 61 with the obligations of the contract which he held. The power of the United States to tax is limited to persons,
 62 property, and business within their jurisdiction, as much as that of a State is limited to the same subjects within 63 its jurisdiction. State Tax on Foreign-Held Bonds, 15 Wall. 300."

64 "A personal tax," says the Supreme Court of New Jersey, "is the burden imposed by government on its own
 65 citizens for the benefits which that government affords by its protection and its laws, and any government

1 which should attempt to impose such a tax on citizens of other States would justly incur the rebuke of the 2 intelligent sentiment of the civilized world." State v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517, 521.

3 In imposing a tax, says Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, the legislature acts upon its constituents. "All subjects," he
 4 adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend
 5 are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition *334 may almost be pronounced
 6 self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.

7 There are limitations upon the powers of all governments, without any express designation of them in their
 8 organic law; limitations which inhere in their very nature and structure, and this is one of them, — that no
 9 rightful authority can be exercised by them over alien subjects, or citizens resident abroad or over their property
 10 there situated. This doctrine may be said to be axiomatic, and courts in England have felt it so obligatory upon
 11 them, that where general terms, used in acts of Parliament, seem to contravene it, they have narrowed the 12 construction to avoid that conclusion. In a memorable case decided by Lord Stowell, which involved the legality
 13 of the seizure and condemnation of a French vessel engaged in the slave trade, which was, in terms, within an 14 act of Parliament, that distinguished judge said: "That neither this British act of Parliament nor any
 15 commission founded on it can affect any right or interest of foreigners unless they are founded upon principles
 16 and impose regulations that are consistent with the law of nations. That is the only law which Great Britain
 17 can apply to them, and the generality of any terms employed in an act of Parliament must be narrowed in 18 construction by a religious adherence thereto." The Le Louis, 2 Dod. 210, 239.

19 Similar language was used by Mr. Justice Bailey of the King's Bench, where the question was whether the act
 20 of Parliament, which declared the slave trade and all dealings therewith unlawful, justified the seizure of a
 21 Spanish vessel, with a cargo of slaves on board, by the captain of an English naval vessel, and it was held that
 22 it did not. The odiousness of the trade would have carried the justice to another conclusion if the public law
 23 would have permitted it, but he said, "That, although the language used by the legislature in the statute referred 24 to is undoubtedly very strong, yet it can only apply to British subjects, and can only render the slave trade
 25 unlawful if carried on by them; it cannot apply in any way to a foreigner. It is true that if this were a trade
 26 contrary to the law of nations a foreigner could not maintain this action. But it is not; and as a Spaniard could 27 not be considered as bound by the acts of the British legislature prohibiting this trade, it would be unjust to 28 deprive *335 him of a remedy for the heavy damage he has sustained." Madrazo v. Willes, 3 Barn. & Ald. 353.

29 In The Apollon, a libel was filed against the collector of the District of St. Mary's for damages occasioned by the 30 seizure of the ship and cargo whilst lying in a river within the territory of the King of Spain, and Mr. Justice Story
 31 said, speaking for the court, that "The laws of no nation can justly extend beyond its own jurisdiction, except 32 so far as regards its own citizens. They can have no force to control the sovereignty or rights of any other
 33 nation within its own jurisdiction. And however general and comprehensive the phraseology used in our 34 municipal laws may be, they must always be restricted in construction to places and persons upon whom the 35 legislatures have authority and jurisdiction." 9 Wheat. 362.

36 When the United States became a separate and independent nation, they became, as said by Chancellor Kent,
 37 "subject to that system of rules which reason, morality, and custom had established among the enlightened nations
 38 of Europe as their public law," and by the light of that law must their dealings with persons of a foreign
 39 jurisdiction be considered; and according to that law there could be no debatable question, that the jurisdiction
 40 of the United States over persons and property ends where the foreign jurisdiction begins.

41 What urgent reasons press upon us to hold that this doctrine of public law may be set aside, and that the United
 42 States, in disregard of it, may lawfully treat as subject to their taxing power the income of non-resident aliens,
 43 derived from the interest received abroad on bonds of corporations of this country negotiable and payable 44 there? If, in the form of taxes, the United States may authorize the withholding of a portion of such interest,
 45 the amount will be a matter in their discretion; they may authorize the whole to be withheld. And if they can
 46 do this, why may not the States do the same thing with reference to the bonds issued by corporations created
 47 under their laws. They will not be slow to act upon the example set. If such a tax may be levied by the United 48 States in the rightful exercise of their taxing power, why may not a similar tax be levied upon the interest on
 49 bonds of the same corporations by the States within their respective jurisdictions in the rightful *336 exercise
 50 of their taxing power? What is sound law for one sovereignty ought to be sound law for another.

51 It is said, in answer to these views, that the governments of Europe — or at least some of them, where a tax is 52 laid on incomes — deduct from the interest on their public debts the tax due on the amount as income, whether
 53 payable to a non-resident alien or a subject of the country. This is true in some instances, and it has been
 54 suggested in justification of it that the interest, being payable at their treasuries, is under their control, the money
 55 designated for it being within their jurisdiction when set apart for the debtor, who must in person or by agent
 56 enter the country to receive it. That presents a case different from the one before us in this, — that here the 57 interest is payable abroad, and the money never becomes the property of the debtor until actually paid to him
 58 there. So, whether we speak of the obligation of the company to the holder of the coupons, or the money paid
 59 in its fulfilment, it is held abroad, not being, in either case, within the jurisdiction of the United States. And 60 with reference to the taxation of the interest on public debts, Mr. Phillimore, in his Treatise on International
 61 Laws, says: "It may be quite right that a person having an income accruing from money lent to a foreign State
 62 should be taxed by his own country on his income derived from this source; and if his own country impose an 63 income tax, it is, of course, a convenience to all parties that the government which is to receive the tax should

deduct it from the debt which, in this instance, that government owes to the payer of the tax, and thus avoid a double process; but a foreigner, not resident in the State, is not liable to be taxed by the State; and it seems unjust to a foreign creditor to make use of the machinery which, on the ground of convenience, is applied in the cases of domestic creditors, in order to subject him to a tax to which he is not on principle liable." Vol. ii. pp. 14, 15.

Here, also, is a further difference: the tax here is laid upon the interest due on private contracts. As observed by counsel, no other government has ever undertaken to tax the income of subjects of another nation accruing to them at their own domicile upon property held there, and arising out of ordinary business, or contracts between individuals.

*337 This case is decided upon the authority of Railroad Company v. Collector, reported in 100 U.S., and the doctrines from which I dissent necessarily flow from that decision. When that decision was announced I was apprehensive that the conclusions would follow which I now see to be inevitable. It matters not what the interest may be called, whether classed among gains and profits, or covered up by other forms of expression, the fact remains, the tax is laid upon it, and that is a tax which comes from the party entitled to the interest, — here, a non-resident alien in England, who is not, and never has been, subject to the jurisdiction of this country.

In that case the tax is called an excise on the business of the class of corporations mentioned, and is held to be laid, not on the bondholder who receives the interest, but upon the earnings of the corporations which pay it. How can a tax on the interest to be paid be called a tax on the earnings of the corporation if it earns nothing — if it borrows the money to pay the interest? How can it be said not to be a tax upon the income of the bondholder when out of his interest the tax is deducted?

That case was not treated as one, the disposition of which was considered important, as settling a rule of action. The opening language of the opinion is: "As the sum involved in this suit is small, and the law under which the tax in question was collected has long since been repealed, the case is of little consequence as regards any principle involved in it as a rule of future action." But now it is invoked in a case of great magnitude, and many other similar cases, as we are informed, are likely soon to be before us; and though it overrules repeated and solemn adjudications rendered after full argument and mature deliberation, though it is opposed to one of the most important and salutary principles of public law. it is to be received as conclusive, and no further word from the court, either in explanation or justification of it, is to be heard. I cannot believe that a principle so important as the one announced here, and so injurious in its tendencies, so well calculated to elicit unfavorable comment from the enlightened sentiment of the civilized world, will be allowed to pass unchallenged, though the court is silent upon it.

I think the judgment should be affirmed.
[United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882)]

Note some key points from the above dissenting opinion of Justice Field:

1. The tax imposed is an EXCISE and FRANCHISE tax upon the "benefits" of the protection of a specific municipal government. Those who DON'T WANT or NEED and DO NOT CONSENT to such protection are NOT the lawful subjects of the tax. Those who consent call themselves statutory "citizens". Those who don't call themselves statutory "non-residents".

"A personal tax," says the Supreme Court of New Jersey, "is the burden imposed by government on its own citizens for the benefits which that government affords by its protection and its laws, and any government which should attempt to impose such a tax on citizens of other States would justly incur the rebuke of the intelligent sentiment of the civilized world." State v. Ross, 23 N.J.L. 517, 521.

2. The United States has no jurisdiction outside its own borders or outside its own TERRITORY, meaning federal territory. Constitutional states of the Union are NOT federal territory.

". . . the jurisdiction of the United States over persons and property ends where the foreign jurisdiction begins."

3. The only way that any legal PERSON, including a government, can reach outside its own territory is by exercising its right to contract, which means that it can ONLY act upon those who EXPRESSLY consent and thereby contract with the sovereign. That consent is manifested by calling oneself a STATUTORY "citizen". Those who don't consent to the franchise protection contract call themselves statutory "nonresident aliens".

Debitum et contractus non sunt nullius loci.
Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

Locus contractus regit actum.

[Bouvier's Maxims of Law, 1856;

4. The tax is upon the RECIPIENT, not the company making the payment. The "taxpayer" is the recipient of the payment, and hence, the company paying the recipient is NOT the "taxpayer". The company, in turn, is identified as an "agent of the government", meaning a withholding agent and therefore PUBLIC OFFICER. WHY? Because the Erie railroad is a FEDERAL and not STATE corporation. They hid this from their ruling. If they had been a PRIVATE company that was NOT a FEDERAL corporation, they could not lawfully act as agents of the government.

*"It is not taxation," said the court, "that government should take from one the profits and gains of another. That is taxation which compels one to pay for the support of the government from his own gains and of his own property. In the cases we are considering, the corporation parts not with a farthing of its own property. Whatever sum it pays to the government is the property of another. Whether the tax is five per cent on the dividend or interest, or whether it be fifty per cent, the corporation is neither richer nor poorer. Whatever it thus pays to the government, it by law withholds from the creditor. If no tax exists, it pays seven per cent, or whatever be its rate of interest, to its creditor in one unbroken sum. If there be a tax, it pays exactly the same sum to its creditor, less five per cent thereof, and this five per cent it pays to the government. The receivers may be two, or the receiver may be one, but the payer pays the same amount in either event. It is no pecuniary burden upon the corporation, and no taxation of the corporation. The burden falls on the creditor. He is the party taxed. In the case before us, this question controls its decision. If the tax were upon the railroad, there is no defence; it must be paid. But we hold that the tax imposed by the 122d section is in substance and in law a tax upon the <sup>332</sup> income of the creditor or stockholder, and not a tax upon the corporation." See also Haight v. Railroad Company, 6 Wall. 15, and Railroad Company v. Jackson, 7 id. 262, 269.*

5. The recipient is a non-resident alien BECAUSE he has a legislatively FOREIGN DOMICILE. NOT because he has a FOREIGN NATIONALITY.
6. The FOREIGN DOMICILE makes the target of the tax a STATUTORY "alien" but not necessarily a CONSTITUTIONAL alien.

"Here, also, is a further difference: the tax here is laid upon the interest due on private contracts. As observed by counsel, no other government has ever undertaken to tax the income of subjects of another nation accruing to them at their own domicile upon property held there, and arising out of ordinary business, or contracts between individuals."

7. The "non-resident alien" is COMPLETELY outside the jurisdiction of the United States. Hence, it is LEGALLY IMPOSSIBLE for such a person to become a statutory "taxpayer". The only way to CRIMINALLY force him to become a taxpayer is to:
- 7.1. Let the company illegally withhold earnings of a nontaxpayer.
  - 7.2. Make getting a refund of amounts withheld a "privilege" in which he has to request a "INDIVIDUAL Taxpayer Identification Number" (ITIN) that makes him a statutory "individual".
  - 7.3. After he gets the number ILLEGALLY, force him to file "taxpayer" tax return. If he refuses to do that, then they refuse to refund the amount withheld. That's international terrorism and extortion.

"The government thus lays a tax, through the instrumentality [PUBLIC OFFICE] of the company, upon the income of a non-resident alien over whom it cannot justly exercise any control, nor upon whom it can justly lay any burden."

8. The laws of a nation ONLY apply to its own STATUTORY "citizens" who have a domicile on FEDERAL TERRITORY. They do NOT apply to STATUTORY aliens with a legislatively FOREIGN DOMICILE. These statutory "citizens" can ONLY become statutory citizens by SELECTING and CONSENTING to a domicile on federal territory AND physically being on said territory.

"The laws of no nation can justly extend beyond its own jurisdiction, except so far as regards its own citizens. They can have no force to control the sovereignty or rights of any other nation within its own jurisdiction. And however general and comprehensive the phraseology used in our municipal laws may be, they must always be restricted in construction to places and persons upon whom the legislatures have authority and jurisdiction."
9 Wheat. 362.

9. If you are not a STATUTORY citizen (per 8 U.S.C. §1401, 26 U.S.C. §3121(d) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c)), which Justice Field calls a "SUBJECT", then you can't be taxed. Field refers to those who can't be taxed as "aliens", and he can only mean STATUTORY aliens, not CONSTITUTIONAL aliens:

"All subjects," he adds, "over which the power of a State extends are objects of taxation, but those over which it does not extend are, upon the soundest principles, exempt from taxation. This proposition *334 may almost be pronounced self-evident." McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 428.

10. The court KNEW they were pulling a FRAUD on the people, because they were SILENT on so many important issues that Field pointed out. Per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(b)(6), they AGREED with his conclusions because they did not EXPRESSLY DISAGREE or disprove ANY of his arguments.

"though it is opposed to one of the most important and salutary principles of public law, it is to be received as conclusive, and no further word from the court, either in explanation or justification of it, is to be heard. I cannot believe that a principle so important as the one announced here, and so injurious in its tendencies, so well calculated to elicit unfavorable comment from the enlightened sentiment of the civilized world, will be allowed to pass unchallenged, though the court is silent upon it."

11. Justice Field says the abuse of "words of art" mask the nature of the above criminal extortion:

"Words [of art] cannot change the fact, though they may [DELIBERATELY] mislead and bewilder. The thing remains through all disguises of terms."

12. If you want to search for cases on "nonresident aliens" defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(B), the Supreme Court spells them differently than the code itself. You have to search for "non-resident alien" instead.

1.1.1.5 Supporting evidence for doubters

Those skeptical readers who doubt the conclusions of the previous section or who challenge the significance of the Cook v. Tait ruling to federal jurisdiction are invited to compare the following two cases and try to explain the differences between them:

1. Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924).
2. Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989).

In BOTH of the above cases, the parties:

1. Were domiciled in a legislatively foreign state AND a foreign country. Cook was domiciled in Mexico while Bettison was domiciled in Venezuela.
2. Were statutory nonresidents and "nonresident aliens" under the Internal Revenue Code based on their chosen domicile.
3. Became the party to a controversy with someone domiciled in the statutory "United States", meaning federal territory.
4. Because of their legislatively foreign domicile, were technically "stateless persons" and therefore not statutory "persons" under federal law.
5. Were born in America (the COUNTRY) and therefore an American national and Constitutional citizen.

The only difference between the two cases is the DECLARED STATUS of the litigant and the CONTEXT in which that status is interpreted or applied or MIS-applied by the court. Recall that there are TWO main contexts in which legal terms can be used: CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY.

