
6 citing a provision of the I.R.C. and thereby claiming the "benefits" of that franchise, for instance, is insufficient to 7 CREATE said office. It must be created by some OTHER means because the I.R.C. doesn't authorize the CREATION
8 of any new public offices, but regulates EXISTING public offices.

9 There is NO OTHER WAY for federal law from a legislatively foreign jurisdiction to be applied against a state citizen
10 domiciled within a constitutional and not statutory state. Option 2 is the method most frequently used to legally but not 11 physically KIDNAP most people and move their legal identity to federal territory.

12 4.12.3.5 Supreme Court definition of "Constitutional citizen"

14 *"Under our own systems of polity, the term 'citizen', implying the same or similar relations to the government and
15 to society which appertain to the term, 'subject' in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used
16 is designed to apply to man in his individual character and to his natural capacities -- to a being or agent
17 [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social, political, and moral
18 obligations. It is in this acceptation only, therefore, that the term 'citizen', in the article of the Constitution,
19 can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies
20 between 'citizens' of different states. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate
21 communities, and can by no violence of interpretation be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical,
22 and invisible creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind,
23 invisible and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a state, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms
24 or the power of the above mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of 25 the United States."*

26 *"Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is
27 it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment, for it is not liable to corporeal penalties -- that it can
28 perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be
29 arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be
30 excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of
31 the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a
32 corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and
33 endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from
34 the decisions of the cases of Bank of the United States v. Deveaux and of Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad
35 Company v. Letson afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled
36 principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply founded experience; they are 37 therefore ever consentaneous and in harmony with themselves and with reason, and whenever abandoned as 38 guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering uncertainty and confusion. Conducted
39 by these principles, consecrated both by time and the obedience of sages, I am brought to the following
40 conclusions:*

41 *1st. That by no sound or reasonable interpretation, can a corporation -- a mere faculty in law, be transformed
42 into a citizen or treated as a [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizen.*

43 *2d. That the second section of the Third Article of the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States
44 with jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different states, cannot be made to embrace controversies
45 to which corporations and not citizens are parties, and that the assumption by those courts of jurisdiction in 46 such cases must involve a palpable infraction of the article and section just referred to.*

47 *3d. That in the cause before us, the party defendant in the circuit court having been a corporation aggregate
48 created by the State of New Jersey, the circuit court could not properly take cognizance thereof, and therefore 49 this cause should be remanded to the circuit court with directions that it be dismissed for the want of 50 jurisdiction."*

51 [Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Company, 55 U.S. 80, 99 (1852) from dissenting opinion by Justice Daniel]

52 In the above ruling, what we call a "statutory citizen" is referenced and described as:

- 53 1. Artificial

- 1 2. Incorporal.
- 2 3. Theoretical.
- 3 4. Invisible creation.
- 4 5. A mere creature of the mind (meaning a creation of CONGRESS).
- 5 6. Invisible and intangible.

6 Note also that even a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and therefore human being above is referred to as:

7 “. . . a being or agent [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social,
 8 political, and moral obligations”.
 9 [Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Company, 55 U.S. 80, 99 (1852) from dissenting opinion by Justice Daniel]

10 The “social, political, and moral” obligations spoken of above, IN FACT, can ONLY ATTACH to a government office
 11 exercising agency on behalf the government franchise grantor called “citizen”. Otherwise, they would represent a THEFT
 12 of otherwise PRIVATE property under the Fifth Amendment. That office is created by the act of choosing a civil domicile
 13 within a constitutional state. That is why the Fourteenth Amendment says “All persons born or naturalized in the United 14 States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.” To 15 “reside” has been held by the courts to imply a domicile rather than merely physical presence in the state.<sup>165</sup> Without such a
 16 choice of domicile, the office is NOT created and its obligations CANNOT lawfully be enforced in any civil court of law.

17 4.12.3.6 Statutory citizen/resident status is entirely voluntary and discretionary. Constitutional citizen status is
 18 NOT

19 An important distinction that needs to be understood by the reader is that no one can force you to acquire or retain statutory 20 “national and citizen of the United States” civil status. That status is entirely voluntary and discretionary. That is one of the 21 conclusions of the following pamphlet.

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

22 Why? Because the LEGAL status you use to describe yourself is how you:

- 23 1. Contract with other parties, including the government. The purpose of establishing government, in fact, is to protect 24 your right to both CONTRACT and NOT CONTRACT as you see fit. You don’t become a “person” under a private 25 contract until you SIGN or consent in some way to the contract or agreement.
- 26 2. Politically and legally associate with groups you choose to associate with. The right of freedom of association and 27 freedom from COMPELLED association is protected by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.
- 28 3. Choose or nominate the civil government that you want to protect your right to life, liberty, and property.
- 29 3.1. Choosing a domicile is an act of political association that has legal consequences in which you nominate a 30 specific municipal government to protect your rights and property.
- 31 3.2. If you never nominate such a government, then you retain the right to protect yourself and are not entitled to the 32 protection of a specific municipal government protector.

33 This is why the Declaration of Independence says that all just powers of government are derived from the consent of 34 the people. Those who don’t consent can’t be civilly governed. Yes, they are still liable for criminal infractions
 35 because the criminal laws do not require consent. Civil laws, however DO require consent of the governed, and all 36 such civil laws attach to and associate with your choice of legal domicile.

37 Domicile is how you exercise right numbers 2 and 3 above. You can’t be a statutory citizen without CHOOSING and 38 CONSENTING TO a civil domicile in the federal zone. You get to decide where your domicile is and you can change it at 39 ANY TIME! If you don’t want to be a statutory citizen under federal law, change your domicile to a state of the Union and 40 correctly reflect that fact on government forms and correspondence.

41 The legal definition of “citizen” confirms that the status is voluntary. Notice the phrase “in their associated capacity”, which 42 is a First Amendment, voluntary act of political association. What the government doesn’t want you to know is WHAT status

*citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[***], or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.*

"Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

The "full civil rights" they are talking about above are enforced through municipal CIVIL law, which in turn can only attach to one's choice of legal domicile. Here is how the courts describe this process of volunteering to become a statutory "citizen":

"The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole, and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignty of the United States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one passes counterfeit coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both. The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction."
[United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]

If the status is voluntary, then there MUST be some way to "un-volunteer", right? How is it that the "citizen" CANNOT complain? Because if he DIDN'T voluntarily submit himself to a specific state or national government by choosing a civil domicile within that specific government and thereby become subject to the civil laws of that place, he wouldn't call himself a statutory "citizen" under the civil law to begin with! Instead, he would call himself or herself any of the following terms in relation to that specific government and on all government forms he or she fills out. This is the HUGE secret that no one in the government or the courts want to talk about, in fact and will HIDE at every opportunity, because it renders them COMPLETELY powerless to govern you civilly.

- 1 "nonresident"
- 2 "transient foreigner"
- 3 "stateless person"
- 4 "in transitu"
- 5 "transient"
- 6 "sojourner"

The state courts recognize that calling oneself a "U.S. citizen" is voluntary and hence, that you can instead refer to yourself as simply a "non-resident non-person" so as to avoid being confused with a statutory citizen as follows:

"[W]e find nothing...which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdiction is involved."
[Crosse v. Bd. of Supvrs of Elections, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966)]

The U.S. Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.) also confirms that calling oneself a "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" is voluntary with the following language:

1 "7 Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.), Section 012(a)

2 a. U.S. Nationals Eligible for Consular Protection and Other Services:

3 Nationality is the principal relationship that connects an individual to a State. International law recognizes the 4 right of a State to afford diplomatic and consular protection to its nationals and to represent their interests.
 5 Under U.S. law the term "national" is inclusive of citizens but "citizen" is not inclusive of nationals. All U.S.
 6 citizens are U.S. nationals. Section 101(a)(22) INA (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)) provides that the term "national of 7 the United States" means (A) a citizen of the United States, or (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United
 8 States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States. U.S. nationals are eligible for U.S. consular protection.
 9 [SOURCE: <http://www.state.gov/documents/organization/86556.pdf>]

10 Below is an example of a case involving a party who had no civil domicile in either a statutory "State", meaning federal 11 territory, or a constitutional state of the Union, and hence was classified by the court as a "stateless person" who had to be 12 dismissed from a class action lawsuit because he was BEYOND the civil jurisdiction of federal court.

13 In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a
 14 citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649
 15 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United
 16 States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection
 17 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also 18 could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

19 When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of 20 the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch 267 (1806).[1] Here,
 21 Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship
 22 destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals
 23 panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party,
 24 thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by
 25 Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. §1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as
 26 sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally
 27 liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors.
 28 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b) . The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in
 29 Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to
 30 resolve certain minor issues.[2]

32 Only those who are constitutional aliens WHEN PHYSICALLY PRESENT WITHIN A FOREIGN COUNTRY can be forced 33 to submit themselves to the civil jurisdiction of that country absent their consent and voluntary choice of domicile. Those 34 who are not constitutional aliens, such as a state nationals, CANNOT be forced and must consent to be governed by choosing
 35 a domicile. The U.S. Supreme Court describes the process of FORCING aliens into a privileged status to have a residence
 36 in that place and be subject to the civil laws as an "implied license":

37 The reasons for not allowing to other aliens exemption 'from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are
 38 *found' were stated as follows: When private individuals of one nation [states of the Unions are "nations" under
 39 the law of nations] spread themselves through another as business or caprice may direct, mingling
 40 indiscriminately with the inhabitants of that other, or when merchant vessels enter for the purposes of trade,
 41 it would be obviously inconvenient and dangerous to society, and would subject the laws to continual
 42 infraction, and the government to degradation, if such individuals or merchants did not owe temporary and
 43 local allegiance, and were not amenable to the jurisdiction of the country. Nor can the foreign sovereign have*
 44 any motive for wishing such exemption. His subjects thus passing into foreign countries are not employed by him,
 45 nor are they engaged in national pursuits. Consequently, there are powerful motives for not exempting persons
 46 of this description from the jurisdiction of the country in which they are found, and no one motive for requiring
 47 it. The implied license, therefore, under which they enter, can never be construed to grant such exemption. 7
 48 Cranch, 144.

49 In short, the judgment in the case of The Exchange declared, as incontrovertible principles, that the jurisdiction
 50 of every nation within its own territory is exclusive and absolute, and is susceptible of no limitation not imposed
 51 by the nation itself; that all exceptions to its full and absolute territorial jurisdiction must be traced up to its own
 52 consent, express or implied; that upon its consent to cede, or to waive the exercise of, a part of its territorial
 53 jurisdiction, rest the exemptions from that jurisdiction of foreign sovereigns or their armies entering its territory
 54 *with its permission, and of their foreign ministers and public ships of war; and that the implied license, under 55 which private individuals of another nation enter the territory and mingle indiscriminately with its inhabitants,
 56 for purposes of business or pleasure, can never be construed to grant to them an exemption from the

2 If you are not physically present in a legislatively foreign civil jurisdiction, even if you are a constitutional alien in relation
3 to that jurisdiction, then the above method of enfranchisement and enslavement CANNOT be employed. Only a corrupt
4 government can or would waive these rules and make EVERYONE privileged. Furthermore, under the concept of equal
5 protection and equal treatment, if they can force anyone to be subject to THEIR civil laws, then you are allowed to make your
6 own law and force ANYONE else, including the court, to be subject to YOUR laws against their consent.

7 NATIONALITY, on the other hand, is NOT discretionary. Nationality is a product of the circumstances of your birth or the
8 requirements for naturalization, which you in turn have no control over and cannot change. One can be a “national” of a 9 country under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), have “nationality”, and call themselves a constitutional citizen and statutory “national”
10 WITHOUT being a statutory citizen because their political status is separate and distinct from their civil legal status. YES,
11 you can “expatriate” your constitutional citizenship and abandon your nationality, so your GIVING UP your nationality
12 discretionary.

13 “Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance.” Perkins v. Elg.,
14 1939, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320. In order to be relieved of the duties of allegiance, consent of 15 the sovereign is required. Mackenzie v. Hare, 1915, 239 U.S. 299, 36 S.Ct. 106, 60 L.Ed. 297. Congress has 16 provided that the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, and has further made a
17 legislative declaration as to what acts shall amount to an exercise of such right. The enumerated methods set out
18 in the chapter are expressly made the sole means of expatriation.”

19 “...municipal [civil] law determines how citizenship may be acquired...”

20 “The renunciations not being given a result of free and intelligent choice, but rather because of mental fear, 21 intimidation and coercion, they were held void and of no effect.”
22 [Tomoya Kawakita v. United States, 190 F.2d. 506 (1951)]

23 But acquiring nationality and constitutional citizen status, for most of us, is NOT discretionary in most cases because:

- 24 1. You have no control over WHERE you were born or the citizenship of your parents at the time of birth.
- 25 2. You HAVE to be a “national” and constitutional citizen of SOME country on Earth. Otherwise, you would be an 26 “alien” in EVERY country on Earth akin to a fugitive whose rights would be protected by NO ONE.

32 4.12.3.7 CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship is NOT a revocable “privilege”, nor are Any of the Bill of Rights
33 contingent on having that status. The Bill of Rights is applicable to ALL, and not merely CONSTITUTIONAL citizens

34 A common misconception of what we call “Fourteenth Amendment Conspiracy Theorists” is the idea that the Fourteenth
35 Amendment essentially made the Bill of Rights into a PRIVILEGE that made everyone subject to federal jurisdiction. Below
36 are some authorities proving that this is simply NOT the case.

37 “All privileges granted to citizen by Amnds 1 to 10 against infringement by federal government HAVE NOT been
38 absorbed by this amendment as privileges incident to citizenship of the United States and by this clause protected 39 against infringement by the states.”
40 [Watkins v. Oaklawn Jockey Club. D.C.Ark.1949, 86 F.Supp. 1006, affirmed 183 F.2d. 440]

41 “The principle to be deduced from these various cases is that the rights claimed by the plaintiff in error rest with 42 the state governments, and are not protected by the particular clause of the amendment under discussion.”
43 [Maxwell v. Dow, Utah 1900, 20 S.Ct. 448, 176 U.S. 581, 601, 44 L.Ed. 597]

44 “Although it has been vigorously asserted that the rights specified in the Amends. 1 to 8 are among the privileges
45 and immunities protected by this clause, and although this view has been defended by many distinguished jurists,
46 including several justices of the federal Supreme Court, that [this] court holds otherwise and asserts that it is the 47 character of the right claimed, whether specified as above or not, that is controlling.”

[State v. Felch, 1918, 105 A. 23, 92 Vt. 477]

The best way to distinguish between a RIGHT and a revocable PRIVILEGE is whether it can be taken away from you WITHOUT your consent. The rights found in Amendments 1-8 of the federal constitution are NON-REVOCABLE, and require your consent to give up. Therefore, they could not be privileges, and in fact the above cases say so.

There are certainly court cases we have read that identify portions of the Bill of Rights as “privileges”. This is a misnomer meant to confuse that conveys nothing useful. Earlier court cases identified the Bill of Rights as “Articles” rather than “Privileges”. The provisions of the Bill of Rights, however, cannot be lost without your CONSENT and therefore are NOT “franchises” and therefore “PUBLIC RIGHTS”. They are not “property of Congress” or “creations of Congress” which can be taken away without your express consent. In fact, these rights attach NOT to your CIVIL STATUS, whether “citizen” or otherwise, but rather to the LAND you stand on. That is why the Constitution identifies itself as “the law of the LAND”.

“It is locality that is determinative of the application of the Constitution, in such matters as judicial procedure, and not the status of the people who live in it.”
[Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922)]

4.12.3.8 Comparison

Congress enjoys two species of legislative power, and each has its own “citizens”:

“It is clear that Congress, as a legislative body, exercise two species of legislative power: the one, limited as to its objects, but extending all over the Union: the other, an absolute, exclusive legislative power over the District of Columbia. The preliminary inquiry in the case now before the Court, is, by virtue of which of these authorities was the law in question passed?”
[Cohens v. Virginia., 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 265; 5 L.Ed. 257 (1821)]

The above distinction is a product of what is called the separation of powers doctrine that is the heart of the United States Constitution and which is thoroughly described in the document below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Based on the above and the foregoing section, there are TWO mutually exclusive and independent types of “nationals”. The U.S. Supreme Court sternly warned Americans not to confuse the two political jurisdictions when it held the following:

“I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism..”

[. . .]

“The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to..”

[. . .]

It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Justice Harlan, Dissenting]

Prior to the Fourteenth Amendment, Constitutional citizenship derived from and was dependent upon being what the U.S. Supreme Court also called a “citizens of the states” or “state citizens”.

"It would be the vainest show of learning to attempt to prove by citations of authority, that up to the adoption of the recent Amendments [the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendment], no claim or pretense was set up that those rights depended on the Federal government for their existence or protection, beyond the very few express limitations which the Federal Constitution imposed upon the states—such as the prohibition against ex post facto laws, bill of attainder, and laws impairing the obligation of contracts. But with the exception of these and a few other restrictions, the entire domain of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the states, as above defined, lay within the constitutional and legislative power of the states, and without that of the Federal government. Was it the purpose of the 14th Amendment, by the simple declaration that no state should make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights which we have mentioned, from the states to the Federal government? And where it is declared that Congress shall have the power to enforce that article, was it intended to bring within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the states?"

We are convinced that no such result was intended by the Congress which proposed these amendments, nor by the legislatures of the states, which ratified them. Having shown that the privileges and immunities relied on in the argument are those which belong to citizens of the states as such, and that they are left to the state governments for security and protection, and not by this article placed under the special care of the Federal government, we may hold ourselves excused from defining the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States which no state can abridge, until some case involving those privileges may make it necessary to do so.

After the Fourteenth Amendment, constitutional citizenship became the primary citizenship and a person not domiciled in a constitutional state is a "national" but not a state citizen:

"The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen's place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States."

[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

"There are, then, under our republican form of government, two classes of citizens, one of the United States[*] and one of the state. One class of citizenship may exist in a person, without the other, as in the case of a resident of the District of Columbia; but both classes usually exist in the same person."

[Gardina v. Board of Registrars, 160 Ala. 155]

Statutory citizenship, however, does not derive from citizenship under the constitution of a state of the Union. Statutory citizenship equates with the status of being a "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a "citizen of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A). The types of "citizens" spoken of in the United States Constitution are ONLY biological people and not artificial creations such as corporations. Here is what the Annotated Fourteenth Amendment published by the Congressional Research Service has to say about this subject:

"Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.14

14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable "to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State." Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869) . This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sec. 2. See also Selover, Bates & Co. v. Walsh, 226 U.S. 112, 126 (1912) ; Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U.S. 45 (1908) ; Liberty Warehouse Co. v. Tobacco Growers, 276 U.S. 71, 89 (1928) ; Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 244 (1936) .

1 Fourteenth Amendment Conspiracy Theorists who deny that they are “citizens of the United States***” as described in the 2 Fourteenth Amendment, indirectly, are admitting that the ONLY thing they can be or are is a corporation or artificial entity.
 3 Why? Because:

- 4 1. There are only two types of American citizens: Statutory and Constitutional.
- 5 2. The ONLY one of the two types of “citizens” who is, in fact, expressly identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as a
 6 human being and emphatically NOT an artificial entity or corporation IS a constitutional or Fourteenth Amendment
 7 “citizen of the United States***”.
- 8 3. If you are born or naturalized here and deny being a constitutional citizen, the only other thing you can be is a statutory 9 citizen.

10 We talk about this common freedom fighter fallacy in more detail in:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 8.1

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11 It seems ironic that ignorant freedom lovers who don’t read the law and who even want to avoid being associated with a
 12 corporation would do that to themselves, don’t you think? Some people might try to escape this logic by saying that there
 13 are TWO types of Constitutional citizens: “citizen of the United States***” as identified in the Fourteenth Amendment and 14 the “Citizen” of the original Constitution. However, the following case holds that the Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the 15 United States***” is a SUPERSET that includes EVERYONE, including the white capital “C” males of the original
 16 constitution, so this assertion is clearly flawed:

17 “By the language ‘citizens of the United States’ was meant all such citizens; and by ‘any person’ was meant all
 18 persons within the jurisdiction of the state. No distinction is intimated on account of race or color. This court
 19 has no authority to interpolate a limitation that is neither expressed nor implied. Our duty is to execute the law,
 20 not to make it. The protection provided was not intended to be confined to those of any particular race or class,
 21 but to embrace equally all races, classes, and conditions of men.’ Id. 128, 129.

22 L. . .]

23 The fourteenth amendment, by the language, ‘all persons born in the United States, and subject to the 24 jurisdiction thereof,’ was intended to bring all races, without distinction of color, within the rule which prior 25 to that time pertained to the white race.”

26 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ]

27 The U.S. Supreme Court also described WHAT is meant by “subject to the jurisdiction”, and it means DOMICILED
 28 somewhere within the country or what they call the “territory of the nation” rather than the statutory “United States”:

29 “The amendment, in clear words and in manifest intent, includes the children born within the territory of the 30 United States of all other persons, of whatever race or color, domiciled within the United States. Every citizen or
 31 subject of another country, while domiciled here [the COUNTRY, not the statutory “United States”], is within 32 the allegiance and the protection, and consequently subject to the jurisdiction, of the United States. His 33 allegiance to the United States is direct and immediate, and, although but local and temporary, continuing only
 34 so long as he remains within our territory, is yet, in the words of Lord Coke in Calvin’s Case, 7 Coke, 6a, ‘strong
 35 enough to make a natural subject, for, if he hath issue here, that issue is a natural-born subject’; and his child,
 36 as said by Mr. Binney in his essay before quoted, ‘If born in the country, is as much a citizen as the natural-
 37 born child of a citizen, and by operation of the same principle.’ It can hardly be denied that an alien is completely
 38 subject to the political jurisdiction of the country in which he resides, seeing that, as said by Mr. Webster, when 39 secretary of state, in his report to the president on Thrasher’s case in 1851, and since repeated by this court:
 40 ‘Independently of a residence with intention to continue such residence; independently of any domiciliation;
 41 independently of the taking of any oath of allegiance, or of renouncing any former allegiance,—it is well known
 42 that by the public law an alien, or a stranger born, for so long a time as he continues within the dominions of
 43 a foreign government, owes obedience to the laws of that government, and may be punished for treason or
 44 other crimes as a native-born subject might be, unless his case is varied by some treaty stipulations.’ Executive
 45 Documents H. R. No. 10, 1st Sess. 32d Cong. p. 4; 6 Webster’s Works, 526; U.S. v. Carlisle, 16 Wall. 147, 155;
 46 Calvin’s Case, 7 Coke, 6a; Ellesmere, Postnati, 63; 1 Hale, P. C. 62; 4 Bl. Comm. 74, 92. .’
 47 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898) ]

48 The case below is talking about constitutional and not statutory citizenship:

49 “As the mind cannot conceive an army without the men to compose it, on the face of the Constitution the objection
 50 that it does not give power to provide for such men would seem to be too frivolous for further notice. It is said,

1 however, that since under the Constitution as originally framed state citizenship was primary and United States
 2 citizenship but derivative and dependent thereon, therefore the power conferred upon Congress to raise armies
 3 was only coterminous with United States citizenship and could not be exerted so as to cause that citizenship to 4 lose its dependent character and dominate state citizenship. But the proposition simply denies to Congress the 5 power to raise armies which the Constitution gives. That power by the very terms of the Constitution, being
 6 delegated, is supreme. Article 6. In truth the contention simply assails the wisdom of the framers of the 7 Constitution in conferring authority on Congress and in not retaining it as it was under the Confederation in the 8 several states."
 9 [Arver v. United States, 245 U.S. 366 \(1918\)]

10 Below are a few additional case cites that prove that those who are NOT citizens of a state of the Union such as those 11 domiciled on federal territory in the District of Columbia, are Statutory and not Constitutional citizens:

12 "... citizens of the District of Columbia were not granted the privilege of litigating in the federal courts on the 13 ground of diversity of citizenship. Possibly no better reason for this fact exists than such citizens were not thought
 14 of when the judiciary article [III] of the federal Constitution was drafted. ... citizens of the United States[**] ...
 15 were also not thought of; but in any event a citizen of the United States[**], who is not a citizen of any state,
 16 is not within the language of the [federal] Constitution.
 17 [Pannill v. Roanoke, 252 F. 910, 914]

18 "There are, then, under our republican form of government, two classes of citizens, one of the United States[***]
 19 and one of the state. One class of citizenship may exist in a person, without the other, as in the case of a resident
 20 of the District of Columbia; but both classes usually exist in the same person."
 21 [Gardina v. Board of Registrars, 160 Ala. 155]

22 Below is a table comparing the two contexts to make the differences perfectly clear. We will build on these distinctions
 23 throughout the remainder of this pamphlet.

4.12.3.9 STATUTORY “Citizen of the United States” is a corporation franchise

The federal regulations prove WHO the “U.S. citizen” or “Citizen of the United States” is that Congress has jurisdiction over. It is a corporation!

46 C.F.R. §356.5 - Affidavit of U.S. Citizenship.

CFR Updates Authorities \(U.S. Code\)

§ 356.5 Affidavit of U.S. Citizenship.

(a) In order to establish that a corporation or other entity is a Citizen of the United States within the meaning of section 2(c) of the 1916 Act, or where applicable, section 2(b) of the 1916 Act, the form of Affidavit is hereby prescribed for execution in behalf of the owner, charterer, Mortgagee, or Mortgage Trustee of a Fishing Industry Vessel. Such Affidavit must include information required of parent corporations and other stockholders whose stock ownership is being relied upon to establish that the requisite ownership in the entity is owned by and vested in Citizens of the United States. A certified copy of the Articles of Incorporation and Bylaws, or comparable corporate documents, must be submitted along with the executed Affidavit.

(b) This Affidavit form set forth in paragraph (d) of this section may be modified to conform to the requirements of vessel owners, Mortgagees, or Mortgage Trustees in various forms such as partnerships, limited liability companies, etc. A copy of an Affidavit of U.S. Citizenship modified appropriately, for limited liability companies, partnerships (limited and general), and other entities is available on MARAD's internet home page at <http://www.marad.dot.gov>.

(c) As indicated in § 356.17, in order to renew annually the fishery endorsement on a Fishing Industry Vessel, the owner must submit annually to the Citizenship Approval Officer evidence of U.S. Citizenship within the meaning of section 2(c) of the 1916 Act and 46 App. U.S.C. 12102(c).

(d) The prescribed form of the Affidavit of U.S. Citizenship is as follows:

State of ____ County of ____ Social Security Number: _____

I, _____, (Name) of _____, (Residence address) being duly sworn, depose and say:

1. That I am the ____ (Title of office(s) held) of ____, (Name of corporation) a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of ____ (hereinafter called the "Corporation"), with offices at ____, (Business address) in evidence of which incorporation a certified copy of the Articles or Certificate of Incorporation (or Association) is filed herewith (or has been filed) together with a certified copy of the corporate Bylaws. [Evidence of continuing U.S. citizenship status, including amendments to said Articles or Certificate and Bylaws, should be filed within 45 days of the annual documentation renewal date for vessel owners. Other parties required to provide evidence of U.S. citizenship status must file within 30 days after the annual meeting of the stockholders or annually, within 30 days after the original affidavit if there has been no meeting of the stockholders prior to that time.];

2. That I am authorized by and in behalf of the Corporation to execute and deliver this Affidavit of U.S. Citizenship;

3. That the names of the Chief Executive Officer, by whatever title, the Chairman of the Board of Directors, all Vice Presidents or other individuals who are authorized to act in the absence or disability of the Chief Executive Officer or Chairman of the Board of Directors, and the Directors of the Corporation are as follows:<sup>1</sup>

Footnote(s):

Notice the OFFICER of the corporation who files the above must have a Social Security Number, which in turn functions as a license to represent a public office in the national but not federal government.

The "Citizen of the United States" they are referring to in the above regulation can ONLY mean a STATUTORY citizen. CONSTITUTIONAL citizens include ONLY human beings according to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States. 14

14 Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable "to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State." Orient Ins. Co. v. Dags, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869) . This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sect. 2. #### 4.12.3.10 You're not a STATUTORY "citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code<sup>166</sup>

As was proved exhaustively so far, there are TWO contexts in which one may be a "citizen", and these two contexts are mutually exclusive and not overlapping:

1. Statutory: Relies on statutory definitions of "United States", which mean federal territory that is no part of any state of the Union.
2. Constitutional. Relies on the Constitutional meaning of "United States", which means states of the Union and excludes federal territory.

Within the field of citizenship, CONTEXT is everything in discerning the meaning of geographical terms. By "context", we mean ONE of the two contexts as indicated above:

"Citizenship of the United States is defined by the Fourteenth Amendment and federal statutes, but the requirements for citizenship of a state generally depend not upon

definition but the constitutional or statutory context in which the term is used. Risewick v. Davis, 19 Md. 82, 93 (1862); Halaby v. Board of Directors of University of Cincinnati, 162 Ohio St. 290, 293, 123 N.E.2d 3 (1954) and authorities therein cited.

The decisions illustrate the diversity of the term's usage. In Field v. Adreon, 7 Md. 209 (1854), our predecessors held that an unnaturalized foreigner, residing and doing business in this State, was a citizen of Maryland within the meaning of the attachment laws. The Court held that the absconding debtor was a citizen of the State for commercial or business purposes, although not necessarily for political purposes. Dorsey v. Kyle, 30 Md. 512, 518 (1869), is to the same effect. Judge Alvey, for the Court, said in that case, that 'the term citizen, used in the formula of the affidavit prescribed by the 4th section of the Article of the Code referred to, is to be taken as synonymous with inhabitant or permanent resident.'

Other jurisdictions have equated residence with citizenship of the state for political and other non-commercial purposes. In re Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443, 446 (1863), held that the Wisconsin statute designating 'all able-bodied, white, male citizens' as subject to enrollment in the militia included an unnaturalized citizen who was a resident of the state. 'Under our complex system of government,' the court said, 'there may be a citizen of a state, who is not a citizen of the United States in the full sense of the term.' McKenzie v. Murphy, 24 Ark. 155, 159 (1863), held that an alien, domiciled in the state for over ten years, was entitled to the homestead exemptions provided by the Arkansas statute to 'every free white citizen of this state, male or female, being a householder or head of a family * * *'. The court said: 'The word 'citizen' is often used in common conversation and writing, as meaning only an inhabitant, a resident of a town, state, or county, without any implication of political or civil privileges; and we think it is so used in our constitution.' Halaby v. Board of Directors of University, supra, involved the application of a statute which provided free university instruction to citizens of the municipality in which the university is located. The court held that the plaintiff, an alien minor whose parents were residents of and conducted a business in the city, was entitled to the benefits of that statute, saying: 'It is to be observed that the term, 'citizen,' is often used in legislation where 'domicile' is meant and where United States citizenship has no reasonable relationship to the subject matter and purpose of the legislation in question.'

Closely in point to the interpretation of the constitutional provision here involved is a report of the Committee of Elections of the House of Representatives, made in 1823. A petitioner had objected to the right of a Delegate to retain his seat from what was then the Michigan Territory. One of the objections was that the Delegate had not resided in the Territory one year previous to the election in the status of a citizen of the United States. An act of Congress passed in 1819, 3 Stat. 483 provided that 'every free white male citizen of said Territory, above the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided therein one year next preceding' an election shall be entitled to vote at such election for a delegate to Congress. An act of 1823, 3 Stat. 769 provided that all citizens of the United States having the qualifications set forth in the former act shall be eligible to any office in the Territory. The Committee held that the statutory requirement of citizenship of the Territory for a year before the election did not mean that the aspirant for office must also have been a United States citizen during that period. The report said: 'It is the person, the individual, the man, who is [221 A.2d 435] spoken of, and who is to possess the qualifications of residence, age, freedom, &c. at the time he offers to vote, or is to be voted for * * *.' Upon the filing of the report, and the submission of a resolution that the Delegate was entitled to his seat, the contestant of the Delegate's election withdrew his protest, and the sitting Delegate was confirmed. Biddle v. Richard, Clarke and Hall, Cases of Contested Elections in Congress (1834) 407, 410.

There is no express requirement in the Maryland Constitution that sheriffs be United States citizens. Voters must be, under Article I, Section 1, but Article IV, Section 44 does not require that sheriffs be voters. A person does not have to be a voter to be a citizen of either the United States or of a state, as in the case of native-born minors. In Maryland, from 1776 to 1802, the Constitution contained requirements of property ownership for the exercise of the franchise; there was no exception as to native-born citizens of the State. Steiner, Citizenship and Suffrage in Maryland (1895) 27, 31.

The Maryland Constitution provides that the Governor, Judges and the Attorney General shall be qualified voters, and therefore, by necessary implication, citizens of the United States. Article II, Section 5, Article IV, Section 2, and Article V, Section 4. The absence of a similar requirement as to the qualifications of sheriffs is significant. So also, in our opinion, is the absence of any period of residence for a sheriff except that he shall have been a citizen of the State for five years. The Governor, Judges and Attorney General in addition to being citizens of the State and qualified voters, must have been a resident of the State for various periods. The conjunction of the requisite period of residence with state citizenship in the qualifications for sheriff strongly indicates that, as in the authorities above referred to, state citizenship, as used in the constitutional qualifications for this office, was meant to be synonymous with domicile, and that citizenship of the United States is not required, even by implication, as a qualification for this office. The office of sheriff, under our Constitution, is ministerial in nature; a sheriff's function and province is to execute duties prescribed by law. See Buckeye Dev. Corp. v. Brown & Schilling, Inc., Md., 220 A.2d. 922, filed June 23, 1966 and the concurring opinion of Le Grand, C. J. in Mayor & City Council of Baltimore v. State, ex rel. Bd. of Police, 15 Md. 376, 470, 488-490 (1860).

It may well be that the phrase, 'a citizen of the State,' as used in the constitutional provisions as to qualifications, implies that a sheriff cannot owe allegiance to another nation. By the naturalization act of 1779, the Legislature

1 provided that, to become a citizen of Maryland, an alien must swear allegiance to the State. The oath or
 2 affirmation provided that the applicant renounced allegiance 'to any king or prince, or any other State or
 3 Government.' Act of July, 1779, Ch. VI; Steiner, op. cit. 15. In this case, on the admitted facts, there can be no
 4 question of the appellant's undivided allegiance.

5 The court below rested its decision on its conclusion that, under the Fourteenth Amendment, no state may confer
 6 state citizenship upon a resident alien until such resident alien becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States.
 7 The court relied, as does not Board in this appeal, upon City of Minneapolis v. Reum, 56 F. 576, 581 (8th Cir.
 8 1893). In that case, an alien resident of Minnesota, who had declared his intention to become a citizen of the
 9 United States but had not been naturalized, brought a suit, based on diversity of citizenship, against the city in
 10 the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota under Article III, Section 2 of the United States
 11 Constitution which provides that the federal judicial power shall extend to 'Controversies between * * * a State,
 12 or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.' At the close of the evidence, the defendant moved
 13 to dismiss the action for want of jurisdiction, on the [221 A.2d 436] ground that the evidence failed to establish
 14 the allegation that the plaintiff was an alien. The court denied the motion, the plaintiff recovered judgment, and
 15 the defendant claimed error in the ruling on jurisdiction. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. Judge Sanborn,
 16 for the court, stated that even though the plaintiff were a citizen of the state, that fact could not enlarge or restrict
 17 the jurisdiction of the federal courts over controversies between aliens and citizens of the state. The court said:
 18 'It is not in the power of a state to denationalize a foreign subject who has not complied with the federal
 19 naturalization laws, and constitute him a citizen of the United States or of a state, so as to deprive the federal
 20 courts of jurisdiction * * *'

21 Reum dealt only with the question of jurisdiction of federal courts under the diversity of citizenship clause of the
 22 federal Constitution. That a state cannot affect that jurisdiction by granting state citizenship to an unnaturalized
 23 alien does not mean it cannot make an alien a state citizen for other purposes. Under the Fourteenth Amendment
 24 all persons born or naturalized in the United States are citizens of the United States and of the state in which they
 25 reside, but we find nothing in Reum of any other case which requires that a citizen of a state must also be a citizen
 26 of the United States, if no question of federal rights or jurisdictions is involved. As the authorities referred to in
 27 the first portion of this opinion evidence, the law is to the contrary.

28 Absent any unconstitutional discrimination, a state has the right to extend qualification for state office to its
 29 citizens, even though they are not citizens of the United States. This, we have found, is what Maryland has done
 30 in fixing the constitutional qualifications for the office of sheriff. The appellant meets the qualifications which our
 31 Constitution provides."

32 [Crosse v. Board of Sup'rs of Elections of Baltimore City, 221 A.2d. 431, 243 Md. 555 (Md., 1966) ]

33 The confusion over citizenship prevalent today is caused by a deliberate confusion of the above two contexts with each other
 34 so as to make every American appear to be a statutory citizen and therefore an public officer of the "United States Inc"
 35 government corporation. This fact was first identified by the U.S. Supreme Court as follows:

36 "Under our own systems of polity, the term 'citizen', implying the same or similar relations to the government and
 37 to society which appertain to the term, 'subject' in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used
 38 is designed to apply to man in his individual character and to his natural capacities -- to a being or agent
 39 [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social, political, and moral
 40 obligations. It is in this acceptation only, therefore, that the term 'citizen', in the article of the Constitution,
 41 can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies
 42 between 'citizens' of different states. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate
 43 communities, and can by no violence of interpretation be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical,
 44 and invisible creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind,
 45 invisible and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a state, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms
 46 or the power of the above mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of 47 the United States."

48 "Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is
 49 it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment, for it is not liable to corporeal penalties -- that it can
 50 perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be
 51 arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be
 52 excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of
 53 the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a
 54 corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and
 55 endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from
 56 the decisions of the cases of Bank of the United States v. Deveaux and of Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad
 57 Company v. Letson afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled
 58 principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply
 59 founded experience; they are therefore ever consentaneous and in 60 harmony with themselves and with reason, and whenever abandoned as guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering uncertainty and confusion."

[Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Company, 55 U.S. 80, 99 (1852) from dissenting opinion by Justice Daniel]

"The principal issue in this petition is the territorial scope of the term 'the United States' in the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1 ("All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside." (emphasis added)). Petitioner, who was born in the Philippines in 1934 during its status as a United States territory, argues she was "born ... in the United States" and is therefore a United States citizen.<sup>167</sup>

Petitioner's argument is relatively novel, having been addressed previously only in the Ninth Circuit. See Rabang v. I.N.S., 35 F.3d 1449, 1452 (9th Cir.1994) ("No court has addressed whether persons born in a United States territory are born 'in the United States,' within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment."), cert. denied sub nom. Sanidad v. INS, 515 U.S. 1130, 115 S.Ct. 2554, 132 L.Ed.2d. 809 (1995). In a split decision, the Ninth Circuit held that "birth in the Philippines during the territorial period does not constitute birth 'in the United States' under the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and thus does not give rise to United States citizenship." Rabang, 35 F.3d at 1452. We agree.<sup>168</sup>

Despite the novelty of petitioner's argument, the Supreme Court in the Insular Cases<sup>169</sup> provides authoritative guidance on the territorial scope of the term "the United States" in the Fourteenth Amendment. The Insular Cases were a series of Supreme Court decisions that addressed challenges to duties on goods transported from Puerto Rico to the continental United States. Puerto Rico, like the Philippines, had been recently ceded to the United States. The Court considered the territorial scope of the term "the United States" in the Constitution and held that this term as used in the uniformity clause of the Constitution was territorially limited to the states of the Union. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8 ("[A]ll Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States." (emphasis added)); see Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 251, 21 S.Ct. 770, 773, 45 L.Ed. 1088 (1901) ("It can nowhere be inferred that the territories were considered a part of the United States. The Constitution was created by the people of the United States, as a union of States, to be governed solely by representatives of the States; ... In short, the Constitution deals with States, their people, and their representatives."); Rabang, 35 F.3d at 1452. Puerto Rico was merely a territory "appurtenant and belonging to the United States, but not a part of the United States within the revenue clauses of the Constitution." Downes, 182 U.S. at 287, 21 S.Ct. at 787.

The Court's conclusion in Downes was derived in part by analyzing the territorial scope of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits slavery and involuntary servitude "within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction." U.S. Const. amend. XIII, § 1 (emphasis added). The Fourteenth Amendment states that persons "born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside." U.S. Const. amend XIV, § 1 (emphasis added). The disjunctive "or" in the Thirteenth Amendment demonstrates that "there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are not part of the Union" to which the Thirteenth Amendment would apply. Downes, 182 U.S. at 251, 21 S.Ct. at 773. Citizenship under the Fourteenth Amendment, however, "is not extended to persons born in any place 'subject to [the United States'] jurisdiction," "but is limited to persons born or naturalized in the states of the Union. Downes, 182 U.S. at 251, 21 S.Ct. at 773 (emphasis added); see also id. at 263, 21 S.Ct. at 777 ("In dealing with foreign sovereignties, the term 'United States' has a broader meaning than when used in the Constitution, and includes all territories subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal government, wherever located.")<sup>170</sup>

<sup>168</sup> For the purpose of deciding this petition, we address only the territorial scope of the phrase "the United States" in the Citizenship Clause. We do not consider the distinct issue of whether citizenship is a "fundamental right" that extends by its own force to the inhabitants of the Philippines under the doctrine of territorial incorporation. Dorr v. United States, 195 U.S. 138, 146, 24 S.Ct. 808, 812, 49 L.Ed. 128 (1904) ("Doubtless Congress, in legislating for the Territories would be subject to those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments." (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)); Rabang, 35 F.3d at 1453 n. 8 ("We note that the territorial scope of the phrase 'the United States' is a distinct inquiry from whether a constitutional provision should extend to a territory." (citing Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 249, 21 S.Ct. 770, 772, 45 L.Ed. 1088 (1901))). The phrase "the United States" is an express territorial limitation on the scope of the Citizenship Clause. Because we determine that the phrase "the United States" did not include the Philippines during its status as a United States territory, we need not determine the application of the Citizenship Clause to the Philippines under the doctrine of territorial incorporation. Cf. United States v. Verdugo-Urquidez, 494 U.S. 259, 291 n. 11, 110 S.Ct. 1056, 1074 n. 11, 108 L.Ed.2d 222 (1990) (Brennan, J., dissenting) (arguing that the Fourth Amendment may be applied extraterritorially, in part, because it does not contain an "express territorial limitation[ ]").

1 Following the decisions in the Insular Cases, the Supreme Court confirmed that the Philippines, during its
 2 status as a United States territory, was not a part of the United States. See Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324
 3 U.S. 652, 678, 65 S.Ct. 870, 883, 89 L.Ed. 1252 (1945) ("As we have seen, [the Philippines] are not a part of the
 4 United States in the sense that they are subject to and enjoy the benefits or protection of the Constitution, as 5 do the states which are united by and under it."); see id. at 673-74, 65 S.Ct. at 881 (Philippines "are territories
 6 belonging to, but not a part of, the Union of states under the Constitution," and therefore imports "brought
 7 from the Philippines into the United States ... are brought from territory, which is not a part of the United States,
 8 into the territory of the United States.").

9 Accordingly, the Supreme Court has observed, without deciding, that persons born in the Philippines prior to 10 its independence in 1946 are not [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizens of the United States. See Barber v. Gonzales, 11 347 U.S. 637, 639 n. 1, 74 S.Ct. 822, 823 n. 1, 98 L.Ed. 1009 (1954) (stating that although the inhabitants of the 12 Philippines during the territorial period were "nationals" of the United States, they were not "United States
 13 citizens"); Rabang v. Boyd, 353 U.S. 427, 432 n. 12, 77 S.Ct. 985, 988 n. 12, 1 L.Ed.2d. 956 (1957) ("The 14 inhabitants of the Islands acquired by the United States during the late war with Spain, not being citizens of 15 the United States, do not possess right of free entry into the United States." (emphasis added) (citation and 16 internal quotation marks omitted)).
 17 [Valmonte v. I.N.S., 136 F.3d. 914 (C.A.2, 1998)]

18 The STATUTORY context for the term "citizen" described in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) and 26 U.S.C. §3121(e) relies on the 19 geographical term "United States" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), which means federal 20 territory and not a state of the Union. Therefore, the "citizen" and "U.S. person" found in the Internal Revenue Code is a
 21 TERRITORIAL rather than a STATE citizen. For details on why STATUTORY "citizens" are all public officers and not 22 private humans, read:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037

23 The U.S. Supreme Court has held in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 \(1945\) that there are THREE different
 24 meanings and contexts for the word "United States". Hence, there are THREE different types of "citizens of the United
 25 States" as used in federal statutes and the Constitution. All three types of citizens are called "citizens of the United States",
 26 but each relies on a different meaning of the "United States". The meaning that applies depends on the context. For instance,
 27 the meaning of "United States" as used in the Constitution implies states of the Union and excludes federal territory, while 28 the term "United States" within federal statutory law means federal territory and excludes states of the Union. Here is an 29 example demonstrating the Constitutional context. Note that they use "part of the United States within the meaning of the 30 Constitution", and the word "the" and the use of the singular form of "meaning" implies only ONE meaning, which means
 31 states of the Union and excludes federal territory:

32 "As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during 33 good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of 34 judges for limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution upon territory which is not part of the 35 United States within the meaning of the Constitution."
 36 [O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516, 53 S.Ct. 740 (1933)]

37 The U.S. Supreme Court and lower courts have also held specifically that:

- 38 1. The statutes conferring citizenship in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are a PRIVILEGE and not a CONSTITUTIONAL
 39 RIGHT, and are therefore not even necessary in the case of state citizens.

40 "Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as
 41 a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico,
 42 Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon their 43 inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-11. If the 44 Citizenship Clause guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes would have 45 been unnecessary."
 46 [Tuaua v. U.S.A., 951 F.Supp.2d. 88 (2013)]

- 47 2. A citizen of the District of Columbia is NOT equivalent to a constitutional citizen. Note also that the "United States" as 48 defined in the Internal Revenue Code, for instance, includes the "District of Columbia" and nowhere expressly includes
 49 states of the Union in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10). We therefore conclude that the statutory term "citizen of the 50 United States" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 includes District of Columbia citizens and all those domiciled on federal 51 territory "statutory citizens" and EXCLUDES those domiciled within states of the Union:

1           “The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
 2 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states.
 3 No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act
 4 of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the
 5 public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except
 6 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided
 7 always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens.”
 8 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

- 9 3. An 8 U.S.C. §1401 "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" born on federal territory is NOT a 10 CONSTITUTIONAL citizen mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment when it held:

11           “The Court today holds that Congress can indeed rob a citizen of his citizenship just so long as five members
 12 of this Court can satisfy themselves that the congressional action was not 'unreasonable, arbitrary,' ante, at 13 831; 'misplaced or arbitrary,' ante, at 832; or 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' ante, at 833. My first comment
 14 is that not one of these 'tests' appears in the Constitution. Moreover, it seems a little strange to find such 'tests' as
 15 these announced in an opinion which condemns the earlier decisions it overrules for their resort to clichés, which
 16 it describes as 'too handy and too easy, and, like most clichés, can be misleading'. Ante, at 835. That description
 17 precisely fits those words and clauses which the majority uses, but which the Constitution does not.

18           The Constitution, written for the ages, cannot rise and fall with this Court's passing notions of what is 'fair,' or
 19 'reasonable,' or 'arbitrary.' [ . . . ]

20           The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei.
 21 The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth
 22 Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * *
 23 * are citizens of the United States * * *.' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation
 24 declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.'
 25 Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but 26 Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen,
 27 was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth
 28 Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes
 29 the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the
 30 majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority
 31 reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the
 32 Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others.
 33 [ . . . ]

34           The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional
 35 action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.'
 36 The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view
 37 of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen,
 38 and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond
 39 the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground
 40 that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-
 41 conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law
 42 that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,'
 43 the statute must be constitutional.

44 [ . . . ]

45           Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S.
 46 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent,
 47 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the
 48 United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident
 49 that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional
 51 [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

52 The Internal Revenue Code relies on the statutory definition of "United States", which means federal territory. The term
 53 "citizen" is nowhere defined within the Internal Revenue Code and is defined twice within the implementing regulations at
 54 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 and 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 . Below is the first of these two definitions:

55 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

56 (c) Who is a citizen.

Every person born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen. For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. §1401-1459). For rules governing loss of citizenship, see sections 349 to 357, inclusive, of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1481-1489), Schneider v. Rusk, 377 U.S. 163 (1964), and Rev.Rul. 70-506, C.B. 1970-2, 1. For rules pertaining to persons who are nationals but not citizens at birth, e.g., a person born in American Samoa, see section 308 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1408). For special rules applicable to certain expatriates who have lost citizenship with a principal purpose of avoiding certain taxes, see section 877. A foreigner who has filed his declaration of intention of becoming a citizen but who has not yet been admitted to citizenship by a final order of a naturalization court is an alien.

Notice the term “born or naturalized in the United States and subject to its jurisdiction”, which means the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal government within the District of Columbia and its territories and possessions under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and Title 48 of the U.S. Code. If they meant to include states of the Union, they would have used “their jurisdiction” or “the jurisdiction” as used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment instead of “its jurisdiction”.

“The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude ‘within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,’ is also significant as showing that there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this amendment was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible interpretation that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it involves an admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

*Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside.’ Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States, which is not extended to persons born in any place ‘subject to their jurisdiction.’”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]*

The above definition of “citizen” applying exclusively to the Internal Revenue Code reveals that it depends on 8 U.S.C. §1401 means a human being and NOT artificial person born anywhere in the country but domiciled in the federal United States**/federal zone, which includes territories or possessions and excludes states of the Union. These people possess a special “non-constitutional” class of citizenship that is not covered by the Fourteenth Amendment or any other part of the Constitution.

People born in states of the Union are technically not STATUTORY “nationals and citizens of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, but instead are STATUTORY “non-resident non-persons” with a legislatively but not constitutionally foreign domicile under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as follows:

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

In the case of “nationals” who are also statutory “non-resident non-persons” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), these are people who owe their permanent allegiance to the confederation of states in the Union called the “United States of America****” and NOT the “United States*****”, which is the government and legal person they created to preside ONLY over community property of states of the Union and foreign affairs but NOT internal affairs within the states..

The definition of “citizen of the United States” found in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 corroborates the above conclusions, keeping in mind that “United States” within that definition means the federal zone instead of the states of the Union. Remember: “United States” or “United States of America” in the Constitution means the states of the Union while “United States” in federal statutes means the federal zone only and excludes states of the Union.

26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen

(e)...The term ‘citizen of the United States’ includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa are all U.S. territories and federal “States” that are within the federal zone. They are not “states” under the Internal Revenue Code. The proper subjects of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are only the people who are born in these federal “States”, and these people are the only people who are in fact “citizens and nationals of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).

The basis of citizenship in the United States is the English doctrine under which nationality meant “birth within allegiance of the king”. The U.S. Supreme Court helped explain this concept precisely in the case of U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898) :

*“The supreme court of North Carolina, speaking by Mr. Justice Gaston, said: ‘Before our Revolution, all free persons born within the dominions of the king of Great Britain, whatever their color or complexion, were native-born British subjects; those born out of his allegiance were aliens.’ ‘Upon the Revolution, no other change took place in the law of North Carolina than was consequent upon the transition from a colony dependent on an European king to a free and sovereign [169 U.S. 649, 664] state.’ ‘British subjects in North Carolina became North Carolina freemen;’ ‘and all free persons born within the state are born citizens of the state.’ ‘The term ‘citizen,’ as understood in our law, is precisely analogous to the term ‘subject’ in the common law, and the change of phrase has entirely resulted from the change of government. The sovereignty has been transferred from the man to the collective body of the people; and he who before was a ‘subject of the king’ is now ‘a citizen of the state.’ State v. Manuel (1838) 4 Dev. & b. 20, 24-26. “
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]*

In our country following the victorious Revolution of 1776, the “king” was therefore replaced by “the people”, who are collectively and individually the “sovereigns” within our republican form of government. The group of people within whatever “body politic” one is referring to who live within the territorial limits of that “body politic” are the thing that you claim allegiance to when you claim “nationality” to any one of the following three distinctive political bodies:

1. A state the Union.
2. The country “United States”, as defined in our Constitution.
3. The municipal government of the federal zone called the “District of Columbia”, which was chartered as a federal corporation under 16 Stat. 419 §1 and 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).

Each of the three above political bodies have “citizens” who are distinctively their own. When you claim to be a “citizen” of any one of the three, you aren’t claiming allegiance to the government of that “body politic”, but to the people (the sovereigns) that the government serves. If that government is rebellious to the will of the people, and is outside the boundaries of the Constitution that defines its authority so that it becomes a “de facto” government rather than the original “de jure” government it was intended to be, then your allegiance to the people must be superior to that of the government that serves the people. In the words of Jesus Himself in John 15:20:

“Remember the word that I said to you, ‘A servant is not greater than his master.’”
[John 15:20, Bible, NKJV]

The “master” or “sovereign” in this case, is the people, who have expressed their sovereign will through a written and unchangeable Constitution.

“The glory of our American system of government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects the people against the exercise of arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be passed by the government it created, or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by amendment or change of its provisions.”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244, 21 S.Ct. 770 (1901)]

This is a crucial distinction you must understand in order to fully comprehend the foundations of our republican system of government. Let’s look at the definition of “citizen” according to the U.S. Supreme Court in order to clarify the points we have made so far on what it means to be a “citizen” of our glorious republic:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and

'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more."

"To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.

"Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by 'the people of the United States,'<sup>3</sup> and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station among the powers of the earth,<sup>4</sup> and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they took the name of 'the United States of America,' entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and their mutual and general welfare, binding themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever. 5

"Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen-a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were."

The thing to focus on in the above is the phrase "he owes allegiance and is entitled to its protection". People domiciled in states of the Union have dual allegiance and dual nationality: They owe allegiance to two governments not one, so they are "dual-nationals". They are "dual nationals" because the states of the Union are independent nations<sup>171</sup>:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

Likewise, those people who live in a federal "State" like Puerto Rico also owe dual allegiance: one to the District of Columbia, which is their municipal government and which possesses the police powers that protect them, and the other allegiance to the government of the United States of America, which is the general government for the whole country. As we said before, Congress wears two hats and operates in two capacities or jurisdictions simultaneously, each of which covers a different and mutually exclusive geographical area:

1. As the municipal government for the District of Columbia and all U.S. territories. All "Acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are referred to as "private international law". This political community is called the "National Government".
2. As the general government for the states of the Union. All "Acts of Congress" or federal statutes passed in this capacity are called "public international law". This political community is called the "Federal Government."

Each of the two capacities above has different types of "citizens" within it and each is a unique and separate "body politic". Most laws that Congress writes pertain to the first jurisdiction above only. Below is a summary of these two classes of "citizens":

Table 4-24: Types of citizens

<sup>171</sup> See Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839), in which the Supreme Court ruled:

"The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."

1 The U.S. Supreme Court recognized the above two separate political and legislative jurisdictions and their respective separate
2 types of "citizens" when it held the following:

4 *opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states.*
5 No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act
6 of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the
7 *public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except*
8 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided
9 *always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens.*
10 Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided."
11 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

12 Federal statutes and "Acts of Congress" do not and cannot prescribe the STATUTORY citizenship status of human beings
13 born in and domiciled in states of the Union and outside of the exclusive or general legislative jurisdiction of Congress. 8
14 U.S.C. §1408(2) comes the closest to defining their citizenship status, but even that definition doesn't address most persons
15 born in states of the Union neither of whose parents ever resided in the federal zone. No federal statute or "act of Congress"
16 directly can or does prescribe the citizenship status of people born in states of the Union because state law, and not federal
17 law, prescribes their status under the Law of Nations.<sup>172</sup> The reason is because no government may write civil laws that apply
18 outside of their subject matter or exclusive territorial jurisdiction, and states of the Union are STATUTORILY but not
19 CONSTITUTIONALLY "foreign" to the United States government for the purposes of police powers and legislative 20 jurisdiction. Here is confirmation of that fact which the geographical definitions within federal also CONFIRM:

21 "Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflict of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
22 law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First, 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
23 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
24 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
25 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a
26 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon
27 the laws and municipal regulation of the matter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and
28 upon its own express or tacit consent.' Story on Conflict of Laws, §23."
29 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

30 Congress is given the authority under the Constitution, Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 to write "an uniform Rule of 31 Naturalization" and they have done this in Title 8 of the U.S. Code called the "Aliens and Nationality", but they were never 32 given any authority under the Constitution to prescribe laws for the states of the Union relating to citizenship by birth rather 33 than naturalization. That subject is, and always has been, under the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union.
34 Naturalization is only one of two ways by which a person can acquire citizenship, and Congress has jurisdiction only over 35 one of the two ways of acquiring citizenship.

36 "The question, now agitated, depends upon another question; whether the State of Pennsylvania, since the 26th
37 of March, 1790, (when the act of Congress was passed) has a right to naturalize an alien? And this must receive
38 its answer from the solution of a third question; whether, according to the constitution of the United States, the 39 authority to naturalize is exclusive, or concurrent? We are of the opinion, then, that the States, individually,
40 still enjoy a concurrent authority upon this subject; but that their individual authority cannot be exercised so
41 as to contravene the rule established by the authority of the Union.

42 "The true reason for investing Congress with the power of naturalization has been assigned at the Bar: --It
43 was to guard against too narrow, instead of too liberal, a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship. Thus,
44 the individual States cannot exclude those citizens, who have been adopted by the United States; but they can
45 adopt citizens upon easier terms, than those which Congress may deem it expedient to impose.

46 "But the act of Congress itself, furnishes a strong proof that the power of naturalization is concurrent. In the
47 concluding proviso, it is declared, 'that no person heretofore proscribed by any State, shall be admitted a citizen
48 as aforesaid, except by an act of the Legislature of the State, in which such person was proscribed.' Here, we
49 find, that Congress has not only circumscribed the exercise of its own authority, but has recognized the
50 authority of a State Legislature, in one case, to admit a citizen of the United States; which could not be done in any case, if the power of naturalization, either by its own nature, or by the manner of its being vested in the Federal Government, was an exclusive power.

[Collet v. Collet, 2 U.S. 294, 1 L.Ed. 387 (1792)]

Many freedom fighters overlook the fact that the STATUTORY “citizen” mentioned in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 can also be a corporation, and this misunderstanding is why many of them think that they are the only proper subject of the Subtitle A federal income tax. In fact, a corporation is also a STATUTORY “person” and an “individual” and a “citizen” within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code.

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003); Legal encyclopedia]

Corporations, however, cannot be either a CONSTITUTIONAL “person” or “citizen” nor can they have a legal existence outside of the sovereignty that they were created in.

“Citizens of the United States within the meaning of this Amendment must be natural and not artificial persons; a corporate body is not a citizen of the United States.”<sup>14</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Insurance Co. v. New Orleans, 13 Fed.Cas. 67 (C.C.D.La. 1870). Not being citizens of the United States, corporations accordingly have been declared unable “to claim the protection of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which secures the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States against abridgment or impairment by the law of a State.” Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U.S. 557, 561 (1869). This conclusion was in harmony with the earlier holding in Paul v. Virginia, 75 U.S. (8 Wall.) 168 (1869), to the effect that corporations were not within the scope of the privileges and immunities clause of state citizenship set out in Article IV, Sect. 2. See also Selover, Bates & Co. v. Walsh, 226 U.S. 112, 126 (1912); Berea College v. Kentucky, 211 U.S. 45 (1908); Liberty Warehouse Co. v. Tobacco Growers, 276 U.S. 71, 89 (1928); Grosjean v. American Press Co., 297 U.S. 233, 244 (1936).

Consequently, the only corporations who are “citizens” and the only “corporate profits” that are subject to tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are those that are formed under the laws of the District of Columbia, and not those under the laws of states of the Union. Congress can ONLY tax or regulate that which it creates as a VOLUNTARY franchise, and corporations are just such a franchise. Here is why:

“Now, a grant of corporate existence is a grant of special privileges to the corporators, enabling them to act for certain designated purposes as a single individual, and exempting them (unless otherwise specifically provided) from individual liability. The corporation being the mere creation of local law, can have no legal existence beyond the limits of the sovereignty where created. As said by this court in Bank of Augusta v. Earle, ‘It must dwell in the place of its creation and cannot migrate to another sovereignty.’ The recognition of its existence even by other States, and the enforcement of its contracts made therein, depend purely upon the comity of those States—a comity which is never extended where the existence of the corporation or the exercise of its powers are prejudicial to their interests or repugnant to their policy.”
[Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

In conclusion, you aren’t the STATUTORY “citizen” described in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 who is the proper subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, nor are you a “resident” of the “United States” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) if you were born in a state of the Union and are domiciled there. Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A only applies to persons domiciled in the federal zone and payments originating from within the United States government. If you are domiciled in a state of the Union, then you aren’t domiciled in the federal zone. Consequently, the only type of person you can be as a person born in a state of the Union is:

1. A “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
2. A CONSTITUTIONAL “person”.
3. A statutory “non-resident non-person”.
4. NOT any of the following:
  - 4.1. A STATUTORY “person”.
  - 4.2. An “alien” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(3).
  - 4.3. A statutory “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

- 1 4.4. A "National but not citizen of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408.
 2 4.5. A "U.S.[**] non-citizen national" under 8 U.S.C. §1452.
 3 4.6. "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**]"
 4 under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).

5 We call the confluence of the above a "non-resident non-person " as described below:

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020

FORMS PAGE: <https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/NonresidentNonPersonPosition.pdf>

6 You only become a statutory "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) when you surrender your PRIVATE,
 7 sovereign status and sovereign immunity by entering into contracts with the government, such as accepting a public office or
 8 a government "benefit".

9 The reason most Americans falsely think they owe income tax and why they continue to illegally be the target of IRS
 10 enforcement activity is because of one or more of the following:

- 11 1. They don't understand the definition of "individual" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) and therefore falsely identify 12 themselves as "individuals" on government forms.
 13 2. They are the victim of false information returns. See Form #04.001. These false returns give rise to unlawful IRS
 14 collection activity that intimidates people into filing knowingly false tax returns. This is covered in:

Why It's a Crime for a State Citizen to File a 1040 Income Tax Return, Form #08.021

<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 15 3. They file the wrong tax return form and thereby create false presumptions about their status in relation to the 16 federal government. IRS Form 1040 is only for use by resident aliens, not those who are non-residents such as 17 state nationals. The "individual" mentioned in the upper left corner of the form is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-
 18 1(c)(3) as an "alien". STATUTORY "citizens" are not included in the definition and this is the only definition of 19 "individual" anywhere in the I.R.C. or the Treasury Regulations. It also constitutes fraud for a state national to 20 declare themselves to be a resident alien. A state national who chooses a domicile in the federal zone is classified
 21 as a statutory "U.S.** citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) and NOT a "resident" (alien). It is
 22 furthermore a criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 for a state national to impersonate a statutory "U.S. citizen".
 23 The only tax return form a state national can file without committing fraud or a crime is IRS Form 1040NR, and 24 even then he or she is committing a fraud unless lawfully serving in a public office in the national government.

10 We contend that Wikipedia, like most federal judges and prosecutors, are deliberately confusing and perpetuating the

21 4.12.3.11 Territorial STATUTORY citizens are “subject to ITS jurisdiction” in statutes rather than “subject to 22 THE jurisdiction” in the Fourteenth Amendment

23 STATUTORY “U.S. citizens” are described as being “subject to ITS jurisdiction”, as indicated in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c):

24 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

25 (c) Who is a citizen.

26 Every person born or naturalized in the [federal] United States[**] and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen.
 27 For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and
 28 Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. §1401–1459). "
 29 [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)]

30 “It’s” implies the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress from a SINGULAR source, which is what the U.S. Supreme 31 Court calls “the body corporate” of the national government. A similar but not identical phrase appears in the Fourteenth
 32 Amendment:

33 United States Constitution
 34 Fourteenth Amendment

35 “Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are 36 citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.”

37 The definition of statutory “national and citizen of the United States[**]” in 8 U.S.C. §1401 further complicates the mix by 38 ALSO using the phrase “subject to THE jurisdiction”:

39 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part 1 > Sec. 1401.
 40 [Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States\[\*\*\] at birth](#)

41 *The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States[**] at birth:*

(a) a person born in the United States[**], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

(b) a person born in the United States[**] to a member of an Indian, Eskimo, Aleutian, or other aboriginal tribe: Provided, That the granting of citizenship under this subsection shall not in any manner impair or otherwise affect the right of such person to tribal or other property;

To make things even worse, even the U.S. Supreme Court incorrectly refers to the phrase “subject to THE jurisdiction” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment as “subject to ITS jurisdiction”:

To remove this difficulty primarily, and to establish a clear and comprehensive definition of citizenship which should declare what should constitute citizenship of the United States, and also citizenship of a State, the first clause of the first section was framed.

"All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."

The first observation we have to make on this clause is, that it puts at rest both the questions which we stated to have been the subject of differences of opinion. It declares that persons may be citizens of the United States without regard to their citizenship of a particular State, and it overturns the Dred Scott decision by making all persons born within the United States and subject to its jurisdiction citizens of the United States. That its main purpose was to establish the citizenship of the negro can admit of no doubt. The phrase, "subject to its jurisdiction" was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign States born within the United States.

We believe the above incorrect description of the Fourteenth Amendment by the U.S. Supreme Court was deliberately intended to further confuse the two contexts in order to facilitate equivocation of the two contexts and thus, to illegally extend federal legislative jurisdiction into states of the Union. Even the U.S. Supreme Court later admitted the inaccuracy and carelessness of the above statement when it said:

Mr. Justice Miller, indeed, while discussing the causes which led to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment, made this remark: "The phrase, 'subject to its jurisdiction,' was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign States, born within the United States." 16 Wall. 73. This was wholly aside from the question in judgment, and from the course of reasoning bearing upon that question. It was unsupported by any argument, or by any reference to authorities; and that it was not formulated with the same care and exactness, as if the case before the court had called for an exact definition of the phrase, is apparent from its classing foreign ministers and consuls together — whereas it was then well settled law, as has since been recognized in a judgment of this court in which Mr. Justice Miller concurred, that consuls, as such, and unless expressly invested with a diplomatic character in addition to their ordinary powers, are not considered as entrusted with authority to represent their sovereign in his intercourse <sup>679</sup>with foreign States or to vindicate his prerogatives, or entitled by the law of nations to the privileges and immunities of ambassadors or public ministers, but are subject to the jurisdiction, civil and criminal, of the courts of the country in which they reside. 1 Kent Com. 44; Story Conflict of Laws, § 48; Wheaton International Law, (8th ed.) § 249; The Anne, (1818) 3 Wheat. 435, 445, 446; Gittings v. Crawford, (1838) Taney, 1, 10; In re Baiz, (1890) 135 U.S. 403, 424.

In weighing a remark uttered under such circumstances, it is well to bear in mind the often quoted words of Chief Justice Marshall: "It is a maxim not to be disregarded, that general expressions, in every opinion, are to be taken in connection with the case in which those expressions are used. If they go beyond the case, they may be respected, but ought not to control the judgment in a subsequent suit when the very point is presented for decision. The reason of this maxim is obvious. The question actually before the court is investigated with care, and considered in its full extent. Other principles which may serve to illustrate it are considered in their relation to the case decided, but their possible bearing on all other cases is seldom completely investigated."
[United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

The IRS capitalized on the above confusion in their description of “citizen” in the Treasury regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) by using “subject to ITS jurisdiction” rather than “subject to THE jurisdiction”. They never clarify WHICH of the two types of citizens or jurisdictions they mean, because like the U.S. Supreme Court, they want to encourage equivocation that will make BOTH STATE citizens and TERRITORIAL citizens appear equal AND subject to the LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction of Congress. We know, however, that according to the U.S. Supreme Court, they are NOT equal as admitted in the above case:

 2 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states.
 3 No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act
 4 of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the
 5 public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except
 6 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided
 7 always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens.
 8 Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”
 9 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

10 You CANNOT be a citizen of BOTH places at the SAME TIME: federal territory and a state of the Union. It’s ONE or the 11 OTHER. Furthermore, if you are a citizen of a state of the Union because born or naturalized there, then you are a
 12 FOREIGNER in respect to federal territory!:

13 “Constitutionally, only those born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are

27 State nationals are foreign in relation to federal territory and territorial statutory “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are 28 foreigners in relation to states of the Union. Even though they are “foreigners” they are NOT “aliens” in relation to federal 29 territory. Hence, they cannot ALSO be statutory “individuals” as defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

30 Below is an example proving that STATUTORY “nationals” can be CONSTITUTIONAL “aliens”, where the petitioner was
 31 a Filipino citizen and a STATUTORY “national of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). Even then, they 32 identified him as an “alien”:

33 The petitioner urges finally that the requirement of “entry” is implicit in the 1931 Act. Citing Fong Yue Ting v.
 34 United States, 149 U. S. 698, he argues that the bounds of the power to deport aliens are circumscribed by the 35 bounds of the power to exclude them, and that the power to exclude extends only to “foreigners” and does not
 36 embrace Filipinos admitted from the Islands when they were a territory of the United States. It is true that
 37 Filipinos were not excludable from the country under any general statute relating to the exclusion of “aliens.”
 38 See Gonzales v. Williams, 192 U. S. 1, 12-13; Toyota v. United States, 268 U. S. 402, 411.

39 But the fallacy in the petitioner's argument is the erroneous assumption that Congress was without power to 40 legislate the exclusion of Filipinos in the same manner as “foreigners.” This Court has held that “. . . the power
 41 to acquire territory by treaty implies not only the power to govern such territory, but to prescribe upon what
 42 terms the United States will receive its inhabitants, and what their status shall be . . . .” Downes v. Bidwell, 182
 43 *U. S. 244, 279.<sup>[12]</sup> Congress not only had, but exercised, <sup>433*433</sup> the power to exclude Filipinos in the provision*
 44 of § 8 (a) (1) of the Independence Act, which, for the period from 1934 to 1946, provided:

45 “For the purposes of the Immigration Act of 1917, the Immigration Act of 1924 (except section 13 (c)), this
 46 section, and all other laws of the United States relating to the immigration, exclusion, or expulsion of aliens,
 47 citizens of the Philippine Islands who are not citizens of the United States shall be considered as if they were 48 aliens. For such purposes the Philippine Islands shall be considered as a separate country and shall have for 49 each fiscal year a quota of fifty. . . .” 48 Stat. 462, 48 U. S. C. (1934 ed.) § 1238.

50 The 1931 Act plainly covers the situation of the petitioner, who was an alien, and who was convicted of a federal
 51 narcotics offense. Cf. United States ex rel. Eichenlaub v. Shaughnessy, 338 U.S. 521. We therefore conclude that 52 the petitioner was deportable as an alien under that Act. The judgment is Affirmed.”

53 [. . .]

1 MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS, dissenting.

2 [. . .]

3 No matter how the case is viewed, the 1931 Act is applicable only to aliens who had made an "entry" in this
4 country.

5 This Filipino came to the United States in 1930 and he has never left here. If the spirit of the 1931 Act is to be
6 observed, he should not be lumped with all other "aliens" who made an "entry." The Filipino alien, who came
7 here while he was a national, stands in a class by himself and should remain there, until and unless Congress
8 extends these harsh deportation measures to his class.

10 https://scholar.google.com/scholar\_case?case=9072441037225227210]

11 The Filipino referenced above was both an "alien" and a "national" at the same time! How can this be? The answer is that
12 each word applies to a different context. He was a CONSTITUTIONAL alien and a STATUTORY "national" at the SAME
13 TIME. He was alien to states of the Union (United States***) but still a member of the NATION United States*.

14 The only way to correctly resolve this deliberate confusion of contexts is to conclude the following:

- 15 1. There are TWO contexts for the phrases "subject to THE jurisdiction" and "subject to ITS jurisdiction":
  - 16 1.1. STATUTORY.
  - 17 1.2. CONSTITUTIONAL.
- 18 2. There are TWO "United States" one can owe allegiance to:
  - 19 2.1. The collective states of the Union under the Constitution.
  - 20 2.2. The CORPORATION "United States" under federal statutes. 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).
- 21 3. "Subject to ITS jurisdiction" as used in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c):
  - 22 3.1. Is the STATUTORY context and therefore refers to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and to federal territory
23 ONLY.
  - 24 3.2. Is LEGISLATIVE rather than POLITICAL jurisdiction.
  - 25 3.3. NOWHERE used in the Constitution and therefore CANNOT be the Constitutional context.
- 26 4. "Subject to THE jurisdiction" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401:
  - 27 4.1. Refers ALSO to allegiance, but the allegiance is owed to the CORPORATION "United States" rather than to the 28 individual states of the Union or to the United States***.
  - 29 4.2. Is the origin of how one becomes a STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL "national". "national", after all,
30 is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) as someone owing allegiance to the "United States[**]".
- 31 5. "Subject to THE jurisdiction" in the Fourteenth Amendment:
  - 32 5.1. Refers to allegiance to the United States of America as a collective and to the constitutional State one is born in or 33 naturalized in.
  - 34 5.2. Is POLITICAL jurisdiction rather than LEGISLATIVE jurisdiction.
  - 35 5.3. Is equivalent to "subject to THEIR jurisdiction" as used in the Thirteenth Amendment.
- 36 6. The deliberate confusion between "subject to THE jurisdiction" and "subject to ITS jurisdiction" found in 37 Slaughterhouse Cases above was put there to make the reader falsely presume that the two phrases are equivalent. We 38 can clearly see that they are NOT, and that believing they are is a logical fallacy called equivocation.

39 equivocation

40 *EQUIVOCATION, n. Ambiguity of speech; the use of words or expressions that are susceptible of a double
41 signification. Hypocrites are often guilty of equivocation, and by this means lose the confidence of their fellow 42 men. Equivocation is incompatible with the Christian character and profession.

43 [SOURCE: <http://1828.mshaffer.com/d/search/word/equivocation/>]

45 Equivocation ("to call by the same name") is an informal logical fallacy. It is the misleading use of a term with 46 more than one meaning or sense (by glossing over which meaning is intended at a particular time). It generally 47 occurs with polysemic words (words with multiple meanings).

1 Albeit in common parlance it is used in a variety of contexts, when discussed as a fallacy, equivocation only
 2 occurs when the arguer makes a word or phrase employed in two (or more) different senses in an argument
 3 appear to have the same meaning throughout.<sup>173</sup>

4 It is therefore distinct from (semantic) ambiguity, which means that the context doesn't make the meaning of the 5 word or phrase clear, and amphiboly (or syntactical ambiguity), which refers to ambiguous sentence structure
 6 due to punctuation or syntax.<sup>174</sup>

7 [Wikipedia: Equivocation, Downloaded 9/15/2015; SOURCE: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Equivocation>]

8 Any OTHER approach to these two phrases as described above leads to irreconcilable inconsistencies that no court can
 9 rationally explain away. That is why they leave this issue alone and refuse to clarify it: So that they can protect their right
 10 to continue the MASSIVE identity theft that results from assuming that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens are equivalent to
 11 STATUTORY citizens.

12 Therefore, the ONLY type of “citizen” that the income tax is imposed upon in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 is people born on federal 13 territory. It does NOT include people born or naturalized in a constitutional state.

14 4.12.3.12 Who started the STATUTORY v. CONSTITUTIONAL citizen confusion SCAM

15 The deliberate scheme to confuse STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL “persons” was first enacted by none other than 16 Franklin Delano Roosevelt immediately after he took office in 1933. The law he enacted to confiscate all gold was the
 17 Emergency Banking Relief Act, 48 Stat. 1 and that act ONLY applied to STATUTORY “persons” WITHIN the EXCLUSIVE
 18 jurisdiction of the national government and NOT to CONSTITUTIONAL “persons” or “citizens”. Of course, none of the 19 thieves in government were honest enough to admit the differences in these two types of “persons” or “citizens” and they 20 exploited this confusion to STEAL all the gold of Americans, and move it to the then new Fort Knox in seven railcars packed 21 to the brim with gold.

22 Let's go back to March 6-9, 1933 and find out what FDR did. Instead of formulating a plan demanding that the Federal
 23 Reserve honor their contractual obligations to the People he instead consulted the Federal Reserve as to how they believed 24 the crisis should be solved! Remember the REAL emergency was that the bankers did not want to honor their contractual
 25 obligation to convert the People's gold certificates to gold. The cats were consulted about what their punishment should be 26 for eating mice. Of course, the cats ruled that they should be fed more mice! What did the private federal reserve conclude
 27 that their punishment should be for embezzling the People's gold and dishonoring their fiduciary responsibilities and 28 legitimate contractual obligations? The cats at the FED decided that they should be fed more mice and the President was 29 instructed to pass a law demanding that the People return ALL of their gold to the bankers or be subjected to a stiff fine and 30 jail time. Roosevelt's Proclamations were taken word for word from the Resolution adopted by Federal Reserve.

31 Resolution Adopted by the Federal Reserve Board of New York.

32 “Whereas, in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the continued and 33 increasing withdrawal of currency and gold from the banks of the country has now created a national 34 emergency...”

35 Remember, the controllers of the Federal Reserve were extremely well educated in law. History has shown them to be the 36 brains behind all major Wars throughout the world. They create a conflict and then fund all sides. War is big business for 37 banks. The fed understood how Congress can legislate for its Territorial subject “persons” through Art. I, Sec. 8, Clause 17,
 38 without regards to the Constitution (see also Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)). These same scoundrels probably
 39 created the loophole! They also knew the difference between the CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens
 40 and they were well aware of the War Powers. Following is the original October 6, 1917 combined with the Amendments of

SIXTY FIFTH CONGRESS Sess. I Chapter 106, Page 411, October 6, 1917, 48 Stat. 1

CHAP 106—An Act To define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that this Act shall be known as the “Trading With the Enemy Act.”

SEC. 2. That the word “enemy” as used herein shall be deemed to mean, for the purposes of such trading and of this Act—

(a) Any individual, partnership, or other party of individuals, or any nationality, resident within the territory (including that occupied by the military and naval forces of any nation with which the United States is at war or resident outside the United States and doing business within such territory and any corporation incorporated within any country other than the United States and doing business with such [enemy] territory, and any corporation incorporated within such territory with which the United States is at war or incorporated within any country other than the United States.

(b) The government of any nation with which the United States is at war, or any political or municipal subdivision thereof.

(c) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any nation with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States, wherever resident or wherever doing business, as the President, if he shall find the safety of the United States or the successful prosecution of the war shall so require may, by proclamation, include within the term enemy”

[this section then continues to define an “ally of an enemy” in the same terms as the “enemy” and again states, “other than citizens of the United States.”]

Public Laws of the Seventy-Third Congress, Chapter 1, Title I, March 9, 1933 Sec. 2

Subdivision (b) of Section 5 of the Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 411), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 5(b) “During time of war or during any other period of national emergency declared by the President, the President may through any agency that he may designate, or otherwise, investigate, regulate, or prohibit, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, by means of licenses or otherwise, any transactions of foreign exchange, export or earmarkings of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency, transfers of credits in any form (other than credits relating solely to transactions to be executed wholly within the United States) between or payments by banking institutions as defined by the President, and export, hoarding melting, or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency by any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof; and transfers of evidences of indebtedness or of ownership of property between the United States and any foreign country, whether enemy, ally of enemy or otherwise, or between residents of one or and he the President may require any such person engaged in any such transaction referred to in this subdivision to furnish under oath, complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters or other papers, in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person, either before or after such transaction is completed. Whoever willfully violates any of the provisions of this subdivision or of any license, order, rule or regulation issued thereunder, shall, upon conviction be fined not more than $10,000, or, if a natural person, may be imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both;’...”

Following the above act, socialist FDR then signed Executive Order 6102 ordering “citizens of the United States” to turn in their gold. Information on Executive Order 6102:

The only “individuals” or “persons” he could lawfully be referring to in Executive Order 6102 are STATUTORY citizens who are ALSO public officers in the government, because the ability to regulate exclusively private rights is repugnant to the Constitution. Furthermore, even in times of national emergency, it is illegal to violate such a constitutional limitation:

THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION IS NON-SUSPENDIBLE!

"No emergency justifies the violation of any of the provisions of the United States Constitution."<sup>175</sup> An emergency, however, while it cannot create power, increase granted power, or remove or diminish the restrictions imposed upon the power granted or reserved, may allow the exercise of power already in existence, but not exercised except during an emergency.<sup>176</sup>

The circumstances in which the executive branch may exercise extraordinary powers under the Constitution are very narrow.<sup>177</sup> The danger must be immediate and impending, or the necessity urgent for the public service, such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the means which the occasion calls for.<sup>178</sup> For example, there is no basis in the Constitution for the seizure of steel mills during a wartime labor dispute, despite the President's claim that the war effort would be crippled if the mills were shut down.<sup>179</sup>

4.12.3.13 STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL "aliens" are equivalent under U.S.C. Title 8

Many people mistakenly try to apply the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL context dichotomy to the term "alien" and this is a mistake. The distinction between STATUTORY citizens v. CONSTITUTIONAL citizens does not apply to the term "alien". We don't think we have confused people by using the term "statutory citizen" and then excluding "alien" from the statutory context in Title 8 because.

1. Title 8 covers TWO opposites based on its name: "Aliens and nationality". You are either an "alien" or a "national". Statutory citizens under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) are a SUBSET of "nationals". A "citizen" under U.S. Code Titles 8, 26, and 42 is a "national of the United States**" domiciled on federal territory.
2. A "nonresident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) is someone who is:
  - 2.1. Neither a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 nor a "resident" (alien) of the United States**). . .AND
  - 2.2. A foreign domiciled party or a "non-citizen national of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), 8 U.S.C. §§1408, or 1452. . .AND
  - 2.3. A public officer in the national government. If they are not a public officer, they would be a "non-resident non-person".
3. The context for whether one is a "national" is whether they were born or naturalized "within allegiance to the sovereign" or on territory within a country or place that has allegiance. That is what the "pledge of allegiance" is about, in fact. The flag flies in lots of places, not just on federal territory or even constitutional states. As described in the United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936), the "United States of America" is THAT country, and that entity is a POLITICAL and not a GEOGRAPHIC entity. The U.S. supreme court calls this entity "the body politic". It is even defined politically as a CORPORATION and not a geographic region in United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936). "States" are not geography, but political groups. "citizens" are political members of this group. Physical presence on territory protected by a "state" does not imply political membership. Rather, the coincidence of DOMICILE and NATIONALITY together establish membership. Without BOTH, you can't be a member of the political group. THIS group is called "We the People" in the USA constitution and it is PEOPLE, not territory or geography.

4. The terms "CONSTITUTIONAL" and "STATUTORY" only relate to the coincidence of DOMICILE and the GEOGRAPHY it is tied to. It has nothing to do with nationality, because nationality is not a source of civil jurisdiction or civil status. "national", in fact, is a political status, not a civil status. The allegiance that gives rise to nationality is, in fact, political and not territorial in nature. Abandoning that allegiance is an expatriating act according to 8 U.S.C. §1481.

HOWEVER, the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL contexts DO apply to the term "nonresident alien" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) because:

1. "nonresident aliens" are a SUBSET of "aliens", not a SUPERSET. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).
2. A STATUTORY "national of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) and a "national" as mentioned in the definition of "nonresident alien" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) are the SAME thing.
3. Those who are state nationals per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and who are engaged in a public office can be "nonresident aliens" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B) but STILL not be "aliens" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). This exception would apply to both "non-citizen nationals of the United States**" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408 as well as state nationals. HOWEVER, the office being served MUST be expressly authorized by 4 U.S.C. §72 to be exercised where it is exercised and that place must be in the federal zone when exercised.

4.12.4 Proof that Statutory citizens/residents are a franchise status that has nothing to do with your domicile

The following subsections will prove that statutory "U.S. citizen" or "citizen and national of the United States" status found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) is a franchise status that has nothing to do with one's domicile. If you would like to know more about the devious abuse of franchises to destroy your rights and break the chains of the Constitution that bind your public servants and protect your rights, see:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030

4.12.4.1 Background

The biggest complaint most people have about the government is that it imposes mandatory obligations that appear to institute involuntary servitude. How do they do it without violating the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition on involuntary servitude or the Fifth Amendment prohibition on taking PRIVATE property without compensation? This section will attempt to answer that question.

The "obligations" owed to the state by STATUTORY "citizens" (8 U.S.C. §1401) are spoken of in Baker v. Keck, 13 F.Supp. 486 (1936):

"Citizenship and domicile are substantially synonymous. Residency and inhabitation are too often confused with the terms and have not the same significance. Citizenship implies more than residence [domicile]. It carries with it the idea of identification with the state and a participation in its functions. As a citizen, one sustains social, political, and moral obligation to the state and possesses social and political rights under the Constitution and laws thereof. Harding v. Standard Oil Co. et al. (C.C.), 182 F. 421; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U.S. 678, 7 S.Ct. 763, 32 L.Ed. 766; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 476, 15 L.Ed. 691."
 [Baker v. Keck, 13 F.Supp. 486 (1936)]

The above obligations are civil STATUTORY obligations. Yet the Thirteenth Amendment forbids involuntary servitude. The following series of facts is the ONLY thing that explains how these statutes can impose DUTIES or obligations against those who are STATUTORY citizens WITHOUT violating the Thirteenth Amendment:

1. There are, in fact, two capacities in which every human can act: PUBLIC and PRIVATE. Here is a maxim of law on the subject:

"Quando duo juro concurrunt in und personâ, æquum est ac si essent in diversis.
 When two rights [PUBLIC right v. PRIVATE right] concur in one person, it is the same as if they were two separate persons. 4 Co. 118.

[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

2. Consent of the PRIVATE human being is required to FILL said PUBLIC office.
  - 2.1. The only way anything PUBLIC can attach to otherwise PRIVATE property is WITH the EXPRESS CONSENT of the OWNER of that property. Otherwise there has been an unconstitutional Fifth Amendment taking.
  - 2.2. When we refer to the method of connecting humans to government/public offices, we simply say that the PUBLIC (office) and the PRIVATE (human) cannot be connected together and thereby become an object of legislation WITHOUT the CONSENT of the human that is BEING connected. That connection, in fact is called the "res" or "thing" that is the only thing Congress can legislate against.

Res. Lat. The subject matter of a trust or will. In the civil law, a thing; an object. As a term of the law, this word has a very wide and extensive signification, including not only things which are objects of property, but also such as are not capable of individual ownership. And in old English law it is said to have a general import, comprehending both corporeal and incorporeal things of whatever kind, nature, or species. By "res," according to the modern civilians, is meant everything that may form an object of rights, in opposition to "persona," which is regarded as a subject of rights. "Res," therefore, in its general meaning, comprises actions of all kinds; while in its restricted sense it comprehends every object of right, except actions. This has reference to the fundamental division of the Institutes that all law relates either to persons, to things, or to actions.

Res is everything that may form an object of rights and includes an object, subject-matter or status. In re Riggle's Will, 11 A.D.2d. 51 205 N.Y.S.2d. 19, 21, 22. The term is particularly applied to an object, subject-matter, or status, considered as the defendant in an action, or as an object against which, directly, proceedings are taken. Thus, in a prize case, the captured vessel is "the res"; and proceedings of this character are said to be in rem. (See In personam; In Rem.) "Res" may also denote the action or proceeding, as when a cause, which is not between adversary parties, is entitled "In re _____". [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1304-1306]

- 2.3. If the PUBLIC and PRIVATE never get connected, the PUBLIC OFFICE is civilly dead and constitutes an abandoned estate.
- 2.4. Remember: All just powers of the government derive from CONSENT. The implication is that anything not traceable BACK to consent is inherently UNJUST, UNCONSTITUTIONAL, and ILLEGAL.
3. ALL the powers of the government, including its authority to enact civil laws imposing an obligation upon you, depend EITHER on a public office or a contract made with otherwise PRIVATE people. Since the average American has no contracts with the national government, then the ONLY way for the obligations of BEING a STATUTORY "citizen" can attach is through a public office called "U.S.** citizen" or "citizen of the United States**".