In Newman-Green, Bettison was presumed by the court to be a CONSTITUTIONAL "U.S. citizen" by virtue of his foreign domicile. Here is what the court said about him:

Petitioner Newman-Green, Inc., an Illinois corporation, brought this state law contract action in District Court against a Venezuelan corporation, four Venezuelan citizens, and William L. Bettison, a United States citizen domiciled in Caracas, Venezuela. Newman-Green's complaint alleged that the Venezuelan corporation had breached a licensing agreement, and that the individual defendants, joint and several guarantors of royalty payments due under the agreement, owed money to Newman-Green. Several years of discovery and pretrial motions followed. The District Court ultimately granted partial summary judgment for the guarantors and partial summary judgment for Newman-Green. 590 F.Supp. 1083 (ND Ill.1984). Only Newman-Green appealed.

At oral argument before a panel of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Easterbrook inquired as to the statutory basis for diversity jurisdiction, an issue which had not been previously raised either by counsel or by the District Court Judge. In its complaint, Newman-Green had invoked 28 U.S.C. §1332(a)(3), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of one State sues both aliens and citizens of a State (or States) different from the plaintiffs. In order to be a citizen of a State within the meaning of the diversity statute, a natural person must both be a citizen of the United States and be domiciled within the State. See Robertson v. Cease, 97 U.S. 646, 648-649 (1878); Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115 (1834). The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3). Subsection 1332(a)(2), which confers jurisdiction in the District Court when a citizen of a State sues aliens only, also could not be satisfied because Bettison is a United States citizen. [490 U.S. 829] [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

In the above context, the phrase "United States citizen" was used in its CONSTITUTIONAL sense. Bettison could not have been a STATUTORY "United States citizen" without a domicile a statutory "State". He was therefore a CONSTITUTIONAL "United States citizen".

"The problem in this case is that Bettison, although a United States citizen, has no domicile in any State. He is therefore "stateless" for purposes of § 1332(a)(3)." [Newman-Green v. Alfonso Larrain, 490 U.S. 826 (1989)]

Comparing the Cook v. Tait case, the phrase "citizen of the United States" was interpreted in its STATUTORY sense.

"Or, to express it another way, the basis of the power to tax was not and cannot be made dependent upon the situs of the property in all cases, it being in or out of the United States, nor was not and cannot be made dependent upon the domicile of the citizen, that being in or out of the United States, but upon his relation as citizen to the United States and the relation of the latter to him as citizen. The consequence of the relations is that the native citizen who is taxed may have domicile, and the property from which his income is derived may have situs, in a foreign country and the tax be legal—the government having power to impose the tax." [Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924)]

Because Bettison in the Newman-Green case was a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen but not a STATUTORY citizen with a legislatively foreign domicile, he had to be dismissed from the class action and be treated as BEYOND the jurisdiction of the court and OUTSIDE the class of involved in the CLASS action.

Cook, on the other hand, personally petitioned the court for protection and they heard his case, even though he technically had the SAME CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" status as Bettison. The U.S. Supreme Court, however, instead of claiming he was ALSO a "stateless person" and dismissing either him or the case the as they did with Bettison, rather claimed they HAD jurisdiction and ruled on the matter in the government's favor and AGAINST Cook. The U.S. Supreme Court did so based on the UNSUBSTANTIATED PRESUMPTION that the "U.S. citizen" he claimed to be was a STATUTORY rather than CONSTITUTIONAL "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401. SCAM!

1.1.1.6 Summary and conclusion

What the U.S. Supreme Court has done to extend federal taxing jurisdiction both unconstitutionally and in violation of international law is summarized below:

1. Meaning of the term "citizen" or "citizen of the United States" within various statutory contexts:

- 1.1. Every reference to "citizen" and "national" within Title 8 of the U.S. Code is a POLITICAL citizen and not a CIVIL citizen.

8. Citizen defined

Citizenship implies membership in a political society, the relation of allegiance and protection, identification with the state, and a participation in its functions, and while a temporary absence may suspend the relation between a state and its citizen, his identification with the state remains where he intends to return. Pannill v. Roanoke Times Co., W.D.Va.1918, 252 F. 910. Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 678

Mere residence [meaning also DOMICILE] in a foreign country, even by a naturalized American, has no effect upon such person's citizenship. U.S. v. Howe, S.D.N.Y.1916, 231 F. 546. Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 683(1)

Citizenship is membership in a political society and imposes a duty of allegiance on the part of a member and a duty of protection on the part of society. U.S. v. Polzin, D.C.Md. 1942, 48 F.Supp. 476. Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 650; Aliens, Immigration, And Citizenship 672

Distinction between citizenship and electorship pervades the public law of the United States. 1857, 8 Op.Aty.Gen. 300.

9. Classes of citizens--Generally

In regard to the protection of our citizens in their rights at home and abroad, we have in the United States no law which divides them into classes or makes any difference whatever between them. 1859, 9 Op.Atty.Gen. 357.
[8 U.S.C.A. §1401, Westlaw, 2009]

- 1.2. "citizen of the United States" as used in Title 8 means a POLITICAL status and not a CIVIL status.
- 1.3. "citizen" as used in every OTHER title of the U.S. Code, INCLUDING and especially the Internal Revenue Code, means a CIVIL status and NOT a POLITICAL status.
- 1.4. "POLITICAL"/CONSTITUTIONAL status does not change with changes in CIVIL domicile, but CIVIL status DOES. The only thing that can change political status is either BIRTH or NATURALIZATION.
- 1.5. Domicile on federal territory is ALWAYS the origin of any and every civil liability, INCLUDING tax liability. Domicile, in turn is ALWAYS voluntary and discretionary. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.
- 1.6. One may be a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL member of a society WITHOUT be a CIVIL/STATUTORY member subject to the CIVIL statutory laws of that society. DOMICILE is the only method by which they can ALSO be subject to the CIVIL statutory laws of that society per Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17.
- 1.7. Since DOMICILE is and must be voluntary, then being a CIVIL/STATUTORY citizen with a "civil status" under the tax code MUST be voluntary.

"The law of England, and of almost all civilized countries, ascribes to each individual at his birth two distinct legal states or conditions: one, by virtue of which he becomes the subject of some particular country, binding him by the tie of natural allegiance, and which may be called his political status; another by virtue of which he has ascribed to him the character of a citizen of some particular country, and as such is possessed of certain municipal rights, and subject to certain obligations, which latter character is the civil status or condition of the individual, and may be quite different from his political status. And then, while maintaining that the civil status is universally governed by the single principle of domicil, domicilium, the criterion established by international law for the purpose of determining civil status, and the basis on which the personal rights of the party, that is to say, the law which determines his majority or minority, his marriage, succession, testacy or intestacy, must depend, he yet distinctly recognized that a man's political status, his country, patria, and his "nationality, that is, natural allegiance," "may depend on different laws in different countries." Pp. 457, 460. He evidently used the word "citizen" not as equivalent to "subject," but rather to "inhabitant," and had no thought of impeaching the established rule that all persons born under British dominion are natural-born subjects."
[United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898)]

- 1.8. For further background on how POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status and CIVIL/STATUTORY status interact but are NOT equal in any respect, see:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2. How the FRAUD is perpetuated and protected by the corrupt courts:
  - 2.1. The FRAUD of extraterritorially extending Internal Revenue Taxes outside of federal territory is perpetuated by:
    - 2.1.1. A usually MALICIOUS failure or absolute refusal to distinguish a POLITICAL status from a CIVIL status. The "citizen" mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code is a STATUTORY citizen domiciled on federal territory, not a POLITICAL citizen under the constitution.
    - 2.1.2. Confusing DOMICILE with NATIONALITY, or PRESUMING that they are EQUAL or synonymous.
    - 2.1.3. Interfering with attempts by victims of the false presumptions to challenge said presumptions.
  - 2.2. In Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924), former President William H. Taft acting then as a Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court ADDED to the confusion between CIVIL and POLITICAL status by deliberately REFUSING to distinguish WHICH "citizen of the United States" that Cook was.
3. Consequences of the fraud of deliberately confusing CIVIL and POLITICAL status of the word "citizen".
  - 3.1. ILLEGALLY extends income taxes to POLITICAL citizens everywhere.
  - 3.2. Perpetuates the FALSE presumption that CIVIL and POLITICAL citizens are equivalent.
  - 3.3. Creates a WORLDWIDE TAX and made every American into essentially a dog on a leash until they expatriate. Being a "national" was the leash according to Cook v. Tate, but that simply can't be the case because DOMICILE and not NATIONALITY is the only proper origin of tax liability.
  - 3.4. Removed DISCRETION and CONSENT from the taxation process, because being a CIVIL citizen is discretionary, whereas being a POLITICAL citizen is not.
4. To remove the confusion, government MUST at all times:
  - 4.1. Distinguish between POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL "citizens" and CIVIL/STATUTORY citizens throughout all their statutes and forms.
  - 4.2. Restore DISCRETION and CHOICE to the "protection" services they offer by allowing people to be ONLY POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL citizens.

4.3. Allow people to determine whether they want to be protected when abroad or in a state of the Union, and telling them that if they choose NO, then they don't have to pay income taxes when abroad or in a state of the Union. Otherwise, an "adhesion contract" and SLAVERY and THEFT results.

Our attempts to become a "non-resident" represent an attempt to prevent the false presumption that the CIVIL and POLITICAL status of "citizen" are equivalent, and thus to draw attention to the FRAUD of confusing them.

5.6.13.3.5 Social Security Administration HIDES your citizenship status in their NUMIDENT records

Your citizenship status is represented in the Social Security NUMIDENT record maintained by the Social Security Administration. The field called "CSP" within NUMIDENT contains a one character code that represents your citizenship status. This information is DELIBERATELY concealed and obfuscated from public view by the following Social Security policies:

1. The meaning of the CSP codes is NOT listed in the Social Security Administration, Program Operations Manual System (POMS) online so you can't find out.

2. Employees at the SSA offices are NOT allowed to know and typically DO NOT know what the code means.

3. If you submit a Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA) request to SSA asking them what the CSP code means, they will respond that the values of the codes are CLASSIFIED and therefore UNKNOWABLE by the public. You ARE NOT allowed to know WHAT citizenship status they associate with you. See the following negative response:

Social Security Admin. FOIA for CSP Code Values, Exhibit #01.011

<http://sedm.org/Exhibits/ExhibitIndex.htm>

4. The ONLY option they give you in block 5 entitled "CITIZENSHIP" are the following. They REFUSE to distinguish WHICH "United States" is implied in the term "U.S. citizen", and if they told the truth, the ONLY citizen they could lawfully mean is a STATUTORY "U.S. citizen" per 8 U.S.C. §1401 and NOT a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen, who is a STATUTORY nonresident and alien in relation to the national government with a foreign domicile:

4.1. "U.S. citizen"

4.2. "Legal Alien Allowed to Work"

4.4. "Other" (See instructions on page 1)

See:

Social Security Administration Form SS-5

Those who are domiciled outside the statutory "United States*" or in a constitutional state of the Union and who want to correct the citizenship records of the SSA must submit a new SSA Form SS-5 to the Social Security Administration (SSA) and check "Other" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) in Block 5. This changes the CSP code in their record from "A" to "D". If you go into the Social Security Office and try to do this, the local offices often will try to give you a run-around with the following abusive and CRIMINAL tactics:

1. When you ask them about the meaning of Block 5, they will refuse to indicate whether the citizenship indicated is a CIVIL/STATUTORY status or a POLITICAL/CONSTITUTIONAL status. It can't be both. It must indicate NATIONALITY or DOMICILE, but not BOTH.

2. They will first try to call the national office to ask about your status in Block 5.

3. They will ABSOLUTELY REFUSE to involve you in the call or to hear what is said, because they want to protect the perpetrators of crime on the other end. Remember, terrorists always operate anonymously and they are terrorists. You should bring your MP3 voice record, insist on being present, and put the phone on speaker phone, and do EXACTLY the same thing they do when you call them directly by saying the following:

"This call is being monitored for quality assurance purposes, just like you do to me without my consent ALL THE TIME."

4. After they get off the phone, they will refuse to tell you the full legal name of the person on the other end of the call to protect those who are perpetuating the fraud.

5. They will tell you that they want to send your SSA Form SS-5 to the national office in Baltimore, Maryland, but refuse to identify EXACTLY WHO they are sending it to, because they don't want this person sued personally as they should

1 be.

2 6. The national office will sit on the form forever and refuse to make the change requested, and yet never justify with the 3 law by what authority they:

4 6.1. Perpetuate the criminal computer fraud that results from NOT changing it.

5 6.2. Perpetuate the criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §911 by NOT changing it.

6 7. They will allow you to change ANYTHING ELSE on the form without their permission, but if you want to change
7 your CITIZENSHIP, they essentially interfere with it illegally and criminally.

8 The reason they play all the above obfuscation GAMES and hide or classify information to conceal the GAMES is because 9 they want to protect what they certainly know are the following CRIMES on their part and that of their employees:

- 10 1. They can't offer federal benefits to CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizens with a domicile outside of 11 federal territory. If they do, they would be criminally violating 18 U.S.C. §911.
- 12 2. They can't pay public monies to PRIVATE parties, and therefore you CANNOT apply with the SS-5 for a "benefit"
13 unless you are a public officer ALREADY employed with the government. If they let PRIVATE people apply they are 14 conspiring to commit the crime of impersonating a public officer in violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
- 15 3. They aren't allowed to offer or enforce any government franchise within the borders of a Constitutional but not 16 STATUTORY state of the Union, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court, so they have to make you LOOK like a
17 STATUTORY citizen, even though you aren't, in order to expand their Ponzi Scheme outside their GENERAL
18 jurisdiction and into legislatively foreign states.

19 "Congress cannot authorize [LICENSE, using a de facto license number called a "Social Security Number"] a 20 trade or business within a State in order to tax it."
21 [License Tax Cases, 72 U.S. 462, 18 L.Ed. 497, 5 Wall. 462, 2 A.F.T.R. 2224 (1866)]

22 The only status a state domiciled CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY citizen can put on the form is "Other" or "Legal 23 [STATUTORY] Alien Allowed to Work". The instructions say following about "Other" option:

24 "If you check "Other", you need to provide proof that you are entitled to a federally-funded benefit for which 25 Social Security number is required as a condition for you to receive payment."

26 In answer to the above query in connection with the "Other" option, we suggest:

27 "DO NOT seek any federally funded benefit. I want a NONtaxpayer number that entitles me to ABSOLUTELY
28 NOTHING as a NONRESIDENT not subject to federal law and NOT qualified to receive benefits of any kind. I 29 am only applying because:

30 1. I am being illegally compelled to use a number I know I am not qualified to ask for.

31 2. The number was required as a precondition condition of PRIVATE employment or opening an PRIVATE
32 financial account by a NONRESIDENT ALIEN who is NOT a "U.S. citizen" or "U.S. person" and who is NOT
33 required to have or use such a number by 31 C.F.R. §306.10, 31 C.F.R. §103.34(a)(3)(x), and IRS Publication
34 515: Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and Foreign Entities.

35 I ask that you criminally prosecute them for doing so AND provide a statement on SSA letterhead indicating that 36 I am NOT eligible that I can show them. Furthermore, if you do have any numbers on file connected with my 37 name, I ask that they be rescinded permanently from your records."

38 Then you may want to attach the following forms to the application to ENSURE that they reject your application and TELL
39 you that you are NOT eligible so you can show it to the person who is COMPELLING you to use a number:

44 5.6.13.3.6 Federal courts refusing to recognize sovereignty of litigant

45 A nonresident is an entity with no civil domicile within the venue or forum. This means that they are:

1. Not a "taxpayer" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) or 26 U.S.C. §1313.

"Revenue Laws relate to taxpayers [officers, employees, and elected officials of the Federal Government] and not to non-taxpayers [American Citizens/American Nationals not subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government]. The latter are without their scope. No procedures are prescribed for non-taxpayers and no attempt is made to annul any of their Rights or Remedies in due course of law. With them[non-taxpayers] Congress does not assume to deal and they are neither of the subject nor of the object of federal revenue laws."
[Economy Plumbing & Heating v. U.S., 470 F.2d. 585 (1972)]

2. Not a "person" or "individual" under the civil law of the forum. See our article on domicile:

Why Domicile and Becoming a "Taxpayer" Require Your Consent, Form #05.002

3. Protected by the Minimum Contacts Doctrine of the U.S. Supreme Court.

4. Protected by the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97. The government as the moving party asserting a liability has the burden of showing that you expressly waived sovereign immunity by either:

4.1. Mistakenly declaring yourself a "citizen" or "resident" pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1603(b)(3) who therefore has domicile (nationals) or a residence (aliens) within federal territory.