*"A private person cannot make constitutions or laws, nor can he with authority construe them, nor can he administer or execute them."<sup>180</sup>
[United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 1 S.Ct. 601, 27 L.Ed. 290 (1883)]*

*"All the powers of the government [including ALL of its civil enforcement powers against the public] must be carried into operation by individual agency, either through the medium of public officers, or contracts made with [private] individuals."
[Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]*

- Those who disagree with the assertion in this step are asked simply to prove HOW a person can "obey" or be the "subject" of a specific statute WITHOUT "executing" it as indicated above? The answer is that it is IMPOSSIBLE!
4. The statutory obligations must attach to a PUBLIC office and privilege called STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen" and not to the PRIVATE human being FILLING said office.

"Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon their inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-11. If the Citizenship Clause guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes would have been unnecessary. While longstanding practice is not sufficient to demonstrate constitutionality, such a practice requires special scrutiny before being set aside. See, e.g., Jackman v. Rosenbaum Co., 260 U.S. 22, 31 (1922) (Holmes, J.) ("If a thing has been practiced for two hundred years by common consent, it will need a strong case for the Fourteenth Amendment to affect it."); Walz v. Tax Comm'n, 397 U.S. 664, 678 (1970) ("It is obviously correct that no one acquires a vested or protected right in violation of the Constitution by long use . . . . Yet an unbroken practice . . . is not something to be lightly cast aside."). And while Congress cannot take away the citizenship of individuals covered by the Citizenship Clause, it can bestow citizenship upon those not within the Constitution's breadth. See U.S. Const. art. IV, § 3, cl. 2 ("Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory belonging to the United States[**]"); id. at art. I, § 8, cl. 4 (Congress may "establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization . . ."). To date, Congress has not seen fit to bestow birthright citizenship upon American Samoa, and in accordance with the law, this Court must and will respect that choice.<sup>16</sup>

[Tuaua v. U.S.A, 951 F.Supp.2d. 88 (2013)]

5. "Citizenship" must be voluntary, because the Thirteenth Amendment outlaws INVOLUNTARY servitude EVERYWHERE, including federal territory. Certainly, being compelled to occupy a PUBLIC OFFICES in the government would qualify as unconstitutional involuntary servitude.
6. When a public office is associated with a specific person, it is called "citizenship" by the courts.
7. Those who refuse the public office called STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen":
  - 7.1. Are called "nonresidents" and are NOT protected by the civil statutory law.
  - 7.2. Lack STATUTORY diversity of citizenship no matter WHERE they are domiciled, under 28 U.S.C. §1332.
  - 7.3. Can ONLY invoke CONSTITUTIONAL diversity of citizenship under Article III, Section 2.
  - 7.4. Have a civil domicile on geographic territory and are NOT subject to civil statutory law.
  - 7.5. Cannot lawfully have the choice of law switched to federal territory because they are not within the STATUTORY geographical "United States" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).
8. You must declare yourself to BE a STATUTORY "citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401, born on federal territory) in order to invoke the PRIVILEGES of the PUBLIC office.
9. Federal territory is NOT protected by the Constitution or the Bill of Rights:

"Indeed, the practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect [182 U.S. 244, 279] that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest, only when and so far as Congress shall so direct. Notwithstanding its duty to 'guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government' (art. 4, 4), by which we understand, according to the definition of Webster, 'a government in which the supreme power resides in the whole body of the people, and is exercised by representatives elected by them,' Congress did not hesitate, in the original organization of the territories of Louisiana, Florida, the Northwest Territory, and its subdivisions of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, and Wisconsin and still more recently in the case of Alaska, to establish a form of government bearing a much greater analogy to a British Crown colony than a republican state of America, and to vest the legislative power either in a governor and council, or a governor and judges, to be appointed by the President. It was not until they had attained a certain population that power was given them to organize a legislature by vote of the people. In all these cases, as well as in territories subsequently organized west of the Mississippi, Congress thought it necessary either to extend to Constitution and laws of the United States over them, or to declare that the inhabitants should be entitled to enjoy the right of trial by jury, of bail, and of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as other privileges of the bill of rights."
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

10. STATUTORY citizens (8 U.S.C. §1401, born on federal territory), by definition, are both domiciled on federal territory AND present there, and hence HAVE no constitutional rights. Otherwise, they wouldn't BE STATUTORY citizens but rather "stateless persons" and "nonresidents". You can't have a CIVIL STATUS in a place unless you are DOMICILED there.
11. Those who invoke the congressionally granted statutory PRIVILEGES of the PUBLIC OFFICE, meaning those who are STATUTORY "citizens" (8 U.S.C. §1401, born on federal territory) are not covered by the Thirteenth Amendment or the legal obligations imposed upon them would be unconstitutional.
  - 11.1. If these STATUTORY "U.S. citizens" aren't protected by the Thirteenth Amendment, then they must NOT be protected by ANY part of the REST of the Bill of Rights either!
  - 11.2. The question then becomes: why would ANYONE want to be a STATUTORY citizen if they are not protected by the Constitution and have no CONSTITUTIONAL rights? The answer is that they are AN IDIOT!
12. Do you REALLY have to give up ALL your constitutional rights to become a STATUTORY citizen? The answer is YES! Here is what one court said on that subject:

When one becomes a member of society, he necessarily parts with some rights or privileges which, as an individual not affected by his relations to others, he might retain. "A body politic," as aptly defined in the preamble of the Constitution of Massachusetts, "is a social compact by which the whole people covenants with each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common good." This does not confer power upon the whole people to control rights which are purely and exclusively private. Thorpe v. R. & B. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 143; but it does authorize the establishment of laws requiring each citizen to so conduct himself, and so use his own property, as not unnecessarily to injure another. This is the very essence of government, and 125*125 has found expression in the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. From this source come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the License

Cases, 5 How. 583, "are nothing more or less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty, . . . that is to say, . . . the power to govern men and things." Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good. In their exercise it has been customary in England from time immemorial, and in this country from its first colonization, to regulate ferries, common carriers, hackmen, bakers, millers, wharfingers, innkeepers, &c., and in so doing to fix a maximum of charge to be made for services rendered, accommodations furnished, and articles sold. To this day, statutes are to be found in many of the States upon some or all these subjects; and we think it has never yet been successfully contended that such legislation came within any of the constitutional prohibitions against interference with private property. With the Fifth Amendment in force, Congress, in 1820, conferred power upon the city of Washington "to regulate . . . the rates of wharfage at private wharves, . . . the sweeping of chimneys, and to fix the rates of fees therefor, . . . and the weight and quality of bread," 3 Stat. 587, sect. 7; and, in 1848, "to make all necessary regulations respecting hackney carriages and the rates of fare of the same, and the rates of hauling by cartmen, wagoners, carmen, and draymen, and the rates of commission of auctioneers," 9 id. 224, sect. 2.

Notice based on the above, that the power of the government to control and regulate you REQUIRES that you FIRST VOLUNTEER become a STATUTORY "citizen". Otherwise you would be EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE and beyond their control. If you don't want to be controlled or regulated then don't volunteer to become a citizen and instead be a "non-resident non-person" protected ONLY by the common law.

"Under these powers the government regulates the conduct of its citizens one towards another, and the manner in which each shall use his own property, when such regulation becomes necessary for the public good."

"...we are of the opinion that there is a clear distinction in this particular between an [PRIVATE] individual and a [PUBLIC] corporation, and that the latter has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the state. The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state or to his neighbors to divulge his business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty to the state, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the state, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.

"Upon the other hand, the [PUBLIC] corporation is a creature of the state. It is presumed to be incorporated for the benefit of the public. It receives certain special privileges and franchises, and holds them subject to the laws of the state and the limitations of its charter. Its powers are limited by law. It can make no contract not authorized by its charter. Its rights to [201 U.S. 43, 75] act as a corporation are only preserved to it so long as it obeys the laws of its creation. There is a reserved right in the legislature to investigate its contracts and find out whether it has exceeded its powers. It would be a strange anomaly to hold that a state, having chartered a corporation to make use of certain franchises, could not, in the exercise of its sovereignty, inquire how these franchises had been employed, and whether they had been abused, and demand the production of the corporate books and papers for that purpose. The defense amounts to this: That an officer of a corporation which is charged with a criminal violation of the statute, may plead the criminality of such corporation as a refusal to produce its books. To state this proposition is to answer it. While an individual may lawfully refuse to answer incriminating questions unless protected by an immunity statute, it does not follow that a corporation, vested with special privileges and franchises, may refuse to show its hand when charged with an abuse of such privileges."
 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

13. The U.S. Supreme Court also confirmed that PUBLIC officers of the national government such as STATUTORY "U.S. citizens" (8 U.S.C. §1401, born on federal territory) have no constitutional rights, when it held:

"The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v. Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause, but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when the incriminating information that they refuse to provide relates to the performance of their job. Gardner v.

Broderick, [497 U.S. 62, 95] 392 U.S. 273, 277 -278 (1968). With regard to freedom of speech in particular: Private citizens cannot be punished for speech of merely private concern, but government employees can be fired for that reason. Connick v. Myers, 461 U.S. 138, 147 (1983). Private citizens cannot be punished for partisan political activity, but federal and state employees can be dismissed and otherwise punished for that reason. *Public Workers v. 14. These same STATUTORY “U.S. citizens” MUST be public officers, because when they serve on jury duty, they are identified in statutes as said officers, and they CAN’T serve on jury duty in federal court WITHOUT being STATUTORY “U.S. citizens” WITH a domicile on federal territory NOT within any state of the Union.

§ 201. Bribery of public officials and witnesses

(a) For the purpose of this section—

(1) the term “public official” means Member of Congress, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, either before or after such official has qualified, or an officer or employee or person acting for or on behalf of the United States, or any department, agency or branch of Government thereof, including the District of Columbia, in any official function, under or by authority of any such department, agency, or branch of Government, or a juror;

So WHERE did the above public office come from: the JUROR status or the STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” status that is the PREREQUISITE for BEING a juror? We think it came from the STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” status and that jury service, like voting, is a PUBLIC PRIVILEGE and a PUBLIC FRANCHISE rather than a PRIVATE RIGHT that can be lawfully exercised ONLY by a public officer in the government. All franchises presume the actors are public officers.

“Long ago in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 370, 6 S.Ct. 1064, 1071, 30 L.Ed. 220 the Court referred to 'the political franchise of voting' as a 'fundamental political right, because preservative of all rights.' Recently in Reynolds v. Sims, 377 U.S. 533, 561—562, 84 S.Ct. 1362, 1381, 12 L.Ed.2d. 506, we said, 'Undoubtedly, the right of suffrage is a fundamental matter in a free and democratic society. Especially since the right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaird manner is preservative of other basic civil and political rights, any alleged infringement of the right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized.' There we were considering charges that voters in one part of the State had greater representation per person in the State Legislature than voters in another part of the State. We concluded:

'A citizen, a qualified voter, is no more nor no less so because he lives in the city or on the farm. This is the clear and strong command of our Constitution's Equal Protection Clause. This is an essential part of the concept of a government of laws and not men. This is at the heart of Lincoln's vision of 'government of the people, by the people, (and) for the people.' The Equal Protection Clause demands no less than substantially equal state legislative representation for all citizens, of all places as well as of all races.' Id., at 568, 84 S.Ct. at 1385.”

“The National Government and the States may not deny or abridge the right to vote on account of race. The Amendment reaffirms the equality of races at the most basic level of the democratic process, the exercise of the voting franchise. It protects all persons, not just members of a particular race. Important precedents give instruction in the instant case. The Amendment was quite sufficient to invalidate a grandfather clause that did not mention race but instead used ancestry in an attempt to confine and restrict the voting franchise. Guinn v. United States, 238 U.S. 347, 364 365; and it sufficed to strike down the white primary systems designed to exclude one racial class (at least) from voting. see, e.g., *Terry v. their own residents are not secured to residents of other states by the Federal Constitution. Included are such matters as the elective franchise, the right to sit upon juries, and the right to hold public office. The reasons are obvious. If a state were to entrust the elective franchise to residents of another state, its sovereignty would not rest upon the will of its own citizens; and if it permitted its offices to be filled and their functions to be exercised by persons from other states, the state citizens to that extent would not enjoy the right of self-government.<sup>182</sup> here are also numerous privileges that may be accorded by a state to its own people in which citizens of other states may not participate except in conformity to such reasonable regulations as may be established by the state.<sup>183</sup> For instance, a state cannot forbid citizens of other states to sue in its courts, that right being enjoyed by its own people; but it may require a nonresident, although a citizen of another state, to give a bond for costs, although such bond is not required of a resident.<sup>184</sup> A statute restricting the right to carry a concealed weapon to state residents does not violate the Privileges and Immunities Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment; the factor of residence has a legitimate connection with the statute, since substantial danger to the public interest would be caused by an unrestricted flow of dangerous weapons into and through the state.<sup>185</sup> “[16B American Jurisprudence 2d, Constitutional law, §751: State citizenship and its privileges (1999)]

4.12.4.2 All statutory “U.S.** citizens” are naturalized aliens whose nationality is a revocable taxable privilege

It may surprise the reader to learn that all STATUTORY “U.S.** citizens” under the Internal Revenue Code are naturalized aliens born, collectively naturalized, or collectively NATIONALIZED (“U.S.** national”) in a federal territory or possession not within a constitutional state. This section will establish that fact.

In order to be a privilege and therefore taxable, statutory “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 must:

1. Be unilaterally revocable by the government without the consent of the person holding it. Anything that is revocable is public property loaned temporarily to the recipient with legal strings attached. All franchises are temporary loans of public property.<sup>186</sup> In order to be revocable, the status must ALSO initially be granted by the same entity that revokes it.
2. Be created and granted ONLY by statute. The grant of the privilege occurs in 8 U.S.C. §§1401-1409.
3. Not be granted by the Constitution such that Congress, rather than the Sovereign People created the public right. The CREATOR of a right is always the OWNER.<sup>187</sup> The constitution confers CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship by birth or naturalization, but only in the case of those born in constitutional states. It requires no statute (such as 8 U.S.C. §1401) to acquire the “force of law”. For everyone else, such as those born in territories or abroad, 8 U.S.C. §§1401-1409 is the only authority or grant of the privilege of statutory citizenship. The following case establishes that rights created by the Constitution do not NEED statutes, which indirectly admits that STATUTORY privileges and CONSTITUTIONAL rights are mutually exclusive in most cases:

“Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon their inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-11. If the Citizenship Clause guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes would have been unnecessary.”
[Tuaua v. U.S.A, 951 F.Supp.2d. 88 (2013)]

In order to establish that a statutory “national and citizen of the United States [**] at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a revocable and taxable privilege, we need only establish statutory authority to REVOKE it to begin with. That authority is found in 8 U.S.C. §1401(g) and is described at length in Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971).

This proviso shall be applicable to persons born on or after December 24, 1952, to the same extent as if it had become effective in its present form on that date; and

The Rogers v. Bellei case mentioned above hinged on the loss of 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizenship by Bellei because he had not met the residence requirements found in 8 U.S.C. §1401(g).

The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei [an 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY citizen]. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *,' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others. [ . . . ]

The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.' The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' the statute must be constitutional.

Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S. 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute. [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

In a like fashion, those born in unincorporated territories that were later emancipated to become independent nations must LOSE their statutory citizenship and/or nationality by necessity. With these two examples, we have demonstrated that STATUTORY citizenship is revocable and therefore a FRANCHISE PRIVILEGE rather than a RIGHT. Because statutory citizenship is revocable and a franchise, it is subject to regulation and/or taxation.

Constitutional citizenship, on the other hand, is NOT revocable and therefore is a right and a PRIVATE right not subject to regulation or taxation.

"The entire legislative history of the 1868 Act makes it abundantly clear that there was a strong feeling in the Congress that the only way the citizenship it conferred could be lost was by the voluntary renunciation or abandonment by the citizen himself. And this was the unequivocal statement of the Court in the case of United States v. Wong Kim Ark."

[Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253, 87 S.Ct. 1660 (1967)]

The ability to assign statutory citizenship to territories once acquired derives from Congress' power of naturalization, or more particularly COLLECTIVE naturalization:

“Constitutionally, only those born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens. Const.Amdt. XIV. The power to fix and determine the rules of naturalization is vested in the Congress, Const.Art. I, sec. 8, cl. 4. Since all persons born outside of the United States, are “foreigners,”<sup>188</sup> and not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, the statutes, such as § 1993 and 8 U.S.C.A. §601, derive their validity from the naturalization power of the Congress. Elk v. Wilkins, 1884, 112 U.S. 94, 101, 5 S.Ct. 41, 28 L.Ed. 643; Wong Kim Ark v. U. S., 1898, 169 U.S. 649, 702, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890. Persons in whom citizenship is vested by such statutes are naturalized citizens and not native-born citizens. Zimmer v. Acheson, 10 Cir. 1951, 191 F.2d. 209, 211; Wong Kim Ark v. U. S., supra.”
[Ly Shew v. Acheson, 110 F.Supp. 50 (N.D. Cal., 1953)]

8 U.S.C. §601 above was repealed in 1952. It refers to what is now 8 U.S.C. §1401 “nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth”, not Constitutional “citizens of the United States”. For details, see the notes:

<https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/8/601>

NOTE: Natural born state nationals are NOT “naturalized”. Hence, they do NOT fall under 8 U.S.C. §1401. STATUTORY naturalization is REVOCABLE, and hence the status of “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a STATUTORY PRIVILEGE, and not a CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT, which applies only to those subject to the laws of the national congress and effectively domiciled on federal territory wherever physically situated.

When a territory is emancipated and its inhabitants are STATUTORY “nationals and citizens of the United States***”, its inhabitants must be DENATURALIZED by an act of Congress to become aliens. This type of legislative activity is called “collective denaturalization”. If that former territory remained unincorporated such as the Philippines, then its inhabitants are “nationals” but not “citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 rather than statutory “U.S. citizens” per 8 U.S.C. §1401. There aren’t a lot of examples of collective denaturalization in the history of our country, but the ruling below alludes to this power:

Congress' reclassification of Philippine "nationals" to alien status under the Philippine Independence Act was not tantamount to a "collective denaturalization" as petitioner contends. See Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253, 257, 87 S.Ct. 1660, 1662, 18 L.Ed.2d. 757 (1967) (holding that Congress has no authority to revoke United States citizenship). Philippine "nationals" of the United States were not naturalized United States citizens. See Manlangit v. INS, 488 F.2d. 1073, 1074 (4th Cir.1973) (holding that Afroyim addressed the rights of a naturalized American [CONSTITUTIONAL] citizen and therefore does not stand as a bar to Congress' authority to revoke the non-citizen, "national" status of the Philippine inhabitants).
[Valmonte v. I.N.S., 136 F.3d. 914 (C.A.2, 1998)]

People of the Philippines were therefore “COLLECTIVELY NATIONALIZED” rather than “COLLECTIVELY NATURALIZED” because according to the above, they were not STATUTORY “citizens”. Note that 8 U.S.C. §1401 comes under 8 U.S.C. Part 1: Nationality at Birth and Collective Naturalization.

8 U.S. Code Part I - Nationality at Birth and Collective Naturalization

SOURCE: <https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/8/chapter-12/subchapter-III/part-1>

The presumption is therefore firmly established that all those enjoying the type of STATUTORY citizenship in the above part, including STATUTORY “U.S.** citizens” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 acquired either their NATIONALITY or their “CITIZEN” status from COLLECTIVE NATIONALIZATION in the case of possessions or COLLECTIVE NATURALIZATION in the case of territories.

Puerto Ricans are STATUTORY “U.S. citizens” and their territory remains unincorporated. If they were emancipated, they would all have to be “collectively denaturalized” by an act of Congress. As such, their citizenship is a PRIVILEGE and not a RIGHT that is subject to taxation:

“The people of Puerto Rico were collectively naturalized by the Jones Act of 1917, ch. 145, § 5, 39 Stat. 951 (1917) (current version codified at 8 U.S.C. §1402). The people of Guam became citizens of the United States by virtue of the Organic Act of Guam, ch. 512, § 4, 64 Stat. 384 (1950) (current version codified at 8 U.S.C. §1407).”

Note that CONSTITUTIONAL states of the Union are NOT listed above. Note also that the STATUTORY “individual” referenced above is defined by statute as being ONLY an “alien” or “nonresident alien”. Hence, EVERYONE in the above list is an ALIEN and the list does not include state citizens or state nationals. ONLY by going abroad can the STATUTORY “U.S.** citizen” mentioned in 26 U.S.C. §911 become a STATUTORY “individual” and therefore an “alien” under a tax treaty with the foreign country that he or she is in.

“No provision of the Internal Revenue Code or the regulations thereunder holds that a citizen of the United States is a resident of the United States for purposes of its tax. Several sections of the Code provide Federal income tax relief or benefits to citizens of the United States who are residents without the United States for some specified period. See sections 911, 934, and 981. These sections give recognition to the fact that not all the citizens of the United States are residents of the United States.”

[IRS Revenue Rule 75-489]

Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes the income tax upon “citizens of the United States[**] wherever resident”, meaning wherever they ARE STATUTORY “residents”, meaning ALIENS per 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).

26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 - Income tax on individuals.

§ 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

1 (a)General rule.

2 (I) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident
 3 of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien
 4 individual.

5 That means the “citizen of the United States**” mentioned is a naturalized alien who is abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911 and
 6 who is receiving the excise taxable “benefits” of the protection of a tax treaty with the foreign country they are in. They
 7 interface to the Internal Revenue Code as “aliens” under that treaty, which is why both “residents” and “citizens” are grouped
 8 TOGETHER in 26 U.S.C. §911: They are BOTH aliens in respect to the national government under the tax treaty. This is 9 an implementation of what is called the Ejusdem Generis Rule:

10 “Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments,
 11 the “ejusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of

 13 be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned.
 14 U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the 15 general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the 16 context manifests a contrary intention.

17 Under “ejusdem generis” canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of 18 particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general
 19 class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696.”

21 4.12.4.3 “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” in 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a PUBLIC PRIVILEGE, not a 22 PRIVATE RIGHT

23 Many people wrongfully presume that “national and citizen of the United States” described in 8 U.S.C. §1401 governs the 24 rules for extending CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship. This is not true because:

- 25 1. STATUTORY citizenship within 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a PRIVILEGE/FRANCHISE, rather than a CONSTITUTIONAL 26 right.

27 “Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as

 29 [Tuana v. U.S.A., Case No. 12-01143 (D.D.C., 2013)]

- 30 2. The PUBLIC PRIVILEGE is revocable. PRIVATE rights are NOT revocable. PUBLIC rights ARE revocable.
 31 2.1. Afroyim v. Rusk, 387 U.S. 253, 87 S.Ct. 1660, 18 L.Ed.2d. 757 (1967) declared that constitutional citizenship
 32 was NOT revocable without the consent of the citizen.
 33 2.2. Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971) declared that STATUTORY citizenship under 8 U.S.C. §1401 IS revocable
 34 at the whim of Congress.

35 “The Court today holds that Congress can indeed rob a citizen of his

 37 themselves that the congressional action was not ‘unreasonable, 38 arbitrary,’ ante, at 831; ‘misplaced or arbitrary,’ ante, at 832; or
 39 ‘irrational or arbitrary or unfair,’ ante, at 833. My first comment is that not one of these 40 ‘tests’ appears in the Constitution. Moreover, it seems a little strange to find such ‘tests’ as these announced in an
 41 opinion which condemns the earlier decisions it overrules for their resort to cliches, which it describes as ‘too
 42 handy and too easy, and, like most cliches, can be misleading’. Ante, at 835. That description precisely fits those 43 words and clauses which the majority uses, but which the Constitution does not.

 48 The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth

Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: 'All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *.' the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those 'born or naturalized in the United States.' Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about.

While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: 'He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.' Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court's conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others.

[. . .]

The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority's own vague notions of 'fairness.' The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court's own view of what is 'fair, reasonable, and right.' Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei's citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair.' The majority applies the 'shock-the-conscience' test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is 'irrational or arbitrary or unfair,' the statute must be constitutional.

[. . .]

Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S. 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today's decision downgrading citizens born outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court's opinion makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute.
[Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

3. Like all other government granted franchises, the effective domicile or residence of those participating is federal territory. The geographical place within which it can be granted does not expressly include constitutional states of the Union and therefore purposefully excludes them. The term "State", "United States", and "continental United States" defined in Title 8 of the U.S. Code EXCLUDE constitutional states. The "United States" definition came from the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1940, before Alaska and Hawaii became CONSTITUTIONAL states, and they never bothered to go back and change it, even though it needs to be changed. However, the definitions in 8 C.F.R. §215.1 were published AFTER Alaska and Hawaii became CONSTITUTIONAL states and are more accurate.

8 C.F.R. §215.1(f)
Section 215.1: Definitions

(f) The term continental United States means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

[8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(36\): State \[Aliens and Nationality\]](#)

The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

[TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101. \[Aliens and Nationality\]](#)
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a)(38) The term "United States", except as otherwise specifically herein provided, when used in a geographical sense, means the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

In summary, the CREATOR of the right establishes who the OWNER of the right is. 8 U.S.C. §1401 is a statutory privilege created and granted by Congress. It is a FRANCHISE and a PUBLIC right, not a PRIVATE right. The “citizen” status it created was NOT created by the Constitution or even the Fourteenth Amendment. All POLITICAL statuses granted by the Constitution are PRIVATE. All CIVIL statuses granted by Congressional enactment are PUBLIC, franchises, and PRIVILEGES. Hence, the 8 U.S.C. §1401 “national and citizen of the United States at birth” is a PUBLIC right rather than a PRIVATE right and continues to be property loaned to the “benefit” recipient which can be revoked at any time.

And the borrower is servant [SUBJECT] to the lender.”
[Prov. 22:7, Bible, NKJV]*

Anyone accepting the “benefits” of this privilege has to suffer all the disabilities that go with invoking or using it, including its complete revocation as documented in 8 U.S.C. §1481(a). There are therefore, in fact and in deed, MULTIPLE classes of “citizens” in our country in SPITE of the following FRAUDULENT holding:

9. Classes of citizens--Generally

In regard to the protection of our citizens in their rights at home and abroad, we have in the United States no law which divides them into classes or makes any difference whatever between them. 1859, 9 Op.Atty.Gen. 357.
[8 U.S.C.A. §1401 (2009), p. 18]

You are a SECOND CLASS citizen under legal disability if you use, benefit from, or invoke any Congressionally created status, public right, privilege, or franchise, INCLUDING “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” in 8 U.S.C. §1401. The government is SCHIZOPHRENIC to state in 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 that there are not multiple classes of citizens, and then turn around and treat any one citizen different than any other as they did above in Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971). Earth calling the U.S. Supreme Court! George Orwell called this kind of deception “doublethink”:

The U.S. Supreme Court in Bellei was engaging in doublethink because they either ignored the facts presented here or are willfully concealing their knowledge of them. Either way, whether through omission or malicious commission, they are a threat to your liberty and freedom. The foundation of your freedom is absolute equality, and yet they refuse to treat all “citizens” equally.

“No duty rests more imperatively upon the courts than the enforcement of those constitutional provisions intended to secure that equality of rights which is the foundation of free government.”
Gulf, C. & S.F.R. Co. v. Ellis, [165 U.S. 150 (1897) ]

“[l]aw . . . must be not a special rule for a particular person or a particular case, but . . . the general law . . . so that every citizen shall hold his life, liberty, property and immunities under the protection of the general rules which govern society.”

Therefore, Title 8 is not “law” as defined above in Hurtado v. California, but a voluntary civil compact and civil franchise that the U.S. Supreme Court called “class legislation” in Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan and Trust, 157 U.S. 429. Title 8 would have to treat ALL “citizens” absolutely equally to be REAL “law”. You don’t need to invoke 8 U.S.C. §1401 to attain CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship and those who do are state-worshipping idolaters. Any attempt to treat anyone unequally under the civil law or subject them to any legal disability is an exercise in idolatry, where the grantor of the privilege, who is always the one with superior or “supernatural” rights or privileges, is always the thing being “worshipped”.

The goal of all collectivists is to abuse civil franchises as a means to create, protect, or perpetuate INEQUALITY and class legislation, and then to use the inequality to persecute, plunder, or enslave the very people that they are supposed to be protecting by treating them equally. For more about how collectivism abuses franchises to enslave all and make itself the owner and controller of EVERYTHING, see:

4.12.4.4 When are statutory “citizens” (8 U.S.C. §1401) liable for tax?: Only when they are privileged “residents” abroad and not in a constitutional state

The I.R.C. Subtitle A income tax is imposed upon “citizens” only when they ALSO “RESIDENT” in the place they earn the statutory “income”.

26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.

(a) General rule.

(I) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual.

[. . .]

(b) Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax.

In general, all citizens of the United States, wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States. Pursuant to section 876, a nonresident alien individual who is a bona fide resident of a section 931 possession (as defined in §1.931-1(c)(1) of this chapter) or Puerto Rico during the entire taxable year is, except as provided in section 931 or 933 with respect to income from sources within such possessions, subject to taxation in the same manner as a resident alien individual. As to tax on nonresident alien individuals, see sections 871 and 877.

The statutory term “individual” includes ONLY “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” but not statutory “citizens when abroad under 26 U.S.C. §911(d). When abroad, citizens are called “qualified individuals” and what “qualifies” them is that they are aliens and residents in respect to the foreign country they are physically in at the time. Therefore, a “citizen” only becomes an “individual” when they are an “alien” or “nonresident alien”:

26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1 Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(i) Alien individual.

The term alien individual means an individual who is not a citizen or a national of the United States. See Sec. 1.1-1(c).

26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1T Requirement for the deduction and withholding of tax on payments to foreign persons.

(c) Definitions

(3) Individual.

(ii) Nonresident alien individual.

The term nonresident alien individual means persons described in section 7701(b)(1)(B), alien individuals who are treated as nonresident aliens pursuant to § 301.7701(b)-7 of this chapter for purposes of computing their U.S. tax liability, or an alien individual who is a resident of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or American Samoa as determined under § 301.7701(b)-1(d) of this chapter. An alien individual who has made an election under section 6013(g) or (h) to be treated as a resident of the United States is nevertheless treated as a nonresident alien individual for purposes of withholding under chapter 3 of the Code and the regulations thereunder.

1 We must then ask ourselves WHEN can a statutory “citizen” (under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c))
 2 ALSO be statutory “resident” in the same place at the same time, keeping in mind that a “resident” is an ALIEN domiciled
 3 in a place under the law of nations:

4 “Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
 5 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so
 6 long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights
 7 of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are
 8 those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged 9 character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their
 10 status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”
 11 [The Law of Nations, p. 87, E. De Vattel, Volume Three, 1758, Carnegie Institution of Washington; emphasis
 12 added.]

13 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b) disproves the assertion that everything a person domiciled in any of the 50 states makes is statutory 14 “income” subject to tax, when it states that "All citizens of the United States, wherever resident," are liable to tax. This is 15 because:

- 16 1. One cannot be a statutory “resident” without ALSO being a statutory “alien”. See 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
- 17 2. “residence” is ONLY defined in the I.R.C. to include statutory “aliens” and NOT “citizens”. Nowhere is it defined to 18 include “citizens”. Therefore, a “citizen” cannot have a “residence” or be “resident” in a place without being a 19 statutory alien in relation to that place.

20 Title 26: Internal Revenue
 21 PART 1—INCOME TAXES
 22 nonresident alien individuals
 23 § 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.

24 (b) Residence defined.

25 An alien actually present in the United States who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the United
 26 States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard to 27 the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country is 28 not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his
 29 stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be
 30 promptly accomplished is a transient; but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be
 31 necessary for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States,
 32 he becomes a resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the 33 purpose for which he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is 34 limited to a definite period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of 35 this section, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

- 36 3. One cannot simultaneously be a statutory “citizen” and a statutory “alien” in relation to the same political entity at the 37 same time. Therefore:
  - 38 3.1. More than one political entity must be involved AND
  - 39 3.2. Those who are simultaneously “citizens” and “aliens” must be outside the country and in a legislatively foreign 40 country.
- 41 4. One cannot have a civil status under the civil statutes of a place such as “citizen” or “resident” WITHOUT a 42 DOMICILE in that place.
  - 43 4.1. This includes statutory “citizen” or statutory “resident”.
  - 44 4.2. This is a requirement of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 and the law of domicile itself.

45 § 29. Status

46 It may be laid down that the, status- or, as it is sometimes called, civil status, in contradistinction to political
 47 status - of a person depends largely, although not universally, upon domicil. The older jurists, whose opinions
 48 are fully collected by Story I and Burge, maintained, with few exceptions, the principle of the ubiquity of status,
 49 conferred by the lex domicilii with little qualification. Lord Westbury, in Udny v. Udny, thus states the doctrine
 50 broadly: “The civil status is governed by one single principle, namely, that of domicil, which is the criterion
 51 established by law for the purpose of determining civil status. For it is on this basis that the personal rights of 52 the party - that is to say, the law which determines his majority and minority, his marriage, succession, testacy,
 53 or intestacy-must depend.” Gray, C. J., in the late Massachusetts case of Ross v. Ross, speaking with special
 54 reference to capacity to inherit, says: “It is a general principle that the status or condition of a person, the 55 relation in which he stands to another person, and by which he is qualified or made capable to take certain rights in that other's property, is fixed by the law of the domicil; and that this status and capacity are to be recognized and upheld in every other State, so far as they are not inconsistent with its own laws and policy."

 [A Treatise on the Law of Domicil, National, Quasi-National, and Municipal, M.W. Jacobs, Little, Brown, and Company, 1887, p. 89]

Therefore, the only practical way that a statutory "citizen" can ALSO be statutory "resident" under the civil laws of a place is when they are abroad as identified in 26 U.S.C. §911: Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad. That section of code, in fact, groups STATUTORY "citizens" and "residents" together because they are both "resident" when in a foreign country outside the United States* the country:

1. They are a statutory "citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 if they were born on federal territory or abroad and NOT a constitutional state. See Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971).
2. If they avail themselves of a "benefit" under a tax treaty with a foreign country, then they are also "resident" in the foreign country they are within under the tax treaty. At that point, they ALSO interface to the United States government as a "resident" under that tax treaty.

Moreover, there are two fairly instructive Revenue Rules that clarify the phrase "wherever resident" found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b) above. See Rev.Rul. 489 and Rev.Rul. 357 as follows:

"No provision of the Internal Revenue Code or the regulations thereunder holds that a citizen of the United States is a resident of the United States for purposes of its tax. Several sections of the Code provide Federal income tax relief or benefits to citizens of the United States who are residents without the United States for some specified period. See sections 911, 934, and 981. These sections give recognition to the fact that not all the citizens of the United States are residents of the United States."

As regards additional support, see Rev.Rul. 75-357 at p. 5, as follows:

"Sections 1.1-1(b) and 1.871-1 of the Income Tax Regulations provide that all citizens of the United States, wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States. See, however, section 911 of the Code. (Emphasis added.)"
 [Rev.Rul. 75-357, p. 5]

Being that Rev.Rul. 75-357 quotes 26 C.F.R. § 1.1-1(b) directly, and duly informs every reader to see 26 U.S.C. §911, we believe an examination of 26 U.S.C. §911 and its regulations is in order to locate the appropriate application of the "wherever resident" phrase in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b). See 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(1)(A) as follows:

(d) Definitions and special rules — For purposes of this section —

(1) Qualified individual — The term "qualified individual" means an individual whose tax home is in a foreign country and who is —

(A) a citizen of the United States and establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that he has been a bona fide resident of a foreign country or countries for an uninterrupted period which includes an entire taxable year.
 [26 U.S.C. §911(d)(1)(A)]

There you have it. The "citizen of the United states" must be a bona-fide "resident of a foreign country" to be a qualified individual subject to tax.

Additionally, as we know, 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(b) states:

"All citizens of the United States, wherever resident, are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States."

The regulations for section 911 make the distinction between where income is received as opposed to where services are performed. See the following:

26 C.F.R. §1.911-3 Determination of amount of foreign earned income to be excluded.

(a) Definition of foreign earned income.

For purposes of section 911 and the regulations thereunder, the term "foreign earned income" means earned income (as defined in paragraph (b) of this section) from sources within a foreign country (as defined in §1.911-2(h)) that is earned during a period for which the individual qualifies under §1.911-2(a) to make an election. Earned income is from sources within a foreign country if it is attributable to services performed by an individual in a foreign country or countries. The place of receipt of earned income is immaterial in determining whether earned income is attributable to services performed in a foreign country or countries.

Note the phrase "foreign country" above. That phrase obviously does not include states of the Union. We are therefore inescapably lead to the following conclusions based on the above analysis:

1. One cannot earn "income" as a statutory "citizen" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), 26 U.S.C. §911, and 8 U.S.C. §1401 unless they are abroad in a foreign country.
2. No statute EXPRESSLY imposes a tax upon statutory "citizens" when they are NOT "abroad", meaning in a foreign country. Therefore, under the rules of statutory construction, tax is not owed under ANY other circumstance:

"Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles, 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

3. A state citizen under the Fourteenth Amendment is NOT a statutory "citizen" under the Internal Revenue Code at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), even when they are abroad. Rather, they are statutory "non-resident non-persons" when abroad.
4. Even when one is "abroad" as a statutory "citizen", they can cease to be a statutory "citizen" at any time by:
  - 4.1. Changing their domicile to the foreign country. This is because the civil status of "citizen" is a product of domicile on federal territory, not their birth...AND
  - 4.2. Surrendering any and all tax "benefits" of the income tax treaty. The receipt of the "benefit" makes them subject to Internal Revenue Code Subtitle A "trade or business" franchise and a public officer in receipt, custody, and control of government property, which itself IS the "benefit".
5. It is a CRIME for a state citizen to claim the civil status of STATUTORY "citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. That crime is documented in 18 U.S.C. §911.
6. The claim that all state citizens domiciled in states of the Union are "citizens of the United States" under the Internal Revenue Code and that they owe a tax on ANY of their earnings is categorically false and fraudulent. See Form #05.006 above.

Below is a table that succinctly summarizes everything we have learned in this section in tabular form. The left column shows what you are now and the two right columns show what you can "elect" or "volunteer" to become under the authority of the Internal Revenue Code based on that status:

4.12.4.5 Meaning of “citizenship” used by federal courts

The term “citizenship” as used by the federal courts implies the COINCIDENCE of DOMICILE AND A PUBLIC OFFICE IN THE GOVERNMENT. Without the existence of the public office, there is no “citizenship”, even if there is a domicile. Below is an often quoted definition of “citizenship” by the courts which betrays this fact:

*“Citizenship and domicile are substantially synonymous. Residency and inhabitation are too often confused with the terms and have not the same significance. Citizenship implies more than residence [domicile]. It carries with it the idea of identification with the state and a participation in its functions. As a citizen, one sustains social, political, and moral obligation to the state and possesses social and political rights under the Constitution and laws thereof. *Harding v. Standard Oil Co. et al. (C.C.), 182 F. 421; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U.S. 678, 7 S.Ct. 763, 32 L.Ed. 766; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 476, 15 L.Ed. 691.”
[Baker v. Keck, 13 F.Supp. 486 (1936)]

Notice the phrase:

“Citizenship implies more than residence [domicile]. It carries with it the idea of identification with the state and a participation in its functions. As a citizen, one sustains social, political, and moral obligation to the state and possesses social and political rights under the Constitution and laws thereof.”

The $64,000 question is:

What does “identification with the state and participation in its functions” mean and how does that happen?

The answer can only be:

Selecting a domicile within a specific jurisdiction and thereby becoming at least ELIGIBLE to serve on jury duty or vote, both of which are public offices in the government, as we will soon show.

But what if you don’t WANT to even be eligible to do either vote or serve on jury and simply want to be EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE, left alone by the state, and not be the subject of any civil legislative obligations or entanglements? How would you do that? The answer is that we simply:

1. Identify the name of “the State” as THE GOVERNMENT and not a geographic place, in the case of all civil statutes.
2. Do not select a domicile or residence within the STATUTORY “State”, meaning the GOVERNMENT and not a geographic place.
3. Refuse to identify oneself as a STATUTORY citizen, which is also a public office in the national government.
4. Identify all taxes based upon domicile in the STATUTORY “State” as poll taxes, which are ILLEGAL and unconstitutional and therefore you are ineligible to be a STATUTORY voter and instead are a PRIVATE elector as described in the Constitution.
5. Insist that anyone who disagrees with you has 10 days to provide evidence signed under penalty of perjury or they agree because of their failure to deny, per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(b)(6) .

Below is how the deal side skirt the above using words of art so that they don’t have to do their main job of protecting PRIVATE rights by simply leaving you alone and not enforcing the obligations of being a STATUTORY “citizen” against you:

1. In diversity of citizenship removal proceedings, Courts distinguish “domicile” (the civil PROTECTION franchise) from “citizenship” (the PUBLIC OFFICE franchise) in removal jurisdiction as follows:

*“To invoke removal jurisdiction on the basis of diversity, a notice of removal must distinctly and affirmatively allege each party’s citizenship.”, “[a]lverments of residence are wholly insufficient for purposes of removal.”, “[a]lthough ‘citizenship’ and ‘residence’ may be interchangeable terms in common parlance, the existence of citizenship cannot be inferred from allegations of residence [domicile] alone.””
[Lamm v. Bekins Van Lines, Co., 139 F.Supp.2d. 1300, 1314 (M.D. Ala. 2001)]*

2. Why did the courts distinguish DOMICILE from CITIZENSHIP in the context of diversity of citizenship? The answer is that:

- 2.1. “CITIZENSHIP” implies a public office domiciled at the seat of government, rather than at the place the HUMAN filling it is domiciled:

*“Citizenship implies more than residence [domicile]. It carries with it the idea of identification with the state and a participation in its functions. As a [STATUTORY] citizen, one sustains social, political, and moral obligation to the state and possesses social and political rights under the Constitution and laws thereof.”
Harding v. Standard Oil Co. et al. (C.C.), 182 F. 421; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U.S. 678, 7 S.Ct. 763, 32 L.Ed. 766; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 476, 15 L.Ed. 691.”
[Baker v. Keck, 13 F.Supp. 486 (1936)]*

- 2.2. The DOMICILE of the public office is the seat of government, rather than that of the otherwise PRIVATE human consensually filling said office:

TITLE 4 > CHAPTER 3 > § 72
§ 72. Public offices; at seat of Government

All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law.

- 2.3. The public office has an effective domicile in the District of Columbia under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), because it REPRESENTS a federal corporation called “United States” under 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A).

IV. PARTIES > Rule 17.
(b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

- (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;*
(2) for a corporation [or the officers or “public officers” of the corporation], by the law under which it was organized; and
(3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
(A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution or laws; and
(B) 28 U.S.C. §§754 and 959(a) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue or be sued in a United States court.

3. In effect, the PUBLIC OFFICE is being ABUSED to effectively:
3.1. Switch the “choice of law” to an otherwise foreign jurisdiction.

*“For the upright will dwell in the [geographical] land,
And the blameless will remain in it;
But the wicked will be cut off from the earth.
And the unfaithful will be uprooted from it [using FRANCHISES and OFFICES].””
[Prov. 2:21-22, Bible, NKJV]*

- 3.2. KIDNAP your civil legal identity and transport it to what Mark Twain calls “the DISTRICT OF CRIMINALS”. Kidnapping is a crime if you didn’t consent to it.

- 3.3. Remove yourself from the protections of the common law and the Constitution and place you instead EXCLUSIVELY under the legislative jurisdiction of Congress.

4. Among the PUBLIC PRIVILEGES associated with the STATUTORY citizen franchise is the PRIVILEGE to invoke STATUTORY diversity of citizenship in federal court under 28 U.S.C. §1332:

When a case is originally filed in state court, a party may remove it if the case originally could have been brought in federal court. See 28 U.S.C. §1441(a). Removal is a statutory privilege, rather than a right, and the removing party must comply with the procedural requirements mandated in the statute when desirous of availing the privilege. Jerrell v. Kardoes Rubber Co., 348 F.Supp.2d 1278, 1283 (M.D.Ala.2004) (quoting Shamrock Oil & Gas Corp. v. Sheets, 313 U.S. 100, 104, 61 S.Ct. 868, 85 L.Ed. 1214 (1941)). After a case has been removed from state to federal court, the non-removing party may move for remand, which will be granted if "it appears that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction." See 28 U.S.C. §1447(c). Remand may also be sought on the grounds that the removing party has failed to comply with the statutory requirements for removal. See, e.g., Brown v. Demco, Inc., 792 F.2d 478 (5th Cir.1986) (ordering remand due to untimeliness of removal); Jerrell, 348 F.Supp.2d at 1283 (granting motion to remand where removing party failed to comply with procedural requirements regarding timing of removal set forth in 28 U.S.C. §1446(b)). Because removal jurisdiction raises significant federalism concerns, "removal statutes are construed narrowly; where plaintiff and defendant clash about jurisdiction, uncertainties are resolved in favor of remand." Burns, 31 F.3d at 1095. Indeed, the "letter of the law is clear and it requires strict construction of the language of the [removal] statute" and "all doubts about removal must be resolved in favor of remand." Jerrell, 348 F.Supp.2d at 1281, 1283. [Adams v. Charter Communications VII, LLC, 356 F.Supp.2d 1268, 1271 (M.D. 2005)]

5. State citizens under the Fourteenth Amendment CANNOT invoke statutory diversity in a federal court. If they do, they are committing a CRIME of impersonating a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" under 18 U.S.C. §911. Instead, they must invoke CONSTITUTIONAL diversity of citizenship under Article III, Section 2.
6. The federal courts even recognize that a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401) isn't ALLOWED access to a REAL constitutional Article III court in the Judicial Branch, and can only use an Executive Branch Article IV TERRITORIAL court. The implication is that people born in the territories or possessions who are STATUTORY citizens (8 U.S.C. §1401) or even STATUTORY "non-citizen nationals of the United States** at birth" (8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B)), are by implication OFFICERS of the Executive Branch who essentially are subject to their employment supervisors in the Executive Branch, which of course includes Article IV territorial courts and the judges who serve in them. It is otherwise unconstitutional for the Executive Branch to supervise PRIVATE conduct of PRIVATE human beings in a constitutional state.

Appellant's purported distinction between an "administrative" and a legislative court is unfounded. When Congress creates a territorial court apart from Article III, it matters not whether it makes no provision for, delegates to the Executive Branch, or delegates to the Judicial Branch the power to review its rulings; <sup>66</sup> The [Article III] Judicial Power simply is not implicated. <sup>67</sup> But we do not read appellant's complaint to depend utterly, in this regard, upon the distinction advanced, for it argues vigorously on appeal not for an absolute constitutional right of access to a court independent of the Executive, but for the relative right to be treated equally with the residents of the other territories.

In this regard, appellant points out that of all the territories, only in American Samoa are litigants denied both trial and direct review <sup>68</sup> in "an independent or Article III court." <sup>69</sup> "Since residents of other U.S. territories can litigate their property claims in a court having both independence and finality of judgment," the Church argues, it has been denied equal protection of the law. <sup>70</sup> Furthermore, according to the Church, access to an independent court is a "fundamental right," denial of which can be justified only by a "compelling" interest, subject to strict scrutiny. Appellant argues that the district court erred by applying a "rational basis" test rather than some form of strict scrutiny to evaluate the constitutionality of the Samoan judicial system.

At the outset, we reject the claim that more than a rational basis is required in order to sustain the unique features of the Samoan judicial system as constitutional. It is clear that Congress, when it is acting under the authority of Article IV, "may treat [a territory] differently from States so long as there is a rational basis for its actions." <sup>71</sup> The Church's argument that more is required because we deal here with an arguably "fundamental right," viz., access to an independent court, is unavailing. Regardless of whether such a right may be fundamental for other purposes, the Supreme Court long ago determined that in the "unincorporated" territories, such as American Samoa, the guarantees of the Constitution apply only insofar as its "fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights" express "principles which are the basis of all free government which cannot be with impunity transcended." <sup>72</sup> If access to an independent court for the adjudication of a land dispute were of such a fundamental nature, then--there being no real distinction between the High Court of Samoa and any other non-Article III court at least where no constitutional claim is involved <sup>73</sup>--it follows that there would be no place at all for the "exception from the general prescription of Art. III" for "territorial courts," which "dates from the earliest days of the Republic..." <sup>74</sup> We conclude, therefore, that access to a court independent of Executive supervision is not a fundamental right in the territories.

Is there a rational basis, then, for Congress' decision to preclude trial in or direct appeal to an independent court in American Samoa, and only in American Samoa, i.e., is there "any state of facts [that] reasonably may be conceived to justify it"? <sup>75</sup> The district court identified several factors that it thought might justify "[f]ailure to provide for direct review by an Article III court" <sup>76</sup>--a somewhat different situation than the one here challenged. Thus, that court pointed to "American Samoa's relatively small size, its geographical distance from any court of appeals, its desire for autonomy in local affairs, [and] the fact that it is the only territory without an organic act." <sup>77</sup> The Church, however, argues that the district court here "assumed facts" that were not true, and it offered to

1 prove that there are other unorganized territories, smaller and more remote from the United States, that do have
2 access to "a statutory or Article III court." <sup>78</sup> In other words, it says there is nothing unique about Samoa that
3 justifies denying Samoan litigants access to an independent court, at least on appeal.

4 Appellant's offer of proof is beside the point, since we could assume the facts it offers to prove and we would still
5 be constrained to uphold the judicial scheme applicable to Samoa as being rationally designed to further a
6 legitimate congressional policy, viz., preserving the Fa'a Samoa by respecting Samoan traditions concerning land
7 ownership. There can be no doubt that such is the policy. First, the Instruments of Cession by which these islands
8 undertook allegiance to the United States provided that the United States would "respect and protect the 9 individual rights of all people ... to their land," and would recognize such rights "according to their customs." <sup>79</sup>
10 Second, the Samoan Constitution expressly provides that "[i]t shall be the policy of the Government of American 11 Samoa to protect persons of Samoan ancestry against alienation of their lands..." <sup>80</sup> Such transfers would 12 inevitably spell the end of the Fa'a Samoa. Congress initially delegated "all civil [and] judicial" power over
13 American Samoa to the Executive, <sup>81</sup> but after the Secretary had approved the present Constitution of American
14 Samoa, Congress in 1983 provided that any amendments could be "made only by Act of Congress." <sup>82</sup> To some 15 extent, therefore, Congress may be viewed as having ratified the Samoan Constitution, at least in principle.

16 [ . . . ]

17 Finally, the Church was not denied due process of law because Congress put the court system of American
18 Samoa under authority of the Executive Branch [RATHER than the Judicial Branch]; nor was it denied equal
19 protection since Congress, exercising its authority over the territories, did not lack a rational basis on which to 20 justify differences between the courts of American Samoa and those in the States or the other Territories.
21 [Corporation of Presiding Bishop of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints v. Hodel, 830 F.2d. 374
22 (C.A.D.C., 1987)]

23 The U.S. Supreme Court case of Cook v. Tait agrees with the above conclusions, by stating that the source of the tax obligation
24 is NEITHER the "domicile" NOT the "nationality" of a person domiciled abroad. The ONLY thing LEFT that COULD
25 rationally be "the res" or object of the tax is therefore a public office in the national government. That public office, in turn,
26 was occupied by Cook because he claimed to be a STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401 born on federal territory)
27 and he HAD to claim that status to get the U.S. Supreme Court to even HEAR the case to begin with!

28 "The contention was rejected that a citizen's property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit
29 from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in 'mistaking the scope
30 and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation 31 to it.' And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on 32 the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen
33 and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it
34 'belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power
35 required to make citizenship completely beneficial.' In other words, the principle was declared that the 36 government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power
37 to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be
38 made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not 39 and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but
40 upon his relation as [STATUTORY] citizen to the United States [meaning PUBLIC OFFICE] and the relation
41 of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have 42 domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be 43 legal—the government having power to impose the tax."
44 [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

45 Furthermore, as a state citizen born in a CONSTITUTIONAL state and domiciled in Mexico at the time, Cook WASN'T
46 born on federal territory and committed the crime of impersonating a STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen" under 18 U.S.C. §911
47 to even get his case heard. The U.S. Supreme Court obliged because there was LOTS of money in it for them to do so. Can 48 you spell CORRUPTION? And who instituted this corruption? Former President William Howard Taft, who:

- 49 1. Was the U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice at the time of Cook v. Tait. . . .AND
- 50 2. Was the man responsible for getting the Sixteenth Amendment FRAUDULENTLY ratified in his past life as President
51 of the United States.. AND
- 52 3. Was the ONLY U.S. Supreme Court justice AND President to EVER serve as a revenue collector BEFORE he entered 53 government service. Something tells me that he continued that role all the way up to the U.S. Supreme Court. Look at 54 his grinning statue in the halls of the U.S. Surpeme Court building in Washington, D.C. [District of Criminals]. His 55 statue is the ONLY one with a shit eating grin on his face.

4 4.12.4.6 Legal Dictionary

5 The legal dictionary confirms that statutory “citizen” status equates with being a “subject”, AND that said “subject” status is,
6 indeed a voluntary franchise:

7 *“Subject. Constitutional law. One that owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by his laws. The natives
8 of Great Britain are subjects of the British government. Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens;
9 as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises; as subjects they are bound to obey the laws. The term is little used.

in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government. Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504.

Legislation. The matter of public or private concern for which law is enacted. Thing legislated about or matters on which legislature operates to accomplish a definite object or objects reasonably related one to the other. Crouch v. Benet, 198 S.C. 185, 17 S.E.2d. 320, 322. The matter or thing forming the groundwork of the act. McCombs v. Dallas County, Tex.Civ.App., 136 S.W.2d. 975,982.

The constitutions of several of the states require that every act of the legislature shall relate to but one subject, which shall be expressed in the title of the statute. But term "subject" within such constitutional provisions is to be given a broad and extensive meaning so as to allow legislature full scope to include in one act . all matters having a logical or natural connection. Jaffee v. State, 76 Okl.Cr. 95, 134 P.2d. 1027, 1032.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1425]

Note from the above that:

1. Republican governments such as that in America DO NOT have "subjects". You cannot be a "taxpayer" WITHOUT being a "subject".

"The term is little used, in this sense, in countries enjoying a republican form of government. Swiss Nat. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 267 U.S. 42, 45 S.Ct. 213, 214, 69 L.Ed. 504."

2. Being a statutory "citizen" is identified as a voluntary franchise:

"Men in free governments are subjects as well as citizens; as citizens they enjoy rights and franchises".

The above admissions are deliberate double speak to cloud the issues, but they do state some of the truth plainly. They are using double speak because they know they are abusing the law to destroy rights and enslave people they are supposed to be protecting through the abuse of "words of art" and oxymorons.

"For where envy and self-seeking [by a corrupted de facto government towards YOUR property] exist, [manufactured] confusion and every evil thing are there. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, willing to yield, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy."
[James 3:16-17, Bible, NKJV]

Here is some of the double speak designed to enforce the stealthful and unconstitutional GOVERNMENT PLUNDER of your rights and property using "words of art":

1. They say "men in free governments", implying that the GOVERNMENT is free but the "men" are NOT. No "subject" who is subservient to anyone can ever truly be "free". In any economic system, there are only two roles you can fill: predator or prey, sovereign or subject.
2. They admit that governments that are "republican in form" cannot have "subjects", but:
  - 2.1. They don't mention that America, in Constitution, Article 4, Section 4, is republican in form.
  - 2.2. They deliberately don't explain how you can "govern" people who are not "subjects" but sovereigns such as those in America.

In fact, if they dealt with the above two issues, their FRAUD would have to come to an IMMEDIATE end. It is a maxim of law that when TWO rights exist in the same person, it is as if there were TWO PERSONS. This means that the statutory "citizen" or "subject" they are REALLY talking about is a SEPARATE LEGAL PERSON who is, in fact, a public office in the U.S. government. 4 U.S.C. §72 says that office cannot lawfully exist in a constitutional state of the Union without permission from Congress and that has never expressly been given and CANNOT lawfully be given without violating the separation of powers doctrine which is the foundation of the U.S. Constitution:

*"Quando duo juro concurrunt in und personâ, aequum est ac si essent in diversis.
When two rights [for a RIGHT and a PRIVILEGE] concur in one person, it is the same as if they were in two separate persons. 4 Co. 118."
[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm>]*

3. They use the phrase "rights and franchises". These two things cannot rationally coexist in the same person. Rights are unalienable, meaning that they cannot lawfully be surrendered or bargained away. Franchises are alienable and can be taken away at the whim of the legislature. You cannot sign up for a franchise without alienating an unalienable right.

Therefore, no one who has rights can also at the same time have privileges, and the only people who can lawfully sign up for franchises are those who HAVE no rights because domiciled on federal territory not protected by the constitution and not within any state of the Union.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed,
-"
[Declaration of Independence]

"Unalienable. Inalienable; incapable of being aliened, that is, sold and transferred."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1693]

4. They don't address how the national government can lawfully implement franchises within a Constitutional state, and therefore deliver the "rights and franchises" associated with being a statutory but not constitutional "citizen". The U.S. Supreme Court has held more than once that Congress CANNOT lawfully establish or enforce ANY franchise within the borders of a constitutional state of the Union. The following case has NEVER been overruled.

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incidental. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
License Tax Cases, [72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

FRANCHISE. A special privilege conferred by government on individual or corporation, and which does not belong to citizens of country generally of common right. Elliott v. City of Eugene, 135 Or. 108, 294 P. 358, 360. In England it is defined to be a royal privilege in the hands of a subject.

A "franchise," as used by Blackstone in defining quo warranto, (3 Com. 262 [4th Am. Ed.] 322), had reference to a royal privilege or branch of the king's prerogative subsisting in the hands of the subject, and must arise from the king's grant, or be held by prescription, but today we understand a franchise to be some special privilege conferred by government on an individual, natural or artificial, which is not enjoyed by its citizens in general. State v. Fernandez, 106 Fla. 779, 143 So. 638, 639, 86 A.L.R. 240.

In this country a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which cannot be legally exercised without legislative grant. To be a corporation is a franchise. The various powers conferred on corporations are franchises. The execution of a policy of insurance by an insurance company [e.g. Social Insurance/Socialist Security], and the issuing a bank note by an incorporated bank [such as a Federal Reserve NOTE], are franchises. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns., N.Y., 387, 8 Am.Dec. 243. But it does not embrace the property acquired by the exercise of the franchise. Bridgeport v. New York & N. H. R. Co., 36 Conn. 255, 4 Arn.Rep. 63. Nor involve interest in land acquired by grantee. Whitbeck v. Funk, 140 Or. 70, 12 P.2d. 1019, 1020. In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage. etc. Pierce v. Emery, 32 N.H. 484; State v. Black Diamond Co., 97 Ohio.St. 24, 119 N.E. 195, 199, L.R.A. 1918E, 352.

[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, pp. 786-787]

Note the phrase "a franchise is a privilege or immunity of a public nature", meaning that those who exercise it are public officers. They also say "In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage" and by this:

1. They refer to franchises as having a “public nature”, meaning that those who exercise them are public officers.
2. They can only mean STATUTORY citizens and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens.
3. They are referring to a “Congressionally created right” and therefore statutory privilege available only to those subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress because domiciled on federal territory.

It therefore appears to us that:

1. The only “subjects” within a republican form of government are public officers IN the government and not private human beings.
2. In order to create “subjects” within a republican form of government, you must create a statutory franchise called “U.S. citizen” or “U.S. resident” that is a public office in the government, and fool people through the abuse of “words of art” into volunteering into the franchise.
3. A government that abuses its legislative authority to create franchises that alienate rights that are supposed to be unalienable is engaging in TREASON and violating the Constitution. Any government that makes a profitable business or franchise out of alienating rights that are supposed to be unalienable is not a de jure government, but a de facto government.

4.12.4.7 Criminalization of being a “citizen of the United States” in 18 U.S.C. §911

You may also wonder as we have how it is that Congress can make it a crime to falsely claim to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” in 18 U.S.C. §911.

TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 43 > § 911
§ 911. Citizen of the United States

*Whoever falsely and willfully represents himself to be a citizen of the United States[**] shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.*

The reason is that you cannot tax or regulate something until abusing it becomes harmful. A “license”, after all, is legally defined as permission from the state to do that which is otherwise illegal or harmful or both. And of course, you can only tax or regulate things that are harmful and licensed. Hence, they had to:

1. Create yet another franchise.
2. Attach a “status” to the franchise called “citizen of the United States**”, where “United States” implies the GOVERNMENT and not any geographical place.
3. Criminalize the abuse of the “status” and the rights that attach to the status. See, for instance, 18 U.S.C. §911, which makes it a crime to impersonate a statutory “citizen of the United States**”.
4. Make adopting the status entirely discretionary on the part of those participating. Hence, invoking the “status” and the “benefits” and “privileges” associated with the status constitutes constructive consent to abide by all the statutes that regulate the status.

California Civil Code
 DIVISION 3. OBLIGATIONS
 PART 2. CONTRACTS
 TITLE 1. NATURE OF A CONTRACT
 CHAPTER 3. CONSENT

1589. A voluntary acceptance of the benefit of a transaction is equivalent to a consent to all the obligations arising from it, so far as the facts are known, or ought to be known, to the person accepting.

[SOURCE:
http://leginfo.ca.gov/faces/codes\_displayText.xhtml?lawCode=CIV&division=3.&title=1.&part=2.&chapter=3.&article=]

5. Impose a tax or fine or “licensing fee” for those adopting or invoking the status. That tax, in fact, is the federal income tax codified in I.R.C., Subtitle A.

Every type of franchise works and is implemented exactly the same way, and the statutory “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States**” franchise is no different. This section will prove that being a “citizen of the United States**” under the I.R.C. is, in fact, a franchise, that the franchise began in 1924 by judicial pronouncement, and that because the status is a franchise and all franchises are voluntary, you don't have to participate, accept the "benefits", or pay for the costs of the franchise if you don't consent.

As you will learn in the next section, one becomes a "citizen" in a statutory sense by being born or naturalized in a country and exercising their First Amendment right of political association by voluntarily choosing a national and a municipal domicile in that country. How can Congress criminalize the exercise of the First Amendment right to politically and legally associate with a "state" and thereby become a citizen? After all, the courts have routinely held that Congress cannot criminalize the exercise of a right protected by the Constitution.

"It is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process for the government to penalize a person merely because he has exercised a protected statutory or constitutional right. United States v. Goodwin, 457 U.S. 368, 372, 102 S.Ct. 2485, 2488, 73 L.Ed.2d. 74 (1982)."
[People of Territory of Guam v. Fegurgur, 800 F.2d. 1470 (9th Cir. 1986)]

Even the U.S. Code recognizes the protected First Amendment right to not associate during the passport application process. Being a statutory and not constitutional "citizen" is an example of type of membership, because domicile is civil membership in a territorial community usually called a county, and you cannot be a "citizen" without a domicile:

§ 2721. Impermissible basis for denial of passports

A passport may not be denied issuance, revoked, restricted, or otherwise limited because of any speech, activity, belief, affiliation, or membership, within or outside the United States, which, if held or conducted within the United States, would be protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The answer to how Congress can criminalize the exercise of a First Amendment protected right of political association that is the foundation of becoming a "citizen" therefore lies in the fact that the statutory "U.S.** citizen" mentioned in 18 U.S.C. §911 is not a constitutional citizen protected by the Constitution, but rather is:

1. Not a human being or a private person but a statutory creation of Congress. The ability to regulate private conduct, according to the U.S. Supreme Court, is repugnant to the U.S. Constitution and therefore Congress can ONLY regulate public conduct and the public offices and franchises that it creates.

"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."
[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

2. A statutory franchise and a federal corporation created on federal territory and domiciled there. Notice the key language "Whenever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle [in this case, through the offering and enforcement of PRIVATE franchises to the public at large such as income taxes], a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place..." What Congress did was perform this substitution in the franchise agreement itself (the I.R.C.) BEFORE the controversy ever even reached the court such that this judicial doctrine could be COVERTLY applied! They want to keep their secret weapon secret.

See also Clearfield Trust Co. v. United States, 318 U.S. 363, 369 (1943) ("The United States does business on business terms") (quoting United States v. National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, 270 U.S. 527, 534 (1926)); Perry v. United States, supra at 352 (1935) ("When the United States, with constitutional authority, makes contracts for franchises, it has rights and incurs responsibilities similar to those of individuals who are parties to such instruments. There is no difference . . . except that the United States cannot be sued without its consent") (citation omitted); United States v. Bostwick, 94 U.S. 53, 66 (1877) ("The United States, when they contract with their citizens, are controlled by the same laws that govern the citizen in that behalf"); Cooke v. United States, 91 U.S. 389, 398 (1875) (explaining that when the United States "comes down from its position of sovereignty, and enters the domain of commerce, it submits itself to the same laws that govern individuals there").

See Jones, 1 Cl.Ct. at 85 ("Wherever the public and private acts of the government seem to commingle, a citizen or corporate body must by supposition be substituted in its place, and then the question be determined whether the action will lie against the supposed defendant"); O'Neill v. United States, 231 Ct.Cl. 823, 826 (1982) (sovereign acts doctrine applies where, "[w]ere [the] contracts exclusively between private parties, the party hurt by such governing action could not claim compensation from the other party for the governing action"). The dissent ignores these statements (including the statement from Jones, from which case Horowitz drew its reasoning literally verbatim), when it says, post at 931, that the sovereign acts cases do not emphasize the need to treat the government-as-contractor the same as a private party. [United States v. Winstar Corp., 518 U.S. 839 (1996)]

3. Property of the U.S. government. All franchises and statuses incurred under franchises are property of the government grantor. The government has always had the right to criminalize abuses of its property.
4. A public office in the government like all other franchise statuses.
5. An officer of a corporation, which is "U.S. Inc." and is described in 28 U.S.C. §3002(15)(A). All federal corporations are "citizens", and therefore a statutory "U.S. citizen" is really just the corporation that you are representing as a public officer.

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

Ordinarily, and especially in the case of states of the Union, domicile within that state by the state "citizen" is the determining factor as to whether an income tax is owed to the state by that citizen:

"domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

"Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located."
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

We also establish the connection between domicile and tax liability in the following article.

4.12.4.8 U.S. Supreme Court: Murphy v. Ramsey

Below is how the U.S. Supreme Court describes the political rights of those domiciled on federal territory and therefore statutory "U.S. citizens" and "U.S. residents" as follows:

The counsel for the appellants in argument seem to question the constitutional power of Congress to pass the Act of March 22, 1882, so far as it abridges the rights of electors in the territory under previous laws. But that question is, we think, no longer open to discussion. It has passed beyond the stage of controversy into final judgment. The people of the United States, as sovereign owners of the national territories, have supreme power over them and their inhabitants. In the exercise of this sovereign dominion, they are represented by the government of the United States, to whom all the powers of government over that subject have been delegated, subject only to such restrictions as are expressed in the Constitution or are necessarily implied in its terms or in the purposes and objects of the power itself, for it may well be admitted in respect to this, as to every power of society over its members, that it is not absolute and unlimited. But in ordaining government for the territories and the people who inhabit them, all the discretion which belongs to legislative power is vested in Congress, and that extends beyond all controversy to determining by law, from time to time, the form of the local government in a particular territory and the qualification of those who shall administer it. It rests with Congress to say whether in a given case any of the people resident in the territory shall participate in the election of its officers or the making of its laws, and it may therefore take from them any right of suffrage it may previously have conferred, or at any time modify or abridge it, as it may deem expedient. The right of local self-government, as known to our system as a constitutional franchise, belongs under the Constitution to the states and to the people thereof, by whom that Constitution was ordained, and to whom, by its terms, all power not conferred by it upon the government of the United States, was expressly reserved. The personal and civil rights of the inhabitants of the territories are secured to them, as to other citizens, by the principles of constitutional liberty, which restrain all the agencies of government, state and national; their political rights are franchises which they hold as privileges in the legislative discretion of the Congress of the United States. This doctrine was fully and forcibly declared by THE CHIEF JUSTICE, delivering the opinion of the Court in National Bank v. County of Yankton, 101 U.S. 129. See also American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511; United States v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393. [Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U.S. 15 (1885)]

So in other words, those domiciled on federal territory are exercising “privileges” and franchises. The above case, however, does not refer and cannot refer to those domiciled within states of the Union.

4.12.4.9 U.S. Supreme Court: Cook v. Tait

The U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the statutory “citizen of the United States**” mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §911 and at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) is not associated with either domicile OR with constitutional citizenship (nationality) of the human being who is the “taxpayer” in the following case. The party they mentioned, Cook, was domiciled within Mexico at the time, which meant he was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States**” under the Internal Revenue Code but rather a “nonresident alien”. He was a “nonresident alien” rather than a “non-resident non-person” because he was a stockholder in a federal corporation and therefore a contractor with the government and an agent or office of the government. However, because he CLAIMED to be a statutory “citizen of the United States**” and the Supreme Court colluded with that FRAUD, they treated him as one ANYWAY.

We may make further exposition of the national power as the case depends upon it. It was illustrated at once in United States v. Bennett by a contrast with the power of a state. It was pointed out that there were limitations upon the latter that were not on the national power. The taxing power of a state, it was decided, encountered at its borders the taxing power of other states and was limited by them. There was no such limitation, it was pointed out, upon the national power, and that the limitation upon the states affords, it was said, no ground for constructing a barrier around the United States, 'shutting that government off from the exertion of powers which inherently belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty.'

“The contention was rejected that a citizen's property without the limits of the United States derives no benefit from the United States. The contention, it was said, came from the confusion of thought in 'mistaking the scope and extent of the sovereign power of the United States as a nation and its relations to its citizens and their relation to it.' And that power in its scope and extent, it was decided, is based on the presumption that government by its very nature benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and that opposition to it holds on to citizenship while it 'belittles and destroys its advantages and blessings by denying the possession by government of an essential power required to make citizenship completely beneficial.' In other words, the principle was declared that the government, by its very nature, benefits the citizen and his property wherever found, and therefore has the power to make the benefit complete. Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax.” [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

How can they tax someone without a domicile in the statutory United States and with no earnings from the statutory United States in the case of Cook, you might ask? Well, the REAL “taxpayer” is a public office in the U.S. government. That office REPRESENTS the United States federal corporation. All corporations are “citizens” of the place of their incorporation, and therefore under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the effective domicile of the “taxpayer” is the District of Columbia.<sup>189</sup> All taxes are a civil liability that are implemented with civil law. The only way they could have reached extraterritorially with civil law to tax Cook without him having a domicile or residence anywhere in the statutory “United States**” was through a private law franchise contract in which he was a public officer. It is a maxim of law that debt and contract know no place, meaning that they can be enforced anywhere.

<sup>189</sup> "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only." [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

1 Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

2 Locus contractus regit actum.

3 The place of the contract [franchise agreement, in this case] governs the act.

6 The feds have jurisdiction over their own public officers wherever they are but the EFFECTIVE civil domicile of all such
7 offices and officers is the District of Columbia pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b). Hence, the ONLY thing
8 such a statutory “citizen of the United States**” could be within the I.R.C. is a statutory creation of Congress that is actually
9 a public office which is domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States**” in order for the ruling in Cook to 10 be constitutional or even lawful. AND, according to the Cook case, having that status is a discretionary choice that has 11 NOTHING to do with your circumstances, because Cook was NOT a statutory “citizen of the United States**” as someone
12 not domiciled in the statutory but not constitutional “United States**”. Instead, he was a nonresident alien but the court
13 allowed him to accept the voluntary “benefit” of the statutory status and hence, it had nothing to do with his circumstances,
14 but rather his CHOICE to nominate a “protector” and join a franchise. Simply INVOKING the status of being a statutory
15 “citizen of the United States**” on a government form is the only magic word needed to give one’s consent to become a
16 “taxpayer” in that case. It is what the court called a “benefit”, and all “benefits” are voluntary and the product of a franchise
17 contract or agreement. It was a quasi-contract as all taxes are, because the consent was implied rather than explicit, and it
18 manifested itself by using property of the government, which in this case was the STATUS he claimed.

34 You might reasonably ask of the Cook case, as we have, the following question:

35 “HOW did the government create the public office that they could tax and which Cook apparently occupied as a 36 franchisee?”

37 Well, apparently the “citizen of the United States**” status he claimed is a franchise and an office in the U.S. government
38 that carries with it the “public right” to make certain demands upon those who claim this status. Hence, it represents a
39 “property interest” in the services of the United States federal corporation. In law, all rights are property, anything that 40 conveys rights is property, contracts convey rights and are therefore property, and all franchises are contracts and therefore
41 property. A “public officer” is legally defined as someone in charge of the property of the public, and the property Cook was 42 in possession of was the public rights that attach to the status of being a statutory “citizen of the United States**”.

43 “Public office. The right, authority, and duty created and conferred by law, by which for a given period, either
44 fixed by law or enduring at the pleasure of the creating power, an individual is invested with some portion of the 45 sovereign functions of government for the benefit of the public. Walker v. Rich, 79 Cal.App. 139, 249 P. 56, 58.

4 For Cook, the statutory status of being a “citizen of the United States**” was the “res” that “identified” him within the
 5 jurisdiction of the federal courts, and hence made him a “res-ident” or “resident” subject to the tax with standing to sue in a
 6 territorial franchise court, which is what all U.S. District Courts are. In effect, he waived sovereign immunity and became a
 7 statutory “resident alien” by invoking the services of the federal courts, and as such, he had to pay for their services by paying
 8 the tax. Otherwise, he would have no standing to sue in the first place because he would be a “stateless person” and they
 9 would have had to dismiss either his case, or him as a party to it as the U.S. Supreme Court correctly did in Newman-Green
 10 v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989) in the case of an American National domiciled in Venezuela and therefore OUTSIDE
 11 the statutory but not constitutional “United States”.

12 “At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the 13 statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by
 14 the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers
 15 jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States)
 16 different from the plaintiff's. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a
 17 natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v.
 18 Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that
 19 Bettison, although a [CONSTITUTIONAL] United States citizen, has no domicile in any State [FEDERAL 20 STATE, meaning a federal TERRITORY per 28 U.S.C. §1332(e)]. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of 21 § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State
 22 sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

23 When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of
 24 the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch 267 (1806).[1] Here,
 25 Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship
 26 destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals
 27 panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party,
 28 thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by
 29 Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. §1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as
 30 sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally
 31 liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors.
 32 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in
 33 Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to
 34 resolve certain minor issues.[2]
 35 [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

36 Notice the above case dealt with federal franchises instead of constitutional rights, because they invoked STATUTORY
 37 diversity under 28 U.S.C. §1332 instead of Constitutional diversity under Article III, Section 2. Statutory diversity under 28
 38 U.S.C. §1332 is for STATUTORY “U.S. citizens”. Constitutional diversity under Article III, Section 2 is for 39 CONSTITUTIONAL “citizens of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

42 Here is another HUGE clue about what they think a “U.S. citizen” really is in federal statutes. Look at the definition below,
 43 and then consider that you CAN’T own a human being as property. That’s called slavery:

44 TITLE 46 > Subtitle V > Part A > CHAPTER 505 > § 50501
 45 § 50501. Entities deemed citizens of the United States

46 (a) In General.—

47 In this subtitle, a corporation, partnership, or association is deemed to be a citizen of the United States only if 48 the controlling interest is owned by citizens of the United States. However, if the corporation, partnership, or 49 association is operating a vessel in the coastwise trade, at least 75 percent of the interest must be owned by 50 citizens of the United States.

Now look at what the U.S. Supreme Court said about “ownership” of human beings. You can’t “own” a human being as chattel. The Thirteenth Amendment prohibits that. Therefore, the statutory “U.S. citizen” they are talking about above is an instrumentality and public office within the United States. They can only tax, regulate, and legislate for PUBLIC objects and public offices of the United States under Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2. The ability to regulate PRIVATE conduct of human beings has repeatedly been held by the U.S. Supreme Court to be “repugnant to the constitution” and beyond the jurisdiction of Congress.

“It [the contract] is, in substance and effect, a contract for servitude, with no limitation but that of time; leaving the master to determine what the service should be, and the place where and the person to whom it should be rendered. Such a contract, it is scarcely necessary to say, is against the policy of our institutions and laws. If such a sale of service could be lawfully made for five years, it might, from the same reasons, for ten, and so for the term of one’s life. The door would thus be opened for a species of servitude inconsistent with the first and fundamental article of our declaration of rights, which, proprio vigore, not only abolished every vestige of slavery then existing in the commonwealth, but rendered every form of it thereafter legally impossible. That article has always been regarded, not simply as the declaration of an abstract principle, but as having the active force and conclusive authority of law. ‘Observing that one who voluntarily subjected himself to the laws of the state must find in them the rule of restraint as well as the rule of action, the court proceeded: ‘Under this contract the plaintiff had no claim for the labor of the servant for the term of five years, or for any term whatever. She was under no legal obligation to remain in his service. There was no time during which her service was due to the plaintiff, and during which she was kept from such service by the acts of the defendants.’

[. . .]

*Under the contract of service it was at the volition of the master to entail service upon these appellants for an indefinite period. So far as the record discloses, it was an accident that the vessel came back to San Francisco when it did. By the shipping articles, the appellants could not quit the vessel until it returned to a port of the *296 United States, and such return depended absolutely upon the will of the master. He had only to land at foreign ports, and keep the vessel away from the United States, in order to prevent the appellants from leaving his service.*

[. . .]

The supreme law of the land now declares that involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, of which the party shall have been duly convicted, shall not exist any where within the United States. [Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 17 S.Ct. 326 (U.S. 1897)]

Federal courts also frequently use the phrase “privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States”. Below is an example:

“The privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States do not necessarily include all the rights protected by the first eight amendments to the Federal Constitution against the powers of the Federal Government.

The trial of a person accused as a criminal by a jury of only eight persons instead of twelve, and his subsequent imprisonment after conviction do not abridge his privileges and immunities under the Constitution as a citizen of the United States and do not deprive him of his liberty without due process of law.”
[Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U.S. 581 (1900)]

Note that the “citizen of the United States**” described above is a statutory rather than constitutional citizen, which is why the court admits that the rights of such a person are inferior to those possessed by a “citizen” within the meaning of the United States Constitution. A constitutional but not statutory citizen is, in fact, NOT “privileged” in any way and none of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution can truthfully be called “privileges” without violating the law. It is a tort and a violation of due process, in fact, to convert rights protected by the Constitution and the common law into “privileges” or franchises or “public rights” under statutory law without at least your consent, which anyone in their right mind should NEVER give.

“It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution.” Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm’n of California, 271 U.S. 583. “Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,” Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence [by converting them into statutory “privileges”/franchises],’ Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345.”
[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

1 It is furthermore proven in the following memorandum of law that civil statutory law pertains almost exclusively to
 2 government officers and employers and cannot and does not pertain to human beings or private persons not engaged in federal
 3 franchises/privileges:

Why Statutory Civil Law is Law for Government and Not Private Persons, Form #05.037
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4 Consequently, if a court refers to “privileges and immunities” in relation to you, chances are they are presuming, usually
 5 FALSELY, that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” and NOT a constitutional citizen. If you want to prevent them from making
 6 such false presumptions, we recommend attaching the following forms at least to your initial complaint and/or response in 7 any action in court:

12 4.12.4.10 U.S. v. Valentine, 288 F.Supp. 958, 980 (1968)

13 In U.S. v. Valentine, at page 980, the court admitted that:

14 “...The only absolute and unqualified right of citizenship is to residence within territorial boundaries of United 15 States; a citizen cannot be either deported or denied re-entry...”
 16 [U.S. v. Valentine, 288 F.Supp. 957, 980 (1968)]

17 Now, contrast the above excerpt to what appears on page 960, #26, where the phrase "United States citizen" is used. Thus 18 confirming that when the court used the term "citizenship" within the body of the decision, they were referring exclusively
 19 to federal citizenship, and to domicile on federal territory. “Residence”, after all, means domicile RATHER than the 20 “nationality” of the person.

21 Note that they use the word "residence", which means consent to the civil laws of that place as defined in the Internal Revenue
 22 Code (I.R.C.), rather than simply "physical presence". And "residence" is associated with "aliens" and not constitutional 23 citizens in the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) In other words, the only thing you are positively allowed to do as a “U.S.
 24 citizen” is:

- 25 1. Lie about your status by calling yourself a privileged ALIEN with no rights.
- 26 2. Consent to be governed by the civil laws of legislatively foreign jurisdiction, the District of Criminals by falsely calling 27 yourself a “resident”.

28 Title 26: Internal Revenue
 29 PART 1—INCOME TAXES
 30 nonresident alien individuals
 31 § 1.871-2 Determining residence of alien individuals.

32 (B) Residence defined.

33 An alien actually present in the United States who is not a mere transient or sojourner is a resident of the* 34 United States for purposes of the income tax. Whether he is a transient is determined by his intentions with regard
 35 to the length and nature of his stay. A mere floating intention, indefinite as to time, to return to another country
 36 is not sufficient to constitute him a transient. If he lives in the United States and has no definite intention as to his
 37 stay, he is a resident. One who comes to the United States for a definite purpose which in its nature may be
 38 promptly accomplished is a transient but, if his purpose is of such a nature that an extended stay may be necessary
 39 for its accomplishment, and to that end the alien makes his home temporarily in the United States, he becomes a
 40 resident, though it may be his intention at all times to return to his domicile abroad when the purpose for which
 41 he came has been consummated or abandoned. An alien whose stay in the United States is limited to a definite
 42 period by the immigration laws is not a resident of the United States within the meaning of this section, in the 43 absence of exceptional circumstances.

44 There is NO statutory definition of "residence" that describes the place of DOMICILE of a CONSTITUTIONAL but not
 45 STATUTORY Citizen. The only people who can have a "residence" are "aliens" in the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.).

1 Aliens, in fact, are the ONLY subject of the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.). Citizens are only mentioned in 26 U.S.C. §911,
2 and in that capacity, they too are "aliens" in relation to the foreign country they are in who connect to the Internal Revenue
3 Code (I.R.C.) as aliens under a tax treaty with the country they are in.

4 If this same statutory "U.S. citizen", as the court describes him, exercises their First Amendment right of freedom from
5 compelled association by declaring themselves a transient foreigner or nonresident, they don't have a "residence" as legally
6 defined. Hence, the implication of the above ruling is that THEY can be deported because they refuse to contract with the 7 government under what the courts call "the social compact".

8 When one becomes a member of society, he necessarily parts with some rights or privileges which, as an
9 individual not affected by his relations to others, he might retain. "A body politic," as aptly defined in the 10 preamble of the Constitution of Massachusetts, "is a social compact by which the whole people covenants with 11 each citizen, and each citizen with the whole people, that all shall be governed by certain laws for the common
12 good." This does not confer power upon the whole people to control rights which are purely and exclusively
13 private, Thorpe v. R. & B. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 143; but it does authorize the establishment of laws requiring 14 each citizen to so conduct himself, and so use his own property, as not unnecessarily to injure another. This is 15 *the very essence of government, and 125*125 has found expression in the maxim sic utere tuo ut alienum non* 16 laedas. From this source come the police powers, which, as was said by Mr. Chief Justice Taney in the License
17 Cases, 5 How. 583, "are nothing more or less than the powers of government inherent in every sovereignty, . . .
18 that is to say, . . . the power to govern men and things."

19 [Munn. v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 113 (1876),

21 In other words, if you don't politically associate by choosing or consenting to a domicile or "residence" and thereby give up
22 rights that the Constitution is SUPPOSED to protect, then you can be deported. This works a purpose OPPOSITE to the 23 reason for which civil government is established, which is to PROTECT, not compel the surrender, of PRIVATE rights.
24 "Justice" itself is defined as the right to be left alone. Those who do not politically or legally associate with ANYONE or
25 ANY GOVERNMENT MUST, as a matter of law, be LEFT ALONE by EVERYONE, including NOT becoming the target 26 of any civil statutory enforcement action. This is covered in:

31 4.12.4.11 Summary

32 It therefore appears to us that a statutory "citizen" or "resident" is really just a public office in the U.S. government. That 33 office is a franchisee with an effective domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. The corrupt courts are 34 unlawfully allowing the creation of this public office, legal "person", "res", and franchisee using your consent. They have
35 thus made a profitable business out of alienating rights that are supposed to be unalienable, in violation of the legislative
36 intent of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. The money changers., who are priests of the civil 37 religion of socialism called "judges", have taken over the civic temple called government and made it into a WHOREHOUSE
38 for their own lucrative PERSONAL gain:

39 "But those who desire to be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and harmful lusts which 40 drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil, for which some 41 have strayed from the faith in their greediness, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."
42 [1 Tim. 6: 9-10, Bible, NKJV]

44 "franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant [privilege], with 45 jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time.
46 In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority
47 (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was 48 abolished. - Also termed courts of the franchise.

49 Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This
50 explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held
51 by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants ... But many of them
52 were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after 53 the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 54 (2d ed. 1949)."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 668]

Notice the above language: “private courts held by feudal lords”. Judges who enforce their own franchises within the courtroom by imputing a franchise status against those protected by the Constitution who are not lawfully allowed to alienate their rights or give them away are acting in a private capacity to benefit themselves personally. That private capacity is associated with a de facto government in which greed is the only uniting factor. Contrast this with love for our neighbor, which is the foundation of a de jure government. When judges act in such a private, de facto capacity, the following results:

1. The judge is the “feudal lord” and you become his/her personal serf.
2. Rights become privileges, and the transformation usually occurs at the point of a gun held by a corrupt officer of the government intent on enlarging his/her pay check or retirement check. And he/she is a CRIMINAL for proceeding with such a financial conflict of interest:

§ 208. Acts affecting a personal financial interest

(a) Except as permitted by subsection (b) hereof, whoever, being an officer or employee of the executive branch of the United States Government, or of any independent agency of the United States, a Federal Reserve bank director, officer, or employee, or an officer or employee of the District of Columbia, including a special Government employee, participates personally and substantially as a Government officer or employee, through decision, approval, disapproval, recommendation, the rendering of advice, investigation, or otherwise, in a judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, charge, accusation, arrest, or other particular matter in which, to his knowledge, he, his spouse, minor child, general partner, organization in which he is serving as officer, director, trustee, general partner or employee, or any person or organization with whom he is negotiating or has any arrangement concerning prospective employment, has a financial [or personal/private] interest—

Shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 216 of this title.

3. Equality and equal protection are replaced with the following consequences under a franchise:
  - 3.1. Privilege.
  - 3.2. Partiality.
  - 3.3. Bribes.
  - 3.4. Servitude and slavery.
4. The franchise statutes are the “bible” of a pagan state-sponsored religion. The bible isn’t “law” for non-believers, and franchise statutes aren’t “law” for those who are not consensually occupying a public office in the government as a franchisee called a “citizen”, “resident”, “taxpayer”, “driver”, etc. See:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016

5. You join the religion by “worshipping”, and therefore obeying what are actually voluntary franchises. The essence of “worship”, in fact, is obedience to the dictates of a superior being. Franchises make your public servants into superior beings and replace a republic with a dulocracy. “Worship” and obedience becomes legal evidence of consent to the franchise.

“And the Lord said to Samuel, “Heed the voice of the people in all that they say to you; for they have rejected Me [God], that I should not reign over them. According to all the works which they have done since the day that I brought them up out of Egypt, even to this day—with which they have forsaken Me and served [as PUBLIC OFFICERS/FRANCHISEES] other gods [Rulers or Kings, in this case]—so they are doing to you also [government becoming idolatry].”
 [1 Sam 8:4-20, Bible, NKJV]

6. “Presumption” serves as a substitute for religious “faith” and is employed to create an unequal relationship between you and your public servants. It turns the citizen/public servant relationship with the employer/employee relationship, where you are the employee of your public servant. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7. “Taxes” serve as a substitute for “tithes” to the state-sponsored church of socialism that worships civil rulers, men and creations of men instead of the true and living God.
8. The judge’s bench becomes:
  - 8.1. An altar for human sacrifices, where YOU and your property are the sacrifice. All pagan religions are based on sacrifice of one kind or another.

1 8.2. What the Bible calls a “throne of iniquity”:

2 “Shall the throne of iniquity, which devises evil by law, have fellowship with You? They gather
 3 together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and
 4 my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own
 5 wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off.”
 6 [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]

7 9. All property belongs to this pagan god and you are just a custodian over it as a public officer. You have EQUITABLE
 8 title but not LEGAL title to the property you FALSELY BELIEVE belongs to you. The Bible franchise works the 9 same way, because the Bible says the Heavens and the Earth belong the LORD and NOT to believers. Believers are 10 “trustees” over God’s property under the Bible trust indenture. Believers are the “trustees”:

11 “Indeed heaven and the highest heavens belong to the LORD your God, also the earth with all that is in it.”
 12 [Deut. 10:15, Bible, NKJV]

13 “The ultimate ownership of all property is in the State; individual so-called “ownership” is only by virtue of

 21 reduce the tariff tax and enact a law in the interest of all the people. This was the expressed will of the people at

25 11. The licensed attorneys are the “deacons” of the state sponsored civil religion who conduct the “worship services”
 26 directed at the judge at his satanic altar/bench. They are even ordained by the “chief priests” of the state supreme 27 court, who are the chief priests of the civil religion.

28 12. Pleadings are “prayers” to this pagan deity. Even the U.S. Supreme Court still calls pleadings “prayers”, and this is no 29 accident.

30 13. Like everything that SATAN does, the design of this state-sponsored satanic church of socialism that worships men
 31 instead of God is a cheap IMITATION of God’s design for de jure government found throughout the Holy Bible.

32 NOW do you understand why in Britain, judges are called “your worship”? Because they are like gods:

[The magistrates and judges] know not, neither will they understand; they walk on in the darkness [of complacent satisfaction]; all the foundations of the earth [the fundamental principles upon which rests the administration of justice] are shaking.

I said, You are gods [since you judge on My behalf, as My representatives]; indeed, all of you are children of the Most High.

But you shall die as men and fall as one of the princes.

Arise, O God, judge the earth! For to You belong all the nations.

4.12.5 STATUTORY “Citizens” v. STATUTORY “Nationals”

4.12.5.1 Introduction

Two words are used to describe citizenship: “citizen” and “national”. There is a world of difference between these two terms and it is extremely important to understand the distinctions before we proceed further. Below is a law dictionary definition of “citizen” that deliberately tries to confuse these two components of citizenship. We will use this definition as a starting point for our discussion of the differences between “citizens” and “nationals”:

citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[***], or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

The term may include or apply to children of alien parents from in United States[***], Von Schwertmer v. Piper, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d. 862, 863; U.S. v. Minoru Yasui, D.C.Or., 48 F.Supp. 40, 54; children of American citizens born outside United States, Haaland v. Attorney General of United States, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 13, 22; Indians, United States v. Hester, C.C.A.Okl., 137 F.2d. 145, 147; National Banks, American Surety Co. v. Bank of California, C.C.A.Or., 133 F.2d. 160, 162; nonresident who has qualified as administratrix of estate of deceased resident, Hunt v. Noll, C.C.A.Tenn., 112 F.2d. 288, 289. However, neither the United States nor a state is a citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. Jizemerjian v. Dept of Air Force, 457 F.Supp. 820. On the other hand, municipalities and other local governments are deemed to be citizens. Rieser v. District of Columbia, 563 F.2d. 462. A corporation is not a citizen for purposes of privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. D.D.B. Realty Corp. v. Merrill, 232 F.Supp. 629, 637.

Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const, Article III's diversity clause, a person is a “citizen of a state” if he or she is a citizen of the United States[***] and a domiciliary of a state of the United States[***]. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116. “
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

Based on the above definition, being a “citizen” therefore involves the following FOUR individual components, EACH of which require your individual consent in some form. Any attempt to remove the requirement for consent in the case of EACH SPECIFIC component makes the government doing so UNJUST as defined by the Declaration of Independence, and produces involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment:

| 1 | Allegiance to the sovereign within the community, which in our country is the “state” and is legally defined as the PEOPLE occupying a fixed territory RATHER than the government or anyone serving them IN the government. | Requesting to be naturalized and taking a naturalization oath. | Allegiance acquired by birth is INVOLUNTARY. |

|---|--------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 2 | VOLUNTARY political association and membership in a political community. | Registering to vote or serve on jury duty. | If you don't register to vote or serve on jury duty, you are NOT a "citizen", even if ELIGIBLE to do either. |
| 3 | Enjoyment of full CIVIL rights.                                          | Choosing a domicile                        | You can't be a statutory "citizen" unless you voluntarily choose a domicile.                                 |
| 4 | Submission to CIVIL authority.                                           | Choosing a domicile                        | You can't be a statutory "citizen" unless you voluntarily choose a domicile.                                 |

From the above, we can see that simply calling oneself a "citizen" or not qualifying which SUBSET of each of the above we consent to is extremely hazardous to your freedom! Watch out! The main questions in our mind about the above chart is:

1. Must we expressly consent to ALL of the above as indicated in the third column from the left above in order to truthfully be called a "citizen" as legally defined?
2. Which components in the above table are MANDATORY in order to be called a "citizen"?
3. What if we don't consent to the "benefits" of the domicile protection franchise? Does that NOT make us a "citizen" under the civil statutory laws of that jurisdiction?
4. What if we choose a domicile in the place, but refuse to register to vote and make ourselves ineligible to serve on jury duty. Does that make us NOT a "citizen"?
5. If we AREN'T a "citizen" as defined above because we don't consent to ALL of the components, then what would we be called on:
  - 5.1. Government forms?
  - 5.2. Under the statutes of the jurisdiction we are NOT a "citizen" of?

4.12.5.2 What if I don't consent to receive ANY of the "benefits" or "privileges" of being a "citizen"? What would I be called?

Under maxims of the common law, refusing to consent to ANY ONE OR MORE of the above four prerequisites of BEING a "citizen" makes us ineligible to be called a "citizen" under the laws of that jurisdiction.

No one is obliged to accept a benefit against his consent. Dig. 50, 17, 69. But if he does not dissent he will be considered as assenting. Vide Assent.

Quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se inducto.

Any one may renounce a law introduced for his own benefit. To this rule there are some exceptions. See 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 83.

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

There are many good reasons for the above distinction between NATIONALITY (POLITICAL) status and CITIZEN (CIVIL) status, the most important of which is the ability of the courts to legally distinguish those born in the country but domiciled outside their jurisdiction from those who are domiciled in their jurisdiction. For instance, those domiciled abroad and outside the geographical "United States" are usually called "nationals of the United States" rather than "citizens of the United States". An example of this phenomenon is described in the following U.S. Supreme Court case, in which an American born in the country is domiciled in Venezuela and therefore is referred to as a "stateless person" not subject to and immune from the civil laws of his country!

Petitioner Newman-Green, Inc., an Illinois corporation, brought this state law contract action in District Court against a Venezuelan corporation, four Venezuelan citizens, and William L. Bettison, a United States citizen domiciled in Caracas, Venezuela. Newman-Green's complaint alleged that the Venezuelan corporation had breached a licensing agreement, and that the individual defendants, joint and several guarantors of royalty

1 payments due under the agreement, owed money to Newman-Green. Several years of discovery and pretrial
2 motions followed. The District Court ultimately granted partial summary judgment for the guarantors and partial
3 summary judgment for Newman-Green. 590 F.Supp. 1083 (ND Ill.1984). Only Newman-Green appealed.

4 At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the
5 statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by
6 the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers
7 jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States)
8 different from the plaintiff's. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a
9 natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v.
10 Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that
11 Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes
12 of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a
13 State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829]

14 When a plaintiff sues more than one defendant in a diversity action, the plaintiff must meet the requirements of 15 the diversity statute for each defendant or face dismissal. Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch 267 (1806).<sup>[1]</sup> Here,
16 Bettison's "stateless" status destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(3), and his United States citizenship
17 destroyed complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). Instead of dismissing the case, however, the Court of Appeals
18 panel granted Newman-Green's motion, which it had invited, to amend the complaint to drop Bettison as a party,
19 thereby producing complete diversity under § 1332(a)(2). 832 F.2d. 417 (1987). The panel, in an opinion by
20 Judge Easterbrook, relied both on 28 U.S.C. § 1653 and on Rule 21 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as
21 sources of its authority to grant this motion. The panel noted that, because the guarantors are jointly and severally
22 liable, Bettison is not an indispensable party, and dismissing him would not prejudice the remaining guarantors.
23 832 F.2d. at 420, citing Fed.Rule Civ.Proc. 19(b). The panel then proceeded to the merits of the case, ruling in
24 Newman-Green's favor in large part, but remanding to allow the District Court to quantify damages and to 25 resolve certain minor issues.<sup>[2]</sup>
26 [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

27 The U.S. Supreme Court above was trying to deceive the audience by not clarifying WHAT type of "citizen" Bettison was.
28 They refer to CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens with the same name, which indirectly causes the
29 audience to believe that NATIONALITY and DOMICILE are synonymous. They do this to unlawfully and
30 unconstitutionally expand their importance and jurisdiction. Bettison in fact was a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen but not a
31 STATUTORY citizen, so the CIVIL case against him under the STATUTORY codes had to either be dismissed or he had to
32 be removed because he couldn't lawfully be a defendant! Imagine applying this same logic to a case involving the (illegal)
33 enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code to Americans abroad.

34 The Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.) identifies TWO components of being a "citizen" with the following
35 language. It acknowledges that one can be a "national of the United States" WITHOUT being a "citizen", thus implying that 36 those who are NOT "citizens" or who do not consent to ALL the obligations of being a "citizen" automatically become "non-37 citizen nationals of the United States":

41 b. National vs. Citizen: While most people and countries use the terms "citizenship" and "nationality"
42 interchangeably, U.S. law differentiates between the two. Under current law all U.S. citizens are also U.S.
43 nationals, but not all U.S. nationals are U.S. citizens. The term "national of the United States", as defined by 44 statute (INA 101 (a)(22) (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)) includes all citizens of the United States, and other persons
45 who owe allegiance to the United States but who have not been granted the privilege of citizenship.

46 (1) Nationals of the United States who are not citizens owe allegiance to the United States and are entitled to the
47 consular protection of the United States when abroad, and to U.S. documentation, such as U.S. passports with
48 appropriate endorsements. They are not entitled to voting representation in Congress and, under most state laws,
49 are not entitled to vote in Federal, state, or local elections except in their place of birth. (See 7 FAM 012; 7 FAM
50 1300 Appendix B Endorsement 09.)

51 (2) Historically, Congress, through statutes, granted U.S. non-citizen nationality to persons born or inhabiting
52 territory acquired by the United States through conquest or treaty. At one time or other natives and certain other
53 residents of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Philippines, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone were U.S.
54 non-citizen nationals. (See 7 FAM 1120.)

55 (3) Under current law, only persons born in American Samoa and Swains Island are U.S. non-citizen nationals
56 (INA 101(a)(29) (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(29) and INA 308(1) (8 U.S.C. 1408)). (See 7 FAM 1125.)

 11 audience to believe that NATIONALITY and DOMICILE are synonymous. They do this to unlawfully and
 12 unconstitutionally expand their importance and jurisdiction. Bettison in fact was a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen but not a
 13 STATUTORY citizen, so the CIVIL case against him under the STATUTORY codes had to either be dismissed or he had to
 14 be removed because he couldn’t lawfully be a defendant! Imagine applying this same logic to a case involving the (illegal)
 15 enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code to Americans abroad.

16 The first thing we notice about the Foreign Affairs Manual cite above is the use of the phrase “privileges of citizenship”.
 17 Both voting and serving on jury duty are and always have been PRIVILEGES that can be taken away, not RIGHTS that are
 18 inalienable. The fact that they are privileges is the reason why convicted felons can’t vote or serve on jury duty, in fact.<sup>190</sup>

19 “In a popular sense, the political rights of subjects and citizens are franchises, such as the right of suffrage,

23 Exclusive Franchise. See Exclusive Privilege or Franchise. “
 24 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, pp. 786-787]

25 Those who refuse to be enfranchised or privileged in any way therefore cannot consent to or exercise the obligations or accept
 26 the “benefits” of such privileges, and they have a RIGHT to do so. To suggest otherwise is to sanction involuntary servitude
 27 in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.

28 It is clearly an absurd and irrational usurpation to say that “nationality” is synonymous with being a PRIVILEGED 29 STATUTORY “citizen” and that we can abandon or expatriate our nationality to evade or avoid the privileges. Under the 30 English monarchy, “nationality” and “citizen” status are synonymous and EVERYONE is a “subject” whether they want to 31 be or not. In America, they are not synonymous and you cannot be compelled to become a subject without violating the First
 32 Amendment and the Fifth Amendment. Forcing people to abandon their nationality to become unenfranchised actually
 33 accomplishes the OPPOSITE and makes them MORE enfranchised, in fact. That is because by doing so they become YET
 34 ANOTHER type of enfranchised entity called an “alien” who is a slave to a whole different set of “privileges”.

35 “Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
 36 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so long as they
 37 remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens.
 38 They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who
 39 have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged character, and 40 are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right
 41 of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”
 42 [The Law of Nations, Vattel, Book 1, Chapter 19, Section 213, p. 87]

43 There MUST be a status that carries with it NO PRIVILEGES or obligations and if there is NOT, then the entire country is 44 just a big FARM for government animals akin to that described below:

How to Leave the Government Farm, Form #12.020
<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Mp1gJ3iF2Ik&feature=youtu.be>

 SOURCE: http://www.ehow.com/facts\_6751209\_felony-conviction-voting-rights.html”

It would therefore seem based on 7 Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.) 1100(b)(1) that those who refuse to register to vote or serve on jury duty would satisfy the requirement above of being a “non-citizen national”. Hence, withdrawing consent to be jurist or voter alone would seem to demote us from being a “citizen” to being a “non-citizen national”. However, there is no congressional act that grants this substandard status to anyone OTHER than those in federal possessions such as American Samoa or Swain’s Island. Hence, claiming the status of “non-citizen national” would have to be done delicately with care so as not to confuse yourself with those born in or domiciled in the federal possessions of American Samoa and Swain’s Island, who are described in 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452.

STATUTORY “non-citizen nationals of the United States** at birth” are described in 8 U.S.C. §1408, 8 U.S.C. §1452, and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). However, these statutes only define civil statuses of those situated in federal possessions. Those physically situated or domiciled in a constitutional state would not be described in those statutes but would be eligible to be called a “national” under the common law and not statutes as described in Perkins v. Elg., 1939, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320.

“Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon their inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-11. If the Citizenship Clause guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes would have been unnecessary. While longstanding practice is not sufficient to demonstrate constitutionality, such a practice requires special scrutiny before being set aside. See, e.g., Jackman v. Rosenbaum Co., 260 U.S. 22, 31 (1922) (Holmes, J.) (“If a thing has been practiced for two hundred years by common consent, it will need a strong case for the Fourteenth Amendment to affect it[.]”); Walz v. Tax Comm’n, 397 U.S. 664, 678 (1970) (“It is obviously correct that no one acquires a vested or protected right in violation of the Constitution by long use . . . Yet an unbroken practice . . . is not something to be lightly cast aside.”). And while Congress cannot take away the citizenship of individuals covered by the Citizenship Clause, it can bestow citizenship upon those not within the Constitution’s breadth. See U.S. Const. art. IV, § 3, cl. 2 (“Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory belonging to the United States.”); id. at art. I, § 8, cl. 4 (Congress may “establish a uniform Rule of Naturalization . . .”). To date, Congress has not seen fit to bestow birthright citizenship upon American Samoa, and in accordance with the law, this Court must and will respect that choice.16”
[Tuana v. USA, Case No. 12-01143 (District of Columbia District Court)]

Those among our readers who do NOT want to be privileged “citizens”, do not want to abandon their nationality, and yet who also do not want to call themselves “non-citizen nationals” may therefore instead refer to themselves simply as “non-resident non-persons” under federal law. Below is our definition of that term from the SEDM Disclaimer:

4. MEANINGS OF WORDS

The term “non-person” as used on this site we define to be a human not domiciled on federal territory, not engaged in a public office, and not “purposefully and consensually availing themselves” of commerce within the jurisdiction of the United States government. We invented this term. The term does not appear in federal statutes because statutes cannot even define things or people who are not subject to them and therefore foreign and sovereign. The term “non-individual” used on this site is equivalent to and a synonym for “non-person” on this site, even though STATUTORY “individuals” are a SUBSET of “persons” within the Internal Revenue Code. Likewise, the term “private human” is also synonymous with “non-person”. Hence, a “non-person”:

1. Retains their sovereign immunity. They do not waive it under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97 or the longarm statutes of the state they occupy.
2. Is protected by the United States Constitution and not federal statutory civil law.
3. May not have federal statutory civil law cited against them. If they were, a violation of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 and a constitutional tort would result if they were physically present on land protected by the United States Constitution within the exterior limits of states of the Union.
4. Is on an equal footing with the United States government in court. “Persons” would be on an UNEQUAL, INFERIOR, and subservient level if they were subject to federal territorial law.

Don't expect vain public servants to willingly admit that there is such a thing as a human who satisfies the above criteria because it would undermine their systematic and treasonous plunder and enslavement of people they are supposed to be protecting. However, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that the “right to be left alone” is the purpose of the constitution. Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438. A so-called “government” that refuses to leave you alone or respect or protect your sovereignty and equality in relation to them is no government at all and has violated the purpose of its creation described in the Declaration of Independence.

1 "The hide the presumption and hide the consent game."

2 Corrupt judges know that:

- 3 1. All just powers of CIVIL government derive from the CONSENT of the governed per the Declaration of
- 4 Independence.
- 5 2. Any civil statutory power wielded by government against your consent is inherently UNJUST.
- 6 3. The foundation of justice itself is the right to be left alone:

7 PAULSEN, ETHICS (Thilly's translation), chap. 9.

8 "Justice, as a moral habit, is that tendency of the will and mode of conduct which refrains from disturbing the 9 lives and interests of others, and, as far as possible, hinders such interference on the part of others. This virtue
 10 springs from the individual's respect for his fellows as ends in themselves and as his co equals. The different
 11 spheres of interests may be roughly classified as follows: body and life; the family, or the extended individual
 12 life; property, or the totality of the instruments of action; honor, or the ideal existence; and finally freedom, or
 13 the possibility of fashioning one's life as an end in itself. The law defends these different spheres, thus giving rise
 14 to a corresponding number of spheres of rights, each being protected by a prohibition. . . . To violate the rights,
 15 to interfere with the interests of others, is injustice. All injustice is ultimately directed against the life of the 16 neighbor; it is an open avowal that the latter is not an end in itself, having the same value as the individual's own
 17 life. The general formula of the duty of justice may therefore be stated as follows: Do no wrong yourself, and 18 permit no wrong to be done, so far as lies in your power; or, expressed positively: Respect and protect the right."
 19 [Readings on the History and System of the Common Law, Second Edition, Roscoe Pound, 1925, p. 2]

- 20 4. The first duty of government is to protect your right to be left alone by THEM, and subsequently, by everyone else.
- 21 This right is NOT a privilege and cannot be given away or diminished if it truly is "unalienable", as the Declaration of
- 22 Independence (which is organic law enacted into law at 1 Stat. 1) says:

23 "Justice is the end of government. It is the end of civil society. It ever has been, and ever will be pursued, until 24 it be obtained, or until liberty be lost in the pursuit."
 25 [James Madison, The Federalist No. 51 (1788)]

26 "The makers of our Constitution undertook to secure conditions favorable to the pursuit of happiness. They 27 recognized the significance of man's spiritual nature, of his feelings and of his intellect. They knew that only a
 28 part of the pain, pleasure and satisfactions of life are to be found in material things. They sought to protect 29 Americans in their beliefs, their thoughts, their emotions and their sensations. They conferred, as against the 30 Government, the right to be let alone - the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized 31 men."
 32 [Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 478 (1928) (Brandeis, J., dissenting); see also Washington v. Harper,
 33 494 U.S. 210 (1990)]

- 34 5. The government can only CIVILLY govern people with statutes who consent to become STATUTORY "citizens".
- 35 6. You have a RIGHT to NOT participate in franchises or privileges.
- 36 7. You can choose NOT to be a privileged "citizen" WITHOUT abandoning your nationality. Only in a monarchy where
- 37 everyone is a "subject" regardless of their consent can a government NOT allow this.
- 38 8. They can only CIVILLY government people who consent to become "citizens".
- 39 9. All men and all creations of men such as government are equal. Hence, an entire government of men has no more
- 40 power than a single human as a legal "person".
- 41 10. If government becomes abusive, you have a RIGHT and a DUTY under the Declaration of Independence to quit your
- 42 public office as a "citizen", and quit paying for the PRIVILEGE of occupying the position in the form of taxes.

43 "But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce
 44 them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide
 45 new Guards for their future security"
 46 [Declaration of Independence; SOURCE:
 47 http://www.archives.gov/exhibits/charters/declaration\_transcript.html]

48 If everyone knew the above, they would abandon a totally corrupted government, quit subsidizing it, and let it starve to death
 49 long enough to fire the bastards and PEACEFULLY start over with no bloodshed and no violent revolution. Since they won't
 50 recognize your right to PEACEFULLY institute such reforms and DUTIES under the Declaration of Independence, indirectly
 51 you could say they are anarchists because the inevitable final result of not having a peaceful remedy of this kind is and will 52 be violence, social unrest, and bloodshed.

1 Like the Wizard of Oz, it's time to pull back the curtain, ahem, or the "robe", of these corrupt wizards on the federal bench
 2 and expose this FRAUD and confidence game for what it is. Let's return to Kansas, Dorothy. There's no place like home,
 3 and home is an accountable government that needs your explicit permission to do anything civil to you and which can be
 4 literally FIRED by all those who are mistreated.

5 4.12.5.3 Statutory "citizens"

6 The key thing to notice in the definition of "citizen" earlier is that those who are "citizens" within a legislative jurisdiction
 7 are also subject to all civil laws within that legislative jurisdiction. Note the phrase above:

8 *"Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have...submitted themselves
 9 to the dominion of a government [and all its laws] for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection
 10 of their individual as well as collective rights."
 11 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]*

12 Notice the phrase "for the protection of.. collective rights". Those who want to avoid what we call "collectivism" therefore 13 cannot become a STATUTORY "citizen" under the civil laws of any government, because you can't become a citizen without 14 ALSO protecting COLLECTIVE rights. This may be why the Bible says on this subject the following:

15 *"Where do wars and fights [and tyranny and oppression] come from among you? Do they not come from your 16 desires for pleasure [pursuit of government "privileges" and "benefits" and favors such as Socialist Security]
 17 that war in your members? ....You ask [from your government and its THIEF the IRS] and do not receive, because 18 you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your own pleasures. Adulterers and adulteresses [and HARLOTS! Do
 19 you not know that friendship with the world [as a "citizen", "resident", "taxpayer", etcl] is enmity with God?
 20 Whoever therefore wants to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God."
 21 [James 4:3-4, Bible, NKJV]*

22 For more on collectivism, see:

Collectivism and How to Resist It, Form #12.024
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

23 A statutory "citizen" is therefore someone who was born somewhere within the country and who:

- 24 1. Maintains a PHYSICAL civil domicile within a specific territory.
- 25 2. Owes allegiance to the "sovereign" within that jurisdiction, and
- 26 3. Participates in the functions of government by voting and serving on jury duty. Domicile, in fact, is a prerequisite for 27 being eligible to vote in most jurisdictions.

28 The only people who are "subject to" federal civil statutory, and therefore "citizens" under federal civil statutory law, are
 29 those people who have voluntarily chosen a domicile where the federal government has exclusive legislative/general
 30 jurisdiction, which exists only within the federal zone, under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution and 40 U.S.C.
 31 §§3111 and 3112. Within the Internal Revenue Code, people born in the federal zone or domiciled there are described as 32 being "subject to its jurisdiction" rather than "subject to the jurisdiction" as mentioned in the Fourteenth Amendment. Hence,
 33 THIS type of "citizen" is NOT a Constitutional citizen but a Statutory citizen domiciled on federal territory:

34 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 Income tax on individuals

35 (c) Who is a citizen.

36 Every person born or naturalized in the [federal] United States**] and subject to its jurisdiction is a citizen.
 37 For other rules governing the acquisition of citizenship, see chapters 1 and 2 of title III of the Immigration and
 38 Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. §1401-1459). "
 39 [26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)]

40 This area includes the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions of the United States**, and the federal areas within 41 states, which are all "foreign" with respect to states of the Union for the purposes of federal legislative jurisdiction. If you
 42 were born in a state of the Union and are domiciled there, you are not subject to federal jurisdiction unless the land you
 43 maintain a domicile on was ceded by the state to the federal government. Therefore, you are not and cannot be a "citizen"

1 under federal law! If you aren't a "citizen", then you also can't be claiming your children as "citizens" on IRS returns or 2 applying for government numbers for them either!

3 This same STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401:

4 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401.
 5 Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States at birth

6 The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States at birth:

7 (a) a person born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

8 [...]

9 We said earlier that the statutory term "citizen" is always territorial. In the next section, we will show that the statutory term
 10 "national" is NOT territorial. Allegiance is always owed to legal "persons" or groups of "persons" such as nations, both of 11 which are non-territorial. This is the LEGAL context rather than the GEOGRAPHICAL context. Therefore, the phrase
 12 "national and citizen of the United States" as used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 can be confusing to the reader, because the term "United 13 States" in that phrase actually has TWO simultaneous meanings and contexts in a single word, one which is 14 GEOGRAPHICAL ("citizen") and the other which is LEGAL ("national"). If we were to break that phrase apart into its 15 components and use the term "United States" as having only one meaning or context at a time, it would read as follows as it
 16 is used in 8 U.S.C. §1401:

17 "citizen of the United States** [federal territory] and national of the United States*** [the legal person, because 18 allegiance is owed to PERSONS, not geographies] at birth"

19 4.12.5.4 Statutory "nationals"

20 A "national", on the other hand, is simply someone who claims allegiance to the political body formed within the geographical 21 boundaries and territory that define a "state".

22 8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

23 (a) As used in this chapter—

24 (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

25 The above "state" is lower case, which means it can describe a legislatively but not constitutionally foreign entity such as a
 26 state of the Union. If it had been UPPER case, it would have been a federal territory because the context is a statute rather 27 than the constitution. We show this later in section 5.1.4.6.

28 A "state" is then defined as follows:

29 "State. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom
 30 into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and
 31 control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into 32 international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56 F.Supp. 201
 33 *207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. *Delany v.
 34 Moralitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a "state" is a body politic or a society of men.
 35 Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body of people
 36 occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano v. Mitchell,
 37 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law. Restatement, Second,
 38 Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to an individual government
 39 unit of such nation (e.g. California).

40 [...]

41 The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public;
 42 as in the title of a cause, "The State vs. A.B."
 43 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

1 Allegiance is NOT territorial. You can have allegiance while situated ANYWHERE in the world. In fact, the doctrine of 2 “jus sanguinis” grants NATIONALITY for people not born on the territory of the country they become nationals of.

3 “JUS SANGUINIS. The right of blood. See Jus Soli.”

4 “JUS SOLI. The law of the place of one's birth as contrasted with jus sanguinis, the law of the place of one's 5 descent or parentage. It is of feudal origin. Hershey, Int. L. 237.
6 [Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 1000]

7 The above methods of acquiring nationality and “national” status is based on the following aspect of the English common
8 law:

9 The fundamental principle of the common law with regard to English nationality was birth within the 10 allegiance, also called "ligealty," "obedience," "faith," or "power" of the King. The principle embraced all
11 persons born within the King's allegiance and subject to his protection. Such allegiance and protection were 12 mutual -- as expressed in the maxim protectio trahit subjectionem, et subjectio protectionem -- and were not 13 restricted to natural-born subjects and naturalized subjects, or to those who had taken an oath of allegiance, but 14 were predicable of aliens in amity so long as they were within the kingdom. Children, born in England, of such 15 aliens were therefore natural-born subjects. But the children, born within the realm, of foreign ambassadors, or 16 the children of alien enemies, born during and within their hostile occupation of part of the King's dominions, 17 were not natural-born subjects because not born within the allegiance, the obedience, or the power, or, as would 18 be said at this day, within the jurisdiction, of the King.
19 [United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

20 The “allegiance” they are talking about above is that of a “national”, because a national is someone who “owes allegiance”.
21 That allegiance is also mandatory in the issuance of passports:

22 22 U.S.C. §212

23 No passport shall be granted or issued to or verified for any other persons than those owing allegiance, whether
24 citizens or not, to the United States

25 _____
26 Title 22: Foreign Relations

27 PART 51—PASSPORTS

28 Subpart A—General

29 §51.2 Passport issued to nationals only.

30 (a) A United States passport shall be issued only to a national of the United States (22 U.S.C. 212).

31 (b) Unless authorized by the Department no person shall bear more than one valid or potentially valid U.S.
32 passport at any one time.

33 [SD-165, 46 FR 2343, Jan. 9, 1981]

34 We conclude, based on the above and based on the fact that passports are issued to state nationals, that all state nationals are 35 both “nationals of the United States***” and “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent 36 allegiance to the United States” as defined below:

37 Title 8 › Chapter 12 › Subchapter I › § 1101
38 8 U.S. Code § 1101 - Definitions

39 (22) The term “national of the United States” means

40 (A) a citizen of the United States, or

41 (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

42 Both jus soli and jus sanguinis are the only methods of acquiring NATIONALITY, meaning “national”, status. Jus sanguinis
43 is implemented in 8 U.S.C. §1401 for those born outside of constitutional states. Jus soli is implemented by the Fourteenth 44 Amendment and permits nationality by virtue of birth on land within a constitutional state.

 4 (Office of Origin: CA/OCS/L)
 5 7 FAM 1111 INTRODUCTION

6 (CT:CON-538; 10-24-2014)

7 a. U.S. citizenship may be acquired either at birth or through naturalization subsequent to birth. U.S. laws
 8 governing the acquisition of citizenship at birth embody two legal principles:

9 (1) Jus soli (the law of the soil) - a rule of common law under which the place of a persons birth determines
 10 citizenship. In addition to common law, this principle is embodied in the 14th Amendment to the U.S.
 11 Constitution and the various U.S. citizenship and nationality statutes.

12 (2) Jus sanguinis (the law of the bloodline) - a concept of Roman or civil law under which a persons citizenship
 13 is determined by the citizenship of one or both parents. This rule, frequently called citizenship by descent or 14 derivative citizenship, is not embodied in the U.S. Constitution, but such citizenship is granted through statute.
 15 As U.S. laws have changed, the requirements for conferring and retaining derivative citizenship have also 16 changed.

17 b. National vs. Citizen: While most people and countries use the terms citizenship and nationality
 18 interchangeably, U.S. law differentiates between the two. Under current law all U.S. citizens are also U.S.
 19 nationals, but not all U.S. nationals are U.S. citizens. The term national of the United States, as defined by statute
 20 (INA 101 (a)(22) (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)) includes all citizens of the United States, and other persons who owe 21 allegiance to the United States but who have not been granted the privilege of citizenship.

22 (1) Nationals of the United States who are not citizens owe allegiance to the United States and are entitled to the
 23 consular protection of the United States when abroad, and to U.S. documentation, such as U.S. passports with
 24 appropriate endorsements. They are not entitled to voting representation in Congress and, under most state laws,
 25 are not entitled to vote in Federal, state, or local elections except in their place of birth. (See 7 FAM 012; 7 FAM
 26 1300 Appendix B Endorsement 09.)

27 (2) Historically, Congress, through statutes, granted U.S. non-citizen nationality to persons born or inhabiting
 28 territory acquired by the United States through conquest or treaty. At one time or other natives and certain other
 29 residents of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Philippines, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone were U.S.
 30 non-citizen nationals. (See 7 FAM 1120.)

31 (3) Under current law, only persons born in American Samoa and Swains Island are U.S. non-citizen nationals
 32 (INA 101(a)(29) (8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(29) and INA 308(1) (8 U.S.C. §1408)). (See 7 FAM 1125.)

37 So when we claim “allegiance” as a “national”, we are claiming allegiance to a “state”, which is:

- 38 1. In the case of state/CONSTITUTIONAL citizens, the collection of all people within the constitutional states of the 39 Union, who are the sovereigns within our system of government. This is called the “United States***”. People owing 40 this kind of allegiance are called “subject to THE jurisdiction”.
- 41 2. In the case of territorial/STATUTORY citizens, the United States government or United States**. It is NOT any of the 42 people on federal territory, because they are all SUBJECTS within what the U.S. Supreme Court called the equivalent 43 of “a British Crown Colony” in Downes v. Bidwell. People owing this kind of allegiance are called “subject to ITS 44 jurisdiction”. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).

45 Since the federal GOVERNMENT in item 2 above is a representative of the Sovereign People in states of the Union and was 46 created to SERVE them, then owing that government allegiance is ALSO equivalent to being a “national of the United 47 States***” in the case of people born on federal territory. Therefore, the above two can be summarized as “national of the 48 United States***”.

49 The political body we have allegiance to as a “national” is non-geographical and can exist OUTSIDE the physical territory
 50 or exclusive jurisdiction of the sovereign to whom we claim allegiance. You can use a passport anywhere outside the country,
 51 but you must have allegiance to get one so as to be entitled to protection when abroad. However, be advised of the following
 52 maxim of law on this subject:

1           “Protectio trahit subjectionem, subjectio projectionem. Protection draws to it subjection, subjection, protection.
 2           Co. Litt. 65.”
 3           [Bouvier’s Maxims of Law, 1856;
 4           SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviereMaxims.htm>]

5 You cannot demand or expect CIVIL statutory protection from any government WITHOUT also becoming a “subject” of its
 6 CIVIL statutory franchise “codes”, because those law, in fact, are the METHOD of delivering said protection.

7 Also, Americans born abroad to American nationals take on the citizenship of their parents, no matter where born per 8 U.S.C.
 8 §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1408. Hence, the “United States” we claim allegiance to is non-geographical because even people when 9 abroad are called “subject to THE jurisdiction”, meaning the POLITICAL rather than CIVIL or STATUTORY jurisdiction.

10           “All persons born in the allegiance of the king are natural-born subjects, and all persons born in the allegiance
 11           of the United States are natural-born citizens. Birth and allegiance go together. Such is the rule of the common
 12           law, and it is the common law of this country, as well as of England. There are two exceptions, and only two, to 13           the universality of its application. The children of ambassadors are in theory born in the allegiance of the powers 14           the ambassadors represent, and slaves, in legal contemplation, are property, and not persons.”
 15           [United States v. Rhodes, 1 Abbott, U.S. 28 (Cir. Ct. Ky 1866), Justice Swayne]

16 Note that as a “national” domiciled in a state of the Union (a “state national”), we are NOT claiming allegiance to the 17 government or anyone serving us within the government in their official capacity as “public servants”. As a “national”, we
 18 are instead claiming allegiance to the People within the legislative jurisdiction of the geographic region by virtue of a domicile
 19 there. This is because in states of the Union, the People are the Sovereigns, and not the government who serves them. All
 20 sovereignty and authority emanates from We the People as human beings and not from the government that serves them:

21           *“The words ‘people of the United States[***]’ and ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing.*
 22           They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and
 23           who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call
 24           the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”
 25           [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

26           “From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily 27           follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-
 28           sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the 29           Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in
 30           a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their
 31           sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities,
 32           and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in 33           any other capacity, than as private citizens.”
 34           [Chisholm, Ex’r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 454, 457, 471, 472) (1794)]

35 The Supreme Court of the United States** described and compared the differences between “citizenship” and “allegiance”
 36 very succinctly in the case of Talbot v. Janson, 3 U.S. 133 (1795):

37           “Yet, it is to be remembered, and that whether in its real origin, or in its artificial state, allegiance, as well as
 38           fealty, rests upon lands, and it is due to persons. Not so, with respect to Citizenship, which has arisen from the 39           dissolution of the feudal system and is a substitute for allegiance, corresponding with the new order of things.
 40           Allegiance and citizenship, differ, indeed, in almost every characteristic. Citizenship is the effect of compact;
 41           allegiance is the offspring of power and necessity. Citizenship is a political tie; allegiance is a territorial tenure.
 42           Citizenship is the charter of equality; allegiance is a badge of inferiority. Citizenship is constitutional;
 43           allegiance is personal. Citizenship is freedom; allegiance is servitude. Citizenship is communicable; allegiance
 44           is repulsive. Citizenship may be relinquished; allegiance is perpetual. With such essential differences, the 45           doctrine of allegiance is inapplicable to a system of citizenship; which it can neither serve to controul, nor to
 46           elucidate. And yet, even among the nations, in which the law of allegiance is the most firmly established, the law
 47 most pertinaciously enforced, there are striking deviations that demonstrate the invincible power of truth, and 48 the homage, which, under every modification of government, must be paid to the inherent rights of man.....The 49 doctrine is, that allegiance cannot be due to two sovereigns; and taking an oath of allegiance to a new, is the 50 strongest evidence of withdrawing allegiance from a previous, sovereign....”

54 A “national” is not subject to the exclusive legislative civil jurisdiction and general sovereignty of the political body, but 55 indirectly is protected by it and may claim its protection when abroad. For instance, when we travel overseas or change our 56 domicile to abroad, we are known in foreign countries as “American Nationals” or:

1. “nationals”, or “state nationals”, or “nationals of the United States of America” or “United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) if we were born in and are domiciled in a state of the Union.
2. “nationals of the United States*” in a common law sense but NOT STATUTORY “nationals of the United States**” described in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).
3. “nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 if we were born in a federal possession, such as American Samoa or Swains Island.

Here is the definition of a “national of the United States*” that demonstrates this, and note paragraph (a)(22)(B):

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter—

(22) The term “national of the United States[*]” means

(A) a citizen of the United States[**], or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent [but not necessarily exclusive] allegiance to the United States[*].

Consequently, the only time a “national” can also be described as a STATUTORY “citizen” is when he/she is domiciled within the territorial and exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the political body to which he/she claims allegiance. Being a “national” is therefore an attribute and a prerequisite of being a STATUTORY “citizen”, and the term can be used to describe STATUTORY “citizens”, as indicated above in paragraph (A). For instance, 8 U.S.C. §1401 describes the citizenship of those born within or residing within federal jurisdiction, and note that these people are identified as both “citizens” and “nationals”.

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401.
[Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States\[\*\*\] at birth](#)

The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States[**] at birth:

(a) a person born in the United States[**], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

(b) a person born in the United States[**] to a member of an Indian, Eskimo, Aleutian, or other aboriginal tribe: Provided, That the granting of citizenship under this subsection shall not in any manner impair or otherwise affect the right of such person to tribal or other property;

4.12.5.5 Title 8 STATUTORY definitions

STATUTORY “nationals” are also further defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101 as follows:

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

(a) As used in this chapter—

(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

(22) The term “national of the United States[**]” means:

(A) a citizen of the United States[**], or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**].

Note the suspect word “permanent” in the above definition. Below is the definition of “permanent” from the same title found in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(31\):

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

1 (a) As used in this chapter—

2 (31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from
3 temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the 4 instance either of the United States[**] or of the individual, in accordance with law.

5 For those of you who are Christians, you realize that this life is very temporary and that nothing on this earth can be permanent,
6 and especially not your life:

7 "In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread
8 Till you return to the ground,
9 For out of it you were taken;
10 For dust you are,
11 And to dust you shall return."
12 [God speaking to Adam and Eve, Gen. 3:19, Bible, NKJV]

13 If we are going to be "dust", then how can our intact living body have a permanent earthly place of abode? The Bible says
14 in Romans 6:23 that "the wages of sin is death", and that Eve brought sin into the world and thereby cursed all her successors
15 so there is nothing more certain than death, which means there can be nothing physical that is permanent on earth including
16 our very short lives. The only thing permanent is our spirit and not our physical body, which will certainly deteriorate and
17 die. Therefore, there can be no such thing as "permanent allegiance" on our part to anything but God for Christians, because 18 exclusive allegiance to God is the only way to achieve immortality and eternal life. Exclusive allegiance to anything but God
19 is idolatry, in violation of the first four commandments of the ten commandments.

20 When we bring up the above kinds of issues, some of our readers have said that they don't even like being called "nationals"
21 as they are defined above, and we agree with them. However, it is a practical reality that you cannot get a passport within 22 our society without being either a "citizen or non-citizen national of the United States*". The compromise we make in this 23 sort of dilemma is to clarify on our passport application that:

- 24 1. The term "U.S." as used on our passport application means the "United States of America" and not the federal United 25 States**.
- 26 2. The term "U.S." used on the USA passport application excludes the federal corporation called the United States**
27 government.
- 28 3. We are not the statutory "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 29 4. Anyone who interferes with our status declaration in the context of the passport application is doing the following, both 30 of which are a violation of 22 U.S.C. §2721:
- 31 4.1. Interfering with our First Amendment right of free association and freedom from compelled association.
- 32 4.2. Compelling us to contract with the government in procuring a franchise status that we don't consent to.

33 Below, in fact, is a procedure we use to apply for a passport without creating a false presumption that we are a "U.S. citizen"
34 that worked for us:

35 Getting a USA Passport as a "state national", Form #10.012
36 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

37 Sneaky, huh? This is a chess game using "words of art" conducted by greedy lawyers to steal your property and your liberty,
38 folks! Now we ask our esteemed readers:

39 "After all the crazy circuitous logic and wild goose chasing that results from listening to the propaganda of the 40 government from its various branches on the citizenship definitions, what should a reasonable man conclude 41 about the meanings of these terms? We only have two choices:

- 42 1. 'United States**' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone and 'U.S. citizens' are 43 born in the federal zone under all federal statutes and "acts of Congress". This implies that 44 Americans born and domiciled outside the federal zone and in a constitutional state of the Union can 45 only be state nationals per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 46 2. 'United States**' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the entire country and political jurisdictions
47 that are legislatively foreign to that of the federal government which are found in the states. This
48 implies that most Americans can only be statutory "nationals and citizens of the United States" per 8
49 U.S.C. §1401.

We believe the answer is that our system of jurisprudence is based on “innocence until proven guilty”. In this case, the fact in question is: “Are you a statutory U.S. citizen”, and being “not guilty” means having our rights and sovereignty respected by our deceitful government under these circumstances implies being a “national” or a “state national”. Therefore, at best, we should conclude that the above analysis is correct and clearly explains the foundations of what it means to be a “national” or a “state national” and why most Americans fit that description. At the very worst, our analysis clearly establishes that federal statutory and case law, at least insofar as “U.S. citizenship” is very vague and very ambiguous and needs further definition. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that when laws are vague, then they are “void for vagueness”, null, and unenforceable. See the following cases for confirmation of this fact:

"A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law."
[Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 (1926)]

"It is a basic principle of due process that an enactment [435 U.S. 982, 986] is void for vagueness if its prohibitions are not clearly defined. Vague laws offend several important values. First, because we assume that man is free to steer between lawful and unlawful conduct, we insist that laws give the person of ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that he may act accordingly. Vague laws may trap the innocent by not providing fair warning. Second, if arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement is to be prevented, laws must provide explicit standards for those who apply them. A vague law impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory application."
[Grayned v. City of Rockford, 408 U.S. 104, 108 (1972), emphasis added]

We refer you to the following additional rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on “void for vagueness” as additional authorities:

1. Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156 (1972)
2. Cline v. Frink Dairy Co., 274 U.S. 445, 47 S. Ct. 681 (1927)
3. Sewell v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 982 (1978)

Here is the way one of our readers describes the irrational propaganda and laws the government writes:

"If it doesn't make sense, it's probably because politics is involved!"

4.12.5.6 Power to create is the power to tax and regulate

As is shown in the following article, the power to create is the power to tax and regulate.

Hierarchy of Sovereignty: The Power to Create is the Power to Tax, Family Guardian Fellowship
<https://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Remedies/PowerToCreate.htm>

Congress can only tax or regulate that which it legislatively creates. All such creations are CIVIL FRANCHISES of the national government.

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Congress did NOT create human beings. God did. It also didn't create CONSTITUTIONAL citizens under the Fourteenth Amendment or the nationality and “national” status they have by virtue of jus soli. We the People wrote the Constitution, not Congress. Hence, Congress can't tax or regulate CONSTITUTIONAL citizens directly. By CONSTITUTIONAL citizens we also mean “state nationals”. Constitutional nationality (“national” status) is a PRIVATE RIGHT, not a revocable PUBLIC PRIVILEGE. The ability to tax or regulate PRIVATE property or PRIVATE rights is repugnant to the Constitution.

"The power to "legislate generally upon" life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the "power to provide modes of redress" against offensive state action, was "repugnant" to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified, see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress' §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been questioned."

[City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, 521 U.S. 507 \(1997\)]

Congress, however, DID create the STATUTORY “national and citizen of the United States at birth” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401. That status is a public office by the admission of both the U.S. Supreme Court and the President of the United States. See:

President Obama Admits in His Farewell Address that “Citizen” is a Public Office, Exhibit #01.018

YOUTUBE: <https://youtu.be/XjVyeZU0mlc>

SEDM Exhibits Page: <http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 involves only federal territory under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress. They therefore can tax and regulate all those with such status, regardless of where physically situated. That status is technically “property” of the national government that can be reclaimed or taken away on a whim. PRIVATE RIGHTS can’t be legislatively taken but PUBLIC PRIVILEGES can.

The Court today holds that the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment has no application to Bellei [an 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY citizen]. The Court first notes that Afroyim was essentially a case construing the Citizenship Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Since the Citizenship Clause declares that: ‘All persons born or naturalized in the United States * * * are citizens of the United States * * *.’ the Court reasons that the protections against involuntary expatriation declared in Afroyim do not protect all American citizens, but only those ‘born or naturalized in the United States.’ Afroyim, the argument runs, was naturalized in this country so he was protected by the Citizenship Clause, but Bellei, since he acquired his American citizenship at birth in Italy as a foreignborn child of an American citizen, was neither born nor naturalized in the United States and, hence, falls outside the scope of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees declared in Afroyim. One could hardly call this a generous reading of the great purposes the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted to bring about. While conceding that Bellei is an American citizen, the majority states: ‘He simply is not a Fourteenth-Amendment-first-sentence citizen.’ Therefore, the majority reasons, the congressional revocation of his citizenship is not barred by the Constitution. I cannot accept the Court’s conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment protects the citizenship of some Americans and not others. [ . . . ]

The Court today puts aside the Fourteenth Amendment as a standard by which to measure congressional action with respect to citizenship, and substitutes in its place the majority’s own vague notions of ‘fairness.’ The majority takes a new step with the recurring theme that the test of constitutionality is the Court’s own view of what is ‘fair, reasonable, and right.’ Despite the concession that Bellei was admittedly an American citizen, and despite the holding in Afroyim that the Fourteenth Amendment has put citizenship, once conferred, beyond the power of Congress to revoke, the majority today upholds the revocation of Bellei’s citizenship on the ground that the congressional action was not ‘irrational or arbitrary or unfair.’ The majority applies the ‘shock-the-conscience’ test to uphold, rather than strike, a federal statute. It is a dangerous concept of constitutional law that allows the majority to conclude that, because it cannot say the statute is ‘irrational or arbitrary or unfair,’ the statute must be constitutional.

Since the Court this Term has already downgraded citizens receiving public welfare, Wyman v. James, 400 U.S. 309, 91 S.Ct. 381, 27 L.Ed.2d. 408 (1971), and citizens having the misfortune to be illegitimate, Labine v. Vincent, 401 U.S. 532, 91 S.Ct. 1917, 28 L.Ed.2d. 288, I suppose today’s decision downgrading citizens born outside the United States should have been expected. Once again, as in James and Labine, the Court’s opinion makes evident that its holding is contrary to earlier decisions. Concededly, petitioner was a citizen at birth, not by constitutional right, but only through operation of a federal statute. [Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971)]

4.12.5.7 Rights Lost By Becoming a statutory “U.S. citizen”

A state Citizen has the right to have any gun he/she wishes without being registered. A “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 does not. In the District of Columbia, it is a felony to own a handgun unless you are a police officer or a security guard or the hand gun was registered before 1978. The District of Columbia has not been admitted into the Union. Therefore the people of the District of Columbia are not protected by the Second Amendment or any other part of the Bill of Rights. Despite the lack of legal guns in DC, crime is rampant. It is called Murder Capital of the World. This should prove that gun control/victim disarmament laws do not work in America. Across the country, there is an assault on guns. If you are a “U.S.** citizen” and you are using Second Amendment arguments to protect your rights to keep your guns, I believe you are in for a surprise. First by registering gun owners then renaming guns ‘Assault Weapons’ and ‘Handguns’, those in power will take away your civil right to bear arms. Of course, they won’t tell you that the right to keep and bear arms is a civil right and not a natural right for a U.S. citizens. The Supreme court has ruled that you as an individual have no right to protection by the police. Their only

1 obligation is to protect "society". The real protection for state Citizens to keep their guns is not the Second Amendment but
2 the Ninth Amendment.

3 A state Citizen has the right to travel on the public easements (public roads) without being registered. A statutory "U.S.
4 citizen" does not. It is a privilege for a foreigner to travel in any of the several states. If you are a statutory U.S. citizen, you
5 are a foreigner in a constitutional state. The state legislators can require foreigners and people involved in commerce
6 (chauffeurs, freight haulers) to be licensed, insured, and to have their vehicles registered. When you register your car, you
7 turn over power of attorney to the state. At that point, it becomes a motor vehicle. If it is not registered then it is not a motor
8 vehicle and there are no motor vehicle statutes to break. There are common law rules of the road. If you don't cause an injury
9 to anybody then you cannot be tried.

10 If your car is registered, the state effectively owns your car. The state supplies a sticker to put on your license plate every 11 time you re-register the motor vehicle. Look closely at the sticker on your plate right now. You may be surprised to see that 12 it says "OFFICIAL USE ONLY".(Note: In some states, they do not use stickers on the plate) You may have seen municipal 13 vehicles that have signs on them saying "OFFICIAL USE ONLY" on them but why does yours? You do not own your car.
14 You may have a Certificate of Title but you probably do not have the certificate of origin. You are leasing the state's vehicle
15 by paying the yearly registration fee. Because you are using their equipment, they can make rules up on how it can be used.
16 If you break a rule, such as driving without a seatbelt, you have broken the contract and an administrative procedure will 17 make you pay the penalty. A state Citizen must be able to explain to the police officers why they are not required to have the 18 usual paperwork that most people have. They should carry copies of affidavits and other paperwork in their car. The state
19 Citizen should also be prepared to go to traffic court and explain it to the judge.

20 The right of trial by jury in civil cases, guaranteed by the 7th Amendment (Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U.S. 90 (1875)), and the 21 right to bear arms, guaranteed by the 2nd Amendment (Presser v. Illinois, 116 U.S. 252 (1886)), have been distinctly held
22 not to be privileges and immunities of "citizens of the United States" guaranteed by the 14th Amendment against abridgment
23 by the states, and in effect the same decision was made in respect of the guarantee against prosecution, except by indictment
24 of a grand jury, contained in the 5th Amendment (Hurtado v. California, 110 U.S. 516 (1884)), and in respect of the right to 25 be confronted with witnesses, contained in the 6th Amendment." West v. Louisiana, 194 U.S. 258 (1904).

26 The privileges and immunities [civil rights] of the 14th Amendment citizens were derived [taken] from...the Constitution, but
27 are not identical to those referred to in Article IV, Sect. 2 of the Constitution [which recognizes the existence of state Citizens
28 who were not citizens of the United States because there was no such animal in 1787]. Plainly spoken, RIGHTS in the 29 constitution of the United States of America, which are recognized to be grants from our creator, are clearly different from 30 the "civil rights" that were granted by Congress to its own brand of franchised statutory "U.S. citizen" pursuant to 8 U.S.C.
31 §1401.

32 "A 'civil right' is a right given and protected by law [man's law], and a person's enjoyment thereof is regulated 33 entirely by law that creates it."
34 [Nickell v. Rosenfield, 82 CA 369 (1927), 375, 255 P. 760.]

35 Title 42 of the USC contains the Civil Rights laws. It says "Rights under 42 USCS section 1983 are for citizens of the United 36 States and not of state. Wadleigh v. Newhall (1905, CC Cal) 136 F 941."

37 In summary, what we are talking about here is a Master-Servant relationship. Being a person with a domicile within federal 38 jurisdiction makes us subject to federal laws and makes us into a statutory "citizen of the United States" under 8 U.S.C.
39 §1401. We become servants to our public servants. Those who file the IRS Form 1040 indicate a domicile in the District of 40 Columbia, and have surrendered the protection of state law to become subject citizens. See IRS Document 7130<sup>191</sup>, which 41 says that this form may only be filed by "citizens and residents" of the "United States", which is defined as the District of 42 Columbia in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10).

43 4.12.6 Effect of Domicile on Citizenship Status

1 When “citizens” move their domicile outside of the territorial limits of the “state” to which they are a member and cease to
 2 participate directly in the political functions of that “state”, however, they become statutory “nationals” but not “citizens”.
 3 This is confirmed by the definition of “citizen of the United States” found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment.:

4 U.S. Constitution: Fourteenth Amendment

5 *Section. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are
 6 citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.*

7 As you will learn later, the Supreme Court said in the case of U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898) that the term
 8 “subject to the jurisdiction” means “subject to the political jurisdiction”, which is very different from “subject to the 9 legislative jurisdiction”. Note from the above that being a “citizen” has two prerequisites: “born within the [territorial]
 10 jurisdiction” and “subject to the [political but not legislative] jurisdiction”. The other noteworthy point to be made here is 11 that the term "citizen" as used above is not used in the context of federal statutes or federal law, and therefore does not
 12 imply one is a "citizen" under federal law. The Constitution is what grants the authority to the federal government to write federal 13 statutes, but it is not a “federal statute” or “federal law”. The term "citizen", in the context of the Constitution, simply refers
 14 to the political community created by that Constitution, which in this case is the federation of united states called the "United 15 States", and not the United States government itself.

16 When you move your domicile outside its territorial jurisdiction of the political body and do not participate in its political
 17 functions as a jurist or a voter, then you are no longer “subject to the [political] jurisdiction”. Likewise, because you are 18 outside territorial limits of the political body, you are also not subject in any degree to its legislative jurisdiction either:

19 "Judge Story, in his treatise on the Conflicts of Laws, lays down, as the basis upon which all reasonings on the
 20 *law of comity must necessarily rest, the following maxims: First 'that every nation possesses an exclusive
 21 sovereignty and jurisdiction within its own territory'; secondly, 'that no state or nation can by its laws directly
 22 affect or bind property out of its own territory, or bind persons not resident therein, whether they are natural
 23 born subjects or others.' The learned judge then adds: 'From these two maxims or propositions there follows a*
 24 third, and that is that whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another depend solely upon
 25 the laws and municipal regulation of the latter; that is to say, upon its own proper jurisdiction and polity, and
 26 upon its own express or tacit consent." Story on Conflict of Laws §23."
 27 [Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. v. Chambers, 73 Ohio.St. 16, 76 N.E. 91, 11 L.R.A., N.S., 1012 (1905)]

28 The word “territory” above needs further illumination. States of the Union are NOT considered “territories” or “territory”
 29 under federal law. This is confirmed by the Corpus Juris Secundum legal encyclopedia, which says on this subject the 30 following:

31 Volume 86, Corpus Juris Secundum Legal Encyclopedia
 32 Territories
 33 §1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

34 The word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning
 35 under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial
 36 possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise
 37 governmental functions under act of congress."

38 While the term 'territory' is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of
 39 a territory, and 'territories of the' United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the
 40 United States exercises dominion, the word 'territory,' when used to designate a political organization, has a
 41 distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and the term 'territory'
 42 or 'territories' does not necessarily include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and
 43 exercise government functions under acts of congress. The term 'territories' has been defined to be political
 44 subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term 'territory' is not a description
 45 of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a 46 particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which 47 it is, more or less temporarily, invested.

48 'Territories' or 'territory' as including 'state' or 'states.'" While the term 'territories of the' United States may,
 49 under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution and in
 50 ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

51 As used in this title, the term 'territories' generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and 52 not within the boundaries of any of the several states.
 53 [86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories (2003)]

1 Notice that the above legal encyclopedia definition of “territory” refers to states of the Union as “foreign states”! A “foreign
2 state” is a state that is not subject to the legislative jurisdiction or laws of the state in question, which in this case is the federal
3 government. The Supreme Court also agreed with the conclusions within this section so far, in the cite next. Notice how
4 they use the terms “citizenship” and “nationality” or “national” interchangeably, because they are equivalent:

5 *“The term ‘dual nationality’ needs exact appreciation. It refers to the fact that two States make equal claim to the
6 allegiance of an individual at the same time. Thus, one State may claim his allegiance because of his birth within
7 its territory, and the other because at the time of his birth in foreign territory his parents were its nationals. The 8 laws of the United States purport to clothe persons with American citizenship by virtue of both principles.’*

9 *“And after referring to the Fourteenth Amendment, U.S.C.A. Const., and the Act of February 10, 1855, R.S. §1993,
10 8 U.S.C.A. 6, the instructions continued: [307 U.S. 325, 345] ‘It thus becomes important to note how far these
11 differing claims of American nationality are fairly operative with respect to persons living abroad [or in states
12 of the Union, which are ALSO foreign with respect to federal jurisdiction], whether they were born abroad or 13 were born in the United States of alien parents and taken during minority to reside in the territory of States to 14 which the parents owed allegiance. It is logical that, while the child remains or resides in territory of the foreign
15 State [a state of the Union, in this case] claiming him as a national, the United States should respect its claim
16 to allegiance. The important point to observe is that the doctrine of dual allegiance ceases, in American
17 contemplation, to be fully applicable after the child has reached adult years. Thereafter two States may in fact
18 claim him as a national. Those claims are not, however, regarded as of equal merit, because one of the States
19 may then justly assert that his relationship to itself as a national is, by reason of circumstances that have arisen,
20 inconsistent with, and reasonably superior to, any claim of allegiance asserted by any other State. Ordinarily the 21 State in which the individual retains his residence after attaining his majority has the superior claim. The statutory 22 law of the United States affords some guidance but not all that could be desired, because it fails to announce the 23 circumstances when the child who resides abroad within the territory of a State reasonably claiming his
25 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]*

26 So when a person is domiciled outside the exclusive legislative jurisdiction or “general sovereignty” of a political body and
27 does not participate directly in its political functions, then they are “nationals” but not “citizens” of that political body. This 28 is the condition of people born in and domiciled within states of the Union in regards to their federal citizenship:

- 29 1. State citizens maintain a domicile that is outside the territorial and exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the federal 30 government. They are not subject to the police powers of the federal government.
- 31 2. State citizens do not participate directly in the political functions of the federal government.
  - 32 2.1. They are not allowed to serve as jurists in federal court, because they don’t reside in a federal area within their state.
33 They can only serve as jurists in state courts. Federal district courts routinely violate this limitation by not ensuring 34 that the people who serve on federal courts come from federal areas. If they observed the law on this matter, they
35 wouldn’t have anyone left to serve on federal petit or grand juries! Therefore, they illegally use state DMV records
36 to locate jurists and obfuscate the jury summons forms by asking if people are “U.S. citizens” without ever defining 37 what it means!
  - 38 2.2. They do not participate directly in federal elections. There are no separate federal elections and separate voting
39 days and voting precincts for federal elections. State citizens only participate in state elections, and elect
40 representatives who go to Washington to “represent” their interests indirectly.

41 A prominent legal publisher, West Publishing, agrees with the findings in this section. Here is what they say in their
42 publication entitled Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition:

43 *In the United States, “domicile” and “residence” are the two major competitors for judicial attention, and the 44 words are almost invariably used to describe the relationship that the person has to the state rather than the 45 nation. We use “citizenship” to describe the national relationship, and we generally eschew “nationality”
46 (heard more frequently among European nations) as a descriptive term.
47 [Conflicts in a Nutshell, Second Edition, David D. Siegel, West Publishing, 1994, ISBN 0-314-02952, p. 15]

48 The implication of the above is that you cannot have a NATIONAL domicile, but only a domicile within a
49 CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY state. A human being who is a "national" with respect to a political jurisdiction
50 and who does not maintain a legal domicile within the exclusive legislative or “general” jurisdiction of the political body is
51 treated as a "non-resident" within federal law. He is a "non-resident" because he is not consensually or physically present
52 within the territorial limits. If he is ALSO a public officer, then he is also a “nonresident alien” under the Internal Revenue
53 Code while on official business and a “non-resident non-person” in his or her private life. He is “foreign” because he does
54 not maintain a civil domicile in the federal United States** and therefore is not subject to its civil legislative jurisdiction. For
55 instance, a “national of the United States*** of America” born within and domiciled within a constitutional state AND

1 occupying a public office or a “non-citizen national of the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 born and domiciled within
 2 a possession are both treated as “nonresident aliens” within the Internal Revenue Code:

3 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) Definitions

4 An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a resident of
 5 the United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

6 At the same time, such a human being is not an “alien” under federal law, because a “nonresident alien” is defined as a human
 7 being who is neither a “citizen nor a resident”, and that is exactly what the person mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B)
 8 (called “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States**”) is.
 9 Further confirmation of this conclusion is found in the definition of “resident” in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\) , which defines a
 10 “resident” as an “alien”. Since the definition of “nonresident alien” above excludes “residents”, then it also excludes “aliens”.

11 A picture is worth a thousand words. We’ll now summarize the results of the preceding analysis to make it crystal clear for 12 visually-minded readers:

13 Table 4-27: Citizenship summary

The table below describes the affect that changes in domicile have on citizenship status in the case of both "foreign nationals" and "domestic nationals". A "domestic national" is anyone born anywhere within any one of the 50 states on nonfederal land or who was born in any territory or possession of the United States. A "foreign national" is someone who was born anywhere outside of these areas. The jurisdiction mentioned in the right three columns is the "federal zone".

- “United States” is defined as federal territory within 26 U.S.C. §§7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), 7701\(a\)\(39\), and 7408\(d\), and 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\). It does not include any portion of a Constitutional state of the Union.
- The “District of Columbia” is defined as a federal corporation but not a physical place, a “body politic”, or a de jure “government” within the District of Columbia Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419, 426, Sec. 34. See: Corporatization and Privatization of the Government, Form #05.024; <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.
- “nationals” of the United States of America who are domiciled outside of federal jurisdiction, either in a state of the Union or a foreign country, are “nationals” but not “citizens” under federal law. They also qualify as “nonresident aliens” under 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) if and only if they are engaged in a public office. See sections 4.11.2 earlier for details.
- Temporary domicile in the middle column on the right must meet the requirements of the “Presence test” documented in IRS publications.
- “FEDERAL ZONE”=District of Columbia and territories of the United States in the above table

6. The term “individual” as used on the IRS form 1040 means an “alien” engaged in a “trade or business”. All “taxpayers” are “aliens” engaged in a “trade or business”. This is confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3), 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii), and 5 U.S.C. §552a(a)(2). Statutory “U.S. citizens” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 are not “individuals” unless temporarily abroad pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §911 and subject to an income tax treaty with a foreign country. In that capacity, statutory “U.S. citizens” interface to the I.R.C. as “aliens” rather than “U.S. citizens” through the tax treaty.

In summary:

1. A “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as a person who has allegiance to a “state”. The existence of that allegiance provides legal evidence that a person has politically associated themselves with a “state” in order to procure its protection. In return for said allegiance, the “national” is entitled to the protection of the state. Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)
2. The only thing you need in order to obtain a USA passport is “allegiance”. 22 U.S.C. §212. If the federal government is willing to issue you a passport, then they regard you as a “national”, because the only type of citizenship that carries with it exclusively allegiance is that of a “national”. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). See: <https://sedm.org/shop/getting-a-usa-passport-as-a-state-national-form-10-013/>
3. In the constitution, statutory “nationals” are called “citizens”.
4. Under federal statutory law, both “citizens” and “residents” are persons who have a legal domicile on the territory of the state to which he claims allegiance.
5. In federal statutory law, all “citizens” are also “nationals” but not all nationals are “citizens”. For proof, see:
  - 5.1. 8 U.S.C. §1401 defines a “citizen and national of the United States”.
  - 5.2. 8 U.S.C. §1452 defines a “non-citizen national”.
6. Since being a “national” is a prerequisite to being a “citizen”, then “citizens” within a country are a subset of those who are “nationals”.
7. “subject to the jurisdiction” is found in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution. The Constitution is a political document and the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” means all of the following:
  - 7.1. Being a member of a political group. Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”

“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.”

[. . .]

“Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, became ipso facto a citizen—a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”
 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

- 7.2. Being subject to the political jurisdiction but not legislative jurisdiction of the state which we are a member of. U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only,—birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are 'all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”

7.3. Being able to participate in the political affairs of the state by being able to elect its members as a voter or direct its activities as a jurist.

8. “subject to its jurisdiction” is found in federal statutes and regulations and it means all of the following:

8.1. Having a legal domicile within the exclusive jurisdiction of a “state”. Within federal law, this “state” means the “United States” government and includes no part of any state of the Union.

8.2. Being subject to the legislative but not political jurisdiction of a “state”.

9. Political jurisdiction and political rights are the tools we use to directly run and influence the government as voters and jurists.

10. Legislative jurisdiction, on the other hand, is how the government controls us using the laws it passes.

Now that we understand the distinctions between “citizens” and “nationals” within federal law, we are ready to tackle the citizenship issue head on.

4.12.7 Four Types of American Nationals

There are four types of American nationals recognized under federal law:

1. STATUTORY “nationals and citizens of the United States** at birth” (statutory “U.S.** citizen”)

1.1. A CIVIL status because it uses the word “citizen” and is therefore tied to a geographical place.

1.2. A statutory privileged status defined and found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, in the implementing regulations of the Internal Revenue Code at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), and in most other federal statutes.

1.3. Born in the federal zone. Must inhabit the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code.

1.4. Subject to the “police power” of the federal government and all “Acts of Congress”.

1.5. Treated as a citizen of the municipal government of the District of Columbia (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39))

1.6. Have no common law rights, because there is no federal common law. See Jones v. Mayer, 392 U.S. 409 (1798).

1.7. Also called “federal U.S. citizens” throughout this document.

1.8. Owe allegiance to the GOVERNMENT of the United States** and NOT the PEOPLE of the States of the Union, who are called United States***.

2. STATUTORY “nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth” (where “United States” or “U.S.” means the federal United States)

2.1. A CIVIL status because it uses the word “citizen” and is therefore tied to a geographical place.

2.2. Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) and 8 U.S.C. §1452.

2.3. Born anywhere American Samoa or Swains Island.

2.4. May not participate politically in federal elections or as federal jurists.

2.5. Owe allegiance to the GOVERNMENT of the United States** and NOT the PEOPLE of the States of the Union, who are called United States***.

3. STATUTORY “national of the United States***”

3.1. A POLITICAL status not tied to a geographical place. Allegiance can exist independent of geography.

3.2. Defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).

3.3. Includes STATUTORY “citizens of the United States***” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A).

3.4. Includes “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States[**]” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). The use of the term “person” is suspicious because only HUMANS can owe allegiance and not creations of Congress called “persons”, all of whom are offices in the government. If it means a CONSTITUTIONAL “person” then it is OK, because all constitutional “persons” are humans.

4. CONSTITUTIONAL “nationals of the United States***”, “State nationals”, or “nationals of the United States of America”

4.1. A POLITICAL status not tied to a geographical place. Allegiance can exist independent of geography.

- 1 4.2. Defined under federal law pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), under Law of Nations, under state laws, and under 2 U.S.A. Constitution.
- 3 4.3. Is equivalent to the term “state citizen”.
- 4 4.4. In general, born in any one of the several states of the Union but not in a federal territory, possession, or the District
5 of Columbia. Not domiciled in the federal zone.
- 6 4.5. Not subject to the “police power” of the federal government or most “Acts of Congress”.
- 7 4.6. Owes allegiance to the sovereign people, collectively and individually, within the body politic of the constitutional 8 state residing in.
- 9 4.7. May serve as a state jurist or grand jurist involving only parties with his same citizenship and domicile status.
- 10 4.8. May vote in state elections.
- 11 4.9. At this time, all “state Nationals” are also a “USA National”. But not all “USA Nationals” are a “state National”
12 (for example, a USA national not residing nor domiciled in a state of the Union).
- 13 4.10. Is a man or woman whose unalienable natural rights are recognized, secured, and protected by his state constitution
14 against state actions and against federal intrusion by the Constitution for the United States of America.
- 15 4.11. Includes state nationals, because you cannot get a USA passport without this status per 22 U.S.C. §212 and 22
16 C.F.R. §51.2.

17 Statutory “U.S.** citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 have civil PRIVILEGES (not rights but privileges) under federal law that
18 are similar but inferior to the natural rights that state Citizens have in state courts. I say almost because civil rights are created
19 by Congress and can be taken away by Congress. “U.S. citizens” are privileged subjects/servants of Congress, under their 20 protection as a “resident” and “ward” of a federal State, a person enfranchised to the federal government (the incorporated 21 United States defined in Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution). The individual Union states may not deny to
22 these persons any federal privileges or immunities that Congress has granted them within “acts of Congress” or federal
23 statutes. Federal citizens come under admiralty law (International Law) when litigating in federal courts. As such they do
24 not have inalienable common rights recognized, secured and protected in federal courts by the Constitutions of the States, or 25 of the Constitution for the United States of America, such as “allodial” (absolute) rights to property, the rights to inheritance,
26 the rights to work and contract, and the right to travel among others.

27 Another important element of citizenship is that artificial entities like corporations are citizens for the purposes of taxation
28 but cannot be citizens for any other purpose.

29 “A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was 30 created, and of that state or country only.”
31 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §886 (2003)]

33 “A corporation is not a citizen within the meaning of that provision of the Constitution, which declares that the 34 citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States.” [Paul
35 v. Virginia, 8 Wall (U.S.) 168, 19 L.Ed. 357 (1868)]

36 We have prepared a Venn diagram showing all of the various types of citizens so that you can properly distinguish them. The 37 important thing to notice about this diagram is that there are multiple types of “citizens of the United States” and “nationals
38 of the United States” because there are multiple definitions of “United States” according to the Supreme Court, as we showed 39 earlier in section 4.5. Above the diagram is a table showing the three definitions of “United States” appearing in the diagram:

4.12.8 Legal Basis for “State National” Status

4.12.8.1 What is a CONSTITUTIONAL “State national”?

An important and often overlooked condition of citizenship is one where the human being is an American national by virtue of being born anywhere in the country and who is also domiciled in either a Constitutional but not Statutory State of the Union. These types of people are referred to with any of the following synonymous names:

1. Statutory “non-resident non-persons” if not engaged in a public office.
2. Statutory “Nonresident Aliens” (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\)) if engaged in a public office.
3. American Citizens.
4. American Nationals.
5. Naturalized or born in a Constitutional State of the Union AND domiciled in a Constitutional state of the Union:
6. “nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).

“Nationals” existed under The Law of Nations and international law since long before the passage of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in 1868. There are two main types of “nationals” under federal law, as we revealed earlier in section 4.11.3.1 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book:

| 2 | “U.S.A. national” or “state national” or “Constitutional but not statutory U.S. citizen” | states of the Union | 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) ; Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1 | “state national” or “USA national” or “national of the United States OF AMERICA” | describe people who are not born in the federal United States[]. The “national” or “state national” is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union. |

A “state national”, “national of the United States*** OF AMERICA”, or “USA national” is one who derives his nationality and allegiance to the confederation of states of the Union called the “United States[***] of America” by virtue of being born in a state of the Union. To avoid false presumption, these people should carefully avoid associating their citizenship status with the term “United States***” or “U.S.**”, which means the “federal zone” within Acts of Congress.

*“Federal zone. The area of land over which the United States** government exercises exclusive or general jurisdiction under Article I, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. This area includes the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States**. For the purposes of this discussion, we do not treat the territorial waters of the United States** as “federal land”, but they too are under the exclusive jurisdiction of the U.S. government as well.”*

Therefore, instead of calling themselves “U.S.** nationals”, they call themselves either “state nationals” or “USA nationals”. By “USA” instead of “U.S.”, we mean the states of the Union who are party to the Constitution and exclude any part of the federal zone. In terms of protection of our rights, being a “state national” or a “U.S.** national” are roughly equivalent. The “non-citizen national of the U.S.***” status, however, has several advantages that the “state national” status does not enjoy, as we explained earlier in section 4.12.2 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book:

1. May NOT collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S.** citizens” and “U.S.** nationals” can collect benefits. State citizens are NOT STATUTORY “U.S.** nationals”.
2. May hold a U.S. security clearance, unlike “non-citizen nationals of the United States***”. See SECNAVINST 5510.30A, Appendix I, Department of the Navy.
3. May work for the federal government as a civil servant. See 5 C.F.R. §338.101.

4.12.8.2 CONSTITUTIONAL or State Citizens

The term “State Citizen” and “State National” are equivalent. For instance, if you were born in California, you would be called a “California National”. The basis for this name is found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), which says in pertinent part:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

A State National owes permanent allegiance to his state. If he also wants to be a U.S.*** national, then he must also have allegiance to the confederation of states called the “United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

“A citizen of the United States is a citizen of the federal government and of the state in which he resided, and one possessing such double citizenship owes allegiance and is entitled to protection from each sovereign to whose jurisdiction he is subject.

“No fortifying authority is necessary to sustain the proposition that in the United States a double citizenship exists. A citizen of the United States is a citizen of the Federal Government and at the same time a citizen of the State in which he resides. Determination of what is qualified residence within a State is not here necessary. Suffice it to say that one possessing such double citizenship owes allegiance and is entitled to the protection from each sovereign to whose [political but not legislative] jurisdiction he is subject.”
[Kitchens v. Steele, 112 F.Supp. 383 (1953)]

We also use the terms “national” or “state national” in this book. These people are those who obtained their federal citizenship by virtue of being born in a state of the Union. “state national” is a term we invented, because there is no standard term to describe these people within the legal field. Since federal statutes cannot and do not recognize events which happen within sovereign states, they do not mention this status but it certainly exists, and it exists under The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 212, Vattel, which is what the founders used to write the U.S. Constitution and which is recognized in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 10 of that document. The reason federal statutes do not and cannot mention the citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union is because these states are “sovereign nations” and “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government under the Law of Nations. Under the Law of Nations, the federal government does not have the authority delegated by the Constitution to prescribe or even define the citizenship status of people born in states of the Union. Here are some examples of cases from the Supreme Court which confirm this conclusion:

“It has been repeatedly held by the Supreme Court of the United States, that a State may determine the status of persons within its jurisdiction: Groves v. Slaughter, 15 Pet., 419; Moore v. Illinois, 14 How., 13; 11 Pet., 131; Story Const., §§1098, 1804, 1809.”
 [Doc. Lonas v. State, 59 Tenn. 287 (1871)]

“The question, now agitated, depends upon another question; whether the State of Pennsylvania, since the 26th of March, 1790, (when the act of Congress was passed) has a right to naturalize an alien? And this must receive its answer from the solution of a third question; whether, according to the constitution of the United States, the authority to naturalize is exclusive, or concurrent? We are of opinion, then, that the States, individually, still enjoy a concurrent authority upon this subject; but that their individual authority cannot be exercised, so as to contravene the rule established by the authority of the Union.”

“The true reason for investing Congress with the power of naturalization has been assigned at the Bar;--It was to guard against too narrow, instead of too liberal, a mode of conferring the rights of citizenship. Thus, the individual States cannot exclude those citizens, who have been adopted by the United States; but they can adopt citizens upon easier terms, than those which Congress may deem it expedient to impose.

“But the act of Congress itself, furnishes a strong proof that the power of naturalization is concurrent. In the concluding proviso, it is declared, ‘that no person heretofore proscribed by any State, shall be admitted a citizen as aforesaid, except by an act of the Legislature of the State, in which such person was proscribed.’ Here, we find, that Congress has not only circumscribed the exercise of its own authority, but has recognized the authority of a State Legislature, in one case, to admit a citizen of the United States ‘which could not be done in any case, if the power of naturalization, either by its own nature, or by the manner of its being vested in the Federal Government, was an exclusive power.’”

State Citizens cannot be subjected in state courts to any jurisdiction of law outside the Common Law without their knowing and willing consent after full disclosure of the terms and conditions, and such consent must be under agreement/contract sealed by signature. This is because the Constitution is a compact/contract created and existing in the jurisdiction of the Common Law, therefore, any rights secured thereunder or disabilities limiting the powers of government also exist in the Common Law, and in no other jurisdiction provided for in that compact!

Both State Citizens and federal citizens are Americans. Statutory “U.S. citizens” described within “acts of Congress” are “resident” in the federal zone and are privileged aliens in relation to the state of the Union wherein they reside. State statutory Citizens are domiciled in their state and not aliens in their state. They also do not “reside” in their state: they are instead Citizens domiciled in the state. The only people who are “residents” in regards to the Internal Revenue Code are usually aliens domiciled on federal territory in the state or nonresidents occupying federal enclaves within the state. The distinction may seem insignificant to you but it is not to the court. A state Citizen has the right to travel in each of the 50 Union states. He/she can file papers at any county courthouse in any state and become a Citizen of that state.

Nearly all federal statute laws do not apply to State Citizens/Nationals. If the authority for the statute can be found in the organic Constitution, then the statute is of a National character, as it applies to both state Citizens and aliens. Acts of Congress do not protect the Constitutional rights of State Citizens. Only state law serves this purpose.

“With these decisions, and many others that might be cited, before us, it is vain to contend that the Federal Constitution secures to a citizen of the United States the right to work at a given occupation or particular calling free from injury, oppression, or interference by individual citizens.

[Hodges v. United States, 203 U.S. 1, 27 S.Ct. 6 (1906)]

If the rights of a State Citizen are being violated directly by a federal officer or indirectly by third parties who the federal officer is in contact with, the appropriate place to litigate to protect those rights is ONLY in a state court. Federal courts are Article IV (of the Constitution) territorial and administrative courts which only have jurisdiction over the federal zone for nearly all “acts of Congress”, and the federal zone as we said earlier in section 4.5.3, is not covered by the Bill of Rights. We call the “federal zone” the “plunder zone” throughout this book and state citizens have absolutely no business whatsoever going into these courts because doing so needlessly confers unfounded jurisdiction upon the court over their lives and their fortunes. We will show later in section 6.9 that federal judges are either incompetent or malicious or both when it comes to protecting the rights of “state nationals”, so you ought to distance yourself to be as far away as possible from these tyrants, and this is especially true in regards to matters relating to federal taxation.

The terms “State” and “state” are not equivalent in federal statutes and nearly all “acts of Congress”. When we capitalize the word “State”, we are referring to the “federal zone” areas within the contiguous borders of a state that are subject to the exclusive federal jurisdiction of the U.S. Government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. When we don’t capitalize the word “state”, we are referring to the contiguous areas of a state that are under the exclusive jurisdiction of a state government and not the federal government.

Whenever we describe ourselves as “citizens of a State” or a “citizen of the United States” in the context of federal statutes or “acts of Congress”, then we declare ourselves to live in a federal territory as statutory “U.S. citizens” or “citizens of the [federal] United States”. That puts us in the same status as the slaves who were freed after the civil war in 1868. Do you want to be a slave? We should therefore NEVER say “I am a citizen of the State of _____” or “I am a citizen of this State.” Why? Well, because, for instance, the California Revenue and Taxation Code §6017 defines the term “State” as follows:

California Revenue and Taxation Code

6017. “In this State” or “in the State” means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign union] state of California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

Now do you understand why California has the same definition of “gross income” as the federal government and why they can impose a constitutional income tax? Because by playing with the definition of words, they have deceived you into convincing them (quite incorrectly and unnecessarily) that you are a statutory “citizen of the [federal] United States**” (the federal zone) under the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and consequently you are not subject to the same Constitutional protections that other Sovereign Americans enjoy! You must rebut this presumption vigorously at all times by watching the language and the words you use. They have effectively deceived and enticed you into the “federal zone” so they could abuse and enslave you with the income tax. This amounts to “enticement into slavery”, which clearly violates 18 U.S.C. §1581 and 14 U.S.C. §1994 and is a felony!

Instead, we should always use the name of the state in our description as follows: “I am a national of California” or “I am a Citizen of the California Republic”. The word “Citizen” should always be capitalized to emphasize that we are a “Sovereign state citizen/national”, and the word “State” should not appear in the name to avoid ambiguity.

You will find out later in section 5.2.13 of this book that the states of the Union are considered to be “foreign countries” and “foreign nations” and “foreign states” with respect to the federal government.

“New states, upon their admission into the Union, become invested with equal rights and are subject only to such restrictions as are imposed upon the states already admitted. There can be no state of the Union whose sovereignty or freedom of action is in any respect different from that of any other state. There can be no restriction upon any state other than one prescribed upon all the states by the Federal Constitution. Congress, in admitting a state, cannot restrict such state by bargain. The state, by so contracting with Congress, is in no way bound by such a contract, however irrevocable it is stated to be. It is said that subject to the restraint and limitations of the Federal Constitution, the states have all the sovereign powers of independent nations over all persons and things within their respective territorial limits.”

Because the 50 Union states are technically “nations” and “foreign states”, then people who are “state nationals” and who are not statutory “nationals and citizens at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401:

1. Are “nationals of California”, or simply “nationals”, for instance, and not “U.S. citizens” on their application for a U.S. passport. Several of our readers have obtained U.S. passports by claiming to be, for instance, “CALIFORNIA NATIONAL” in block 16 of their DOS DS-011 Passport Application.
2. Can correctly claim that they are:
  - 2.1. A “non-resident non-persons when they file their federal income tax return if they do not live in a federal enclave within their state and do not lawfully occupy a public office. Money they earn within their state as a nonresident alien will also not be under the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and need not be entered on their tax return.
  - 2.2. A “nonresident alien” in the context of their official public duties only.
  - 2.3. Nonresidents of the “United States**” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\).
3. Are not subject to most federal laws or any of the criminal laws in Title 18 of the U.S. Code unless they are physically on federal property, which most people seldom are.
4. If they sue or convict a federal employee for wrongdoing or the federal government tries to convict them under federal law, they can file their claim under “diversity of citizenship”, 28 U.S.C. §1332\(a\)\(2\) in the federal court as “citizens of a foreign state”.
5. May not declare themselves on any federal government form to be “U.S. citizens” because they were not born in the federal “United States**” (federal zone) as required by 8 U.S.C. §1401.
6. May declare themselves to be “nationals” or “nationals of the United States*” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). However, they would not be:
  - 6.1. “non-citizen nationals of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408.
  - 6.2. “U.S.[**] non-citizen nationals” under 8 U.S.C. §1452. All of these people are born in federal possessions such as American Samoa and Swains Island.
7. May vote in any election that requires them to be “U.S. citizens” in order to vote, which is the case in most states. They must clarify the meaning of “U.S. citizen” on their voter application form to prevent false assumptions about their citizenship when they register.
8. May not collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can collect benefits.
9. May not hold a U.S. security clearance unless they become either a “U.S. citizen” or “U.S. national” under federal statutes.

Now a little history. Before the second world war, some states of the Union issued their own passports to their citizens for foreign travel. That’s right, you didn’t need a U.S. passport because each state was the equivalent of an independent nation. The states still have this status, but they act like they don’t and delegate the passport function to the federal government. Our public servants in the federal government are abusing this power to create a presumption that the applicant is a “U.S. citizen” so they can illegally obtain jurisdiction over the applicant and subject them to the Internal Revenue Code and other federal statutes. Most states even require persons who wish to vote in federal elections to be “U.S. citizens”. Such unethical tactics on the part of the states are what we call “cooperative federalism”, where the states help the federal government to “poach” sheep in the states and put them primarily under federal jurisdiction as “U.S. citizens” in a conspiracy against rights that is a federal crime under 18 U.S.C. §241.

If you don’t want to collect Socialist Security Benefits nor serve in the military nor hold a U.S. government security clearance, then citizenship as a statutory “national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and a “non-resident non-person” is the best type of citizenship that provides the best protection for your liberties and complete immunity from both state and federal income taxes in most cases. The statutory “national” and “non-resident non-person” status avoids all the disadvantages of statutory “U.S.** citizen” status, including:

1. Not a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes or “acts of Congress”. The Internal Revenue Code is an “act of Congress”.
2. Not “subject to the laws” or “under the laws” of the United States or the jurisdiction of the corrupt and covetous federal courts except when on federal property.
3. Can hold a U.S. government security clearance.
4. Can collect Socialist Security benefits.
5. Can vote in states that don’t require you to be a statutory “U.S.** citizen” under “acts of Congress”.

“state nationals” are synonymously described with any of the terms below:

1. Constitutional but not Statutory citizens.
2. Natural Born Citizens
3. Natural Born Sovereigns

- 1 4. nationals
- 2 5. state nationals
- 3 6. American Citizens
- 4 7. American Nationals
- 5 8. Nonresident Aliens (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)), but only if serving in a
- 6 public office in the national government.
- 7 9. "non-resident non-persons" if not serving in a public office.

8 We will now analyze the legal foundations for state national status:

- 9 1. The term "United States" has 3 separate and distinct meanings in American Law (see Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 10 324 U.S. 652 (1945)):
- 11 1.1. The name of the sovereign nation, occupying the position of other sovereigns in the family of nations
- 12 1.2. The federal government and the limited territory over which it exercises exclusive sovereign authority
- 13 1.2.1. To be a federal citizen is to be a "citizen of the United States" in this second sense of the term
- 14 1.3. The collective name for the States united by and under the Constitution for the United States of America
- 15 1.3.1. To be a Natural Born state Citizen is to be a "Citizen of the United States" in this third sense of the term (i.e.
16 a "Citizen of one of the States United")
- 17 2. One can be a State National without also being a STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen".
- 18 2.1. See Crosse case from Maryland Supreme Court:

19 "Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a 20 person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state." [Crosse v. Board of Elections,
21 221 A.2d. 431 at 433 (1966)]

- 22 2.2. See State v. Fowler case from Louisiana Supreme Court:

23 "But a person may be a citizen of a particular state and not a citizen of the United States. To hold otherwise 24 would be to deny to the state the highest exercise of its sovereignty -- the right to declare who are its citizens."
25 [State v. Fowler, 41 La. Ann. 380 6 S. 602 (1889)]

- 26 2.3. See United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) for U.S. Supreme Court view:

27 "We have in our political system a Government of the United States and a government of each of the several
28 States. Each of these governments is distinct from the others, and each has citizens of its own who owe it
29 allegiance, and whose rights, within its jurisdiction, it must protect. The same person may be at the same time a
30 citizen of the United States and a citizen of a State, but his rights of citizenship under one of these governments
31 will be different from those he has under the other. Slaughter- House Cases, 16 Wall. 74. ...."
32 [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

- 33 3. "U.S. citizens" under federal statutes and "acts of Congress" are the object of Subtitle A federal income taxes under 34 section 1 of the IRC; "state nationals" or "nationals" or "state nationals are not. The Internal Revenue Code is an "act
35 of Congress".
- 36 3.1. State Nationals are protected by constitutional limits against direct taxation by the federal government:
- 37 3.1.1. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3
- 38 3.1.2. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4
- 39 3.2. "U.S. citizens" under "acts of Congress" are not protected by these same constitutional limits
- 40 3.2.1. Constitution for the "United States" as such does not extend beyond the boundaries of the States which are 41 united by and under it.
- 42 3.2.1.1. The Insular Cases established this dubious precedent at the turn of the century
- 43 3.2.2. A "citizen of the United States" under "acts of Congress" is, effectively, a citizen of the District of 44 Columbia, which never joined the Union
- 45 3.2.3. Congress can enact local, "municipal" law for D.C. which is not constrained by the federal Constitution.
46 See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) for further information.