4.2. Consensually conducting commerce within the legislative jurisdiction of the sovereign pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1605.

5. "foreign" and a "foreigner" in relation to the forum.

6. NOT a "foreign person" because not a "person".

7. Protected from federal government enforcement by the USA Constitution if situated in a CONSTITUTIONAL but not STATUTORY "State".

7.1. Constitutional rights, according to the Declaration of Independence, are "inalienable", meaning that we AREN'T ALLOWED by law to consent to give them away or bargain them away.

7.2. Constitutional rights attach to the LAND we stand on and not our civil or STATUTORY status.

7.3. Constitutional rights are inalienable.

8. Protected by the common law of the state they are physically in. There is no federal common law applicable to states of the Union. United States v. Erie R. Co., 106 U.S. 327 (1882)

9. Protected by 18 U.S.C. §112 if they are representing their CONSTITUTIONAL state as a jurist or a voter. All such states are legislatively but not constitutionally "foreign".

In order to compel federal courts to recognize all the requirements of the above, we have prepared the following, which you should attach to all your pleadings in federal court:

<http://sedm.org/Litigation/LitIndex.htm>

Even after the above is attached and even after sovereign immunity is properly invoked by a "nonresident alien" who is NOT an "individual" or "person", even then some federal courts will further interfere with the sovereign immunity of people litigating before them by creating a "presumption" that the litigants are domiciliaries of the forum through the following means:

1. Refusing to recognize that:

1.1. You, the litigant are a "nontaxpayer".

1.2. "Nontaxpayers" even exist. The result is that EVERYONE is "presumed" to be a "taxpayer", which means they are PRESUMED guilty until proven innocent. This turns the foundation of American Jurisprudence upside down, which is the presumption of innocent until proven guilty.

"The presumption of innocence, although not articulated in the Constitution, is a basic component of a fair trial under our system of criminal justice. Long ago this Court stated:

The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law."
[Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895).]

"In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence [a "nontaxpayer"] into guilt [a "taxpayer", by presumption or otherwise], or punish innocence as a crime, or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.' 3 Dall. 388."

[Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U.S. 700 \(1878\)]

1.3. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421 does not apply to "nontaxpayers". See section 5.8 of the following for details:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1.4. That the Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) does not apply to "nontaxpayers". See section 5.9 of the Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid document above for details.

2. Refusing to require your government opponent to justify why the Minimum Contacts Doctrine invoked by you is satisfied and why the court therefore has jurisdiction to hear the civil case.
3. Refusing to require your government opponent to justify why the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (F.S.I.A.), 28 U.S.C. Part 4, Chapter 97, invoked by you is satisfied and why the court therefore has jurisdiction to hear the civil case.
4. Citing irrelevant cases litigated by "citizens" or "residents" against you. All such case law amounts to little more than political propaganda which is IRRELEVANT to the circumstances of a nonresident, who never consented to be protected by the laws of the forum and who shouldn't have and hopefully didn't invoke them in his defense.
5. Calling attempts to identify yourself as other than a "person" or an "individual" to be "frivolous" without explaining why. This tactic is described in section 6.15 of the document below:

Flawed Tax Arguments to Avoid, Form #08.004
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5.6.13.3.7 How people are compelled to become "residents" or prevented from receiving all of the benefits of being a "nonresident"<sup>285</sup>

Based on the foregoing discussion, it ought to be obvious that the government doesn't want you to know any of the following facts:

1. That all income taxation is based primarily upon domicile.
2. That domicile is a voluntary choice.
3. That because they need your consent to choose a domicile, they can't tax you without your consent.
4. That domicile is based on the coincidence of physical presence and intent to permanently remain in a place.
5. That unless you choose a domicile within the jurisdiction of the government that has general jurisdiction where you live, they have no authority to institute income taxation upon you.
6. That no one can determine your domicile except you.
7. That if you don't want the protection of government, you can fire them and handle your own protection, by changing your domicile to a different place or choosing no domicile at all. This then relieves you of an obligation to pay income taxes to support the protection that you no longer want or need.

Therefore, governments have a vested interest in hiding the relationship of "domicile" to income taxation by removing it or at least obfuscating it in their "codes". A number of irreconcilable conflicts of law are created by COMPELLING EVERYONE to have either a specific domicile or an earthly domicile. For instance:

1. If the First Amendment gives us a right to freely associate and also implies a right to DISASSOCIATE, how can we be compelled to associate with a "state" or the people in the locality where we live without violating the First Amendment? It may not be presumed that we moved to a place because we wanted to associate with the people there.
2. Domicile creates a duty of allegiance, according to the cite above. All allegiance MUST be voluntary. How can the state compel allegiance by compelling a person to have or to choose an earthly domicile? What gives them the right to insist that the only legitimate type of domicile is associated with a government? Why can't it be a church, a religious group, or simply an association of people who want to have their own police force or protection service separated from the state? Since the only product that government delivers is “protection”, why can't people have the right to fire the government and provide their own protection with the tax money they would have paid the government?

3. When one chooses a domicile, they create a legal or contractual obligation to support a specific government, based on the above. By compelling everyone to choose an earthly domicile whose object is a specific government or state, isn't the state interfering with our right to contract by compelling us to contract with a specific government for our protection? The Constitution, Article 1, Section 10 says no state shall make any law impairing the obligation of contracts. Implicit in this right to contract is the right NOT to contract. Every right implies the opposite right. Therefore, how can everyone be compelled to have a domicile without violating their right to contract?
4. The U.S. Supreme Court also said that income taxation based on domicile is “quasi-contractual” in nature.

“Even if the judgment is deemed to be colored by the nature of the obligation whose validity it establishes, and we are free to re-examine it, and, if we find it to be based on an obligation penal in character, to refuse to enforce it outside the state where rendered, see Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U.S. 265, 292, et seq. 8 S.Ct.

1370, compare Fauntleroy v. Lum, 210 U.S. 230, 28 S.Ct. 641, still the obligation to pay taxes is not penal. It is a statutory liability, quasi contractual in nature, enforceable, if there is no exclusive statutory remedy, in the civil courts by the common-law action of debt or indebitatus assumpsit. United States v. Chamberlin, 219 U.S. 250, 31 S.Ct. 155; Price v. United States, 269 U.S. 492, 46 S.Ct. 180; Dollar Savings Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 227; and see Stockwell v. United States, 13 Wall. 531, 542; Meredith v. United States, 13 Pet. 486, 493. This was the rule established in the English courts before the Declaration of Independence, Attorney General v. Weeks, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. 223; Attorney General v. Jewers and Batty, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. 225; Attorney General v. Hatton, Bunbury's Exch. Rep. [296 U.S. 268, 272] 262; Attorney General v. _ _ , 2 Ans.Rep. 558; see Comyn's Digest (Title 'Dett,' A, 9); 1 Chitty on Pleading, 123; cf. Attorney General v. Sewell, 4 M.&W. 77. “ [Milwaukee v. White, 296 U.S. 268 (1935)]

The “quasi-contract” they are referring to above is your voluntary choice of “domicile”, no doubt. How can they compel such a contract if the person who is the object of the compulsion refuses to “do business” with the state and also refuses to avail themselves of any of the benefits of membership in said state? Wouldn't that amount to slavery, involuntary servitude, and violate the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude?

Do you see how subtle this domicile thing is? It's a very sneaky way to draw you into the world system and force you to adopt and comply with earthly laws and a government that are hostile towards and foreign to God's laws. All of the above deceptions and ruses are designed to keep you enslaved and entrapped to support a government that does nothing for you and which you may even want to abandon or disassociate with.

5.6.13.3.7.1 Why it is UNLAWFUL for a state nationals to become a “resident alien”

Americans domiciled in states of the Union:

1. Are “nationals of the United States*** of America” under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21).
2. Wrongfully File 1040 usually.
3. Commit fraud and misrepresent their status as resident aliens by filing IRS form 1040. The 1040 form is only for those with a domicile on federal territory that is no part of a state of the Union and who are “resident aliens”. Even statutory “U.S. citizens” under 26 U.S.C. §911 are “resident aliens” in relation to the foreign country they are temporarily in while abroad. All “taxpayers”, in fact, are aliens pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

The ONLY way for a “nonresident alien” to lawfully become a “resident alien” is to make an election to do so as a person married to a statutory but not constitutional “citizen of the United States” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401 and to do so under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h).

Some of our readers, in seeking to justify how they can lawfully become “taxpayers” and Social Security franchise participants, have pointed to the language at 26 U.S.C. §7701(b) as a justification for why and how a “nonresident alien” who is not an “individual” can lawfully elect to become a “resident alien” To wit:

26 U.S.C. §7701(b):

1 (b) Definition of resident alien and nonresident alien

2 (1) In general

3 For purposes of this title (other than subtitle B)—

4 (A) Resident alien

5 An alien individual shall be treated as a resident of the United States with respect to any calendar year if (and 6 only if) such individual meets the requirements of clause (i), (ii), or (iii):

7 (i) Lawfully admitted for permanent residence Such individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United
8 States at any time during such calendar year.

9 Paragraph (b)(6) in the above statute defines "lawful permanent resident" as follows:

10 (6) Lawful permanent resident

11 For purposes of this subsection, an individual is a lawful permanent resident of the United States at any time 12 if—

13 (A) such individual has the status of having been lawfully accorded the privilege of residing permanently in 14 the United States as an immigrant in accordance with the immigration laws, and 15 (B) such status has not been revoked (and has not been administratively or judicially determined to have been 16 abandoned).

17 Notice that it DOES NOT SAY:

18 Such individual HAS BEEN lawfully accorded the privilege of residing permanently in the United States.

19 It DOES SAY:

20 Such individual HAS THE STATUS OF HAVING BEEN accorded the privilege . . . .

21 Those invoking the above statute to justify an election to become a "resident alien" will then say:

22 This is a HUGE difference. If a nonresident alien submits resident forms unwittingly, he therefore obtains
23 administratively the STATUS of resident, and thus meets the legal definition of paragraph (6). If he meets the 24 definition of paragraph (6), then he also meets the definition of (b)(1)(A)(i) above, and can thus be legally treated
25 as if a resident alien for the purposes of banking, and submitting form W-9 as a contractor. This of course is done 26 unwittingly, but it is legal.

27 I believe this is the legal mechanism that allows the masses to legally wrongfully represent themselves to financial 28 institutions and payers while indemnifying the acceptance agent . . . which is the whole objective anyway. It's my 29 personal feeling that these guys are slick enough to not blatantly do something that big that would be ALL-OUT 30 illegal.

31 I'm not trying to walk the tightrope here and have it both ways. But as I have said in the past, I have seen some 32 inconsistencies in application of the law (my opinion) that can be labeled as "curve fitting." An officer in the 33 military earns "wages" and is required to participate in Social Security. There is no way around that.
34 Furthermore, the code and regs clearly state that if you have a SSN, you may NOT obtain a TIN, but you MAY 35 change the status of the number. I have no problem paying my lawful tax. And I don't have a problem receiving 36 a military pension. I don't like Social Security as I understand how the system is implemented. But that doesn't 37 relieve me of my obligations under law, it is on the shoulders of those who engineered the scheme.

38 If a nonresident alien receives "United States" payments . . . he better be paying Federal Income Tax on them.
39 That is my personal opinion and conclusion. I have not seen ONE thing that relieves a nonresident alien of that 40 burden.

41 The above logic of justifying how a "nonresident alien" who is a state national domiciled in a state of the Union can lawfully
42 become a statutory "resident alien" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b) is, in fact, unlawful and in most cases a crime for the 43 average American. A state national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) domiciled in a state of the Union and not lawfully

1 occupying a public office in the District of Columbia as required by 4 U.S.C. §72 cannot lawfully engage in the "trade or
2 business" franchise or to elect to be treated as a "resident alien" because of the following considerations:

- 3 1. The term "lawful permanent resident" is defined in Title 8 and it doesn't include anyone born in a state of the Union
4 and certainly nowhere expressly includes a state national pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Yes, we agree that a state
5 national is a statutory "nonresident alien" within the meaning of the I.R.C., if he is engaged in a public office, but he is
6 not a statutory "alien" per 8 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A) because "nonresident aliens" are NOT a subset of "aliens" in the 7 Internal Revenue Code. We proved this in section 5.6.13.3.4.3 earlier. If you disagree, please show us proof to the 8 contrary.
- 9 2. The rights of people domiciled in states of the Union are INALIENABLE according to the Declaration of 10 Independence, which is organic law. Therefore, they can't be contracted or bargained away or converted into a
11 privilege in relation to a REAL, de jure government. The only way around this problem are for the judge/IRS to admit
12 that they don't represent a real government but a private corporate franchise. Only by being a private corporation and
13 acting in a private capacity can they lawfully contract in that way with you if you are domiciled in a state of the Union
14 protected by the organic law. We know this is the case, but we also know that they don't ever want to admit that.
- 15 3. Nowhere is the status of "resident alien" declared or expressly conferred by simply filing IRS Form 1040. The IRS has 16 a hard time even telling the truth about who the form is really used by. The only place you can go to find out that the
17 1040 is a "U.S. person", "U.S. citizen", and "U.S. resident" form is IRS Published Products Catalog (2003), Document
18 7130. They don't put that in the IRS 1040 Booklet or on the form. It's a scam because they are digging a hole and 19 hoping that your own false presumptions will cause you to fall into it. Even if you raise the issue that the 1040 form is 20 ONLY for resident aliens and not citizens unless abroad, they routinely call you a crack pot. Therefore, if you asked
21 the IRS whether you can change your status from being a state national and "non-resident non-person" to a resident
22 alien by filing form 1040, they would say no. Your hypothesis can't therefore be true.
- 23 4. You can't be a "resident" in a place without a physical presence there. The state national in the state who made the 24 UNLAWFUL election to be treated as a statutory "resident alien" is committing perjury because the physical place
25 where he/she lives didn't change. In reality, all he/she did was unlawfully elect himself into a "public office" by filling
26 out a tax form and sending a bribe/kickback to someone to treat him like a public officer. That, too is a CRIME. 18
27 U.S.C. §211 makes it a crime to bribe someone to get them appointed into a public office, and probably everyone in the 28 IRS could and probably should be prosecuted for THAT crime, because all "taxpayers" are public officers. Under 29 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), the "taxpayer" is representing an office with a domicile in the District of 30 Columbia, but he never physically moved there so technically he CAN'T be a statutory "resident alien" under 26
31 U.S.C. §7701(b). Furthermore, aliens are NOT permitted to serve in public offices, hence, even if he was lawfully
32 appointed, he is serving ILLEGALLY. EVERYTHING they are doing right now is illegal and a SCAM from the get 33 go.

34 What the above reader is trying to do is come up with a way for a sovereign party protected by the Constitution who CAN'T
35 lawfully bargain away ANY right in relation to government to waive sovereign immunity under 28 U.S.C. §1605 and change
36 his status from a protected party to a privileged statutory "resident alien". It can't be done because his/her rights are 37 INALIENABLE in relation to a REAL, DE JURE government. Only those not protected by the Constitution can do so, which 38 means they fit one of the following criteria:

- 39 1. They are domiciled on federal territory not protected by the Constitution. The District of Columbia IS protected by the 40 Constitution because it was inside of Virginia before it was ceded and was protected by the Constitution at the time it
41 was ceded, and according to the U.S. Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) the protection of the 42 Constitution against that land can't be removed by any Act of Congress. That is because rights are unalienable and can't 43 be bargained away, which is further confirmation of what we are saying.
- 44 2. They are in a foreign country (other than a state of the Union) under 26 U.S.C. §911 AND continue to maintain a 45 domicile in the statutory "United States" on federal territory. They don't enjoy the protections of the Constitution while 46 abroad, as agreed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924).