47 4.12.8.3 An example state national: Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)

48 As we say throughout this document the CONTEXT of geographical terms is EXTREMELY IMPORTANT. There are two 49 mutually exclusive and non-overlapping contexts: 1. CONSTITUTIONAL; 2. STATUTORY. Up to this point, we have only discussed the STATUTORY context for the term “national”, but this is NOT the only context. There is also a “CONSTITUTIONAL” context for the term “national”. This context appears mainly under the common law and is found exclusively in federal common law. You can find it by searching court cases for the phrase “national of the United States” in which they are NOT citing Title 8 of the U.S. Code and referring to people born in a state of the Union. The following is an example of such a context:

“Miss Elg was born in Brooklyn, New York, on October 2, 1907. [a STATE of the UNION, not federal territory] Her parents, who were natives of Sweden, emigrated to the United States sometime prior to 1906 and her father was naturalized here in that year. In 1911, her mother took her to Sweden where she continued to reside until September 7, 1929. Her father went to Sweden in 1922 and has not since returned to the United States. In November, 1934, he made a statement before an American consul in Sweden that he had voluntarily expatriated himself for the reason that he did not desire to retain the status of an American citizen and wished to preserve his allegiance to Sweden.

On her birth in New York, the plaintiff became a citizen of the United States. Civil Rights Act of 1866, 329*329 14 Stat. 27; Fourteenth Amendment, § 1 [CONSTITUTIONAL right]; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649. In a comprehensive review of the principles and authorities governing the decision in that case — that a child born here of alien parentage becomes a citizen of the United States — the Court adverted to the “inherent right of every independent nation to determine for itself, and according to its own constitution and laws, what classes of persons shall be entitled to its citizenship.” United States v. Wong Kim Ark, supra, p. 668. As municipal law determines how citizenship may be acquired, it follows that persons may have a dual nationality.<sup>[1]</sup> And the mere fact that the plaintiff may have acquired Swedish citizenship by virtue of the operation of Swedish law, on the resumption of that citizenship by her parents, does not compel the conclusion that she has lost her own citizenship acquired under our law. As at birth she became a citizen of the United States, that citizenship must be deemed to continue unless she has been deprived of it through the operation of a treaty or congressional enactment or by her voluntary action in conformity with applicable legal principles.

Second. It has long been a recognized principle in this country that if a child born here is taken during minority to the country of his parents' origin, where his parents resume their former allegiance, he does not thereby lose his citizenship in the United States provided that on attaining majority he elects to retain that citizenship and to return to the United States to assume its duties.<sup>[2]</sup>

[ . . . ]

“Their rights rest on the organic law of the United States [meaning the CONSTITUTION]. . . “

[ . . . ]

“This right so to elect to return to the land of his birth and assume his American citizenship could not, with the acquiescence of this Government, be impaired or interfered with.[it is a RIGHT, not a REVOCABLE STATUTORY PRIVILEGE]”

[ . . . ]

*We have quoted liberally from these rulings — and many others might be cited — in view of the contention now urged by the petitioners in resisting Miss Elg's claim to citizenship. We think that they leave no doubt of the controlling principle long recognized by this Government. 334*334 That principle, while administratively applied, cannot properly be regarded as a departmental creation independently of the law. It was deemed to be a necessary consequence of the constitutional provision by which persons born within the United States and subject to its jurisdiction become citizens of the United States. To cause a loss of that citizenship in the absence of treaty or statute having that effect, there must be voluntary action and such action cannot be attributed to an infant whose removal to another country is beyond his control and who during minority is incapable of a binding choice.*

[ . . . ]

“The term ‘dual nationality’ needs exact appreciation. It refers to the fact that two States make equal claim to the allegiance of an individual at the same time. Thus, one State may claim his allegiance because of his birth within its territory, and the other because at the time of his birth in foreign territory his parents were its nationals. The laws of the United States purport to clothe persons with American citizenship by virtue of both principles.”

And after referring to the Fourteenth Amendment and the Act of February 2, 1855, R.S. 1993, the instructions continued:

1 345*345 "It thus becomes important to note how far these differing claims of American nationality are fairly
 2 operative with respect to persons living abroad, whether they were born abroad or were born in the United States
 3 of alien parents and taken during minority to reside in the territory of States to which the parents owed allegiance.
 4 It is logical that, while the child remains or resides in territory of the foreign State claiming him as a national,
 5 the United States should respect its claim to allegiance. The important point to observe is that the doctrine of 6 dual allegiance ceases, in American contemplation, to be fully applicable after the child has reached adult
 7 years. Thereafter two States may in fact claim him as a national. Those claims are not, however, regarded as 8 of equal merit, because one of the States may then justly assert that his relationship to itself as a national is,
 9 by reason of circumstances that have arisen, inconsistent with, and reasonably superior to, any claim of 10 allegiance asserted by any other State. Ordinarily the State in which the individual retains his residence after 11 attaining his majority has the superior claim. The statutory law of the United States affords some guidance but 12 not all that could be desired, because it fails to announce the circumstances when the child who resides abroad
 13 within the territory of a State reasonably claiming his allegiance forfeits completely the right to perfect his 14 inchoate right to retain American citizenship. The department must, therefore, be reluctant to declare that 15 particular conduct on the part of a person after reaching adult years in foreign territory produces a forfeiture or 16 something equivalent to expatriation.

17 "The statute does, however, make a distinction between the burden imposed upon the person born in the United
 18 States of foreign parents and the person born abroad of American parents. With respect to the latter, section 6 of 19 the Act of March 2, 1907, lays down the requirement 346*346 that, as a condition to the protection of the United
 20 States, the individual must, upon reaching the age of 18, record at an American consulate an intention to remain
 21 a citizen of the United States, and must also take an oath of allegiance to the United States upon attaining his 22 majority.

23 [. . .]

24 We conclude that respondent has not lost her citizenship in the United States and is entitled to all the rights and 25 privileges of that citizenship.
 26 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)]

27 Note some important facts about the above ruling:

- 28 1. Elg was born in a Constitutional state of the Union. Brooklyn, New York, to be precise.

29 "Miss Elg was born in Brooklyn, New York, on October 2, 1907. [a STATE of the UNION, not federal territory]"
 30 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)]

- 31 2. By being born in a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union, Elg derived her citizenship from the Fourteenth 32 Amendment, Section 1.

33 "On her birth in New York, the plaintiff became a citizen of the United States. Civil Rights Act of 1866, 329*329
 34 14 Stat. 27; Fourteenth Amendment, § 1 [CONSTITUTIONAL right]; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S.
 35 649."
 36 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)]

- 37 3. The CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship derived from the Fourteenth Amendment was a RIGHT, and not a revocable
 38 statutory PRIVILEGE. It could not be unilaterally taken away by the government without the consent of Elg.

39 "We think that they leave no doubt of the controlling principle long recognized by this Government. 334*334
 40 That principle, while administratively applied, cannot properly be regarded as a departmental creation
 41 independently of the law. It was deemed to be a necessary consequence of the constitutional provision by which 42 persons born within the United States and subject to its jurisdiction become citizens of the United States. To 43 cause a loss of that citizenship in the absence of treaty or statute having that effect, there must be voluntary action
 44 and such action cannot be attributed to an infant whose removal to another country is beyond his control and 45 who during minority is incapable of a binding choice."
 46 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)]

- 47 4. The court refers to Elg as a "national" by virtue of the allegiance she MUST have in order to be a Fourteenth 48 Amendment "citizen of the United States".

49 "Thereafter two States may in fact claim him as a national. Those claims are not, however, regarded as of 50 equal merit, because one of the States may then justly assert that his relationship to itself as a national is, by 51 reason of circumstances that have arisen, inconsistent with, and reasonably superior to, any claim of 52 allegiance asserted by any other State. Ordinarily the State in which the individual retains his residence after 53 attaining his majority has the superior claim."
 54 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)]

5. The term “national” as used by the court is a POLITICAL status, not a CIVIL or STATUTORY status. It exists INDEPENDENT of geography and INDEPENDENT of domicile or residence. You can have allegiance to a specific State INDEPENDENT of the place you physically are at the time. Being a STATUTORY “citizen”, however, is GEOGRAPHICAL, because the court identifies it as a product NOT of the CONSTITUTION, but of MUNICIPAL LAW, meaning STATUTES.

“As municipal law determines how citizenship may be acquired, it follows that persons may have a dual nationality.”<sup>192</sup>

[Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939)]

6. The term “citizen of the United States” refers to her POLITICAL status at the time of birth, and NOT to her CURRENT CIVIL status under federal statutes. All CIVIL statuses under any civil STATUTES of the U.S. Code domicile on federal territory as a prerequisite. Those not domiciled on federal territory, for instance, cannot have the CIVIL or STATUTORY status of “citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code unless they are domiciled on federal territory not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state.<sup>192</sup> This is confirmed by both Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) and the following holding of the U.S. Supreme Court on the subject.

In Udry v. Udry (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States, began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy— must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural allegiance,—'may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.

7. The court DID NOT use 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) (“national of the United States”) in referring to her because it would have been incorrect. Statutes conferring any kind of citizenship status, INCLUDING all of Title 8, for that matter, are ONLY necessary for territorial citizens. The STATUTORY “United States” does not include states of the Union for the purposes of Title 8:

“Finally, this Court is mindful of the years of past practice in which territorial citizenship has been treated as a statutory [PRIVILEGE!], and not a constitutional, right. In the unincorporated territories of Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, birthright citizenship was conferred upon their inhabitants by various statutes many years after the United States acquired them. See Amicus Br. at 10-11. If the Citizenship Clause [of the Fourteenth Amendment] guaranteed birthright citizenship in unincorporated territories, these statutes [meaning ALL of Title 8 of the U.S. Code!] would have been unnecessary.”

[Tuaua v. U.S.A., 951 F.Supp.2d. 88 (2013)]

<sup>192</sup> For further details on the relationship between civil domicile and civil statutory “status”, see section 5.4.8.11.17 or Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002, Section 11.17; <https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.

8. Courts historically try to avoid admitting the conclusion of the previous step as in the following case, because it blows up their whole IDENTITY THEFT BY PRESUMPTION SCAM:

The Government appears to advance the position, adopted by the Ninth Circuit, that the term "national" refers only to United States citizens and inhabitants of U.S. territories "not ... given full political equality with citizens", a designation now only applicable to residents of American Samoa and Swains Island. See Perdomo-Padilla v. Ashcroft, 333 F.3d. 964 (9th Cir. 2003). By contrast, Alwan argues in his brief that a person may demonstrate "permanent allegiance to the United States", and thus attain national status, by applying for citizenship and "compl[e]menting said application with objective demonstrations of allegiance." See Lee v. Ashcroft, 216 F.Supp.2d. 51 (E.D.N.Y.2002).

Because Alwan's claim of national status fails under either standard, we decline to decide here which definition of "national" is correct. We therefore assume, arguendo, that an alien may attain national status through sufficient objective demonstrations of allegiance to the United States. Alwan claims that he has objectively demonstrated his allegiance by (1) applying for derivative citizenship on his parents' applications for naturalization; (2) registering with the Selective Service; and (3) taking an oath of allegiance during a 1995 interview with an INS officer.
[\[Alwan v. Ashcroft, 388 F.3d. 507 - Court of Appeals, 5th Circuit 2004\]](#)

9. Because statutes didn't apply to Elg, that's why they didn't invoke any. Hence, the status of "national" they imputed to her was a matter of federal common law, and NOT statutes. A COMMON LAW "state national" is one who isn't mentioned anywhere in Title 8 and is born or naturalized in a CONSTITUTIONAL state rather than on federal territory. Their citizenship derives from the CONSTITUTION and not any statute, just like Elg.

Elg was therefore a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen AT THE TIME OF BIRTH but not a STATUTORY "citizen of the United States" under Title 8 of the U.S. Code, Sections 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A). She was not a STATUTORY citizen under any title of the U.S. Code because she was not domiciled on federal territory at the time of becoming party to the suit. She ALSO would not be a "citizen of the United States" mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) UNLESS all geographical terms in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) are interpreted ONLY in in the CONSTITUTIONAL and not STATUTORY context.

Title 8 > Chapter 12 > Subchapter I > § 1101
8 U.S. Code § 1101 - Definitions

(22) The term "national of the United States["**]" means

(A) a citizen of the United States["**], or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States["**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

You can't and shouldn't mix the CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY meanings together in interpreting the above or you will in effect make the party you are doing so against a victim of identity theft. The Separation of Powers Doctrine DEMANDS this.

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

To avoid confusing the CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY contexts, it is easier to say that you as a state national are a CONSTITUTIONAL "national" and NOT the "national of the United States**" mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22).

Elg as a human being was a State National by virtue of being born in a CONSTITUTIONAL state. She was not a statutory "citizen" under any act of Congress because she was not domiciled on federal territory and instead was domiciled in a Constitutional but not Statutory State of the Union.

4.12.8.4 Why Congress can't define the CIVIL STATUTORY status of those born within constitutional states of the Union

There is a good reason why there is no federal statute anywhere that directly prescribes the citizenship status of persons based on birth within states of the Union. The reasons are because lawyers in Congress:

1. Know that this is the criteria that most Americans born inside states of the Union will meet.
2. Know that one's CIVIL status, STATUTORY status derives from their DOMICILE and not their NATIONALITY. NATIONALITY is a POLITICAL status. CIVIL OR STATUTORY status is a LEGAL status and NOT a political status. Hence, those not domiciled on federal territory cannot have a CIVIL or STATUTORY status under federal law.

In Udny v. Udny (1869) L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 441, the point decided was one of inheritance, depending upon the question whether the domicile of the father was in England or in Scotland, he being in either alternative a British subject. Lord Chancellor Hatherley said: 'The question of naturalization and of allegiance is distinct from that of domicile.' Page 452. Lord Westbury, in the passage relied on by the counsel for the United States, began by saying: 'The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions,—one by virtue of which he becomes the subject [NATIONAL] of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status.' And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicile (domicilium), the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which 'the personal rights of the party—that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy, or intestacy—must depend,' he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country (patria), and his 'nationality,—that is, natural allegiance,—'may depend on different laws in different countries.' Pages 457, 460. He evidently used the word 'citizen,' not as equivalent to 'subject,' but rather to 'inhabitant'; and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects.

3. Know that these people are “sovereign”. Even the U.S. Supreme Court said so:

*“The words 'people of the United States[***]' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct [run] the government through their representatives [servants]. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...”*

[Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

4. Know that a “sovereign” is not and cannot be the subject of any law, and therefore cannot be mentioned in the law.

“...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country, but they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal as fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty.”

[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 454, 1 L.Ed. 440, 455 (1793), pp. 471-472]

“Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts.”

[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

“In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, and statutes employing the word are ordinarily construed to exclude it.”

[Wilson v. Omaha Indian Tribe, 442 U.S. 653, 667 (1979)]

[U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600, 604, 61 S.Ct. 742 (1941)]

[U.S. v. United Mine Workers of America, 330 U.S. 258, 67 S.Ct. 677 (1947)]

5. Know that they cannot write a federal statute or act of Congress that prescribes any criteria for becoming a “national” based on birth and perpetual residence outside of federal legislative jurisdiction and within a state of the Union. That is why the circuit court held the following with respect to “U.S. nationals”:

“Marquez-Almanzar seeks to avoid removal by arguing that he can demonstrate that he owes “permanent allegiance” to the United States and thus qualify as a U.S. national under section 101(a)(22)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). That provision defines “national of the

United States” as “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.” We hold that § 1101(a)(22)(B) itself does not provide a means by which an individual can become a U.S. national, and deny Marquez-Almanzar’s petition accordingly.
 [Jose Napoleon Marquez-Almanzar v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Docket # 03-4395, 03-40027, 03-40497, August 8, 2005, <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/USNational-034395p.pdf>]

6. Want to deceive most Americans to falsely believe or presume that they are “U.S. citizens” who are “subject to” federal statutes and jurisdiction, so they interfere in the determination of their true status as “nationals” and “state nationals”.

4.12.8.5 State citizens are NOT STATUTORY “non-citizen nationals of the United States** at birth” per 8 U.S.C. §1408

A frequent point of confusion when a state citizen calls themselves a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not a “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is to try to summarize their status by saying that they are an 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) “person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States”. This is INCORRECT because they derive their “nationality” and “national” status from the Fourteenth Amendment, which is nowhere mentioned as a source of citizenship in Title 8 of the U.S. Code. The case below does not contradict this assertion because 22 C.F.R. §51.2 says that those who are issued passports are “nationals of the United States[*]”:

22 U.S.C. §212

No passport shall be granted or issued to or verified for any other persons than those owing allegiance, whether citizens or not, to the United States

Title 22: Foreign Relations

PART 51—PASSPORTS

Subpart A—General

§51.2 Passport issued to nationals only.

(a) A United States passport shall be issued only to a national of the United States (22 U.S.C. 212).

(b) Unless authorized by the Department no person shall bear more than one valid or potentially valid U.S. passport at any one time.

[SD-165, 46 FR 2343, Jan. 9, 1981]

The case below does not contradict this assertion because the party who claimed 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) status was not born or naturalized in the United States** and therefore retained his alien status and could not be a “national of the United States***” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22):

B. Merits

Marquez-Almanzar argues that he is not an alien and thus cannot be removed from the United States for his crimes. See 8 U.S.C. §1227(a)(2)(B)(i) (any “alien” convicted of controlled substance offense after admission to United States is deportable); 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(2)(A)(iii) (any “alien” convicted of aggravated felony after admission to United States is deportable). The term “alien” is defined in this context as “any person not a citizen or national of the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(3). Marquez-Almanzar acknowledges that he is not a U.S. citizen, but he claims to be a national of the United States. The term “national of the United States” means either “a citizen of the United States” or “a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.” 8 U.S.C. §§1101(a) (22)(A) & (B).

Marquez-Almanzar claims that, although he is not a citizen, he “owes permanent allegiance to the United States,” and thus has acquired U.S. nationality under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). The statute, as he reads it, creates an independent avenue to U.S. national status: one can become a U.S. national without citizenship (i.e., a “non-citizen national”) solely by manifesting permanent allegiance to the United States. He asserts that his enrollment and service in the U.S. Army (which required that he swear allegiance to the U.S. Constitution), his application for naturalization (which required that he swear he was willing to take an oath of allegiance to the United States), his registration for the Selective Service, his “complete immersion in American Society,” and his lack of ties to the Dominican Republic together demonstrate that he owes permanent allegiance to the United States.<sup>8</sup>

We have previously indicated that Marquez-Almanzar's construction of § 1101(a)(22)(B) is erroneous, but have not addressed the issue at length. In Oliver v. INS, 517 F.2d 426, 427 (2d Cir.1975) (per curiam), the petitioner, as a defense to deportation, argued that she qualified as a U.S. national under § 1101(a)(22) (B) because she had resided exclusively in the United States for twenty years, and thus "owe[d] allegiance" to the United States. Without extensively analyzing the statute, we found that the petitioner could not be "a `national' as that term is understood in our law." Id. We pointed out that the petitioner still owed allegiance to Canada (her country of birth and citizenship) because she had not taken the U.S. naturalization oath, to "renounce and abjure absolutely and entirely all allegiance and fidelity to any [foreign state of] ... which the petitioner was before a subject or citizen." Id. at 428 (quoting INA § 337(a)(2), 8 U.S.C. § 1448(a)(2)). In making this observation, we did not suggest that the petitioner in Oliver could have qualified as a U.S. national by affirmatively renouncing her allegiance to Canada or otherwise swearing "permanent allegiance" to the United States. In fact, in the following sentence we said that Title III, Chapter I of the INA<sup>9</sup> "indicates that, with a few exceptions not here pertinent, one can satisfy [8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(22)(B)] only at birth; thereafter the road lies through naturalization, which leads to becoming a citizen and not merely a `national.'"<sup>10</sup> Id. at 428.

Our conclusion in Oliver, which we now reaffirm, is consistent with the clear meaning of 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(22)(B), read in the context of the general statutory scheme. The provision is a subsection of 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a). Section 1101(a) defines various terms as they are used in our immigration and nationality laws, U.S.Code tit. 8, ch. 12, codified at 8 U.S.C. §§1101-1537. The subsection's placement indicates that it was designed to describe the attributes of a person who has already been deemed a non-citizen national elsewhere in Chapter 12 of the U.S.Code, rather than to establish a means by which one may obtain that status. For example, 8 U.S.C. § 1408, the only statute in Chapter 12 expressly conferring "non-citizen national" status on anyone, describes four categories of persons who are "nationals, but not citizens, of the United States at birth." All of these categories concern persons who were either born in an "outlying possession" of the United States, see 8 U.S.C. § 1408(1), or "found" in an "outlying possession" at a young age, see id. § 1408(3), or who are the children of non-citizen nationals, see id. §§ 1408(2) & (4).<sup>11</sup> Thus, § 1408 establishes a category of persons who qualify as non-citizen nationals; those who qualify, in turn, are described by § 1101(a)(22)(B) as owing "permanent allegiance" to the United States. In this context the term "permanent allegiance" merely describes the nature of the relationship between non-citizen nationals and the United States, a relationship that has already been created by another statutory provision. See Barber v. Gonzales, 347 U.S. 637, 639, 74 S.Ct. 822, 98 L.Ed. 1009 (1954) ("It is conceded that respondent was born a national of the United States; that as such he owed permanent allegiance to the United States...."); cf. Philippines Independence Act of 1934, § 2(a)(1), Pub.L. No. 73-127, 48 Stat. 456 (requiring the Philippines to establish a constitution providing that "pending the final and complete withdrawal of the sovereignty of the United States[, ] ... [a]ll citizens of the Philippine Islands shall owe allegiance to the United States").

Other parts of Chapter 12 indicate, as well, that § 1101(a)(22) (B) describes, rather than confers, U.S. nationality. The provision immediately following § 1101(a)(22) defines "naturalization" as "the conferring of nationality of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever." 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(23). If Marquez-Almanzar were correct, therefore, one would expect to find "naturalization by a demonstration of permanent allegiance" in that part of the U.S.Code entitled "Nationality Through Naturalization," see INA tit. 8, ch. 12, subch. III, pt. II, codified at 8 U.S.C. §§1421-58. Yet nowhere in this elaborate set of naturalization requirements (which contemplate the filing by the petitioner, and adjudication by the Attorney General, of an application for naturalization, see, e.g., 8 U.S.C. §§1427, 1429), did Congress even remotely indicate that a demonstration of "permanent allegiance" alone would allow, much less require, the Attorney General to confer U.S. national status on an individual.

Finally, the interpretation of the statute underlying our decision in Oliver comports with the historical meaning of the term "national" as it is used in Chapter 12. The term (which as §§ 1101(a)(22)(B) and 1408 indicate, includes, but is broader than, "citizen") was originally intended to account for the inhabitants of certain territories-territories said to "belong to the United States," including the territories acquired from Spain during the Spanish-American War, namely the Philippines, Guam, and Puerto Rico in the early twentieth century, who were not granted U.S. citizenship, yet were deemed to owe "permanent allegiance" to the United States and recognized as members of the national community in a way that distinguished them from aliens. See 7 Charles Gordon et al., Immigration Law and Procedure, § 91.01[3][b] (2005); see also Rabang v. Boyd, 353 U.S. 427, 429-30, 77 S.Ct. 985, 1 L.Ed.2d. 956 (1957) ("The Filipinos, as nationals, owed an obligation of permanent allegiance to this country. . . . In the [Philippine Independence Act of 1934], the Congress granted full and complete independence to [the Philippines], and necessarily severed the obligation of permanent allegiance owed by Filipinos who were nationals of the United States."). The term "non-citizen national" developed within a specific historical context and denotes a particular legal status. The phrase "owes permanent allegiance" in § 1101(a)(22)(B) is thus a term of art that denotes a legal status for which individuals have never been able to qualify by demonstrating permanent allegiance, as that phrase is colloquially understood.<sup>12</sup>

We hold, therefore, that one cannot qualify as a U.S. national under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) by a manifestation of

"permanent allegiance" to the United States. As we said in Oliver, the road to U.S. nationality runs through provisions detailed elsewhere in the Code, see 8 U.S.C. §§1401-58, and those provisions indicate that the only "non-citizen nationals" currently recognized by our law are persons deemed to be so under 8 U.S.C. §1408. Our holding is consistent with the BIA's own interpretation of the statute, see In re Navas-Acosta, Interim Dec. (BIA) 3489, 23 I. & N. Dec. 586, 2003 WL 1986475 (BIA 2003), and the decisions of other circuits, see Sebastian-Soler v. U.S. Att'y Gen., 409 F.3d. 1280, 1285 (11th Cir.2005); United States v. Jimenez-Alcala, 353 F.3d. 858, 861-62 (10th Cir.2003); Perdomo-Padilla v. Ashcroft, 333 F.3d. 964, 966-67 (9th Cir.2003), cert. denied 540 U.S. 1104, 124 S.Ct. 1041, 157 L.Ed.2d. 887 (2004). To the extent that United States v. Morin, 80 F.3d. 124 (4th Cir.1996) applies in this context, we disagree with the reasoning of that court.<sup>13</sup>

It follows from our holding that Marquez-Almanzar is not a U.S. national, but rather an alien subject to removal under 8 U.S.C. §§1227(a)(2)(A)(iii) and (B)(i).

[Jose Napoleon MARQUEZ-ALMANZAR, Petitioner v. IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE, Respondent, 418 F.3d. 210(2005)]

Based on the above case, 22 C.F.R. §51.2, and 22 U.S.C. §212 we conclude that:

1. 8 U.S.C. §1408 "non-citizen national of the United States** at birth" is a SUBSET of 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) status.
2. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) status:
  - 2.1. Is called "person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States**" and NOWHERE is referred to as a "non-citizen national" as described in 8 U.S.C. §1408. The court merely PRESUMED that they were equivalent, but they are NOT or they would have been given the same name.
  - 2.2. Includes 8 U.S.C. §1408 "non-citizen nationals of the United States**" born in possessions such as American Samoa and Swain's Island.
  - 2.3. Includes State nationals who acquired their CONSTITUTIONAL or Fourteenth Amendment citizenship through birth in a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union.
3. 8 U.S.C. §1408 STATUTORY "non-citizen national of the United States** at birth" or "U.S.** national" status can only be acquired by birth and not naturalization.
4. 8 U.S.C. §1408 STATUTORY "non-citizen national of the United States** at birth" or "U.S.** national" status can NOT be acquired merely by the taking of an oath or renunciation of a previous oath.
5. The place of birth to earn STATUTORY "non-citizen national of the United States** at birth" status under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or "non-citizen national of the United States**" status under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) must be a U.S. possession and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union. The only remaining U.S. possessions are American Samoa and Swains Island.
6. One can earn "national" status as a state citizen under both the Fourteenth Amendment AND 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) by birth within a constitutional state. No statute is needed or required under Title 8 of the U.S. Code. Title 8, in fact, primarily deals with those born in federal territories or possessions, in fact. Only the following sections deal with states of the Union also:
  - 6.1. 8 U.S.C. §1421: Naturalization. One cannot become an 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY citizen by naturalization. Birth is the only vehicle. Naturalization only applies to state citizenship.
  - 6.2. 8 U.S.C. §1481: Expatriation.
7. The best way to describe yourself if you are a state national, in order not to be discredited with the above case is to say you:
  - 7.1. Are a "national" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). "state" is in lower case because it is legislatively/statutorily foreign but not CONSTITUTIONALLY foreign in relation to the national government.
  - 7.2. Are a "national of the United States*** OF AMERICA" per Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939). If you weren't, you wouldn't be eligible for a passport per 22 C.F.R. §51.2.
  - 7.3. Are NOT a "person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent allegiance to the United States[*]" per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). This is so because the U.S. Supreme Court declared in Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971) that an 8 U.S.C. §1401 "citizen of the United States**" is NOT a Fourteenth Amendment "citizen of the United States***". See section 4.12.8.5 later.
  - 7.4. Are NOT a "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401.
  - 7.5. Are NOT a "non-citizen national of the United States** at birth" or "U.S.** national" per 8 U.S.C. §1408.

1 7.6. Do not derive your citizenship from ANY provision within Title 8 of the U.S. Code, but rather through the
2 Fourteenth Amendment if born within a constitutional state of the Union.

3 7.7. Are a “non-resident non-person” in federal statutes because not domiciled in the STATUTORY United States**
4 defined in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, being federal territory not within any constitutional state.

5 4.12.8.6 Expatriation: 8 U.S.C. §1481

6 How can you be sure you are a “national” or “state national” if the authority for being so can’t lawfully be put in any federal
7 statute? There are lots of ways, but the easiest way is to consider that you as a human being who was born in a state of the 8 Union and outside the federal “United States**” can legally “expatriate” your nationality. All you need in order to do so is 9 your original birth certificate and to follow the procedures prescribed in federal law which we explain in section 4.12.16 of 10 our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book and 4.5.3.13 of our Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.
11 What exactly are you “expatriating”? The definition of expatriation clarifies this:

12 “Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance.”
13 [Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 59 S.Ct. 884, 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

14 “expatriation. The voluntary act of abandoning or renouncing one’s country, [nation] and becoming the citizen
15 or subject of another.
16 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 576]

17 Here is the statutory explanation of “expatriation”:

18 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part III > § 1481
19 § 1481. Loss of nationality by native-born or naturalized citizen; voluntary action; burden of proof; presumptions

20 *(a) A person who is a national of the United States[*] whether by birth or naturalization, shall lose his nationality*
21 by voluntarily performing any of the following acts with the intention of relinquishing United States nationality—

22 You can’t abandon your “nationality” unless you had it in the first place, so you must be a “national” or a “state national”!
23 Here is the clincher:

24 8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

25 (a) As used in this chapter—

26 (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

27 The term “state” above can mean a state of the Union or it can mean a confederation of states called the “United States****”.
28 The reason “state” is in lower case is because it refers in most cases to a legislatively foreign state, and all states of the Union
29 are foreign with respect to the federal government for the purposes of legislative (but not CONSTITUTIONAL) jurisdiction
30 for nearly all subject matters. All upper case “States” in federal law refer to territories or possessions owned by the federal 31 government under 4 U.S.C. §110\(d\):

32 *“Foreign States: Nations outside of the United States** ...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.*
33 The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
34 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”
35 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

36 Sneaky, huh? You’ll never hear especially a federal lawyer agree with you on this because it destroys their jurisdiction to 37 impose an income tax on you, but it’s true!

NOTE: We are NOT suggesting that you SHOULD expatriate, but using the process to illustrate that it is completely consistent with our research. In order to move oneself outside of federal legislative jurisdiction, a human being born in a state of the Union and outside the federal United States** (a “national” of the USA) would want to ONLY move his domicile outside of the federal zone (assuming that they were domiciled in the federal zone to begin with) AND NOT expatriate his nationality. Likewise, a “National and citizen of the United states** at birth” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 would also want to move their domicile outside of the federal zone.

The rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court also reveal that “citizen of the United States***” and “nationality” are equivalent, but only in the context of the Constitution and not any act of Congress. Look at the ruling below and notice how they use “nationality” and “citizen of the United States***” interchangeably:

“Whether it was also the rule at common law that the children of British subjects born abroad were themselves British subjects-nationality being attributed to parentage instead of locality-has been variously determined. If this were so, of course the statute of Edw. III. was declaratory, as was the subsequent legislation. But if not, then such children were aliens, and the statute of 7 Anne and subsequent statutes must be regarded as in some sort acts of naturalization. On the other hand, it seems to me that the rule, 'Partus sequitur patrem,' has always applied to children of our citizens born abroad, and that the acts of congress on this subject are clearly declaratory, passed out of abundant caution, to obviate misunderstandings which might arise from the prevalence of the contrary rule elsewhere.

*“Section 1993 of the Revised Statutes provides that children so born 'are declared to be citizens of the United States***; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States***.’ Thus a limitation is prescribed on the passage of citizenship by descent beyond the second generation if then surrendered by permanent nonresidence, and this limitation was contained in all the acts from 1790 down. Section 2172 provides that such children shall 'be considered as citizens thereof.' “*
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

If after examining the charts above, you find that your present citizenship status does not meet your needs, you are perfectly entitled to change it and the government can’t stop you. We explain later in section 4.11.10 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 how to abandon any type of citizenship you may find undesirable in order to have the combination of rights and “privileges” that suit your fancy. If a “national” of the USA*** wanted to qualify for Social Security Benefits, they would have to naturalize to the “United States***” to become a statutory “U.S.** national” or move their domicile to the federal zone (BAD IDEA).

4.12.8.7 Statutory geographical definitions

In the following subsections we have an outline of the legal constraints applying to persons who are “state nationals” and who do not claim the status of STATUTORY “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. The analysis that follows establishes that for “state nationals”, such persons may in some cases not be allowed to vote in elections without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. They are also not allowed to serve on jury duty without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. These special efforts involve clarifying our citizenship on any government forms we sign to describe ourselves as ONE of the following:

1. “nationals” or “state nationals” but not statutory “citizens of the United States***” as defined in and 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).
2. Nationals of the “United States of America” (just like our passport says) but not statutory citizens of the federal “United States***” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) if we were born within and domiciled within a constitutional state of the Union.

We said in section 4.12.3 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 that all people born in states of the Union are technically “state nationals” or “U.S.*** nationals”. That is: “nationals of the United States*** of America”.

The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence helps us define what is meant by “United States” in the context of citizenship under federal (not state) law:

*3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States[**] and subject to United States[**] jurisdiction*

*“A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[**], for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States[**] is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country.”*
[American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, Section 2689 (1999)]

The key word in the above definition is “territory” in relationship to the sovereignty word. The only places which are “territories” of the United States[**] government are listed in [Title 48 of the United States\[\*\*\] Code](#). The states of the union are NOT territories!

1 "Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical
 2 area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

3 *A portion of the United States[**] not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of*
 4 the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the 5 President."
 6 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

7 And the rulings of the Supreme Court confirm this:

8 *"A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States[**], in the highest or in any of its*
 9 branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself:
 10 The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the 11 *Courts of the United States[**], or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the* 12 general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself."
 13 [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1794)]
 14

15 *"There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States[**] .... In*
 16 this country sovereignty resides in the people [living in the states of the Union, since the states created the United
 17 *States[**] government and they came before it], and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by* 18 their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
 19 [Julliard v. Greenman: 110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

20 So what is really meant by "United States" for the three types of citizens found in federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401 and
 21 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the "sovereignty of the United States**", which exists in its fullest, most exclusive,
 22 and most "general" form inside its "territories", and in federal enclaves within the states, or more generally in what we call
 23 the "federal zone" in this book. The ONLY place where the exclusive sovereignty of the United States** exists in the context
 24 of its "territories" is under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution on federal land. In the legal field, by the way,
 25 this type of exclusive jurisdiction is described as "plenary power". Very few of us are born on federal land under such 26 circumstances, and therefore very few of us technically qualify as "citizens of the United States**". By the way, the federal 27 government does have a very limited sovereignty or "authority" inside the states of the union, but it does not exceed that of 28 the states, nor is it absolute or unrestrained or exclusive like it is inside the "territories" of the United States** listed in Title
 29 48 of the United States\*\* Code.

30 Let's now see if we can confirm the above conclusions with the weasel words that the lawyers in Congress wrote into the 31 statutes with the willful intent to deceive common people like you. The key phrase in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) above is "the 32 *continental United States***". The definition of this term is hidden in the regulations as follows:

33 [Code of Federal Regulations]
 34 [Title 8, Volume 1]
 35 [Revised as of January 1, 2002]
 36 From the U.S. Government Printing Office via GPO Access
 37 [CITE: 8CFR215]
 38 TITLE 8--ALIENS AND NATIONALITY CHAPTER 1--IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE,
 39 DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
 40 *PART 215--CONTROLS OF ALIENS DEPARTING FROM THE UNITED STATES[**]*
 41 Section 215.1: Definitions
 42
 43 *(f) The term continental United States[**] means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska*
 44 and Hawaii.

45 The term "States", which is suspiciously capitalized and is then also defined elsewhere in Title 8 as follows:

46 8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions

47 (a) As used in this chapter—

48 (36) State [naturalization]

49 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United
 50 *States[**].*

1 Do you see the sovereign Union states in the above definition? They aren't there. Note that there are several entities listed
 2 in the above definition of "State", which collectively are called "several States". But when Congress really wants to clearly
 3 state the 50 Union states that are "foreign states" relative to them, they have no trouble at all, because here is another definition
 4 of "State" found under an older version of Title 40 of the U.S. Code prior to 2005 which refers to easements on Union state
 5 property by the federal government:

6 TITLE 40 > CHAPTER 4 > Sec. 319c
 7 Sec. 319c. - Definitions for easement provisions

8 As used in sections 319 to 319c of this title -

9 (a) The term "State" means the States of the Union, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico,
 10 *and the possessions of the United States[**].*

11 The above section, after we found it in 2002 and documented it here, was REWRITTEN in 2005 and REMOVED from Title
 12 40 of the U.S. Code in order to cover up the distinctions we are trying to make here. Does that surprise you? In fact, this
 13 kind of "word smithing" by covetous lawyers is at the heart of how the separation of powers between the state and federal
 14 governments is being systematically destroyed, as documented below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

15 Did you notice in the now repealed 40 U.S.C. §319c that they used the term "means" instead of "includes" and that they said
 16 "States of the Union" instead of "several States"? You can tell they are playing word games and trying to hide their limited
 17 jurisdiction whenever they throw in the word "includes" and do not use the word "Union" in their definition of "State". As
 18 a matter of fact, section 5.6.15 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 reveals that there is a big scandal surrounding the use
 19 of the word "includes". That word is abused as a way to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government beyond
 20 its clear Constitutional limits. The memorandum of law below thoroughly rebuts any lies or deception the government is 21 likely to throw at you regarding the word "includes" and you might want to read it:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

22 Moving on, if we then substitute the definition of the term "State" from 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36) into the definition of 23 "continental United States[**]" in 8 C.F.R. §215.1, we get:

24 8 C.F.R. §215.1

25 *The term continental United States[**] means the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia, Puerto* 26 *Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States[**], except Alaska and Hawaii.*

27 We must then conclude that the "continental United States**" means essentially the federal areas within the real (not 28 statutorily defined) continental United States**. We must also conclude based on the above analysis that:

- 30 1. The term "continental United States**" is redundant and unnecessary within the definition of "United States**" found
 31 in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
- 32 2. The use of the term "continental United States**" is introduced mainly to deceive and confuse the average American 33 about his true citizenship status as a "national" or a "state national" and not a "U.S. national".

34 The above analysis also leaves us with one last nagging question: why do Alaska and Hawaii appear in the definition of 35 "United States**" in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), since we showed that the other "States" mentioned as part of this statutory
 36 "United States**" are federal "States"? If our hypothesis is correct that the "United States**" means "the federal zone"
 37 within federal statutes and regulations and "the states of the Union" collectively within the Constitution, then the definition
 38 from the regulation above can't include any part of a Union state that is not a federal enclave. In the case of Alaska and 39 Hawaii, they were only recently admitted as Union states (1950's). The legislative notes for Title 8 of the U.S. Code (entitled 40 "Aliens and Nationality") reveal that the title is primarily derived from the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1940, which 41 was written and codified BEFORE Alaska and Hawaii joined the Union. Before that, they were referred to as the Territories
 42 of Alaska and Hawaii, which belonged to the "United States**" or simply "Alaska and Hawaii". Note that 8 U.S.C.

§1101(a)(38) adds the phrase “of the United States**” after the names of these two former territories and groups them together with other federal territories, which to us implies that they are referring to Alaska and Hawaii when they were territories rather than Union states. At the time they were federal territories, then they were federal “States”. These conclusions are confirmed by a rule of statutory construction known as “ejusdem generis”, which basically says that items of the same class or general type must be grouped together. The other items that Alaska and Hawaii are grouped with are federal territories in the list of enumerated items:

“Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the “ejusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.

Under “ejusdem generis” canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696.”

4.12.8.8 The Fourteenth Amendment

Many freedom lovers allow themselves to be confused by the content of the Fourteenth Amendment so that they do not believe the distinctions we are trying to make here about the differences in meaning of the term “United States” between the Constitution and federal statutes. Here is what section 1 of that Amendment says:

Fourteenth Amendment

*“Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***] and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[***] and of the State wherein they reside.”*

The U.S. Supreme Court clarifies exactly what the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” above means. It means the “political jurisdiction” of the United States** and NOT the “legislative jurisdiction”(!):

*“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, -birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States[***], but completely subject to their political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[***] at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”*
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

“Political jurisdiction” is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” was defined by the Supreme Court in Minor v. Happersett:

“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

*“For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words ‘subject,’ ‘inhabitant,’ and ‘citizen’ have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the Constitution of the United States[***]. When used in this sense it [the word*

“citizen”] is understood as conveying the idea of membership of a nation, and nothing more.”

“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States[***] before the adoption of the amendment it is necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what were afterwards admitted to membership.”
 Minor v. Happersett, [88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase “and nothing more”, as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn’t imply legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within our country in section 4.7 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book. “Political jurisdiction” implies only the following:

1. Membership in a community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
2. Right to vote.
3. Right to serve on jury duty.

“Legislative jurisdiction”, on the other hand, implies being “completely subject” and subservient to federal laws and all “Acts of Congress”, which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States[**] can be. You can be “completely subject to the political jurisdiction” of the United States*** without being subject in any degree to a specific “Act of Congress” or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the subject of what “subject to the jurisdiction” means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in the above case:

“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence, as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[***].”
 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]

So “subject to the jurisdiction” in the context of citizenship within the Fourteenth Amendment means “subject to the [political] jurisdiction” of the United States*** and not legislative jurisdiction, and the Fourteenth Amendment definitely describes only those people born in states of the Union. Another very interesting conclusion reveals itself from reading the following excerpt from the above case:

“And Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court [legislating from the bench, in this case], in analyzing the first clause, observed that “the phrase ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof’ was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign states, born within the United States[***].”
 U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, [169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456; 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

When we first read that, an intriguing question popped into our head:

*Is “Heaven” or any religious group for that matter a “foreign state” with respect to the United States** government and are we God’s “ambassadors” and “ministers” of the Sovereign (“God”) in that “foreign state”?*

Based on the way our deceitful and wicked public servants have been acting lately, we think so and here are the scriptures to back it up!

“For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”—
 [Philippians 3:20, Bible, NKJV]

 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

 [Hebrews 11:13, Bible, NKJV]

“Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul...”
 [1 Peter 2:11, Bible, NKJV]

1 Furthermore, if you read section 5.2.11 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, you will also find that the 50 Union states are
 2 considered “foreign states” and “foreign countries” with respect to the U.S. government as far as Subtitle A income taxes are
 3 concerned:

4 Foreign courts: “The courts of a foreign state or nation. In the United States[**], this term is frequently applied
 5 to the courts of one of the states when their judgments or records are introduced in the courts of another.”
 6 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

7 Foreign Laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state.”
 8 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

9 4.12.8.9 Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM)

10 Another place you can look to find confirmation of our conclusions is the Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual,
 11 section 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.1-1, available on our website at:

Dept. of State Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM), Volume 7, Section 1116.1
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Citizenship/7FAM1100.1110.1111-DeptOfState.pdf>

12 and also available on the Dept. of State website at:

Department of State
<https://fam.state.gov/>

13 which says in pertinent part:

14 “d. Prior to January 13, 1941, there was no statutory definition of “the United States” for citizenship purposes.
 15 Thus there were varying interpretations. Guidance should be sought from the Department (CA/OCS) when such
 16 issues arise.” [emphasis added]

17 If our own government hadn’t defined the meaning of the term “United States” up until 1941, then do you think there might 18 have been some confusion over this and that this confusion was deliberate? Can you also see how the ruling in Wong Kim
 19 Ark might have been somewhat ambiguous to the average American without a statutory (legal) reference for the terms it was 20 using? Once again, the government likes to confuse people about its jurisdiction in order to grab more of it. Here is how 21 Thomas Jefferson explained it:

22 “Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them,
 23 *to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps
 24 of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate
 25 all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate.”
 26 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

27 *“We all know that permanent judges acquire an esprit de corps; that, being known, they are liable to be tempted
 28 by bribery; that they are misled by favor, by relationship, by a spirit of party, by a devotion to the executive or
 29 legislative; that it is better to leave a cause to the decision of cross and pile than to that of a judge biased to one*
 30 side; and that the opinion of twelve honest jurymen gives still a better hope of right than cross and pile does.”
 31 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

32 “It is not enough that honest men are appointed judges. All know the influence of interest on the mind of man,
 33 and how unconsciously his judgment is warped by that influence. To this bias add that of the esprit de corps,
 34 of their peculiar maxim and creed that ‘it is the office of a good judge to enlarge his jurisdiction,’ and the
 35 absence of responsibility, and how can we expect impartial decision between the General government, of which
 36 they are themselves so eminent a part, and an individual state from which they have nothing to hope or fear?”
 37 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

38 “At the establishment of our Constitutions, the judiciary bodies were supposed to be the most helpless and
 39 *harmless members of the government. Experience, however, soon showed in what way they were to become the
 40 most dangerous; that the insufficiency of the means provided for their removal gave them a freehold and
 41 irresponsibility in office; that their decisions, seeming to concern individual suitors only, pass silent and*

1 [Thomas Jefferson to A. Coray, 1823. ME 15:486]

2 "I do not charge the judges with wilful and ill-intentioned error; but honest error must be arrested where its
3 toleration leads to public ruin. As for the safety of society, we commit honest maniacs to Bedlam; so judges
4 should be withdrawn from their bench whose erroneous biases are leading us to dissolution. It may, indeed,
5 injure them in fame or in fortune; but it saves the republic, which is the first and supreme law."

6 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:122 ]

7 "The original error [was in] establishing a judiciary independent of the nation, and which, from the citadel of
8 the law, can turn its guns on those they were meant to defend, and control and fashion their proceedings to its 9 own will."

10 [Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1807. FE 9:68]

11 "It is a misnomer to call a government republican in which a branch of the supreme power [the Federal 12 Judiciary] is independent of the nation."

13 [Thomas Jefferson to James Pleasants, 1821. FE 10:198]

14 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take
15 on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect
16 partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English
17 liberty."

18 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

19 With respect to that last remark, keep in mind that NONE of the rulings of Supreme Court cases like Wong Kim Ark have 20 juries, so what do you think the judges are going to try to do?.. expand their power and enhance their retirement benefits,
21 duhhhh! Another portion of that same document found in 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.2-1 says:

22 "a. Simply stated, "subject to the jurisdiction" [within the context of federal statutes but not within the Fourteenth
23 Amendment] of the United States[**] means subject to the laws of the United States[**]." [emphasis added]
24 [7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.2-1]

25 So what does "subject to the laws of the United States**" mean? It means subject to the exclusive/general/plenary legislative
26 jurisdiction of the national (not federal) government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, which only
27 occurs within the federal zone. We covered this earlier in section 4.10 of the Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 and again later
28 throughout chapter 5 of that book. Here is how we explain the confusion created by 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\),
29 Section 1116.2-1 above in the note we attached to it inside the Acrobat file of it on our website:

30 This is a distortion. Wong Kim Ark also says: "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the United 31 *States*** is to be in no respect or degree subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government."*

32 If you are subject to a Union state government, then you CANNOT meet the criteria above. That is why a
33 "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as "a person owing permanent allegiance to a [Union] state" and 34 why most natural persons are "nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens"

35 4.12.8.10 Federal court jurisdiction

36 Let's now further explore what 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.2-1 means when it says "subject to the laws
37 of the United States***". In doing so, we will draw on a very interesting article on our website entitled Authorities on 38 Jurisdiction of Federal Courts found on our website at:

Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LegalGovRef/ChallJurisdiction/AuthoritiesArticle/AuthOnJurisdiction.htm>

39 We start with a cite from Title 18 that helps explain the jurisdiction of "the laws of the United States***":

40 TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
41 Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

42 (a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States** except pursuant to an Act of 43 Congress.

44 Building on this theme, we now add a corroborating citation from the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 26, Notes
45 of Advisory Committee on Rules, paragraph 2, in the middle,

The Great  IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

"On the other hand since all Federal crimes are statutory [see United States v. Hudson, 11 U.S. 32, 3 L.Ed. 259 (1812)] and all criminal prosecutions in the Federal courts are based on acts of Congress. . . ." [emphasis added]

We emphasize the phrase "Acts of Congress" above. In order to define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts to conduct criminal prosecutions and how they might apply "the laws of the United States**" in any given situation, one would have to find out what the specific definition of "Act of Congress," is. We find such a definition in Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 54(c) prior to Dec. 2002, wherein "Act of Congress" was defined. Rule 54(c) stated:

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

If you want to examine this rule for yourself, here is the link:

[http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foioci.exe/frcrm/query=\[jump!3A!27district+court!27\]/doc/{@772}?](http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foioci.exe/frcrm/query=[jump!3A!27district+court!27]/doc/{@772}?)

The $64,000 question is:

"ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN [former] RULE 54(c) OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE IS THE UNITED STATES** DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS IN COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME?"

Hint: everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The Supreme Court says the same thing about this situation as well:

"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation."
[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

Keep in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which establishes citizenship under federal law is federal "legislation". I guess that means there is nothing in that title that can define or circumscribe our rights as people born within and domiciled within a state of the Union, which is foreign to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. In fact, that is exactly our status as a "national" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in Title 8, Section 1101 but the rights of such a human being are not limited or circumscribed there because they can't be under the Constitution. This, folks, is the essence of what it means to be truly "sovereign" with respect to the federal government, which is that you aren't the subject of any federal law. Laws limit rights and take them away. Rights don't come from laws, they come from God! America is "The land of the Kings". Every one of you is a king or ruler over your public servants, and THEY, not you, should be "rendering to Caesar", just as the Bible says in Matt. 22:15:22:

"The people of the state [not the federal government, but the state: IMPORTANT!], as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative."
[Lansing v. Smith, 4 Wendell 9, (NY) (1829)]

"It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their respective states."
[Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

"Sovereignty [that's you!] itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts."
[Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

4.12.8.11 Rebutted arguments against those who believe people born in the states of the Union are not "nationals"

A few people have disagreed with our position on the "national" and "state national" citizenship status of persons born in states of the Union. These people have sent us what might appear to be contradictory information from websites maintained by the federal government. We thank them for taking the time to do so and we will devote this section to rebutting all of their incorrect views. Below are some of the arguments against our position on “state national” citizenship that we have received and enumerated to facilitate rebuttal. We have boldfaced the relevant portions to make the information easier to spot.

1. U.S. Supreme Court, Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420 (1998), footnote #2:

“2. Nationality and citizenship are not entirely synonymous; one can be a national of the United States and yet not a citizen. 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). The distinction has little practical impact today, however, for the only remaining noncitizen nationals are residents of American Samoa and Swains Island. See T. Aleinikoff, D. Martin, & H. Motomura, Immigration: Process and Policy 974-975, n. 2 (3d ed. 1995). The provision that a child born abroad out of wedlock to a United States citizen mother gains her nationality has been interpreted to mean that the child gains her citizenship as well; thus, if the mother is not just a United States national, but also a United States citizen, the child is a United States citizen. See 7 Gordon § 93.04[2][b], p. 93-42; id., § 93.04[2][d][viii], p. 93-49.”

[Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420 (1998)]

2. Volume 7 of the Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) section 1111.3 published by the Dept. of States at <https://fam.state.gov/> says the following about nationals but not citizens of the United States:

c. Historically, Congress, through statutes, granted U.S. nationality, but not citizenship, to persons born or inhabiting territory acquired by the United States through conquest or treaty. At one time or other natives and certain other residents of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Philippines, Guam, and the Panama Canal Zone were U.S. non-citizen nationals.

d. Under current law (the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended through October 1994), only persons born in American Samoa and the Swains Islands are U.S. nationals (Secs. 101(a)(29) and 308(I) INA. [Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual (F.A.M.), Volume 7, Section 1111.3]

3. The Social Security Program Operations Manual System (P.O.M.S.) at <https://secure.ssa.gov/apps10/> says the following:

Social Security Program Operations Manual System (P.O.M.S.), Section RS 02001.003 “U.S. Nationals”

Most of the agreements refer to “U.S. nationals.”

The term includes both U.S. citizens and persons who, though not citizens, owe permanent allegiance to the United States. As noted in RS 02640.005 D., the only persons who are nationals but not citizens are American Samoans and natives of Swains Island.

4. The USDA Food Stamp Service, website says at <http://www.fns.usda.gov/fsp/rules/Memo/Support/02/polimgmt.htm>:

Non-citizens who qualify outright

There are some immigrants who are immediately eligible for food stamps without having to meet other immigrant requirements, as long as they meet the normal food stamp requirements:

- Non-citizen nationals (people born in American Samoa or Swains Island).
- American Indians born in Canada.
- Members (born outside the U.S.) of Indian tribes under Section 450b(e) of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act.
- Members of Hmong or Highland Laotian tribes that helped the U.S. military during the Vietnam era, and who are legally living in the U.S., and their spouses or surviving spouses and dependent children.

The defects that our detractors fail to realize about the above information are the following points:

1. The term “United States” as used in 8 U.S.C. §1408 means the federal zone based on the definitions provided in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f). See our Tax Deposition Questions, section 14, questions 77 through 82 at the following address for more details:
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm>
2. All of the cites that our detractors quote come from federal statutes and “Acts of Congress”. The federal government is not authorized under our Constitution or under international law to prescribe the citizenship status of persons who neither reside within nor were born within its territorial jurisdiction. The only thing that federal statutes can address are the status of persons who either reside in, were born in, or resided in the past within the territorial jurisdiction of the federal government. People born within states of the Union do not satisfy this requirement and their citizenship status resulting from that birth is determined only under state and not federal law. State jurisdiction is foreign to federal jurisdiction EXCEPT in federal areas within a state. The quote below confirms this, keeping in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code qualifies as “legislation”:

“While states are not sovereign in true sense of term but only quasi sovereign, yet in respect of all powers reserved to them [under the Constitution] they are supreme and independent of federal government as that government within its sphere is independent of the states.”

“It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.”
Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]

3. The only thing you need in order to obtain a U.S.A. Passport is “allegiance”. 22 U.S.C. §212. If the federal government is willing to issue you a passport, then they regard you as a “national”, because the only type of citizenship that carries with it exclusively allegiance is that of a “national”. 8 U.S.C. §1101. See:

Getting a USA Passport as a “state national”, Form #10.013
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

4. USA passports indicate that you are a “citizen OR national”:

“citizen/national”= “citizen” OR “national”

5. The quotes of our detractors above recognize only one of the four different ways of becoming a “national but not citizen of the United States” described in 8 U.S.C. §1408. They also recognize only one of the three different definitions of “United States” that a person can be a “national” of, as revealed in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945). They also fail to recognize that an 8 U.S.C. §1452 “national but not citizen of the United States” is not necessarily the same as a “national and citizen of the United States at birth”.
6. Information derived from informal publications or advice of employees of federal agencies are not admissible in a court of law as evidence upon which to base a good faith belief. The only basis for good-faith belief is a reading of the actual statute or regulation that implements it. The reason for this is that employees of the government are frequently wrong, and frequently not only say wrong things, but in many cases the people who said them had no lawful delegated authority to say such things. See <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/reliance.htm> for an excellent treatise from an attorney on why this is.
7. People writing the contradictory information falsely “presume” that the term “citizen” in a general sense that most Americans use is the same as the term “citizen” as used in the definition of “citizens and nationals of the United States” found in 8 U.S.C. §1401. In fact, we conclusively prove throughout this document that this is emphatically not the case. A “citizen” as used in the Internal Revenue Code and most federal statutes means a person born in a territory or possession of the United States, and not in a state of the Union. Americans born in states of the Union are a different type of “citizen”, and we show Why You are a “national”, “state national”, and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006 that these types of people are “nationals” and “state nationals” but not “citizens” or “U.S. citizens” in the context of any federal statute.

We therefore challenge those who make this unwarranted presumption to provide law and evidence proving us wrong on this point. .

8. Whatever citizenship we enjoy we are entitled to abandon. This is our right, as declared both by the Congress and the Supreme Court. See Revised Statutes, section 1999, page. 350, 1868. “citizens and nationals of the United States” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 have two statuses: “citizen” and “national”. We are entitled to abandon either of these two. If we abandon nationality, then we automatically lose the “citizen” part, because nationality is where we obtain our allegiance. But if we abandon the “citizen” part, then we still retain our nationality under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). This is the approach we advocated earlier in section 4.12.12.1. Because all citizenship must be consensual, then the government must respect our ability to abandon those types of citizenship we find objectionable. Consequently, if either you or the government believe that you are a “citizen and national of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, then you are entitled by law to abandon only the “citizen” portion and retain the “national” portion, and 8 U.S.C. §1452 tells you how to have that choice recognized by the Department of State.

Item 2 above is important, because it establishes that the federal government has no authority to write law that prescribes the citizenship status of persons born outside of federal territorial jurisdiction and within the states of the Union. The U.S. Constitution in Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 empowers Congress to write “an uniform Rule of Naturalization”, but “naturalization” is only one of two ways of acquiring citizenship. Birth is the other way, and the states have exclusive jurisdiction and legislative authority over the citizenship status of those people who acquire their state citizenship by virtue of birth within states of the Union. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court held on this subject:

[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

*“A naturalized citizen is indeed made a citizen under an act of Congress, but the act does not proceed to give, to regulate, or to prescribe his capacities. He becomes a member of the society, possessing all the rights of a native citizen, and standing, in the view of the constitution, on the footing of a native. The constitution does not authorize Congress to enlarge or abridge those rights. The simple power of the national Legislature, is to prescribe a uniform rule of naturalization, and the exercise of this power exhausts it, so far as respects the individual. The constitution then takes him up, and, among other rights, extends to him the capacity of suing in the Courts of the United States, precisely under the same circumstances under which a native might sue. He is *828 distinguishable in nothing from a native citizen, except so far as the constitution makes the distinction. The law makes none.”*
[Osborn v. Bank of U.S., 22 U.S. 738 (1824)]

The rules of comity prescribe whether or how this citizenship is recognized by the federal government, and by reading 8 U.S.C. §1408, it is evident that the federal government chose not directly recognize within Title 8 of the U.S.C. the citizenship status of persons born within states of the Union to parents neither of whom were “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and neither of whom “resided” inside the federal zone prior to the birth of the child. We suspect that this is because not only does the Constitution not give them this authority, but more importantly because doing so would spill the beans on the true citizenship of persons born in states of the Union and result in a mass exodus from the tax system by most Americans.

As we said, there are four ways identified in 8 U.S.C. §1408 that a person may be a “national but not citizen of the United States” at birth. We have highlighted the section that our detractors are ignoring, and which we quote frequently on our treatment of the subject of citizenship.

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1408.
Sec. 1408. - Nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth

Unless otherwise provided in section 1401 of this title, the following shall be nationals, but not citizens, of the United States at birth:

(1) A person born in an outlying possession of the United States on or after the date of formal acquisition of such possession;

(2) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents both of whom are nationals, but not citizens, of the United States, and have had a residence in the United States, or one of its outlying possessions prior to the birth of such person;

(3) A person of unknown parentage found in an outlying possession of the United States while under the age of five years, until shown, prior to his attaining the age of twenty-one years, not to have been born in such outlying possession; and

(4) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents one of whom is an alien, and the other a national, but not a citizen, of the United States who, prior to the birth of such person, was physically present in the United States or its outlying possessions for a period or periods totaling not less than seven years in any continuous period of ten years -

(A) during which the national parent was not outside the United States or its outlying possessions for a continuous period of more than one year, and

(B) at least five years of which were after attaining the age of fourteen years.

The proviso of section 1401(g) of this title shall apply to the national parent under this paragraph in the same manner as it applies to the citizen parent under that section

Subsections (1), (3), and (4) above deal with persons who are born in outlying possessions of the United States, and Swains Island and American Samoa would certainly be included within these subsections. These people would be the people who are addressed by the information cited by our detractors from federal websites above. Subsection (2), however, deals with persons who are born outside of the federal United States (federal zone) to parents who are “nationals but not citizens of the United States” and who resided at one time in the federal United States. Anyone born overseas to American parents is a “non-citizen U.S. national” under this section and this status is one that is not recognized in any of the cites provided by our detractors but is recognized by the law itself. Since states of the Union are outside the federal United States and outside the “United States” used in Title 8, then parents born in states of the Union satisfy the requirement for “national but not citizen of the United States” status found in 8 U.S.C. §1408(2).

“Let’s assume you’re right and that 8 U.S.C. §1408(2) prescribes the citizenship status of persons born in a state of the Union. The problem I have with that view is that ‘United States’ means the federal zone in that section, and subsection (2) requires that the parents must reside within the ‘United States’ prior to the birth of the child. This means they must have ‘resided’ in the federal zone before the child was born, and most people don’t satisfy that requirement.”

Let us explain why the above concern is unfounded. According to 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), the parents must also reside in the federal United States prior to the birth of the child. We assert that most people born in states of the Union do in fact meet this requirement and we will now explain why. They can meet this requirement by any one of the following ways:

1. Serving in the military or residing on a military base or occupied territory.
2. Filing an IRS form 1040 (not a 1040NR, but a 1040). The federal 1040 form says “U.S. individual” at the top left. A “U.S. individual” is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) as either an “alien” residing within the federal zone with income from within the federal zone. Since “nonresident aliens” file the 1040NR form, the only thing that a person who files a 1040 form can be is a “resident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) or a “citizen” residing abroad who attaches a form 2555 to the 1040. See Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 5.2.17 for further details on this if you are curious. Consequently, being a “resident alien” qualifies you as a “resident”. You are not, in fact a resident because you didn’t physically occupy the federal zone for the year covered by the tax return, but if the government is going to treat you as a “resident” by accepting and processing your tax return, then they have an obligation to treat either you or your parents as “residents” in all respects, including those related to citizenship. To do otherwise would be inconsistent and hypocritical.
3. Spending time in a military hospital.
4. Visiting federal property or a federal reservation within a state routinely as a contractor working for the federal government.
5. Working for the federal government on a military reservation or inside of a federal area.
6. Sleeping in a national park.
7. Spending time in a federal courthouse.

The reason why items 3 through 7 above satisfy the requirement to be a “resident” of the federal United States is because the term “resident” is nowhere defined in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, and because of the definition of “resident” in Black’s Law Dictionary:

1           “Resident. Any person who occupies a dwelling within the State, has a present intent to remain within the State
 2 for a period of time, and manifests the genuineness of that intent by establishing an ongoing physical presence
 3 within the State together with indicia that his presence within the State is something other than merely
 4 transitory in nature.”
 5           [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1309]

6 The key word in the above is “permanent”, which is defined as it pertains to citizenship in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(31) below:

7           TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101
 8           Sec. 1101. - Definitions

9           (a) As used in this chapter—

10           (31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary,
 11 but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either
 12 of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

13 Since Title 8 does not define the term “lasting” or “ongoing” or “transitory”, we referred to the regular dictionary, which 14 says:

15           “lasting: existing or continuing a long while: ENDURING.”
 16           [Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, p. 675]

17           “ongoing: 1. being actually in process 2: continuously moving forward; GROWING”
 18           [Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, p. 825]

19           “transitory: 1: tending to pass away: not persistent 2: of brief duration: TEMPORARY syn see TRANSIENT.”
 20           [Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, ISBN 0-87779-510-X]

21 No period of time is specified in order to meet the criteria for “permanent”, so even if we lived there a day or a few hours,
 22 we were still there “permanently”. The Bible also says in Matt. 6:26-31 that we should not be anxious or presumptuous about 23 tomorrow and take each day as a new day. The last verse in that sequence says:

24           “Therefore do not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about its own trouble.”
 25           [Matt. 6:31, Bible, NKJV]

26 In fact, we are not allowed to be presumptuous at all, which means we aren’t allowed to assume or intend anything about the 27 future. Our future is in the hands of a sovereign Lord, and we exist by His good graces alone.

28           “Come now, you who say, ‘Today or tomorrow we will go to such and such a city, spend a year there, buy and
 29 sell, and make a profit’; whereas you do not know what will happen tomorrow. For what is your life? It is even
 30 a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away. Instead you ought to say, ‘If the Lord wills, we 31 shall live and do this or that.’ But now you boast in your arrogance. All such boasting is evil.”
 32           [James 4:13-16, Bible, NKJV]

33           “But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings 34 reproach on the Lord, and he shall be cut off from among his people.”
 35           [Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]

36 Consequently, the Christian’s definition of “permanent” is anything that relates to what we intend for today only and does
 37 not include anything that might happen starting tomorrow or at any time in the future beyond tomorrow. Being presumptuous
 38 about the future is “boastful” and “evil”, according to the Bible! The future is uncertain and our lives are definitely not 39 “permanent” in God’s unlimited sense of eternity. Therefore, wherever we are is where we “intend” to permanently reside
 40 as Christians.

41 Even if you don’t like the above analysis of why most Americans born in states of the Union are “nationals but not citizens
 42 of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), we still explained above that you have the right to abandon only the “citizen”
 43 portion and retain the “national” portion of any imputed dual citizenship status under 8 U.S.C. §1401. We also show you
 44 how to have that choice formally recognized by the U.S. Department of State in section 2.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms
 45 and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 under the authority of 8 U.S.C. §1452, and we know people who have successfully
 46 employed this strategy, so it must be valid.

1 Furthermore, even if you don't want to believe that any of the preceding discussion is valid, we also explained that the federal
 2 government cannot directly prescribe the citizenship status of persons born within states of the Union under international law.
 3 To illustrate this fact, consider the following extension of a popular metaphor:

4 *"If a tree fell in the forest, and Congress refused to pass a law recognizing that it fell and forced the agencies in
 5 the executive branch to refuse to acknowledge that it fell because doing so would mean an end to income tax
 6 revenues, then did it really fall?"*

7 The answer to the above questions is emphatically "yes". We said that the rules of comity prevail in that case the federal
 8 government recognizing the citizenship status of those born in states of the Union. But what indeed is their status under 9 federal law? 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) defines a "national" as:

10 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
 11 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

12 (a) As used in this chapter—

13 (21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

14 If you were born in a state of the Union, you are a "national of the United States****" because the "state" that you have 15 allegiance to is the confederation of states called the "United States***". As further confirmation of this fact, if 16 "naturalization" is defined as the process of conferring "nationality" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23), and "expatriation" is
 17 defined as the process of abandoning "nationality and allegiance" by the Supreme Court in Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325
 18 (1939), then "nationality" is the key that determines citizenship status. What makes a person a "national" is "allegiance" to 19 a state. The only type of citizenship which carries with it the notion of "allegiance" is that of "national", as shown in 8 U.S.C.
 20 §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). You will not find "allegiance" mentioned anywhere in Title 8 in connection
 21 with those humans who claim to be "nationals and citizens of the United States at birth" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401:

22 TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
 23 Sec. 1101. - Definitions

24 (a) As used in this chapter—

25 (22) The term "national of the United States[*]" means

26 (A) a citizen of the United States[**], or

27 (B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States[**], owes permanent [but not necessarily exclusive]
 28 allegiance to the United States[*].

29 People born in states of the Union can and most often do have allegiance to the confederation of states called the "United
 30 States" just as readily as people who were born on federal property, and the federal government under the rules of comity
 31 should be willing to recognize that allegiance without demanding that such humans surrender their sovereignty, become tax
 32 slaves, and come under the exclusive jurisdiction of federal statutes by pretending to be people who live in the federal zone.
 33 Not doing so would be an injury and oppression of their rights, and would be a criminal conspiracy against rights, because 34 remember, people who live inside the federal zone have no rights, by the admission of the U.S. Supreme Court in Downes v.
 35 Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901):

36 TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 13 > Sec. 241.
 37 Sec. 241. - Conspiracy against rights

38 *If two or more persons conspire to injure, oppress, threaten, or intimidate any person in any State, Territory,
 39 Commonwealth, Possession, or District in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him
 40 by the Constitution or laws of the United States, or because of his having so exercised the same; or*

41 If two or more persons go in disguise on the highway, or on the premises of another, with intent to prevent or 42 hinder his free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege so secured -

43 *They shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; and if death results from the 44 acts committed in violation of this section or if such acts include kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated
 45 sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill, they shall be fined under
 46 this title or imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both, or may be sentenced to death*

1 It would certainly constitute a conspiracy against rights to force or compel a person to give up their true citizenship status in
 2 order to acquire any kind of citizenship recognition from a corrupted federal government. The following ruling by the U.S.
 3 Supreme Court plainly agrees with these conclusions:

4 “It would be a palpable incongruity to strike down an act of state legislation which, by words of express
 5 divestment, seeks to strip the citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution, but to uphold an act by
 6 which the same result is accomplished under the guise of a surrender of a right in exchange for a valuable
 7 privilege which the state threatens otherwise to withhold. It is not necessary to challenge the proposition that,
 8 as a general rule, the state, having power to deny a privilege altogether, may grant it upon such conditions as 9 it sees fit to impose. But the power of the state in that respect is not unlimited, and one of the limitations is 10 that it may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of Constitutional rights. If the state may 11 compel the surrender of one constitutional right as a condition of its favor, it may, in like manner, compel a
 12 surrender of all. It is inconceivable that guaranties embedded in the Constitution of the United States may 13 thus be manipulated out or existence.”

14 [Frost v. Railroad Commission, 271 U.S. 583, 46 S.Ct. 605 (1926)]

15 Lastly, we will close this section with a list of questions aimed at those who still challenge our position on being a “national 16 of the United States*?”. If you are going to lock horns with us or throw rocks, please start by answering the following questions
 17 or your inquiry will be ignored. Remember Abraham Lincoln’s famous saying: “He has a right to criticize who has a heart 18 to help.”:

19 1. By what authority can a state national get a passport if they are NOT a “national of the United States*?”?

20 22 U.S.C. §212

21 No passport shall be granted or issued to or verified for any other persons than those owing allegiance, whether
 22 citizens or not, to the United States

23
 24 Title 22: Foreign Relations
 25 PART 51—PASSPORTS
 26 Subpart A—General
 27 §51.2 Passport issued to nationals only.

28 (a) A United States passport shall be issued only to a national of the United States \(22 U.S.C. 212\).

29 (b) Unless authorized by the Department no person shall bear more than one valid or potentially valid U.S.
 30 passport at any one time.

31 [SD-165, 46 FR 2343, Jan. 9, 1981]

32 2. Is the “citizen” mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) the SAME “citizen” mentioned in 8 U.S.C. §1401?

33 Title 8 › Chapter 12 › Subchapter I › § 1101
 34 8 U.S. Code § 1101 - Definitions

35 (a) As used in this chapter—

36 (22) *The term “[national of the United States\[\*\*\]](#)” means*

37 [\(A\) a citizen of the United States\[\*\*\], or](#)

38 \(B\) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

39 2.1. If you assert that the paragraph (A) “citizen of the United States*?” includes Fourteenth Amendment
 40 CONSTITUTIONAL citizens, then where is the authority to include them, since the U.S. Supreme Court held in 41 Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971) that 8 U.S.C. §1401 and Fourteenth Amendment CONSTITUTIONAL
 42 citizens are NOT equivalent?

43 2.2. If you assert that the paragraph (A) “citizen of the United States*?” does NOT include Fourteenth Amendment
 44 CONSTITUTIONAL citizens then you can’t avoid agreement with our conclusions about “national” status.

3. "Expatriation" is defined in Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325 (1939) as:

*"Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance."
[Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325; 59 S.Ct. 884; 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]*

How can you abandon your nationality as a "national" or "state national" with the Secretary of the State of the United States under 8 U.S.C. §1481 if you didn't have it to begin with?

4. Naturalization is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) as:

8 U.S.C. §1101

(23) The term "naturalization" means the conferring of nationality [NOT "citizenship" or "U.S. citizenship", but "nationality", which means "national"] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever. "

How can you say a person isn't a "national" after they were naturalized, and if they are, what type of "national" do they become? As a "national" born or naturalized outside of federal jurisdiction and the "United States", do they meet the requirements of 8 U.S.C. §1452 and if not, why not? All law is prima facie territorial. Ex parte Blain, L. R., 12 Ch.Div. 522, 528; State v. Carter, 27 N.J.L. 499; People v. Merrill, 2 Park. Crim. Rep. 590, 596.

5. If the Supreme Court declared that the United States*** defined in the Constitution is not a "nation", but a "society" in Chisholm v. Georgia:

"By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a NATION. It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument. " [Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

...then what exactly does it mean to be a "national of the United States***" within the meaning of the Constitution and not federal statutes or Title 8 of the U.S. Code?

6. If a "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) simply as a person who owes "allegiance" to the United States***, then why can't a human who lives in a state of the union have allegiance to the confederation of states called the "United States***", which the U.S. Supreme Court held above was a "society" and not a "nation". And what would you call that "society", if it wasn't a "nation"? The Supreme Court said in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt that there are three geographical definitions of the term "United States" and one of those definitions includes the following, which is what I claim to be a "national" of:

*"It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in the family of nations."
[Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945)]*

7. How come I can't have allegiance to the "society" called "United States***" described in the Constitution and define that "society" as being the country and not the OTHER two types of "United States**" found in federal statutes, which are synonymous with the "federal zone" and not the country?

8. The federal government has exclusive jurisdiction over the following issues:

8.1. "naturalization", under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution.

8.2. The citizenship status of persons born in its territories or possessions.

However, the federal government has no power to determine citizenship by birth of person born in states of the Union, because the Constitution does not confer upon them that power. The only constitutional legislative power the national government has is over NATURALIZATION, not over citizenship at birth. All the cases and authorities that detractors of our position like to cite relate ONLY to the above subject matters, which are all governed exclusively by federal law, which does not apply within states of the Union for this subject matter. Please therefore show us a case that involves a

1 person born in a state of the Union and not on a territory or possession in which the person claimed to be a “national”,
2 and show us where the court said they weren’t. You absolutely won’t find such a case!

3 4.12.8.12 Sovereign Immunity of State Nationals

4 There are big legal advantages to being an “American national” or “state national” instead of a “U.S. citizen”. An “American
5 national” or simply “national” born within and living within a state of the Union is technically the equivalent of an
6 instrumentality of a “foreign state” under the federal Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.).

7 *Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
8 The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the 9 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”
10 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]*

11 Below is the explanation of a “foreign state” from the Department of State website:

12 *Section 1603(b) defines an “agency or instrumentality” of a foreign state as an entity (1) which is a separate legal
13 person, corporate or otherwise, and (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a
14 majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof,
15 and (3) which is neither a citizen of the a state of the United States as defined in Sec. 1332(c) and (d) nor created
16 under the laws of any third country. An instrumentality of a foreign state includes a corporation, association, or 17 other juridical person a majority of whose shares or other ownership interests are owned by the state, even when 18 organized for profit.
19 Department of State Website, [http://travel.state.gov/law/info/judicial/judicial\_693.html]*

20 The FSIA itself defines “foreign state” as follows:

21 TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1603
22 § 1603. Definitions

23 For purposes of this chapter—

24 (a) A “foreign state”, except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state 25 or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).

26 (b) An “agency or instrumentality of a foreign state” means any entity—

27 (1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and

28 (2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other 29 ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and

30 (3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332 (c) and (d) of this title, nor 31 created under the laws of any third country.

32 (c) The “United States” includes all territory and waters, continental or insular, subject to the jurisdiction of the 33 United States.

34 The statute above says in paragraph (b)(3) that a person cannot be an instrumentality of a “foreign state” if they are a
35 STATUTORY “citizen of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which is exactly the description of a person who is a
36 “national” or “state national” but not a “U.S. citizen”. Under the FSIA, a “nation” is simply a group of people who have their 37 own internal laws to govern themselves. A church, for instance, qualifies as a self-governing “nation”, if:

- 38 1. It has its own rules and laws (God’s laws)
- 39 2. Its own ecclesiastical courts to govern internal disputes.
- 40 3. None of its members are “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

41 The ministers of such a church are “instrumentalities of a foreign state” within the meaning of the FSIA, and they are immune
42 from federal suit or IRS collection actions pursued under the authority of federal law. Of course, they cannot be immune
43 from federal law if they conduct “commerce” with “the Beast” by signing up for any social welfare benefit, because the FSIA
44 says so:

TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 97 > § 1605
§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—[. . .]

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

However, so long as members of the church maintain complete economic separation from “the Beast”, they can maintain their status as a “foreign state” and the sovereign immunity that goes with it.

Likewise, a sovereign “American National” also qualifies as a “foreign state” because he participates in the government of a state of the Union, which is “foreign” with respect to the federal government, as you will learn in the next chapter. He is an instrumentality of the foreign state by virtue of his participation in it as:

1. A jurist
2. A voter
3. An elected official.
4. A “taxpayer”.

Those private individuals who believe in God also qualify as ministers and fiduciaries of a “foreign state” as God’s ambassadors and ministers. The name of the “foreign state” is “Heaven” and their home or domicile qualifies as a “foreign embassy”. They are also entitled to diplomatic immunity. See the following page of the Department of State for details on diplomatic immunity:

Department of State Office of Foreign Missions (OFM)
<http://www.state.gov/ofm/>

If you study the subject of diplomatic immunity as we have, you will learn that such “foreign diplomats” are not subject to the laws of other foreign states, even when resident therein, and are also not subject to taxation of the foreign state. More information is available on this subject below:

Law and Government Topic, Family Guardian Fellowship, Section 9: Challenging Jurisdiction
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/LawAndGovt.htm>

Sovereign American Nationals are also protected by 18 U.S.C. §112, which is as follows:

TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 7 > § 112
112. Protection of foreign officials, official guests, and internationally protected persons

(a) Whoever assaults, strikes, wounds, imprisons, or offers violence to a foreign official, official guest, or internationally protected person or makes any other violent attack upon the person or liberty of such person, or, if likely to endanger his person or liberty, makes a violent attack upon his official premises, private accommodation, or means of transport or attempts to commit any of the foregoing shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both. Whoever in the commission of any such act uses a deadly or dangerous weapon, or inflicts bodily injury, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

(b) Whoever willfully—

(1) intimidates, coerces, threatens, or harasses a foreign official or an official guest or obstructs a foreign official in the performance of his duties;

(2) attempts to intimidate, coerce, threaten, or harass a foreign official or an official guest or obstruct a foreign official in the performance of his duties; or

(3) within the United States and within one hundred feet of any building or premises in whole or in part owned, used, or occupied for official business or for diplomatic, consular, or residential purposes by—

1 (A) a foreign government, including such use as a mission to an international organization;

2 (B) an international organization;

3 (C) a foreign official; or

4 (D) an official guest;

5 congregates with two or more other persons with intent to violate any other provision of this section;

6 shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than six months, or both.

7 (c) For the purpose of this section "foreign government", "foreign official", "internationally protected person",
8 "international organization", "national of the United States", and "official guest" shall have the same meanings
9 as those provided in section 1116 \(b\) of this title.

10 The last question we must address about sovereignty is to identify precisely and exactly what activities a sovereign must 11 avoid in order to prevent losing his sovereignty and his legal and judicial immunity within federal courts. This subject is 12 dealt with in the context of the federal Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), which grants judicial immunity from 13 suit for most foreign states and governments and instrumentalities of foreign states, including states of the Union and the 14 people living within them. The Department of State maintains a website that summarizes the details of the FSIA at:

15 <https://www.state.gov/documents/organization/283958.pdf>

16 Below is an all-inclusive specific list of exceptions to the FSIA from the above website that cause a sovereign to lose immunity
17 in a federal court and thereby subject themselves to the jurisdiction of the federal court. The numbers are section numbers
18 from the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976, which is codified in 28 U.S.C. Chapter 97, starting with section 1602.

- 19 1. 1605(a)(1) - explicit or implicit waiver of immunity by the foreign state;
- 20 2. 1605(a)(2) - commercial activity carried on in the United States [federal zone] or an act performed in the United States
21 in connection with a commercial activity elsewhere, or an act in connection with a commercial activity of a foreign state
22 elsewhere that causes a direct effect in the United States;
- 23 3. 1605(a)(3) - property taken in violation of international law is at issue;
- 24 4. 1605(a)(4) - rights in property in the United States acquired by succession or gift or rights in immovable property situated 25 in the United States are at issue;
- 26 5. 1605(a)(5) - money damages are sought against a foreign state for personal injury or death, or damage to or loss of 27 property, occurring in the United States [federal zone] and caused by the tortious act or omission of that foreign state;
- 28 6. 1605(a)(6) - action brought to enforce an agreement made by the foreign state with or for the benefit of a private party 29 to submit to arbitration;
- 30 7. 1605(a)(7) - money damages are sought against a foreign state for personal injury or death that was caused by an act of 31 torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support or resources for such 32 an act, if the foreign state is designated as a state sponsor of terrorism under section 6(j) of the Export Administration
33 Act of 1979 (50 U.S.C. App 2405(j)) or Section 620A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2371).
- 34 8. 1605(b) - a suit in admiralty is brought to enforce a maritime lien against a vessel or cargo of the foreign state which 35 maritime lien is based upon a commercial activity of the foreign state.

36 From among the list above, the only exceptions that are relevant to American nationals who are not "U.S. citizens" is items
37 #1 and #2 above. First, we'll talk about #2. Receipt of Social Security benefits, tax deductions, Earned Income Credit, or a 38 graduated rate of tax certainly qualifies as "commercial activity" because all of these benefits can only be claimed by those 39 with income "effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States". Consequently, it ought to be clear, as we
40 point out throughout this book, that you cannot accept any benefits from the U.S. government that you didn't earn and still 41 maintain your sovereignty and sovereign immunity in a federal district court. The other important conclusion to be drawn
42 from this exception is that the "commercial activity" must occur in the "United States", which under the Internal Revenue
43 Code means the District of Columbia. This explains why 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) says that all those subject to the code shall 44 be treated as though they reside in the District of Columbia for the purposes of judicial jurisdiction. Is the picture becoming 45 clearer?

The other exception that applies above within the FSIA was #1, which is “explicit or implicit waiver of immunity by the foreign state”. When you sign any federal form under penalty of perjury, you in effect waive your sovereign immunity, because now a federal judge will have jurisdiction to penalize you if you lied on the form. Furthermore, if the form also has the potential to produce a “refund” of taxes paid, you are also meeting exception #2 above because now you are engaging in “commercial activity” with the “United States” as well. This is why it is a bad idea to sign a federal tax form under penalty of perjury without at least qualifying the perjury statement to exclude all other instances of federal jurisdiction, so as to ensure that you continue to enjoy sovereign immunity.

The one hypocrisy with the FSIA is that it doesn’t apply to the relationship between the U.S. government and an American national who has been harmed by the government. For instance, if they stole money from you, then you need their permission to recover it because you can’t sue the U.S. government without its permission. The reverse, however, is frequently not true. Therefore, being a foreign sovereign by virtue of being an “American national” who is not also a “U.S. citizen” is at least one example where Americans are deprived of “the equal protection of the laws” mandated by Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment. Our society is based on the “equal protection of the laws”, and therefore this would appear to be an injustice that must be righted eventually by our courts.

4.12.8.13 Conclusions

Our conclusions then to the matters at our disposal are the following based on the above reasonable analysis:

1. The “United States***” defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment means the states of the Union while the “United States**” appearing in federal statutes in most cases, means the federal zone. For instance, the definition of “United States**” relating to citizenship and found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone, as we prove in the following:

Tax Deposition Questions, Form #03.016, Questions 77 through 82 located at:
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm>.

2. Most Americans, and especially those born in and living within states of the Union are statutory “nationals” or “state nationals” rather than statutory “U.S.** citizens”, “citizens and nationals of the United States**”, or “U.S. nationals” under all “acts of Congress” and federal statutes. The Internal Revenue Code is an “act of Congress” and a federal statute.
3. The government has deliberately tried to confuse and obfuscate the laws on citizenship to fool the average American into incorrectly declaring that they are “U.S. citizens” in order to be subject to their laws and come under their jurisdiction. See section 4.11.10 of our Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book for complete details on how they have done it.
4. The courts have not lived up to their role in challenging unconstitutional exercises of power by the other branches of government or in protecting our Constitutional rights. They are on the take like everyone else who works in the federal government and have conspired with the other branches of government in illegally expanding federal jurisdiction.
5. Once the feds used this ruse with words to get Americans under their corrupted jurisdiction as statutory “U.S. citizens” and presumed “taxpayers”, our federal “servants” have then made themselves into the “masters” by subjecting sovereign Citizens to their corrupted laws within the federal zone that can disregard the Constitution because the Constitution doesn’t apply in these areas. By so doing, they can illegally enforce their income tax laws and abuse their powers to plunder the assets, property, labor, and lives of most Americans in the covetous pursuit of money that the law and the Constitution did not otherwise entitle them to. This act to subvert the operation of the Constitution amounts to an act of war and treason on the sovereignty of Americans and the sovereign states that they are domiciled in, punishable under Article III, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution with death by execution.

4.12.9 Summary of Constraints Applying to Statutory “State National” Status

So basically, if you owe allegiance to your state and are a constitutional “citizen” of that state, you are a “national” under federal law. But how does that affect one’s voting rights? Below is the answer for California:

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
ARTICLE 2 VOTING, INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM, AND RECALL

SEC. 2. A United States[**] citizen 18 years of age and resident in this State may vote.

The situation may be different for other states. If you are domiciled in a state other than California, you will need to check the laws of your specific home state in order to determine whether the prohibition against voting applies to “nationals” in your state. If authorities give you a bad time about trying to register to vote without being a STATUTORY “U.S.** citizen”, then show them the Declaration of Independence, which says:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—

Emphasize that it doesn’t say “endowed by their government” or “endowed by their federal citizenship” or “endowed by their registrar of voters”, but instead “endowed by their CREATOR”. The rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness certainly include suffrage and the right to own property. Suffrage is necessary in turn to protect personal property from encroachment by the government and socialistic fellow citizens. These are not “privileges” that result from federal citizenship. They are rights that result from birth! Thomas Jefferson said so:

[Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

“Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with His wrath?”
[Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XVIII, 1782. ME 2:227 ]

We will now analyze the constraints applying to “nationals” :

1. Right to vote:

- 1.1. “nationals” or “state nationals” can register to vote under laws in most states but must be careful how they describe their status on the voter registration application.
- 1.2. Some state voter registration forms have a formal affidavit by which signer swears, under penalties of perjury, that s/he is a “citizen of the United States**” or a “U.S.** citizen”.
- 1.3. Such completed affidavits become admissible evidence and conclusive proof that signer is a “citizen of the United States**” under federal statutes, which is not the same thing as a “national” or “state national”.

2. Right to serve on jury duty:

- 2.1. “nationals” or “state nationals” can serve on jury duty under most state laws. If your state gives you trouble by not allowing you to serve on jury duty as a “national”, you are admonished to litigate to regain your voting rights and change state law.
- 2.2. Some state jury summons forms have a section that allows persons to disqualify themselves from serving on jury duty if they do not claim to be “citizens of the United States**”. We should return the summons form with an affidavit claiming that we want to serve on jury duty and are “nationals” rather than “citizens” of the United States**. If they then disqualify us from serving on jury duty, we should litigate to regain our right to serve on juries.

3. The exercise of federal citizenship, including voting and serving on jury duty, is a statutory privilege which can be created, taxed, regulated and even revoked by Congress! Please reread section 4.3 of The Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302 book about “Government instituted slavery using privileges” for clarification on what this means. In effect, the government, through operation of law, has transformed a right into a taxable privilege, .
4. The exercise of “national” Citizenship is an unalienable Right which Congress cannot tax, regulate or revoke under any circumstances.
5. Such a Right is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, which Congress cannot amend without the consent of three-fourths of the Union States.

4.12.10 Federal citizenship

“All government without the consent of the governed is the very definition of slavery.”
[Jonathan Swift]

1 4.12.10.1 Types of citizenship under federal law

2 At present, there are three types of federal citizenship identified in Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which is an “act of Congress”:

See section 4.12.10.8 later for details. Used on the 1040NR form to describe people who file that form. Does not describe people who are not born in the federal United States.                                                                  |
| 2 | “U.S.A.  national” or“state national” or“Constitutional but not statutory U.S.  citizen” | states of the Union                                                                                                                       | 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)                                                                          | “national” or “state national” | This person is not necessarily the same as the “U.S. national” above, because it includes people who born in states of the Union. Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union. |
| 3 | “nationals and citizens of the United States at birth ”                                       | 1. District of Columbia2. Puerto Rico3. Guam4. Virgin Islands5. Foreign country/abroad to at least one “national” parent. | 8 U.S.C. §1401 ;8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A)                                   | “U.S.[] citizen”             | All “U.S. citizens” are also “nationals” per 8 U.S.C. §1401 but “nationals” are not necessarily “U.S. citizens” as per 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) . <sup>193</sup> . Term used on the 1040 form to describe the children who are being claimed as deductions.                                                     |

Throughout the remainder of this book, when we refer generically to “nationals”, we mean statuses 1 or 2 above, which includes “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or “nationals, but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). STATUTORY “Nationals but not citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1452 and “Nationals but not citizens at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 includes only those born in American Samoa and Swains Island.

It is very important to be mindful of the context whenever you hear or use the term “citizen of the United States” or “U.S. citizen”, because the term “United States” has an entirely different meaning in federal statutes or “acts of Congress” than it has in the Constitution. This is especially true when filling out government forms. The differences in meaning of these terms between the Constitution and “acts of Congress” is a direct result of the fact that the federal government has no police powers within the states, as we discussed earlier in section 4.8. In the Constitution and the rulings of the Supreme Court, the term “United States” means the collective states of the Union while in federal statutes or “acts of Congress”, it means the federal zone. Watch out! Here is a quick summary of the effects on meanings based on this very important observation:

"citizen of the United States****" status under the Constitution is the equivalent of "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States*" status under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). "national and citizen of the United States****" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, on the other hand, is a PRIVILEGE and not a right that can be revoked by fiat at any time:

"To be a citizen of the United States is a political privilege which no one, not born to, can assume without its consent in some form."
[Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

The Fourteenth Amendment did not create "citizen of the United States" status or add any restrictions to the existing citizenship laws, but simply allayed doubts and controversies that had arisen prior to that time:

"...the opening sentence of the fourteenth amendment is throughout affirmative and declaratory, intended to allay doubts and to settle controversies which had arisen, and not to impose any new restrictions upon citizenship."
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

"U.S. citizen" or "national and citizen of the United States**" status under federal statutes and "acts of Congress" is different from "citizen of the United States****" status under the Fourteenth Amendment Section 1. "U.S.** citizen" or "national and

1 citizen of the United States***” under federal statutes pursuant 8 U.S.C. §1401 is different from the Constitutional “citizen of
 2 the United States***” or statutory “USA national” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §101(a)(21). Although these two nationals are
 3 different, they both came into existence as a result of the operation of The Laws of Nations. The Fourteenth Amendment
 4 didn’t create the Constitutional status of “citizen of the United States***”. The only thing that the ratification of the 14th
 5 Amendment in 1868 accomplished was to:

- 6 • Extend the status of “citizen of the United States***” to persons of all races, instead of only the whites who were 7 previously the only citizens recognized under the Constitution.
- 8 • Further extend the privileges and immunities of those persons who were already “citizens of the United States***”
- 9 • Clarify and further define the meaning of the term “citizen of the United States***” under the Constitution

10 White persons born in states of the Union always were the equivalent of “nationals” under federal statutes from the very
 11 beginning of our country under The Law of Nations, Vattel, Book I, Section 212 and they had this status long before the 12 creation of the 14th Amendment in 1868.<sup>194</sup> This is true because a “national” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as someone
 13 who “owes allegiance to a state” and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) defines a “national of the United States*” as someone who owes
 14 allegiance to the “United States*”. Nationality and allegiance are the only thing you need in order to be regarded as a
 15 CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen” in our country:

16 “There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies
 17 an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons
 18 *associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to
 19 its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a
 20 compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.”*

21 “For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a
 22 title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and
 23 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the
 24 *government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
 25 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 26 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the
 27 Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it is understood as conveying the idea of membership
 28 of a nation, and nothing more.”*

29 *“To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is
 30 necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what
 31 were afterwards admitted to membership.”*

32 “Looking at the Constitution itself we find that it was ordained and established by 'the people of the United
 33 States,'<sup>3</sup> and then going further back, we find that these were the people of the several States that had before
 34 dissolved the political bands which connected them with Great Britain, and assumed a separate and equal station
 35 among the powers of the earth,<sup>4</sup> and that had by Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union, in which they
 36 took the name of 'the United States of America,' entered into a firm league of [88 U.S. 162, 167] friendship with
 37 each other for their common defence, the security of their liberties and their mutual and general welfare, binding
 38 themselves to assist each other against all force offered to or attack made upon them, or any of them, on account
 39 of religion, sovereignty, trade, or any other pretence whatever. 5

40 *“Whoever, then, was one of the people of either of these States when the Constitution of the United States was
 41 adopted, became ipso facto a citizen—a member of the nation created by its adoption. He was one of the persons
 42 associating together to form the nation, and was, consequently, one of its original citizens. As to this there has
 43 never been a doubt. Disputes have arisen as to whether or not certain persons or certain classes of persons
 44 were part of the people at the time, but never as to their citizenship if they were.”*
 45 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

46 The treatment of the term “allegiance” above is significant. We must understand exactly what this word means in order to 47 understand the foundation of our republican form of government. Below is a definition of “allegiance” from the law
 48 dictionary:

49 *“Allegiance. Obligation of fidelity and obedience to government in consideration for protection that government
 50 gives. U.S. v. Kyh, D.C.N.Y., 49 F.Supp. 407, 414. See also Oath of allegiance or loyalty.” [Black’s Law
 51 Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 74]

<sup>194</sup> The Law of Nations, incidentally, was one of the reference documents that the founders used to write the Constitution.

The person who is a “national” does not have the kind of “allegiance” as that described above. Allegiance above is to the government, while “nationals” instead have their allegiance to the “state”, which is the sovereign people (as individuals) within the territorial boundaries of the political body and not exclusively the “government”:

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions

(a) (21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

The term “state” is then defined as follows:

“State. A people permanently occupying a fixed territory bound together by common-law habits and custom into one body politic exercising, through the medium of an organized government, independent sovereignty and control over all persons and things within its boundaries, capable of making war and peace and of entering into international relations with other communities of the globe. United States v. Kusche, D.C.Cal., 56 F.Supp. 201 207, 208. The organization of social life which exercises sovereign power in behalf of the people. Delany v. Moralitis, C.C.A.Md., 136 F.2d. 129, 130. In its largest sense, a “state” is a body politic or a society of men. Beagle v. Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 44 Misc.2d. 636, 254 N.Y.S.2d. 763, 765. A body of people occupying a definite territory and politically organized under one government. State ex re. Maisano v. Mitchell, 155 Conn. 256, 231 A.2d. 539, 542. A territorial unit with a distinct general body of law. Restatement, Second, Conflicts, §3. Term may refer either to body politic of a nation (e.g. United States) or to an individual government unit of such nation (e.g. California).

[...]

The people of a state, in their collective capacity, considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; the public; as in the title of a cause, “The State vs. A.B.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1407]

To have “allegiance” to “a state” as a “national” is to have allegiance to the sovereign within the body politic, which in a republican system of government is the people collectively and individually and not necessarily the government. We cannot “assume” or “presume” that the government represents the will of the people. This is especially true when the government has gone bad and is not representing the will of the people. When we have a rebellious government that has strayed from the Constitution and its “de jure” foundation to become a “de facto” government, then the allegiance we have to the Constitution and the people who ordained it must supersede our allegiance to the government that has violated its charter to implement the Constitution. The people, not the government, must always be regarded as the ultimate sovereigns within republican systems of governance.

Ironically, the very definition of the word “privilege” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, seems to contradict the conclusion that “citizenship” can be a privilege to begin with!:

“Privilege. A particular benefit or advantage, enjoyed by a person, company, or class beyond the common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A peculiar right, advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by others.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1197]

Note above that it says “beyond the common advantages of other citizens”, thus implying that citizenship itself cannot be a “privilege” and that you must also be accepting some kind of benefit beyond that of “citizenship” in order to be classified as “privileged”. Furthermore, if everyone accepts this “privilege” (as the government calls it) called “U.S. citizen” status in federal statutes or even if more than half of all natural persons do, then it becomes a “common advantage”, and thus no longer a special privilege granted only to a minority or a select few. This is the situation today with most Americans, where most falsely believe they are “U.S. citizens” as defined by federal statutes. By the above logic and definition, then, a reasonable man could easily conclude that “U.S. citizen” status cannot be classified as a “privilege” because it is “common” and is shared by a majority rather than a minority.

4.12.10.2 History of federal citizenship

So far we have not offered any authority other than statutes to prove that the government actually recognizes two distinct classes of federal citizenship. We will now present additional evidence by describing the 13th and 14th Amendments and the history of how they have been viewed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

1 Prior to the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments, all persons born in a state of the Union were “citizens of the United
 2 States” under the Constitution and under the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court, but NOT under federal statutes or “acts of
 3 Congress”:

4 “There is no doubt that women may be citizens. They are persons, and by the fourteenth amendment ‘all
 5 persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof’ are expressly declared
 6 to be ‘citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.’ But, in our opinion, it did not need
 7 this amendment to give them that position. Before its adoption the Constitution of the United States did not in 8 terms prescribe who should be citizens of the United States or of the several States, yet there were necessarily 9 such citizens without such provision.

10 [...]

11 “The fourteenth amendment did not affect the citizenship of women any more than it did of men. In this particular,
 12 therefore, the rights of Mrs. Minor do not depend upon the amendment. She has always been a citizen from 13 her birth, and entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizenship. The [Fourteenth] Amendment
 14 prohibited the State, of which she is a citizen, from abridging any of their privileges and immunities as a citizen
 15 of the United States; but it did not confer citizenship on her. That she had before its adoption.

16 “The Constitution does not define the privileges and immunities of citizens. For that definition we must look 17 elsewhere.

18 “The [Fourteenth] Amendment did not add to the privileges and immunities of a citizen. It simply furnished
 19 an additional guaranty for the protection of such as he already had. No new voters were necessarily made by it.
 20 Indirectly it may have had that effect, because it may have increased the number of citizens entitled to suffrage
 21 under the Constitution and laws of the States, but it operates for this purpose, if at all, through the States and
 22 the state laws, and not directly upon the citizen.

23 “All the States had government when the Constitution was adopted. These governments the Constitution did 24 not change.”
 25 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]

26 Therefore, “citizen of the United States” status under our Constitution and under the rulings of the Supreme Court existed
 27 before the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The status of being a “citizen of the United States”
 28 under the Constitution and under Supreme Court rulings is equivalent to the status of being a “national” under federal statutes
 29 or “acts of Congress” and is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

30 Towards the end of the Civil War in 1865, the 13th Amendment was ratified and thereby abolished slavery and involuntary
 31 servitude except as punishment for a crime. The Supreme Court ruled that the 13th Amendment operated to free former 32 slaves and prohibit slavery, but it in no way conferred citizenship to the former slaves, or to those races other than white,
 33 because the founders of the Constitution were all of the white race.

34 Even after the end of the Civil War and the passage of the Thirteenth Amendment, Southern states were openly discriminating
 35 against blacks by denying them state citizenship and political rights. Congress was under political pressure from the northern
 36 states and had to do something about this problem. The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced as the answer to this problem
 37 because it extended citizenship to persons of all races instead of only the whites covered by our original Constitution. The 38 "big daddy" and chief protector of blacks then became the federal government under the new Fourteenth Amendment. This 39 protection was extended by extending national citizenship, which then made blacks "subject to the jurisdiction of the United 40 States".

41 “The first section of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution [169 U.S. 649, 676] begins with the words,
 42 ‘All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the 43 United States and of the state wherein they reside.’ As appears upon the face of the amendment, as well as from 44 the history of the times, this was not intended to impose any new restrictions upon citizenship, or to prevent any
 45 persons from becoming citizens by the fact of birth within the United States, who would thereby have become 46 citizens according to the law existing before its adoption. It is declaratory in form, and enabling and extending 47 in effect. Its main purpose doubtless was, as has been often recognized by this court, to establish the citizenship
 48 of free negroes, which had been denied in the opinion delivered by Chief Justice Taney in Scott v. Sandford
 49 (1857) 19 How. 393; and to put it beyond doubt that all blacks, as well as whites, born or naturalized within 50 the jurisdiction of the United States, are citizens of the United States. Slaughter House Cases (1873) 16 Wall.
 51 36, 73; Strauder v. West Virginia (1879) 100 U.S. 303, 306; Ex parte Virginia (1879) Id. 339, 345; Neal v.
 52 Delaware (1880) 103 U.S. 370, 386; Elk v. Wilkins (1884) 112 U.S. 94, 101, 5 S.Sup.Ct. 41. But the opening
 53 words, ‘All persons born,’ are general, not to say universal, restricted only by place and jurisdiction, and not by

1 color or race, as was clearly recognized in all the opinions delivered in the Slaughter House Cases, above cited.
 3 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

4 The Fourteenth Amendment approach that Congress devised would only work if it could confer national citizenship without
 5 conferring state citizenship. This approach was the only remedy available to Congress to end slavery and discrimination in
 6 the southern states because the federal government did not have the authority under the Constitution to determine if a former
 7 slave could become a Citizen of one of the several states since the 9th and 10th Amendments said that powers not granted
 8 specifically to the federal government by the Constitution are reserved to the states or to the People.

9 History shows that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and New York State were nationalizing blacks as State Citizens
 10 before the outbreak of the Civil War. In other southern states, blacks were not Citizens and therefore did not have standing
 11 in any court based on the privileges and immunities of "citizens of the United States". The 14th Amendment was written 12 primarily to afford citizenship to those of the black race that were recently freed by the 13th Amendment (Slaughter-House
 13 Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 71), and did not include Indians and others NOT born in and subject to the jurisdiction of the United 14 States (McKay v. Cambell, 2 Sawy. 129). Thus, the 14th Amendment recognized that an individual can be a "citizen of the 15 United States***" under the Constitution without being a Citizen of a State." (Slaughter-House Cases, supra; cf. U.S. v.
 16 Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)).

17 The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced for ratification to the states on June 16, 1866 and ratification was completed on 18 July 28, 1868 at the end of the Civil War by the three fourths of the states required by the Constitution.<sup>195</sup> Ratification of the 19 amendment by the southern states was made a precondition of them being readmitted back into the Union after the war. Until 20 they were readmitted into the union, they were conquered federal territories.<sup>196</sup> Many of the southern states that voted in 21 favor of ratifying the amendment did so at gunpoint while they were occupied by federal troops! Their legislatures in many
 22 such cases were summarily dismissed as "rebels" by Congress and replaced with puppet legislatures hand-selected by 23 Congress following the cessation of war. You could say that they ratified the amendment under duress because of this, and 24 that the amendment is therefore invalid because the ratification must be entirely voluntary to be legally binding. Furthermore,
 25 before they voted on this ratification, they had no representation in Congress and were "outnumbered" until they gave in.

26 The blacks following the civil war therefore had to be "collectively naturalized" into the status of being "citizens of the United 27 States" so they could then freely roam to any state and be citizens of the state they were in, even if that state refused to grant
 28 them state citizenship. In order to do this, "citizen of the United States***" status under the Constitution had to be made
 29 paramount and dominant over state citizenship

30 "The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The 31 question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary
 32 citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship
 33 of the United States and the citizen's place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power
 34 to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional
 35 right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an 36 equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that 37 right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the 38 rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional 39 hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and
 40 a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the 41 Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such 42 regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied
 43 one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States."
 44 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

 46 "By the thirteenth amendment of the constitution slavery was prohibited. The main object of the opening sentence
 47 of the fourteenth amendment was to settle the question, upon which there had been a difference of opinion
 48 throughout the country and in this court, as to the citizenship of free negroes, (Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393;) and to put it beyond doubt that all persons, white or black, and whether formerly slaves or not, born or 49 naturalized [collectively naturalized, in the case of slaves] in the United States[***], and owing no allegiance
 50 to any alien power, should be citizens of the United States[***] and of the state in which they reside. Slaughter-
 51 House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 73; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U.S. 303, 306. "

1 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

2 The blacks were therefore collectively naturalized without their consent following the Civil War in the Civil Rights Act of
3 1866 on April 9, 1866, 14 Stat. 27 so they could be protected from state government abuses of their natural rights.

4 "By the act of April 9, 1866, entitled 'An act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and
5 furnish means for their vindication,' (14 St. 27,) it is provided that 'all persons born in the United States, and not
6 subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States.'
7 This, so far as we are aware, is the first general enactment making persons of the Indian race citizens of the 8 United States. Numerous statutes and treaties previously provided for all the individual members of particular
9 Indian tribes becoming, in certain contingencies, citizens of the United States. But the act of 1866 reached Indians
10 not in tribal relations. Beyond question, by that act, national citizenship was conferred directly upon all persons
11 in this country, of whatever race, (excluding only 'Indians not taxed,') who were born within the territorial
12 limits of the United States, and were not subject to any foreign power."

13 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

14 Congress had the exclusive authority to collectively naturalize the blacks under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 4 of the U.S.
15 Constitution. Collective naturalization also occurs, for instance, when a new territory is annexed to the "United States". An 16 example of collective naturalization was the case of the Louisiana Purchase from France or the Alaska Purchase from Russia.
17 Note that at the time of the Louisiana Purchase and the Alaska Purchase, these areas became federal territories, which are the 18 proper subject of exclusive federal jurisdiction and acts of Congress. The U.S. Supreme Court calls these areas "inchoate 19 states" in their rulings. The same condition applied to the southern states following the Civil War, which effectively became 20 federal territories during the period when they were conquered but had not yet rejoined the Union. Conditions had been
21 placed on them in order to rejoin. For instance, they could not send representatives to the Congress until they had ratified the 22 Fourteenth Amendment. In effect, they would be slaves of the rest of the states until they had consented to the ratification of 23 the Fourteenth Amendment that would help eliminate slavery. During the time that the southern states were federal territories,
24 an act of Congress such as the Civil Rights Act of 1866 could lawfully be passed to naturalize all the blacks. Once they
25 rejoined the Union as sovereign states, such an act could not have been passed because the jurisdiction of the states within 26 their borders would again have been exclusive and plenary.

27 To restate: In the Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 71 supra the U.S. Supreme Court held:

28 "It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship of the United States and a citizenship of a state, which are
29 distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual.
30 Of the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the United States and of the privileges and immunities of the 31 citizen of the state, and what they respectfully are, we will presently consider; but we wish to state here that it is 32 only the former which are placed by this clause under the protection of the Federal Constitution, and the latter,
33 whatever they may be, are not intended to have any additional protection by this paragraph of the amendment."

34 The U.S. Supreme Court has also ruled that "The term United States is a metaphor [a figure of speech]". Cunard S.S Co. v.
35 Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 122; and that

36 "The term 'United States' may be used in one of several senses. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying 37 the position analogous to that of sovereign in a family of nations. It may designate territory over which 38 sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be a collective name of the states which are united by and 39 under the Constitution."

40 [Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652, 672-73.]

41 Did the Courts really say that someone could be a Citizen of a State without being a "citizen of the United States" (which 42 means "national of the United States" in federal statutes)? Yes, they did. Who would fit this description? How about a
43 national from another country who resides in a state of the Union and who has not yet been naturalized under the laws of this
44 country. It's true that the cases cited above are old, some over 100 years old. None of these cases have ever been overturned
45 by a more recent decision, so they are valid. A more recent case is Crosse v. Bd. of Supervisors, 221 A.2d. 431 (1966) which 46 says:

47 "Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a
48 person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state." Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, supra.

49 The Pennsylvania Commonwealth, for instance, is one of the "several states" described in the Constitution. The Constitution
50 treats the several states of the Union as independent countries and jurisdictions that are "foreign" to each other and to the 51 federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction and internal "police powers". 28 U.S.C. §297 makes it very 52 clear that the states of the Union are "foreign countries" with respect to each other. Each state is on an equal footing with all the other states of the Union in terms of its sovereignty and nearly exclusive control over everything that happens internal to its borders. The Buck Act in 1940 created federal areas inside the 50 Union states. If you live in a federal area, you are subject to federal territorial laws and the municipal laws of the District of Columbia. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is internal to the federal zone. The Pennsylvania Commonwealth is not part of the federal zone, but the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is. PA is the name that the post office recognizes for mail sent into the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which is a federal area. Pa., Penna., and Pennsylvania are the names that the post office uses for mail sent into the Pennsylvania Commonwealth, which is not a federal area. If I accept mail sent to PA, I am saying that I live in the federal zone. The same situation exists in the other states.

One important outcome of being a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is that the federal government may tax only its own “U.S. citizens” when they reside outside of federal territorial jurisdiction, for instance when they are in foreign countries. See the Supreme Court case of Cook v. Tait for authorities on this subject. In the U.S. Constitution Annotated, under the Fifth Amendment (see <http://caselaw.lp.findlaw.com/data/constitution/amendment05/13.html> - 6), here is what it says about this subject:

In laying taxes, the Federal Government is less narrowly restricted by the Fifth Amendment than are the States by the Fourteenth. The Federal Government may tax property belonging to its [“U.S.”] citizens, even if such property is never situated within the jurisdiction of the United States.<sup>197</sup> and it may tax the income of a citizen resident abroad, which is derived from property located at his residence.<sup>198</sup> The difference is explained by the fact that protection of the Federal Government follows the citizen wherever he goes, whereas the benefits of state government accrue only to persons and property within the State's borders.

It is important, however, to point out that the Union states are exempted from direct taxes under Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution but foreign countries where “U.S. citizens” (under federal statutes) reside are not. This point is VERY important, and clearly indicates from where the tax jurisdiction of the United States government derives. It isn’t mainly a geographical jurisdiction as far as taxes internal to the federal zone go, but instead originates mainly from our “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress”. Through this devious mechanism of fooling sovereign state Citizens and “nationals” into becoming privileged “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress”, the federal government usurped the Sovereignty of the People, as well as the Sovereignty of the several Union states. They also usurped the authority of sovereign state Citizens by creating “Federal areas” within the authority of Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America which states:

“The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United states, or of any particular State.”

Therefore, all STATUTORY “U.S. citizens” [i.e. citizens of the District of Columbia and the territories described in federal statutes] residing in one of the states of the Union, are classified as property and franchisees of the federal government, and as an “individual” entity! These serfs are “completely subject to the jurisdiction of the United States” no matter where they reside because they are chattel and slaves of that government. See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193, 80 L.Ed. 1143, 56 S.Ct. 773 (1936). Under the “Buck Act,” 4 U.S.C Secs. 105-113, the federal government has created a “Federal area” or “enclave” within the boundaries of the several states. This area is similar to any territory that the federal government acquires through purchase, conquest or treaty, thereby imposing federal territorial law upon the people in this “Federal area.” Federal territorial law is evidenced by the Executive Branch’s Admiralty flag (a federal flag with a gold or yellow fringe on it) flying in schools, offices and courtrooms. As you will find out in section 5.6.1 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, “acts of Congress” and all federal crimes falling under Title 18, the Criminal Code, only apply inside these federal areas and not within states of the Union.

There are actually four potential sources of federal jurisdiction over “nationals” living in a state of the Union:

1. In personam jurisdiction
2. Citizenship
3. Territorial jurisdiction. If a person’s “domicile” is within the territorial jurisdiction, then they are subject to the jurisdiction of the sovereign.
4. Subject matter jurisdiction

1 “Nationals”, also called “citizens of the United States***” by the Supreme Court and the Fourteenth Amendment, are subject
 2 to the political (but not legislative) jurisdiction of the “United States***” even when they are outside the territorial jurisdiction
 3 of that country United States*. That is the whole reason why we have embassies in foreign countries: to protect citizens
 4 residing in foreign lands. States of the Union do not have legislative jurisdiction over their citizens when they are outside the
 5 state. However, today all state citizens are also citizens of the United States*** and hence all state citizens have the same
 6 protections when they are outside of the “U.S.***” that was spoken of at the beginning of this paragraph, meaning outside
 7 the country United States*. Federal political jurisdiction derives from being either a STATUTORY “U.S.** citizen” under
 8 8 U.S.C. §1401 or a “national of the United States*” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22). Being a “U.S.** citizen” under federal 9 statutes is a privilege while being a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen under the Fourteenth Amendment is a right after it is 10 acquired by birth or naturalization. It cannot be unilaterally revoked by the government without your consent. Afroyim v.
 11 Rusk, 387 U.S. 253 (1967). We hope this clears up all remaining doubts you might have about the nature of federal 12 citizenship.

13 Now for a little history on citizenship prior to the Civil War. To begin, the “citizen of the United States**” in 26 C.F.R.
 14 §31.3121(e) -1 is a citizen of a territory or possession of the United States under Title 48 of the U.S. Code and 8 U.S.C.
 15 §1401. This citizenship doesn't have anything to do with the Fourteenth Amendment. It is a special “non-constitutional”
 16 class of citizenship. This misunderstanding dates back to 1803 at the time of the Louisiana Purchase. Article 1, Section 8, 17 Clause 17 jurisdiction applies exclusively to:

- 18 1. The District of Columbia as the seat of government, and
- 19 2. Territory within states of the Union ceded to the United States for purposes specified.

20 The territorial clause, at Article 4, Section 3, applied only to what was known as the Northwest Territory ceded by New York
 21 and other new sovereign states in 1787 to help pay off debts of the Revolution.

22 In the cession treaty with France, there were two important provisions for territory ceded as a result of the Louisiana Purchase:

- 23 1. Those who lived in the territory would enjoy all rights, benefits and protections of “citizens of the United States***,” 24 and
- 25 2. As the territory was settled, it would become one or more States of the Union.

26 Thomas Jefferson was President at the time. He knew that the Constitution makes no provision for acquisition of new 27 territories so he drafted two proposed amendments to accommodate the Louisiana Purchase and the treaty provisions.
 28 However, Congress elected to do nothing, reasoning that territorial acquisition was implicit from the constitutional provisions
 29 relating to waging war & making treaties. As a consequence, the U.S. Government has been operating under implied rather 30 than constitutionally enumerated powers for territorial acquisition ever since.

31 Until the Spanish-American War (1898), cession treaties all included the two key elements that were in the Louisiana
 32 Purchase -- the acquired territory would become one or more States of the Union, and those living in the territory would enjoy
 33 all rights, benefits and protections the Constitution affords citizens of the several States until such time as the territory was 34 admitted to the Union. When Spain ceded Puerto Rico & the Philippines, the cession treaty did not include those provisions.

35 If you will read the Downes v. Bidwell case, that Supreme Court decision, and the other Insular Tax Cases decided in the 36 same general timeframe, a distinction was made between incorporated territories such as Alaska and Hawaii (destined to 37 become States of the Union, per cession treaties), and the new “unincorporated” insular possessions. They were deemed 38 “foreign” to States of the Union, i.e., to the “United States,” in that they were not under the “constitutional umbrella.”

39 In 1917, Congress extended nationality (“national of the United States**”) status to the people of Puerto Rico; in 1927, the 40 status was extended to the people of the Virgin Islands, etc., until citizenship was finally extended to the people of Guam,
 41 American Samoa and the Northern Mariana Islands. It appears that nationality (“national of the United States**”) status was 42 also extended to the people of Alaska and Hawaii prior to the two being admitted to the Union, but in all cases it was a “non-43 constitutional” citizenship -- the Fourteenth Amendment didn't have a thing to do with it, because these were territories at the 44 time and were not part of the “United States***” as referred to in the Constitution.

45 One of the important declarations in Downes v. Bidwell is that once the Constitution has been extended to a territory, it cannot
 46 be withdrawn. The District of Columbia, federal enclaves ceded by states of the Union for Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17
 47 purposes, the Northwest Territory, and territories acquired from 1803 to 1898 all enjoyed the same benefit of falling under

1 the constitutional umbrella without being part of the “United States” within the meaning of the Constitution. However, until 2 admitted to the Union, people in the territories, as well as those in today's unincorporated insular possessions:

- 3 1. Did not elect Senators and Representatives to Congress, and
- 4 2. could not vote in presidential elections. Additionally, both incorporated territories and unincorporated possessions are or 5 were subject to Congress' plenary power, i.e., the "municipal" authority of the United States.

6 An essential necessary to understand the scheme is to understand that "all legislation is geographical in nature." In other
7 words, it applies to a territory. The Social Security Act of 1935 applied to the "geographical United States**," i.e., to
8 territories and possessions of the United States**. It did not apply to states of the Union, and there is no special provision
9 that extends application to federal enclaves within States of the Union. This is one of the reasons there are some code sections
10 that conditionally include the District of Columbia where others don't.

11 If you would like to study the history of citizenship further, the best and most authoritative source is the Supreme Court case
12 of Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874).

13 4.12.10.3 Constitutional Basis of federal citizenship

14 Here is Section 1 of the 14th Amendment that confers “national” citizenship upon persons born in the United States***:

15 *Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,
16 are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law
17 which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any 18 person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the 19 equal protection of the laws.*

20 Prior to the introduction of the Fourteenth Amendment after the Civil War, the U.S. Constitution only established the 21 individual rights enumerated by the first eight Amendments to the U.S. Constitution at the federal level. This meant that
22 prior to the Fourteenth Amendment, the individual rights enumerated by the first eight amendments to the U.S. Constitution
23 were not guaranteed to Americans by the states of the Union and many state constitutions did not universally include all of 24 these rights. The Fourteenth Amendment was introduced at the federal level to compel states to honor the first 8 amendments
25 of the constitution in the case of all “citizens of the United States”.<sup>199</sup> These “citizens of the United States” identified by both
26 the Fourteenth Amendment and the U.S. Supreme Court are referred to as “nationals but not citizens” or simply “nationals”
27 within federal statutes.<sup>200</sup> Here is how the Supreme Court of the United States described the significance of the Fourteenth
28 Amendment in terms of its effect on federal legislative jurisdiction:

29 *“The [Fourteenth] amendment prohibited the state, of which she is a citizen, from abridging any of her
30 privileges and immunities as a citizen of the United States, but it did not confer citizenship on her. That she 31 had before its adoption.*

32 *“If the right of suffrage is one of the necessary privileges of a citizen of the United States, then the Constitution
33 and laws of Missouri confining it to men are in violation of the Constitution of the United States, as amended,
34 and consequently void. The direct question is therefore presented whether all citizens are necessarily voters.*

35 “The Constitution does not define the privileges and immunities of citizens. For that definition we must look 36 elsewhere. In this case, we need not determine what they are, but only whether suffrage is necessarily one of 37 them.

38 [. . .]

39 *The [Fourteenth] amendment did not add to the privileges and immunities of a citizen. It simply furnished a
40 additional guaranty for the protection of such as he already had. No new voters were necessarily made by it.
41 Indirectly it may have had that effect because it may have increased the number of citizens entitled to suffrage
42 under the constitution and laws of the states, but it operates for this purpose, if at all, through the states and
43 the state laws, and not directly upon the citizen.”

So we can see that the Fourteenth Amendment operates exclusively through the states and state law, not through federal law. It is not a source of federal legislative jurisdiction, but simply confers membership in the political community called the “United States***” by virtue of their birth in a state of the Union.

Following the introduction of the Fourteenth Amendment, it became quite common for people to confuse “citizens of the United States***” under the Fourteenth Amendment and under Supreme Court rulings with “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” such as 8 U.S.C. §1401, which are two completely different statuses. Because of this confusion, people in states of the Union would almost universally but mistakenly identify themselves as “U.S. citizens” under the authority of federal statutes on the many government forms they would eventually submit in the context of federal taxes. This created a “false presumption” and evidence supporting the belief that they are residents of the federal zone and feudal serfs of Congress. Through this devious obfuscation mechanism, people who were victims of such confusion became “property and franchisees of the federal government” in receipt of taxable privileges who were aliens in their own state and whose “U.S. citizen” status made them into residents and citizens of the federal zone from a legal perspective. Sneaky politicians would later introduce the Buck Act of 1940 following the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment in 1868 as a way to allow states to tax this franchise and states would later introduce income tax statutes of their own to cash in on these federal slaves.

Remember the Supreme Court’s definition of the term “United States” in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) which we talked about earlier in section 4.5 in which there were three definitions of “United States”? The key to understanding the meaning of the 14th Amendment shown above are the words “United States***”, which means the collective states of the Union of states in the context of the Constitution, and “the jurisdiction”, which means the political and NOT legislative jurisdiction of these states.

*“It is impossible to construe the words ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof,’ in the opening sentence [of the Fourteenth Amendment], as less comprehensive than the words ‘within its jurisdiction,’ in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold that persons ‘within the jurisdiction’ of one of the states of the Union are not ‘subject to the jurisdiction of the United States[***].”*
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

Now do you understand? Can you also understand then why your government would want you to be a federal statutory “U.S. citizen” defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and who lives in the federal zone from a legal perspective? They can legally make you into a slave with no rights who is completely subject to their jurisdiction! Tricky, huh? The Supreme Court confirmed these conclusions in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), when it said in pertinent part:

“The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting slavery and involuntary servitude ‘within the United States, or in any place subject to their jurisdiction,’ is also significant as showing that there may be places within the jurisdiction of the United States that are no part of the Union. To say that the phraseology of this amendment was due to the fact that it was intended to prohibit slavery in the seceded states, under a possible interpretation that those states were no longer a part of the Union, is to confess the very point in issue, since it involves an admission that, if these states were not a part of the Union, they were still subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

*Upon the other hand, the 14th Amendment, upon the subject of citizenship, declares only that ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside.’ Here there is a limitation to persons born or naturalized in the United States, which is not extended to persons born in any place ‘subject to their jurisdiction.’”
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]*

The Social Security Program Operations Manual (POM) clarifies the meaning of “subject to the jurisdiction” found in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

[GN 00303.100 U.S. Citizenship\[...\]](#)

5. SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION OF THE U.S.

Individuals under the purview of the Fourteenth Amendment (which states that all individuals born in the U.S. and to whom U.S. laws apply are U.S. citizens). Acquisition of citizenship is not affected by the fact that the alien parents are only temporarily in the U.S. at the time of the child’s birth. Under international law, children born in the U.S. to foreign sovereigns or foreign diplomatic officers listed on the State Department Diplomatic List are not subject to the jurisdiction of the U.S.

The legal encyclopedia, American Jurisprudence, further clarifies the meaning of U.S. citizenship as follows:

Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."
[3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999)]

Therefore, an individual may not legally be a "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" under federal statutes or "acts of Congress" unless he or she was born on a federal territory, such as in Guam, the Virgin Islands, or Puerto Rico. States of the Union are not territories of the central government. Below is the definition of the word "territory" so you can see for yourself, right from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473:

"Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President."

The major legal encyclopedia, Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), has the following enlightening things to say about the word "territory":

86 Corpus Juris Secundum, Territories
§1. Definitions, Nature, and Distinctions

The word "territory," when used to designate a political organization has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, and does not necessarily include all the territorial possessions of the United States, but may include only the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under act of congress.

While the term "territory" is often loosely used, and has even been construed to include municipal subdivisions of a territory, and "territories of the" United States is sometimes used to refer to the entire domain over which the United States exercises dominion, the word "territory," when used to designate a political organization, has a distinctive, fixed, and legal meaning under the political institutions of the United States, but may include only a portion or the portions thereof which are organized and exercise governmental functions under acts of congress. The term "territories" has been defined to be political subdivisions of the outlying dominion of the United States, and in this sense the term "territory" is not a description of a definite area of land but of a political unit governing and being governed as such. The question whether a particular subdivision or entity is a territory is not determined by the particular form of government with which it is, more or less temporarily invested.

"Territories" or "territory" as including "state" or "states."

While the term "territories of the" United States may, under certain circumstances, include the states of the Union, as used in the federal Constitution, and in ordinary acts of congress "territory" does not include a foreign state.

As used in this title, the term "territories" generally refers to the political subdivisions created by congress, and not within the boundaries of any of the several states."
[86 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Territories, §1 (2003)]

The U.S. Supreme Court also defined precisely what "territory" meant as follows:

"Various meanings are sought to be attributed to the term 'territory' in the phrase 'the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof.' We are of opinion that it means the regional areas- of land and adjacent waters-over which the United States claims and exercises [plenary/exclusive] dominion and control as a sovereign power. The immediate context and the purport of the entire section show that the term is used in a physical and not a metaphorical sense-that it refers to areas or districts having fixity of location and recognized boundaries. See United States v. Bevans, 3 Wheat. 336, 390.

"It now is settled in the United States and recognized elsewhere that the territory subject to its jurisdiction includes the land areas under its dominion and control, the ports, harbors, bays and other enclosed arms of the sea along its coast and a marginal belt of the sea extending from the coast line outward a marine league, or three geographic miles. Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch, 187, 234; The Ann, 1 Fed.Cas. No. 397, p. 926; United States v. Smiley, 27 Fed.Cas. No. 16317, p. 1132; Manchester v. Massachusetts, 139 U.S. 240, 257, 258 S., 11 Sup.Ct. 559; Louisiana v. Mississippi, 202 U.S. 1, 52, 26 S.Sup.Ct. 408; 1 Kent's Com. (12th Ed.) *29; 1 Moore, [262 U.S. 100, 123] International Law Digest, 145; 1 Hyde, International Law, 141, 142, 154; Wilson, International

 2 [ Phillipson] p. 282; 1 Oppenheim International Law (3d Ed.) 185-189, 252. This, we hold, is the territory which
 3 the amendment designates as its field of operation; and the designation is not of a part of this territory but of 'all
 4 of it.'
 5 [Cunard S.S. Co. v. Mellon, 262 U.S. 100, 43 S.Ct. 504 (1923)]

6 It is extremely important to emphasize once again the need to consider the context of the words being used in order to properly
 7 and clearly understand federal jurisdiction. The term “subject to the jurisdiction” as used in the Fourteenth Amendment of 8 the Constitution has an entirely different meaning than the term “subject to its jurisdiction” as used in federal statutes or “acts
 9 of Congress”. Below is a table that hopefully will make the distinctions clear in your mind:

10 Table 4-34: Constitution v. Federal Statute jurisdiction

| Federal statute or “act of Congress” | “subject to its jurisdiction” | Cunard S.S. Co. v. Mellon , 262 U.S. 100 (1923) | National Prohibition Act (41 Stat. 305) | Federal zone only under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. Refers to both legislative and political jurisdiction.                                  |
| U.S. Constitution                    | “subject to the jurisdiction” | U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark , 169 U.S. 649 (1898)      | Fourteenth Amendment, section 1         | The collective states of the Union. Does not include any part of the federal zone. Applies ONLY to “political jurisdiction” and excludes “legislative jurisdiction”. |

11 An interesting and important outcome of the above analysis regarding the Fourteenth Amendment is the following very 12 reasonable conclusion:

13 If you claim to be a statutory “U.S. citizen” under the Internal Revenue Code and yet do not live in the federal
 14 *United States**/federal zone, the only way you can be subject to the jurisdiction of the United States is to yourself*
 15 be property or territory of the United States! That’s right: you are a slave! The only thing subject to the 16 jurisdiction of the United States is its territory, and if you aren’t on federal property then YOU are federal 17 territory!

18 Human beings born in the sovereign 50 Union states outside of the “federal zone” are technically not “U.S. citizens” under 19 federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401, but “nationals” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). As “nationals” who are not 20 statutory “U.S. citizens”, they are classified as “nonresident aliens” within the Internal Revenue Code, but only if serving in 21 a public office in the national government:

22 26 U.S.C. §7701 Definitions

23 (B) Nonresident alien

24 An individual is a nonresident alien if such individual is neither a citizen of the United States nor a
 25 resident of the [federal] United States (within the meaning of subparagraph (A)).

26 One of our readers took this section a step further and actually examined her passport. Below is a snapshot of what the cover
 27 of the U.S. passport says, which confirms the fact that U.S. passports recognize two classes of citizenship: “U.S. citizens”
 28 and “nationals”:

29 Figure 4-7: Copy of U.S. Passport Cover

2 We can now apply what we have just learned above to the federal government's definition of "U.S. citizen" found in the 3 Internal Revenue Code and explain why they defined it the way they did. Are you a "U.S. citizen"? Here's the only definition
4 of "citizen of the United States" found anywhere in the I.R.C. or 26 CFR:

5 26 C.F.R. 31.3121(e)-1 State, United States, and citizen.

6 (b)...The term 'citizen of the United States' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin
7 Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.

8 The answer is EMPHATICALLY NO! The above definition, you will note, also depends on the definition of "United States"
9 or "U.S." appearing in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(10\), which we showed earlier in sections 3.9.1.24 and
10 3.9.1.20 means the federal United States in the context of the Internal Revenue Code. The context must always be examined
11 to determine which of the two types of federal citizens (nationals or citizens) they are talking about. Therefore, the only thing
12 "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" can mean in Subtitles A and C of the Internal Revenue Code is persons born
13 in federal territories and possessions, which doesn't include most of us. Based on what we just learned, we can now
14 understand why the conniving lawyers inhabiting the District of Columbia (Washington, D.C.) defined it the way they did!
15 Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and Guam are all federal TERRITORIES and territories are the only place
16 that "U.S. citizens" as defined above can be born and reside! The District of Columbia is NOT a territory as the word is 17 correctly defined!

18 The Fourteenth Amendment has two requirements in order to be a "citizen of the United States":

- 19 1. Born in a state of the Union AND 20 2. "subject to the jurisdiction" of the federal government.

21 We must therefore think very clearly about what it means to be "subject to the jurisdiction" above and what context we are
22 talking about: federal statutes versus the Constitution. You will find out later in section 4.11 that the term "subject to the 23 jurisdiction" means the political jurisdiction, which means the ability to vote or serve on jury duty within the 50 states of the 24 Union. If we therefore reside in the 50 Union states and outside of the federal zone, then we are technically "subject to the 25 [political] jurisdiction" of the federal government under the Constitution, but at the same time, we are not subject to most 26 federal statutes and regulations or to the Internal Revenue Code. The founding fathers endowed us with the ability to 27 participate politically in voting and jury service within our country without subjecting ourselves to federal police powers or
28 legislative jurisdiction.

1 How does the government rope us into the jurisdiction of federal statutes and “acts of Congress” so they can tax and pillage
 2 us? They use confusing terms and definitions on tax and voter registration and jury duty forms to get us to “volunteer” or
 3 “elect” to be treated as though we are statutory federal “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 who are subject to federal law
 4 and who reside inside the federal zone. For instance, they scare us into filling out an IRS form 1040 that creates a false but
 5 prima facie presumption that we occupy the federal zone as a “alien”.<sup>201</sup> In effect, they trick us by abusing language into
 6 admitting that we occupy the federal zone so they can make us into financial slaves, and it’s perfectly legal because the 7 Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude doesn’t apply inside the federal zone!

8 4.12.10.4 The voluntary nature of citizenship: Requirement for “consent” and “intent”

9 As we said in section 4.11, the act of becoming a citizens is a voluntary act and requires an intent and consent on your part.
 10 The government likes to rig its forms to deceive you into admitting that you are a “U.S. citizen” under federal statutes and
 11 the Internal Revenue Code, which most people aren’t. Whenever you see any kind of state or federal government form that 12 asks you whether you are a “U.S. citizen”, remember that they are asking about your “intent” and asking for your “consent”
 13 to treat you as a “U.S. citizen”. In doing so, what they are really asking you but can’t say outright:

14 “Do you want to volunteer to give up all of your rights and become a slave to state and federal income taxes who 15 is devoid of Constitutional rights? Do you want to be a Socialist puppet of your government?”

16 If your answer is yes, you have just volunteered into slavery and servitude to the federal government, in effect. There is 17 absolutely no advantage whatsoever to becoming a “U.S. citizen” because as we said before, your rights don’t come from 18 your citizenship, but from where you live. Even the U.S. Supreme Court says that citizenship is an optional and voluntary 19 act:

20 “The people of the United States resident within any State are subject to two governments: one State, and the
 21 other National; but there need be no conflict between the two. The powers which one possesses, the other does
 22 not. They are established for different purposes, and have separate jurisdictions. Together they make one whole,
 23 and furnish the people of the United States with a complete government, ample for the protection of all their rights
 24 at home and abroad. True, it may sometimes happen that a person is amenable to both jurisdictions for one and
 25 the same act. Thus, if a marshal of the United States is unlawfully resisted while executing the process of the
 26 courts within a State, and the resistance is accompanied by an assault on the officer, the sovereignty of the United
 27 States is violated by the resistance, and that of the State by the breach of peace, in the assault. So, too, if one
 28 passes counterfeited coin of the United States within a State, it may be an offence against the United States and
 29 the State: the United States, because it discredits the coin; and the State, because of the fraud upon him to whom
 30 it is passed. This does not, however, necessarily imply that the two governments possess powers in common, or
 31 bring them into conflict with each other. It is the natural consequence of a citizenship [92 U.S. 542, 551] which

32 owes allegiance to two sovereignties, and claims protection from both. *The citizen cannot
 33 complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself
 34 to such a form of government.* He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to 35 speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws.
 36 In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction.”
 37 [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]

38 Returning to the Cruikshank cite above and the meaning of the word “voluntarily” in the context of “U.S. citizen” status, you
 39 might at this point want to go forward to Chapter 14, which is Definitions, and look at the definition of “voluntary”. Here is 40 it again:

41 *“Voluntary: (Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575) “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by 42 another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by 43 design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of 44 choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often 45 implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance.
 46 Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary deed.”*

47 The implications here are profound, because the Supreme Court is implying here that we don’t have to choose to be statutory 48 “U.S.** citizens” because it is voluntary! Voluntary citizenship and voluntary political rights are the very heart and soul of 49 what it means to live in a free country and have liberty! We can’t be citizens by compulsion or by presumption, and must do

<sup>201</sup> See 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3) for confirmation of the fact that the only “individuals” who are “subject” to the Internal Revenue Code are aliens and nonresident aliens.

1 so by choice. We can simply be “free inhabitants” under the Articles of Confederation instead of statutory “citizens” if that
 2 status affords us the most protections for our God-give rights and liberties. The reason why citizenship MUST be voluntary
 3 is because of what we find in the Declaration of Independence, which states:

4 “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator
 5 with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure
 6 these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from 7 the consent of the governed, --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these
 8 ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation
 9 on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety
 10 and Happiness.” [emphasis added]

11 The key word here is “consent”. If you don’t want to be a “U.S. citizen” or accept the so-called “benefits” or “privileges and 12 immunities” of a highly litigious and corrupt and greedy socialist democracy, or submit yourself to its corrupt laws that are
 13 clearly in conflict with God’s sovereign laws, then you don’t have to! Consent can’t be compelled and if it is, then the 14 exercise of government power in such a case is no longer “just” as Thomas Jefferson says here, and represents “injustice”.

15 “An agreement obtained by duress, coercion, or intimidation is invalid, since the party coerced is not exercising
 16 his free will, and the test is not so much the means by which the party is compelled to execute the agreement as 17 the state of mind induced.<sup>202</sup> Duress, like fraud, rarely becomes material, except where a contract or 18 conveyance has been made which the maker wishes to avoid. As a general rule, duress renders the contract or 19 conveyance voidable, not void, at the option of the person coerced,<sup>203</sup> and it is susceptible of ratification. Like 20 other voidable contracts, it is valid until it is avoided by the person entitled to avoid it.<sup>204</sup> However, duress in 21 the form of physical compulsion, in which a party is caused to appear to assent when he has no intention of doing
 22 so, is generally deemed to render the resulting purported contract void.<sup>205</sup>”
 23 [American Jurisprudence 2d, Duress, §21 (1999)]

24 Please remember that the purpose of our court system is to effect justice, not injustice, so the courts can’t enforce that which
 25 isn’t consensual. The only exception to this rule is if a person does something that infringes on the equal rights or liberties
 26 of a bona fide, flesh and blood third party. Nonpayment of “income taxes” (which are in reality donations) does not
 27 accomplish this because the state/government isn’t a natural or real person, but an artificial legal entity that actually is a
 28 corporation. The problem is, even if your choice or consent was procured by force or fraud or trickery on the part of the 29 government or its treacherous lawyers, as it is in most cases, the judges in our corrupt federal courts are so eager to get their 30 hands in your pocket that they won’t give you the benefit of the doubt as their very own precedents and rulings clearly
 31 establish. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said about this subject:

32 “Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by 33 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be 34 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”
 35 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

36 “Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with 37 sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences.”
 38 [Brady v. United States, 397 U.S. 742, 90 S.Ct. 1463 (1970)]

39 Powerful stuff, folks! By the way, there are LOTS of similar quotes like the first quote above that use the word “taxpayer”
 40 instead of “citizen”, but we positively refuse to use them because the word “taxpayer” is a due process trap and a government
 41 scam, as you will learn later in section 5.3.1. Based on the above, if most judges really were “honorable” (which is why we 42 are supposed to call them “your honor” but also why they seldom merit that name), they would presume we are “nationals”
 43 unless and until THE GOVERNMENT meets the burden of proof that we chose to become privileged “U.S. citizens” by an

<sup>205</sup> Restatement 2d, Contracts § 174, stating that if conduct that appears to be a manifestation of assent by a party who does not intend to engage in that conduct is physically compelled by duress, the conduct is not effective as a manifestation of assent.

1 informed and deliberate choice and consent rather than by presumption and by fraud because of our own legal ignorance
 2 when filling out government forms. The foundation of this is that in our system of justice, we are “innocent until proven
 3 guilty”. In the commercial world, a contract becomes valid only when there is:

- 4 1. An offer: government offers to make us “U.S. citizens”
- 5 2. Acceptance: we accept their offer voluntarily and without duress. Being deceived constitutes duress insofar as the 6 actions of our government are concerned.
- 7 3. Consideration: receipt of the privileges and immunities of “U.S. citizen” status in our case or income tax on the part 8 of the government
- 9 4. Mutual assent by both parties: informed choice and a full understanding of the rights that are being surrendered or 10 waived in the process of procuring the perceived benefit.

11 The fourth element above is missing from the “citizenship contract” we signed when we submitted our government application
 12 for voter registration, passport, or social security benefits, and therefore the “citizenship contract” cannot and should not be
 13 legally enforced by our dishonorable courts, but it is anyway in a massive conspiracy to deprive us of rights under 18 U.S.C.
 14 §241 and in violation of the spirit and intent of the “social contract” called U.S. Constitution and that of the framers who 15 wrote it. The goal of this document is to ensure that your consent from this day forward is fully informed so that the 16 government can no longer use your own ignorance as a weapon against you to STEAL your property. After you have read
 17 this document, if you continue to remain a “U.S. citizen”, then you will have no one to blame but yourself for your inaction
 18 at eliminating that status and regaining your God-given rights. The choice to do NOTHING is a choice to remain a slave.
 19 As Sherry Peel Jackson, an X IRS Examination agent very powerfully said at the We The People Truth In Taxation Hearings
 20 on February 28, 2002 (<http://www.bostonteparty2.com>):

21 “You can remain an informed slave, or you can leave the plantation entirely!”

22 So the question is, why on earth would anyone want to “volunteer” to be a citizen of either their state or federal government
 23 and thereby volunteer to be subject to the legislative jurisdiction of our corrupt and covetous government? What if you don’t
 24 want government “protection” as the Supreme Court describes above and want to fend for yourself or better yet have God
 25 protect you? Remember that a compelled benefit is not a benefit, but slavery disguised as government benevolence! If the 26 government abuses its power by threatening anyone who doesn’t want protection [from harassment by IRS computers in the 27 collection of taxes when they aren’t paid, for instance] and thereby forces you to accept protection and to pay taxes for that
 28 protection, then government becomes nothing more than a mafia protection racket under such circumstances, who charges
 29 you for protection from its own bad deeds! This kind of arrangement is no different than Racketeer Influenced Corrupt
 30 Organizations (RICO), which is a serious crime under 18 U.S.C. §225. I certainly don’t choose to “volunteer” to be a citizen
 31 of my federal government under such compelled circumstances and you shouldn’t either.

32 We should never forget that God in the Bible clearly states that we should not be citizens of any state or government, because
 33 in doing so we surrender our sovereignty and the protection of God, and trade our God-given rights for taxable government
 34 “privileges” and protection, thereby becoming slaves!:

35 “Protection draws subjection.”
 36 [Steven Miller]

37 *“Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the 38 yoke of bondage [to the government or the income tax].”
 39 *[Galatians 5:1, Bible, NKJV]

40 “For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ”
 41 [Philippians 3:20]

42 “Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of 43 the household of God.”
 44 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

45 *“These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,
 46 embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.”*

4.12.10.5 How you unknowingly volunteered to become a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes

Armed with the knowledge that “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is entirely voluntary, let’s now examine the federal government’s definition of the term “naturalization” to determine at what point we “volunteered”:

8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(23\) naturalization defined

(a)(23) The term “naturalization” means the conferring of nationality NOT “citizenship” or “U.S. citizenship”, but “nationality”, which means “[national”] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever.

And here is the definition in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026 of naturalization:

Naturalization. The process by which a person acquires nationality [not citizenship, but nationality] after birth and becomes entitled to the privileges of U.S. citizenship. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 et seq..

In the United States collective naturalization occurs when designated groups are made citizens by treaty (as Louisiana Purchase), or by a law of Congress (as in annexation of Texas and Hawaii). Individual naturalization must follow certain steps: (a) petition for naturalization by a person of lawful age who has been a lawful resident of the United States for 5 years; (b) investigation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to determine whether the applicant can speak and write the English language, has a knowledge of the fundamentals of American government and history, is attached to the principles of the Constitution and is of good moral character; (c) hearing before a U.S. District Court or certain State courts of record; and (d) after a lapse of at least 30 days a second appearance in court when the oath of allegiance is administered.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026]

Hmmm. Well then, if you were a foreigner who was “naturalized” to become a “national” (and keep in mind that all of America is mostly a country of immigrants), then some questions arise:

1. At what point did you become a STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” under federal law, because “naturalization” didn’t do it?
2. By what means did you inform the government of your “informed choice” in this voluntary process?

The answer is that when you applied for a passport or registered to vote or participated in jury duty, the government asked you whether you were a “U.S. citizen” and you lied by saying “YES”. In effect, although you never made an informed choice to surrender your sovereign status as a “national” to become a “U.S. citizen”, you created a “presumption” on their part that you were a “U.S. citizen” just because of the erroneous paperwork you sent them which they can later use as evidence in court to prove you are a “U.S. citizen”. Even worst, they ENCOURAGED you to make it erroneous because of the way they designed the forms by not even giving you a choice on the form to indicate that you were a “national” instead of a “U.S. citizen”! By you checking the “U.S. citizen” block on their rigged forms, that is all the evidence they needed to conclude, incorrectly and to their massive financial benefit I might add, that you were a “U.S. citizen” who was “completely subject to the jurisdiction” of the United States. BAD IDEA!

Technically and lawfully, the federal government does not have the lawful authority to confer statutory “citizen of the United States***” status upon a person born inside a Union state on land that is not part of the federal zone and domiciled there. If they did, they would be “sheep poachers” who were stealing citizens from the Union states and depriving those states of control over persons born within their jurisdiction. This is so because “citizen of the United States***” status is superior and dominant over state citizenship according to the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873):

“The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen’s place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a surt and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States.”
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

Therefore, persons born in the Union states but outside the federal zone (federal areas or enclaves within the states) must be naturalized technically in order to become “citizens of the United States”. However, the rules for naturalization in the case of federal citizenship are so lax and transparent that people are fooled into thinking they always were “citizens of the United States”! Whenever you fill out a passport or voter registration form and claim you are a “citizen of the United States” or a “U.S. citizen”, for instance, even if you technically weren’t because you weren’t born inside the federal zone, then you have effectively and formally “naturalized” yourself into federal citizenship and given the government evidence admissible under penalty of perjury proving that you are a federal serf and slave!

I therefore like to think of the term “U.S. citizen” used by the Internal Revenue Service and the Internal Revenue Code as being like the sign that your enemies taped on your back in grammar school without you knowing which said “HIT ME!”, and the only people who can see the sign or understand what it means are those who work for the government and the IRS and the legal profession! Your own legal ignorance is the only reason that you don’t know that you have this sign on your back.

4.12.10.6 Presumptions about “citizen of the United States” status

The courts often “presume” you to be a statutory federal citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401, without even telling you that there are different classes of citizens. It is up to you dispute this.

“Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States, the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability.”
[U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982)]

The legal encyclopedia, American Jurisprudence, further helps explain the nature of the above presumption as shown below:

“As a general rule, it is presumed, until the contrary is shown, that every person is a citizen of the country [nation, meaning “national”] in which he or she resides.<sup>206</sup> Furthermore, once granted, citizenship is presumably retained unless voluntarily relinquished,<sup>207</sup> and the burden rests upon one alleging a change of citizenship and allegiance to establish that fact. Consequently, a person born in the United States is presumed to continue to be a citizen until the contrary is shown, and where it appears that a person was once a citizen of a particular foreign country, even though residing in another, the presumption is that he or she still remains a citizen of such foreign country, until the contrary appears.”
[3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Presumptions concerning citizenship (1999)]

The above quote is obviously written so that it could very easily mislead those who do not understand the separation of powers doctrine or the nature of federal jurisdiction. As we said earlier in section 4.5, the “United States*” is not a “nation”, but a “federation” of independent states. Within the context of The Law of Nations (see Vattel), the federal zone in combination with the 50 states are collectively considered a “country”, but not a nation. Politicians and judges do frequently refer to the federal government as the “national government” to deliberately mislead people, but you would be mistaken to conclude that we are a “nation” in the legal sense.<sup>208</sup> When the above cite says we are “presumed” to be a “citizen” of the “country in which he or she resides”, what they are saying is that we are to be presumed to be a “national” but not necessarily a statutory “citizen” under the laws of that country. The US* is a country but not a nation, while both the US** and the US*** are both a county and a nation. Therefore, if you are residing within the US** you are presumed to be a national of the US** and if you are residing in the US*** you are presumed to be a national of the US***. The word “citizen” used independently of the name of a geographic region, simply implies “national”. This confusion over definitions was not our doing, but a creation of the politicians and the courts to keep you confused and enslaved to their corrupt jurisdiction.

As we covered earlier in section 2.8.2, having a Social Security Number (SSN) also creates a rebuttable presumption that you are a “U.S. citizen”, according to the Internal Revenue Code:

26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1\(g\)

(g) Special rules for taxpayer identifying numbers issued to foreign persons—

(1) General rule—

(i) Social security number. A social security number is generally identified in the records and database of the Internal Revenue Service as a number belonging to a U.S. citizen or resident alien individual. A person may establish a different status for the number by providing proof of foreign status with the Internal Revenue Service under such procedures as the Internal Revenue Service shall prescribe, including the use of a form as the Internal Revenue Service may specify. Upon accepting an individual as a nonresident alien individual, the Internal Revenue Service will assign this status to the individual's social security number.

The reason you can rebut this presumption is that the Social Security Administration Program Operations Manual says that both “U.S. citizens” and “U.S. nationals” can participate in the Social Security program, and because foreigners can acquire a Socialist Security Number as well using an SSA Form SS-5.

To rebut the presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401, simply present your SSA Form SS-5 reflecting your correct status as a “national”, along with your birth certificate. You can also show them a copy of any of the following documents, which we show you how to prepare so as to reflect your correct citizenship status in section 4.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005:

1. Voter registration
2. Passport application
3. Government security clearance application
4. Jury summons

Using the above evidence to rebut incorrect presumptions about your citizenship status can be useful when you are filing tax returns and when you are litigating in court and you want the judge to respect your choice of citizenship status.

WARNING!: If you have a Socialist Security Number and you don’t rebut the presumption that you are a statutory “U.S. citizen” with evidence in a court proceeding, then the state and federal courts will automatically presume that you are without even telling you that they are! This can have disastrous results!

4.12.10.7 Privileges and Immunities of U.S. citizens

Statutory “U.S.** citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 do not have natural rights (constitutional civil rights) granted by God but instead have statutory civil rights granted by Congress. The rights that most people believe they have are not natural rights but civil rights which are actually franchise privileges granted by Congress to only statutory “citizens of the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Some of these statutory civil rights parallel the protection of the Bill of Rights (the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution), but by researching the Civil Rights Act along with case law decisions involving those rights, it can be shown that these so-called civil rights do not include the Ninth or Tenth Amendments and have only limited application with regard to Amendments One through Eight.

If you accept any benefit from the federal government or you claim any statutory civil right, you are making an "adhesion contract" with the federal government. You may not be aware of any adhesion contracts but the courts are. The other aspect of such a contract is that you will obey every statute that Congress passes. For example, if you want to be in receipt of the “privilege” of becoming a commissioned officer in the U.S. military, 10 U.S.C. §532(a)(1) requires that you must be a statutory “citizen of the United States**”. That same statute in paragraph (3) requires that officers must be “of good moral character”. Does supreme ignorance fit the description of “good moral character”? No one other than either an idiot or a liar would claim to be a statutory “citizen of the United States**” if they were born in a Union state outside of the federal zone and domiciled there, based on the content of this section. Does that meet the definition of “good moral character?” We think not! We must also conclude that there are an awful lot of officers in the U.S. military who don’t belong there, because the vast majority of them no doubt had to be born inside the Union states instead of inside the federal zone. Wouldn’t this make a GREAT subject for a lawsuit: getting most of the officers in the military kicked out of the military because they are not, in fact, “U.S. citizens”? Can you see just how insidious this “privilege-induced slavery” is that our government uses to trap us into their corrupt jurisdiction? The most distressing part is that it’s all based on fraud and lies, and the government in this case loves being lied to and won’t question the lies, because willfully acquiescing to lies is the only way they can manufacture “taxpayers” and idiots they can govern and have jurisdiction over!

Privileged “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 are presumed to be operating in the jurisdiction of private commercial law because that is the jurisdiction of their creator -- Congress. This is evidenced by the existence of various contracts and the use of negotiable instruments. All are products of international law or commercial law [Uniform Commercial Code]. Under Common Law your intent is important; in a court of equity and contract (commercial law) the only thing that matters is that

1 you live up to the letter of the contract. Because you have adhesion contracts with Congress, you cannot use the Constitution
 2 or Bill of Rights as a defense because it is irrelevant to the contract. As stated previously, the contract says you will obey
 3 every Act of Congress. A federal "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 does not have access to Common Law. If you doubt
 4 this, appoint a counsel of your choice and under contract who is not licensed by the socialist state to practice law to represent
 5 you in court. Go in front of the federal court and when they ask for his state bar number, tell them the counsel isn't licensed
 6 and doesn't need to be licensed. If they try to dismiss your counsel for not being licensed, cite Article 1, Section 10 of the 7 Constitution says

8 U.S. Constitution, Article 1, Section 10

9 "No State shall ... pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts,
 10 or grant any Title of Nobility."

11 By removing your counsel, they have effected a Bill of Attainder by penalizing you without a law or even a trial related to 12 attorney licensing for exercising your right to contract. They have in effect created a Title of Nobility for all those who are 13 licensed to practice law in the state. They have also penalized you in effect for exercising your right of free speech in the 14 process of removing the person you chose to be your spokesperson, who is then prevented from representing you. They have 15 done this in furtherance of the private lawyer's labor union called the American Bar Association (ABA).

16 Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment says that "citizens of the United States", which we will show later are actually
 17 "nationals" or "nationals of the United States****" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), have special "privileges and immunities"
 18 above and beyond those of purely state Citizens, but what exactly are they? The annotated Fourteenth Amendment answers
 19 this question. Below is an excerpt from the annotated Fourteenth Amendment on the "privileges and immunities" of U.S.
 20 citizens:

21 SECTION 1. RIGHTS GUARANTEED: PRIVILEGES AND IMMUNITIES

22 Unique among constitutional provisions, the privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment
 23 enjoys the distinction of having been rendered a "practical nullity" by a single decision of the Supreme Court
 24 issued within five years after its ratification. In the Slaughter-House Cases, 15 a bare majority of the Court
 25 frustrated the aims of the most aggressive sponsors of this clause, to whom was attributed an intention to
 26 centralize "in the hands of the Federal Government large powers hitherto exercised by the States" with a view to
 27 enabling business to develop unimpeded by state interference. This expansive alteration of the federal system was 28 to have been achieved by converting the rights of the citizens of each State as of the date of the adoption of the 29 Fourteenth Amendment into privileges and immunities of United States citizenship and thereafter perpetuating
 30 this newly defined status quo through judicial condemnation of any state law challenged as "abridging" any one
 31 of the latter privileges. To have fostered such intentions, the Court declared, would have been "to transfer the 32 security and protection of all the civil rights . . . to the Federal Government, . . . to bring within the power of 33 Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the States," and to "constitute this
 34 court a perpetual censor upon all legislation of the States, on the civil rights of their own citizens, with authority
 35 to nullify such as it did not approve as consistent with those rights, as they existed at the time of the adoption of
 36 this amendment. . . . [The effect of] so great a departure from the structure and spirit of our institutions . . . is to
 37 fetter and degrade the State governments by subjecting them to the control of Congress, in the exercise of powers
 38 heretofore universally conceded to them of the most ordinary and fundamental character. . . . We are convinced
 39 that no such results were intended by the Congress . . . , nor by the legislatures . . . which ratified" this amendment,
 40 and that the sole "pervading purpose" of this and the other War Amendments was "the freedom of the slave race."

41 Conformably to these conclusions, the Court advised the New Orleans butchers that the Louisiana statute,
 42 conferring on a single corporation a monopoly of the business of slaughtering cattle, abrogated no rights
 43 possessed by them as United States citizens; insofar as that law interfered with their claimed privilege of pursuing 44 the lawful calling of butchering animals, the privilege thus terminated was merely one of "those which belonged
 45 to the citizens of the States as such." Privileges and immunities of state citizenship had been "left to the state
 46 governments for security and protection" and had not been placed by this clause "under the special care of the 47 Federal Government." The only privileges which the Fourteenth Amendment protected against state
 48 encroachment were declared to be those "which owe their existence to the Federal Government, its National 49 character, its Constitution, or its laws." 16 These privileges, however, had been available to United States citizens
 50 and protected from state interference by operation of federal supremacy even prior to the adoption of the 51 Fourteenth Amendment. The Slaughter-House Cases, therefore, reduced the privileges and immunities clause to 52 a superfluous reiteration of a prohibition already operative against the states.

53 Although the Court has expressed a reluctance to attempt a definitive enumeration of those privileges and
 54 immunities of United States citizens which are protected against state encroachment, it nevertheless felt obliged 55 in the Slaughter-House Cases "to suggest some which owe their existence to the Federal Government, its National 56 character, its Constitution, or its laws." 17 Among those which it then identified were the right of access to the 57 seat of Government and to the seaports, subtreasuries, land officers, and courts of justice in the several States,

1 the right to demand protection of the Federal Government on the high seas or abroad, the right of assembly, the
 2 privilege of habeas corpus, the right to use the navigable waters of the United States, and rights secured by treaty.
 3 In Twining v. New Jersey, 18 the Court recognized "among the rights and privileges" of national citizenship the
 4 right to pass freely from State to State, 19 the right to petition Congress for a redress of grievances, 20 the right
 5 to vote for national officers, 21 the right to enter public lands, 22 the right to be protected against violence while
 6 in the lawful custody of a United States marshal, 23 and the right to inform the United States authorities of 7 violation of its laws. 24 Earlier, in a decision not mentioned in Twining, the Court had also acknowledged that
 8 the carrying on of interstate commerce is "a right which every citizen of the United States is entitled to exercise."
 9 25

10 In modern times, the Court has continued the minor role accorded to the clause, only occasionally manifesting a
 11 disposition to enlarge the restraint which it imposes upon state action. Colgate v. Harvey, 26 which was overruled
 12 five years later, 27 represented the first attempt by the Court since adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment to 13 convert the privileges and immunities clause into a source of protection of other than those "interests growing
 14 out of the relationship between the citizen and the national government." Here, the Court declared that the right
 15 of a citizen resident in one State to contract in another, to transact any lawful business, or to make a loan of 16 money, in any State other than that in which the citizen resides was a privilege of national citizenship which was 17 abridged by a state income tax law excluding from taxable income interest received on money loaned within the 18 State. In Hague v. CIO, 28 two and perhaps three justices thought that freedom to use municipal streets and parks
 19 for the dissemination of information concerning provisions of a federal statute and to assemble peacefully therein
 20 for discussion of the advantages and opportunities offered by such act was a privilege and immunity of a United 21 States citizen, and in Edwards v. California 29 four Justices were prepared to rely on the clause. 30 In Oyama v.
 22 California, 31 in a single sentence the Court agreed with the contention of a native-born youth that a state Alien
 23 Land Law, applied to work a forfeiture of property purchased in his name with funds advanced by his parent, a
 24 Japanese alien ineligible for citizenship and precluded from owning land, deprived him "of his privileges as an 25 American citizen." The right to acquire and retain property had previously not been set forth in any of the 26 enumerations as one of the privileges protected against state abridgment, although a federal statute enacted prior 27 to the proposal and ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment did confer on all citizens the same rights to 28 purchase and hold real property as white citizens enjoyed. 32

30 It is important to realize that the status of "citizen of the United States" under Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment makes 31 state citizenship "derivative and dependent" upon federal citizenship.

32 "Thus, the dual character of our citizenship is made plainly apparent. That is to say, a citizen of the United States
 33 is ipso facto and at the same time a citizen of the state in which he resides. And while the Fourteenth
 34 Amendment does not create a national citizenship, it has the effect of making that citizenship 'paramount and
 35 dominant' instead of 'derivative and dependent' upon state citizenship. 3 'In reviewing the subject,' Chief Justice
 36 White said, in the Selective Draft Law Cases, 245 U.S. 366, 377, 388 S., 389, 38 S.Ct. 159, 165, L.R.A. 1918C, 37 361, Ann.Cas. 1918B, 856: 'We have hitherto considered it as it has been argued from the point of view of the 38 Constitution as it stood prior to the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment. But to avoid all misapprehension we 39 briefly direct attention to that (the fourteenth) amendment for the purpose of pointing out, as has been frequently
 40 done in the past, how completely it broadened the national scope of the government under the Constitution by 41 causing citizenship of the United States to be paramount and dominant instead of being subordinate [296 U.S.
 42 404, 428] and derivative, and therefore operating as it does upon all the powers conferred by the Constitution
 43 leaves no possible support for the contentions made if their want of merit was otherwise not to clearly made
 44 manifest.' "
 45 [Colgate v. Harvey, 296 U.S. 404 (1935)]

46 Five years later, in Madden v. Commonwealth of Kentucky, 309 U.S. 83 (1940), the Supreme Court contradicted itself by 47 overruling Colgate v. Harvey in its majority opinion, but the above does help you to understand how the courts think about
 48 statutory "nationals". The court also ruled in Madden that the main goal of the Fourteenth Amendment was to protect Negro
 49 slaves in their freedom, and was therefore not intended to apply to the rest of the predominantly white population.

50 "This Court declared in the Slaughter-House Cases<sup>15</sup> that the Fourteenth Amendment as well as the Thirteenth
 51 and Fifteenth were adopted to protect the negroes in their freedom. This almost contemporaneous interpretation
 52 extended the benefits of the privileges and immunities clause to other rights which are inherent in national 53 citizenship but denied it to those which spring from [309 U.S. 83, 92] state citizenship."

55 4.12.10.8 Definitions of federal citizenship terms

56 We'd like to clarify one more very important point about the meaning of the term "citizen of the United States" based on the 57 definition of "naturalization" offered earlier. Because "naturalization" is defined statutorily in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(23\) as the 58 process of conferring "nationality" rather than "federal U.S. citizen" status, then some people believe that the "citizen of the United States” that section 1 of the Fourteenth is referring to must actually be that of a “national” rather than “U.S. citizen”. We agree wholeheartedly with this conclusion. Government has deliberately confused definitions to deceive you.

There is additional evidence found earlier in section 4.5 which corroborates the view that a “citizen of the United States” mentioned repeatedly by the Supreme Court is actually a “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). In that section, we quoted the Black’s Law Dictionary Fourth Edition definition of “National Government” as well as the Supreme Court case of Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793) to conclusively show that the “United States” is not a “nation”, but a “federation” of sovereign states. Now if the “United States” is defined as a “federation” and not a “nation”, then what exactly does it mean to say that a person is a “national”? What “nation” are they a “citizen” of under such a circumstance if it isn’t the “United States”? Well, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) answers this question authoritatively:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a)(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

It’s important to realize that federal statutes and most “acts of Congress” are simply municipal legislation that only have force and effect over the federal zone in most cases. The term “state” in the context of federal statutes, since it is not capitalized, means a foreign state, which can either be a foreign country or a state of the Union. So it is therefore reasonable to conclude that a “national” can only mean a person born in a state of the Union or a foreign country to parents who were also “nationals” and who owes allegiance to the federation of states called the “United States”.

If you were born in a state of the Union, you are a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), and this is so because of section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment and state law, and not because of any federal statute. The courts of your state, in fact, have the authority under the Law of Nations to declare your “citizen of the United States” status under the Fourteenth Amendment based on your birth certificate. Remember always that Congress wears two hats:

1. The equivalent of a state government over the federal zone.
2. An independent contractor for the states of the union that handles external affairs for the entire country only.

The laws that Congress writes pertain to one of these two political jurisdictions, and it is often difficult to tell which of these two that a specific federal law applies to. The only thing that federal statutes pertain to in most cases are statutory federal “U.S. citizens” or “citizens and nationals of the United States” as defined under 8 U.S.C. §1401, which are people who are born anywhere in the country but domiciled on federal property that is within the federal zone, because Congress is the municipal “city hall” for the federal zone. The “States” they legislate for in this capacity are federal “States”, which are in fact territories and possessions of the United States such as Guam and Puerto Rico. Federal statutes and the U.S. Codes do not and cannot address what happens to people who are born in a state of the Union because Congress has no police power or legislative jurisdiction over states of the Union for the vast majority of subject matters. All legislation and statutes of the states, including the power of taxation of internal commerce, are “plenary” and exclusive within their own respective territorial jurisdictions. Therefore, don’t go looking for a federal statute that confers citizenship upon you as someone who was born in a state of the Union, because there isn’t one! No government is authorized to write legislation that operates outside its territory, which is called “extraterritorial legislation”.

“The Constitution of the United States [before the Fourteenth Amendment] does not declare who are and who are not its citizens, nor does it attempt to describe the constituent elements of citizenship; it leaves that quality where it found it, resting upon the fact of home birth and upon the laws of the several states.”
 [8 U.S.C. §1401, Notes]

A “citizen” in the context of most federal statutes is someone who is either born or naturalized in federal territory within the federal “United States” (federal zone). A “national”, however, is someone who was born anywhere within the country called the “United States”. A “citizen” in state statutes and regulations usually refers to someone who is a state citizen, and not necessarily a federal citizen. These points are very important to remember as you read through this book.

So how do we conclusively relate what a “citizen of the United States” is under the Fourteenth Amendment to a specific citizenship status found in federal statutes? We have to look at Title 8, Aliens and Nationality and compare the terms they use to describe each and reach our own conclusions, because the government gives us absolutely no help doing this. Does it surprise you that the Master doesn’t want to educate the slaves how to take off their chains by eliminating their captivity to “words of art”? Title 8 of the U.S. Code does not even define “U.S. citizen” and only defines the term “citizens and nationals

1 of the United States” in 8 U.S.C. §1401 or “nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth” in 8 U.S.C. §1408. Upon
2 trying to resolve the distinctions between these two terms and how they relate to the term “citizen of the United States” used
3 in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment, we searched diligently for authorities and found no authority or cite in federal
4 statutes that makes the term “citizens and nationals of the United States” used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 equivalent to the term
5 “citizen of the United States” used in section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment or the term “citizen” used in the 26 C.F.R.
6 §1.1-1.

7 Both the IRC in Subtitle A of Title 26 and Title 8 of the U.S.C. use equivalent definitions for “United States” (see 26 U.S.C.
8 §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f)), and all three mean the federal zone only. The
9 “citizen” appearing in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1, is a federal “U.S. citizen” only, which is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 as a
10 person born in Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, or American Samoa, which are all territories or possessions of the United 11 States. The “citizens and nationals of the United States” appearing in the 8 U.S.C. §1401 are the same federal “U.S.**
12 citizens” as that appearing in Title 26 and are equivalent. If you are a “national” or “state national” born in a state of the 13 Union, you should never admit to being a “U.S. citizen” or a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes or the 14 Internal Revenue Code because people born in states of the Union are the equivalent of a “National” under federal statutes or 15 “citizens of the United States” under the Fourteenth Amendment.

16 We believe the confusion the government has created by mixing up the meanings of “citizenship” and “nationality” in federal
17 statutes and cases construing them is deliberate, and is meant to help induce ignorant Americans everywhere into falsely
18 claiming they are “U.S. citizens” on their tax returns and voter registration, which is defined as an entirely different type of 19 citizenship under Title 26 than the one referred to in either the Fourteenth Amendment as “citizens of the United States” or 20 the cases construing it that we mention in this section. We will now summarize our findings and research in graphical form 21 to make the definitions and distinctions we have just made crystal clear:
22

Based on the above, there is no legal basis to conclude that a “citizen of the United States**” under the tax code at 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 and a “citizen of the United States***” as used by the Supreme Court or the Fourteenth Amendment, are equivalent because nowhere in the law are they made equivalent, and each depends on a different definition of “United States”. However, if you read through court cases on citizenship, you will find that the federal courts like to create a false “presumption” that they are equivalent in order to help expand federal jurisdiction. If you want to understand the meanings of the terms provided above, you will therefore have to read through all of the authorities cited above and convince yourself of the validity of the table.

If you look closely at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c) where income taxes are “imposed”, you will find that it does not use or define “U.S. citizen” but does refer to “citizens”. Remember that under 26 U.S.C. §7806(b), the title of a section or subsection in the Internal Revenue Code has no legal significance. Since that regulation implements 26 U.S.C. §1, which imposes the tax on “individuals”, one can “presume” but not conclusively prove that the regulation is describing what a “U.S. citizen” is under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Keep in mind, however, that the term “citizen” refers to the federal United States** in the Internal Revenue Code because of the definition it depends on in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and \(a\)\(10\). Nowhere in Titles 8 or 26, however, are the terms “U.S. citizen” and “citizen of the United States” ever correlated or identified as being equivalent, but we must conclude that they are the same because the definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) are equivalent and include only the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States.

4.12.10.9 Further Study

If you want to know who the Social Security Administration thinks is a “U.S. citizen”, refer to the link below, which is a section from the SSA’s Program Operation Manual System (POMS). Note that all the references in the POMS manual we are about to cite below use the term “State” and “United States” as meaning federal States and the federal United States** only. The link below from POMS is entitled “Who is a U.S. citizen”:

<https://secure.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lnx/0200303120>

Another useful link in the SSA’s POMS manual is the section entitled “GN 00303.100 United States (U.S.) Citizenship”:

<https://secure.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lnx/0200303100>

And finally, another useful section from the POMS manual on the SSA website is entitled “GN 00303.001 Requirement of U.S. Citizenship or Appropriate Alien Status” at:

<https://secure.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/lnx/0200303001>

In conclusion, we need not be afraid because we are not legally obligated to be federal statutory citizens or “U.S.** citizens” and can choose to be a constitutional “citizen of the United States***” (or natural born Sovereign). State Citizens are also called “non-residents” in federal statutes. Our right of choosing our statutory federal citizenship is absolute and cannot be abridged. One can become a “national of the United States***” (a state only citizen) without being a statutory “citizen of the United States**” (a federal statutory citizen). That is why we repeatedly advise expatriating from federal United States** citizenship in section 4.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005.

WARNING: The feds apparently are so sure that you will be angry and violent after finding out the devious scam they played with “U.S. citizenship” that they made it illegal to be a gun dealer if you were once a U.S. citizen and renounced your statutory “U.S. citizen” status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 to become a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21)! Take a look at 18 U.S.C. §922\(g\)\(7\) to see for yourself at:

<https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/18/922>

Note that because Constitutional rights only apply in the sovereign 50 Union states, this statute can only apply inside the federal zone.

For further detailed information on federal citizenship, we refer you to section 3.8.10 on the Fourteenth Amendment.

4.12.11 Citizenship and all political rights are INVOLUNTARILY exercised and therefore CANNOT be taxable and cannot be called “privileges”

Earlier in section 4.12.8 on Federal (U.S.) citizens, we quoted the U.S. Supreme Court as saying that federal and state citizenship were “voluntary”. Here is the quote:

“The citizen cannot complain, because he has voluntarily submitted himself to such a form of government. He owes allegiance to the two departments, so to speak, and within their respective spheres must pay the penalties which each exacts for disobedience to its laws. In return, he can demand protection from each within its own jurisdiction.”
[United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875) [emphasis added]]

And here is another similar quote by the same U.S. Supreme Court:

“A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself.”
[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

This section will examine this rather flawed premise of the U.S. Supreme Court in extreme detail to very clearly prove beyond any doubt not only that citizenship is not and cannot be “voluntary” or “consensual”, but also that all the “political rights” that circumscribe how we exercise our citizenship are in fact compelled and involuntary. By proving this flawed premise of the U.S. Supreme Court incorrect, we open up the following intriguing possibilities:

1. Contrary to what the U.S. Supreme Court said above, those misguided individuals who do choose to become second class “U.S. citizens” do have a right to complain because their participation is coerced and involuntary.
2. We have a right to avoid government compulsion and compulsion from our fellow citizens by refusing to be “citizens” and refusing to exercise our civic duties.
3. If we choose to not participate as citizens in society, then the reward is not being subject to the laws of the government, which in most cases are dishonest and corrupt and covetous anyway. We are citizens of Heaven and not of Earth anyway (see Phil. 3:20). Once we are not subject to the laws of a society, it no longer matters what our fellow citizens do to the law to corrupt it for their own personal benefit, because we are sovereigns who are immune from government regulation for the most part. If we aren't paying taxes and the government can't do anything to control or regulate us, does it matter whether we have "taxation without representation"?

What is a "political right"? Below is the definition of that term from Black's Law Dictionary:

Political rights. Those which may be exercised in the formation or administration of the government. Rights of citizens established or recognized by constitutions which give them the power to participate directly or indirectly in the establishment or administration of the government.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1159]

Political rights include such things as:

Table 4-36: Political rights

| Political right                     | Category |
|--------------------------------------------|-----------------|
| Voting                                     | Representation  |
| Jury service                               | Representation  |
| Serving in or running for political office | Representation  |
| Paying taxes                               | Taxation        |

The concept of political rights and citizenship are tied together, and the reason they are tied together is that taxation and representation must be tied together in order to have a stable government. When taxation and representation are not tied together, governments become unstable and the people will eventually revolt. We therefore show in the above table the correlation between political rights on the left, and taxation and representation on the right. Remember that one of the main reasons for the American Revolution was to protest "taxation without representation". The British colonies that comprised America at the time were paying taxes but had no say in their government in how those taxes were spent, and they didn't like it so they started a revolution against Britain: the American Revolution! The representation part of political rights comes from voting, jury service, and serving in political office. The definition of "citizen" from the legal dictionary confirms the linkage between political rights and citizenship:

citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.

"Citizens" are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

The term may include or apply to children of alien parents from in United States, Von Schwertmer v. Piper, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d. 862, 863; U.S. v. Minoru Yasui, D.C.Or., 48 F.Supp. 40, 54; children of American citizens born outside United States, Haaland v. Attorney General of United States, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 13, 22; Indians, United States v. Hester, C.C.A.Okla., 137 F.2d. 145, 147; National Banks, American Surety Co. v. Bank of California, C.C.A.Or., 133 F.2d. 160, 162; nonresident who has qualified as administratrix of estate of deceased resident, Hunt v. Noll, C.C.A.Tenn., 112 F.2d. 288, 289. However, neither the United States nor a state is a citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. Jizemerjian v. Dept of Air Force, 457 F.Supp. 820. On the other hand, municipalities and other local governments are deemed to be citizens. Rieser v. District of Columbia, 563 F.2d. 462. A corporation is not a citizen for purposes of privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. D.D.B. Realty Corp. v. Merrill, 232 F.Supp. 629, 637.

Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const. Article III's diversity clause, a person is a "citizen of a state" if he or she is a citizen of the United States and a domiciliary of a state of the United States. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116. [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

Note from above definition of "citizen" that when you become a citizen, you choose to subject yourself to the laws of the political community or jurisdiction of which you are part. This is very important. We speculate that the reasoning behind this requirement is that you can't have the protection of laws that you yourself refuse to obey, because this would be hypocritical. In the case of federal statutes and "legislative jurisdiction" and "Acts of Congress", of which the Internal Revenue Code is a part, however, you don't need to be subject to them because for the most part, they only apply inside the federal zone anyway, and most Americans don't live in the federal zone.

1 The other thing that the above definition of “citizen” helps us to understand is that our government has defined citizenship
 2 such that political rights depend on our citizenship status, while the rest of our rights depend on where we reside. Look at 3 these excerpts from the definition of “citizen” again:

4 “...owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights...”

5 “Citizens’ are members of a political community who... submitted themselves to the dominion of a government
 6 for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights.
 7 Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.”

8 The implication of the above definition of “citizen” is that unless we are citizens, we do not have full civil rights. Based on
 9 the logic above, if we are not citizens, our civil rights are protected by (but we are not “subject to” or “subservient to”) the 10 Bill of Rights and the rest of the Constitution, but we can only get political rights by becoming citizens, based on the 11 government’s definition of “citizen” and “political rights”. There is a paradox here folks. Can you see it? We should always
 12 be looking for paradoxes and “cognitive dissonance” of this kind in order to properly challenge jurisdiction. Remember once
 13 again:

14 “If it doesn’t make sense, it’s probably because politics is involved.”

15 Here is “the rest of the story”, as Paul Harvey liked to say, that the government won’t tell you. Remember that from earlier
 16 discussions in sections 4.2 through 4.3.4, a right is not something the government can interfere with or take away or regulate
 17 or revoke or that is subject to their discretion or any aspect of our voluntary behavior. If the existence of our rights is 18 conditional or based on any aspect of government discretion, then they aren’t rights, but privileges disguised as rights!
 19 The government can lawfully interfere with and regulate the exercise of privileges, but not with rights. Consequently, what 20 our deceitful government calls “political rights” in the definition above really aren’t “rights” at all, but “privileges” which
 21 depend on the voluntary decision to accept statutory citizenship (which is a behavior) and the privileges that go with statutory
 22 citizenship. Consequently, our government has made both citizenship and political participation in the affairs of government
 23 into a statutory privilege and not a right.