47 The average American doesn't satisfy either of the above two conditions, and certainly doesn't while in a constitutional but
48 not statutory "state" applying for a bank account. Consequently, the ONLY way to truthfully describe what banks are doing
49 by allowing state national domiciled in a state to open bank accounts as statutory "resident aliens" with a Taxpayer
50 Identification Number" is that they are helping depositors commit the following crimes:

- 51 1. Impersonating a statutory but not constitutional "U.S. citizen". 18 U.S.C. §911.
- 52 2. Impersonating a public officer. 18 U.S.C. §912. All public offices can be exercised ONLY in the District of Columbia and NOT elsewhere and they don't work in the District of Columbia as required by 4 U.S.C. §72.

3. Conspiracy to defraud the "United States". 18 U.S.C. §287. Everyone participating in a public benefit who does not in fact qualify because not a public officer in the government is committing a fraud upon the United States.
4. Filing false information returns. 26 U.S.C. §§7206, 7207. They file information returns against depositors and all these are false because the depositors do not lawfully occupy a public office and therefore are NOT engaged in the "trade or business" franchise as required by 26 U.S.C. §6041(a).
5. Fraud in connection with computers. 18 U.S.C. §1030. All their account holder records are knowingly fraudulent because they misrepresent the status of nearly all their depositors.
6. Bribing public officials. 18 U.S.C. §201. Taxes paid by those not lawfully occupying a public office and paid to those in the District of Columbia who ARE public officers is bribery of public officials.

5.6.13.3.7.2 How the tax code compels choice of domicile

The government has compelled domicile or interfered with receiving the benefits of your choice by any of the following means:

1. Nowhere in Internal Revenue Code is the word "domicile" admitted to be the source of the government's jurisdiction to impose an income tax, even though the U.S. Supreme Court admitted this in Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954). The word "domicile", in fact, is only used in two sections of the entire 9,500 page Internal Revenue Code, Title 26. This is no accident, but a very devious way for the government to avoid getting into arguments with persons who it is accusing of being "taxpayers". It avoids these arguments by avoiding showing Americans the easiest way to challenge federal jurisdiction, which is demanding proof from the government required by 5 U.S.C. §556(d), who is the moving party, that you maintain a domicile on federal territory. The two sections below are the only places where domicile is mentioned:
  - 1.1. 26 U.S.C. §7448(j)(1)(B)(vi): Annuities to surviving spouses and dependent children of judges.
  - 1.2. 26 U.S.C. §6091: Defines where returns shall be submitted in the case of deceased "taxpayers", which is the "domicile" of the decedent when he died.
2. They renamed the word "domicile" on government tax forms. They did this so that income taxation "appears" to be based entirely on physical presence, when in fact is also requires voluntary consent as well. If you knew that the government needed your consent to become a "taxpayer", then probably everyone would "un-volunteer" and the government would be left scraping for pennies. Below are some examples of other names they gave to "domicile":
  - 2.1. "permanent address"
  - 2.2. "permanent residence"
  - 2.3. "residence": defined above, and only applying to nonresident aliens. There is no definition of "residence" anywhere in the I.R.C. in the case of a "citizen". Below is how Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) legal encyclopedia, Domicile, describes the distinction between "residence" and "domicile":

Corpus Juris Secundum
§4 Domicile and Residence Distinguished

b. Use of Terms in Statutes

The terms "domicile" and "residence," as used in statutes, are commonly, although not necessarily, construed as synonymous. Whether the term "residence," as used in a statute, will be construed as having the meaning of "domicile," or the term "domicile" construed as "residence," depends on the purpose of the statute and the nature of the subject matter, as well as the context in which the term is used. 32 It has been declared that the terms "residence" and "domicile" are almost universally used interchangeably in statute, and that since domicile and legal residence are synonymous, the statutory rules for determining the place of residence are the rules for determining domicile.34 However, it has been held that "residence," when used in statutes, is generally interpreted by the courts as meaning "domicile," but with important exception.

Accordingly, whenever the terms "residence" and "domicile" are used in connection with subjects of domestic policy, the terms are equivalent, as they also are, generally, where a statute prescribes residence as a qualification for the enjoyment of a privilege or the exercise of a franchise. "Residence" as used in various particular statutes has been considered synonymous with "domicile." 39 However, the terms are not necessarily synonymous.40

[28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §4 Domicile and Resident Distinguished]

3. By telling you that you MUST have a "domicile". For instance, the Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) section on "Domicile" says the following on this subject:

2 Domicile, §5 Necessity and Number

4 "It is a settled principle that every person must have a domicile somewhere.<sup>3</sup> The law permits no individual to
5 be without a domicile,<sup>42</sup> and an individual is never without a domicile somewhere.<sup>13</sup> Domicile is a continuing 6 thing, and from the moment a person is born he must, at all times, have a domicile ."
7 [28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §5 Necessity and Number]

10 Corpus Juris Secundum
11 §9 Domicile by Operation of Law

13 "Whenever a person does not fix a domicile for himself, the law will fix one for him in accordance with the facts
14 and circumstances of the case; <sup>12</sup> and an infant's domicile will be fixed by operation of law where it cannot be 15 determined from that of the parents.<sup>73</sup>"
16 [28 Corpus Juris Secundum, Domicile, §9 Domicile by Operation of Law]

17
18 Indirectly, what they are suggesting in the above by FORCING you to have a domicile is that:

- 19 3.1. You cannot choose God as your sole Protector, but MUST have an earthly protector who cannot be yourself.
- 20 3.2. Although the First Amendment gives you the right to freely associate, it does not give you the right to disassociate
- 21 with ALL governments. This is an absurdity.
- 22 3.3. Government has a monopoly on protection and that individuals are not allowed to fire the government and provide
- 23 their own protection, either individually or collectively.
- 24 4. By inventing new words that allow them to avoid mentioning "domicile" in their vague "codes" while giving you the
- 25 impression that an obligation exists that actually is consensual. For instance, in 26 U.S.C. §911 is the section of the
- 26 I.R.C. entitled "Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad". This section identifies the income tax liabilities
- 27 of persons domiciled in the "United States" (federal zone) who are living temporarily abroad. We showed earlier that if
- 28 they have a domicile abroad, then they cannot be either "citizens" or "residents" under the I.R.C., because domicile is a
- 29 prerequisite for being either. In that section, they very deceptively:
- 30 4.1. Use the word "abode" in 26 U.S.C. §911\(d\)\(3\) to describe one's domicile so as to remove the requirement for
- 31 "intent" and "consent" from consideration of the subject, even though they have no authority to ignore this
- 32 requirement for consent in the case of anything but an "alien".
- 33 4.2. Don't even use the word "domicile" at all, and refuse to acknowledge that what "citizens" or "residents" both have
- 34 in common is a "domicile" within the United States. They did this to preserve the illusion that even after one
- 35 changes their domicile to a foreign country while abroad, the federal tax liability continues, when in fact, it legally
- 36 is not required to. After domicile is changed, those Americans who changed it while abroad then are no longer
- 37 called "citizens" under federal law, but rather "nationals" and "nonresident aliens".
- 38 4.3. They invented a new word called a "tax home", as if it were a substitute for "domicile", when in fact it is not. A
- 39 "tax home" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911 as a place where a person who has a temporary presence abroad treats
- 40 himself or herself as a privileged "resident" in the foreign country but still also maintains a privileged "resident"
- 41 and "domicile" status in the "United States".

42 TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART III > Subpart B > § 911
43 § 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad

44 (d) Definitions and special rules For purposes of this section—

45 (3) Tax home

46 The term "tax home" means, with respect to any individual, such individual's home for purposes of section 162
47 *(a)(2) (relating to traveling expenses while away from home). An individual shall not be treated as having a tax
48 home in a foreign country for any period for which his abode [domicile] is within the United States [federal 49 zone].

51 The only way the government can maintain your status as a "taxpayer" is to perpetuate you in a "privileged" state,
52 so they simply don't offer any options to leave the privileged state by refusing to admit to you that the terms "citizen"
53 and "resident" presume you made a voluntary choice of domicile within their jurisdiction. I.R.C. section 162
54 mentioned above is the section for privileged deductions, and the only persons who can take deductions are those 55 engaged in the privileged "trade or business" excise taxable franchise. Therefore, the only person who would derive 56 any benefit from deductions is a person with a domicile in the "United States" (federal government/territory) and
57 who has earnings from that place which are connected with a "trade or business", which means U.S. government
58 (corporation) source income as a "public officer".

5.6.13.3.7.3 How the Legal Encyclopedia compels choice of domicile

Even the legal encyclopedia tries to hide the nature of domicile. For instance, Volume 28 of the Corpus Juris Secundum (C.J.S.) at: which we quoted in the previous section does not even mention the requirement for “allegiance” as part of domicile or the fact that allegiance must be voluntary and not compelled, even though the U.S. Supreme Court said this was an essential part of it:

“Since the Fourteenth Amendment makes one a citizen of the state wherein he resides, the fact of residence creates universally reciprocal duties of protection by the state and of allegiance and support by the citizen. The latter obviously includes a duty to pay taxes, and their nature and measure is largely a political matter.”
[Miller Brothers Co. v. Maryland, 347 U.S. 340 (1954)]

The legal encyclopedia in the above deliberately and maliciously omits mention of any of the following key concepts, even though the U.S. Supreme Court has acknowledged elements of them as we have shown:

1. That allegiance that is the foundation of domicile must be voluntary and cannot be coerced.
2. That external factors such as the withdrawal of one’s right to conduct commerce for failure to give allegiance causes domicile choice to no longer be voluntary.
3. That a choice of domicile constitutes an exercise of your First Amendment right of freedom of association and that a failure to associate with a specific government is an exercise of your right of freedom from compelled association.
4. That you retain all your constitutional rights even WITHOUT choosing a domicile within a specific government because rights attach to the land you are standing on and not the civil status you choose by exercising your right to associate and becoming a member of a “state” or municipality.

The result of maliciously refusing to acknowledge the above concepts is a failure to acknowledge the foundation of all just authority of every government on earth, which is the consent of the governed mentioned in our Declaration of Independence.

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.”
[Declaration of Independence]

A failure to acknowledge that requirement results in a complete destruction of the sovereignty of the people, because the basis of all your sovereignty is that no one can do anything to you without your consent, unless you injured the equal rights of others. This concept is exhaustively described in the following document:

Requirement for Consent, Form #05.003
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

5.6.13.3.7.4 How governments compel choice of domicile: Government ID

In order to do business within any jurisdiction, and especially with the government and financial institutions, one usually needs identification documents. Such documents include:

1. State driver’s license. Issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles in your state.
2. State ID card. Issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles in your state.
3. Permanent resident green card.
4. National passport. Issued by the U.S. Dept. of State.
5. U.S. Citizen Card. Issued by the Dept. of State. These are typically used at border crossings.

All ID issued by the state governments, and especially the driver's license, requires that the applicant be a "resident" of the "State of ____". If you look up the definition of "resident" and "State of" or "State" or "in this State" within the state tax code, these terms are defined to mean a privileged alien with a domicile on federal territory not protected by the Constitution.

USA passports also require that you provide a domicile. The Department of State Form DS-11 in Block 17 requires you to specify a "Permanent Address", which means domicile. See:

Domicile within the country is not necessary in order to be issued a national passport. All you need is proof of birth within that country. If you would like tips on how to obtain a national passport without a domicile within a state and without government issued identifying numbers that connect you to franchises, see:

Getting a USA Passport as a "state national", Form #09.007

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

State ID, however, always requires domicile within the state in order to be issued either a state driver's license or a state ID. Consequently, there is no way to avoid becoming privileged if you want state ID. This situation would seem at first to be a liability until you also consider that they can't lawfully issue a driver's license to non-residents. Imagine going down to the DMV and telling them that you are physically on state land but do not choose a domicile here and that you can't be compelled to and that you would like for them to certify that you came in to request a license and that you were refused and don't qualify. Then you can show that piece of paper called a "Letter of Disqualification" to the next police officer who stops you and asks you for a license. Imagine having the following dialog with the police officer when you get stopped:

Officer: May I see your license and registration please?

You: I'm sorry, officer, but I went down to the DMV to request a license and they told me that I don't qualify because I am a non-resident of this state. I have a Letter of Disqualification they gave me while I was there stating that I made application and that they could not lawfully issue me a license. Here it is, officer.

Officer: Well, then do you have a license from another state?

You: My domicile is in a place that has no government. Therefore, there is no one who can issue licenses there. Can you show me a DMV office in the middle of the ocean, which is where my domicile is and where my will says my ashes will be PERMANENTLY taken to when I die. My understanding is that domicile or residence requires an intention to permanently remain at a place and I am not here permanently and don't intend to remain here. I am a perpetual traveler, a transient foreigner, and a vagrant until I am buried.

Officer: Don't get cute with me. If you don't produce a license, then I'm going to cite you for driving without a license.

You: Driving is a commercial activity and I am not presently engaged in a commercial activity. Do you have any evidence to the contrary? Furthermore, I'd love to see you explain to the judge how you can punish me for refusing to have that which the government says they can't even lawfully issue me. That ought to be a good laugh. I'm going to make sure the whole family is there for that one. It'll be better than Saturday Night Live!

We allege that the purpose of the vehicle code in your state is NOT the promotion of public safety, but to manufacture statutory "residents" and "taxpayers". The main vehicle by which states of the Union, in fact, manufacture "residents", who are privileged "public officers" that are "taxpayers" and aliens with respect to the government is essentially by compelling everyone to obtain and use state driver's licenses. This devious trap operates as follows:

1. You cannot obtain a state driver's license without being a "resident". If you go into any DMV office and tell them you are not a "resident", then they are not allowed to issue you a license. You can ask from them what is called a "Letter of Disqualification", which states that you are not eligible for a driver's license. You can keep that letter and show it to any police officer who stops you and wants your "license". He cannot then cite you for "driving without a license" that the state refuses to issue you, nor can he impound your car for driving without a license!

California Vehicle Code

1           “14607.6. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in this section, a motor vehicle
2 is subject to forfeiture as a nuisance if it is driven on a highway in this state by a driver with a suspended or
3 revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver, who is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment
4 and has a previous misdemeanor conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section 12500 or Section
5 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5.

6           (b) A peace officer shall not stop a vehicle for the sole reason of determining whether the driver is properly
7 licensed.

8           (c) (1) If a driver is unable to produce a valid driver's license on the demand of a peace officer enforcing the 9 provisions of this code, as required by subdivision (b) of Section 12951, the vehicle shall be impounded
10 regardless of ownership, unless the peace officer is reasonably able, by other means, to verify that the driver is 11 properly licensed. Prior to impounding a vehicle, a peace officer shall attempt to verify the license status of a
12 driver who claims to be properly licensed but is unable to produce the license on demand of the peace officer.

13           (2) A peace officer shall not impound a vehicle pursuant to this subdivision if the license of the driver expired
14 within the preceding 30 days and the driver would otherwise have been properly licensed.

15           (3) A peace officer may exercise discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is an employee
16 driving a vehicle registered to the employer in the course of employment. A peace officer may also exercise
17 discretion in a situation where the driver without a valid license is the employee of a bona fide business
18 establishment or is a person otherwise controlled by such an establishment and it reasonably appears that an 19 owner of the vehicle, or an agent of the owner, relinquished possession of the vehicle to the business establishment
20 solely for servicing or parking of the vehicle or other reasonably similar situations, and where the vehicle was 21 not to be driven except as directly necessary to accomplish that business purpose. In this event, if the vehicle can
22 be returned to or be retrieved by the business establishment or registered owner, the peace officer may release
23 and not impound the vehicle.

24           (4) A registered or legal owner of record at the time of impoundment may request a hearing to determine the 25 validity of the impoundment pursuant to subdivision (n).