24 The most important thing that we should have learned from this chapter is that whenever we receive a government privilege
 25 there will be strings attached that will destroy our rights. In this case, receipt of the “citizenship” privilege makes us subject
 26 to taxation and regulation and jurisdiction by the federal government, none of which we need or want, nor will such status
 27 protect or enhance our rights or liberties, but rather destroy them. We repeat the quote from the beginning of section 4.4.12
 28 to make this point crystal clear:

29 “In the matter of taxation, every privilege is an injustice.”
 30 [Voltaire ]

31 Your covetous politicians are trying to fool you into thinking that it wasn’t a “privilege” you accepted by calling it “political 32 rights”, but we have already established that it cannot be a right if it is conditioned on anything or on any aspect of your
 33 voluntary behavior, including the choice to become a “citizen”. Once again, our deceitful government has entrapped us with 34 word games. If they are going to call it a “political right”, then they better treat it as right and remove the requirement to be 35 a citizen in order to exercise that right, so that we really do have “rights” instead of “privileges” masquerading as “counterfeit 36 rights”. As I like to say:

37 If you want people to swallow a piece of shit, you have to wrap it in a pretty package by coating it in chocolate
 38 and calling it a “Babe Ruth” candy bar.

39 In this case, the “chocolate coating” for the “shit” you don’t want to swallow called “citizenship” is the word “right” in 40 “political rights”! Please pardon our language, but we just couldn’t resist this very appropriate metaphor!

41 One of our readers, after reading the foregoing analysis of “citizenship” and “political rights”, responded by saying:

42 “But how are you going to keep foreigners from voting so they don’t commit treason and trash the country?”

43 The answer is that so long as people are born in United States*** of America, not United States** the federal zone, and as 44 long as they have allegiance to the United States*** of America, rather than the federal corporation called the United States**,
 45 then they should be able to vote because they have the best interests of the country in mind when they have allegiance to it.
 46 The status of being both born in the United States*** of America and having allegiance to it, collectively, is called “U.S.

nationality”, and not “U.S. citizenship”, and you will find out later in section 4.12.12 what being a “national” means, why that is the status you want to have, and why you don’t have to pay taxes or be in receipt of government privileges to have that status. You will also find out in that section that most states have colluded to deprive you of your rights by passing laws to force you to become a “U.S. citizen” in order to exercise political rights such as voting or serving on jury duty. The federal government has added to this injury by messing with the passport application forms to make it look like you have to be a privileged “U.S. citizen” in order to get a U.S. passport, but this also is not a lawful requirement. The states and the federal government have conspired against your rights in this fashion because they want to:

1. Force you to lie to them in saying that you are a “U.S. citizen”, in direct violation of the ten commandments, which says in Exodus 20:16 that we shall not bear false witness. Remember our analysis in section 4.12.10.1: to be a “U.S. citizen”, you must be born in the federal United States (federal zone) in an area subject to the sovereignty of the United States Government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution. Most Americans are not born there and more properly are classified as “nationals” born outside the federal United States**.
2. Break down the separation of powers between the federal and state governments, and force you to serve two masters instead of one, in direct violation of the bible, Luke 16:13 (“...no man can serve two masters..”). The lie you committed by simultaneously declaring yourself to be both a U.S. and a state citizen also violates the rulings of the Supreme Court in U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995) and the intent of the constitution, which says:

We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S. Const., Art. I, § 8. As James Madison wrote, “[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.” The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally mandated division of authority "was adopted by the Framers to ensure protection of our fundamental liberties." Gregory v. Ashcroft, 501 U.S. 452, 458 (1991) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.

Remember that by default, all federal legislation and “Acts of Congress” only apply inside the federal zone, and we will explain this matter in great detail in section 5.2 and subsections. But if the thieves and robbers who are our elected leaders can make you a “citizen” in receipt of “privileges”, then they can make you subject to their laws even if you don’t live on their property. By doing so, they can make you into property and a franchise of the United States government and treat you as though you occupy the federal zone anyway. Sneaky, huh? At that point, these covetous and arrogant thugs and murderers have succeeded in breaking down the wall of separation between the state and federal jurisdictions at great injury to your liberties. They have then forced you to serve two masters in direct violation of the bible in Luke 16:13. Ultimately, this leads to socialism, tyranny, and an oppression of and conspiracy against your constitutional rights, as we explain throughout this book.

3. Once the government “thugs”, murderers, and thieves coax you into the federal zone, they can then legally deprive you of your constitutional rights and make you a slave of income taxes and not be held accountable by the courts or the law for their actions of trespass on your person, property, and liberty. The constitution and bill of rights, remember, do not apply in the federal zone. That is why we call the federal zone the “plunder and fraud” zone.

Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court warned us that this was going to happen in his dissenting opinion found in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901):

"The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country substantially two national governments; one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to.. I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.. It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution."
[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

1 When are people going to wake up? We believe the foregoing analysis also explains why there is a long term trend toward
 2 reduced participation of the people in the political process. Most states require you to be a “U.S. citizens” to vote and they
 3 do it so they can use voting as a way to get jurisdiction to impose income taxes. If corrupt politicians and lawyers writing
 4 our state laws have forced the people to give up their constitutional rights and their sovereignty and be subject to unwanted
 5 socialist federal jurisdiction in order to participate in the political process and have “political rights”, is it any wonder that
 6 they no longer wish to participate? If our state governments sincerely want to fix the problem of low voter turnout and people
 7 being unwilling to serve on jury duty, then what they need to do is:

- 8 1. Admit in their election literature that most people are “nationals” and not “U.S. citizens”.
- 9 2. Remove the legal requirement to be a “U.S. citizen” in order to vote or serve on jury duty. Instead, make the requirement
 10 that they must be “nationals” instead, under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 11 3. Tell people that by serving on jury duty and participating in elections, they are defending their liberty and that if they 12 don’t, the government and the laws will become corrupted. The state should remind people that keeping our government
 13 and the state laws honest and limited in power is everyone’s job.

14 Of course, if the states did this, most of them would lose their jurisdiction to impose state income taxes. Don’t hold your 15 breath waiting for them to do the honorable thing documented above, because you will die of suffocation!

16 “The love of money is the root of all evil.”
 17 [1 Tim. 6:10, Bible, NKJV]

18 In satisfying the goals of this section on the subject of political rights, we rely mainly upon the writings of Lysander Spooner
 19 and his brilliant essay entitled No Treason: The Constitution of No Authority, Lysander Spooner available on our website at:

20 <http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Indiv/SpoonerLysander/NoTreason.htm>

21 In the above essay, Lysander Spooner uses reason and common sense alone to examine the two most important aspects of
 22 citizenship, that of voting and paying taxes, and concludes that the only reason people do these things is for selfish reasons
 23 and in defense of their personal liberties from what he aptly calls “bands of robbers, tyrants, and murderers” who he says
 24 inhabit “the government”. His analysis is so compelling and indisputable that we repeat it here for your benefit and 25 edification. His essay is also so irreverent towards the government and public “servants” (tyrants) that it is funny!

26 What Lysander does is simply prove that the exercise of civic responsibility in the form of voting and payment of taxes are
 27 done under compulsion from the government and under the implied influence and duress and coercion by other of his fellow
 28 citizens within a competitive and dog-eat-dog, democracy, who will trample his natural rights if he isn’t politically involved
 29 and doesn’t defend those rights by vigilantly exercising all of his civic responsibilities.

30 We’ll start off the analysis in subsequent sections with a legal definition of the word “voluntary”:

 32 Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and
 33 unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without
 34 compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without
 35 valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration;
 36 as, a voluntary deed.”
 37 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

38 In the next few subsections, we’ll examine each aspect of political rights individually. However, before we start looking at 39 the trees, consider the forest and the bigger picture. For instance, have you ever considered that our life and our existence
 40 itself is involuntary? We never asked to be here: our parents chose to put us here without our consent or involvement. Life
 41 was an involuntary gift from our parents to us and we couldn’t choose whether we wanted it or not before we received it.
 42 Our very existence is involuntary and nonconsensual! Everything we do after we are born and come into existence in order
 43 to maintain and protect a life that we never asked for to begin with is involuntary, because our very life is involuntary. This
 44 life, in fact, is a “death sentence” by God Himself for the original sin of Adam and Eve documented in the bible in the book
 45 of Genesis in chapter 3. Because Adam and Eve sinned by disobeying God and eating the fruit, and because the “wages of 46 sin is death” (Romans 6:23), then His sentence was a death sentence. Before that sentence, Adam and Eve were immortal.
 47 In that context, God was the “judge” who administered His righteous death sentence according to His Laws. Recall also that 48 the Fifth Amendment of our Constitution prohibits double jeopardy, which is two trials and two sentences for the same crime.

If God already sentenced us to death for our sin, then the Fifth amendment is violated if the government tries to punish us a second time with direct taxes in the process of toiling to sustain and support a life we never asked for to begin with.

Remember the definition of “voluntary” above: “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence”. In this case, that unwanted influence came from a combination of our parents bringing us into existence, and God allowing them to do that. Every other argument about political rights derives from this higher argument and is a product of reason and common sense, which are rare entities indeed in today’s society and especially among democratic candidates. We have an article on our Life web page of our website from the French Supreme Court where one individual born with birth defects sued his doctor for the right to NOT be born because it was suffering for him! See the article for yourself:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/AbortionCloning/News/RightNotToBeBorn.htm>

Common sense also confirms the validity of this premise. For instance, many parents choose not to have children because they don’t want to force their children to undergo poverty or an unpleasant lifestyle in a corrupted or crowded society. Note that word “force”. That argument applies to the author, for instance. Why would I want to bring more willing federal slaves and serfs to an illegal income tax into the world to serve a corrupted government unless and until our tax system is reformed?

As yet another example of why life is involuntary, the rate of teen suicide in America today is the highest it has ever been. Those teens who choose suicide have chosen to give back a gift from their parents that they apparently don’t appreciate or want. We would argue that the reason these teens are committing suicide is because our public/government schools have become antiseptic prison houses devoid of God or any spiritual training. They have become training camps to brainwash gullible youth into becoming federal serfs. Our public schools are fool factories where psychologists are making children into drug addicts and forcing them in unprecedented numbers to take mind altering drugs to make them submissive to authority. Nonconformity and questioning of authority is punished, not encouraged or developed as the product of an inquisitive and sovereign mind and person.

If you would like to look at what the citizenship requirements for various political rights are within your state, we have compiled a listing by state at the web address below:

4.12.11.1 Voting<sup>209</sup>

All the voting that has ever taken place under the Constitution, has been of such a kind that it not only did not pledge the whole people to support the Constitution, but it did not even pledge any one of them to do so, as the following considerations show.

1. In the very nature of things, the act of voting could bind nobody but the actual voters. But owing to the property qualifications required, it is probable that, during the first twenty or thirty years under the Constitution, not more than one-tenth, fifteenth, or perhaps twentieth of the whole population (black and white, men, women, and minors) were permitted to vote. Consequently, so far as voting was concerned, not more than one-tenth, fifteenth, or twentieth of those then existing, could have incurred any obligation to support the Constitution.

At the present time [1869], it is probable that not more than one-sixth of the whole population are permitted to vote. Consequently, so far as voting is concerned, the other five-sixths can have given no pledge that they will support the Constitution.

2. Of the one-sixth that are permitted to vote, probably not more than two-thirds (about one-ninth of the whole population) have usually voted. Many never vote at all. Many vote only once in two, three, five, or ten years, in periods of great excitement.

No one, by voting, can be said to pledge himself for any longer period than that for which he votes. If, for example, I vote for an officer who is to hold his office for only a year, I cannot be said to have thereby pledged myself to support the government beyond that term. Therefore, on the ground of actual voting, it probably cannot be said that more than one-ninth or one-eighth,

1 of the whole population are usually under any pledge to support the Constitution. [In recent years, since 1940, the number of
2 voters in elections has usually fluctuated between one-third and two-fifths of the populace.]

3 3. It cannot be said that, by voting, a man pledges himself to support the Constitution, unless the act of voting be a perfectly
4 voluntary one on his part. Yet the act of voting cannot properly be called a voluntary one on the part of any very large number
5 of those who do vote. It is rather a measure of necessity imposed upon them by others, than one of their own choice. On this
6 point I repeat what was said in a former number, viz.:

7 *"In truth, in the case of individuals, their actual voting is not to be taken as proof of consent, even for the time
8 being. On the contrary, it is to be considered that, without his consent having even been asked a man finds himself
9 environed by a government that he cannot resist; a government that forces him to pay money, render service, and
10 forego the exercise of many of his natural rights, under peril of weighty punishments. He sees, too, that other men
11 practice this tyranny over him by the use of the ballot. He sees further, that, if he will but use the ballot himself,
12 he has some chance of relieving himself from this tyranny of others, by subjecting them to his own. In short, he
13 finds himself, without his consent, so situated that, if he use the ballot, he may become a master; if he does not
14 use it, he must become a slave. And he has no other alternative than these two. In self- defence, he attempts the 15 former. His case is analogous to that of a man who has been forced into battle, where he must either kill others,
16 or be killed himself. Because, to save his own life in battle, a man takes the lives of his opponents, it is not to be
17 inferred that the battle is one of his own choosing. Neither in contests with the ballot -- which is a mere substitute
18 for a bullet -- because, as his only chance of self- preservation, a man uses a ballot, is it to be inferred that the 19 contest is one into which he voluntarily entered; that he voluntarily set up all his own natural rights, as a stake
20 against those of others, to be lost or won by the mere power of numbers. On the contrary, it is to be considered
21 that, in an exigency into which he had been forced by others, and in which no other means of self-defense offered, 22 he, as a matter of necessity, used the only one that was left to him.*

23 *"Doubtless the most miserable of men, under the most oppressive government in the world, if allowed the ballot,
24 would use it, if they could see any chance of thereby meliorating their condition. But it would not, therefore, be a
25 legitimate inference that the government itself, that crushes them, was one which they had voluntarily set up, or 26 even consented to.*

27 *"Therefore, a man's voting under the Constitution of the United States, is not to be taken as evidence that he ever
28 freely assented to the Constitution, even for the time being. Consequently we have no proof that any very large
29 portion, even of the actual voters of the United States, ever really and voluntarily consented to the Constitution,
30 EVEN FOR THE TIME BEING. Nor can we ever have such proof, until every man is left perfectly free to consent, 31 or not, without thereby subjecting himself or his property to be disturbed or injured by others."*

32 As we can have no legal knowledge as to who votes from choice, and who from the necessity thus forced upon him, we can
33 have no legal knowledge, as to any particular individual, that he voted from choice; or, consequently, that by voting, he
34 consented, or pledged himself, to support the government. Legally speaking, therefore, the act of voting utterly fails to pledge
35 ANY ONE to support the government. It utterly fails to prove that the government rests upon the voluntary support of 36 anybody. On general principles of law and reason, it cannot be said that the government has any voluntary supporters at all,
37 until it can be distinctly shown who its voluntary supporters are.

38 4. As taxation is made compulsory on all, whether they vote or not, a large proportion of those who vote, no doubt do so to 39 prevent their own money being used against themselves; when, in fact, they would have gladly abstained from voting, if they
40 could thereby have saved themselves from taxation alone, to say nothing of being saved from all the other usurpations and 41 tyrannies of the government. To take a man's property without his consent, and then to infer his consent because he attempts,
42 by voting, to prevent that property from being used to his injury, is a very insufficient proof of his consent to support the 43 Constitution. It is, in fact, no proof at all. And as we can have no legal knowledge as to who the particular individuals are, if 44 there are any, who are willing to be taxed for the sake of voting, we can have no legal knowledge that any particular individual
45 consents to be taxed for the sake of voting; or, consequently, consents to support the Constitution.

46 5. At nearly all elections, votes are given for various candidates for the same office. Those who vote for the unsuccessful
47 candidates cannot properly be said to have voted to sustain the Constitution. They may, with more reason, be supposed to 48 have voted, not to support the Constitution, but specially to prevent the tyranny which they anticipate the successful candidate
49 intends to practice upon them under color of the Constitution; and therefore may reasonably be supposed to have voted against 50 the Constitution itself. This supposition is the more reasonable, inasmuch as such voting is the only mode allowed to them of 51 expressing their dissent to the Constitution.

52 6. Many votes are usually given for candidates who have no prospect of success. Those who give such votes may reasonably
53 be supposed to have voted as they did, with a special intention, not to support, but to obstruct the execution of, the 54 Constitution; and, therefore, against the Constitution itself.

1 7. As all the different votes are given secretly (by secret ballot), there is no legal means of knowing, from the votes themselves,
2 who votes for, and who votes against, the Constitution. Therefore, voting affords no legal evidence that any particular
3 individual supports the Constitution. And where there can be no legal evidence that any particular individual supports the 4 Constitution, it cannot legally be said that anybody supports it. It is clearly impossible to have any legal proof of the intentions
5 of large numbers of men, where there can be no legal proof of the intentions of any particular one of them.

6 8. There being no legal proof of any man's intentions, in voting, we can only conjecture them. As a conjecture, it is probable,
7 that a very large proportion of those who vote, do so on this principle, viz., that if, by voting, they could but get the government
8 into their own hands (or that of their friends), and use its powers against their opponents, they would then willingly support
9 the Constitution; but if their opponents are to have the power, and use it against them, then they would NOT willingly support
10 the Constitution.

11 In short, men's voluntary support of the Constitution is doubtless, in most cases, wholly contingent upon the question whether,
12 by means of the Constitution, they can make themselves masters, or are to be made slaves.

13 Such contingent consent as that is, in law and reason, no consent at all.

14 9. As everybody who supports the Constitution by voting (if there are any such) does so secretly (by secret ballot), and in a
15 way to avoid all personal responsibility for the acts of his agents or representatives, it cannot legally or reasonably be said
16 that anybody at all supports the Constitution by voting. No man can reasonably or legally be said to do such a thing as assent
17 to, or support, the Constitution, unless he does it openly, and in a way to make himself personally responsible for the acts of 18 his agents, so long as they act within the limits of the power he delegates to them.

19 10. As all voting is secret (by secret ballot), and as all secret governments are necessarily only secret bands of robbers, tyrants,
20 and murderers, the general fact that our government is practically carried on by means of such voting, only proves that there
21 is among us a secret band of robbers, tyrants, and murderers, whose purpose is to rob, enslave, and, so far as necessary to 22 accomplish their purposes, murder, the rest of the people. The simple fact of the existence of such a band does nothing towards 23 proving that "the people of the United States," or any one of them, voluntarily supports the Constitution.

24 For all the reasons that have now been given, voting furnishes no legal evidence as to who the particular individuals are (if 25 there are any), who voluntarily support the Constitution. It therefore furnishes no legal evidence that anybody supports it 26 voluntarily.

27 So far, therefore, as voting is concerned, the Constitution, legally speaking, has no supporters at all.

28 And, as a matter of fact, there is not the slightest probability that the Constitution has a single bona fide supporter in the 29 country. That is to say, there is not the slightest probability that there is a single man in the country, who both understands 30 what the Constitution really is, and sincerely supports it for what it really is.

31 The ostensible supporters of the Constitution, like the ostensible supporters of most other governments, are made up of three 32 classes, viz.: 1. Knaves, a numerous and active class, who see in the government an instrument which they can use for their 33 own aggrandizement or wealth. 2. Dupes -- a large class, no doubt -- each of whom, because he is allowed one voice out of 34 millions in deciding what he may do with his own person and his own property, and because he is permitted to have the same
35 voice in robbing, enslaving, and murdering others, that others have in robbing, enslaving, and murdering himself, is stupid
36 enough to imagine that he is a "free man," a "sovereign"; that this is "a free government"; "a government of equal rights,"
37 "the best government on earth,"<sup>210</sup> and such like absurdities. 3. A class who have some appreciation of the evils of government,
38 but either do not see how to get rid of them, or do not choose to so far sacrifice their private interests as to give themselves
39 seriously and earnestly to the work of making a change.

40 Lastly, the Fifteenth and the Nineteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution collectively make it a right for "citizens of the 41 United States" to vote which cannot be abridged on the basis of race, color, previous servitude, or sex. Since the "citizen"
42 they are talking about is in the Constitution and the "United States" in the Constitution means the states of the Union, then
43 that means they are referring to people born in states of the Union. Based on the definition of "national" in 8 U.S.C.
44 §1101\(a\)\(21\), calling yourself a "national" under federal law is the equivalent of calling yourself a "citizen of the United 45 States" in the Constitution. However, whenever you fill out any government form, if you are "citizen of the United States"

<sup>210</sup> Suppose it be "the best government on earth," does that prove its own goodness, or only the badness of all other governments?

1 under the Constitution, you should be careful to clarify that it means “national but not citizen of the United States” under 8
 2 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) in order to prevent confusion so they don’t misuse the form as evidence against you in court to suck you
 3 into their jurisdiction.

4 4.12.11.2 Paying taxes<sup>211</sup>

5 The payment of taxes, being compulsory, of course furnishes no evidence that any one voluntarily supports the Constitution.

6 1. It is true that the THEORY of our Constitution is, that all taxes are paid voluntarily; that our government is a mutual
 7 insurance company, voluntarily entered into by the people with each other; that that each man makes a free and purely
 8 voluntary contract with all others who are parties to the Constitution, to pay so much money for so much protection, the same
 9 as he does with any other insurance company; and that he is just as free not to be protected, and not to pay tax, as he is to pay
 10 a tax, and be protected.

11 But this theory of our government is wholly different from the practical fact. The fact is that the government, like a 12 highwayman, says to a man: "Your money, or your life." And many, if not most, taxes are paid under the compulsion of that 13 threat.

14 The government does not, indeed, waylay a man in a lonely place, spring upon him from the roadside, and, holding a pistol
 15 to his head, proceed to rifle his pockets. But the robbery is none the less a robbery on that account; and it is far more dastardly
 16 and shameful.

17 The highwayman takes solely upon himself the responsibility, danger, and crime of his own act. He does not pretend that he
 18 has any rightful claim to your money, or that he intends to use it for your own benefit. He does not pretend to be anything but
 19 a robber. He has not acquired impudence enough to profess to be merely a "protector," and that he takes men's money against 20 their will, merely to enable him to "protect" those infatuated travelers, who feel perfectly able to protect themselves, or do
 21 not appreciate his peculiar system of protection. He is too sensible a man to make such professions as these. Furthermore,
 22 having taken your money, he leaves you, as you wish him to do. He does not persist in following you on the road, against
 23 your will; assuming to be your rightful "sovereign," on account of the "protection" he affords you. He does not keep 24 "protecting" you, by commanding you to bow down and serve him; by requiring you to do this, and forbidding you to do that;
 25 by robbing you of more money as often as he finds it for his interest or pleasure to do so; and by branding you as a rebel,
 26 a traitor, and an enemy to your country, and shooting you down without mercy, if you dispute his authority, or resist his
 27 demands. He is too much of a gentleman to be guilty of such impostures, and insults, and villainies as these. In short, he does 28 not, in addition to robbing you, attempt to make you either his dupe or his slave.

29 The proceedings of those robbers and murderers, who call themselves "the government," are directly the opposite of these of 30 the single highwayman.

31 In the first place, they do not, like him, make themselves individually known; or, consequently, take upon themselves
 32 personally the responsibility of their acts. On the contrary, they secretly (by secret ballot) designate some one of their number 33 to commit the robbery in their behalf, while they keep themselves practically concealed. They say to the person thus 34 designated:

35 Go to A____ B____, and say to him that "the government" has need of money to meet the expenses of protecting him and
 36 his property. If he presumes to say that he has never contracted with us to protect him, and that he wants none of our protection,
 37 say to him that that is our business, and not his; that we CHOOSE to protect him, whether he desires us to do so or not; and
 38 that we demand pay, too, for protecting him. If he dares to inquire who the individuals are, who have thus taken upon 39 themselves the title of "the government," and who assume to protect him, and demand payment of him, without his having
 40 ever made any contract with them, say to him that that, too, is our business, and not his; that we do not CHOOSE to make
 41 ourselves INDIVIDUALLY known to him; that we have secretly (by secret ballot) appointed you our agent to give him notice
 42 of our demands, and, if he complies with them, to give him, in our name, a receipt that will protect him against any similar
 43 demand for the present year. If he refuses to comply, seize and sell enough of his property to pay not only our demands, but
 44 all your own expenses and trouble beside. If he resists the seizure of his property, call upon the bystanders to help you
 45 (doubtless some of them will prove to be members of our band.) If, in defending his property, he should kill any of our band
 46 who are assisting you, capture him at all hazards; charge him (in one of our courts) with murder; convict him, and hang him.

1 If he should call upon his neighbors, or any others who, like him, may be disposed to resist our demands, and they should
2 come in large numbers to his assistance, cry out that they are all rebels and traitors; that "our country" is in danger; call upon
3 the commander of our hired murderers; tell him to quell the rebellion and "save the country," cost what it may. Tell him to
4 kill all who resist, though they should be hundreds of thousands; and thus strike terror into all others similarly disposed. See
5 that the work of murder is thoroughly done; that we may have no further trouble of this kind hereafter. When these traitors
6 shall have thus been taught our strength and our determination, they will be good loyal citizens for many years, and pay their
7 taxes without a why or a wherefore.

8 It is under such compulsion as this that taxes, so called, are paid. And how much proof the payment of taxes affords, that the 9 people consent to "support the government," it needs no further argument to show.

10 2. Still another reason why the payment of taxes implies no consent, or pledge, to support the government, is that the taxpayer
11 does not know, and has no means of knowing, who the particular individuals are who compose "the government." To him
12 "the government" is a myth, an abstraction, an incorporeality, with which he can make no contract, and to which he can give
13 no consent, and make no pledge. He knows it only through its pretended agents. "The government" itself he never sees. He
14 knows indeed, by common report, that certain persons, of a certain age, are permitted to vote; and thus to make themselves
15 parts of, or (if they choose) opponents of, the government, for the time being. But who of them do thus vote, and especially 16 how each one votes (whether so as to aid or oppose the government), he does not know; the voting being all done secretly
17 (by secret ballot). Who, therefore, practically compose "the government," for the time being, he has no means of knowing.
18 Of course he can make no contract with them, give them no consent, and make them no pledge. Of necessity, therefore, his 19 paying taxes to them implies, on his part, no contract, consent, or pledge to support them -- that is, to support "the 20 government," or the Constitution.

21 3. Not knowing who the particular individuals are, who call themselves "the government," the taxpayer does not know whom
22 he pays his taxes to. All he knows is that a man comes to him, representing himself to be the agent of "the government" --
23 that is, the agent of a secret band of robbers and murderers, who have taken to themselves the title of "the government," and
24 have determined to kill everybody who refuses to give them whatever money they demand. To save his life, he gives up his
25 money to this agent. But as this agent does not make his principals individually known to the taxpayer, the latter, after he has 26 given up his money, knows no more who are "the government" -- that is, who were the robbers -- than he did before. To say,
27 therefore, that by giving up his money to their agent, he entered into a voluntary contract with them, that he pledges himself
28 to obey them, to support them, and to give them whatever money they should demand of him in the future, is simply ridiculous.

29 4. All political power, so called, rests practically upon this matter of money. Any number of scoundrels, having money enough
30 to start with, can establish themselves as a "government"; because, with money, they can hire soldiers, and with soldiers
31 extort more money; and also compel general obedience to their will. It is with government, as Caesar said it was in war, that 32 money and soldiers mutually supported each other; that with money he could hire soldiers, and with soldiers extort money.
33 So these villains, who call themselves governments, well understand that their power rests primarily upon money. With 34 money they can hire soldiers, and with soldiers extort money. And, when their authority is denied, the first use they always 35 make of money, is to hire soldiers to kill or subdue all who refuse them more money.

36 For this reason, whoever desires liberty, should understand these vital facts, viz.: 1. That every man who puts money into the 37 hands of a "government" (so called), puts into its hands a sword which will be used against him, to extort more money from
38 him, and also to keep him in subjection to its arbitrary will. 2. That those who will take his money, without his consent, in 39 the first place, will use it for his further robbery and enslavement, if he presumes to resist their demands in the future. 3. That 40 it is a perfect absurdity to suppose that anybody of men would ever take a man's money without his consent, for any such
41 object as they profess to take it for, viz., that of protecting him; for why should they wish to protect him, if he does not wish
42 them to do so? To suppose that they would do so, is just as absurd as it would be to suppose that they would take his money
43 without his consent, for the purpose of buying food or clothing for him, when he did not want it. 4. If a man wants "protection,"
44 he is competent to make his own bargains for it; and nobody has any occasion to rob him, in order to "protect" him against
45 his will. 5. That the only security men can have for their political liberty, consists in their keeping their money in their own
46 pockets, until they have assurances, perfectly satisfactory to themselves, that it will be used as they wish it to be used, for 47 their benefit, and not for their injury. 6. That no government, so called, can reasonably be trusted for a moment, or reasonably 48 be supposed to have honest purposes in view, any longer than it depends wholly upon voluntary support.

49 These facts are all so vital and so self-evident, that it cannot reasonably be supposed that any one will voluntarily pay money
50 to a "government," for the purpose of securing its protection, unless he first make an explicit and purely voluntary contract
51 with it for that purpose.

1 It is perfectly evident, therefore, that neither such voting, nor such payment of taxes, as actually takes place, proves anybody's
 2 consent, or obligation, to support the Constitution. Consequently we have no evidence at all that the Constitution is binding
 3 upon anybody, or that anybody is under any contract or obligation whatever to support it. And nobody is under any obligation
 4 to support it.

5 4.12.11.3 Jury Service

6 Jury service is similar to voting and is based on voting, so all the arguments used earlier by Spooner about voting apply
 7 equally to jury service. People involve themselves in jury service for the very same reasons as voting, which is to defend 8 their liberties against encroachment by:

- 9 • The “band of tyrants, robbers, and murderers” in “the government”
- 10 • Fellow citizens who would want to violate the liberties and rights of others by using the government as their agent.
 11 For instance, they might abuse their elective franchise or voting power to influence or authorize the state or 12 government to plunder the property of others in order to guarantee their economic security and income.

13 Even before government existed, all men had a natural and God-given right to defend their person, their family, their liberty,
 14 and their property against encroachment by others, and they did so through force and using violence if necessary. Book I of 15 The Law of Nations by Vattel, which our founding fathers used to write our Constitution and which appears on our website 16 at:

The Law of Nations, Vattel
http://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel\_01.htm.

17 also confirms the existence of this God-given right of self-defense:

18 § 18. A nation has a right to every thing necessary for its preservation.

19 Since then a nation is obliged to preserve itself, it has a right to every thing necessary for its preservation. For 20 the Law of Nature gives us a right to every thing without which we cannot fulfil our obligation; otherwise it would
 21 oblige us to do impossibilities, or rather would contradict itself in prescribing us a duty, and at the same time
 22 debarring us of the only means of fulfilling it. It will doubtless be here understood, that those means ought not to
 23 be unjust in themselves, or such as are absolutely forbidden by the Law of Nature.

24 As it is impossible that it should ever permit the use of such means, — if on a particular occasion no other present
 25 themselves for fulfilling a general obligation, the obligation must, in that particular instance, be looked on as 26 impossible, and consequently void.

27 [The Law of Nations, Vattel, Section 18; SOURCE:
 28 <https://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel.htm>]

29 Even the Supreme Court agrees with the existence of the natural rights of self-protection:

30 “The individual may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business
 31 in his own way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no duty to the state or to his neighbors to divulge his
 32 business, or to open his doors to an investigation, so far as it may tend to criminate him. He owes no such duty
 33 *to the state, since he receives nothing therefrom, beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are
 34 such as existed by the law of the land long antecedent to the organization of the state, and can only be taken*
 35 from him by due process of law, and in accordance with the Constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to 36 incriminate himself, and the immunity of himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant
 37 of the law. He owes nothing to the public so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”
 38 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

39 Within the early family unit, this role of defending one’s rights usually fell on the man. As mankind civilized, the function
 40 of defending personal liberty and property were delegated to the government, but the sovereignty remained with the people.
 41 At first, the role of the government in defending its citizens was defined verbally, but mankind soon discovered that human
 42 nature being dishonest and covetous and untrustworthy, the people working for government became corrupted and abused
 43 their power for personal benefit. Consequently, the people then chose to correct this problem by defining the role of the 44 government formally in writing using written constitutions, from which the government was authorized by the constitution
 45 to write statutes and regulations to carry out the sovereign powers delegated to them by the people. The constitution was like
 46 a written contract that could then be enforced in court against government agents who were charged with carrying it out. But 47 once again, human depravity entered into the picture and the greedy lawyers and politicians writing the statutes and

1 regulations devised a way to obfuscate and distort the law for their personal gain, and illegally expand their delegated
 2 authority by dolus. Hence, the jury was invented as a check and balance so that bad laws could be nullified by the sovereign
 3 people and so that this conflict of interest by the government could then be eliminated. The people then separated the Judiciary
 4 from the Executive branch of the government in order that this conflict of interest might be minimized and to make the judges
 5 controlling the trials more objective and less biased, but even that solution had defects. The judges became corrupted because
 6 they got their pay and benefits from the tax monies that were illegally collected by the Executive branch, and the Executive
 7 branch used their tax collecting power to threaten, harass, and intimidate the judges into illegally enforcing the Internal
 8 Revenue Code. This made juries all the more important because they were there not only to nullify bad laws, but to counteract
 9 subtle and often hidden biases on the part of the judge. We talked about many of these biases and prejudices earlier in section
 10 2.8.13. Thomas Jefferson hinted at these biases when he said:

11 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take on
 12 themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect partiality in 13 the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English liberty."
 14 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

15 The purpose of juries is therefore to protect us from corrupted and covetous government politicians and judges and to nullify
 16 bad laws that conflict with God's laws. But the definition of "voluntary" at the beginning of this subsection said that 17 "voluntary" meant:

 19 Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and
 20 unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without
 21 compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without
 22 valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration;
 23 as, a voluntary deed."
 24 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

25 Certainly, jury service cannot be said to be "unimpelled by another's influence" because the very reason we do it is because 26 of the fear of specific bad people in government and the bad laws they write. Nothing that is done out of fear of a person or 27 a bad law can be said to be "voluntary". Here is a confirmation of that conclusion found in the definition of "consent" in 28 Black's Law Dictionary:

29 "Consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or 30 compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord.
 31 Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil
 32 on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental 33 capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to act,
 34 a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in every 35 agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.

36 "Willingness in fact that an act or an invasion of an interest shall take place. Restatement, Second, Torts §10A.

37 As used in the law of rape 'consent' means consent of the will,
 38 and submission under the influence of fear or terror cannot 39 amount to real consent. There must be an exercise of intelligence based on knowledge of its 40 significance and moral quality and there must be a choice between resistance and assent. And if a woman resists
 41 to the point where further resistance would be useless or until her resistance is overcome by force or violence,
 42 submission thereafter is not 'consent'."
 43 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 305, emphasis added]

44 Self-defense cannot be voluntary unless we consented or volunteered to put ourselves into harm's way to begin with, which 45 no sane man would consider in the first place. Like voting, if we don't serve on jury duty, then corrupted people in 46 government will eventually write the laws in such a way as to make us into complete and total slaves. Here is how Thomas
 47 Jefferson describes this situation in the Declaration of Independence and what we should do about it:

48 "But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce
 49 them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide
 50 new Guards for their future security."
 51 [Declaration of Independence]

Jury service, like voting and the exercise of all other political rights, is defensive and done as a safeguard for our future security. The exercise of rights cannot be turned into taxable government privileges. Anything that is defensive is done for selfish and not altruistic or voluntary reasons. One could then say that by exercising our right to serve on jury duty (and voting in the process), we are in receipt of “consideration”, which is a fancy legal word for a “benefit”. That benefit is the absence of threats or coercion or corruption in our government. By exercising our right (not our privilege, but our right) to act as jurors, we are ensuring a peaceful, orderly society free of corruption and evil, which is probably the most important aspect of quality of life that we can personally experience in our lifetime. Consequently, the reason we serve on jury duty is to remain free of government compulsion and to protect our liberties, and for no other reason, and we do so for selfish reasons and not the magnanimous good of mankind. You could then say we are “compelled to avoid future compulsion and government corruption”.

It would be the grossest distortion for any government servant or judge to then commit fraud by saying that jury service is “voluntary”, and if it isn’t “voluntary” and “consensual”, then it can’t be a “privilege”. Here is what Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1198 says about “privilege” on p. 1197-1198:

“privilege. A particular and peculiar benefit or advantage enjoyed by a person, company, or class, beyond the common advantages of other citizens. An exceptional or extraordinary power or exemption. A peculiar right, advantage, exemption, power, franchise, or immunity held by a person or class, not generally possessed by others.

“A privilege may be based upon: (a) the consent of the other affected by the actor’s conduct, or (b) the fact that its exercise is necessary for the protection of some interest of the actor or of the public which is of such importance as to justify the harm caused or threatened by its exercise, or (c) the fact that the actor is performing a function for the proper performance of which freedom of action is essential. Restatement, Second, Torts, §10.

Privileges may be divided into two general categories: (1) consent, and (2) privileges created by law irrespective of consent. In general, the latter arise where there is some important and overriding social value in sanctioning defendant’s conduct, despite the fact that it causes plaintiff harm.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1198]

From the above, we must conclude that unless receipt of a “privilege” is consensual, then it cannot be a privilege. And something cannot be consensual unless it is “voluntary” and done “without valuable consideration” or personal benefit.

“consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord. Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake.”

So any way you want to look at it, jury service is a compelled necessity of the society we live in and it is involuntary and nonconsensual. It is a necessary evil at best because of the evil nature of mankind when serving in public office and in positions of power.

“Society in every state is a blessing, but government [or its trappings such as voting and jury service], even in its best state is but a necessary evil; in its worst state, an intolerable one.”
[Thomas Paine (1737-1809)]

4.12.11.4 Citizenship

We have already established that the main and most important function of government is public protection, which is accomplished by preventing and punishing injustice. We established this fact in section 3.3, where we talked about the Purpose of Law. People in the government will tell you that the reason for becoming a citizen is to qualify for receipt of that public protection and to pay one’s fair share of the costs of supporting it. However, we established earlier in section 4.12.8 on Federal Citizenship that you do not have to be a “citizen” to have civil rights. The purpose of law is to protect rights and liberties. Therefore, one need not become a citizen to benefit from the protection afforded by government or the laws that it enacts. Compliance with all law must therefore be voluntary because citizenship itself ideally should be but seldom is voluntary. Here is an example court cite illustrating our point:

1                   "When a change of government takes place, from a monarchial to a republican government, the old form is
 2 dissolved. Those who lived under it, and did not choose to become members of the new, had a right to refuse their
 3 allegiance to it, and to retire elsewhere. By being a part of the society subject to the old government, they had not
 4 entered into any engagement to become subject to any new form the majority might think proper to adopt. That
 5 the majority shall prevail is a rule posterior to the formation of government, and results from it. It is not a rule
 6 upon mankind in their natural state. There, every man is independent of all laws, except those prescribed by
 7 nature. He is not bound by any institutions formed by his fellowmen without his consent"
 8 [Cruden v. Neale, 2 N.C., 2 S.E. 70 (1796)]

9 As we stated at the beginning of this chapter and in section 4.5.3, your civil rights derive not from your citizenship status, but
 10 from where you were born and where you live. Furthermore, most of us will pay our fair share of the costs of supporting 11 government without being citizens. In fact, very few taxes one might pay are dependent on their status as citizens.
 12 Furthermore, there are very few things we can do, citizen or not, that don't compel us to pay some kind of tax.

13 Why, then, do people become citizens? It defies us. In the next section on "nationals", you will learn that state governments
 14 commonly will deprive "nationals" the right to vote and serve on jury duty unless and until they become "U.S. citizens" under 15 8 U.S.C. §1401, but we established in that section and earlier in section 4.12.11 that these are rights and not privileges. This 16 is so because in our civil society, these mechanisms are the only means available for us to defend our rights, liberties, and
 17 property without resorting to violence and without being compelled to rely on a corrupt politician to do it for us. Being able 18 to defend oneself from harm is a natural right that cannot be turned into a privilege that can then be taxed or regulated.

19                   "A right common in every citizen such as the right to own property or to engage in business of a character not
 20 requiring regulation CANNOT, however, be taxed as a special franchise by first prohibiting its exercise and 21 then permitting its enjoyment upon the payment of a certain sum of money." [Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291, 35 Am.
 22 Dec. 72, Spring Val. Water Works v. Barber, 99 Cal. 36, 33 Pac. 735, 21 L.R.A. 416. Note 57 L.R.A. 416]

23                   "The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is 24 an artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual's right to live and 25 own property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed."
 26 [Redfield v. Fisher, 292 Oregon 814, 817]

27 The reason the individual can't be taxed for the privilege of existing is because all privileges must be voluntarily accepted,
 28 and we never made the choice to exist. Life was a gift from God, not a choice or a government "privilege". Why, then, do
 29 governments make voting and serving on jury duty (which incidentally are defensive rather than voluntary actions) into a
 30 "privilege" by forcing you to become a "U.S. citizen" subject to their corrupt jurisdiction? The reason, quite frankly, is 31 because they want to pull you into the "federal zone" so they can tax you and subject you to their jurisdiction! They do this 32 because they want to pick your pocket and make you into a feudal government serf, and for no other reason. The federal 33 statutory "U.S. citizen" status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 is simply a legal tool that they use to expand their authority and political 34 power and jurisdiction over you. The government then adds insult to this injury by saying that receipt of "U.S. citizenship"
 35 is a "privilege" and is done "voluntarily". Look again at Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment:

36                   Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the [federal] United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,
 37 are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law
 38 which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States;
 39 nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any 40 person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

41 We ask you now:

42                   "How can the exercise of a natural right as basic as self defense and the pursuit of self protection be turned into
 43 a privilege? How can the government force you to surrender your rights by becoming a second class 'U.S. citizen'
 44 in order to acquire the ability to defend those rights as a jurist or a voter?"

45 The answer is, they can't, but they do it anyway, because the "sheeple", I mean people, don't complain. Are you a sheep?
 46 Furthermore, can the acquisition of citizenship under such circumstances rightfully be called "voluntary" or "consensual"?
 47 Let's look at the definition again:

 49 Coker v. State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and
 50 unrestrained will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without
 51 compulsion or solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without
 52 valuable consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration;
 53 as, a voluntary deed."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

And here is the definition of "consent" from Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition:

"consent. A concurrence of wills. Voluntarily yielding the will to the proposition of another; acquiescence or compliance therewith. Agreement; approval; permission; the act or result of coming into harmony or accord. Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in a balance the good or evil on each side. It means voluntary agreement by a person in the possession and exercise of sufficient mental capacity to make an intelligent choice to do something proposed by another. It supposes a physical power to act, a moral power of acting, and a serious, determined, and free use of these powers. Consent is implied in every agreement. It is an act unclouded by fraud, duress, or sometimes even mistake."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 305]

If the government has applied duress in forcing you to become a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order so you could have the opportunity to protect your God-given rights, which by the way is itself an involuntary function, and at the same time, has committed fraud by fooling or deceiving you into claiming an incorrect and mistaken status as a "U.S. citizen", then clearly, based on the definition of "consensual" above, one cannot claim to have become a citizen by the requisite consent from a legal perspective.

The answer, then, to our previous question of whether the government can force you to become a statutory federal "U.S. citizen" is a resounding NO, because the government interfered and constrained and threatened the exercise of your natural, God-given rights if you didn't provide your fully-informed consent to become a citizen. You were "under the influence" of government coercion and therefore were acting "involuntarily". You became a citizen for selfish reasons and the "consideration" you received in exchange for your consent was government protection of your God-given rights that they couldn't lawfully deny you to begin with. Ironically, the government coerced you into paying for something you didn't need and that which you already had as a gift from God and nature rather than from your magistrate or Congressman. Once again, here is how Thomas Jefferson, author of our Declaration of Independence, describes it:

"A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief magistrate."

[Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134; SOURCE:

<https://famguardian.org/Subjects/Politics/ThomasJefferson/jeffcont.htm> ]

In effect, by exchanging your God-give "rights" for taxable government "privileges", you sold your soul to Satan and a corrupted government because you didn't trust God to protect you and wanted to put an end to government harassment and discrimination directed at you for not "volunteering" to become a "U.S. citizen".

"But he who doubts [God's protection?] is condemned if he eats, because he does not eat from faith: for whatever is not from faith [trust in God rather than government] is sin."

[Rom. 14:23, Bible, NKJV]

At the point when you became a "U.S. citizen" under federal law found in 8 U.S.C. §1401, you sinned and fell from grace like Satan did and went to the bottom of the hierarchy of sovereignty that we explained at the beginning of this chapter in section 4.1. You sinned by volunteering to serve more than one master (the federal and the state governments and God) in violation of Jesus' words in Luke 16:13. You became unequally yoked with Babylon, the Great Harlot, described in the book of Revelation. You sold out your soul and the Truth to Satan for 20 pieces of silver, like Judas did to Jesus. You also lied to the government about your true and legal citizenship status as a "national" because you ignorantly coveted government privileges and benefits and "protection" in violation of Exodus 20:16. The price for these sins, it turns out, is perpetual slavery to a corrupt government "god", who you must then worship and pay homage and tribute to for the rest of your natural life, not out of choice or consent, but out of fear. Becoming a "U.S. citizen" demoted you from being a sovereign to a government whore and you had better bend over whenever the IRS comes knocking! Once you admitted you were a "U.S. citizen" and a government harlot, the burden of proving that you aren't a prostitute fell on you, and any good lawyer knows that proving a negative is an impossibility, so you have to wear the "taxpayer" sign on you back for as long as you are a "U.S. citizen". As long as you are wearing that sign, you may as well be standing on a street corner half-naked begging every government "John" who drives by to pick you up for free and enjoy your company all night, and it's perfectly legal, because the "Johns" write the laws!

"For our citizenship is in heaven [not earth or "U.S. citizenship"], from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"

[Philippians 3:20]

13 4.12.12 STATUTORY "Nationals" v. STATUTORY "U.S.** Nationals"

14 An important and often overlooked condition of "nationals" of the US*** is that today all "state nationals" are "USA
15 nationals", but "USA nationals" who do not reside/domicile in a state of the Union are not "state nationals".

16 A STATUTORY "U.S.** national" is a person born in the outlying possessions of the Unites States**. These types of people
17 are referred to with any of the following synonymous names:

- 18 1. "nationals but not citizens of the United States** at birth" under 8 U.S.C. §1408, and 8 U.S.C. §1452.
- 19 2. "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States**, owes permanent allegiance to the United States**" under 8 20 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).
- 21 3. "nationals, but not citizens, of the United States**" under 8 U.S.C. §1452.
- 22 4. "Nonresident aliens INDIVIDUALS" (under the Internal Revenue Code, as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B)), if 23 lawfully engaged in a public office in the national government.
- 24 5. "Non-resident non-persons" if not lawfully engaged in a public office. See:

25 Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020
26 <https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

27 Statutory "U.S.** nationals" are defined under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452. "nationals" are defined under 8 U.S.C.
28 §1101(a)(21). Both statutory "nationals" and statutory "U.S.** nationals" existed under The Law of Nations and international 29 law since long before the passage of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in 1868. There are two types of "nationals" or "U.S.** nationals" under federal law, as we revealed earlier in section 4.12.10.1:

Table 4-37: Types of “nationals” under federal law

See section 4.12.10.8 later for details. Used on the 1040NR form to describe people who file that form. Does not describe people who are not born in the federal United States.                                                                                  |

Notice that this term does not mention 8 U.S.C. §1408 citizenship nor confine itself only to citizenship by birth in the federal zone. Therefore, it also includes people born in states of the Union. |

A “state national” or simply “national” is one who derives his nationality and allegiance to the confederation of states of the Union called the “United States*** of America” by virtue of being born in a state of the Union and domiciled there. To avoid false presumption, these people should carefully avoid associating their citizenship status with the term “United States” or “U.S.”, which means the federal zone within Acts of Congress. Therefore, instead of calling themselves “U.S. nationals”, they call themselves either “state nationals” or “USA nationals”. In terms of protection of our rights, being a “state national” or a “U.S. national” are roughly equivalent. The “U.S. national” status, however, has several advantages that the “state national” status does not enjoy, as we explained earlier in section 4.11.4 of the Great IRS Hoax book:

1. May NOT collect any Social Security benefits, because the Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS), Section GN 00303.001 states that only “U.S.** citizens” and “U.S.** nationals” can collect benefits. State nationals are NOT “U.S.** nationals”.
2. May hold a U.S. security clearance, unlike “non-citizen nationals of the United States***”. See SECNAVINST 5510.30A, Appendix I.
3. May work for the federal government as a civil servant. See 5 C.F.R. §338.101.

The key difference between a “state national” and a “U.S.** national” is the citizenship status of your parents. Below is a table that summarizes the distinctions using all possible permutations of “state national” and “U.S. national” status for both you and your parents:

Very significant is the fact that 8 U.S.C. §1408, confines itself exclusively to citizenship by birth inside the federal zone and does not define all possible scenarios whereby a person may be a “U.S. national”. For instance, it does not define the condition where both parents are “U.S. nationals”, the birth occurred outside of the federal United States, and neither parent ever physically maintained a domicile inside the federal United States. Under item 7 above, The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215, Vattel, says this condition always results in the child having the same citizenship as his/her father. The Law of Nations was one of the organic documents that the founding fathers used to write our original Constitution and Article I, Section 8, Clause 10 of that Constitution MANDATES that it be obeyed.

“Article I, Section 8, Clause 10

“The Congress shall have Power...

“To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;”

As you read this section below from The Law of Nations, Vattel that proves item 7 in the above table, keep in mind that states of the Union are considered “foreign countries” with respect to the federal government legislative jurisdiction and police powers (see <http://famguardian.org/Publications/LawOfNations/vattel.htm>).

§ 215. Children of citizens born in a foreign country.

<sup>212</sup> U.S. Supreme Court declared that an 8 U.S.C. §1401 “national and citizen of the United States at birth” is NOT a Fourteenth Amendment citizen. See Rogers v. Bellei, 401 U.S. 815 (1971) and section 4.12.4.1 earlier.

1 It is asked whether the children born of citizens in a foreign country are citizens? The laws have decided this
 2 question in several countries, and their regulations must be followed.(59) By the law of nature alone, children
 3 follow the condition of their fathers, and enter into all their rights (§ 212); the place of birth produces no
 4 change in this particular, and cannot, of itself, furnish any reason for taking from a child what nature has
 5 given him; I say "of itself," for, civil or political laws may, for particular reasons, ordain otherwise. But I suppose
 6 that the father has not entirely quitted his country in order to settle elsewhere. If he has fixed his abode in a
 7 foreign country, he is become a member of another society, at least as a perpetual inhabitant; and his children
 8 will be members of it also.

9 [The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215, Vattel]

10 Here's a U.S. Supreme Court ruling confirming these conclusions:

11 "Under statute, child born outside United States is not entitled to citizenship unless father has resided in United 12 States before its birth."

13 [Weedin v. Chin Bow, 274 U.S. 657, 47 S.Ct. 772 (1927)]

14 There are very good legal reasons why 8 U.S.C. §1408 doesn't mention this case or condition. There is also a reason why 15 there is no federal statute anywhere that directly prescribes the citizenship status of persons based on birth within states of 16 the Union. The reasons are because lawyers in Congress:

- 17 1. Know that this is the criteria that most Americans born inside states of the Union will meet.
- 18 2. Know that these people are "sovereign". Even the U.S. Supreme Court said so:

19 "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They
 20 both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who
 21 hold the power and conduct [run] the government through their representatives [servants]. They are what we 22 familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this
 23 sovereignty. ..."

24 [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

- 25 3. Know that a "sovereign" is not and cannot be the subject of any law, and therefore cannot be mentioned in the law.

26 "...at the Revolution, the sovereignty devolved on the people; and they are truly the sovereigns of the country, but
 27 they are sovereigns without subjects...with none to govern but themselves; the citizens of America are equal as 28 fellow citizens, and as joint tenants in the sovereignty."

30 "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while 31 sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by 32 whom and for whom all government exists and acts."

34 "In common usage, the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, and statutes employing the word are 35 ordinarily construed to exclude it."

36 [Wilson v. Omaha Indian Tribe, 442 U.S. 653, 667 (1979)]

37 "Since in common usage the term 'person' does not include the sovereign, statutes employing that term are 38 ordinarily construed to exclude it."

39 [U.S. v. Cooper, 312 U.S. 600, 604, 61 S.Ct. 742 (1941)]

 41 be construed to do so."

- 43 4. Know that they cannot write a federal statute or act of Congress that prescribes any criteria for becoming a "national"
 44 based on birth and perpetual residence outside of federal legislative jurisdiction and within a state of the Union.
 45 That is why the circuit court said the following with respect to "U.S. nationals":

46 "Marquez-Almanzar seeks to avoid removal by arguing that he 3 can demonstrate that he owes "permanent
 47 allegiance" to the United States and thus qualify as a U.S. national under section 101(a)(22)(B) of the 48 Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA"), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). That provision defines "national of the
 49 United States" as "a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the 50 United States." We hold that § 1101(a)(22)(B) itself does not provide a means by which an individual can
 51 become a U.S. national, and deny Marquez-Almanzar's petition accordingly."

[Jose Napoleon Marquez-Almanzar v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, Docket # 03-4395, 03-40027, 03-40497, August 8, 2005, <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/USNational-034395p.pdf>]

5. Want to deceive most Americans to falsely believe or presume that they are “U.S. citizens” who are “subject to” federal statutes and jurisdiction, so they interfere in the determination of their true status as “nationals” and “state nationals”.

8 U.S.C. §1452 is the authority for getting your status of being a “non-citizen national or the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 formally recognized by the national government as a person born in a U.S. possession or unincorporated territory.

How can you be sure you are a “national” or “state national” if the authority for being so isn’t found in federal statutes? There are lots of ways, but the easiest way is to consider that you as a person who was born in a state of the Union and outside the federal “United States” can legally “expatriate” your citizenship. All you need in order to do so is your original birth certificate and to follow the procedures prescribed in federal law. What exactly are you “expatriating”? The definition of expatriation clarifies this:

“Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance.”
Perkins v. Elg, [307 U.S. 325; 59 S.Ct. 884; 83 L.Ed. 1320 (1939)]

“expatriation. The voluntary act of abandoning or renouncing one’s country, [nation] and becoming the citizen or subject of another.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 576]

You can’t abandon your “nationality” unless you had it in the first place, so you must be a “national” or a “state national”! Here is the clincher:

8 U.S.C. §1101: Definitions

(a)(21) The term “national” means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

The term “state” above can mean a state of the Union or it can mean a confederation of states called the “United States”. Sneaky, huh? You’ll never hear especially a federal lawyer agree with you on this because it destroys their jurisdiction to impose an income tax on you, but it’s true!

The rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court also reveal that “citizen of the United States” and “nationality” are equivalent in the context of the Constitution. Look at the ruling below and notice how they use “nationality” and “citizen of the United States” interchangeably:

“Whether it was also the rule at common law that the children of British subjects born abroad were themselves British subjects-nationality being attributed to parentage instead of locality-has been variously determined. If this were so, of course the statute of Edw. III. was declaratory, as was the subsequent legislation. But if not, then such children were aliens, and the statute of 7 Anne and subsequent statutes must be regarded as in some sort acts of naturalization. On the other hand, it seems to me that the rule, ‘Partus sequitur patrem,’ has always applied to children of our citizens born abroad, and that the acts of congress on this subject are clearly declaratory, passed out of abundant caution, to obviate misunderstandings which might arise from the prevalence of the contrary rule elsewhere.

“Section 1993 of the Revised Statutes provides that children so born ‘are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States.’ Thus a limitation is prescribed on the passage of citizenship by descent beyond the second generation if then surrendered by permanent nonresidence, and this limitation was contained in all the acts from 1790 down. Section 2172 provides that such children shall ‘be considered as citizens thereof.’ “
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

If after examining the chart above, you find that your present citizenship status does not meet your needs, you are perfectly entitled to change it and the government can’t stop you. You can abandon any type of citizenship you may find undesirable in order to have the combination of rights and “privileges” that suit your fancy. If you are currently a “state-only” citizen but want to become a “national” or a “state national” so that you can qualify for Socialist Security Benefits or a military security clearance, then in most cases, the federal government is more than willing to cooperate with you in becoming one under 8 U.S.C. §1101.

In the following subsections we have an outline of the legal constraints applying to persons who are “nationals” or “state nationals” and who do not claim the status of “U.S. citizens” under federal statutes. The analysis that follows establishes that for “state nationals”, such persons may in some cases not be allowed to vote in elections without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. They are also not allowed to serve on jury duty without special efforts on their part to maintain their status. These special efforts involve clarifying our citizenship on any government forms we sign to describe ourselves as:

1. “nationals” or “state nationals” but not statutory “citizens of the United States” as defined in and 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\).
2. Nationals of the “United States of America” (just like our passport says) but not citizens of the federal “United States”

4.12.12.1 Legal Foundations of STATUTORY “national” Status

We said in the previous section that all people born in states of the Union are technically “nationals” or “state nationals” or “U.S.*** nationals”, that is: “nationals of the United States of America”. One of the two types of “nationals” is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408 and depends a different definition of “U.S.” that means the federal zone instead of the “United States*** of America”. We don’t cite all of the components of the definition for this type of “national” below, but only that part that describes Americans born inside the 50 Union states on nonfederal land to parents who resided inside the federal zone prior to the birth of the child:

8 U.S.C. Sec. 1408. - Nationals but not citizens of the United States at birth

Unless otherwise provided in section 1401 of this title, the following shall be nationals, but not citizens, of the United States at birth:

(2) A person born outside the United States and its outlying possessions of parents both of whom are nationals, but not citizens, of the United States, and have had a residence in the United States, or one of its outlying possessions prior to the birth of such person;

The key word above is the term “United States”. This term is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) as follows:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(38) The term "United States", except as otherwise specifically herein provided, when used in a geographical sense, means the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

First of all, this definition leaves much to be desired, because it:

1. Doesn’t tell us whether this is the only definition of “United States” that is applicable.
2. Gives us no clue as to how to determine whether the term “United States” is being used in a “geographical sense” as described above or in some other undefined sense. The OTHER most frequent undefined sense, in fact, is the “United States” as a legal person rather than a geographical area.

The definition also doesn’t tell us which of the three definitions of “United States” is being referred to as defined by the Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945) and as explained earlier in section 4.5. Since we have to guess which one they mean, then the law is already vague and confusing, and possibly even “void for vagueness” as we will explain later in section 5.10. However, in the absence of a clear and unambiguous definition, we must assume that because this is a federal statute, then by default that the definition used implies only the property of the federal government situated within the federal zone as we explain later in section 5.2.2 and as the Supreme Court revealed in U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217 at 222 (1949).

The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence helps us define what is meant by “United States” in the context of citizenship under federal (not state) law:

3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States and subject to United States jurisdiction

"A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other country."

The key word in the above definition is "territory" in relationship to the sovereignty word. The only places which are "territories" of the United States government are listed in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. The states of the union are NOT territories!

"Territory: A part of a country separated from the rest, and subject to a particular jurisdiction. Geographical area under the jurisdiction of another country or sovereign power.

A portion of the United States not within the limits of any state, which has not yet been admitted as a state of the Union, but is organized with a separate legislature, and with executive and judicial powers appointed by the President."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1473]

And the rulings of the Supreme Court confirm the above:

"A State does not owe its origin to the Government of the United States, in the highest or in any of its branches. It was in existence before it. It derives its authority from the same pure and sacred source as itself: The voluntary and deliberate choice of the people...A State is altogether exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts of the United States, or from any other exterior authority, unless in the special instances when the general Government has power derived from the Constitution itself."

Chisholm v. Georgia, [2 Dall. \(U.S.\) 419 (Dall.) (1793)]

"There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this country sovereignty resides in the people [living in the states of the Union, since the states created the United States government and they came before it], and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."

Juilliard v. Greenman: [110 U.S. 421 (1884)]

So what is really meant by "United States" for the three types of citizens found in federal statutes such as 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452 is the "sovereignty of the United States", which exists in its fullest, most exclusive, and most "general" form inside its "territories", and in federal enclaves within the states, or more generally in what we call the "federal zone" in this book. The ONLY place where the exclusive sovereignty of the United States exists in the context of its "territories" is under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution on federal land. In the legal field, by the way, this type of exclusive jurisdiction is described as "plenary power". Very few of us are born on federal land under such circumstances, and therefore very few of us technically qualify as "citizens of the United States". By the way, the federal government does have a very limited sovereignty or "authority" inside the states of the union, but it does not exceed that of the states, nor is it absolute or unrestrained or exclusive like it is inside the "territories" of the United States listed in Title 48 of the U.S. Code.

Let's now see if we can confirm the above conclusions with the weasel words that the lawyers in Congress wrote into the statutes with the willful intent to deceive common people like you. The key phrase in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) above is "the continental United States". The definition of this term is hidden in the regulations as follows:

[Code of Federal Regulations]

[Title 8, Volume 1]

[Revised as of January 1, 2002]

From the U.S. Government Printing Office via GPO Access

[CITE: 8CFR215]

TITLE 8--ALIENS AND NATIONALITY CHAPTER 1--IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE,

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

PART 215--CONTROLS OF ALIENS DEPARTING FROM THE UNITED STATES

Section 215.1: Definitions

(f) The term continental United States means the District of Columbia and the several States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

1 The term “States”, which is suspiciously capitalized and is then also defined elsewhere in Title 8 as follows:

2 8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions

3 (a) As used in this chapter—

4 (36) State [naturalization]

5 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United
6 States[**].

7 Do you see the sovereign Union states in the above definition? They aren't there. Note that there are several entities listed
8 in the above definition of “State”, which collectively are called “several States”. But when Congress really wants to clearly
9 state the 50 Union states that are “foreign states” relative to them, they have no trouble at all, because here is another definition
10 of “State” found under an older version of Title 40 of the U.S. Code prior to 2005 which refers to easements on Union state
11 property by the federal government:

12 TITLE 40 > CHAPTER 4 > Sec. 319c.
13 Sec. 319c. - Definitions for easement provisions

14 As used in sections 319 to 319c of this title -

15 (a) The term "State" means the States of the Union, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico,
16 and the possessions of the United States[**].

17 The above section, after we found it in 2002 and documented it here, was REWRITTEN in 2005 and REMOVED from title
18 40 of the U.S. Code in order to cover up the distinctions we are trying to make here. Does that surprise you? In fact, this
19 kind of “wordsmithing” by covetous lawyers is at the heart of how the separation of powers between the state and federal
20 governments is being systematically destroyed, as documented below:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

21 Did you notice in the now repealed 40 U.S.C. §319c that they used the term “means” instead of “includes” and that they said
22 “States of the Union” instead of “several States”? You can tell they are playing word games and trying to hide their limited
23 jurisdiction whenever they throw in the word “includes” and do not use the word “Union” in their definition of “State”. As
24 a matter of fact, section 5.6.15 of the Great IRS Hoax reveals that there is a big scandal surrounding the use of the word
25 “includes”. That word is abused as a way to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government beyond its clear
26 Constitutional limits. The memorandum of law below thoroughly rebuts any lies or deception the government is likely to 27 throw at you regarding the word “includes” and you might want to read it:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

28 Moving on, if we then substitute the definition of the term “State” from 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(36) into the definition of 29 “continental United States” in 8 C.F.R. §215.1, we get:

30 8 C.F.R. §215.1

31 The term continental United States means the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands
32 of the United States, except Alaska and Hawaii.

34 We must then conclude that the “continental United States” means essentially the federal areas within the real (not legally 35 defined) continental United States. We must also conclude based on the above analysis that:

- 36 1. The term “continental United States” is redundant and unnecessary within the definition of “United States” found in 8
37 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38).
- 38 2. The use of the term “continental United States**” is introduced mainly to deceive and confuse the average American 39 about his true citizenship status as a “national” or a “state national” and not a “U.S. national”.

The above analysis also leaves us with one last nagging question: why do Alaska and Hawaii appear in the definition of “United States” in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38), since we showed that the other “States” mentioned as part of this “United States” are federal “States”? If our hypothesis is correct that the “United States” means “the federal zone” within federal statutes and regulations and “the states of the Union” collectively within the Constitution, then the definition from the regulation above can’t include any part of a Union state that is not a federal enclave. In the case of Alaska and Hawaii, they were only recently admitted as Union states (1950’s). The legislative notes for Title 8 of the U.S. Code (entitled “Aliens and Nationality”) reveal that the title is primarily derived from the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1940, which was written BEFORE Alaska and Hawaii joined the Union. Before that, they were referred to as the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, which belonged to the “United States”. Note that 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) adds the phrase “of the United States” after the names of these two former territories and groups them together with other federal territories, which to us implies that they are referring to Alaska and Hawaii when they were territories rather than Union states. At the time they were federal territories, then they were federal “States”. These conclusions are confirmed by a rule of statutory construction known as “ejusdem generis”, which basically says that items of the same class or general type must be grouped together. The other items that Alaska and Hawaii are grouped with are federal territories in the list of enumerated items:

“Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments, the “ejusdem generis rule” is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned. U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the context manifests a contrary intention.

Under “ejusdem generis” canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 696.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 517]

Many freedom lovers allow themselves to be confused by the content of the Fourteenth Amendment so that they do not believe the distinctions we are trying to make here about the differences in meaning of the term “United States” between the Constitution and federal statutes. Here is what section 1 of that Amendment says:

*United States Constitution
Fourteenth Amendment*

“Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.”

The Supreme Court clarifies exactly what the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” above means. It means the “political jurisdiction” of the United States and NOT the “legislative jurisdiction”(!):

“This section contemplates two sources of citizenship, and two sources only, birth and naturalization. The persons declared to be citizens are ‘all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof.’ The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject to their [plural, not singular, meaning states of the Union] political jurisdiction, and owing them [the state of the Union] direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do [169 U.S. 649, 725] to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts, or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which foreign territory is acquired.”
[U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

“Political jurisdiction” is NOT the same as “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” was defined by the Supreme Court in Minor v. Happersett:

*“There cannot be a nation without a people. The very idea of a political community, such as a nation is, implies an [88 U.S. 162, 166] association of persons for the promotion of their general welfare. Each one of the persons associated becomes a member of the nation formed by the association. He owes it allegiance and is entitled to its protection. Allegiance and protection are, in this connection, reciprocal obligations. The one is a compensation for the other; allegiance for protection and protection for allegiance.

1           "For convenience it has been found necessary to give a name to this membership. The object is to designate by a
 2 title the person and the relation he bears to the nation. For this purpose the words 'subject,' 'inhabitant,' and
 3 'citizen' have been used, and the choice between them is sometimes made to depend upon the form of the
 4 government. Citizen is now more commonly employed, however, and as it has been considered better suited to
 5 the description of one living under a republican government, it was adopted by nearly all of the States upon
 6 their separation from Great Britain, and was afterwards adopted in the Articles of Confederation and in the
 7 *Constitution of the United States. When used in this sense it [the word
 8 "citizen"] is understood as conveying the idea of membership
 9 of a nation, and nothing more."*

10           "To determine, then, who were citizens of the United States before the adoption of the amendment it is
 11 necessary to ascertain what persons originally associated themselves together to form the nation, and what
 12 *were afterwards admitted to membership."
 13 [Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874)]*

14 Notice how the Supreme court used the phrase "and nothing more", as if to emphasize that citizenship doesn't imply
 15 legislative jurisdiction, but simply political membership. We described in detail the two political jurisdictions within our 16 country earlier in section 4.7. "Political jurisdiction" implies only the following:

- 17 1. Membership in a political community (see Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1874))
- 18 2. Right to vote.
- 19 3. Right to serve on jury duty.

20 "Legislative jurisdiction", on the other hand, implies being "completely subject" and subservient to federal laws and all "Acts
 21 of Congress", which only people in the District of Columbia and the territories and possessions of the United States can be.
 22 You can be "completely subject to the political jurisdiction" of the United States*** without being subject in any degree to
 23 a specific "Act of Congress" or the Internal Revenue Code, for instance. The final nail is put in the coffin on the subject of 24 what "subject to the jurisdiction" means in the Fourteenth Amendment, when the Supreme Court further said in the above
 25 case:

26           "It is impossible to construe the words 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' in the opening sentence, as less
 27 comprehensive than the words 'within its jurisdiction,' in the concluding sentence of the same section; or to hold
 28 that persons 'within the jurisdiction' of one of the states of the Union are not 'subject to the jurisdiction of the
 29 *United States.'"
 30 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898), emphasis added]*

31 So "subject to the jurisdiction" means "subject to the [political] jurisdiction" of the United States***, and the Fourteenth
 32 Amendment definitely describes only those people born in states of the Union. Another very interesting conclusion reveals 33 itself from reading the following excerpt from the above case:

34           And Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court [legislating from the bench, in this case], in analyzing
 35 the first clause, observed that "the phrase 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof' was intended to exclude from its 36 operation children of ministers, consuls, and citizens or subjects of foreign states, born within the United States.
 37 [U.S. v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 18 S.Ct. 456, 42 L.Ed. 890 (1898)]

38 When we first read that, an intriguing question popped into our head:

39           Is "Heaven" a "foreign state" with respect to the United States government and are we God's "ambassadors"
 40 and "ministers" of the Sovereign ("God") in that "foreign state"?

41 Based on the way our deceitful and wicked public servants have been acting lately, we think so and here are the scriptures to 42 back it up!

43           "For our citizenship is in heaven, from which we also eagerly wait for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ"
 44 [Philippians 3:20]

45           "Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of 46 the household of God."
 47 [Ephesians 2:19, Bible, NKJV]

1 "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off were assured of them,
2 embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."
3 [Hebrews 11:13]

4 "Beloved, I beg you as sojourners and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul..."
5 [1 Peter 2:1]

6 Furthermore, if you read section 5.2.13 found later, you will also find that the 50 Union states are considered "foreign states"
7 and "foreign countries" with respect to the U.S. government as far as Subtitle A income taxes are concerned:

8 Foreign government: "The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the government
9 of the several states."
10 [Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition]

11 Foreign laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state."
12 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

13 Foreign states: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state.
14 The term 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the
15 action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense."
16 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

17 Another place you can look to find confirmation of our conclusions is the Department of State Foreign Affairs Manual,
18 Section 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\) 1116.1-1, available on our website at:

20 and also available on the Department of State website at:

21 <https://fam.state.gov/>

22 which says in pertinent part:

23 "d. Prior to January 13, 1941, there was no statutory definition of "the United States" for citizenship purposes.
24 Thus there were varying interpretations. Guidance should be sought from the Department (CA/OCS) when such
25 issues arise." [emphasis added]

26 If our own government hadn't defined the meaning of the term "United States" up until 1941, then do you think there might
27 have been some confusion over this and that this confusion might be viewed by a reasonable person as deliberate? Can you
28 also see how the ruling in Wong Kim Ark might have been somewhat ambiguous to the average American without a statutory 29 (legal) reference for the terms it was using? Once again, our government likes to confuse people about its jurisdiction in 30 order to grab more of it. Here is how Thomas Jefferson explained it:

31 "Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them,
32 to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps
33 of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate
34 all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."
35 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

36 "We all know that permanent judges acquire an esprit de corps; that, being known, they are liable to be tempted
37 by bribery; that they are misled by favor, by relationship, by a spirit of party, by a devotion to the executive or
38 legislative; that it is better to leave a cause to the decision of cross and pile than to that of a judge biased to one
39 side; and that the opinion of twelve honest jurymen gives still a better hope of right than cross and pile does."
40 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283 ]

41 "It is not enough that honest men are appointed judges. All know the influence of interest on the mind of man,
42 and how unconsciously his judgment is warped by that influence. To this bias add that of the esprit de corps,
43 of their peculiar maxim and creed that 'it is the office of a good judge to enlarge his jurisdiction,' and the
44 absence of responsibility, and how can we expect impartial decision between the General government, of which
45 they are themselves so eminent a part, and an individual state from which they have nothing to hope or fear?"
46 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121 ]

1 "At the establishment of our Constitutions, the judiciary bodies were supposed to be the most helpless and
 2 harmless members of the government. Experience, however, soon showed in what way they were to become the
 3 most dangerous; that the insufficiency of the means provided for their removal gave them a freehold and
 4 irresponsibility in office; that their decisions, seeming to concern individual suitors only, pass silent and
 5 unheeded by the public at large; that these decisions nevertheless become law by precedent, sapping by little and
 6 little the foundations of the Constitution and working its change by construction before any one has perceived
 7 that that invisible and helpless worm has been busily employed in consuming its substance. In truth, man is not
 8 made to be trusted for life if secured against all liability to account."
 9 [Thomas Jefferson to A. Coray, 1823. ME 15:486 ]

10 "I do not charge the judges with wilful and ill-intentioned error; but honest error must be arrested where its
 11 toleration leads to public ruin. As for the safety of society, we commit honest maniacs to Bedlam; so judges
 12 should be withdrawn from their bench whose erroneous biases are leading us to dissolution. It may, indeed,
 13 injure them in fame or in fortune; but it saves the republic, which is the first and supreme law."
 14 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:122 ]

15 "The original error [was in] establishing a judiciary independent of the nation, and which, from the citadel of 16 the law, can turn its guns on those they were meant to defend, and control and fashion their proceedings to its 17 own will."
 18 [Thomas Jefferson to John Wayles Eppes, 1807. FE 9:68 ]

19 "It is a misnomer to call a government republican in which a branch of the supreme power [the Federal 20 Judiciary] is independent of the nation."
 21 [Thomas Jefferson to James Pleasants, 1821. FE 10:198 ]

22 "It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take
 23 on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect
 24 partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English
 25 liberty."
 26 [Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283 ]

27 With respect to that last remark, keep in mind that NONE of the U.S. Supreme Court cases like Wong Kim Ark have juries,
 28 so what do you think the judges are going to try to do?.. expand their power, duhhhh! Another portion of that same document
 29 found in 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\), Section 1116.2-1 says:

30 "a. Simply stated, "subject to the jurisdiction" of the United States means subject to the laws of the United 31 States." [emphasis added]

32 So what does "subject to the laws of the United States" mean? It means subject to the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the 33 federal government under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the Constitution, which only occurs within the federal zone. It
 34 means subject to the U.S. Constitution but not most federal statutes or the Internal Revenue Code. We covered this earlier in 35 section 4.5.3 and again later throughout chapter 5. Here is how we explain the confusion created by 7 Foreign Affairs Manual
 36 (F.A.M.) 1116.2-1 above in the note we attached to it inside the Acrobat file of it on our website:

37 This is a distortion. Wong Kim Ark also says: "To be 'completely subject' to the political jurisdiction of the United 38 States is to be in no respect or degree subject to the political jurisdiction of any other government."

39 If you are subject to a Union state government, then you CANNOT meet the criteria above. That is why a
 40 "national" is defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) as "a person owing permanent allegiance to a [Union] state" and
 41 *why most natural persons are "nationals of the United States***" rather than "U.S. ** citizens"*

42 Let's now further explore what 7 Foreign Affairs Manual \(F.A.M.\) 1116.2-1 means when it says "subject to the laws of the 43 United States". In doing so, we will draw on a very interesting article on our website entitled Authorities on Jurisdiction of 44 Federal Courts found on our website at:

45 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/ChallJurisdiction/AuthoritiesArticle/AuthOnJurisdiction.htm>

46 We start with a cite from Title 18 that helps explain the jurisdiction of "the laws of the United States":

47 TITLE 18 > PART III > CHAPTER 301 > Sec. 4001.
 48 Sec. 4001. - Limitation on detention; control of prisons

49 (a) No citizen shall be imprisoned or otherwise detained by the United States except pursuant to an Act of
 50 Congress.

Building on this theme, we now add a corroborating citation from the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 26, Notes of Advisory Committee on Rules, paragraph 2, in the middle,

"On the other hand since all Federal crimes are statutory  see [United States v. Hudson, 11 U.S. 32, 3 L.ed. 259 \(1812\)] and all criminal prosecutions in the Federal courts are based on acts of Congress. . . ." [emphasis added]

We emphasize the phrase "Acts of Congress" above. In order to define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts to conduct criminal prosecutions and how they might apply "the laws of the United States" in any given situation, one would have to find out what the specific definition of "Act of Congress," is. We find such a definition in Rule 54\(c\) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure prior to Dec. 2002, wherein "Act of Congress" is defined. Rule 54(c) states:

"Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia, in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

If you want to examine this rule for yourself, here is the link:

[http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foioci.exe/frcrm/query=\[jump!3A!27district+court!27\]/doc/{@772}?](http://www2.law.cornell.edu/cgi-bin/foioci.exe/frcrm/query=[jump!3A!27district+court!27]/doc/{@772}?)

The §64 question is:

"ON WHICH OF THE FOUR LOCATIONS NAMED IN RULE 54(c) IS THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT ASSERTING JURISDICTION WHEN THE U.S. ATTORNEY HAULS YOUR ASS INTO COURT ON AN INCOME TAX CRIME?"

Hint: everyone knows what and where the District of Columbia is, and everyone knows where Puerto Rico is, and territories and insular possessions are defined in Title 48 United States Code, happy hunting!

The Supreme Court says the same thing about this situation as well:

"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation." Carter v. Carter Coal Co., [298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 \(1936\)]

Keep in mind that Title 8 of the U.S. Code, which establishes citizenship under federal law is federal "legislation". I guess that means there is nothing in that title that can define or circumscribe our rights as people born within and living within a state of the Union, which is foreign to the federal government for the purposes of legislative jurisdiction. In fact, that is exactly our status as a "national" defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). The term "national" is defined in the title but the rights of such a person are not limited or circumscribed there because they can't be under the Constitution. This, folks, is the essence of what it means to be truly "sovereign" with respect to the federal government, which is that you aren't the subject of any federal law. Laws limit rights and take them away. Rights don't come from laws, they come from God! America is "The land of the Kings". Every one of you is a king or ruler over your public servants, and THEY, not you, should be "rendering to Caesar", just as the Bible says in Matt. 22:15:22:

"The people of the state [not the federal government, but the state: IMPORTANT!], as the successors of its former sovereign, are entitled to all the rights which formerly belonged to the king by his own prerogative." [Lansing v. Smith, (1829) 4 Wendell 9, (NY)]

"It will be admitted on all hands that with the exception of the powers granted to the states and the federal government, through the Constitutions, the people of the several states are unconditionally sovereign within their respective states." [Ohio L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 14 L.Ed. 997 ]

"Sovereignty [that's you!] itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts." [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886)]

"nationals" and "state nationals" are also further defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101 as follows:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > § 1101
§ 1101. Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter—

(21) The term "national" means a person owing permanent allegiance to a state.

(22) The term "national of the United States" means:

(A) a citizen of the United States, or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

Note the suspect word "permanent" in the above definition. Below is the definition of "permanent" from the same title found in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(31\):

(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term "permanent" means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States or of the individual, in accordance with law.

For those of you who are Christians, you realize that this life is very temporary and that nothing on this earth can be permanent, and especially your life. The bible says that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and so there is nothing more certain than death, which means there can be nothing physical that is permanent on earth including our very short lives. The only thing permanent is our spirit and not our physical body, which will certainly deteriorate and die. Therefore, there can be no such thing as "permanent allegiance" on our part to anything but God for Christians.

When we bring up the above kinds of issues, some of our readers have said that they don't even like being called "nationals" as they are defined above, and we agree with them. However, it is a practical reality that you cannot get a passport within our society without being either a "U.S. citizen" or a "national", because state governments simply won't issue passports to those who are state nationals, which is what most of us are. That was not always true, but it is true now. The compromise we make in this sort of dilemma is to clarify on our passport application that the term "U.S." as used on our passport application means the "United States of America" and not the federal United States or the federal corporation called the United States government.

Now we ask our esteemed readers:

"After all the crazy circuitous logic and wild goose chasing that results from listening to the propaganda of the government from its various branches on the definitions of 'U.S. citizenship' v. 'U.S. nationality', what should a reasonable man conclude about the meanings of these terms? We only have two choices:

1. 'United States' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) means the federal zone and 'U.S. citizens' are born in the federal zone under all federal statutes and "acts of Congress". This implies that most Americans can only be 'U.S. nationals'
2. 'United States' as used in 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(38\) means the entire country and political jurisdictions that are foreign to that of the federal government which are found in the states. This implies that most Americans can only be 'U.S. citizens'."

We believe the answer is that our system of jurisprudence is based on "innocence until proven guilty". In this case, the fact in question is: "Are you a U.S. citizen", and being "not guilty" and having our rights and sovereignty respected by our deceitful government under these circumstances implies being a "national" or a "state national". Therefore, at best, we should conclude that the above analysis is correct and clearly explains the foundations of what it means to be a "national" or a "state national" and why most Americans fit that description. At the very worst, our analysis clearly establishes that federal statutory and case law, at least insofar as "U.S. citizenship" is very vague and very ambiguous and needs further definition. The supreme Court has said that when laws are vague, then they are "void for vagueness", null, and unenforceable. See the following cases for confirmation of this fact:

"A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law."
 [Connally vs. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 (1926)]

"It is a basic principle of due process that an enactment [435 U.S. 982 , 986] is void for vagueness if its prohibitions are not clearly defined. Vague laws offend several important values. First, because we assume that man is free to steer between lawful and unlawful conduct, we insist that laws give the person of ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that he may act accordingly. Vague laws may trap the innocent by not providing fair warning. Second, if arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement is to be prevented, laws must provide explicit standards for those who apply them. A vague law impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory application."
 [Grayned v. City of Rockford, 408 U.S. 104, 108 (1972), emphasis added]

We refer you to the following additional rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court on "void for vagueness" as additional authorities:

1. Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156 (1972)
2. Cline v. Frink Dairy Co., 274 U.S. 445, 47 S. Ct. 681 (1927)
3. Sewell v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 982 (1978)

Here is the way one of our readers describes the irrational propaganda and laws the government writes:

"If it doesn't make sense, it's probably because politics is involved!"

Our conclusions then to the matters at our disposal are the following based on the above reasonable analysis:

1. The "United States" defined in Section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment means the states of the Union while the "United States" appearing in federal statutes in most cases, means the federal zone. For instance, the definition of "United States" relating to citizenship and found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) means the federal zone, as we prove in questions 77 through 82 of the following:

[Tax Deposition Questions](http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm), Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section 14.htm>

2. Most Americans are "nationals" or "state nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens" or "U.S. nationals" under all "acts of Congress" and federal statutes. The Internal Revenue code is an "act of Congress" and a federal statute.
3. Our government has deliberately tried to confuse and obfuscate the laws on citizenship to fool the average American into incorrectly declaring that they are "U.S. citizens" in order to be subject to their laws and come under their jurisdiction.
4. The courts have not lived up to their role in challenging unconstitutional exercises of power by the other branches of government or in protecting our Constitutional rights. They are on the take like everyone else who works in the federal government and have conspired with the other branches of government in illegally expanding federal jurisdiction.
5. Once the feds used this ruse with words to get Americans under their corrupted jurisdiction as "U.S. citizens" and presumed "taxpayers", our federal "servants" have then made themselves into the "masters" by subjecting sovereign Americans to their corrupted laws within the federal zone that can disregard the Constitution because the Constitution doesn't apply in these areas. By so doing, they can illegally enforce the Internal Revenue Code and abuse their powers to plunder the assets, property, labor, and lives of most Americans in the covetous pursuit of money that the law and the Constitution did not otherwise entitle them to. This act to subvert the operation of the Constitution amounts to an act of war and treason on the sovereignty of Americans and the sovereign states that they live in, punishable under Article III, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution with death by execution.

Old (and bad) habits die hard. Even if you don't want to believe any of the foregoing analysis or conclusions and you consequently still stubbornly cling to the false notion that you are a statutory "citizen of the United States**" instead of a "national" or "state national", the fact remains that all "nationals and citizens of the United States" are also defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401 to include "national" status. That means that being a privileged statutory "citizen of the United States**" under federal law is a dual citizenship status while being a statutory "national" is only a single status (U.S. nationality derived from state birth and citizenship):

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 1401.

[Sec. 1401. - Nationals and citizens of United States\[\*\*\] at birth](#)

The following shall be nationals and citizens of the United States at birth:

(a) a person born in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

[...]

This type of dual status is described in Black's Law Dictionary as follows:

Dual citizenship. Citizenship in two different countries. Status of citizens of United States who reside within a state; i.e., person who are born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens of the U.S. and the state wherein they reside.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 498]

The term "citizenship" as used by the courts means "nationality", so dual citizenship means "dual nationality and allegiance".<sup>213</sup> You see, even the law dictionary says your state is a "country", which means you are a national of that country according to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).

What can we do to correct our citizenship status and protect our liberties? Well, since you are already a "national" as a dual national called a "citizen of the United States", you can abandon half of your dual citizenship and we will show you how and why you should do this in section 4.12.17. The door is still therefore wide open for you to correct your status and liberate yourself from the government's chains of slavery, and the law authorizes you to do this. The government also can't stop you from doing this, because here is how one court explained legislation passed by Congress authorizing expatriation only days before the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified and which is still in force (stare decisis) today:

"Almost a century ago, Congress declared that "the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the District of Columbia or "U.S. Inc", the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government." 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. §1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940).<sup>214</sup> Although designed to apply especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress "is also broad enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to expatriate themselves." Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94 L.Ed. 287.<sup>215</sup> The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 "are to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed." Id., 338 U.S. at pages 498-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296. That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. § 211a and 8 U.S.C.A. § 1185."
[Walter Briehl v. John Foster Dulles, 248 F.2d. 561, 583 (1957)]

You see, our politicians know that citizenship in any political jurisdiction can be regarded as an assault on our liberties, and that sometimes we have to renounce it in order to protect those liberties, so they provided a lawful way to do exactly that. Another reason they have to allow expatriation of any or all aspects of one's citizenship is that if they didn't, they could no longer call citizenship "voluntary", now could they? And if it isn't voluntary, then the whole country becomes one big DESPOTIC TOTALITARIAN SLAVE CAMP and the Declaration of Independence goes into the toilet! Remember what that Declaration said?

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness." [emphasis added]

How can you be “independent” and “sovereign” if you can’t even declare or determine your own citizenship status? Citizenship must therefore be voluntary and consensual or the enforcement of all laws based on it becomes unjust, and we made that point very clear earlier in section 4.12.11 when we talked about federal citizenship. If you are a “U.S. citizen” and you have a dual citizenship as we just defined earlier using 8 U.S.C. §1401 above, then we will clearly establish later in 4.12.17 that the government cannot unilaterally sever any aspect of your dual citizenship and that it is a permanent contract which only you [not the government] can revoke any aspect of either by dying or by voluntary choice in a process initiated by you. Every aspect of your citizenship status must be voluntary or it is unjust and if you want to eliminate or revoke the federal portion of your citizenship status only and retain the “national” or “state citizen” status that you already have as a “U.S. citizen”, then the government cannot lawfully stop you, and if they try to, your citizenship is no longer voluntary but compelled. Once it is compelled, your compliance with federal laws based on citizenship as a SOVERIEGN is no longer voluntary or consensual, but is based on duress, fraud, extortion, and amounts to slavery in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the U.S Constitution! What are you waiting for and why haven’t you corrected your citizenship status yet?

4.12.12.2 Voting as a STATUTORY “national” or “state national”

The point of reference in the example given below is the California Republic (notice we didn’t say “State of California”, because that term means federal areas inside California!). The cite below doesn’t define “United States citizen” but it’s safe to conclude that it means a “national of the United States***”, and you should specify this on your voter registration document to remove any possibility for false presumption.