26           (5) If the driver of a vehicle impounded pursuant to this subdivision was not a registered owner of the vehicle
27 at the time of impoundment, or if the driver of the vehicle was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of 28 impoundment but the driver does not have a previous conviction for a violation of subdivision (a) of Section
29 12500 or Section 14601, 14601.1, 14601.2, 14601.3, 14601.4, or 14601.5, the vehicle shall be released pursuant 30 to this code and is not subject to forfeiture.

31           (d) (1) This subdivision applies only if the driver of the vehicle is a registered owner of the vehicle at the time
32 of impoundment. Except as provided in paragraph (5) of subdivision (c), if the driver of a vehicle impounded
33 pursuant to subdivision (c) was a registered owner of the vehicle at the time of impoundment, the impounding
34 agency shall authorize release of the vehicle if, within three days of impoundment, the driver of the vehicle at the 35 time of impoundment presents his or her valid driver's license, including a valid temporary California driver's
36 license or permit, to the impounding agency. The vehicle shall then be released to a registered owner of record
37 at the time of impoundment, or an agent of that owner authorized in writing, upon payment of towing and storage
38 charges related to the impoundment, and any administrative charges authorized by Section 22850.5, providing 39 that the person claiming the vehicle is properly licensed and the vehicle is properly registered. A vehicle
40 impounded pursuant to the circumstances described in paragraph (3) of subdivision (c) shall be released to a 41 registered owner whether or not the driver of the vehicle at the time of impoundment presents a valid driver's 42 license.

43           (2) If there is a community property interest in the vehicle impounded pursuant to subdivision (c), owned at the 44 time of impoundment by a person other than the driver, and the vehicle is the only vehicle available to the driver's
45 immediate family that may be operated with a class C driver's license, the vehicle shall be released to a registered
46 owner or to the community property interest owner upon compliance with all of the following requirements:

47           (A) The registered owner or the community property interest owner requests release of the vehicle and the 48 owner of the community property interest submits proof of that interest.

49           (B) The registered owner or the community property interest owner submits proof that he or she, or an 50 authorized driver, is properly licensed and that the impounded vehicle is properly registered pursuant to this
51 code.

52           (C) All towing and storage charges related to the impoundment and any administrative charges authorized
53 pursuant to Section 22850.5 are paid.

54           (D) The registered owner or the community property interest owner signs a stipulated vehicle release
55 agreement, as described in paragraph (3), in consideration for the nonforfeiture of the vehicle. This requirement
56 applies only if the driver requests release of the vehicle.

(3) A stipulated vehicle release agreement shall provide for the consent of the signator to the automatic future forfeiture and transfer of title to the state of any vehicle registered to that person, if the vehicle is driven by a driver with a suspended or revoked license, or by an unlicensed driver. The agreement shall be in effect for only as long as it is noted on a driving record maintained by the department pursuant to Section 1806.1.

(4) The stipulated vehicle release agreement described in paragraph (3) shall be reported by the impounding agency to the department not later than 10 days after the day the agreement is signed.

(5) No vehicle shall be released pursuant to paragraph (2) if the driving record of a registered owner indicates that a prior stipulated vehicle release agreement was signed by that person.

(e) (1) The impounding agency, in the case of a vehicle that has not been redeemed pursuant to subdivision (d), or that has not been otherwise released, shall promptly ascertain from the department the names and addresses of all legal and registered owners of the vehicle.

(2) The impounding agency, within two days of impoundment, shall send a notice by certified mail, return receipt requested, to all legal and registered owners of the vehicle, at the addresses obtained from the department, informing them that the vehicle is subject to forfeiture and will be sold or otherwise disposed of pursuant to this section. The notice shall also include instructions for filing a claim with the district attorney, and the time limits for filing a claim. The notice shall also inform any legal owner of its right to conduct the sale pursuant to subdivision (g). If a registered owner was personally served at the time of impoundment with a notice containing all the information required to be provided by this paragraph, no further notice is required to be sent to a registered owner. However, a notice shall still be sent to the legal owners of the vehicle, if any. If notice was not sent to the legal owner within two working days, the impounding agency shall not charge the legal owner for more than 15-days' impoundment when the legal owner redeems the impounded vehicle.

(3) No processing charges shall be imposed on a legal owner who redeems an impounded vehicle within 15 days of the impoundment of that vehicle. If no claims are filed and served within 15 days after the mailing of the notice in paragraph (2), or if no claims are filed and served within five days of personal service of the notice specified in paragraph (2), when no other mailed notice is required pursuant to paragraph (2), the district attorney shall prepare a written declaration of forfeiture of the vehicle to the state. A written declaration of forfeiture signed by the district attorney under this subdivision shall be deemed to provide good and sufficient title to the forfeited vehicle. A copy of the declaration shall be provided on request to any person informed of the pending forfeiture pursuant to paragraph (2). A claim that is filed and is later withdrawn by the claimant shall be deemed not to have been filed.

(4) If a claim is timely filed and served, then the district attorney shall file a petition of forfeiture with the appropriate juvenile, municipal, or superior court within 10 days of the receipt of the claim. The district attorney shall establish an expedited hearing date in accordance with instructions from the court, and the court shall hear the matter without delay. The court filing fee, not to exceed fifty dollars ($50), shall be paid by the claimant, but shall be reimbursed by the impounding agency if the claimant prevails. To the extent practicable, the civil and criminal cases shall be heard at the same time in an expedited, consolidated proceeding. A proceeding in the civil case is a limited civil case."

Below is evidence showing how one person obtained a "Letter of Disqualification" that resulted in being able to drive perpetually without having a state -issued driver's license.

2. Most state vehicle codes define "resident" as a person with a domicile in the "State". Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Vehicle Code

516. "Resident" means any person who manifests an intent to live or be located in this state on more than a temporary or transient basis. Presence in the state for six months or more in any 12-month period gives rise to a rebuttable presumption of residency.

The following are evidence of residency for purposes of vehicle registration:

(a) Address where registered to vote.

(b) Location of employment or place of business.

(c) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.

(d) Attendance of dependents at a primary or secondary school.

(e) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.

(f) Renting or leasing a home for use as a residence.

(g) Declaration of residency to obtain a license or any other privilege or benefit not ordinarily extended to a nonresident.

(h) Possession of a California driver's license.

(i) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

California Vehicle Code

12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be determined as a person's state of domicile. "State of domicile" means the state where a person has his or her true, fixed, and permanent home and principal residence and to which he or she has manifested the intention of returning whenever he or she is absent.

Prima facie evidence of residency for driver's licensing purposes includes, but is not limited to, the following:

(A) Address where registered to vote.

(B) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.

(C) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.

(D) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

(2) California residency is required of a person in order to be issued a commercial driver's license under this code.

(b) The presumption of residency in this state may be rebutted by satisfactory evidence that the licensee's primary residence is in another state.

(c) Any person entitled to an exemption under Section 12502, 12503, or 12504 may operate a motor vehicle in this state for not to exceed 10 days from the date he or she establishes residence in this state, except that he or she shall obtain a license from the department upon becoming a resident before being employed for compensation by another for the purpose of driving a motor vehicle on the highways.

516. "Resident" means any person who manifests an intent to live or be located in this state on more than a temporary or transient basis. Presence in the state for six months or more in any 12-month period gives rise to a rebuttable presumption of residency.

The following are evidence of residency for purposes of vehicle registration:

(a) Address where registered to vote.

(b) Location of employment or place of business.

(c) Payment of resident tuition at a public institution of higher education.

(d) Attendance of dependents at a primary or secondary school.

(e) Filing a homeowner's property tax exemption.

(f) Renting or leasing a home for use as a residence.

(g) Declaration of residency to obtain a license or any other privilege or benefit not ordinarily extended to a nonresident.

(h) Possession of a California driver's license.

(i) Other acts, occurrences, or events that indicate presence in the state is more than temporary or transient.

3. The term "State" is then defined in the revenue codes to mean the federal areas within the exterior limits of the state. Below is an example from the California Revenue and Taxation Code:

California Revenue and Taxation Code

17017. "United States," when used in a geographical sense, includes the states, the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.

4. You must surrender all other state driver's licenses in order to obtain one from most states. Below is an example from the California Vehicle Code:

California Vehicle Code

12805. The department shall not issue a driver's license to, or renew a driver's license of, any person:

[. . .]

(f) Who holds a valid driver's license issued by a foreign jurisdiction unless the license has been surrendered to the department, or is lost or destroyed.

12511. No person shall have in his or her possession or otherwise under his or her control more than one driver's license.

Consequently, the vehicle code in most states, in the case of individuals not involved in "commercial activity", applies mainly to "public officers" who are effectively "residents" of the federal zone with an effective "domicile" or "residence" there:

26 U.S.C. §7701

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(39) Persons residing outside United States

If any citizen or resident of the United States does not reside in (and is not found in) any United States judicial district, such citizen or resident shall be treated as residing in the District of Columbia for purposes of any provision of this title relating to—

(A) jurisdiction of courts, or

(B) enforcement of summons.

These "persons" are "taxpayers". They are Americans who have contracted away their Constitutional rights in exchange for government "privileges" and they are the only "persons" who inhabit or maintain a "domicile" or "residence" in the "State" as defined above. Only people with a domicile in such "State" can be required to obtain a "license" to drive on the "highways". While they are exercising "agency" on behalf of or representing the government corporation, they are "citizens" of that corporation and "residents", because the corporation itself is a "citizen" and therefore a person with a domicile in the place where the corporation was formed, which for the "United States**" is the District of Columbia:

"Corporations are also of all grades, and made for varied objects; all governments are corporations, created by usage and common consent, or grants and charters which create a body politic for prescribed purposes; but whether they are private, local or general, in their objects, for the enjoyment of property, or the exercise of power, they are all governed by the same rules of law, as to the construction and the obligation of the instrument by which the incorporation is made. One universal rule of law protects persons and property. It is a fundamental principle of the common law of England, that the term freemen of the kingdom, includes 'all persons,' ecclesiastical and temporal, incorporate, politique or natural; it is a part of their magna charta (2 Inst. 4), and is incorporated into our institutions. The persons of the members of corporations are on the same footing of protection as other persons, and their corporate property secured by the same laws which protect that of individuals. 2 Inst. 46-7. 'No man shall be taken,' 'no man shall be disseised,' without due process of law, is a principle taken from magna charta, infused into all our state constitutions, and is made inviolable by the federal government, by the amendments to the constitution."
[Proprietors of Charles River Bridge v. Proprietors of Warren Bridge, 36 U.S. 420 (1837)]

"A corporation is a citizen, resident, or inhabitant of the state or country by or under the laws of which it was created, and of that state or country only."

3 (b) Capacity to Sue or be Sued.

4 Capacity to sue or be sued is determined as follows:

5 (1) for an individual who is not acting in a representative capacity, by the law of the individual's domicile;
6 (2) for a corporation for one REPRESENTING a PUBLIC CORPORATION called the government as a
7 "public officer", by the law under which it was organized; and
8 (3) for all other parties, by the law of the state where the court is located, except that:
9 (A) a partnership or other unincorporated association with no such capacity under that state's law may sue
10 or be sued in its common name to enforce a substantive right existing under the United States Constitution
11 or laws; and
12 (B) 28 U.S.C. §§ 754 and 959\(a\) govern the capacity of a receiver appointed by a United States court to sue
13 or be sued in a United States court.

15 If you don't want to be a "public officer" who has an effective "domicile" or "residence" in the District of Columbia, then
16 you have to divorce the state, create your own "state", and change your domicile to that new "state". For instance, you can
17 form an association of people and choose a domicile within that association. This association would be referred to as a
18 "foreign jurisdiction" within the vehicle code in most states. The association can become the "government" for that group,
19 and issue its own driver's licenses and conduct its own "courts". In effect, it becomes a competitor to the de facto state for 20 the affections, allegiance, and obedience of the people. This is capitalism at its finest, folks!

22 12502. (a) The following persons may operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a driver's license

24 (1) A nonresident over the age of 18 years having in his or her immediate possession a valid driver's license
25 issued by a foreign jurisdiction of which he or she is a resident, except as provided in Section 12505.

28 As long as the driver's licenses issued by the government you form meet the same standard as those for the state you are in,
29 then it doesn't matter who issued it.

31 12505. (a) (1) For purposes of this division only and notwithstanding Section 516, residency shall be determined
32 as a person's state of domicile. "State of domicile" means the state where a person has his or her true, fixed, and

34 returning whenever he or she is absent.

38 Puerto Rico, or Canada, having a valid driver's license issued to him or her by any other foreign jurisdiction
39 having licensing standards deemed by the Department of Motor Vehicles equivalent to those of this state, may
40 operate a motor vehicle in this state without obtaining a license from the department, except that he or she shall

45 As long as you take and pass the same written and driver's tests as the state uses, even your church could issue it! As a matter
46 of fact, below is an example of a church that issues "Heaven Driver's Licenses" called "Embassy of Heaven":

47 <http://www.embassyofheaven.com/>

1 You can't be compelled by law to grant to your public "servants" a monopoly that compels you into servitude to them as a
 2 "public officer". In the United States, WE THE PEOPLE are the government, and not their representatives and "servants"
 3 who work for them implementing the laws that they pass. Consequently, you and your friends or church, as a "self-governing 4 body" can make your own driver's license and in fact and in law, those licenses will by definition be "government-issued".
 5 To wit:

6 "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They
 7 both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who
 8 hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives [they are the government, not their
 9 servants]. They are what we familiarly call the 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a
 10 constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
 11 [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

13 "From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily 14 follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-
 15 sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the 16 Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in
 17 a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation to their
 18 sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal powers, dignities,
 19 and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the sovereignty otherwise, or in 20 any other capacity, than as private citizens."
 21 [Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 454, 457, 471, 472 (1794)]

22 Anyone who won't accept such a driver's license should be asked to contradict the U.S. Supreme Court and to prove that you
 23 AREN'T part of the government as a person who governs his own life and the lives of other members of the group you have 24 created. The following article also emphasizes that "We The People" are the government, and that our servants have been 25 trying to deceive us into believing otherwise:

27 5.6.13.3.7.5 How employers and financial institutions compel choice of domicile

28 Whenever you open a financial account or start a new job these days, most employers, banks, or investment companies will 29 require you to produce "government ID". Their favorite form of ID is the state issued ID. Unfortunately, unless you are an 30 alien domiciled on federal territory within the exterior limits of the state who is not protected by the Constitution, you don't 31 qualify for state ID or even a state driver's license. By asking for "government ID", employers and financial institutions
 32 indirectly are forcing you to do the following as a precondition of doing business with them:

- 33 1. Surrender the benefits and protections of being a "citizen" in exchange for being a privileged alien, and to do so 34 WITHOUT consideration and without recourse.
- 35 2. Become a statutory "resident alien" pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). domiciled on federal territory and subject to 36 federal jurisdiction, who is a public officer within the federal government engaged in the "trade or business" franchise.
 37 See:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 38 3. Become a privileged "resident alien" franchisee who is compelled to participate in what essentially amounts to a 39 "protection racket".

40 "Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the
 41 country. Being bound to the society by reason of their [intention of] dwelling in it, they are subject to its laws so
 42 long as they remain there, and, being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights
 43 of citizenship. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are 44 those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizen of a less privileged

1 character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their
 2 status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children."
 3 [The Law of Nations, p. 87, E. De Vattel, Volume Three, 1758, Carnegie Institution of Washington; emphasis
 4 added.]

- 5 4. Serving two masters and subject simultaneously to state and federal jurisdiction. The federal government has jurisdiction
 6 over aliens, including those within a state.

7 "No one can serve two masters [two employers, for instance]; for either he will hate the one and love the other,
 8 or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."
 9 [Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV. Written by a tax collector]

10 One thing you can show financial institutions as an alternative to state ID or a state driver's license that doesn't connect you
 11 to the "protection franchise" and a domicile on federal territory is a USA passport. What they do to deal with "difficult"
 12 people like that is say that they need TWO forms of government ID in order to open the account. Here is an example of what 13 you might hear on this subject:

14 "I'm sorry, but the Patriot Act [or some other obscure regulation] requires you to produce TWO forms of 15 government issued ID to open an account with us."