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTION
ARTICLE 2 VOTING, INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM, AND RECALL

SEC. 2. A United States citizen 18 years of age and resident in this State may vote.

The situation may be different for other states. If you live in a state other than California, you will need to check the laws of your specific home state in order to determine whether the prohibition against voting applies to “nationals” or “state nationals” in your state. If authorities give you a bad time about trying to register to vote without being a federal “U.S. citizen”, then show them the Declaration of Independence, which says:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—

[Declaration of Independence]

Emphasize that it doesn’t say “endowed by their government” or “endowed by their federal citizenship” or “endowed by their registrar of voters”, but instead “endowed by their CREATOR”. The rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness certainly include suffrage and the right to own property. Suffrage is necessary in turn to protect personal property from encroachment by the government and socialistic fellow citizens. These are not “privileges” that result from federal citizenship. They are rights that result from birth! Thomas Jefferson said so:

“A free people [claim] their rights as derived from the laws of nature, and not as the gift of their chief magistrate.”
[Thomas Jefferson: Rights of British America, 1774. ME 1:209, Papers 1:134]

“Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God? That they are not to be violated but with His wrath?”
[Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XVIII, 1782. ME 2:227 ]

Below is a summary of our research relating to the right to vote as a “national” or “state national”:

1. Some states require that an elector be a "citizen of the United States" or “United States citizen”
  - 1.1. See voter registration form, available at Post Office
  - 1.2. This qualification can interfere with the right to vote by a U.S. national .
    - 1.2.1. Voter registration form exhibits a formal affidavit, signed under penalties of perjury, that voter is a “U.S. citizen”
      - 1.2.1.1. Such an affidavit is admissible evidence in any state or federal court
      - 1.2.1.2. Federal courts use this affidavit to establish court jurisdiction or “U.S. citizen” status.
    - 1.2.2. Perjury is punishable by 2 or 3 years in state prison (see warnings on registration form)

- 1.2.3. Warnings are in CONSPICUOUS text, which prevents signer from saying he didn't see it
- 1.3. To avoid establishing a false presumption that you are a "citizens of the United States" under federal statutes, you must clarify the status of your citizenship on their voter registration in order to perfect and maintain their sovereign status.
- 1.3.1. Most registration forms were signed in ignorance of the 2 classes of citizenship in America
- 1.3.2. We must claim to be a "national of the United States*** OF AMERICA". Refer to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22), and 8 U.S.C. §1408 for a description of the different types of STATUTORY "nationals".
- 1.3.3. With this knowledge, "nationals" and "state nationals" elect "to be treated" as "U.S. citizens" under the internal revenue code by ignorantly and incorrectly claiming their citizenship. To avoid this trap, they should clarify their citizenship on their voter registration as outlined in section 5.6.6 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 entitled "Voter Registration Affidavit Attachment".
2. Registering to vote produces material evidence that one is a "U.S. citizen" under federal statutes who is, by definition, in receipt of federal privileges, whereas State Citizens are not.
- 2.1. State Citizens are protected by constitutional limits against direct taxation
- 2.2. Direct taxes must be apportioned per Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3
- 2.3. Federal citizens are not protected by these same constitutional limits
3. If you are a "national" and you live in a state that won't allow you to register to vote without clarifying your status as a "national" on the application form, then you should take the following measures in order to avoid jeopardizing their Natural Born state Citizenship status:
- 3.1. Cancel your voter registration to perfect and maintain your sovereign status under the Law.
- 3.2. Litigate to regain your right to vote as a "national" rather than a "U.S. citizen".
4. The Fifteenth and the Nineteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution only protect the right to vote for those who are "citizens of the United States". They do NOT protect the right to vote for those persons who are "U.S. nationals".

4.12.12.3 Serving on Jury Duty as a STATUTORY "national" or "state national"

Serving on jury service is not necessarily or exclusively a privilege arising from being a "citizen". Your state may apply additional criteria to the qualifications.

"To remove the cause of them; to obviate objections to the validity of legislation similar to that contained in the first section of the Civil Rights Act; to prevent the possibility of hostile and discriminating legislation in future by a State against any citizen of the United States, and the enforcement of any such legislation already had; and to [100 U.S. 339, 365] secure to all persons within the jurisdiction of the States the equal protection of the laws, - the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted. Its first clause declared who are citizens of the United States and of the States. It thus removed from discussion the question, which had previously been debated, and though decided, not settled, by the judgment in the Dred Scott Case, whether descendants of persons brought to this country and sold as slaves were citizens, within the meaning of the Constitution. It also recognized, if it did not create, a national citizenship, as contradistinguished from that of the States. But the privilege or the duty, whichever it may be called, of acting as a juror in the courts of the country, is not an incident of citizenship. Women are citizens; so are the aged above sixty, and children in their minority; yet they are not allowed in Virginia to act as jurors. Though some of these are in all respects qualified for such service, no one will pretend that their exclusion by law from the jury list impairs their rights as citizens."
 [Ex Parte State of Virginia, 100 U.S. 339 (1879)]

Below is a summary of our research relating to the right to serve on a jury as a "U.S. national":

1. Some states and the federal government require that a person who wishes to serve on jury duty must be a "citizen of the United States". This is especially true in federal courts.
- 1.1. The jury duty disqualification form says that you are disqualified if you are not a "citizen of the United States". Since state statutes don't define the meaning of the term "citizen of the United States" or "U.S. citizen", you can just say that you are and then simply define what you mean on the form itself.
- 1.2. The only way to overcome the built-in presumption that we are "citizens of the United States" on the jury summons is to file an affidavit in response to the summons claiming to be a "national of the United States*** of America" but not a STATUTORY "citizen of the United States" (refer to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) through 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22) and 8 U.S.C. §1408). See:
- Jury Summons Response Attachment, Form #06.015
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
2. Serving on jury duty produces material evidence useful to the state or federal government that one is a federal citizen who is in receipt of government privileges, whereas State Citizens are not in receipt of such privileges.

3. If you are a Natural Born state Citizens and you live in a state that whose laws won't allow you to serve on jury duty without committing fraud on the jury summons by claiming that you are a "U.S. citizen", you should take the following measures in order to avoid jeopardizing your Natural Born state Citizenship status:
- 3.1. Cancel your jury summons to perfect and maintain your sovereign status under the Law.
  - 3.2. Litigate to regain your right to serve on a jury without being a "U.S. citizen" and instead being a "U.S. national".

4.12.12.4 Summary of Constraints applying to STATUTORY "national" status

1. Right to vote:

- 1.1. "Nationals" and "state nationals" can register to vote under laws in most states but must be careful how they describe their status on the voter registration application.
- 1.2. Some state voter registration forms have a formal affidavit by which signer swears, under penalties of perjury, that s/he is a "citizen of the United States" or a "U.S. citizen".
- 1.3. Such completed affidavits become admissible evidence and conclusive proof that signer is a "citizen of the United States" under federal statutes, which is not the same thing as a "national" or "state national".

2. Right to serve on jury duty:

- 2.1. "nationals" or "state nationals" can serve on jury duty under most state laws. If your state gives you trouble by not allowing you to serve on jury duty as a "national" or "state national", you are admonished to litigate to regain their voting rights and change state law.
- 2.2. Some state jury summons forms have a section that allows persons to disqualify themselves from serving on jury duty if they do not claim to be "citizens of the United States". We should return the summons form with an affidavit claiming that we want to serve on jury duty and are "nationals" rather than "citizens" of the United States. If they then disqualify us from serving on jury duty, we should litigate to regain our right to serve on juries.
3. The exercise of federal citizenship, including voting and serving on jury duty, is a statutory privilege which can be created, taxed, regulated and even revoked by Congress! In effect, the government, through operation of law, has transformed a right into a taxable privilege, .
4. The exercise of "national" citizenship is an unalienable Right which Congress cannot tax, regulate or revoke under any circumstances.
5. Such a Right is guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, which Congress cannot amend without the consent of three-fourths of the Union States.

4.12.13 How Did We Lose Our Sovereignty and Become STATUTORY "U.S. citizens"?

If every American in the original colonies became a sovereign, how could they lose their sovereignty? The Citizens of each of the several states in the Union were sovereigns. But the people in a federal territory or in the District of Columbia were not sovereigns because the territories and the District of Columbia were not in the Union.

*"The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States, but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said my eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[*] except as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens. Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided."*
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

Congress had/has exclusive legislative control over these areas under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution. The states were governed by a "constitutional republic" while the territories were ruled by a "legislative democracy". In a legislative democracy, the inhabitants have no rights except what Congress gives them because the Bill of Rights do not apply. As a matter of fact, within the federal zone, they have a statutory Bill of Rights instead of Constitutional rights. See 48 U.S.C. §1421b. In the constitutional republics of the states, the Citizens have rights given to them by their Creator and Congress is the Citizens servant. This is why Citizens, having left a state to buy or conquer land from the native Americans that was located in federal territories, would apply for statehood as soon as possible.

How is it that someone who was born in and has lived in a state on nonfederal land all his/her life can be treated like a citizen of the District of Columbia? There has been a series of steps that Congress has made to convert the state Citizens into statutory "U.S. citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Over the years, our laws have deliberately been made incomprehensible by

1 the average American in order to put most Americans at the mercy of the legal profession. The Federal Reserve Act of 1913
 2 turned over our money to a private banking cartel. Social Security created Social Security Districts (or territories) in which
 3 people with SSN's lived. The Buck Act created federal areas inside the states. Then the states rewrote their income tax
 4 statutes to pretend like everyone was a "U.S. citizen" who lived in these federal areas. They could legally impose direct taxes
 5 in these areas because those domiciled in the federal zone have no Constitutional rights!

6 In order for the federal government to tax a Citizen of one of the several Union states, it had to create some sort of contractual
 7 nexus. This contractual nexus is the Social Security Number (SSN) and the status of being statutory "citizens of the United
 8 States" 8 U.S.C. §1401. Prior to the 14th Amendment, everyone who was born in any one of the 50 Union states was a
 9 "national of the United States" under the Law of Nations and their citizenship status was nowhere defined in the Constitution.
 10 Following the passage of the 14th Amendment in 1868, these people were called "citizens of the United States", where "United 11 States" in the context of the Constitution meant the collective states of the Union and excluded the federal zone. Here is the 12 pertinent part of the Fourteenth Amendment that accomplished this:

13 Section 1: All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are
 14 citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside.

15 Notice the term "citizens of the United States" above, which looks confusingly similar to the same term "citizen of the United 16 States" used in 8 U.S.C. §1401. The trick is that the term "United States" in federal statutes means the federal zone while in 17 the Constitution, it means the collective states of the Union. The common man didn't understand this distinction and the 18 legal profession has, since the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment, done everything in its power to expand this jurisdiction
 19 by, for instance, removing the definition of the term "United States" from legal dictionaries. This scandal is described later
 20 in section 6.10.1. Lawyers and scumbags in our courts and Congress, following the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment,
 21 therefore decided to try to illegally expand their jurisdiction by using this confusion to trick the people in the states of the 22 Union by making them believe that they were statutory "citizens of the United States" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

23 After the 14th Amendment was passed, the scumbag Congress gradually changed the immigration and naturalization laws and 24 especially the government forms that implemented them to expand and enlarge this confusion and deception about citizenship.
 25 When the government naturalized people to become Americans, it still made people "nationals" but not "citizens" (see 8
 26 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23)) but wrote the forms in such a way that they were deceived into believing that they became statutory 27 federal "U.S. citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. When people asked what they meant by the term "U.S. citizen" on immigration
 28 and other government forms, their questions were deliberately ignored or they were given confusing explanations that didn't
 29 clarify these important distinctions and perpetuated false assumptions and presumptions by the average American. The 30 government did this because they naturally wanted all of the immigrants to unwittingly but incorrectly believe they were
 31 "U.S. citizens" and "taxpayers" who were the subject to the tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1 and who were completely subject
 32 to the legislative jurisdiction of the federal government in a way that they wouldn't be if they were only "nationals" under 8
 33 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not "citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Most naturalized persons were not smart enough to figure out
 34 this legal ruse or that what they really were as a result of naturalization were "nationals" and not "U.S. citizens". After they 35 were fooled into believing they were "U.S. citizens" upon naturalization, they would subsequently fill out all kinds of 36 government forms that misrepresented their status and created this same false presumption in the minds of federal judges and
 37 other misinformed fellow citizens serving in federal courtrooms everywhere. If these duped Americans then subsequently 38 figured out the ruse (like we did in the process of writing this book), they would need to go back and renounce their privileged 39 "U.S. citizen" status under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and correct all the forms they mistakenly filled out to completely escape the 40 jurisdiction of the U.S. government and regain their sovereign status.

41 There is a lot of confusion about the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment in the freedom community. The key thing to 42 notice about Section 1 of the 14th Amendment quoted above is the phrase "and subject to the jurisdiction thereof". Many 43 people look at that sentence and wrongfully conclude that "subject to the jurisdiction" means the legislative jurisdiction of 44 the federal government under "acts of Congress" and the U.S. codes. In fact, it does NOT mean this, as the supreme court
 45 has confirmed.

46 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED
 47 STATES AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not
 48 merely subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but completely subject
 49 to their political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate 50 allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth in the one case, as they do to the time of naturalization 51 in the other."
 52 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

1 “Allegiance” is what makes a person born in a state of the Union “subject to the political jurisdiction”, and this allegiance is
 2 a characteristic of being a “national of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 or a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
 3 Therefore the phrase “subject to the jurisdiction” in the Fourteenth Amendment simply means the “political jurisdiction” and
 4 not the “legislative jurisdiction”. “Political jurisdiction” means only voting and jury service and does not include “legislative
 5 jurisdiction”. Legislative jurisdiction is defined by where you are domiciled and not by your citizenship status. You can be
 6 “completely subject” to the “political jurisdiction” by voting and serving on jury duty in a federal trial without being subject
 7 to federal legislative jurisdiction described in “acts of Congress” or the U.S. codes. See the following free pamphlet for 8 further details about “political jurisdiction” as distinguished from “legislative jurisdiction”:

9 <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/PoliticalJurisdiction.pdf>

10 The legal encyclopedia American Jurisprudence tries to confuse this issue by echoing the words found in the Fourteenth
 11 Amendment “subject to the jurisdiction”, and using them in describing federal statutory “citizens of the United States” under 12 8 U.S.C. §1401. They do this in order to try to create a false presumption that this inferior statutory citizenship is equivalent
 13 to Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” status, when in fact it is not. The means the scumbag Pharisees use
 14 to deceive us is simply to refuse to define or state which of the three definitions or “contexts” of “United States” they are 15 using in their definitions. Below is the definition of “citizen of the United States” from the American Jurisprudence legal 16 encyclopedia to help illustrate this frequent form of deception and confusion within the teachings and doctrine of the 17 Pharisees:

18 3C American Jurisprudence 2d, Aliens and Citizens, §2689 (1999), Who is born in United States and subject to
 19 United States jurisdiction

20 "A person is born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, for purposes of acquiring citizenship at birth, if
 21 his or her birth occurs in territory over which the United States is sovereign, even though another country
 22 provides all governmental services within the territory, and the territory is subsequently ceded to the other
 23 country."

24 Endless but needless arguments over citizenship within the freedom community result from a fundamental misunderstanding
 25 of the observations and conclusions in this section. This contention is fostered by the kind of deliberate deception found in 26 legal reference works such as the above. The above confusion is also propagated by other means. For instance, the 1040
 27 form propagates it by requiring you to identify your children as “U.S. citizens” on your tax return in order to claim them as
 28 deductions while not defining or clarifying which of the two “citizens of the United States” that they are. People also
 29 unwittingly contribute to this confusion by creating a false presumption that they are a “U.S. citizen” under the income tax
 30 code simply by saying that they are on their tax forms, and both the state and federal government are more than happy to take 31 your word for it, even if you are wrong, because that is how they manufacture “taxpayers” and illegally expand their
 32 jurisdiction!

33 If people understood the simple distinctions between “political jurisdiction” and “legislative jurisdiction”, the arguments and 34 confusion relating to citizenship within the freedom community would cease instantly. If they understood the following, then 35 we could end these foolish arguments and get on with more important issues like prosecuting IRS fraud:

- 36 • The term “United States” in the Constitution does not have the same meaning as the term “United States” in federal 37 statutes. In the Constitution, “United States” means states of the Union while in federal statutes relating to 38 citizenship, it means the District of Columbia and territories of the United States.
- 39 • Being a Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” is NOT equivalent to being a “citizen and national of 40 the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
- 41 • Fourteenth Amendment citizenship is equivalent to being a “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
- 42 • There is nothing wrong or injurious about being a Fourteenth Amendment “citizen of the United States” and that 43 status doesn’t make you subject to the “legislative jurisdiction” of Congress.

44 Let’s go back to the Elk v. Wilkins case mentioned above for a moment to illustrate the points we are making here. Here is 45 what the Supreme Court said again:

46 "The persons declared to be citizens are ALL PERSONS BORN OR NATURALIZED IN THE UNITED STATES
 47 AND SUBJECT TO THE JURISDICTION THEREOF. The evident meaning of these last words is, not merely
 48 subject in some respect or degree to the jurisdiction of the United States, but COMPLETELY SUBJECT to their
 49 political jurisdiction, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. And the words relate to the time of birth
 50 *in the one case, as they do to the time of naturalization in the other. Persons not thus subject to the jurisdiction

1 of the United States at the time of birth cannot become so afterwards, except by being naturalized, either
 2 individually, as by proceedings under the naturalization acts; or collectively, as by the force of a treaty by which
 3 foreign territory is acquired. Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States, members of, and owing
 4 immediate allegiance to, one of the Indiana tribes, (an alien though dependent power,) although in a geographical
 5 sense born in the United States, are no more 'born in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof,'
 6 within the meaning of the first section of the fourteenth amendment, than the children of subjects of any foreign
 7 government born within the domain of that government, or the children born within the United States, of 8 ambassadors or other public ministers of foreign nations. ."
 9 [Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U.S. 94 (1884)]

10 The above case was about an Indian who was born on a reservation and left the reservation and lived in the surrounding state
 11 community to try to become a "citizen of the United States***". Indian reservations are considered to be part of the federal 12 zone and are under trusteeship of the federal government, but at the same time they do not participate in the "political 13 jurisdiction" that includes states of the Union. Indians cannot vote in national elections and they can't serve on a federal jury.
 14 The Indian in the above case was deprived of the right to vote right after the passage of the 14th Amendment in 1868 by the 15 registrar of voters in his state, who claimed he wasn't a "citizen of the United States***", even though he in all other respects
 16 met the criteria for being a state citizen, had allegiance to the United States***, and admitted he was "completely subject" to 17 the [political] jurisdiction of the U.S.*** in all respects. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Indian reservations are considered
 18 foreign territories not part of the United States*** and akin to foreign governments, and Indians born on these reservations
 19 are not "citizens of the United States***" under the Fourteenth Amendment by virtue of being born on an Indian Reservation.
 20 In effect, they were saying that Indian reservations are not part of the Union of states and are completely separate. Recall
 21 that Indian reservations have their own private and sovereign tribal governments and are not subject to any federal law or
 22 state law in most cases. The court in Elk said that Indians born on reservations can only become citizens by naturalization
 23 and with the consent of the federal government. Naturalization, by the way, is statutorily defined as the process of conferring
 24 "nationality" and of becoming a "national" under either 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) or 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). In the case of 25 the plaintiff/appellant, an Indian who never explicitly naturalized, the court ruled that he had been deprived of no right by
 26 the state when he was denied the opportunity to vote by that state. Recall that the right to vote was covered by the 15th
 27 Amendment, which depended on 14th Amendment citizenship. This case therefore helps to illustrate that the only context in 28 which "citizen of the United States***" is meaningful as far as the federal government is concerned is in a political context
 29 that relates to either voting or jury service.

30 Moving beyond the Elk v. Wilkins case in 1884, in 1935, the federal government instituted Social Security. The Social 31 Security Board then created 10 Social Security "Districts." The combination of these "Districts" resulted in a "Federal Area", 32 a fictional jurisdiction, which covered all of the several states like a clear plastic overlay.

33 In 1939, the federal government instituted the "Public Salary Tax Act of 1939." This Act is a municipal law of the District
 34 of Columbia for taxing all federal government statutory "employees", public officers, and those domiciled who within and 35 working within any "Federal Area." Now the government knows it cannot tax those state Citizens who live and work outside
 36 the territorial jurisdiction of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America; also known
 37 as the ten square miles of the District of Columbia and territories and enclaves. So, in 1940, Congress passed the "Buck Act"
 38 now found in 4 U.S.C. Sections 105-113. In Section 110(e), this Act authorized any department of the federal government to 39 create a "Federal Area" for imposition of the "Public Salary Tax Act of 1939." This tax is imposed at 4 U.S.C. §111. The rest
 40 of the taxing law is found in the Internal Revenue Code. The Social Security Board had already created a "Federal Area"
 41 overlay. U.S.C. Title 4 is as follows:

42 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 43 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
 44 Sec. 110(d): The term "State" includes any territory or possession of the United States.

45 Sec. 110(e): The term "Federal Area" means any lands or premises held or acquired by or for the use of the 46 United states or any department, establishment, or agency of the United states; and any federal area, or any part
 47 thereof, which is located within the exterior boundaries of any State, shall be deemed to be a federal area located
 48 within such State.

49 Under the Provisions of Title 4, Section 105, the federal "State" (also known as, "The State of...") is imposing an excise tax.
 50 That section states, in pertinent part:

51 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 52 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
 53 Sec. 105: State, and so forth, taxation affecting Federal areas; sales or use tax.

(a) No person shall be relieved from the liability for payment of, collection of, or accounting for any sales or use tax levied by any State, or any duly constituted taxing authority therein, having jurisdiction to levy such tax, on the ground that the sales or use, with respect to which such tax is levied, occurred in whole or in part within a Federal area; and such State or taxing authority shall have full jurisdiction to levy such a tax, by reason of his residing within a Federal area or receiving income from transactions occurring or services performed in such area; and such State or taxing authority shall have full jurisdiction and power to levy and collect such tax in any Federal area within such a State to the same extent and with the same effect as though such area was not a Federal area.

NOTE: Irrespective of what the tax is called, if its purpose is to produce revenue, it is an income tax or a receipts tax under the Buck Act [4 U.S.C. Secs. 105-110]. See Humble Oil & Refining Co. v. Calvert, 464 S.W.2d. 170 (1971), affd (Tex) 478 S.W.2d. 926, cert. den. 409 U.S. 967, 34 L.Ed.2d. 234, 93 S.Ct. 293.

For purposes of further explanation, a Federal area can include the Social Security areas designated by the Social Security Administration; any public housing that has federal funding; a home that has a federal (or Federal reserve) loan; a road that has federal funding; schools and colleges (public or private) that receive (direct or indirectly) federal funding, and virtually everything that the federal government touches through any type of direct or indirect aid. See Springfield v. Kenny, 104 N.E. 2d. 65 (1951 app.) This "Federal area" is attached to anyone who has a Social Security number or any personal contact with the federal or State government. (That is, of course, with the exception of those who have been defrauded through the tenets of an Unrevealed Contract to "accept" compelled benefits. Which includes me and perhaps you.) Through this mechanism, the federal government usurped the Sovereignty of the People, as well as the Sovereignty of the several states by creating "Federal areas" within the authority of Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 in the Constitution for the United States of America which states:

*United States Constitution
Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2*

"The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United states, or of any particular State."

Therefore, all U.S. citizens [i.e. citizens of the District of Columbia] residing in one of the states of the Union, are classified as property and franchisees of the federal government, and as an "individual entity." See Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193, 80 L.Ed. 1143, 56 S.Ct. 773 (1936). Under the "Buck Act," 4 U.S.C Secs. 105-113, the federal government has created a "Federal area" within the boundaries of the several states. This area is similar to any territory that the federal government acquires through purchase, conquest or treaty, thereby imposing federal territorial law upon the people in this "Federal area." Federal territorial law is evidenced by the Executive Branch's Admiralty flag (a federal flag with a gold or yellow fringe on it) flying in schools, offices and courtrooms.

To enjoy the freedoms secured by the federal and state constitutions, you must live on the land in one of the states of the Union of several states, not in any "Federal area." Nor can you be involved in any activity that makes you subject to "federal laws." You cannot have a "resident" State driver's license, a motor vehicle registered in your name, a bank account in a federally insured bank, or any other known "contract implied in fact" that would place you in this "Federal area" and thus within the territorial jurisdiction of the municipal laws of Congress. We explain later in section 5.6.12.6 that you can have a Social Security Number and even contribute to and collect benefits as a "U.S. national" without being regarded as living in a federal area, but you need to be very careful to ensure that the Social Security Administration records properly reflect your status as a "U.S. national" rather than a "U.S. citizen" using the process we give in section 4.5.3.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 by submitting a corrected SSA Form SS-5.

Remember, all acts of Congress are mainly territorial in nature and usually apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of Congress. See American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co., 213 U.S. 347, 356-357 (1909); U.S. v. Spelar, 338 U.S. 217, 222, 94 L.Ed. 3 (1949). The only exceptions to this general rule are the following:

1. Persons who claim a "domicile" within the exclusive jurisdiction of a government, even if they physically reside elsewhere, are subject to the civil legislative jurisdiction of that place. For instance, people "residing" (as aliens in a foreign country) living abroad who continue to claim a domicile in the "United States" (District of Columbia) can be taxed for their earnings because the benefits of citizenship exist with them no matter where they live. This is shown in 26 U.S.C. §911 and was also declared by the U.S. Supreme Court in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924). Persons with a

1 “domicile” in a place are called “citizens” or “residents”. People without such a domicile are called “non-resident non-
2 persons” or “transient foreigners”.

- 3 2. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), a person exercising agency on behalf of a corporation become subject to 4 the laws of the place where the corporation was formed. This would be true in the case of persons who are exercising a
5 “public office” in the employment of the U.S. government, which would include elected or appointed officials of the 6 federal government, and federal statutory “employees”, for instance.

7 It’s not easy to survive without an SSN! Most banks are federally insured. It may be inconvenient to bank at an institution
8 that is not federally insured. There are many things that become a little more difficult to do without a SSN, state driver's
9 licenses, or a ZIP Code.

10 There has been created a fictional federal "State (of) within a state." See Howard v. Sinking Fund of Louisville, 344 U.S. 624,
11 73 S.Ct. 465, 476, 97 L.Ed. 617 (1953); Schwartz v. O'Hara TP School District, 100 A.2d. 621, 625, 375, Pa. 440. This
12 fictional "State" is identified by the use of two-letter abbreviations like "PA", "NJ", "AZ", and "DE", etc., as distinguished
13 from the authorized abbreviations for the sovereign States: "Pa.", "N.J.", "Ariz.", and "Del." The fictional States also use ZIP
14 Codes that are within the municipal, exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
15 Commonwealth is one of the several States. The Pennsylvania Commonwealth, also known as PA, is a subdivision of the 16 District of Columbia. If you accept postal matter sent to PA, and/or with a ZIP Code, the Courts say that this is evidence that 17 you are a federal citizen or a resident. Use of the Zip Code is voluntary. See Domestic Mail Service Regulations, Section
18 122.32. The Postal service cannot discriminate against the non-use of the ZIP Code. See Postal Reorganization Act, Section
19 403, (Public Law 91-375). The IRS has adopted the ZIP Code areas as Internal Revenue Districts. See the Federal Register, 20 Volume 51, Number 53, Wednesday March 19, 1986. The acceptance of mail with a ZIP Code is one of the requirements for 21 the IRS to have jurisdiction to send you notices.

22 When you apply for a Social Security Number, you are telling the federal government that you are repudiating your state
23 Citizenship in order to apply for the privileges and benefits of citizenship in the federal Nation. Granting a Social Security
24 number is prima facie evidence that no matter what you were before, you have voluntarily entered into a voyage for profit or
25 gain in negotiable instruments and maritime enterprise. This is the system that has been set up over the years to restrict,
26 control, and destroy our personal and economic liberties. Our legal system is very complicated and you may not understand
27 how it works. I believe that this is intentional.

28 You may also find it disturbing to know how an administrative procedure can remove your children from you. In 1921
29 Congress passed the Sheppard-Towner Maternity Act that created the United States birth "registration" area (see Public Law
30 97, 67th Congress, Session I, Chapter 135, 1921.) That act allows you to register your children when they are born. If you do
31 so, you will get a copy of the birth certificate. By registering your children, which is voluntary, they become Federal Children.
32 This does several things: Your children become subjects of Congress (they lose their state citizenship). A copy of the birth
33 certificate is sent to the Department of Vital Statistics in the state in which they were born. The original birth certificate is 34 sent to the Department of Commerce in the District of Columbia. It then gets forwarded to an International Monetary Fund
35 (IMF) building in Europe. Your child's future labor and properties are put up as collateral for the public debt.

36 Once a child is registered, a constructive trust is formed. The parent(s) usually become the trustee (the person managing the 37 assets of the trust), the child becomes an asset of the trust, and the state becomes the principal beneficiary of the trust. See
38 The Uniform Trustees' Powers Act (ORS 128.005(1)). If the beneficiary does not believe the trustee is managing the assets
39 of the trust optimally, the beneficiary can go through an administrative procedure to change trustees. This is the way that 40 bureaucrats can take children away from their parents if the bureaucrat does not like the way the child is cared for. You may 41 say that there is nothing wrong with this. If a parent is neglecting a child, then the state should remove the child from the 42 parents' custody. Under common law a child can still be removed from the parent but it takes twelve jurors from that county
43 to do so. Theoretically, a bureaucrat could remove your children from you, if you disagree with some unrelated administrative 44 procedure, such as home schooling the child. This is another way the government can intimidate citizens who question its 45 authority. With all this in mind, the statement that the President says every few months: "Our children are our most valuable 46 asset." takes on a different meaning. That is - your children are their assets.

47 When the government communicates with corporations it spells the name of the corporation in all capital letters. If the 48 government refers to you with your name in all capital letters, it actually means to treat you like a corporation. A corporation
49 is a privileged status created by government. It has no rights. The government gives it privileges and the corporation must 50 follow the rules of its creator. I am not a corporation! A state Citizen should challenge the government's assertion that he/she 51 is a corporation. This applies to both postal matter and court documents.

1 We gave the federal government the right to regulate commerce. Since the government has started usurping our sovereignty,
2 our language has been subtly modified to include commercial terms. Most people do not realize or care that they are using
3 commercial terms but the courts do. If you describe your actions in commercial terms in a court, the judge will take silent
4 notice of your status as being regulatable by the federal government. In the following examples, the commercial terms are all
5 in upper case letters: instead of a birthing room, you are now born in a DELIVERY room. Instead of traveling in your car,
6 you are DRIVING or OPERATING a MOTOR VEHICLE in TRAFFIC and you don't have guests in your car, you have
7 PASSENGERS. Instead of a nativity you have a DATE OF BIRTH. You are not a worker but an "EMPLOYEE". You don't 8 own a house but a piece of REAL ESTATE.

9 To summarize this section, we lose our sovereignty and create false "presumptions" that we are a statutory "U.S. citizen"
10 under 8 U.S.C. §1401 and under the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of Congress in any one of the following ways:

4.12.14 How You are Illegally Deceived or Compelled to Transition from Being a Constitutional Citizen/Resident to a Statutory Citizen/Resident: By Confusing the Two Contexts

We state throughout this memorandum that the definitions of terms used are extremely important, and that when the government wants to usurp additional jurisdiction beyond what the Constitution authorizes, it starts by confusing and obfuscating the definition of key terms. The courts then use this confusion and uncertainty to stretch their interpretation of legislation in order to expand government jurisdiction, in what amounts to “judge-made law”. This in turn transforms a government of “laws” into a government of “men” in violation of the intent of the Constitution (see Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)). You will see in this section how this very process has been accomplished with the citizenship issue. The purpose of this section is therefore to:

1. Provide definitions of the key and more common terms used both by the Federal judiciary courts and the Legislative branch in Title 8 so that you will no longer be deceived.
2. Show you how the government and the legal profession have obfuscated key citizenship terms over the years to expand their jurisdiction and control over Americans beyond what the Constitution authorizes.

The main prejudicial and usually invisible presumption that governments, courts and judges make which is most injurious to your rights is the association between the words “citizen” and “citizenship” with the term “domicile”. Whenever either you or the government uses the word “citizen”, they are making the following presumptions:

1. That you maintain a domicile within their civil legislative jurisdiction. This means that if you are in a federal court, for instance, that you have a legal domicile on federal territory and not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.
2. That you owe allegiance to them and are required as part of that allegiance to pay them “tribute” for the protection they afford.
3. That you are qualified to participate in the affairs of the government as a voter or jurist, even though you may in fact not participate at that time.

4.12.14.1 Where the confusion over citizenship originates: Trying to make CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY contexts equivalent

The U.S. Supreme Court identified where all the current confusion over citizenship comes from. Here is their explanation:

"Under our own systems of polity, the term 'citizen', implying the same or similar relations to the government and to society which appertain to the term, 'subject' in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used is designed to apply to man in his individual character and to his natural capacities -- to a being or agent [PUBLIC OFFICER!] possessing social and political rights and sustaining social, political, and moral obligations. It is in this acceptance only, therefore, that the term 'citizen', in the article of the Constitution, can be received and understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies between 'citizens' of different states. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate communities, and can by no violence of interpretation be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical, and invisible creations. A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind, invisible and intangible, cannot be a citizen of a state, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms or the power of the above mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of the United States."

*"Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's punishment, for it is not liable to corporeal penalties -- that it can perform no personal duties, for it cannot take an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke were founded upon an apprehension of the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not anticipate an improvement by which a corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation be given a physical existence, and endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown as necessarily deducible from the decisions of the cases of Bank of the United States v. Deveaux and of Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad Company v. Letson afford some illustration of the effects which must ever follow a departure from the settled principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and deeply founded experience; they are therefore ever consentaneous and in harmony with themselves and with reason, and whenever abandoned as* guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering uncertainty and confusion.”

The CONFUSION of the CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY contexts is the origin of why we say that lawyers “speak with forked tongue” like a snake. Snakes have two forks on their tongue and they are the origin of the fall of Adam and Eve. One “fork” of the tongue is the CONSTITUTIONAL context and the other “fork” is the STATUTORY context. The purpose of confusing the two contexts is to “dissimulate” people and make them FALSELY look like public officers that the government has jurisdiction over.

Dissimulating people in a LEGAL context requires the following on the part of the audience who are being deceived:

1. Legal ignorance.
2. Laziness or complacency that makes the observer NOT want to investigate the meaning of the terms used.
3. A willingness to engage in FALSE PRESUMPTIONS, all of which are a violation of due process of law if employed in a court of law. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The above devious form of exploitation may be why the courts have said on this subject:

“The chief enemies of republican freedom are mental sloth, conformity, bigotry, superstition, credulity, monopoly in the market of ideas, and utter, benighted ignorance.”
[Adele v. State of Florida, 385 U.S. 39, 49 (1967)]

[Whitney v. California, 274 U.S. 357 (1927)]

What thieves in what Mark Twain calls “the District of Criminals” have done to perpetuate, expand, and commercialize the DELIBERATE confusion caused by trying to make CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY citizens equal is to essentially:

1. Use the term “United States” in a GENERAL sense and NEVER distinguish WHICH of the FOUR United States they mean in every specific context. According to the following maxim of law, this amounts to constructive FRAUD:

“Dolus versatur generalibus. A deceiver deals in generals. 2 Co. 34.”

1 "Fraus latet in generalibus. Fraud lies hid in general expressions."

2 Generale nihil certum implicat. A general expression implies nothing certain. 2 Co. 34.

6 2. On government forms:

7 2.1. Exploit the ignorance of the average American by telling them the "United States" they mean is states of the 8 Union, even though the OPPOSITE is technically true. For instance, tell them in untrustworthy publications or on 9 the phone support that it means the COUNTRY. The following proves that all government publications and even 10 phone support is UNTRUSTWORTHY according to the courts and even the agencies themselves. This lack of 11 accountability is a strong motivation to LIE with impunity to increase revenues from ILLEGAL revenue 12 collection:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

13 2.2. When the government receives your completed form or application, silently PRESUME the STATUTORY 14 meaning of United States, meaning the federal zone or United States**, is used everywhere on the form.

15 2.3. Classify any and all documents and records that would allow people to distinguish the two above contexts,
 16 INCLUDING especially the CSP code in your Social Security records. See section 4.12.14.13 later.

17 3. Create statutory franchises ("benefits") under which all STATUTORY "persons", "citizens", and "residents" are public
 18 officers of the United States federal corporation. Those participating then take on the character of the corporation they 19 represent and are therefore indirectly federal corporations also. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

20 4. Ensure the franchises limit themselves to federal territory in their geographical definitions (e.g. 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) 21 and (a)(10), and 4 U.S.C. §110(d)) to keep them lawful and constitutional.

22 5. FRAUDULENTLY abuse the terms "includes" and "including" and lies in completely UNTRUSTWORTHY
 23 government publications to illegally extend the reach of the franchises extraterritorially into CONSTITUTIONAL
 24 states of the Union. The abuse of "includes" provides a defense of "plausible deniability" if the government is caught
 25 in this SCAM. See:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

26 6. In creating withholding or application forms for the illegally enforced franchise:

27 6.1. Ensure that there are no STATUS blocks for those who don't want to participate or are under criminal duress to 28 participate.

29 6.2. Refuse to clarify or distinguish CONSTITUTIONAL citizens for STATUTORY citizens on the status block and 30 only offer ONE option "U.S. citizen", which is then PRESUMED to be a STATUTORY and NOT 31 CONSTITUTIONAL citizen.

32 6.3. Offer no forms to QUIT the franchise, but FRAUDULENTLY call it "voluntary". It can't be voluntary unless 33 you have a way to QUIT.

34 6.4. Tell people who want to quit that the computer or the form won't allow you to quit, even though the regulations
 35 or law REQUIRES them to offer you that option.

36 6.5. Illegally penalize or discriminate against people who fill the form out properly by indicating that they aren't 37 eligible, are under criminal duress, and are being tampered with as a federal witness to fill out the form in such 38 a way that it FRAUDULENTLY appears that they consent to the franchise and ARE eligible. For instance, if they 39 won't consent to be a PUBLIC OFFICER called a "Taxpayer" or "citizen", or "resident", tell them as a private 40 company that you can't or won't do business with them.

41 For details on the above criminal abuses of government forms to compel violation of the First Amendment right to not 42 contract or associate, see:

Path to Freedom, Form #09.015, Section 5.3: Avoiding traps with government forms and government ID
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

43 7. Lie with impunity on the IRS website and in IRS publications and on the IRS 800 line about the unlawful confusion of 44 context. See:

45 7.1. Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
 46 <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.2. SEDM Liberty University, Section 8: Resources to Rebut Government, Legal, and Tax Profession Deception and False Propaganda

<http://sedm.org/LibertyU/LibertyU.htm>

8. When the above doesn't work and people figure out the trick, illegally penalize "non-resident non-persons" not subject to the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) for NOT CRIMINALLY declaring themselves as STATUTORY "persons", "individuals", "citizens", and "residents" on withholding forms. This is criminal witness tampering because all such forms are signed under penalty of perjury. See:

Why Penalties are Illegal for Anything But Government Franchisees, Employees, Contractors, and Agents, Form #05.010

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

9. Bribe CONSTITUTIONAL states to ACT like STATUTORY STATES and federal corporations in exchange for a share of the PLUNDER derived from the illegal enforcement of the tax code franchises. This causes them to help the national government essentially engage in acts of international commercial terrorism within their borders in violation of Article 4, Section 4, of the United States Constitution. This requires them to:

9.1. Use all the same tactics documented here in STATE courts and STATE statutes.

9.2. Use driver licensing as a way to essentially turn "drivers" into federal public officers by mandating use of Social Security Numbers available ONLY to federal territory domiciliaries. For details, see:

Why You Aren't Eligible for Social Security, Form #06.001

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

10. Criminally and illegally bribe judges with financial rewards for sanctioning or convicting people who litigate to stop the above CRIMINAL activity. See 5 U.S.C. §§4502 through 4505, 18 U.S.C. §§201, 208, 210, and 211.

11. In court:

11.1. Judges under financial duress refuse to clarify which of the two "citizens" they are talking about in court rulings so that everyone will think they are the same.

11.2. Judges abuse choice of law rules to apply foreign statutory franchise codes to places they do not apply. See:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004, Section 3

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11.3. Treat everyone as though they are franchisees (statutory "taxpayers", "spouses", "drivers"), whether they want to be or not. This is criminal identity theft and violates the Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a).

11.4. When challenged to clarify the fact that you have been improperly confused with STATUTORY citizens and public officers as a state citizen, call your challenge "frivolous", which in itself is malicious abuse of legal process and violation of due process if not proven WITH EVIDENCE to a jury of disinterested peers.

12. Gag attorneys with attorney licensing so that their livelihood will be destroyed if they try to expose or prosecute or remedy any of the above. Do this IN SPITE of the fact that licensed are attorneys are only required for those defending public offices in the government. The ability to regulate or license EXCLUSIVELY PRIVATE conduct is repugnant to the Constitution.<sup>216</sup> See also:

Unlicensed Practice of Law, Form #05.029

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

13. Dumb down the public school and law school curricula so that the average person and average lawyer are not aware of the above and therefore can't raise it as an issue in court.

14. When the above tactics are exposed on the internet, try to shut down the websites propagating them by:

14.1. Prosecuting the whistleblowers for promoting "abusive tax shelters" under 26 U.S.C. §6700, even though they are non-resident non-persons not subject to the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) and can prove it.

14.2. Slandering them with fraudulent accusations of being irrational and criminal "sovereign citizens". See:

Policy Document: Rebutted False Arguments About Sovereignty, Form #08.018

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The only reason any of the above works is because the average American remains ignorant and complacent about law and legal subjects:

"The only thing necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing or to trust bad men to do the right thing."

[SEDM]

<sup>216</sup> Here is how the federal judge in the case of Dr. Phil Roberts Tax Trial talked to the licensed attorney representing him: "The practice of law, sir, is a privilege, especially in Federal Court. You're close to losing that privilege in this court, Mr. Stillely." Read the transcript yourself. See Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 6.8.1.

2 [Prov. 19:2, Bible, NKJV]

3 "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."
4 [Hosea 4:6, Bible, NKJV]

5 "...we should no longer be children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the

11 The following subsections will go into greater depth about each of the above abuses to show how they are criminally
12 perpetrated. This will allow you to get legal remedy in a court of law to correct them.

13 4.12.14.2 How the confusion is generally perpetuated: Word of Art "United States"

14 The main method of perpetuating the confusion between the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL context is a failure or 15 refusal to distinguish WHICH of the four specific meanings of "United States" is implied in each use. We will cover how 16 this is done in this section.

17 It is very important to understand that there are THREE separate and distinct GEOGRAPHICAL CONTEXTS in which the 18 term "United States" can be used, and each has a mutually exclusive and different meaning. These three geographical 19 definitions of "United States" were described by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven and Allison v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652
20 (1945):

21 Table 4-40: Geographical terms used throughout this page

| Term      | # in diagrams | Meaning                                                             |
|------------------|----------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| United States*   | 1                    | The country "United States" in the family of nations throughout the world. |
| United States  | 2                    | The "federal zone".                                                        |
| United States | 3                    | Collective states of the Union mentioned throughout the Constitution.      |

22 In addition to the above GEOGRAPHICAL context, there is also a legal, non-geographical context in which the term "United 23 States" can be used, which is the GOVERNMENT as a legal entity. Throughout this page and this website, we identify THIS
24 context as "United States****" or "United States<sup>4</sup>". The only types of "persons" within THIS context are public offices within 25 the national and not state government. It is THIS context in which "sources within the United States" is used for the purposes
26 of "income" and "gross income" within the Internal Revenue Code, as proven by:

Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Sections 5.4 and 5.4.11
FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/NonresidentNonPersonPosition.pdf>

27 The reason these contexts are not expressly distinguished in the statutes by the Legislative Branch or on government forms
28 crafted by the Executive Branch is that they are the KEY mechanism by which:

- 29 1. Federal jurisdiction is unlawfully enlarged by abusing presumption, which is a violation of due process of law. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Presumption.pdf>

- 30 2. The separation of powers between the states and the national government is destroyed, in violation of the legislative 31 intent of the Constitution. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SeparationOfPowers.pdf>

- 32 3. A "society of law" is transformed into a "society of men" in violation of Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803):

"The government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested legal right."

[Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137, 163 \(1803\)]

4. Exclusively PRIVATE rights are transformed into public rights in a process we call "invisible theft using presumption and words of art".
5. Judges are unconstitutionally delegated undue discretion and "arbitrary power" to unlawfully enlarge federal jurisdiction. See:

Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.018

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/FederalJurisdiction.pdf>

The way a corrupted Executive Branch or judge accomplish the above is to unconstitutionally:

1. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.
2. PRESUME that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens are EQUIVALENT under federal law. They are NOT. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen is a "non-resident" under federal civil law and NOT a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401. See:

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/WhyANational.pdf>

3. PRESUME that "nationality" and "domicile" are equivalent. They are NOT. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

4. Use the word "citizenship" in place of "nationality" OR "domicile", and refuse to disclose WHICH of the two they mean in EVERY context.
5. Confuse the POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL meaning of words with the civil STATUTORY context. For instance, asking on government forms whether you are a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and then FALSELY PRESUMING that you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
6. Confuse the words "domicile" and "residence" or impute either to you without satisfying the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to it and thereby illegally kidnap your civil legal identity against your will. One can have only one "domicile" but many "residences" and BOTH require your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

7. Add things or classes of things to the meaning of statutory terms that do not EXPRESSLY appear in their definitions, in violation of the rules of statutory construction. See:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/LegalDecPropFraud.pdf>

8. PRESUME that STATUTORY diversity of citizenship under 28 U.S.C. §1332 and CONSTITUTIONAL diversity of citizenship under Article III, Section 2 of the United States Constitution are equivalent.
  - 8.1. STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL diversity are NOT equal and in fact are mutually exclusive.
  - 8.2. The STATUTORY definition of "State" in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) is a federal territory. The definition of "State" in the CONSTITUTION is a State of the Union and NOT federal territory.
  - 8.3. They try to increase this confusion by dismissing diversity cases where only diversity of RESIDENCE (domicile) is implied, instead insisting on "diversity of CITIZENSHIP" and yet REFUSING to define whether they mean DOMICILE or NATIONALITY when the term "CITIZENSHIP" is invoked. See Lamm v. Bekins Van Lines, Co., 139 F.Supp.2d. 1300, 1314 (M.D. Ala. 2001) ("To invoke removal jurisdiction on the basis of diversity, a notice of removal must distinctly and affirmatively allege each party's citizenship.", "[a]verments of residence are wholly insufficient for purposes of removal.", "[a]lthough 'citizenship' and 'residence' may be interchangeable terms in common parlance, the existence of citizenship cannot be inferred from allegations of residence alone.").
9. Refuse to allow the jury to read the definitions in the law and then give them a definition that is in conflict with the statutory definition. This substitutes the JUDGES will for what the law expressly says and thereby substitutes PUBLIC POLICY for the written law.

10. Publish deceptive government publications that are in deliberate conflict with what the statutes define "United States" as and then tell the public that they CANNOT rely on the publication. The IRS does this with ALL of their publications and it is FRAUD. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/ReasonableBelief.pdf>

This kind of arbitrary discretion is PROHIBITED by the Constitution, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court:

"When we consider the nature and the theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power."
 Yick Wo v. Hopkins, [118 U.S. 356, 369, 6 S.Sup.Ct. 1064, 1071]

Thomas Jefferson, our most revered founding father, precisely predicted the above abuses when he said:

"It has long been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression,... that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal Judiciary--an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scare-crow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction until all shall be usurped from the States and the government be consolidated into one. To this I am opposed."
 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:331]

"Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them, to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."
 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121]

"The judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric. They are construing our Constitution from a co-ordination of a general and special government to a general and supreme one alone. This will lay all things at their feet, and they are too well versed in English law to forget the maxim, 'boni iudicis est ampliari jurisdictionem.'"
 [Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Ritchie, 1820. ME 15:297]

"When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."
 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332]

"What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building ["trade or business" scam] and office-hunting would be produced by an assumption [PRESUMPTION] of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"
 [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168]

4.12.14.3 Purpose for the confusion in laws and forms

The purpose for the deliberate obfuscation of citizenship terms is to accomplish a complete breakdown of the separation of powers between the constitutional states of the Union and the national government, and thus, to compress us all into one mass under a national government just like the rest of the nations of the world. This form of corruption was predicted by Thomas Jefferson, one of our most revered Founding Fathers, when he said:

"When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."
 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332 ]

"What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building and office-hunting would be produced by an assumption of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"
 [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168]

The great object of my fear is the Federal Judiciary. That body, like gravity, ever acting with noiseless foot and unalarming advance, gaining ground step by step and holding what it gains, is engulfing insidiously the special governments into the jaws of that which feeds them."

1 [Thomas Jefferson to Spencer Roane, 1821. ME 15:326 ]

2 "The judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground to
3 undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric. They are construing our Constitution from a co-ordination
4 of a general and special government to a general and supreme one alone. This will lay all things at their feet, and
5 they are too well versed in English law to forget the maxim, 'boni judicis est ampliare jurisdictionem.'"
6 [Thomas Jefferson to Thomas Ritchie, 1820. ME 15:297 ]

7 "It has long been my opinion, and I have never shrunk from its expression,... that the germ of dissolution of our
8 Federal Government is in the constitution of the Federal Judiciary--an irresponsible body (for impeachment is 9 scarcely a scare-crow), working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and 10 advancing its noiseless step like a thief over the field of jurisdiction until all shall be usurped from the States and 11 the government be consolidated into one. To this I am opposed."
12 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:331 ]

13 "Contrary to all correct example, [the Federal judiciary] are in the habit of going out of the question before them,
14 to throw an anchor ahead and grapple further hold for future advances of power. They are then in fact the corps
15 of sappers and miners, steadily working to undermine the independent rights of the States and to consolidate all
16 power in the hands of that government in which they have so important a freehold estate."
17 [Thomas Jefferson: Autobiography, 1821. ME 1:121 ]

18 The systematic and diabolical plan to destroy the separation of powers and all the efforts to implement it are described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

19 The purpose of abusing this confusion of contexts between CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY "citizens" and 20 "residents" is to:

- 21 1. Avoid having to admit that YOU and not THEM are in charge, and that THEY are the SERVANT and seller and you
22 are the SOVEREIGN and buyer. The customer is always right in a free market.

23 "In United States, sovereignty resides in people... the Congress cannot invoke the sovereign power of the People
24 to override their will as thus declared."
25 [Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935)]

26 "Strictly speaking, in our republican form of government, the absolute sovereignty of the nation is in the people
27 of the nation; and the residuary sovereignty of each state, not granted to any of its public functionaries, is in the 28 people of the state. 2 Dall. 471
29 [Bouv. Law Dict (1870)]

30 "The ultimate authority ... resides in the people alone."
31 [The Federalist, No. 46, James Madison]

32 "... a very great lawyer, who wrote but a few years before the American revolution, seems to doubt whether the 33 original contract of society had in any one instance been formally expressed at the first institution of a state; The 34 American revolution seems to have given birth to this new political phenomenon: in every state a written 35 constitution was framed, and adopted by the people, both in their individual and sovereign capacity, and 36 character. By this means, the just distinction between the sovereignty, and the government, was rendered 37 familiar to every intelligent mind; the former was found to reside in the people, and to be unalienable from 38 them; the latter in their servants and agents; by this means, also, government was reduced to its elements; its 39 object was defined, its principles ascertained; its powers limited, and fixed; its structure organized; and the 40 functions of every part of the machine so clearly designated, as to prevent any interference, so long as the limits
41 of each were observed...."

42 [Blackstone's Commentaries, "View of the Constitution of the United States, Section 2 - Nature of U.S.
43 Constitution; manner of its adoption; as annotated by St. George Tucker, William Young Birch and Abraham
44 Small, c1803]

- 45 2. Make the consent to become a STATUTORY citizen "invisible", so you aren't informed that you can withdraw it and 46 thereby obligate them to PROTECT your right to NOT consent and not be a "subject" under their void for vagueness
47 franchise "codes". See:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3. Remove your ability to CIVILLY, POLITICALLY, and LEGALLY disassociate with them peacefully and thereby abolish your sponsorship of them. Thus, indirectly they are advocating lawlessness, violence, and anarchy, because these VIOLENT forces are the only thing left to remove their control over you if you can't lawfully do it peacefully.
4. Avoid having to be competitive and efficient like any other corporate business. Government is just a business, and the only thing it sells is "protection". You aren't required to "buy" their product or be a "customer".
  - 4.1. In their language, civil STATUTORY "citizens" and "residents" are "customers".
  - 4.2. You have a right NOT to contract with them for protection under the social compact.
  - 4.3. You have a First Amendment right to NOT associate with them and not be compelled to associate with them civilly.
  - 4.4. If you don't like their "product" you have a right FIRE them:

"To secure these [inalienable] rights [to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness], governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed... Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

[Thomas Jefferson: Declaration of Independence, 1776. ME 1:29, Papers 1:429]

- 4.5. The ONLY peaceful means to "alter or abolish" them is to STOP subsidizing them and thereby take away ALL the power they have, which is primarily commercial. Any other means requires violence.
5. Make everything they do into essentially an adhesion contract, where the civil statutory law is the contract.

"Adhesion contract. Standardized contract form offered to consumers of [government] goods and services on essentially "take it or leave it" basis without affording consumer realistic opportunity to bargain and under such conditions that consumer cannot obtain desired product or services except by acquiescing in form contract. Distinctive features of adhesion contract is that weaker party has no realistic choice as to its terms. Cubic Corp. v. Marty, 4 Dist., 185 C.A.3d. 438, 229 Cal.Rptr. 828, 833; Standard Oil Co. of Calif. v. Perkins, C.A.Or., 347 F.2d. 379, 383. Recognizing that these contracts are not the result of traditionally "bargained" contracts, the trend is to relieve parties from onerous conditions imposed by such contracts. However, not every such contract is unconscionable. Lechmere Tire and Sales Co. v. Burwick, 360 Mass. 718, 720, 721, 277 N.E.2d. 503."

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 40]

6. Replace the citizen/government relationship with the employee/employer relationship. All statutory "citizens" are public offices in the government. As Judge Napolitano likes to say in his Freedom Watch Program:

"Do we work for the government or does the government work for us"?

If you would like more details on how this transition from citizen/government to employee/employer happens, see:

- 6.1. Ministry Introduction, Form #12.014
- 6.2. De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
7. Destroy the separation between PRIVATE humans and PUBLIC offices, and thus to impose the DUTIES of a public office against the will of those who do not consent in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. See:

Why Your Government is Either a Thief or You are a "Public Officer" for Income Tax Purposes, Form #05.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
8. Destroy the separation of powers between the federal government and the states. See:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
9. Undermine the very function of government, which is to protect PRIVATE, inalienable, Constitutional rights. The first step in that process is to prevent them from being converted to PUBLIC offices or PUBLIC rights with your EXPRESS, INFORMED consent. Hence, this is not GOVERNMENT activity, but PRIVATE activity of a PRIVATE corporation and mafia protection racket.
10. Protect the plausible deniability of those who engage in it by allowing them to disingenuously say that it was an innocent or ignorant mistake. Ignorance of the law is not an excuse in criminal violations of this kind.

4.12.14.4 Obfuscated federal definitions to confuse Statutory Context with Constitutional Context

Beyond the above authorities, we then tried to locate credible legal authorities that explain the distinctions between the constitutional context and the statutory context for the term "United States". The basic deception results from the following:

1. The differences in meaning of the term “United States” between the U.S. Constitution and federal statutes. The term “United States***” in the Constitution means the collective 50 states of the Union (the United States of America), while in federal statutes, the term “United States**” means the federal zone.
2. Differences between citizenship definitions found in Title 8, the Aliens and Nationality Code, and those found in Title 26, the Internal Revenue Code. The term “nonresident alien” as used in Title 26, for instance, does not appear anywhere in Title 8 but is the equivalent of the term “national” found in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not “national and citizen of the United States***” in 8 U.S.C. §1401.
3. Differences between statutory citizenship definitions and the language of the courts. The language of the courts is independent from the statutory definition so that it is difficult to correlate the term the courts are using and the related statutory definition. We will include in this section separate definitions for the statutes and the courts to make these distinctions clear in your mind.

We will start off by showing that no authoritative definition of the term “citizen of the United States***” existed before the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified in 1868. This was revealed in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873):

“The 1st clause of the 14th article was primarily intended to confer citizenship of the United States[***] and citizenship of the states, and it recognizes the distinction between citizenship of a state and citizenship of the United States[***] by those definitions.

“The 1st section of the 14th article, to which our attention is more specifically invited, opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states. No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except as he was a citizen of one of the state comprising the Union. Those, therefore, who had been born and resided always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens.”

“To remove this difficulty primarily, and to establish a clear and comprehensive definition of citizenship which should declare what should constitute citizenship of the United States[***] and also citizenship of a state, the 1st clause of the 1st section [of the Fourteenth Amendment] was framed:

‘All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***] and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside.’

“The first observation we have to make on this clause is that it puts at rest both the questions which we stated to have been the subject of differences of opinion. It declares that persons may be citizens of the United States[***] without regard to their citizenship of a particular state, and it overturns the Dred Scott decision by making all persons born within the United States[***] and subject to its jurisdiction citizens of the United States[***]. That its main purpose was to establish the citizenship of the negro can admit of no doubt. The phrase ‘subject to its jurisdiction’ was intended to exclude from its operation children of ministers, consuls and citizens or subjects of foreign states born within the United States[***].”

“The next observation is more important in view of the arguments of counsel in the present case. It is that the distinction between citizenship of the United States[***] and citizenship of a state is clearly recognized and established. Not only may a man be a citizen of the United States[***] without being a citizen of a state, but an important element is necessary to convert the former into the latter. He must reside within the state to make him a citizen of it but it is only necessary that he should be born or naturalized in the United States[***] to be a citizen of the Union.

It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship of the United States[***], and a citizenship of a state, which are distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual.”
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

A careful reading of Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892) helps clarify the true meaning of the term “citizen of the United States***” in the context of the U.S. Constitution and the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court. It shows that a “citizen of the United States***” is indeed a “national” in the context of federal statutes only:

“Mr. Justice Story, in his Commentaries on the Constitution, says: ‘Every citizen of a state is ipso facto a citizen of the [143 U.S. 135, 159] United States[***].’ Section 1693. And this is the view expressed by Mr. Rawle in his work on the Constitution. Chapter 9, pp. 85, 86. Mr. Justice CURTIS, in Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 576, expressed the opinion that under the constitution of the United States[***] ‘every free person, born on the

1 soil of a state, who is a citizen of that state by force of its constitution or laws, is also a citizen of the United
 2 States[***].’ And Mr. Justice SWAYNE, in The Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 126, declared that ‘a citizen
 3 of a state is ipso facto a citizen of the United States[***].’ But in Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 404, Mr.
 4 Chief Justice TENNEY, delivering the opinion of the court, said: ‘The words ‘people of the United States[***]’ and
 5 ‘citizens,’ are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They both describe the political body who, according 6 to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through
 7 their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this
 8 people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ... In discussing this question, we must not confound the 9 rights of citizenship which a state may confer within its own limits and the rights of citizenship as a member
 10 of the Union. It does not by any means follow, because he has all the rights and privileges of a citizen of a state,
 11 that he must be a citizen of the United States[***]. He may have all of the rights and privileges of the citizen of 12 a state, and yet not be entitled to the rights and privileges of a citizen in any other state; for, previous to the 13 adoption of the constitution of the United States[***], every state had the undoubted right to confer on 14 whomsoever it pleased the character of citizen, and to endow him with all its rights. But this character, of course,
 15 was confined to the boundaries of the state, and gave him no rights or privileges in other states beyond those
 16 secured to him by the laws of nations and the comity of states. Nor have the several states surrendered the power
 17 of conferring these rights and privileges by adopting the constitution of the United States[***]. Each state may 18 still confer them upon an alien, or any one it thinks proper, or upon any class or description of persons; yet he
 19 would not be a citizen in the sense in [143 U.S. 135, 160] which that word is used in the constitution of the 20 United States[***], nor entitled to sue as such in one of its courts, nor to the privileges and immunities of a citizen
 21 in the other states. The rights which he would acquire would be restricted to the state which gave them. The 22 constitution has conferred on congress the right to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and this right is
 23 evidently exclusive, and has always been held by this court to be so. Consequently no state, since the adoption
 24 of the constitution, can, by naturalizing an alien, invest him with the rights and privileges secured to a citizen of a
 25 state under the federal government, although, so far as the state alone was concerned, he would undoubtedly be
 26 entitled to the rights of a citizen, and clothed with all the rights and immunities which the constitution and laws
 27 of the state attached to that character.’ “
 28 [Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

29 Notice above that the term “citizen of the United States***” and “rights of citizenship as a member of the Union” are 30 described synonymously. Therefore, a “citizen of the United States***” under the Fourteenth Amendment, section 1 and a
 31 “national” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) are synonymous. As you will see in the following cite, people who were born in a
 32 state of the Union always were “citizens of the United States***” by the definition of the U.S. Supreme Court, which made
 33 them “nationals of the United States*** of America” under federal statutes. What the Fourteenth Amendment did was extend 34 the privileges and immunities of “nationals” (defined under federal statutes) to people of races other than white. The cite 35 below helps confirm this:

36 “The 1st section of the 14th article [Fourteenth Amendment], to which our attention is more specifically invited,
 37 opens with a definition of citizenship—not only citizenship of the United States[***], but citizenship of the states.
 38 No such definition was previously found in the Constitution, nor had any attempt been made to define it by act
 39 of Congress. It had been the occasion of much discussion in the courts, by the executive departments and in the
 40 public journals. It had been said by eminent judges that no man was a citizen of the United States[***] except
 41 as he was a citizen of one of the states composing the Union. Those therefore, who had been born and resided
 42 always in the District of Columbia or in the territories, though within the United States[*], were not citizens.
 43 Whether this proposition was sound or not had never been judicially decided.”
 44 [Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36, 21 L.Ed. 394 (1873)]

45 The federal courts and especially the Supreme Court have done their best to confuse citizenship terms and the citizenship
 46 issue so that most Americans would be unable to distinguish between “national” and “U.S. citizen” status found in federal 47 statutes. This deliberate confusion has then been exploited by collusion of the Executive Branch, who have used their 48 immigration and naturalization forms and publication and their ignorant clerk employees to deceive the average American
 49 into thinking they are “U.S. citizens” in the context of federal statutes. Based on our careful reading of various citizenship
 50 cases mainly from the U.S. Supreme Court, Title 8 of the U.S. Code, Title 26 of the U.S. Code, as well as Black’s Law
 51 Dictionary, Sixth Edition, below are some citizenship terms commonly used by the court and their correct and unambiguous
 52 meaning in relation to the statutes found in Title 8, which is the Aliens and Nationality Code:

By the Act of July 27, 1868, Congress declared that 'the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people'. Expatriation is the voluntary renunciation or abandonment of nationality and allegiance." This implies that "loss of citizenship" and "expatriation", which is "loss of nationality" are equivalent. Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873) says: "The next observation is more important in view of the arguments of counsel in the present case. It is that the distinction between citizenship of the United States[] and citizenship of a state is clearly recognized and established [by the Fourteenth Amendment]. Not only may a man be a citizen of the United States[] without being a citizen of a state, but an important element is necessary to convert the former into the latter. He must reside within the state to make him a citizen of it but it is not necessary that he should be born or naturalized in the [country] United States[] to be a citizen of the Union. "It is quite clear, then, that there is a citizenship [nationality] of the United States[], and a citizenship [nationality]of a state, which are distinct from each other and which depend upon different characteristics or circumstances of the individual." |

They both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the ‘sovereign people,’ and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ...” [ Boyd v. State of Nebraska , 143 U.S. 135 (1892) ] | 1. To figure this out, you have to look up federal court cases that use the terms “expatriation” and “naturalization” along with the term “citizen” and use the context to prove the meaning to yourself.2. In 26 C.F.R. § 1.1-1, the term “citizen” as used means “U.S. citizen” rather than “national”. The opposite is true of Title 8 of the U.S.C. and most federal court rulings. This is because of the definition of “United States” within Subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code, which means the federal zone only .                                                                                         |

NOTES FROM THE ABOVE TABLE:

1. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 under "Notes", says the following:

*"The right of citizenship, as distinguished from alienage, is a national right or condition, and it pertains to the confederated sovereignty, the United States[**], and not to the individual states. Lynch v. Clarke, N.Y.1844, 1 Sandf.Ch. 583"*

*"By 'citizen of the state' is meant a citizen of the United States[**] whose domicile is in such state. Prowd v. Gore, 1922, 207 P. 490, 57 Cal.App. 458"*

*"One who becomes citizen of United States[**] by reason of birth retains it, even though by law of another country he is also citizen of it."*

*"The basis of citizenship in the United States[**] is the English doctrine under which nationality meant birth within allegiance to the king."*

2. 26 C.F.R. §31.3121(e)-1 defines "U.S. citizen" as follows:

[26 C.F.R. 31.3121\(e\)-1 State, United States\[\*\*\], and citizen.](#)

*(b)...The term 'citizen of the United States[**]' includes a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen of Guam or American Samoa.*

We put the term “U.S. citizen” last in the above table because we would now like to expand upon it. We surveyed the election laws of all 50 states to determine which states require persons to be either “U.S. citizens” or “citizen of the United States” in order to vote. The results of our study are found on our website below at:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/LawAndGovt/Citizenship/PoliticalRightsvCitizenshipByState.htm>

4.12.14.5 State statutory definitions of “U.S. citizen”

If you look through all the state statutes on voting above, you will find that only California, Indiana, Texas, Virginia, and Wisconsin require you to be either a “U.S. citizen” or a “United States citizen” in order to vote, and none of these five states even define in their election code what these terms mean! 26 other states require you to be a “citizen of the United States” and don’t define that term in their election code either! This means that a total of 31 of the 50 states positively require some type of citizenship related to the term “United States” in order to be eligible to vote and none of them define which of the three “United States” they mean. Because none of the state election laws define the term, then the legal dictionary definition applies.

4.12.14.6 Legal definition of “citizen”

We looked in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition and found no definition for either “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States”. Therefore, we must rely only on the common definition rather than any legal definition. We then looked for “U.S. citizen” or “citizen of the United States” in Webster’s Dictionary and they weren’t defined there either. Then we looked for the term “citizen” and found the following interesting definition in Webster’s:

“citizen. 1: an inhabitant of a city or town; esp: one entitled to the rights and privileges of a freeman. 2 a: a member of a state b: a native or naturalized person who owes allegiance to a government and is entitled to protection from it 3: a civilian as distinguished from a specialized servant of the state—citizenry

syn CITIZEN, SUBJECT, NATIONAL mean a person owing allegiance to and entitled to the protection of a sovereign state. CITIZEN is preferred for one owing allegiance to a state in which sovereign power is retained by the people and sharing in the political rights of those people; SUBJECT implies allegiance to a personal sovereign such as a monarch; NATIONAL designates one who may claim the protection of a state and applies esp. to one living or traveling outside that state.”

[Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 243]

Note in the above that the key to being a citizen under definition (b) is the requirement for allegiance. The only federal citizenship status that uses the term “allegiance” is that of a “national” as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B) respectively. Consequently, we are forced to conclude that the generic term “citizen” and the statutory definition of “national” in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) are equivalent.

We also looked up the term “citizen” in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition and found the following:

*“citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[***], or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.*

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

*The term may include or apply to children of alien parents from in United States[***], Von Schwertdner v. Piper, D.C.Md., 23 F.2d. 862, 863; U.S. v. Minoru Yasui, D.C.Or., 48 F.Supp. 40, 54; children of American citizens born outside United States, Haaland v. Attorney General of United States, D.C.Md., 42 F.Supp. 13, 22; Indians, United States v. Hester, C.C.A.Okla., 137 F.2d. 145, 147; National Banks, American Surety Co. v. Bank of California, C.C.A.Or., 133 F.2d. 160, 162; nonresident who has qualified as administratrix of estate of deceased resident, Hunt v. Noll, C.C.A.Tenn., 112 F.2d. 288, 289. However, neither the United States[***] nor a state is a*

1 citizen for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. Jizemerjian v. Dept of Air Force, 457 F.Supp. 820. On the other
 2 hand, municipalities and other local governments are deemed to be citizens. Rieser v. District of Columbia, 563
 3 F.2d. 462. A corporation is not a citizen for purposes of privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth
 4 Amendment. D.D.B. Realty Corp. v. Merrill, 232 F.Supp. 629, 637.

5 Under diversity statute [28 U.S.C. §1332], which mirrors U.S. Const. Article III's diversity clause, a person is a
 6 "citizen of a state" if he or she is a citizen of the United States[***] and a domiciliary of a state of the United
 7 States[***]. Gibbons v. Udaras na Gaeltachta, D.C.N.Y., 549 F.Supp. 1094, 1116.
 8 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

9 So the key requirement to be a "citizen" is to "owe allegiance" to a political community according to Black's Law Dictionary.
 10 Under 26 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), one can "owe allegiance" to the "United States***" as a political community only by being a
 11 "national" without being a STATUTORY "U.S.** citizen" or a "citizen of the United States***" as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401
 12 or 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A). Therefore, we must conclude once again, that "citizen of the United States***" status under 13 federal statutes, is a political privilege that few people are born into and most acquire by mistake or fraud or both. Most of 14 us are "nationals" by birth and we volunteer to become "citizens of the United States***" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 by lying at 15 worst or committing a mistake at best when we fill out government forms. That process of misrepresenting our citizenship
 16 status is how we "volunteer" to become "U.S. citizens" subject to federal statutes, and of course our covetous government is 17 more than willing to overlook the mistake because that is how they manufacture "taxpayers" and make people "subject" to 18 their corrupt laws. Remember, however, what the term "subject" means from Webster's above under the definition of the 19 term "citizen":

20 "SUBJECT implies allegiance to a personal [earthly] sovereign such as a monarch."
 21 [Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, ISBN 0-87779-510-X, 1983, p. 243]

22 Therefore, to be "subject" to the federal government's legislation and statutes and "Acts of Congress" is to be subservient
 23 to them, which means that you voluntarily gave up your sovereignty and recognized that they have now become your "monarch"
 24 and you are their "servant". You have turned the Natural Order and hierarchy of sovereignty described in section 4.1 earlier
 25 upside down and made yourself into a voluntary slave, which violates of the Thirteenth Amendment if your consent in so
 26 doing was not fully informed and the government didn't apprise you of the rights that you were voluntarily giving up by 27 becoming a "citizen of the United States***".

28 "Waivers of Constitutional rights not only must be voluntary, but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with 29 sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences."
 30 [Brady v. U.S., 397 U.S. 742 (1970)]

4.12.14.7 The architect of our present government system, Montesquieu, predicted this deception, corruption, and confusion of contexts

It will interest the reader to know that the deliberate confusion and deception between nationality and domicile and between CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens respectively was predicted by the architect who designed our present system of republican government with its separation of powers. He said that the main way the system could be corrupted would be to place everyone under the POLITICAL law, which he describes as law for the INTERNAL affairs of the government only.

Within our republican government, the founding fathers recognized three classes of law:

1. Criminal law. Protects both PUBLIC and PRIVATE rights.
2. Civil law. Protects exclusively PRIVATE rights.
3. Political law. Protects exclusively PUBLIC rights of public officers and offices within the government.

The above three types of law were identified in the following document upon which the founding fathers wrote the constitution and based the design of our republican form of government:

The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758
SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOfLaws/sol.htm>

Montesquieu defines “political law” and “political liberty” as follows:

1. A general Idea.

I make a distinction between the laws that establish political liberty, as it relates to the constitution, and those by which it is established, as it relates to the citizen. The former shall be the subject of this book; the latter I shall examine in the next.

[The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758, Book XI, Section I;
SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOfLaws/sol\_11.htm#001]

The Constitution in turn is a POLITICAL document which represents law EXCLUSIVELY for public officers within the government. It does not obligate or abrogate any PRIVATE right. It defines what the courts call “public rights”, meaning rights possessed and owned exclusively by the government ONLY.

“And the Constitution itself is in every real sense a law-the lawmakers being the people themselves, in whom under our system all political power and sovereignty primarily resides, and through whom such power and sovereignty primarily speaks. It is by that law, and not otherwise, that the legislative, executive, and judicial agencies which it created exercise such political authority as they have been permitted to possess. The Constitution speaks for itself in terms so plain that to misunderstand their import is not rationally possible. ‘We the People of the United States,’ it says, ‘do ordain and establish this Constitution.’ Ordain and establish! These are definite words of enactment, and without more would stamp what follows with the dignity and character of law. The framers of the Constitution, however, were not content to let the matter rest here, but provided explicitly-‘This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; ... shall be the supreme Law of the Land.’ (Const. art. 6, cl. 2.) The supremacy of the Constitution as law is thus declared without qualification. That supremacy is absolute; the supremacy of a statute enacted by Congress is not absolute but conditioned upon its being made in pursuance of the Constitution. And a judicial tribunal, clothed by that instrument with complete judicial power, and, therefore, by the very nature of the power, required to ascertain and apply the law to the facts in every case or proceeding properly brought for adjudication, must apply the supreme law and reject the inferior stat- [298 U.S. 238, 297] ute whenever the two conflict. In the discharge of that duty, the opinion of the lawmakers that a statute passed by them is valid must be given great weight, Adkins v. Children’s Hospital, 261 U.S. 525, 544, 43 S.Ct. 394, 24 A.L.R. 1238; but their opinion, or the court’s opinion, that the statute will prove greatly or generally beneficial is wholly irrelevant to the inquiry. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States, 295 U.S. 495, 549, 550 S., 55 S.Ct. 837, 97 A.L.R. 947. “ [Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238 (1936)]

The vast majority of laws passed by Congress are what Montesquieu calls “political law” that is intended exclusively for the government and not the private citizen. The authority for implementing such political law is Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2 of the United States Constitution. To wit:

*United States Constitution
Article 4, Section 3, Clause 2*

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

The only areas where POLITICAL law and CIVIL law overlap is in the exercise of the political rights to vote and serve on jury duty. Why? Because jurists are regarded as public officers in 18 U.S.C. §201(a)(1):

TITLE 18 > PART I > CHAPTER 11 > § 201
§ 201. Bribery of public officials and witnesses

(a) For the purpose of this section—

(1) the term “public official” means Member of Congress, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, either before or after such official has qualified, or an officer or employee or person acting for or on behalf of the United States, or any department, agency or branch of Government thereof, including the District of Columbia, in any official function, under or by authority of any such department, agency, or branch of Government, or a juror;

However, it has also repeatedly been held by the courts that poll taxes are unconstitutional. Hence, voters technically are NOT to be regarded as public officers or franchisees for any purpose OTHER than their role as a voter. Recall that all statutory “Taxpayers” are public offices in the government.

Tax laws, for instance, are “political law” exclusively for the government or public officer and not the private citizen. Why? Because:

1. The U.S. Supreme Court identified taxes as a “political matter”. “Political law”, “political questions”, and “political matters” cannot be heard by true constitutional courts and may ONLY be heard in legislative franchise courts officiated by the Executive and not Judicial branch:

“Thus, the Court has frequently held that domicile or residence, more substantial than mere presence in transit or sojourn, is an adequate basis for taxation, including income, property, and death taxes. Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter. Of course, the situs of property may tax it regardless of the citizenship, domicile, or residence of the owner, the most obvious illustration being a tax on realty laid by the state in which the realty is located.”

Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, [347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

2. The U.S. Tax Court:
  - 2.1. Is an Article I Court in the EXECUTIVE and not JUDICIAL branch, and hence, can only officiate over matters INTERNAL to the government. See 26 U.S.C. §7441.
  - 2.2. Is a POLITICAL court in the POLITICAL branch of the government. Namely, the Executive branch.
  - 2.3. Is limited to the District of Columbia because all public offices are limited to be exercised there per 4 U.S.C. §72. It travels all over the country, but this is done ILLEGALLY and in violation of the separation of powers.
3. The activity subject to excise taxation is limited exclusively to “public offices” in the government, which is what a “trade or business” is statutorily defined as in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26).

26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(a\)\(26\)

“The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a public office.”

In Book XXVI, Section 15 of the Spirit of Laws, Montesquieu says that POLITICAL laws should not be allowed to regulate CIVIL conduct, meaning that POLITICAL laws limited exclusively to the government should not be enforced upon the PRIVATE citizen or made to “appear” as though they are “civil law” that applies to everyone:

The Spirit of Laws, Book XXVI, Section 15

15. That we should not regulate by the Principles of political Law those Things which depend on the Principles of civil Law.

As men have given up their natural independence to live under political laws, they have given up the natural community of goods to live under civil laws.

By the first, they acquired [PUBLIC] liberty; by the second, [PRIVATE] property. We should not decide by the laws of [PUBLIC] liberty, which, as we have already said, is only the government of the community, what ought to be decided by the laws concerning [PRIVATE] property. It is a paralogism to say that the good of the individual should give way to that of the public; this can never take place, except when the government of the community, or, in other words, the liberty of the subject is concerned; this does not affect such cases as relate to private property, because the public good consists in every one's having his property, which was given him by the civil laws, invariably preserved.

Cicero maintains that the Agrarian laws were unjust; because the community was established with no other view than that every one might be able to preserve his property.

Let us, therefore, lay down a certain maxim, that whenever the public good happens to be the matter in question, it is not for the advantage of the public to deprive an individual of his property, or even to retrench the least part of it by a law, or a political regulation. In this case we should follow the rigour of the civil law, which is the Palladium of [PRIVATE] property.

Thus when the public has occasion for the estate of an individual, it ought never to act by the rigour of political law; it is here that the civil law ought to triumph, which, with the eyes of a mother, regards every individual as the whole community.

If the political magistrate would erect a public edifice, or make a new road, he must indemnify those who are injured by it; the public is in this respect like an individual who treats with an individual. It is fully enough that it can oblige a citizen to sell his inheritance, and that it can strip him of this great privilege which he holds from the civil law, the not being forced to alienate his possessions.

After the nations which subverted the Roman empire had abused their very conquests, the spirit of liberty called them back to that of equity. They exercised the most barbarous laws with moderation: and if any one should doubt the truth of this, he need only read Beaumanoir's admirable work on jurisprudence, written in the twelfth century.

They mended the highways in his time as we do at present. He says, that when a highway could not be repaired, they made a new one as near the old as possible; but indemnified the proprietors at the expense of those who reaped any advantage from the road.<sup>4</sup> They determined at that time by the civil law; in our days, we determine by the law of politics.

[The Spirit of Laws, Charles de Montesquieu, 1758, Book XXVI, Section 15;
SOURCE: http://famguardian.org/Publications/SpiritOfLaws/sol\_11.htm#001]

What Montesquieu is implying is what we have been saying all along, and he said it in 1758, which was even before the Declaration of Independence was written:

1. The purpose of establishing government is exclusively to protect PRIVATE rights.
2. PRIVATE rights are protected by the CIVIL law. The civil law, in turn is based in EQUITY rather than PRIVILEGE:

“Thus when the public has occasion for the estate of an individual, it ought never to act by the rigour of political law; it is here that the civil law ought to triumph, which, with the eyes of a mother, regards every individual as the whole community.”

3. PUBLIC or government rights are protected by the PUBLIC or POLITICAL or GOVERNMENT law and NOT the CIVIL law.
4. The first and most important role of government is to prevent the POLITICAL or GOVERNMENT law from being used or especially ABUSED as an excuse to confiscate or jeopardize PRIVATE property.

Unfortunately, it is precisely the above type of corruption that Montesquieu describes that is the foundation of the present de facto government, tax system, and money system. ALL of them treat every human being as a PUBLIC officer against their consent, and impose what he calls the “rigors of the political law” upon them, in what amounts to unconstitutional eminent domain and a THEFT and CONFISCATION of otherwise PRIVATE property by enforcing PUBLIC law against PRIVATE people.

The way that the corrupt politicians have implemented the corruption described by Montesquieu was to:

1. Made people born or domiciled in the territories into privileged public officers and franchisees.

"Is it a franchise? A franchise is said to be a right reserved to the people by the constitution, as the elective franchise. Again, it is said to be a privilege conferred by grant from government, and vested in one or more individuals, as a public office. Corporations, or bodies politic are the most usual franchises known to our laws. In England they are very numerous, and are defined to be royal privileges in the hands of a subject. An information will lie in many cases growing out of these grants, especially where corporations are concerned, as by the statute of 9 Anne, ch. 20, and in which the public have an interest. In 1 Strange R. ( The King v. Sir William Louther, ) it was held that an information of this kind did not lie in the case of private rights, where no franchise of the crown has been invaded.

If this is so--if in England a privilege existing in a subject, which the king alone could grant, constitutes it a franchise--in this country, under our institutions, a privilege or immunity of a public nature, which could not be exercised without a legislative grant, would also be a franchise."
[People v. Ridgley, 21 Ill. 65, 1859 WL 6687, 11 Peck 65 (Ill., 1859) ]

2. Gave these PRIVILEGED territorial people a name of "U.S. citizen" or "U.S. resident".
3. Confused the CONSTITUTIONAL "United States****" with the STATUTORY "United States***" in their statutes, forms, and court rulings by refusing to distinguish them. This allowed them to:
  - 3.1. Conduct their war on private property and private rights under the COLOR of law, but without the actual AUTHORITY of law.
  - 3.2. Claim ignorance when the confusion was revealed.
  - 3.3. Protect their plausible deniability.
4. Called people in states of the Union the SAME NAME as that of PRIVILEGED people in the territories on government forms, so that they could deceive them into believing that they are public officers in the government.
5. Imposed whatever obligations, including tax obligations, that they want upon these privileged franchisees.

4.12.14.8 The methods of deceit and coercion on the citizenship issue

Most people are ILLEGALLY and CRIMINALLY DECEIVED and COMPELLED by covetous public servants to become STATUTORY citizens or residents even though they are TECHNICALLY not allowed to and it is a CRIME to do so. This process is done by the following devious means:

1. Asking you if you are a "citizen" or "resident" on a government form or in person but not defining the context: CONSTITUTIONAL or STATUTORY.
2. When you hear their question about your STATUS, your ignorance of the law causes you to PRESUME they mean "citizen" or "resident" in a POLITICAL or CONSTITUTIONAL context.
3. When you say "yes", they will self-servingly and ILLEGALLY PRESUME that the STATUTORY and CIVIL context applies rather than the POLITICAL or CONSTITUTIONAL context.
  - 3.1. WARNING: The CONSTITUTIONAL/POLITICAL context and the STATUTORY/CIVIL contexts are MUTUALLY exclusive and NOT equivalent!
  - 3.2. A CONSTITUTIONAL/POLITICAL "citizen of the United States****" is a "national of the United States*** of America" but is not a STATUTORY/CIVIL "citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401.
  - 3.3. The term "citizen of the United States***" used in 8 U.S.C. §1401 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A) is a STATUTORY citizen because "citizen" in statutes is always geographical and tied to domicile.
  - 3.4. The term "citizen of the United States" used in other titles of the U.S. Code including Title 26 (income tax), Title 42 (Social Security and Medicare) relates to DOMICILE rather than NATIONALITY and is a CIVIL/STATUTORY status. Both of these titles are CIVIL franchises that have DOMICILE on federal territory not within a state as a prerequisite.
  - 3.5. The U.S. Supreme Court held in the License Tax Cases that Congress cannot establish a "trade or business" in a constitutional state in order to tax it. Hence, Titles 26 and 42 do not relate to constitutional states and only relate to federal territory not within a constitutional state.

"Thus, Congress having power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes, may, without doubt, provide for granting coasting licenses, licenses to pilots, licenses to trade with the Indians, and any other licenses necessary or proper for the exercise of that great and extensive power; and the same observation is applicable to every other power of Congress, to the exercise of which the granting of licenses may be incident. All such licenses confer authority, and give rights to the licensee.

But very different considerations apply to the internal commerce or domestic trade of the States. Over this commerce and trade Congress has no power of regulation nor any direct control. This power belongs exclusively to the States. No interference by Congress with the business of citizens transacted within a State is warranted by the Constitution, except such as is strictly incidental to the exercise of powers clearly granted to the legislature. The power to authorize a business within a State is plainly repugnant to the exclusive power of the State over the same subject. It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion. But, it reaches only existing subjects. Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE, using a Social Security Number] a trade or business within a State in order to tax it."

[License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

4. Hence, with a simple presumption fostered by legal ignorance on both YOUR part and on the part of the government clerk accepting your application or form, you have often UNWITTINGLY AND ILLEGALLY TRANSITIONED from being a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen to a STATUTORY citizen domiciled on federal territory! WATCH OUT!
5. The presumptions which foster this illegal transition are a CRIMINAL offence, because:
  - 5.1. The civil status of "citizen" is an office in the U.S. government, as we will show.
  - 5.2. It is a crime to impersonate a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §911.
  - 5.3. It is a crime to impersonate a "U.S. citizen" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
6. The presumptions which foster this illegal transition are also a violation of due process of law, because conclusive presumptions undermine constitutional rights violate due process of law:

(1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests:

A conclusive presumption may be defeated where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 639-640, 94 S.Ct. 1208, 1215-presumption under Illinois law that unmarried fathers are unfit violates process] [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

7. This ILLEGAL and CRIMINAL tactic is abused in almost all most government offices, including:
  - 7.1. In federal court.
  - 7.2. Department of Motor Vehicles on the application for a driver license.
  - 7.3. Social Security Administration form SS-5.
  - 7.4. Voter registration at the country registrar of voters.
  - 7.5. Application for a United States of America Passport, Department of State Form DS-11.
  - 7.6. United States Citizenship and Immigration Services form I-9.
8. The reason they are using this devious and deceptive tactic is because they know that:
  - 8.1. A "citizen" is defined as someone who has "voluntarily submitted himself" to the LAWS and thereby become a CIVIL "subject". YOU HAVE TO VOLUNTEER AND CONSENT!
  - 8.2. They know they need your CONSENT and PERMISSION to transition from a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen to a STATUTORY citizen and therefore "subject".
  - 8.3. They don't want to ask for your consent DIRECTLY because that would imply that you have the right to NOT consent. If you said NO, their whole SCAM of ruling OVER you would be busted and people would quit in droves. They therefore have to be very INDIRECT about it.
  - 8.4. CONSENT and PERMISSION is implied if they ask you your status AND you say you HAVE that STATUS. You cannot acquire or maintain ANY civil status without your at least IMPLIED consent. See:

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
9. We call this process what it is:
  - 9.1. Criminal kidnapping of your legal identity.
  - 9.2. Criminal identity theft.
  - 9.3. Criminally impersonating a public officer.
  - 9.4. Constructive fraud.

"Fraud in its elementary common law sense of deceit -- and this is one of the meanings that fraud bears [483 U.S. 372] in the statute, see United States v. Dial, 757 F.2d. 163, 168 (7th Cir.1985) -- includes the deliberate concealment of material information in a setting of fiduciary obligation. A public official is a fiduciary toward the public, including, in the case of a judge, the litigants who appear before him, and if he deliberately conceals material information from them, he is guilty of fraud. When a judge is busily soliciting loans from counsel to one party, and not telling the opposing counsel (let alone the public), he is concealing material information in violation of his fiduciary obligations."