16 Most people falsely presume that the above statement means that they ALSO need state ID in addition to the passport but this
 17 isn't true. It is a maxim of law that the law cannot require an impossibility. If they are going to impose a duty upon you
 18 under the color of law by saying that you need TWO forms of ID, they must provide a way to comply without:

- 19 5. Compelling you to politically associate with a specific government in violation of the First Amendment.
 20 6. Compelling you to participate in government franchises by providing an identifying number.
 21 7. Misrepresenting your status as a privileged "resident alien".
 22 8. Violating your religious beliefs by nominating an Earthly protector and thereby firing God as your only protector.

23 There are lots of ways around this trap. For instance, the U.S. Supreme Court said WE are the government and that we govern
 24 ourselves through our elected representatives.

25 "The words 'people of the United States' and 'citizens,' are synonymous terms, and mean the same thing. They
 26 both describe the political body who, according to our republican institutions, form the sovereignty, and who 27 hold the power and conduct the government through their representatives. They are what we familiarly call the 28 'sovereign people,' and every citizen is one of this people, and a constituent member of this sovereignty. ..."
 29 [Boyd v. State of Nebraska, 143 U.S. 135 (1892)]

30 So what does "government id" really mean? A notary public is also a public officer and therefore part of the government.

 32 Introduction
 33 §1.1 Generally

34 A notary public (sometimes called a notary) is a public official appointed under authority of law with power,
 35 among other things, to administer oaths, certify affidavits, take acknowledgments, take depositions, perpetuate
 36 testimony, and protect negotiable instruments. Notaries are not appointed under federal law; they are appointed
 37 under the authority of the various states, districts, territories, as in the case of the Virgin Islands, and the 38 commonwealth, in the case of Puerto Rico. The statutes, which define the powers and duties of a notary public,
 39 frequently grant the notary the authority to do all acts justified by commercial usage and the "law merchant".
 40 [Anderson's Manual for Notaries Public, Ninth Edition, 2001, ISBN 1-58360-357-3]

41 If you hand the financial institution any of the following, you have satisfied their requirement for secondary ID without 42 violating the law or being compelled to associate with or contract with the government:

- 43 1. Notarized piece of paper with your picture and your birth certificate on it. The notary is a government officer and 44 therefore it is government ID.
 45 2. Certified copy of your birth certificate by itself. The certification is from the government so its government ID.
 46 3. ID issued by a government you formed and signed by the "Secretary of State" of that government. The people are the 47 government according to the Supreme Court, so you can issue your own ID.

1 You have to be creative at times to avoid the frequent attempts to compel you to sign up for government franchises, but it is
2 still doable.

3 Another thing that nearly all financial institutions and private employers habitually do is PRESUME, usually wrongfully,
4 that:

- 5 1. You are a "citizen" or a "resident" of the place you live or work. What citizens and residents have in common is a 6 domicile within a jurisdiction. Otherwise, you would be called "nonresidents" or "transient foreigners".
- 7 2. Whatever residence or mailing address you give them is your domicile.

8 By making such a false presumption, employers and financial institutions in effect are causing you to make an "invisible
9 election" to become a citizen or resident or domiciliary and to provide your tacit consent to be governed without even realizing
10 it.

11 If you want to prevent becoming a victim of the false presumption that you are a "citizen", "resident", and therefore 12 domiciliary of the place you live or work, you must take special precautions to notify all of your business associates by
13 providing a special form to them describing you as a "nonresident" of some kind. At the federal level, that form is the IRS
14 Form W-8BEN or a suitable substitute, which identifies the holder as a "nonresident alien". IRS does not make a form for 15 "nonresidents" who are not "aliens", unfortunately, so you must therefore modify their form or make your own form. For an 16 article on how to fill out tax forms to ensure that you are not PRESUMED, usually prejudicially and falsely, to be a resident
17 or citizen or domiciliary, see the following article:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

18 Sometimes, those receiving your declaration of nonresident status may try to interfere with that choice. For such cases, the 19 following pamphlet proves that the only one who can lawfully declare or establish your civil status, including your
20 "nonresident" status, is you. If anyone tries to coerce you to declare a civil status for yourself that you don't want to accept 21 and don't consent to, you should provide an affidavit indicating that you were under duress and that they threatened to
22 financially penalize you or not contract with you if you don't LIE on government forms and declare a status you don't want.
23 The following pamphlet is also useful in proving that they have no authority to coerce you to declare any civil status you
24 don't want:

Your Exclusive Right to Declare or Establish Your Civil Status, Form #13.008
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

25 We should always keep in mind that whenever a financial institution or employer asks for a tax form, they are doing so under 26 the color of law as a "withholding agent" (26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16)) who is a public officer of the government. Because they 27 are a public officer of the government in their capacity as a withholding agent, they still have a legal duty not to violate your 28 rights, even if they otherwise are a private company. The Constitution applies to all officers and agents of the government,
29 including "withholding agents" while acting in that capacity.

30 5.6.14 The Information Return Scam

31 As we said in the preceding section, the income tax described by Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is a franchise and excise
32 tax upon "public offices" within the U.S. government, which the code defines as a "trade or business". Before an income tax
33 can lawfully be enforced or collected, the subject of the tax must be connected to the activity with court-admissible evidence.
34 Information returns are the method by which the activity is connected to the subject of the tax under the authority of 26 U.S.C.
35 §6041(a). When this connection is made, the person engaging in the excise taxable activity is called "effectively connected 36 with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States".

37 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 61 > Subchapter A > PART III > Subpart B > § 6041
38 § 6041. Information at source

39 (a) Payments of $600 or more

40 All persons engaged in a trade or business and making payment in the course of such trade or business to
41 another person, of rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or

1 other fixed or determinable gains, profits, and income (other than payments to which section 6042 (a)(1), 6044
 2 (a)(1), 6047 (e), 6049 (a), or 6050N (a) applies, and other than payments with respect to which a statement is
 3 required under the authority of section 6042 (a)(2), 6044 (a)(2), or 6045), of $600 or more in any taxable year,
 4 or, in the case of such payments made by the United States, the officers or employees of the United States having
 5 information as to such payments and required to make returns in regard thereto by the regulations hereinafter
 6 provided for, shall render a true and accurate return to the Secretary, under such regulations and in such form
 7 and manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth the amount of such gains,
 8 profits, and income, and the name and address of the recipient of such payment.

9 The government cannot lawfully regulate private conduct. The ability to regulate private conduct is, in fact, “repugnant to 10 the constitution” as held by the U.S. Supreme Court. The only thing the government can regulate is “public conduct” and the 11 “public rights” and franchises that enforce or implement it. Consequently, the government must deceive private parties into 12 submitting false reports connecting their private labor and private property to such a public use, public purpose, and public
 13 office in order that they can usurp jurisdiction over it and thereby tax and plunder it.

14 “The power to “legislate generally upon” life, liberty, and property, as opposed to the “power to provide modes
 15 of redress” against offensive state action, was “repugnant” to the Constitution. Id., at 15. See also United States
 16 v. Reese, 92 U.S. 214, 218 (1876); United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629, 639 (1883); James v. Bowman, 190
 17 U.S. 127, 139 (1903). Although the specific holdings of these early cases might have been superseded or modified,
 18 see, e.g., Heart of Atlanta Motel, Inc. v. United States, 379 U.S. 241 (1964); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S.
 19 745 (1966), their treatment of Congress’ §5 power as corrective or preventive, not definitional, has not been 20 questioned.”
 21 City of Boerne v. Flores, Archbishop of San Antonio, [521 U.S. 507 (1997)]

22 In a sense, the function of an information return therefore is to:

- 23 1. Provide evidence that the owner is consensually and lawfully engaged in the “trade or business” and public office
 24 franchise. These reports cannot lawfully be filed if this is not the case. 26 U.S.C. §7206 and 7207 make it a crime to 25 file a false report.
- 26 2. Donate formerly private property described on the report to a public use, a public purpose, and a public office with the 27 consent of the owner without any immediate or monetary compensation in order to procure the “benefits” incident to 28 participation in the franchise.
- 29 3. Subject the property to excise taxation upon the “trade or business” activity.
- 30 4. Subject the property to use and control by the government:

31 “Men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, -life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;’
 32 and to ‘secure,’ not grant or create, these rights, governments are instituted. That property [or income] which a
 33 man has honestly acquired he retains full control of, subject to these limitations: First, that he shall not use it
 34 to his neighbor’s injury, and that does not mean that he must use it for his neighbor’s benefit [e.g. SOCIAL
 35 SECURITY, Medicare, and every other public “benefit”]; second, that if he devotes it to a public use, he gives 36 to the public a right to control that use; and third, that whenever the public needs require, the public may take 37 it upon payment of due compensation.”
 38 Budd v. People of State of New York, [143 U.S. 517 (1892)]

39 On the other hand, if the information return:

- 40 1. Was filed against an owner of the property described who is not lawfully engaged in a public office or a “trade or 41 business” in the U.S. government. . .OR
- 42 2. Was filed in a case where the owner of the private property did not consent to donate the property described to a public
 43 use and a public office by signing a contract or agreement authorizing such as an IRS Form W-4. . .OR
- 44 3. Was filed mistakenly or fraudulently.

45 . . .then the following crimes have occurred:

- 46 1. A violation of the Fifth Amendment Takings Clause has occurred:

47 U.S. Constitution, Fifth Amendment

48 No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or
 49 indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual
 50 service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in 51 jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

2. A violation of due process has occurred. Any taking of property without the consent of the owner is a violation of due process of law.
3. The subject of the information return is being compelled to impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.

TITLE 18 > PART 1 > CHAPTER 43 > § 912
§ 912. Officer or employee of the United States

Whoever falsely assumes or pretends to be an officer or employee acting under the authority of the United States or any department, agency or officer thereof, and acts as such, or in such pretended character demands or obtains any money, paper, document, or thing of value, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

4. An unlawful conversion of private property to public property has occurred in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §654. Only officers of the government called “withholding agents” appointed under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(16) and the I.R.C. can lawfully file these information returns or withhold upon the proceeds of the transaction. All withholding and reporting agents are public officers, not private parties, whether they receive direct compensation for acting in that capacity or not.

§ 654. Officer or employee of United States converting property of another

Whoever, being an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, embezzles or wrongfully converts to his own use the money or property of another which comes into his possession or under his control in the execution of such office or employment, or under color or claim of authority as such officer or employee, shall be fined under this title or not more than the value of the money and property thus embezzled or converted, whichever is greater, or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; but if the sum embezzled is $1,000 or less, he shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Nearly all private Americans are not in fact and in deed lawfully engaged in a “public office” and cannot therefore serve within such an office without committing the crime of impersonating a public officer. This is exhaustively proven in the following:

The “Trade or Business” Scam, Form #05.001, Section 10
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

What makes someone a “private American” is, in fact, that they are not lawfully engaged in a public office or any other government franchise. All franchises, in fact, make those engaged into public officers of one kind or another and cause them to forfeit their status as a private person and give up all their constitutional rights in the process. See:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

IRS therefore mis-represents and mis-enforces the Internal Revenue Code by abusing their tax forms and their untrustworthy printed propaganda as a method:

1. To unlawfully create public offices in the government in places they are forbidden to even exist pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.
2. To “elect” the average American unlawfully into such an office.
3. To cause those involuntarily serving in the office to unlawfully impersonate a public officer in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
4. To enforce the obligations of the office upon those who are not lawfully occupying said office.

5. Of election fraud, whereby the contributions collected cause those who contribute them to bribe a public official to procure the office that they occupy with unlawfully collected monies, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §210. IRS Document 6209 identifies all IRS Form W-2 contributions as “gifts” to the U.S. government, which is a polite way of describing what actually amounts to a bribe.

§ 210. Offer to procure appointive public office

Whoever pays or offers or promises any money [withheld unlawfully] or thing of value, to any person, firm, or corporation in consideration of the use or promise to use any influence to procure any appointive [public] office or place under the United States for any person, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

For instance, innocent Americans ignorant of the law are deceived into volunteering to unlawfully accept the obligations of a public office by filing an IRS Form W-4 “agreement” to withhold pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §3402\(p\), 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3(a), and 26 C.F.R. §31.3402(p)-1. To wit:

(a) In general.

Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-3).

An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made after December 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includable in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

Those who have not voluntarily signed and submitted the IRS Form W-4 contract/agreement and who are were not lawfully engaged in a “public office” within the U.S. government BEFORE they signed any tax form cannot truthfully or lawfully earn reportable “wages” as legally defined in 26 U.S.C. §3402. Therefore, even if the IRS sends a “lock-down” letter telling the private employer to withhold at a rate of “single with no exemptions”, he must withhold ONLY on the amount of “wages” earned, which is still zero. If a W-2 is filed against a person who does not voluntarily sign and submit the W-4 or who is not lawfully engaged in a public office:

1. The amount reported must be ZERO for everything on the form, and especially for “wages”.
2. If any amount reported is other than zero, then the payroll clerk submitting the W-2 is criminally liable for filing a false return under 26 U.S.C. §7206, punishable as a felony for up to a $100,000 fine and three years in jail.
3. If you also warned the payroll clerk that they were doing it improperly in writing and have a proof you served them with it, their actions also become fraudulent and they additionally liable under 26 U.S.C. §7207, punishable as a felony for up to $10,000 and up to one year in jail.

The heart of the tax fraud and SCAM perpetrated on a massive scale by our government then is:

1. To publish IRS forms and publications which contain untrustworthy information that deceives the public into believing that they have a legal obligation to file false information returns against their neighbor.

“IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position.”

[Internal Revenue Manual \(I.R.M.\), Section 4.10.7.2.8 \(05-14-1999\)]

2. To reinforce the deliberate deception and omissions in their publications with verbal advice that is equally damaging and untrustworthy:

p. 21: "As discussed in §2.3.3, the IRS is not bound by its statements or positions in unofficial pamphlets and publications."

p. 34: "6. IRS Pamphlets and Booklets. The IRS is not bound by statements or positions in its unofficial publications, such as handbooks and pamphlets;"

p. 34: "7. Other Written and Oral Advice. Most taxpayers' requests for advice from the IRS are made orally. Unfortunately, the IRS is not bound by answers or positions stated by its employees orally, whether in person or by telephone. According to the procedural regulations, 'oral advice is advisory only and the Service is not bound to recognize it in the examination of the taxpayer's return.' 26 C.F.R. §601.201(k)(2). In rare cases, however, the IRS has been held to be equitably estopped to take a position different from that stated orally to, and justifiably relied on by, the taxpayer. The Omnibus Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act, enacted as part of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988, gives taxpayers some comfort, however. It amended section 6404 to abate any penalty or addition to tax that is attributable to advice furnished in writing by any IRS agent or employee acting within the scope of his official capacity. Section 6404 as amended protects the taxpayer only if the following conditions are satisfied: the written advice from the IRS was issued in response to a written request from the taxpayer; reliance on the advice was reasonable; and the error in the advice did not result from inaccurate or incomplete information having been furnished by the taxpayer. Thus, it will still be difficult to bind the IRS even to written statements made by its employees. As was true before, taxpayers may be penalized for following oral advice from the IRS."

[Tax Procedure and Tax Fraud, Patricia Morgan, 1999, ISBN 0-314-06586-5, West Group]

3. To make it very difficult to describe yourself as either a "nontaxpayer" or a person not subject to the Internal Revenue Code on any IRS form. IRS puts the "exempt" option on their forms, but has no option for "not subject". You can be "not subject" and a "nontaxpayer" without being "exempt" and if you want to properly and lawfully describe yourself that way, you have to either modify their form or create your own substitute. You cannot, in fact be an "exempt individual" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5) without first being an "individual" and therefore subject to the I.R.C.. The following entity would be "not subject" but also not an "exempt individual" or "exempt", and could include people as well as property:

§ 7701. Definitions

(a) When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof—

(31) Foreign estate or trust

(A) Foreign estate

The term "foreign estate" means an estate the income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income under subtitle A.

4. For the IRS to be protected by a judicial "protection racket" implemented by judges who have a conflict of interest as "taxpayers" in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208, 28 U.S.C. §144, and 28 U.S.C. §455. This protection racket was instituted permanently upon federal judges with the Revenue Act of 1932 as documented in:

- 4.1. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 \(1920\)
4.2. O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 \(1939\)
4.3. United States v. Hatter, 121 S.Ct. 1782 \(2001\)

5. To receive what they know in nearly all cases are false information returns against private parties.
6. To protect the filers of these false reports.

- 6.1. IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099 do not contain the individual identity of the person who prepared the form.

- 6.2. Only IRS forms 1096 and W-3 contain the identity and statement under penalty of perjury signed by the specific individual person who filed the false information return.
- 6.3. If you send a FOIA to the Social Security Administration asking for the IRS Forms 1096 and W-3 connected to the specific information returns filed against you, they very conveniently will tell you that they don't have the documents, even though they are the ONLY ones who receive them in the government! They instead tell you to send a FOIA to the IRS to obtain them. For example, see the following:

- 6.4. The IRS then comes back and says they don't keep the original Forms 1096 and W-3 either! Consequently, there is no way to identify the specific individual who filed the original false reports or to prosecute them criminally under 26 U.S.C. §§7206 and 7207 or civilly under 26 U.S.C. §7434. In that sense, IRS FOIA offices act as "witness protection programs" for those communist informants for the government willfully engaged in criminal activity.

 Information Returns Transcripts - 1099 Information*

1. Generally, information returns are destroyed upon processing. Therefore, original returns cannot be retrieved. In addition, the IRS may not have record of all information returns filed by payers. The Information Returns Master File (IRMF), accessed by CC IRPTR, contains records of many information returns. The master files are not complete until October of the year following the issuance of the information document, and contain the most current year and five (5) previous years. Taxpayers should be advised to first seek copies of information documents from the payer. However, upon request, taxpayers or their authorized designee may receive "information return" information.
2. Follow guidelines IRM 3.5.20.1 through 3.5.20.11, to ensure requests are complete and valid.
3. This information can be requested on TDS.
4. This information is also available using IRPTR with definer W.
5. If IRPTR is used without definer W, the following items must be sanitized before the information is released:
  - CASINO CTR
  - CMIR Form 4790
  - CTR
6. Form 1099 information is not available through Latham.
[SOURCE: <http://www.irs.gov/irm/part3/ch02s02.html>]

7. To deliberately interfere with efforts to correct these false reports by those who are the wrongful subject of them:
  - 7.1. By penalizing filers of corrected information returns up to $5,000 for each Form 4852 filed pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6702.
  - 7.2. By not providing forms to correct the false reports for ALL THOSE who could be the subject of them. IRS Form 4852, for instance, says at the top "Attach to Form 1040, 1040A, 1040-EZ, or 1040X." There is no equivalent form for use by non-resident non-persons who are victims of false IRS Form W-2 or 1099-R and who file a Form 1040NR.
  - 7.3. To refuse to accept IRS W-2C forms filed by those other than "employers".
  - 7.4. To refuse to accept custom, substitute, or modified forms that would correct the original reports.
  - 7.5. To not help those submitting the corrections by saying that they were not accepted, why they were not accepted, or how to make them acceptable.
8. To ignore correspondence directed at remedying all the above abuses and thereby obstruct justice and condone and encourage further unlawful activity.

So what we have folks is a deliberate, systematic plan that:

1. Turns innocent parties called "nontaxpayers" into guilty parties called "taxpayers", which the U.S. Supreme Court said they cannot do.

"In Calder v. Bull, which was here in 1798, Mr. Justice Chase said, that there were acts which the Federal and State legislatures could not do without exceeding their authority, and among them he mentioned a law which punished a citizen for an innocent act; a law that destroyed or impaired the lawful private [labor] contracts [and labor compensation, e.g. earnings from employment through compelled W-4 withholding] of citizens; a law that made a man judge in his own case; and a law that took the property from A [the worker], and gave it to B [the government or another citizen, such as through social welfare programs]. 'It is against all reason and justice,' he added, 'for a people to intrust a legislature with such powers, and therefore it cannot be presumed that they have done it. They may command what is right and prohibit what is wrong; but they cannot change innocence into guilt, or punish [being a "nontaxpayer"] as a crime [being a "taxpayer"], or violate the right of an antecedent lawful private [employment] contract [by compelling W-4 withholding, for instance], or the right of private property. To maintain that a Federal or State legislature possesses such powers [of THEFT!] if they had not been expressly restrained, would, in my opinion, be a political heresy altogether inadmissible in all free republican governments.' 3 Dall. 388."

2. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy equal protection and equal treatment that is the foundation of the Constitution, assigning all sovereignty to the government, and compelling everyone to worship and serve it without compensation.
3. Constitutes a conspiracy to destroy all Constitutional rights by compelling Americans through false reports to service the obligations of an office they cannot lawfully occupy and derive no benefit from:

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied,' Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."

[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

4. Constitutes an abuse of tax forms as a federal election device to unlawfully elect those who aren't eligible and without their consent into public office in the government, in criminal violation of 18 U.S.C. §912.
5. Encourages Americans on a massive scale to file false reports against their neighbor that compel them into economic servitude and slavery without compensation:

"You shall not circulate a false report [information return]. Do not put your hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness."
[Exodus, 23:1, Bible, NKJV]

"You shall not bear false witness [or file a FALSE REPORT or information return] against your neighbor."
[Exodus 10:16, Bible, NKJV]

"A false witness will not go unpunished, And he who speaks lies shall perish."
[Prov. 19:9, Bible, NKJV]

"If a false witness rises against any man to testify against him of wrongdoing, then both men in the controversy shall stand before the LORD, before the priests and the judges who serve in those days. And the judges shall make careful inquiry, and indeed, if the witness is a false witness, who has testified falsely against his brother, then you shall do to him as he thought to have done to his brother; [enticement into slavery (pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §1994)] to the demands of others without compensation] so you shall put away the evil from among you. And those who remain shall hear and fear, and hereafter they shall not again commit such evil among you. Your eye shall not pity: life shall be for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot."
[Deut. 19:16-21, Bible, NKJV]

6. Constitutes a plan to implement communism in America. The Second Plank of the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx is a heavy, progressive income tax that punishes the rich and abuses the taxation powers of the government to redistribute wealth.
7. Constitutes a conspiracy to replace a de jure Constitutional Republic into nothing but a big for-profit private corporation and business in which:
  - 7.1. Government becomes a virtual or political entity rather than physical entity tied to a specific territory. All the "States" after the Civil War rewrote their Constitutions to remove references to their physical boundaries. Formerly "sovereign" and independent states have become federal territories and federal corporations by signing up for federal franchises:

At common law, a "corporation" was an "artificial perso[n] endowed with the legal capacity of perpetual succession" consisting either of a single individual (termed a "corporation sole") or of a collection of several individuals (a "corporation aggregate"). 3 H. Stephen, Commentaries on the Laws of England 166, 168 (1st Am. ed. 1845). The sovereign was considered a corporation. See id., at 170; see also 1 W. Blackstone, Commentaries *467. Under the definitions supplied by contemporary law dictionaries, Territories would have been classified as "corporations" (and hence as "persons") at the time that 1983 was enacted and the Dictionary Act recodified. See W. Anderson, A Dictionary of Law 261 (1893) ("All corporations were originally modeled upon a state or nation"); I. J. Bouvier, A Law Dictionary Adapted to the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America 318-319 (11th ed. 1866) ("In this extensive sense the United States may be termed a corporation"); Van Brocklin v. Tennessee, 117 U.S. 151, 154 (1886) ("The United States is a . . . great corporation . . . ordained and established by the American people") (quoting United [495 U.S. 182, 202] States v. Maurice, 26 F.Cas. 1211, 1216 (No. 15,747) (CC Va. 1823) (Marshall, C. J.)); Cotton v. United States, 11 How. 229, 231 (1851) ("United States is 'a corporation'"). See generally Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 561-562 (1819) (explaining history of term "corporation").

- 7.2. All rights have been replaced with legislatively created corporate "privileges" and franchises. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 7.3. "citizens" and "residents" are little more than "employees" and officers of the corporation described in 26 U.S.C. §6671(b), 26 U.S.C. §7343, and 5 U.S.C. §2105. See:

Proof That There Is a "Straw Man", Form #05.042

Why You are a "national", "state national", and Constitutional but not Statutory Citizen, Form #05.006

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.6. Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs) serve as a substitute for lawful money and are really nothing but private scrip for internal use by officers of the government. They are not lawful money because they are not redeemable in gold or silver as required by the Constitution. See:

The Money Scam, Form #05.041
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.7. So-called "Income Taxes" are nothing but insurance premiums to pay for "social insurance benefits". They are also used to regulate the supply of fiat currency. See:

The Government "Benefits" Scam, Form #05.040
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.8. The so-called "law book", the Internal Revenue Code, is the private law franchise agreement which regulates compensation to and "kickbacks" from the officers of the corporation, which includes you. See:

The "Trade or Business" Scam, Form #05.001

7.9. Federal courts are really just private binding corporate arbitration for disputes between fellow officers of the corporation. See:

What Happened to Justice?, Form #06.012
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

7.10. Terms in the Constitution have been redefined to limit themselves to federal territory not protected by the original de jure constitution through judicial and prosecutorial word-smithing.

"When words lose their meaning, people will lose their liberty."
 [Confucius, 500 B.C.]

8. Constitutes a plan to unwittingly recruit the average American into servitude of this communist/socialist effort.

TITLE 50 > CHAPTER 23 > SUBCHAPTER IV > Sec. 841.

The Congress finds and declares that the Communist Party of the United States [consisting of the IRS, DOJ, and a corrupted federal judiciary], although purportedly a political party, is in fact an instrumentality of a conspiracy to overthrow the [de jure] Government of the United States [and replace it with a de facto government ruled by the judiciary]. It constitutes an authoritarian dictatorship [IRS, DOJ, and corrupted federal judiciary in collusion] within a [constitutional] republic, demanding for itself the rights and privileges including immunity from prosecution for their wrongdoing in violation of [Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8 of the Constitution] accorded to political parties, but denying to all others the liberties [Bill of Rights] guaranteed by the Constitution. Unlike political parties, which evolve their policies and programs through public means, by the reconciliation of a wide variety of individual views, and submit those policies and programs to the electorate at large for approval or disapproval, the policies and programs of the Communist Party are secretly [by corrupt judges and the IRS in complete disregard of the tax laws] prescribed for it by the foreign leaders of the world Communist movement [the IRS and Federal Reserve]. Its members [the Congress, which was terrorized to do IRS bidding recently by the framing of Congressman Traficant] have no part in determining its goals, and are not permitted to voice dissent to party objectives. Unlike members of political parties, members of the Communist Party are recruited for indoctrination [in the public schools by homosexuals, liberals, and socialists] with respect to its objectives and methods, and are organized, instructed, and disciplined [by the IRS and a corrupted judiciary] to carry into action slavishly the assignments given them by their hierarchical chieftains. Unlike political parties, the Communist Party [thanks to a corrupted federal judiciary] acknowledges no constitutional or statutory limitations upon its conduct or upon that of its members. The Communist Party is relatively small numerically, and gives scant indication of capacity ever to attain its ends by lawful political means. The peril inherent in its operation arises not from its numbers, but from its failure to acknowledge any limitation as to the nature of its activities, and its dedication to the proposition that the present constitutional Government of the United States ultimately must be brought to ruin by any available means, including resort to force and violence for using income taxes]. Holding that doctrine, its role as the agency of a hostile foreign power [the Federal Reserve and the American Bar Association (ABA)] renders its existence a clear present and continuing danger to the security of the United States. It is the means whereby individuals are seduced into the service of the world Communist movement, trained to do its bidding, and directed and controlled in the conspiratorial performance of their revolutionary services. Therefore, the Communist Party should be outlawed

5.6.15 All compensation for your personal labor is deductible from "gross income" on your tax return

It may surprise you to learn that the Internal Revenue Code allows for anyone to deduct the full market value and compensation received in exchange for their personal labor. This section will summarize why this is, and is based on a free pamphlet available below:

How the Government Defrauds You Out of Legitimate Deductions for the Market Value of Your Labor, Form #05.026
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The following subsections do not advocate the position that all the costs of producing one's own labor (i.e. food, shelter, clothing, health maintenance expenses) should be deducted from the earnings arising therefrom in computing "profit". Instead, this document establishes that no part of one's own labor constitutes "profit" under Natural Law or within the context of the United States Constitution or the legislative intent of Congress. Others have attempted to deduct the cost of keeping one's body whole (e.g. food, shelter, clothing, medicine) as a deduction for the production of their own labor. This is a complete misunderstanding of the value of one's own labor as their own exclusive property, as further established herein with cogent legal authorities. The primary reason why one cannot deduct the costs for producing their own labor is because then the government could tell you what size house you could live in, what car you drive, and what food you eat as reasonable deductions for the production of said labor. We certainly don't want the government meddling in or dictating any of these choices that only we have a protected right to make. If you want an example of how NOT to approach the issues raised in this pamphlet, it may be instructive to read a book by former U.S. Attorney John C. Garrison entitled The New Income Tax Scandal. In that book, he wrongfully tries to establish that we should be allowed deductions associated with the cost of producing our labor, rather than the approach established herein of saying that there is no such thing as "profit" in the context of one's own labor on one's own tax return.

5.6.15.1 Why One's Own Labor is not an article of Commerce and cannot Produce "profit" in the Context of Oneself

The following question naturally arises from the preceding sections relating to "profit":

QUESTION: What is "profit" in the context not of a business, but a private individual who offers his valuable labor in exchange for some other valuable commodity?

ANSWER: In the context of private individuals who sell their labor in exchange for money, there cannot lawfully be any such thing as "profit". The exchange of valuable labor for some other valuable commodity is an EQUAL exchange which does not have any profit involved, and therefore cannot be the subject of any kind of tax upon profits. If labor has no value in the exchange, then no one would be willing to pay anything for it! Anyone who argues with this premise can do nothing but contradict themselves.

1 The above conclusions are confirmed by the U.S. Code, which says that “the labor of a human being is not a commodity or 2 article of commerce”:

4 § 17. Antitrust laws not applicable to labor organizations

5 The labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce. Nothing contained in the antitrust laws
6 shall be construed to forbid the existence and operation of labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations,
7 instituted for the purposes of mutual help, and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or
8 restrain individual members of such organizations from lawfully carrying out the legitimate objects thereof; nor
9 shall such organizations, or the members thereof, be held or construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies
10 in restraint of trade, under the antitrust laws.

11 If “the labor of a human being is not a commodity or article of commerce”, then at least in the context of oneself, it cannot 12 produce “profit” in the context of oneself as a natural person. Consequently, there can be neither “profit” NOR its inverse,
13 which is “loss”, in connection with one’s own labor. The full market value of the labor, which is the full amount we received
14 as payment for it and not more, may lawfully be deducted from the compensation received in EQUAL exchange for it pursuant 15 to 26 U.S.C. §83, thus rendering neither profit nor loss. We cannot lawfully take deductions in connection with the expenses
16 needed to produce our own labor, because these expenses might exceed the compensation and thereby produce a loss which 17 compels the government to in effect subsidize people who work for less than the full Fair Market Value or Cost of Producing 18 their labor by giving them a tax break.