[McNally v. United States, 483 U.S. 350 \(1987\)]

10. Government agencies: They abuse these ILLEGAL and CRIMINAL tactics as well. They do so by the following means:
- 10.1. Ensure that their employees are not schooled in the law so that they will not realize that they are PAWNS in a game to enslave all Americans, and that “compartmentalization” is being used to ensure they don’t know more than they need to know to do their job.
- 10.2. Dismiss or FIRE employees who read the law and discover these tactics. Case in point is IRS criminal investigator Joe Banister, who discovered these tactics, exposed them and asked the agency to STOP them. He was asked to resign rather than the IRS fixing this criminal activity.
- 10.3. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.
- 10.4. Tell the public that their publications are “general” in nature and should not be relied upon. Keep in mind that a FRAUDSTER always deals in GENERALS, and the “general” context is the CONSTITUTIONAL context. Yet, even though you ASSUME the government is ALSO using the CONSTITUTIONAL context, they do the SWITCHEROO and ASSUME the OPPOSITE, which is the STATUTORY context when processing the form they handed you.
- 10.5. Publish deceptive government publications that are in deliberate conflict with what the statutes define "United States" as and then tell the public that they CANNOT rely on the publication. The IRS does this with ALL of their publications and it is FRAUD. See:
- Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability*, Form #05.007
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/ReasonableBelief.pdf>
- 10.6. Using the word “United States” as meaning the government, as in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, but deceiving the reader into thinking that it REALLY means the CONSTITUTIONAL United States. See:
- Non-Resident Non-Person Position*, Form #05.020, Sections 8 through 11
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
- 10.7. Not explaining WHICH of the two contexts apply on government forms but presuming the Statutory context ONLY.
- 10.8. Refusing to accept attachments to government forms that clarify the meaning of all terms on forms so as to:
- 10.8.1. Delegate undue discretion to judges and bureaucrats to PRESUME the statutory context.
- 10.8.2. Add things to the meaning of words that do not expressly appear in the law.
- 10.9. Refusing to define the LEGAL meaning of the terms used on government forms.
- 10.10. Confusing a “federal government” with a “national government”, removing the definitions of these two words entirely from the dictionary, or refusing in a court setting to discuss the differences.

“NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. The government of a whole nation, as distinguished from that of a local or territorial division of the nation, and also as distinguished from that of a league or confederation.

“A national government is a government of the people of a single state or nation, united as a community by what is termed the ‘social compact,’ and possessing complete and perfect supremacy over persons and things, so far as they can be made the lawful objects of civil government. A federal government is distinguished from a national government by its being the government of a community of independent and sovereign states, united by compact.” Piqua Branch Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio.St. 393.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 1176]

“FEDERAL GOVERNMENT. The system of government administered in a state formed by the union or confederation of several independent or quasi independent states; also the composite state so formed.

In strict usage, there is a distinction between a confederation and a federal government. The former term denotes a league or permanent alliance between several states, each of which is fully sovereign and independent, and each of which retains its full dignity, organization, and sovereignty, though yielding to the central authority a controlling power for a few limited purposes, such as external and diplomatic relations. In this case, the component states are the units, with respect to the confederation, and the central government acts upon them, not upon the individual citizens. In a federal government, on the other hand, the allied states form a union, not, indeed, to such an extent as to destroy their separate organization or deprive them of quasi sovereignty with respect to the administration of their purely local concerns, but so that the central power is erected into a true state or nation, possessing sovereignty both external and internal, -while the administration of national affairs is directed, and its effects felt, not by the separate states deliberating as units, but by the people of all, in their collective capacity, as citizens of the nation. The distinction is expressed, by the German writers, by the use of the two words “Staatenbund” and “Bundesstaat;” the former denoting a league or confederation of states, and the latter a federal government, or state formed by means of a league or confederation.

[Black's Law Dictionary, Revised Fourth Edition, 1968, p. 740]

10.11. Making unconstitutional and prejudicial presumptions about the status of people that connects them with government franchises without their consent or even their knowledge, in some cases. See:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11. Courts and lawyers: Courts and lawyers ESPECIALLY have refined this process to a fine art by abusing "legalese" and words of art. They do this through the following very specific tactics in the courtroom.

11.1. Prevent jurists from reading the law to discover these tactics. Most federal courthouses forbid jurors serving on duty to enter their law libraries if they have one. Thus, the judge is enabled to insist that HE is the "source of law" and that what he says is law. He thereby substitutes his will for what the law says, and prevents anyone from knowing that what he SAYS the law requires is DIFFERENT from what it ACTUALLY says.

11.2. PRESUME that ALL of the four contexts for "United States" are equivalent.

11.3. Confusing the Statutory context with the Constitutional context for geographical words of art when these two contexts are NOT equivalent and in fact are mutually exclusive contexts. Terms this trick is applied to include:

11.3.1. "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9).

11.3.2. "State" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d).

11.3.3. "U.S. person" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30).

11.3.4. "U.S. citizen" or "citizen of the United States" in 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

11.3.5. "U.S. resident" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(4).

11.4. PRESUME that CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens are EQUIVALENT under federal law. They are NOT. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen is a "non-resident" under federal law and NOT a STATUTORY "national and citizen of the United States** at birth" per 8 U.S.C. §1401.

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/WhyANational.pdf>

11.5. PRESUME that "nationality" and "domicile" are equivalent. They are NOT. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

11.6. Use the word "citizenship" in place of "nationality" OR "domicile", and refuse to disclose WHICH of the two they mean in EVERY context.

11.7. Confuse the POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL meaning of words with the civil STATUTORY context. For instance, asking on government forms whether you are a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizen and then FALSELY PRESUMING that you are a STATUTORY citizen under 8 U.S.C. §1401.

11.8. Confuse the words "domicile" and "residence" or impute either to you without satisfying the burden of proving that you EXPRESSLY CONSENTED to it and thereby illegally kidnap your civil legal identity against your will. One can have only one "domicile" but many "residences" and BOTH require your consent. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
 FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Domicile.pdf>

12. Abusing the words "includes" and "including" as a means of unlawfully adding things to the meanings of words that do not expressly appear and are therefore purposefully excluded per the rules of statutory construction. Such words include:

12.1. "taxpayer" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14).

12.2. "trade or business" in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26). Means "the functions of a public office" and excludes activities of PRIVATE human beings or private entities.

12.3. "State"

12.4. "Employer" in 26 U.S.C. §3401(d). Means a government agency which a public officer works for, and not a private company.

12.5. "Employee" in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c). Means a public officer in the U.S. and not state government and not private human beings per 5 U.S.C. §2105(a).

For details on the unconstitutional and criminal abuse of language by the government, judges, and prosecutors, see:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

12.6. Refusing to allow the jury to read the definitions in the law and then give them a definition that is in conflict with the statutory definition. This substitutes the JUDGES will for what the law expressly says and thereby substitutes PUBLIC POLICY for the written law.

12.7. Deliberately omitting or refusing to discuss or address any of the above types of abuses in litigation raised against the government in any court, or even penalizing those who raise these issues, and thereby:

12.7.1. Criminally obstructing justice.

12.7.2. Engaging in organized crime and racketeering, which is committed daily by most federal judges.

12.7.3. Engaging in criminal witness tampering against those who want to stop criminal activities by public servants. See 18 U.S.C. §1512.

13. When the above criminal tactics of public dis-servants are exposed as the FRAUD and CRIME that they are, the only thing the de facto thieves in government can do is:

13.1. Try to ignore the issue raised like you never said it.

13.2. Hope you don't approach the grand jury and get them indicted for their crime.

13.3. If you do, go after you with what we call "selective enforcement" as a way to defend themselves illegally.

4.12.14.9 How the deceit and compulsion is implemented in the courtroom

"Shall the throne of iniquity [the judge's bench], which devises evil by [obfuscating the] law, have fellowship with You [Christians]?" They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God shall cut them off." [Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV]*

The U.S. Supreme Court indirectly identified the distinctions between the CONSTITUTIONAL and the STATUTORY contexts and how one transitions from being a Constitutional to a Statutory citizen in the following holdings. These holdings are important so you will recognize what happens to your standing in court when you switch from a CONSTITUTIONAL to a STATUTORY "citizen". That way you will recognize WHERE the court's jurisdiction is coming from: the CONSTITUTION or the STATUTES. The CONSTITUTION only deals with HUMANS and LAND while the STATUTES deal almost entirely with FRANCHISES and ARTIFICIAL creations of CONGRESS.

1. First the U.S. Supreme Court held that a corporation is NOT a "citizen" as used in the CONSTITUTION:

"That by no sound or reasonable interpretation, can a corporation-a mere faculty in law, be transformed into a citizen, or treated as a citizen [within the Constitution]. 2d. That the second section of the third article of the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States with jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, cannot be made to embrace controversies to which corporations and not citizens are parties; and that the assumption, by those courts, of jurisdiction in such cases, must involve a palpable infraction of the article and section just referred to. 3d. That in the cause before us, the party defendant in the Circuit Court having been a corporation aggregate, created by the State of New Jersey, the Circuit Court could not properly take cognizance thereof; and, therefore, this cause should be remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions that it be dismissed for the want of jurisdiction."*
[Rundle v. Delaware & Raritan Canal Co., 55 U.S. 80 (1852)]

2. But on the OTHER hand, they held that a corporation IS a "citizen" or "resident" under federal STATUTORY law.

*"...it is well settled that a corporation created by a state is a citizen of the state, within the meaning of those provisions of the constitution and statutes of the United States which define the jurisdiction of the federal courts. Railroad Co. v. Railroad Co., 112 U.S. 414, 5 Sup.Ct.Rep. 208; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 178; Pennsylvania v. Bridge Co., 13 How. 518."
[State of Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265 (1888)]*

3. The U.S. Supreme Court held that ONLY private HUMAN men and women can sue in a CONSTITUTIONAL court, not corporations:

"Aliens, or citizens of different states, are not less susceptible of these apprehensions, nor can they be supposed to be less the objects of constitutional provision, because they are allowed to sue by a corporate name. That name, indeed, cannot be an alien or a citizen; but the persons whom it represents may be the one or the other; and the controversy is, in fact and in law, between those persons suing in their corporate character, by their corporate name, for a corporate right, and the individual against whom the suit may be instituted. Substantially *88 and essentially, the parties in such a case, where the members of the corporation are aliens, or citizens of a different state from the opposite party, come within the spirit and terms of the jurisdiction conferred by the constitution on the national tribunals."*

If the constitution would authorize congress to give the courts of the union jurisdiction in this case, in consequence of the character of the members of the corporation, then the judicial act ought to be construed to give it. For the term citizen ought to be understood as it is used in the constitution, and as it is used in other laws. That is, to describe the real persons who come into court, in this case, under their corporate name.

That corporations composed of citizens are considered by the legislature as citizens, under certain [STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL] circumstances, is to be strongly inferred from the registering act. It never could be intended that an American registered vessel, abandoned to an insurance company composed of citizens, should lose her character as an American vessel; and yet this would be the consequence of declaring that the members of the corporation were, to every intent and purpose, out of view, and merged in the corporation.

The court feels itself authorized by the case in 12 Mod. on a question of jurisdiction, to look to 92*92 the character of the individuals who compose the corporation, and they think that the precedents of this court, though they were not decisions on argument, ought not to be absolutely disregarded.
[Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 9 U.S. 61(1809)]

4. They also held that when a HUMAN or CONSTITUTIONAL “citizen” or “person” sues a corporation, then they have to sue SPECIFIC PEOPLE in the corporation instead of the whole corporation if the court is a CONSTITUTIONAL court rather than a STATUTORY FRANCHISE court:

*It is important that the style and character of this party litigant, as well as the source and manner of its existence, be borne in mind, as both are deemed material in considering the question of the jurisdiction of this court, and of the Circuit Court. It is important, too, to be remembered, that the question here raised stands wholly unaffected by any legislation, competent or incompetent, which may have been attempted in the organization of the courts of the United States; but depends exclusively upon the construction of the 2d section of the 3d article of the Constitution, which defines the judicial power of the United States; first, with respect to the subjects embraced within that power; and, secondly, with respect to those whose character may give them access, as parties, to the courts of the United States. In the second branch of this definition, we find the following enumeration, as descriptive of those whose position, as parties, will authorize their pleading or being impleaded in those courts; and this position is limited to "controversies to which the United States are a party; controversies 97*97 between two or more States, — between citizens of different States, — between citizens of the same State, claiming lands under grants of different States, — and between the citizens of a State and foreign citizens or subjects."*

*Now, it has not been, and will not be, pretended, that this corporation can, in any sense, be identified with the United States, or is endowed with the privileges of the latter; or if it could be, it would clearly be exempted from all liability to be sued in the Federal courts. Nor is it pretended, that this corporation is a State of this Union; nor, being created by, and situated within, the State of New Jersey, can it be held to be the citizen or subject of a foreign State. It must be, then, under that part of the enumeration in the article quoted, which gives to the courts of the United States jurisdiction in controversies between citizens of different States, that either the Circuit Court or this court can take cognizance of the corporation as a party; and this is, in truth, the sole foundation on which that cognizance has been assumed, or is attempted to be maintained. The proposition, then, on which the authority of the Circuit Court and of this tribunal is based, is this: The Delaware and Raritan Canal Company is either a citizen of the United States, or it is a citizen of the State of New Jersey. This proposition, startling as its terms may appear, either to the legal or political apprehension, is undeniably the basis of the jurisdiction asserted in this case, and in all others of a similar character, and must be established, or that jurisdiction wholly fails. Let this proposition be examined a little more closely.

*The term citizen will be found rarely occurring in the writers upon English law; those writers almost universally adopting, as descriptive of those possessing rights or sustaining obligations, political or social, the term subject, as more suited to their peculiar local institutions. But, in the writers of other nations, and under systems of polity deemed less liberal than that of England, we find the term citizen familiarly reviving, and the character and the rights and duties that term implies, particularly defined. Thus, Vattel, in his 4th book, has a chapter, (cap. 6th,) the title of which is: "The concern a nation may have in the actions of her citizens." A few words from the text of that chapter will show the apprehension of this author in relation to this term. "Private persons," says he, "who are members of one nation, may offend and ill-treat the citizens of another; it remains for us to examine what share a state may have in the actions of her citizens, and what are the rights and obligations of sovereigns in that respect." And again: "Whoever uses a citizen ill, indirectly offends the state, which is bound to protect this citizen." The meaning of the term citizen 98*98 or subject, in the apprehension of English jurists, as indicating persons in their natural character, in contradistinction to artificial or fictitious persons created by law, is further elucidated by those jurists, in their treatises upon the origin and capacities and objects of those artificial persons designated by the name of corporations. Thus, Mr. Justice Blackstone, in the 18th chapter of his 1st volume, holds this language: "We have hitherto considered persons in their natural capacities, and have treated of their rights and duties. But, as all personal rights die with the person; and, as the necessary forms of investing a series of individuals, one after another, with the same identical rights, would be inconvenient, if not impracticable; it has been found necessary, when it is for the advantage of the public to have any particular rights kept on foot and continued, to constitute artificial persons, who maintain a perpetual succession, and enjoy a kind of legal immortality. These artificial persons are called corporations."*

1 This same distinguished writer, in the first book of his Commentaries, p. 123, says, "The rights of persons are
 2 such as concern and are annexed to the persons of men, and when the person to whom they are due is regarded,
 3 are called simply rights; but when we consider the person from whom they are due, they are then denominated,
 4 duties," And again, cap. 10th of the same book, treating of the PEOPLE, he says, "The people are either aliens,
 5 that is, born out of the dominions or allegiance of the crown; or natives, that is, such as are born within it." Under 6 our own systems of polity, the term, citizen, implying the same or similar relations to the government and to
 7 society which appertain to the term, subject, in England, is familiar to all. Under either system, the term used is 8 designed to apply to man in his individual character, and to his natural capacities; to a being, or agent,
 9 possessing social and political rights, and sustaining, social, political, and moral obligations. It is in this
 10 acceptation only, therefore, that the term, citizen, in the article of the Constitution, can be received and 11 understood. When distributing the judicial power, that article extends it to controversies between citizens of 12 different States. This must mean the natural physical beings composing those separate communities, and can,
 13 by no violence of interpretation, be made to signify artificial, incorporeal, theoretical, and invisible creations.
 14 A corporation, therefore, being not a natural person, but a mere creature of the mind, invisible and intangible,
 15 cannot be a citizen of a State, or of the United States, and cannot fall within the terms or the power of the 16 above-mentioned article, and can therefore neither plead nor be impleaded in the courts of the United States.
 17 Against this position it may be urged, that the 99*99 converse thereof has been ruled by this court, and that this
 18 matter is no longer open for question. In answer to such an argument, I would reply, that this is a matter involving 19 a construction of the Constitution, and that wherever the construction or the integrity of that sacred instrument
 20 is involved, I can hold myself trammelled by no precedent or number of precedents. That instrument is above all 21 precedents; and its integrity every one is bound to vindicate against any number of precedents, if believed to 22 trench upon its supremacy. Let us examine into what this court has propounded in reference to its jurisdiction in 23 cases in which corporations have been parties; and endeavor to ascertain the influence that may be claimed for 24 what they have heretofore ruled in support of such jurisdiction. The first instance in which this question was 25 brought directly before this court, was that of the Bank of the United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 61. An 26 examination of this case will present a striking instance of the error into which the strongest minds may be led,
 27 whenever they shall depart from the plain, common acceptation of terms, or from well ascertained truths, for the 28 attainment of conclusions, which the subtlest ingenuity is incompetent to sustain. This criticism upon the decision
 29 in the case of the Bank v. Deveaux, may perhaps be shielded from the charge of presumptuousness, by a
 30 subsequent decision of this court, hereafter to be mentioned. In the former case, the Bank of the United States,
 31 a corporation created by Congress, was the party plaintiff, and upon the question of the capacity of such a
 32 party to sue in the courts of the United States, this court said, in reference to that question, "The jurisdiction
 33 of this court being limited, so far as respects the character of the parties in this particular case, to controversies
 34 between citizens of different States, both parties must be citizens, to come within the description. That invisible,
 35 intangible, and artificial being, that mere legal entity, a corporation aggregate, is certainly not a citizen, and
 36 consequently cannot sue or be sued in the courts of the United States, unless the rights of the members in this
 37 respect can be exercised in their corporate name. If the corporation be considered as a mere faculty, and not
 38 as a company of individuals, who, in transacting their business, may use a legal name, they must be excluded
 39 from the courts of the Union." The court having shown the necessity for citizenship in both parties, in order to 40 give jurisdiction; having shown farther, from the nature of corporations, their absolute incompatibility with 41 citizenship, attempts some qualification of these indisputable and clearly stated positions, which, if intelligible at 42 all, must be taken as wholly subversive of the positions so laid down. After stating the requisite of citizenship, and 43 showing that a corporation 100*100 cannot be a citizen, "and consequently that it cannot sue or be sued in the 44 courts of the United States," the court goes on to add, "unless the rights of the members can be exercised in their 45 corporate name." Now, it is submitted that it is in this mode only, viz. in their corporate name, that the rights of 46 the members can be exercised; that it is this which constitutes the character, and being, and functions of a
 47 corporation. If it is meant beyond this, that each member, or the separate members, or a portion of them, can take 48 to themselves the character and functions of the aggregate and merely legal being, then the corporation would 49 be dissolved; its unity and perpetuity, the essential features of its nature, and the great objects of its existence,
 50 would be at an end. It would present the anomaly of a being existing and not existing at the same time. This 51 strange and obscure qualification, attempted by the court, of the clear, legal principles previously announced by 52 them, forms the introduction to, and apology for, the proceeding, adopted by them, by which they undertook to 53 adjudicate upon the rights of the corporation, through the supposed citizenship of the individuals interested in
 54 that corporation. They assert the power to look beyond the corporation, to presume or to ascertain the residence
 55 of the individuals composing it, and to model their decision upon that foundation. In other words, they affirm that 56 in an action at law, the purely legal rights, asserted by one of the parties upon the record, may be maintained by 57 showing or presuming that these rights are vested in some other person who is no party to the controversy before
 58 them.

59 Thus stood the decision of the Bank of the United States v. Deveaux, wholly irreconcilable with correct definition,
 60 and a puzzle to professional apprehension, until it was encountered by this court, in the decision of the Louisville
 61 and Cincinnati Railroad Company v. Letson, reported in 2 Howard, 497. In the latter decision, the court, unable 62 to untie the judicial entanglement of the Bank and Deveaux, seem to have applied to it the sword of the conqueror;
 63 but, unfortunately, in the blow they have dealt at the ligature which perplexed them, they have severed a portion
 64 of the temple itself. They have not only contravened all the known definitions and adjudications with respect to 65 the nature of corporations, but they have repudiated the doctrines of the civilians as to what is imported by the 66 term subject or citizen, and repealed, at the same time, that restriction in the Constitution which limited the 67 jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between "citizens of different States." They have 68 asserted that, "a corporation created by, and transacting business in a State, is to be deemed an inhabitant of the
 69 State, capable of being treated 101*101 as a citizen, for all the purposes of suing and being sued, and that an

1 averment of the facts of its creation, and the place of transacting its business, is sufficient to give the circuit
2 court's jurisdiction.

3 The first thing which strikes attention, in the position thus affirmed, is the want of precision and perspicuity in its 4 terms. The court affirm that a corporation created by, and transacting business within a State, is to be deemed
5 an inhabitant of that State. But the article of the Constitution does not make inhabitancy a requisite of the 6 condition of suing or being sued; that requisite is citizenship. Moreover, although citizenship implies the right
7 of residence, the latter by no means implies citizenship. Again, it is said that these corporations may be treated
8 as citizens, for the purpose of suing or being sued. Even if the distinction here attempted were comprehensible, it
9 would be a sufficient reply to it, that the Constitution does not provide that those who may be treated as citizens,
10 may sue or be sued, but that the jurisdiction shall be limited to citizens only; citizens in right and in fact. The 11 distinction attempted seems to be without meaning, for the Constitution or the laws nowhere define such a
12 being as a quasi citizen, to be called into existence for particular purposes; a being without any of the attributes
13 of citizenship, but the one for which he may be temporarily and arbitrarily created, and to be dismissed from 14 existence the moment the particular purposes of his creation shall have been answered. In a political, or legal 15 sense, none can be treated or dealt with by the government as citizens, but those who are citizens in reality. It
16 would follow, then, by necessary induction, from the argument of the court, that as a corporation must be treated
17 as a citizen, it must be so treated to all intents and purposes, because it is a citizen. Each citizen (if not under old 18 governments) certainly does, under our system of polity, possess the same rights and faculties, and sustain the 19 same obligations, political, social, and moral, which appertain to each of his fellow-citizens. As a citizen, then,
20 of a State, or of the United States, a corporation would be eligible to the State or Federal legislatures; and if
21 created by either the State or Federal governments, might, as a native-born citizen, aspire to the office of 22 President of the United States — or to the command of armies, or fleets, in which last example, so far as the 23 character of the commander would form a part of it, we should have the poetical romance of the spectre ship
24 realized in our Republic. And should this incorporeal and invisible commander not acquit himself in color or in 25 conduct, we might see him, provided his arrest were practicable, sent to answer his delinquencies before a court-
26 martial, and subjected to the penalties 102*102 of the articles of war. Sir Edward Coke has declared, that a
27 corporation cannot commit treason, felony, or other crime; neither is it capable of suffering a traitor's or felon's
28 punishment; for it is not liable to corporeal penalties — that it can perform no personal duties, for it cannot take
29 an oath for the due execution of an office; neither can it be arrested or committed to prison, for its existence being
30 ideal, no man can arrest it; neither can it be excommunicated, for it has no soul. But these doctrines of Lord Coke
31 were founded upon an apprehension of the law now treated as antiquated and obsolete. His lordship did not
32 anticipate an improvement by which a corporation could be transformed into a citizen, and by that transformation
33 be given a physical existence, and endowed with soul and body too. The incongruities here attempted to be shown
34 as necessarily deducible from the decisions of the cases of the Bank of the United States v. Deveaux, and of the 35 Cincinnati and Louisville Railroad Company v. Letson, afford some illustration of the effects which must ever
36 follow a departure from the settled principles of the law. These principles are always traceable to a wise and 37 deeply founded experience; they are, therefore, ever consentaneous, and in harmony with themselves and with 38 reason; and whenever abandoned as guides to the judicial course, the aberration must lead to bewildering
39 uncertainty and confusion. Conducted by these principles, consecrated both by time and the 40 obedience of sages, I am brought to the following conclusions: 1st. That by no sound or 41 reasonable interpretation, can a corporation — a mere faculty in law, be transformed
42 into a citizen, or treated as a citizen. 2d. That the second section of the third article of 43 the Constitution, investing the courts of the United States with jurisdiction in 44 controversies between citizens of different States, cannot be made to embrace 45 controversies to which corporations and not citizens are parties; and that the 46 assumption, by those courts, of jurisdiction in such cases, must involve a palpable
47 infraction of the article and section just referred to. 3d. That in the cause before us, the 48 party defendant in the Circuit Court having been a corporation aggregate, created by the 49 State of New Jersey, the Circuit Court could not properly take cognizance thereof; and,
50 therefore, this cause should be remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions that it be 51 dismissed for the want of jurisdiction.

52 [Rundle Et Al v. Delaware and Raritan Canal Company, 55 U.S. 80 (1852)]

53 So, in the CONSTITUTION, corporations or other artificial entities are NOT “citizens”, but under federal STATUTORY law
54 granting jurisdiction to federal courts, they ARE. And what statutory law is THAT? See 28 U.S.C. §1332:

55 TITLE 28 > PART IV > CHAPTER 85 > § 1332
56 § 1332. Diversity of citizenship; amount in controversy; costs

57 (a) The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions where the matter in controversy exceeds 58 the sum or value of $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is between—

59 (1) citizens of different States;

60 (2) citizens of a State and citizens or subjects of a foreign state;

(3) citizens of different States and in which citizens or subjects of a foreign state are additional parties; and

(4) a foreign state, defined in section 1603 (a) of this title, as plaintiff and citizens of a State or of different States.

[ . . . ]

(e) The word "States", as used in this section, includes the Territories, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

We can see from the above that the "State" they are talking about is NOT a constitutional state of the Union, but rather is identified in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) as a federal territory NOT within any state of the Union. All such territories are in fact "corporations":

*At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st Am. ed. 1845). The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, Commentaries *467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the Dictionary Act recodified. See W. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 261 (1893) ("All corporations were originally modeled upon a state or nation"); I. J. Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people") (quoting United [495 U.S. 182, 202] States v. Maurice, 26 F.Cas. 1211, 1216 (No. 15,747) (CC Va. 1823) (Marshall, C. J.); Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 231 (1851) (United States is "a corporation"). See generally Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 561-562 (1819) (explaining history of term "corporation"). [Ngiraingas v. Sanchez, 495 U.S. 182 (1990) ]*

Hence, this STATUTORY "State" mentioned in 28 U.S.C. §1332 is obviously a STATUTORY rather than CONSTITUTIONAL "State", and hence a STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL "citizen". Therefore, a person who claims to be a constitutional citizen or a human being could not partake of the statutory "privilege" granted by the above franchise in 28 U.S.C. §1332. And YES, that is what it is: A franchise, "Congressionally created right", or "public right". All franchises presume that the actors, who are all public officers of "U.S. Inc.", are domiciled upon and therefore citizens of federal territory and NOT a state of the Union. Those who are HUMANS don't need franchises or privileges, and can instead invoke CONSTITUTIONAL diversity instead of STATUTORY diversity of citizenship under Article III, Section 2 to litigate in a CONSTITUTIONAL un-enfranchised court.

The above analysis also clearly explains the following, because you can't be a "citizen" under federal statutory law unless you are domiciled on federal territory not within a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union:

"Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts. Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683."
[Black's Law Dictionary, 4th Ed., p. 311]

All federal District Courts are Article IV, Section 3, Clause 2 franchise courts that manage government territory, property, and franchises. Federal corporations are an example of such franchises. This is proven with thousands of pages of evidence in the following. Therefore, the ONLY type of "domicile" they could mean above is domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union.

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
<http://sedm.org/ItemInfo/Ebooks/WhatHappJustice/WhatHappJustice.htm>

We also know based on the previous section that corporations are not constitutional citizens, so they can't be "born or naturalized" like a human being. BUT they are "born or naturalized" by other methods to become STATUTORY "citizens" of a particular jurisdiction. For instance:

1. The act of FORMING a corporation gives it "birth", in a legal sense.
2. The place or jurisdiction that the corporation is legally formed becomes the effective civil domicile of that corporation.

1 "A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was
 2 created, and of that state or country only."
 3 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum, Corporations, §886]

- 4 3. A corporation can only be domiciled in ONE place at a time. Hence, it can only be a "citizen" of one jurisdiction at a
 5 time. The place where the corporate headquarters is located usually is treated as the effective domicile of the 6 corporation.
 7 4. If a corporation is formed in a specific state of the Union, then it is a statutory but not constitutional citizen in THAT
 8 state only and a statutory alien in every OTHER state AND also alien in respect to federal jurisdiction.

9 "A foreign corporation is one that derives its existence solely from the laws of another state, government, or 10 country, and the term is used indiscriminately, sometimes in statutes, to designate either a corporation created
 11 by or under the laws of another state or a corporation created by or under the laws of a foreign country."

12 "A federal corporation operating within a state is considered a domestic corporation rather than a foreign 13 corporation. The United States government is a foreign corporation with respect to a state."
 14 [19 Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.), Corporations, §883 (2003)]

15 Whenever you hear a judge or government prosecutor use the word "citizen" in federal court, they really are referring to civil 16 domicile on federal territory not within any state of the Union. They are setting a trap to exploit your legal ignorance using 17 "words of art". If they are referring to your "nationality" rather than whether you are a "citizen", they are referring to 18 CONSTITUTIONAL citizenship and whether you are a "national" under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). If they ask you whether 19 you are a "citizen" or a "citizen of the United States", you should always respond by asking:

- 20 1. Which of the three "United States" defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652
 21 \(1945\) do you mean?
 22 2. Do you mean my nationality or my domicile in that place?

23 ..and then you should say you are:

- 24 1. Domiciled outside the statutory "United States" and therefore a statutory alien in relation to federal jurisdiction.
 25 2. A CONSTITUTIONAL citizen
 26 3. NOT a STATUTORY citizen under any federal statute or regulation, including but not limited to 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26
 27 U.S.C. §3121(e), and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c), all of which are STATUTORY and not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens:

 29 § 3121. Definitions

30 (e) State, United States, and citizen

31 For purposes of this chapter—

32 (1) State

33 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, 34 and American Samoa.

35 (2) United States [FEDERAL TERRITORY NOT PART OF ANY STATE]

36 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the 37 Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

38 We should also point out that 18 U.S.C. §911 makes it a CRIME for a constitutional citizen to claim to be the statutory citizen
 39 described in 8 U.S.C. §1401.

40 4.12.14.10 How you help the government terrorists kidnap your legal identity and transport it to "The District of 41 Criminals"

42 People who begin as a "constitutional" citizen commonly commit this crime and unwittingly in most cases transform 43 themselves into a privileged "statutory" citizen by performing any one of the following unlawful acts. These unlawful acts

at least make them appear to be a legal “person” under federal law with an effective domicile in the District of Columbia/federal zone and a “SUBJECT citizen”:

- Opening up bank or financial accounts WITHOUT using the proper form, which is an AMENDED IRS Form W-8BEN. If you don’t use this form or a derivative and invoke the protection of the law for your status as a statutory “non-resident non-person” not engaged in a “trade or business”, the financial institution will falsely and prejudicially “presume” that you are both a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and a “U.S. person” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(30\). To prevent this problem, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- Filing the WRONG tax form, the IRS Form 1040, rather than the correct 1040NR form. This constitutes an election to become a “resident alien” engaged in a “trade or business”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(4\)\(B\) and 26 U.S.C. §6013\(g\) and (h). This can be prevented using the following form, for instance:

Federal Nonresident Nonstatutory Claim for Return of Funds Unlawfully Paid to the Government-Long, Form #15.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- Applying for or accepting a government benefit, privilege, or license, such as Social Security, Medicare, or TANF. This would require them to fill out an SSA Form SS-5. 20 C.F.R. §422.104 requires that only those with a domicile on federal territory and who are therefore statutory “U.S. citizens” or “U.S. permanent residents”, may apply for Social Security. This causes a waiver of sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605\(a\)\(2\) and makes you into a “resident alien” who is a “public officer” within the government granting the privilege or benefit. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- Filling out a federal or state government form incorrectly by describing yourself as a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 rather than a “national but not a citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(21\) and/or 8 U.S.C. §1452. This can be prevented by attaching the following form:

Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- Improperly declaring your citizenship status to a federal court or not declaring it at all. If you describe yourself as a “citizen” or a “U.S. citizen” without further clarification, or if you don’t describe your citizenship at all in court pleadings, then federal courts will self-servingly “presume” that you are a statutory rather than constitutional citizen pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 who has a domicile on federal territory. This is also confirmed by the following authorities:

“The term ‘citizen’, as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is substantially synonymous with the term ‘domicile’. Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 557.”
[Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., 55 F.Supp. 981, D.C.PA. (1944)]

“Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts, Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 311]

To prevent this problem, use the following attachment to all the filings in the court:

Federal Pleading/Motion/Petition Attachment, Litigation Tool #01.002
<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

- Accepting public office within the federal government. This causes you to be treated AS IF you are acting in a representative capacity representing the federal corporation called the “United States” as defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002\(15\)\(A\). Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17\(b\), you assume the same domicile and citizenship of the party you represent. All corporations are “citizens” with a domicile where they were created, which is the District of Columbia in the case of the federal United States.

“A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only.”
[19 Corpus Juris Secundum, Corporations, §886]

- Failing to rebut false information returns filed against you reflecting nonzero earnings, such as any of the following forms:
7.1. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1042’s, Form #04.003. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.2. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1098's, Form #04.004. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.3. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form 1099's, Form #04.005. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.4. Correcting Erroneous IRS Form W-2's, Form #04.006. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

All of the above information return forms connect you with the “trade or business” franchise pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6041\(a\). A “trade or business” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(26\) as “the functions of a public office”. Engaging in a “trade or business” makes you into a “resident alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\). See older versions of 26 C.F.R. §301.7701-5 for proof at the link below:

Later in section 4.12.16 we will describe in detail how to avoid and prevent being DECEIVED or COMPELLED into illegally assuming the STATUTORY CIVIL STATUS of “citizen” or “resident”.

4.12.14.11 Questions you can ask that will expose their deceit and compulsion

“Be diligent to [investigate and expose the truth for yourself and thereby] present yourself [and the public servants who are your fiduciaries and stewards under the Constitution] approved to God, a worker who does not need to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word [and the deeds] of truth. But shun profane babblings [government propaganda, tyranny, and usurpation] for they will increase to more ungodliness. And their message [and their harmful affects] will spread like cancer [to destroy our society and great Republic].”
[2 Tim. 2:15-17, Bible, NKJV]

Our favorite tactic to silence legally ignorant and therefore presumptuous people in PRESUMING that we are incorrect is to simply ask them questions just like Jesus did that will expose their deceit and folly. Below are a few questions you can ask judges and attorneys that they can’t answer in their entirety without contradicting either themselves or the law itself. By forcing them to engage in these contradictions and “cognitive dissonance” you prove indirectly that they are lying, because anyone who contradicts their own testimony is a LIAR. There are many more questions like these at the end of the pamphlet, but these are high level enough to use on the average American to really get them thinking about the subject:

1. If the Declaration of Independence says that ALL just powers of government derive ONLY from our consent and we don’t consent to ANYTHING, then aren’t the criminal laws the ONLY thing that can be enforced against us, since they don’t require our consent to enforce?
2. Certainly, if we DO NOT want “protection” then there ought to be a way to abandon it and the obligation to pay for it, at least temporarily, right?
3. If the word “permanent” in the phrase “permanent allegiance” is in fact conditioned on our consent and is therefore technically NOT “permanent”, as revealed in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(31), can’t we revoke it either temporarily or conditionally as long as we specify the conditions in advance or the specific laws we have it for and those we don’t?

8 U.S.C. §1101 Definitions [for the purposes of citizenship]

(a) As used in this chapter—

(31) The term “permanent” means a relationship of continuing or lasting nature, as distinguished from temporary, but a relationship may be permanent even though it is one that may be dissolved eventually at the instance either of the United States** or of the individual, in accordance with law.

4. If the “citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 involves TWO components, being “national” and “citizen”, can’t we just abandon the “citizen” part if we want to and wouldn’t we do that by simply changing our domicile to be outside of federal territory, since civil status is tied to domicile?

citizen. One who, under the Constitution and laws of the United States[***], or of a particular state, is a member of the political community, owing allegiance and being entitled to the enjoyment of full civil [STATUTORY] rights. All persons born or naturalized in the United States[***], and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States[***] and of the state wherein they reside. U.S. Const., 14th Amend. See Citizenship.*

“Citizens” are members of a political community who, in their associated capacity, have established or submitted themselves to the dominion of a government [by giving up their rights] for the promotion of their general welfare and the protection of their individual as well as collective rights. Herriott v. City of Seattle, 81 Wash.2d. 48, 500 P.2d. 101, 109.

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 244]

5. If you can't abandon the civil protection of Caesar and the obligation to pay for it, isn't there an unconstitutional taking without compensation of all the PUBLIC rights attached to the statutory status of "citizen" if we do not consent to the status?
6. If the separation of powers does not permit federal civil jurisdiction within states, how could the statutory status of "citizen" carry any federal obligations whatsoever while in a constitutional state?
7. If domicile is what imparts the "force of law" to civil statutes per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17 and we don't have a domicile on federal territory, then how could we in turn have any CIVIL status under the laws of Congress?
8. How can the government claim we have an obligation to pay for protection we don't want if it is a maxim of the common law that we may REFUSE to accept a "benefit"?

No one is obliged to accept a benefit against his consent. Dig. 50, 17, 69. But if he does not dissent he will be considered as assenting. Vide Assent."

Potest quis renunciare pro se, et suis, juri quod pro se introductum est.
A man may relinquish, for himself and his heirs, a right which was introduced for his own benefit. See 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 83.

Quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se inducto.
Any one may renounce a law introduced for his own benefit. To this rule there are some exceptions. See 1 Bouv. Inst. n. 83.
[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;
SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/BouvierMaximsOfLaw/BouviersMaxims.htm>]

9. What if I define what they call "protection" NOT as a "benefit" but an "injury"? Who is the customer here? The CUSTOMER should be the only one who defines what a "benefit" is and only has to pay for it if HE defines it as a "benefit".
10. Is the "citizen" in Title 8 of the U.S. Code the same "citizen" that obligations attach to under Titles 26 and 31? Could Congress have instead created an office and a franchise with the same name of "citizen of the United States" under Title 26, imposed duties upon it, and fooled everyone into thinking it is the same "citizen" as the one in Title 8?
11. If the Bible says that Christians can't consent to anything Caesar does or have contracts with him (Exodus 23:32-33, Judges 2:1-4), then how could I lawfully have any discretionary status under Caesar's laws such as STATUTORY "citizen"? The Bible says I can't have a king above me.

"Owe no one anything [including ALLEGIANCE], except to love one another; for he who loves his neighbor has fulfilled the law."
[Romans 13:8, Bible, NKJV]

12. If the Bible says that GOD bought us for a price and therefore OWNS us, then by what authority does Caesar claim ownership or the right to extract "rent" called "income tax" upon what belongs to God? Isn't Caesar therefore simply renting out STOLEN property and laundering money if he charges "taxes" on the use of that which belongs to God?

"For you were bought [by Christ] at a price [His blood]; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's [property]."
[1 Cor. 6:20, Bible, NKJV]

Anyone who can't answer ALL the above questions with answers that don't contradict themselves or the REST of the law is lying to you about citizenship, and probably because they covet your property and benefit commercially from the lie. Our research in answering the above very interesting questions reveals that there is a way to terminate our status as a STATUTORY "citizen" and "customer" without terminating our nationality, but that it is carefully hidden. The results of our search will be of great interest to many. Enjoy.

4.12.14.12 The Hague Convention HIDES the ONE portion that differentiates NATIONALITY from DOMICILE

After World War II, countries got together in the Hague Convention and reached international agreements on the proper treatment of people everywhere. The United States was a party to that international agreement. Within that agreement is the following document:

The Great  IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

1 Not surprisingly, the above article within the convention was written originally in FRENCH but is NOT available in or
 2 translated into ENGLISH. Why? Because English speaking governments obviously don't want their inhabitants knowing
 3 the distinctions between NATIONALITY and DOMICILE and how they interact with each other. The SEDM sister site has
 4 found a French speaking person to translate the article, got it translated, and posted it at the following location:

5 4.12.14.13 Social Security Administration HIDES your citizenship status in their NUMIDENT records

6 Your citizenship status is represented in the Social Security NUMIDENT record maintained by the Social Security
 7 Administration. The field called "CSP" within NUMIDENT contains a one character code that represents your citizenship
 8 status. Valid CSP values are as follows:

9 Table 4-42: SSA NUMIDENT CSP Code Values

| # | CSP Code Value | Statutory meaning                 | Constitutional meaning                          |
|---|----------------|-----------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|
| 1 | A              | U.S. citizen (per 8 U.S.C. §1401) | None                                            |
| 2 | B              | Legal Alien Allowed to Work       | Alien (foreign national)                        |
| 3 | C              | Legal Alien Not Allowed to Work   | Alien (foreign national)                        |
| 4 | D              | Other                             | "citizen of the United States*" or "Citizen" |

10 This information is DELIBERATELY concealed and obfuscated from public view by the following Social Security policies:

- 11 1. The meaning of the CSP codes is NOT listed in the Social Security Program Operations Manual System (POMS)
 12 online so you can't find out.
 13 <https://s044a90.ssa.gov/apps10/poms.nsf/partlist!OpenView>
- 14 2. Employees at the SSA offices are NOT allowed to know and typically DO NOT know what the code means.
- 15 3. If you submit a Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA) request to SSA asking them what the CSP code means, they will 16 respond that the values of the codes are CLASSIFIED and therefore UNKNOWABLE by the public. You ARE NOT
 17 allowed to know WHAT citizenship status they associate with you. See the following negative response:

Social Security Admin. FOIA for CSP Code Values, Exhibit #01.011
<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

- 18 4. The ONLY option they give you in block 5 entitled "CITIZENSHIP" are the following. They REFUSE to distinguish
 19 WHICH "United States" is implied in the term "U.S. citizen", and if they told the truth, the ONLY citizen they could
 20 lawfully mean is a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" per 8 U.S.C. §1401 and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen, who is a 21 STATUTORY non-resident and non-citizen national in relation to the national government with a foreign domicile:
 22 4.1. "U.S. citizen"
 23 4.2. "Legal Alien Allowed to Work"
 24 4.3. "Legal Alien NOT allowed to Work" (See Instructions on Page 1)
 25 4.4. "Other" (See instructions on page 1)

26 See:

SSA Form SS-5
<http://www.famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/ss-5.pdf>

27 Those who are domiciled outside the statutory "United States****" or in a constitutional state of the Union and who want to
 28 correct the citizenship records of the SSA must submit a new SSA Form SS-5 to the Social Security Administration (SSA)
 29 and check "Other" in Block 5 pursuant to 20 C.F.R. §422.110(a). This changes the CSP code in their record from "A" to 30 "B". If you go into the Social Security Office and try to do this, the local offices often will try to give you a run-around with 31 the following abusive and CRIMINAL tactics:

- 32 1. When you ask them about the meaning of Block 5, they will refuse to indicate whether the citizenship indicated is a

1 CIVIL/STATUTORY status or a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status. It can't be both. It must indicate
2 NATIONALITY or DOMICILE, but not BOTH.

- 3 2. They will first try to call the national office to ask about your status in Block 5.
4 3. They will ABSOLUTELY REFUSE to involve you in the call or to hear what is said, because they want to protect the
5 perpetrators of crime on the other end. Remember, terrorists always operate anonymously and they are terrorists. You
6 should bring your MP3 voice record, insist on being present, and put the phone on speaker phone, and do EXACTLY
7 the same thing they do when you call them directly by saying the following:

8 "This call is being monitored for quality assurance purposes, just like you do to me without my consent ALL THE 9 TIME."

- 10 4. After they get off the phone, they will refuse to tell you the full legal name of the person on the other end of the call to 11 protect those who are perpetuating the fraud.
12 5. They will tell you that they want to send your SSA Form SS-5 to the national office in Baltimore, Maryland, but refuse
13 to identify EXACTLY WHO they are sending it to, because they don't want this person sued personally as they should 14 be.
15 6. The national office will sit on the form forever and refuse to make the change requested, and yet never justify with the 16 law by what authority they:
17 6.1. Perpetuate the criminal computer fraud that results from NOT changing it.
18 6.2. Perpetuate the criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 by NOT changing it.
19 7. They will allow you to change ANYTHING ELSE on the form without their permission, but if you want to change
20 your CITIZENSHIP, they essentially interfere with it illegally and criminally.

21 The reason they play all the above obfuscation GAMES and hide or classify information to conceal the GAMES is because 22 they want to protect what they certainly know are the following CRIMES on their part and that of their employees:

- 23 1. They can't offer federal benefits to CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizens with a domicile outside of 24 federal territory. If they do, they would be criminally violating 18 U.S.C. §911.
25 2. They can't pay public monies to PRIVATE parties, and therefore you CANNOT apply with the SS-5 for a "benefit"
26 unless you are a public officer ALREADY employed with the government. If they let PRIVATE people apply they are 27 conspiring to commit the crime of impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
28 3. They aren't allowed to offer or enforce any government franchise within the borders of a Constitutional but not
29 STATUTORY state of the Union, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court, so they have to make you LOOK like a
30 STATUTORY citizen, even though you aren't, in order to expand their Ponzi Scheme outside their GENERAL
31 jurisdiction and into legislatively foreign states.

32 "Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE, using a de facto license number called a "Social Security Number"] a 33 trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
34 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

35 The only status a state domiciled CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizen can put on the form is "Other" or "Legal 36 [STATUTORY] Alien Allowed to Work". The instructions say following about "Other" option:

37 "If you check "Other", you need to provide proof that you are entitled to a federally-funded benefit for which 38 Social Security number is required as a condition for you to receive payment."

39 In answer to the above query in connection with the "Other" option, we suggest:

40 "DO NOT seek any federally funded benefit. I want a NONtaxpayer number that entitles me to ABSOLUTELY
41 NOTHING as a NONRESIDENT not subject to federal law and NOT qualified to receive benefits of any kind. I 42 am only applying because:

43 1. I am being illegally compelled to use a number I know I am not qualified to ask for.

44 2. The number was required as a precondition condition of PRIVATE employment or opening an PRIVATE
45 financial account by a NONRESIDENT ALIEN who is NOT a "U.S. citizen" or "U.S. person" and who is NOT
46 required to have or use such a number by 31 C.F.R. §306.10, 31 C.F.R. §103.34(a)(3)(x), and IRS Pub. 515.

I ask that you criminally prosecute them for doing so AND provide a statement on SSA letterhead indicating that I am NOT eligible that I can show them. Furthermore, if you do have any numbers on file connected with my name, I ask that they be rescinded permanently from your records."

Then you may want to attach the following forms to the application to ENSURE that they reject your application and TELL you that you are NOT eligible so you can show it to the person who is COMPELLING you to use a number:

1. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
2. Why It is Illegal for Me to Request or Use a "Taxpayer Identification Number", Form #04.205

4.12.14.14 "Citizenship" in federal court implies Domicile on federal territory not within any state

The following legal authorities conclusively establish that the terms "citizen", "citizenship", and "domicile" are synonymous in federal courts. They validate all of the above conclusive presumptions that government employees, officers, and judges habitually make when you appear before them or submit a government form to them, unless you specify or explain otherwise. Government employees, officers, and judges just HATE to discuss or document these presumptions, which is why authorities to prove their existence are so difficult to locate.

"Domicile and citizen are synonymous in federal courts. Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., D.C. Pa., 55 F.Supp. 981, 982; inhabitant, resident and citizen are synonymous, Standard Stoker Co. v. Lower, D.C.Md., 46 F.2d. 678, 683."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 311]

*The terms "citizen" and "citizenship" are distinguishable from "resident" or "inhabitant." Jeffcott v. Donovan, C.C.A.Ariz., 135 F.2d. 213, 214; and from "domicile," Wheeler v. Burgess, 263 Ky. 693, 93 S.W.2d. 351, 354; First Carolinas Joint Stock Land Bank of Columbia v. New York Title & Mortgage Co., D.C.S.C., 59 F.2d. 350, 351. The words "citizen" and citizenship," however, usually include the idea of domicile, Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, C.C.A.N.Y., 250 F. 554, 557; citizen inhabitant and resident often synonymous, Jonesboro Trust Co. v. Nutt, 118 Ark. 368, 176 S.W. 322, 324; Edgewater Realty Co. v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., D.C.Md., 49 F.Supp. 807, 809; and citizenship and domicile are often synonymous. Messick v. Southern Pa. Bus Co., D.C.Pa., 59 F.Supp. 799, 800.
[Black's Law Dictionary, Fourth Edition, p. 310]*

"Citizenship and domicile are substantially synonymous. Residency and inhabitance are too often confused with the terms and have not the same significance. Citizenship implies more than residence. It carries with it the idea of identification with the state and a participation in its functions. As a citizen, one sustains social, political, and moral obligation to the state and possesses social and political rights under the Constitution and laws thereof. Harding v. Standard Oil Co. et al. (C.C.) 182 F. 421; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U.S. 678, 7 S.Ct. 763, 32 L.Ed. 766; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 393, 476, 15 L.Ed. 691."
[Baker v. Keck, 13 F.Supp. 486 (1936)]

"The term 'citizen', as used in the Judiciary Act with reference to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, is substantially synonymous with the term 'domicile'. Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 2 Cir., 250 F. 554, 557."
[Earley v. Hershey Transit Co., 55 F.Supp. 981, D.C.PA. (1944)]

No person, may be compelled to choose a domicile or residence ANYWHERE. By implication, no one but you can commit yourself to being a "citizen" or to accepting the responsibilities or liabilities that go with it.

"The rights of the individual are not derived from governmental agencies, either municipal, state or federal, or even from the Constitution. They exist inherently in every man, by endowment of the Creator, and are merely reaffirmed in the Constitution, and restricted only to the extent that they have been voluntarily surrendered by the citizenship to the agencies of government. The people's rights are not derived from the government, but the government's authority comes from the people.*946 The Constitution but states again these rights already existing, and when legislative encroachment by the nation, state, or municipality invade these original and permanent rights, it is the duty of the courts to so declare, and to afford the necessary relief. The fewer restrictions that surround the individual liberties of the citizen, except those for the preservation of the public health, safety, and morals, the more contented the people and the more successful the democracy."
[City of Dallas v Mitchell, 245 S.W. 944 (1922)]

"Citizenship" and "residence", as has often been declared by the courts, are not convertible terms. ... "The better opinion seems to be that a citizen of the United States is, under the amendment [14th], prima facie a citizen of the state wherein he resides, cannot arbitrarily be excluded therefrom by such state, but that he does not become a citizen of the state against his will, and contrary to his purpose and intention to retain an already acquired citizenship elsewhere. The amendment [14th] is a restraint on the power of the state, but not on the right of the person to choose and maintain his citizenship or domicile”<sup>14</sup>.

[Sharon v. Hill, 26 F. 337 (1885)]

Since “citizen”, “citizenship”, and “domicile” are all synonymous, then you can only be a “citizen” in ONE place at a time. This is because you can only have a “domicile” in one place at a time.

“domicile. A person's legal home. That place where a man has his true, fixed, and permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. Smith v. Smith, 206 Pa.Super. 310, 213 A.2d. 94. Generally, physical presence within a state and the intention to make it one's home are the requisites of establishing a "domicile" therein. The permanent residence of a person or the place to which he intends to return even though he may actually reside elsewhere. A person may have more than one residence but only one domicile. The legal domicile of a person is important since it, rather than the actual residence, often controls the jurisdiction of the taxing authorities and determines where a person may exercise the privilege of voting and other legal rights and privileges.”
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 485]

The implications of this revelation are significant. It means that in relation to the state and federal governments and their mutually exclusive territorial jurisdictions, you can only be a statutory “citizen” of one of the two jurisdictions at a time. Whichever one you choose to be a “citizen” of, you become a “national but not a citizen” in relation to the other. You can therefore be subject to the civil laws of only one of the two jurisdictions at a time. Whichever one of the two jurisdictions you choose your domicile within becomes your main source of protection.

Choice of domicile is an act of political affiliation protected by the First Amendment prohibition against compelled association:

Just as there is freedom to speak, to associate, and to believe, so also there is freedom not to speak, associate, or believe. “The right to speak and the right to refrain from speaking [on a government tax return, and in violation of the Fifth Amendment when coerced, for instance] are complementary components of the broader concept of 'individual freedom of mind.' Wooley v. Maynard, [430 U.S. 703] (1977). Freedom of conscience dictates that no individual may be forced to espouse ideological causes with which he disagrees:

“[A]t the heart of the First Amendment is the notion that the individual should be free to believe as he will, and that in a free society one's beliefs should be shaped by his mind and by his conscience rather than coerced by the State [through illegal enforcement of the revenue laws].” Aboud v. Detroit Board of Education [431 U.S. 209] (1977)

Freedom from compelled association is a vital component of freedom of expression. Indeed, freedom from compelled association illustrates the significance of the liberty or personal autonomy model of the First Amendment. As a general constitutional principle, it is for the individual and not for the state to choose one's associations and to define the persona which he holds out to the world.

4.12.14.15 How you unknowingly volunteered to become a “citizen of the United States” under federal statutes

Armed with the knowledge that “U.S. citizen” status under federal statutes and “acts of Congress” is entirely voluntary, let’s now examine the federal government’s definition of the term “naturalization” to determine at what point we “volunteered”:

8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(23) naturalization defined

(a)(23) The term "naturalization" means the conferring of nationality [NOT "citizenship" or "U.S. citizenship", but "nationality", which means "national"] of a state upon a person after birth, by any means whatsoever.

And here is the definition in Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026 of naturalization:

Naturalization. The process by which a person acquires nationality [not citizenship, but nationality] after birth and becomes entitled to the privileges of U.S. citizenship. 8 U.S.C.A. §1401 et seq..

In the United States collective naturalization occurs when designated groups are made citizens by treaty (as Louisiana Purchase), or by a law of Congress (as in annexation of Texas and Hawaii). Individual naturalization must follow certain steps: (a) petition for naturalization by a person of lawful age who has been a lawful resident of the United States for 5 years; (b) investigation by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to determine whether the applicant can speak and write the English language, has a knowledge of the fundamentals of American government and history, is attached to the principles of the Constitution and is of good moral character; (c) hearing before a U.S. District Court or certain State courts of record; and (d) after a lapse of at least 30 days a second appearance in court when the oath of allegiance is administered.

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1026]

Hmmm. Well then, if you were a foreigner who was “naturalized” to become a “national” (and keep in mind that all of America is mostly a country of immigrants), then some questions arise:

1. At what point did you become a STATUTORY “U.S. citizen” under federal law, because “naturalization” didn’t do it?
2. By what means did you inform the government of your “informed choice” in this voluntary process?

The answer is that when you applied for a passport or registered to vote or participated in jury duty, the government asked you whether you were a “U.S. citizen” and you lied by saying “YES”. In effect, although you never made an informed choice to surrender your sovereign status as a “national” to become a “U.S. citizen”, you created a “presumption” on their part that you were a “U.S. citizen” just because of the erroneous paperwork you sent them which they can later use as evidence in court to prove you are a “U.S. citizen”. Even worst, they ENCOURAGED you to make it erroneous because of the way they designed the forms by not even giving you a choice on the form to indicate that you were a “national” instead of a “U.S. citizen”! By you checking the “U.S. citizen” block on their rigged forms, that is all the evidence they needed to conclude, incorrectly and to their massive financial benefit I might add, that you were a “U.S. citizen” who was “completely subject to the jurisdiction” of the United States. BAD IDEA!

Technically and lawfully, the federal government does not have the lawful authority to confer statutory “citizen of the United States***” status upon a person born inside a Union state on land that is not part of the federal zone and domiciled there. If they did, they would be “sheep poachers” who were stealing citizens from the Union states and depriving those states of control over persons born within their jurisdiction. This is so because “citizen of the United States***” status is superior and dominant over state citizenship according to the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873):

“The first of these questions is one of vast importance, and lies at the very foundations of our government. The question is now settled by the fourteenth amendment itself, that citizenship of the United States is the primary citizenship in this country; and that State citizenship is secondary and derivative, depending upon citizenship of the United States and the citizen’s place of residence. The States have not now, if they ever had, any power to restrict their citizenship to any classes or persons. A citizen of the United States has a perfect constitutional right to go to and reside in any State he chooses, and to claim citizenship therein, [83 U.S. 36, 113] and an equality of rights with every other citizen; and the whole power of the nation is pledged to sustain him in that right. He is not bound to cringe to any superior, or to pray for any act of grace, as a means of enjoying all the rights and privileges enjoyed by other citizens. And when the spirit of lawlessness, mob violence, and sectional hate can be so completely repressed as to give full practical effect to this right, we shall be a happier nation, and a more prosperous one than we now are. Citizenship of the United States ought to be, and, according to the Constitution, is, a sure and undoubted title to equal rights in any and every States in this Union, subject to such regulations as the legislature may rightfully prescribe. If a man be denied full equality before the law, he is denied one of the essential rights of citizenship as a citizen of the United States.”
[Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. 36 (1873)]

Therefore, persons born in the Union states but outside the federal zone (federal areas or enclaves within the states) must be naturalized technically in order to become “citizens of the United States”. However, the rules for naturalization in the case of federal citizenship are so lax and transparent that people are fooled into thinking they always were “citizens of the United States”! Whenever you fill out a passport or voter registration form and claim you are a “citizen of the United States” or a “U.S. citizen”, for instance, even if you technically weren’t because you weren’t born inside the federal zone, then you have effectively and formally “naturalized” yourself into federal citizenship and given the government evidence admissible under penalty of perjury proving that you are a federal serf and slave!

I therefore like to think of the term “U.S. citizen” used by the Internal Revenue Service and the Internal Revenue Code as being like the sign that your enemies taped on your back in grammar school without you knowing which said “HIT ME!”, and the only people who can see the sign or understand what it means are those who work for the government and the IRS and the legal profession! Your own legal ignorance is the only reason that you don’t know that you have this sign on your back.

4.12.14.17 Misapplication of Statutory diversity of citizenship or federal jurisdiction to state citizens

Diversity of citizenship describes methods for invoking jurisdiction of federal court for controversies involving people not in the same state or country. Just like citizenship, there are TWO types of diversity of citizenship: CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY. Choice of forum to hear diversity cases is either WITHIN the courts of the plaintiff's home state or in federal court. State courts can hear cases involving diverse parties under the authority of their respective Longarm Statutes and the Minimum Contacts Doctrine described in International Shoe Co. v. Washington, 326 U.S. 310 (1945).

Procedures for removal from state to federal court are codified in 28 U.S.C. §§1441 through 1452. Generally speaking, STATUTORY diversity of citizenship is a statutory privilege rather than a CONSTITUTIONAL right.<sup>217</sup> One should avoid PRIVILEGES because they DESTROY or undermine constitutional rights. We refer to such PRIVILEGES as franchises. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

A common method of confusing CONSTITUTIONAL citizens with STATUTORY citizens is to falsely and unconstitutionally PRESUME that STATUTORY diversity of citizenship provisions of 28 U.S.C. §1332 and CONSTITUTIONAL diversity of citizenship found in Article III, Section 2 are equivalent. In fact, they are NOT equivalent and are mutually exclusive. We alluded to this earlier in section 5.1.4.1 under item 8. In fact:

1. STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL diversity are NOT equal and in fact are mutually exclusive because they rely on DIFFERENT geographical definitions for "State" and "United States".
2. The following authorities on choice of law limit the application of federal statutes to those domiciled in the geographical "United States**", meaning federal territory not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state.
  - 2.1. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.
  - 2.2. The Rules of Decision Act, 28 U.S.C. §1652.
  - 2.3. 40 U.S.C. §3111-3112.
  - 2.4. The geographical definitions of "United States" found in the Internal Revenue Code at 26 U.S.C. §§7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d).
  - 2.5. The geographical definitions of "United States" found in the Social Security Act at 42 U.S.C. §1301(a)(1) and (a)(2).
  - 2.6. The U.S. Supreme Court.

*"It is no longer open to question that the general government, unlike the states, Hammer v. Dagenhart, 247 U.S. 251, 275, 38 S.Ct. 529, 3 A.L.R. 649, Ann.Cas.1918E 724, possesses no inherent power in respect of the internal affairs of the states; and emphatically not with regard to legislation.
[Carter v. Carter Coal Co., 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855 (1936)]*

*"The difficulties arising out of our dual form of government and the opportunities for differing opinions concerning the relative rights of state and national governments are many; but for a very long time this court has steadfastly adhered to the doctrine that the taxing power of Congress does not extend to the states or their political subdivisions. The same basic reasoning which leads to that conclusion, we think, requires like limitation upon the power which springs from the bankruptcy clause. United States v. Butler, supra."*

<sup>217</sup> See Adams v. Charter Communications VII, LLC, 356 F.Supp.2d. 1268, 1271 (M.D. 2005); see also Landman v. Borough of Bristol, 896 F.Supp. 406, 409 (E.D. Pa. 1995)("Because courts strictly construe the removal statutes, the parties must meticulously comply with the requirements of the statute to avoid remand.")

Ashton v. Cameron County Water Improvement District No. 1, [298 U.S. 513; 56 S.Ct. 892 (1936)]

3. The STATUTORY definition of “State” in 28 U.S.C. §1332(e) is a federal territory.

28 U.S. Code § 1332 - Diversity of citizenship; amount in controversy; costs

(e) The word “States”, as used in this section, includes the Territories, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

4. The definition of “State” in the CONSTITUTION is a State of the Union and NOT federal territory.

It is sufficient to observe in relation to these three fundamental instruments [Articles of Confederation, the United States Constitution, and the Treaty of Peace with Spain], that it can nowhere be inferred that the *251 territories were considered a part of the United States. The Constitution was created by the people of the United States, as a union of states, to be governed solely by representatives of the states; and even the provision relied upon here, that all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform ‘throughout the United States,’ is explained by subsequent provisions of the Constitution, that ‘no tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state,’ and ‘no preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.’ In short, the Constitution deals with states, their people, and their representatives.

“The earliest case is that of Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L.Ed. 332, in which this court held that, under that clause of the Constitution limiting the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States to controversies between citizens of different states, a citizen of the District of Columbia could not maintain an action in the circuit court of the United States. It was argued that the word ‘state,’ in that connection, was used simply to denote a distinct political society. ‘But,’ said the Chief Justice, ‘as the act of Congress obviously used the word ‘state’ in reference to that term as used in the Constitution, it becomes necessary to inquire whether Columbia is a state in the sense of that instrument. The result of that examination is a conviction that the members of the American confederacy only are the states contemplated in the Constitution . . . and excludes from the term the signification attached to it by writers on the law of nations.’ This case was followed in Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L.Ed. 825, and quite recently in Hooe v. Jamieson, 166 U.S. 395, 41 L.Ed. 1049, 17 Sup.Ct.Rep. 596. The same rule was applied to citizens of territories in New Orleans v. Winter, 1 Wheat. 91, 4 L.Ed. 44, in which an attempt was made to distinguish a territory from the District of Columbia. But it was said that ‘neither of them is a state in the sense in which that term is used in the Constitution.’ In Scott v. Jones, 5 How. 343, 12 L.Ed. 181, and in Miners’ Bank v. Iowa ex rel. District Prosecuting Attorney, 12 How. 1, 13 L.Ed. 867, it was held that under the judiciary act, permitting writs of error to the supreme court of a state in cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, an act of a territorial legislature was not within the contemplation of Congress.” Downes v. Bidwell, [182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

5. Corrupt government actors try to increase this confusion to illegally expand their jurisdiction by dismissing diversity cases where only diversity of RESIDENCE (domicile) is implied, instead insisting on “diversity of CITIZENSHIP” and yet REFUSING to define whether they mean DOMICILE or NATIONALITY when the term “CITIZENSHIP” is invoked. See Lamm v. Bekins Van Lines, Co., 139 F.Supp.2d. 1300, 1314 (M.D. Ala. 2001)(“To invoke removal jurisdiction on the basis of diversity, a notice of removal must distinctly and affirmatively allege each party’s citizenship.”, “[a]lthough ‘citizenship’ and ‘residence’ may be interchangeable terms in common parlance, the existence of citizenship cannot be inferred from allegations of residence alone.”).

One publication about removal from state court to federal court says the following on the subject of removals. Notice they refer to “citizen” and “resident” as “terms of art”, meaning terms that do not have the “ordinary meaning” but only that SPECIFICALLY identified in the statutes themselves:

4. Take care with terms of art in diversity removal allegations

A. Terms of art: “Citizen” versus “resident”

The burden falls on the removing party to prove complete diversity.<sup>23</sup> “The allegations must show that the citizenship of each plaintiff is different from that of each defendant.”<sup>24</sup> Some courts have found that the requisite specificity is lacking where a party alleges residency instead of citizenship.<sup>25</sup> In fact, such courts have held that “[a]lthough ‘citizenship’ and ‘residence’ may be interchangeable terms in common parlance, the existence of citizenship cannot be inferred from allegations of residence alone.”<sup>27</sup> Simply put, in a diversity removal, it may not be enough to allege only the residence of party; instead, the wiser practice for the party attempting to establish federal jurisdiction is to allege the citizenship of the diverse parties.<sup>28</sup>

B. Conclusory allegations of citizenship

Similarly, some courts take the position that merely alleging that an action is between citizens of different states is insufficient to establish that the parties are diverse for the purposes of supporting a diversity removal; instead, “specific facts must have been alleged so that [a] Court itself will be able to decide whether such jurisdiction exists.<sup>29</sup> Consequently, conclusory assertions that diversity of citizenship exists without accompanying factual support about a parties’ citizenship as opposed to residency may result in remand.<sup>30</sup> For example, where the removing party states only the residence of an allegedly diverse party, and fails to include allegations regarding an allegedly diverse parties’ citizenship, that failure has been used to justify remand.<sup>31</sup> The safer practice is for a removing party to allege diversity of citizenship and to specify in its removal documents the factual basis supporting the allegation that the parties are in fact diverse.

<sup>30</sup> Nasco, Inc. v. Norsworthy, 785 F.Supp. 707 (M.D. Tenn. 1992). In Nasco, the United States District Court for the Middle District of Tennessee remanded an action to state court where the defendants failed to adequately allege citizenship as opposed to residency. Id. In Nasco, the defendants made the conclusory allegation that complete diversity of citizenship among the parties existed. Id. at 709. However, the defendants’ factual assertions related only to the residency, not citizenship. Id. The Court remanded the action and stated that “[a]llegations of residence are wholly insufficient for purposes of removal.” Id. (quoting Wenger v. Western Reserve Life Assurance Co. of Ohio, 570 F.Supp. 8, 10 (M.D. Tenn. 1983)).

Similarly, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit agrees that the failure to properly list citizenship in a removal petition is fatal to removal and warrants remand. Rolling Greens MHP, L.P. v. Comcast SCH Holdings LLC, 374 F.3d. 1020 (11th Cir. 2004)(affirming district court’s order remanding action due to defendant’s failure to properly allege the citizenship of the parties in removal petition); cf. Ervast v. Flexible Products, Co., 346 F.3d. 1007 (refusing to exercise jurisdiction on basis of diversity where defendant failed to plead basis in removal petition).

To eliminate the confusion of the STATUTORY and CONSTITUTIONAL context for citizenship terms in diversity of citizenship cases, we have prepared the following table. It eliminates the confusion by taking both DOMICILE and

- 1 NATIONALITY into account, and it shows the corresponding authorities from which jurisdiction derives in each case. It is
- 2 a work in progress subject to continual improvement because of the complexity of researching the subject:

1 Table 4-43: Permutations of diversity of citizenship

NOTES:

1. "State citizen", as used in the above table, is a human being born in a constitutional but not statutory "State" and "residing" there under the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1. To "reside" as used in the Fourteenth Amendment has been held to mean to be civilly DOMICILED there rather than merely physically present. "Territorial citizen", as used in the above table, is a human being born in a federal territory or an federal corporation created under the laws of Congress.
  - 1.1. It includes 8 U.S.C. §1401 STATUTORY "U.S. citizens" described in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
  - 1.2. It includes "non-citizen nationals" from U.S. possessions defined in 8 U.S.C. §1408.
  - 1.3. It includes artificial entities as well, because all federally chartered corporations are deemed to be STATUTORY but not CONSTITUTIONAL citizens of the national government domiciled on federal territory.
2. "Foreign national", as used in the above table, is a human being
  - 2.1. Born in a foreign country. That human was born in neither a CONSTITUTIONAL state of the Union nor a territory or possession of the United States.
  - 2.2. Born in a CONSTITUTIONAL state but domiciled abroad and not engaged in a public office in the national government. Also called a "stateless person" by the U.S. Supreme Court. Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989).
3. "American national" as used above means someone born or naturalized in either a constitutional state or a federal territory or possession. American nationals domiciled abroad cannot sue in federal court under diversity of citizenship.

"Partnerships which have American partners living abroad pose a special problem. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must be both a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State." Newman-Green, Inc. v. Alfonzo-Larrain, 490 U.S. 826, 828, 109 S.Ct. 2218, 104 L.Ed.2d. 893 (1989). An American citizen domiciled abroad, while being a citizen of the United States is, of course, not domiciled in a particular state, and therefore such a person is "stateless" for purposes of diversity jurisdiction. See id. Thus, American citizens living abroad cannot be sued (or sue) in federal court based on diversity jurisdiction as they are neither "citizens of a State," see 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(1), nor "citizens or subjects of a foreign state," see id. § 1332(a)(2). See Newman-Green, 490 U.S. at 826, 109 S.Ct. 2218."
 [Swiger v. Allegheny Energy, Inc., 540 F.3d. 179 (3rd Cir., 2008)]

4. When determining diversity jurisdiction, the civil or political status of a litigant, including nationality and domicile, is determined by his/her status at the time the suit is filed, not at the time the injury claimed occurred. Smith v. Sperling, 354 U.S. 91, 93 n.1, 77 S.Ct. 1112, 1113 n.1, 1 L.Ed.2d. 1205 \(1957\).
5. A human being is deemed to be a citizen of the state where she is domiciled. See Gilbert v. David, 235 U.S. 561, 569, 35 S.Ct. 164, 59 L.Ed. 360 (1915).
6. A corporation is a citizen both of the state where it is incorporated and of the state where it has its principal place of business. 28 U.S.C. §1332(c). Swiger v. Allegheny Energy, Inc., 540 F.3d. 179 (3rd Cir., 2008).
7. Those not domiciled in a constitutional state, even if physically present there, are not “citizens of the United States” under the auspices of the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1. Rather, they are “non-resident non-persons” in respect to federal jurisdiction and “nationals of the United States*** OF AMERICA” who are not statutory “citizens of the United States***” identified ANYWHERE in any act of congress, including 8 U.S.C. §1401. This is because the term “reside” in the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1, has been held to mean DOMICILE and not mere physical presence. See section 4.9.4 earlier.
8. Partnerships and other unincorporated associations, unlike corporations, are not considered "citizens" as that term is used in the diversity statute. See Carden v. Arkoma Assocs., 494 U.S. 185, 187-92, 110 S.Ct. 1015, 108 L.Ed.2d. 157 \(1990\) (holding that a limited partnership is not a citizen under the jurisdictional statute); see also Lincoln Prop. Barney, 129 U.S. 677, 682, 9 S.Ct. 426, 32 L.Ed. 800 \(1889\) (holding that although the plaintiff-stock company was endowed by New York law with the capacity to sue, it could not be considered a "citizen" for diversity purposes); 15 James Wm. Moore, Moore's Federal Practice § 102.57[1] (3d ed.2006) [hereinafter Moore's Federal Practice] ("[A] partnership is not a `citizen' of any state within the meaning of the statutes regulating jurisdiction[.]"). Given that partnerships are not citizens for diversity purposes, the Supreme Court has long applied the rule of Chapman v. Barney: that courts are to look to the citizenship of all the partners (or members of other unincorporated associations) to determine whether the federal district court has diversity jurisdiction. See Lincoln Prop. Co., 546 U.S. at 84 n. 1, 126 S.Ct. 606; Carden, 494 U.S. at 196-97, 110 S.Ct. 1015; Bouligny, 382 U.S. at 151, 86 S.Ct. 272; *Great S. In Chapman, the Supreme Court, on its own motion, reversed a judgment on the grounds that the federal court did not have jurisdiction over a stock company because the record did not demonstrate that all the partners of the stock company were citizens of a state different than that of the defendant:
9. STATUTORY “citizen of a State” status under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(1) is satisfied when a party has a civil DOMICILE in the state in question. Although this statute is limited to federally domiciled parties, it is applied as a matter of common law to constitutional diversity situations without adversely impacting the constitutional rights of the parties, but only if the other party to the suit is NOT a corporation. If the other party IS a corporation, then applying the statute is an injury because it brings a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen down to the same level as a STATUTORY citizen and thereby makes them subject to the laws of Congress.

“28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(1) creates the federal courts' jurisdiction over actions between "citizens of different States." For a natural person to fall within the provision he must be both (1) a citizen of the United States and (2) a citizen of a particular state. See Scott v. Sandford, 60 U.S. (19 How.) 393, 405-06, 15 L.Ed. 691 (1857); Delaware, L. & W.R. Co. v. Petrowsky, 250 F. 554, 557 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 247 U.S. 508, 38 S.Ct. 427, 62 L.Ed. 1241 (1918). It is not disputed here that the plaintiff having been naturalized in 1973 is a citizen of the United States. What is contested is whether in 1976 when his complaint was filed he was a citizen of one of the United States. The issue is crucial to the plaintiff's claim of jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(1) because settled precedent establishes that a citizen of the United States who is not also a citizen of one of the United States may not maintain suit under that section. Meyers v. Smith, 460 F.Supp. 621 (D.D.C.1978); Kaufman & Broad, Inc. v. Gootrad, 397 F.Supp. 1054 (S.D.N.Y.1975); Garner v. Pearson, 374 F.Supp. 580, 588-90 (M.D.Fla.1973); Hernandez v. Lucas, 254 F.Supp. 901 (S.D.Tex.1966); Clapp v. Stearns & Co., 229 F.Supp. 305 (S.D.N.Y.1964); McClanahan v. Galloway, 127 F.Supp. 929 (N.D.Cal.1955); Alla v. Kornfeld, 84 F.Supp. 823 (N.D.Ill.1949); Hammerstein v.

1 Lyne, 200 F. 165 (W.D.Mo.1912). Although this doctrine excluding Americans domiciled abroad from the federal courts has been questioned,<sup>218</sup> the plaintiff does not
2 directly attack it here and we see no reason for upsetting settled law now.

3 State citizenship for the purpose of the state diversity provision is equated with domicile. The standards for determining domicile in this context are found by resort

8 10. 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) is called "alienage jurisdiction". Here is what one court said on this subject:

9 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) vests the district courts with jurisdiction over civil actions between state citizens and citizens of foreign states. This power is sometimes referred
10 to as alienage jurisdiction. Although the basis for alienage jurisdiction is similar to that over controversies between state citizens, it is founded on more concrete concerns
11 than the arguably unfounded fears of bias or prejudice by forums in one of the United States against litigants from another of the United States.

12 The dominant considerations which prompted the provision for such jurisdiction appear to have been:

13 (1) Failure on the part of the individual states to give protection to foreigners under treaties; Farrand, "The Framing of the Constitution" 46 (1913); Nevins, "The 14 American State During and After the Revolution" 644-656 (1924); Friendly, 41 Harvard Law Review 483, 484.

15 (2) Apprehension of entanglements with other sovereigns that might ensue from failure to treat the legal controversies of aliens on a national level. Hamilton, "The 16 Federalist" No. 80.

17 Blair Holdings Corp. v. Rubinstein, 133 F.Supp. 496, 500 (S.D.N.Y.1955). Thus, alienage jurisdiction was intended to provide the federal courts with a form of protective 18 jurisdiction over matters implicating international relations where the national interest was paramount. See The Federalist No. 80 (A. Hamilton) ("(T)he peace of the
19 WHOLE ought not to be left at the disposal of a PART. The Union will undoubtedly be answerable to foreign powers for the conduct of its members. And the responsibility
20 for an injury ought ever to be accompanied with the faculty for preventing it.")<sup>7</sup> Recognizing this obvious national interest in such controversies, not even the proponents
21 of the abolition of diversity jurisdiction over suits between citizens of the several United States have advocated elimination of alienage jurisdiction. See, e. g., H. Friendly,
23 963, 966-68 (1979).

24 Because alienage jurisdiction is founded on the fear of giving offense to foreign countries, the domicile of the foreigner is irrelevant. Indeed, an alien domiciled in
25 one of the United States is afforded access to the federal courts under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) even when he sues an American citizen residing in the same state. See

28 See also DeVries v. Starr, 393 F.2d. 9, 11 (10th Cir. 1968) (alien domiciled in Spain but a citizen of the Netherlands). The jurisdictional grant in 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2), 29 however, does not establish the federal courts as forums for all lawsuits with an international flavor. Suits solely between aliens are outside the constitutional grant of 30 judicial power. Jackson v. Twentyman, 27 U.S. (2 Pet.) 136, 7 L.Ed. 374 (1829); Hodgson v. Bowerbank, 9 U.S. (5 Cranch) 303, 3 L.Ed. 108 (1809). Jurisdiction will

The generally accepted test for determining whether a person is a foreign citizen for purposes of 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) is whether the country in which citizenship is claimed would so recognize him. This is in accord with the principle of international law that "it is the inherent right of every independent nation to determine for itself, and according to its own constitution and laws, what classes of persons shall be entitled to its citizenship." United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649, 668, 18 S.Ct. 456, 464, 42 L.Ed. 890 \(1898\). See, e. g., Murarka v. Bachrack Bros., 215 F.2d. 547, 553 \(2d Cir. 1954\) (Harlan, J.) ("It is the undoubted right of each country to determine who are its nationals, and it seems to be general international usage that such a determination will usually be accepted by other nations"); Blair Holdings Corp. v. Rubinstein, 133 F.Supp. at 499. See also Restatement \(Second\) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 26 \(1965\).

Relying on this principle, the plaintiff maintains that notwithstanding his U.S. naturalization, Egypt still regards him as an Egyptian citizen. The evidence in the record tends to sustain his contention. It is apparently the plaintiff's position that Egypt requires its nationals to obtain its consent to their naturalization in other countries and even then it may condition its consent so that the emigrant retains his Egyptian nationality despite his naturalization elsewhere. A letter from the Egyptian Consulate General in New York confirms that the consent of that government is required.<sup>8</sup> Although the plaintiff did obtain the Egyptian government's consent prior to his naturalization in the United States, that consent was apparently conditioned upon his retaining his Egyptian citizenship. A letter from the Egyptian Minister of Exterior to the plaintiff states:

Greetings, we have the honor to inform you that it has been agreed to permit you to be naturalized with United States Citizenship but retaining your Egyptian citizenship and this is according to a letter from the Minister of Interior Department of Travel Documents, Immigration and Naturalization # 608 KH File # 100/41/70, Dated January 24, 1971.

Thus, Egypt still regards the plaintiff as one of its citizens notwithstanding its consent to his naturalization in the United States. In 1978, for example, the Egyptian government issued the plaintiff an Egyptian driver's license and an international driver's license. Both documents show the plaintiff's nationality as Egyptian.

This evidence is sufficient to establish that, despite his naturalization in the United States, the plaintiff is an Egyptian under that country's laws. Consequently, under the ordinary choice of law rule for determining nationality under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) he would be so regarded for the purpose of determining the district court's jurisdiction over the subject matter. Thus, the issue squarely presented to this court is whether a person possessing dual nationality, one of which is United States citizenship,<sup>9</sup> is "a citizen or subject of a foreign state" under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2).

Dual nationality is the consequence of the conflicting laws of different nations, Kawakita v. United States, 343 U.S. 717, 734, 72 S.Ct. 950, 961, 96 L.Ed. 1249 \(1952\), and may arise in a variety of different ways.<sup>10</sup> The ambivalent policy of this country toward dual nationality is stated in a letter made a part of the record in this case from the Office of Citizenship, Nationality and Legal Assistance of the Department of State:

The United States does not recognize officially, or approve of dual nationality. However, it does accept the fact that some United States citizens may possess another nationality as the result of separate conflicting laws of other countries. Each sovereign state has the right inherent in its sovereignty to determine who shall be its citizens and what laws will govern them.

The official policy of this government has been to discourage the incidence of dual nationality. See Savorgnan v. United States, 338 U.S. 491, 500, 70 S.Ct. 292, 297, 94 L.Ed. 287 \(1950\); Warsoff, Citizenship in the State of Israel, 33 N.Y.U.L.Rev. 857 \(1958\) (detailing efforts of the U.S. government to prevent dual American-Israeli citizenship). See also Hirabayashi v. United States, 320 U.S. 81, 97-99, 63 S.Ct. 1375, 1384-1385, 87 L.Ed. 1774 \(1943\). Pursuant to that policy, since 1795 all persons naturalized are required to swear allegiance to the United States and "to renounce and abjure absolutely and entirely all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of whom or which the petitioner was before a subject or citizen." 8 U.S.C. § 1448(a)(2). See Savorgnan, 338 U.S. at 500, 70 S.Ct. at 297. "The effectiveness of this provision is limited, however, for many nations will not accept such a disclaimer as ending their claims over naturalized Americans." Note, Expatriating the Dual National, 68 Yale L.J. 1167, 1169 n.11 \(1959\). See, e. g., Coumas v. Superior Court, 31 Cal.2d. 682, 192 P.2d 449 \(1948\). Thus, dual nationality has been recognized in fact, albeit reluctantly, by the courts. See Kawakita, 343 U.S. at 723-24, 72 S.Ct. at 955-56:

(D)ual nationality (is) a status long recognized in the law. Perkins v. Elg, 307 U.S. 325, 344-349, 59 S.Ct. 884, 894-896, 83 L.Ed. 1320. The concept of dual citizenship recognizes that a person may have and exercise rights of nationality in two countries and be subject to the responsibilities of both. The mere fact that he asserts the rights of one citizenship does not without more mean that he renounces the other.

Whether a person possessing dual nationality should be considered a citizen or subject of a foreign state within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) is a question of first impression in the courts of appeals. The two district courts other than the district court below which have addressed the question have reached seemingly different conclusions. In Aguirre v. Nagel, 270 F.Supp. 535 (E.D.Mich.1967), the plaintiff, a citizen of the United States and the State of Michigan, sued a Michigan citizen for injuries sustained when she was hit by the defendant's car. The court correctly ruled that the action was not one between citizens of different states under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(1). Nevertheless, the court did find jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) because the plaintiff's parents were citizens of Mexico and Mexico regarded her as a Mexican citizen by virtue of her parentage. The Aguirre court's opinion did no more than determine that the cause fell within the literal language of the statute without regard to the policies underlying alienage jurisdiction. As a result it has been questioned by the commentators, see 1 Moore's Federal Practice P 0.75(1.-1) at 709.4-.5 (2d ed. 1979); 13 C. Wright, A. Miller, & E. Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3621 at 759-60 (1975), and rejected by one other district court in addition to the court below. See Raphael v. Hertzberg, 470 F.Supp. 984 (C.D.Cal.1979).<sup>11</sup>

Raphael was decided after the district court's judgment being reviewed here, and, although it does not cite the Eastern District of Wisconsin's opinion, it reaches the same conclusion. In Raphael, the plaintiff was a British subject who recently had been naturalized in the United States. The plaintiff and the defendant were domiciled in California. The court rejected the plaintiff's position that his purported dual nationality permitted him access to the federal courts under alienage jurisdiction. In rejecting the authority of Aguirre, the court noted several possible objections to permitting naturalized Americans to assert their foreign citizenship:

To begin with, the holding in Aguirre violates the requirement of complete diversity (Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 7 U.S. (3 Cranch) 267, 2 L.Ed. 435 (1806)) since Aguirre, like the present case, involved opposing parties who were both American citizens and who resided in the same state. Moreover, where both parties are residents of the state in which the action is brought, there is no reason to expect bias from the state courts. Finally, so long as the party asserting diversity jurisdiction is an American citizen, there is little reason to fear that a foreign government may be affronted by a decision adverse to that citizen, even if the American citizen also purports to be a citizen of that foreign nation. See Blair Holdings Corporation v. Rubenstein, 133 F.Supp. 496, 500 (S.D.N.Y.1955).

The rule proposed by the plaintiff would give naturalized citizens nearly unlimited access to the federal courts, access which has been denied to native-born citizens. Such favored treatment is unsupported by the policies underlying 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2). Finally, a new rule that would extend the scope of § 1332 is particularly undesirable in light of the ever-rising level of criticism of the very concept of diversity jurisdiction.

Although the issue facing the courts in Aguirre and Raphael is the same as the one presented here, the facts in this case are somewhat different. All commentators addressing the issue have noted the anomaly of permitting an American citizen claiming dual citizenship to obtain access to the federal court under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) when suing a citizen domiciled in the same state. See 1 Moore's Federal Practice P 0.75(1-1) at 709.5 (2d ed. 1979):

This result is inconsistent with the complete diversity rule of Strawbridge v. Curtiss, . . . including the analogous situation of a suit between a citizen of State A and a corporation chartered in State B with its principal place of business in State A. Both state citizenships of the corporation must be considered and diversity is thus found lacking.

See also 13 C. Wright, A. Miller, & E. Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure §3621 at 759-60 (1975).<sup>12</sup> In the present case, however, the plaintiff was domiciled abroad when he initiated this action and therefore was not a citizen of any state. Thus, permitting suit under alienage jurisdiction would not run counter to the complete diversity considerations which arguably should have controlled the decisions in Aguirre and Raphael.<sup>13</sup>

The plaintiff seizing upon this factual difference would apparently have this court recognize his dual nationality for purposes of 28 U.S.C. §1332 in much the same way corporations are regarded as having dual citizenship pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1332(c). Because in this case, even applying the corporate citizenship analogy, the complete diversity requirement is satisfied, the plaintiff argues that jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(2) attaches. Such an approach, however, may be both too broad and too narrow and it ignores the paramount purpose of the alienage jurisdiction provision to avoid offense to foreign nations because of the possible appearance of injustice to their citizens. Imagine, for example, a native-born American, born of Japanese parents, domiciled in the State of California, and now engaged in international trade. A dispute could arise in which an Australian customer seeks to sue the American for, say, breach of contract in a federal court in California. The native-born American possibly could claim Japanese citizenship by virtue of his parentage, see, e. g., Kawakita, supra, Hirabayashi, supra, as well as his status as a citizen of California and defeat the jurisdiction of the federal courts because of the absence of complete diversity. Arguably, cases such as this are precisely those in which a federal forum should be afforded the foreign litigant in the interest of preventing international friction.

This hypothetical suggests that the analogy to the dual citizenship of corporations should not be controlling. Instead, the paramount consideration should be whether the purpose of alienage jurisdiction to avoid international discord would be served by recognizing the foreign citizenship of the dual national. Because of the wide variety of situations in which dual nationality can arise, see note 10 supra, perhaps no single rule can be controlling. Principles establishing the responsibility of nations under international law with respect to actions affecting dual nationals, however, suggest by analogy that ordinarily, as the district court held, only the American nationality of the dual citizen should be recognized under 28 U.S.C. §1332(a).