19 The debates on the Sixteenth Amendment, which the government frequently identifies as the source of their authority to tax
20 the labor of a human being, also abundantly confirm that the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment never included
21 the goal of taxing the labor of a human being. Instead, the main purpose of that amendment was to tax passive, unearned
22 profits large corporations and trusts that had grown to gargantuan proportions at that time. You can read the entire Sixteenth
23 Amendment Congressional debates below, and it is electronically searchable for your convenience:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/History/Congress/1909-16thAmendCongrRecord.pdf>

24 Among the statements during those debates were the following, which confirm the findings of this section:

25 *“Mr. Brandegee. Mr. President, what I said was that the amendment exempts absolutely everything that a man
26 makes for himself. Of course it would not exempt a legacy which somebody else made for him and gave to him.*
27 If a man’s occupation or vocation—for vocation means nothing but a calling—if his calling or occupation were
28 that of a financier it would exempt everything he made by underwriting and by financial operations in the course
29 of a year that would be the product of his effort [LABOR]. Nothing can be imagined that a man can busy 30 himself about with a view of profit which the amendment as drawn would not utterly exempt.”
31 [50 Cong.Rec. p. 3839, 1913]

32 The U.S. Supreme Court has also admitted that labor is not taxable, when it said:

33 “Every man has a natural right to the fruits of his own labor, is generally admitted; and no other person can 34 rightfully deprive him of those fruits, and appropriate them against his will...”
35 [The Antelope, 23 U.S. 66, 10 Wheat 66, 6 L.Ed. 268 (1825)]

36 “There is a clear distinction in this particular case between an individual and a corporation, and that the latter
37 *has no right to refuse to submit its books and papers for an examination at the suit of the State. The individual
38 may stand upon his constitutional rights as a citizen. He is entitled to carry on his private business in his own
39 way. His power to contract is unlimited. He owes no such duty to the State, since he receives nothing therefrom,
40 beyond the protection of his life and property. His rights are such as existed by the law of the land long
41 antecedent to the organization of the State, and can only be taken from him by due process of law, and in
42 accordance with the constitution. Among his rights are a refusal to incriminate himself, and the immunity of* 43 *himself and his property from arrest or seizure except under a warrant of the law. He owes nothing to the public
44 so long as he does not trespass upon their rights.”*
45 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906)]

46 So the question for our esteemed readers is: What part of:

47 “He owes NOTHING [including so-called “income taxes”] to the public so long as he does not trespass upon 48 their rights.”

1 . . .do you NOT understand? Why is this? Because the government cannot tax or regulate the exercise of RIGHTS protected
2 by the Constitution. The only “persons” they can tax or regulate are those who engage in “privileges”. To wit:

3 The power to tax the exercise of a privilege is the power to control or suppress its enjoyment. Magnano Co. v. Hamilton, 292 U.S. 40, 44, 45 S., 54 S.Ct. 599, 601, and cases cited. Those who can tax the exercise of this religious practice can make its exercise so costly as to deprive it of the resources necessary for its maintenance.
5 Those who can tax the privilege of engaging in this form of missionary evangelism can close its doors to all those who do not have a full purse. Spreading religious beliefs in this ancient and honorable manner would thus be denied the needy. Those who can deprive religious groups of their colporteurs can take from them a part of the vital power of the press which has survived from the Reformation.

10 *It is contended, however, that the fact that the license tax can suppress or control this activity is unim- [319 U.S. 105, 113] portant if it does not do so. But that is to disregard the nature of this tax. It is a license tax-a flat tax imposed on the exercise of a privilege granted by the Bill of Rights. A state may not impose a charge for the enjoyment of a right granted by the federal constitution. Thus, it may not exact a license tax for the privilege of carrying on interstate commerce ( McGoldrick v. Berwind-White Co., 309 U.S. 33, 56-58, 60 S.Ct. 388, 397, 398, 128 A.L.R. 876), although it may tax the property used in, or the income derived from, that commerce, so long as those taxes are not discriminatory. Id., 309 U.S. at page 47, 60 S.Ct. at page 392, 128 A.L.R. 876 and cases cited. A license tax applied to activities guaranteed by the First Amendment would have the same destructive effect. It is true that the First Amendment, like the commerce clause, draws no distinction between license taxes, fixed sum taxes, and other kinds of taxes. But that is no reason why we should shut our eyes to the nature of the tax and its destructive influence. The power to impose a license tax on the exercise of these freedoms is indeed as potent as the power of censorship which this Court has repeatedly struck down. Lovell v. Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S.Ct. 666; Schneider v. State, supra; Cantwell v. Connecticut, 310 U.S. 296, 306, 60 S.Ct. 900, 904, 128 A.L.R. 1352; Largent v. Texas, 318 U.S. 418, 63 S.Ct. 667, 87 L.Ed. --; Jamison v. Texas, supra. It was for that reason that the dissenting opinions in Jones v. Opelika, supra, stressed the nature of this type of tax. 316 U.S. at pages 607-609, 620, 623, 62 S.Ct. at pages 1243, 1244, 1250, 1251, 141 A.L.R. 514. In that case, as in the present ones, we have something very different from a registration system under which those going from house to house are required to give their names, addresses and other marks of identification to the authorities. In all of these cases the issuance of the permit or license is dependent on the payment of a license tax. And the license tax is fixed in amount and unrelated to the scope of the activities of petitioners or to their realized revenues. It is not a nominal fee [319 U.S. 105, 114] imposed as a regulatory measure to defray the expenses of policing the activities in question. <sup>8</sup> It is in no way apportioned. It is a flat license tax levied and collected as a condition to the pursuit of activities whose enjoyment is guaranteed by the First Amendment. Accordingly, it restrains in advance those constitutional liberties of press and religion and inevitably tends to suppress their exercise. That is almost uniformly recognized as the inherent vice and evil of this flat license tax. As stated by the Supreme Court of Illinois in a case involving this same sect and an ordinance similar to the present one, a person cannot be compelled 'to purchase, through a license fee or a license tax, the privilege freely granted by the constitution.' <sup>9</sup> Blue Island v. Kozul, 379 Ill. 511, 519, 41 N.E.2d. 515, 519. So it may not be said that proof is lacking that these license taxes either separately or cumulatively have restricted or are likely to restrict petitioners' religious activities. On their face they are a restriction of the free exercise of those freedoms which are protected by the First Amendment.

42 The ability to exchange your labor, which has an intrinsic and definable value, for some other valuable commodity is a right
43 guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America. This is the reason for the existence of 26 U.S.C. §83 and the 44 reason why no part of your own personal labor, including that connected with privileged activities such as a “trade or 45 business”, can be the subject of any tax. There is no such thing as “profit” in the context of your own personal labor, because 46 they can't tax or regulate the enjoyment of a right guaranteed by the Constitution. The state may tax profits associated with 47 other people you hire in the context of your business<sup>286</sup>, but not your OWN personal labor in the context of your OWN
48 personal income tax return. You have a RIGHT to enjoy property, and you are your own property! Lynch v. Household
49 Finance Corp., 405 U.S. 538 (1972). You own, govern, and control the exclusive and enjoyment of yourself.<sup>287</sup> Anyone who 50 interferes with the enjoyment of that right is instituting involuntary servitude in violation of the Thirteenth Amendment.

Philosophy of Liberty

<sup>286</sup> If in fact Congress has expressly extended the authority of the Secretary of the United States Treasury to operate outside the District of Columbia and within the several 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72. As of the time of this writing, no officer of the United States has been able to produce even one statute or law which so extends the authority of the Secretary to the 50 states of the Union pursuant to 4 U.S.C. §72.

<sup>287</sup> You have an exclusive right to decide whether you go to work today, how much you want to work for, or whether you want to give away your labor for free. You don't have to ask the government's permission to make ANY one of these decisions. Therefore, your labor is completely and exclusively your own property, and no one can dictate what one can do with that property or the fruits of that property in a truly free society.

5.6.15.2 Why Labor is Property

“Property. That which is peculiar or proper to any person; that which belongs exclusively to one. In the strict legal sense, an aggregate of rights which are guaranteed and protected by the government. Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. v. State, 65 Misc.Rep. 263, 121 N.Y.S. 536. The term is said to extend to every species of valuable right and interest. More specifically, ownership; the unrestricted and exclusive right to a thing; the right to dispose of a thing in every legal way, to possess it, to use it, and to exclude every one else from interfering with it. That dominion or indefinite right of particular things or subjects. The exclusive right of possessing, enjoying, and disposing of a thing. The highest right a man can have to anything; being used to refer to that right which one has to lands or tenements, goods or chattels, which no way depends on another man’s courtesy.

The word is also commonly used to denote everything which is the subject of ownership; corporeal or incorporeal, tangible or intangible, visible or invisible, real or personal; everything that has an exchangeable value or which goes to make up wealth or estate. It extends to every species of valuable right and interest, and includes real and personal property, easements, franchises, and incorporeal hereditaments, and includes every invasion of one’s property rights by actionable wrong. Labberton v. General Cas. Co. of America, 53 Wash.2d. 180, 332 P.2d. 250, 252, 254.

Property within constitutional protection, denotes group of rights inhering in citizen’s relation to physical thing, as right to possess, use and dispose of it. Cereghino v. State By and Through State Highway Commission, 230 Or. 439, 370 P.2d. 694, 697.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1216]

The U.S. Supreme Court defined "labor" as property"

“Among these unalienable rights, as proclaimed in that great document [the Declaration of Independence] is the right of men to pursue their happiness, by which is meant, the right any lawful business or vocation, in any manner not inconsistent with the equal rights of others, which may increase their prosperity or develop their faculties, so as to give them their highest enjoyment...It has been well said that, THE PROPERTY WHICH EVERY MAN HAS IN HIS OWN LABOR, AS IT IS THE ORIGINAL FOUNDATION OF ALL OTHER PROPERTY SO IT IS THE MOST SACRED AND INVIOABLE... to hinder his employing this strength and dexterity in what manner he thinks proper without injury to his neighbor, is a plain violation of this most sacred property.”
[Butchers’ Union Co. v. Crescent City Co., 111 U.S. 746 (1884), Concurring opinion of Justice Field]

There is ample case law to support the principle of statutory construction which makes the term “any property” all inclusive; meaning that nothing is to be excluded by the word “any”. This is confirmed by the following cases where the United States contends successfully that “any property” is all inclusive and means all property (see U.S. v. Monsanto, 491 U.S. 600, 607-611 and (syllabus) (1989); United States v. Alvarez-Sanchez, 511 U.S. 350, 357 (1994); US. v. Gonzales, 520 U.S. 1, 4-6 (1997); Department of Housing and Urban Renewal v. Rucker, X35 U.S. 125, 130-31 (2002) citing Gonzalez and Monsanto). Monsanto is quoted below:

As used in statutes and regulations, the terms “any” or “any property” are to be construed as all-inclusive until Congress “expressly” provides an exception to support the notion that such terms are not all inclusive. Since the 1989 Monsanto decision regarding “any property,” three very recent decisions supra deal directly with the same question as to how to interpret the term “any”; as all-inclusive and not subject to derogation.

The U.S. Supreme Court has also affirmed the RIGHT of everyone to exchange their labor, which is property, for something of equal value. When any third party, including the government, interferes with such an exchange, for instance by involuntarily withholding a portion of that exchange and thereby depriving either party to the contract of liberty and property,

1 then that party is violating rights. Such interference, we might add, also includes levying involuntary taxes upon one's labor.
2 To wit:

3 "Included in the right of personal liberty and the right of private property-partaking of the nature of each- is
4 the right to make contracts for the acquisition of property. Chief among such contracts is that of personal
5 employment, by which labor and other services are exchanged for money or other forms of property. If this
6 right be struck down or arbitrarily interfered with, there is a substantial impairment of liberty in the long-
7 established constitutional sense. The right is as essential to the laborer as to the capitalist, to the poor as to the 8 rich; for the vast majority of persons have no other honest way to begin to acquire property, save by working for 9 money.

10 An interference with this liberty so serious as that now under consideration, and so disturbing of equality of 11 right, must be deemed to be arbitrary, unless it be supportable as a reasonable exercise of the police power of 12 the state. But, notwithstanding the strong general presumption in favor of the validity of state laws, we do not 13 think the statute in question, as construed and applied in this case, can be sustained as a legitimate exercise of 14 that power. To avoid possible misunderstanding, we should here emphasize, what has been said before, that so
15 far as its title or enacting clause expresses a purpose to deal with coercion, compulsion, duress, or other undue
16 influence, we have no present concern with it, because nothing of that sort is involved in this case. As has [236
17 U.S. 1, 15] been many times stated, this court deals not with moot cases or abstract questions, but with the 18 concrete case before it. California v. San Pablo & T. R. Co. 149 U.S. 308, 314, 37 S. L.Ed. 747, 748, 13
19 Sup.Ct.Rep. 876; Richardson v. McChesney, 218 U.S. 487, 492, 54 S. L.Ed. 1121, 1122, 31 Sup.Ct.Rep. 43;
20 Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cade, 233 U.S. 642, 648, 58 S. L.Ed. 1135, 1137, 34 Sup.Ct.Rep. 678. We do not 21 mean to say, therefore, that a state may not properly exert its police power to prevent coercion on the part of 22 employers towards employees, or vice versa.

24 As to the interest of the employed, it is said by the Kansas supreme court to be a matter of common knowledge
25 that 'employees, as a rule, are not financially able to be as independent in making contracts for the sale of 26 their labor as are employers in making a contract of purchase thereof.' No doubt, wherever the right of private 27 property exists, there must and will be inequalities of fortune; and thus it naturally happens that parties
28 negotiating about a contract are not equally unhampered by circumstances. This applies to all contracts, and not 29 merely to that between employer and employee. Indeed, a little reflection will show that wherever the right of 30 private property and the right of free contract coexist, each party when contracting is inevitably more or less
31 influenced by the question whether he has much property, or little, or none; for the contract is made to the very 32 end that each may gain something that he needs or desires more urgently than that which he proposes to give in 33 exchange. And, since it is self-evident that, unless all things are held in common, some persons must have more
34 property than others, it is from the nature of things impossible to uphold freedom of contract and the right of 35 private property without at the same time recognizing as legitimate those inequalities of fortune that are the 36 necessary result of the exercise of those rights. But the 14th Amendment, in declaring that a state shall not 'deprive 37 any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law,' gives to each of these an equal sanction; it
38 recognizes 'liberty' and 'property' as coexistent human rights, and debars the states from any unwarranted
39 interference with either.

40 And since a state may not strike them down directly, it is clear that it may not do so indirectly, as by declaring
41 in effect that the public good requires the removal of those [236 U.S. 1, 18] inequalities that are but the 42 normal and inevitable result of their exercise, and then invoking the police power in order to remove the 43 inequalities, without other object in view. The police power is broad, and not easily defined, but it cannot be 44 given the wide scope that is here asserted for it, without in effect nullifying the constitutional guaranty. "

45 [ . . . ]

46 In short, an interference with the normal exercise of personal liberty and property rights is the primary object
47 of the statute [or tax], and not an incident to the advancement of the general welfare. But, in our opinion, the 48 14th Amendment debars the states from striking down personal liberty or property rights, or materially restricting
49 their normal exercise, excepting [236 U.S. 1, 19] so far as may be incidentally necessary for the accomplishment
50 of some other and paramount object, and one that concerns the public welfare. The mere restriction of liberty or 51 of property rights cannot of itself be denominated 'public welfare,' and treated as a legitimate object of the 52 police power; for such restriction is the very thing that is inhibited by the Amendment. "
53 [Coppage v. State of Kansas, 236 U.S. 1 (1915)]

54 5.6.15.3 Why the Cost of Labor is Deductible from Gross Receipts In Computing Profit

55 The conversion they are talking about is the conversion of "labor" and "capital" into finished goods. The code reflects the 56 requirement for "profit" in 26 U.S.C. §83, which says that profit in the context of labor is any amount collected in excess of 57 the value of the labor collected. Below is an enumerated analysis of how this works:

1. Because labor is property and has a basis of its own that is deductible from the cost of procuring it, then it is a violation of 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212, 1001, 1011, and 1012 to report the entirety of “compensation for services” as described in 26 U.S.C. §61\(a\)\(1\) as “gross income”.
2. Moreover, the law and the regulations govern what the Secretary or his alleged Delegates can do with regard to the calculation of “Gross Income” as previously cited in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 212, 1001, 1011, and 1012 above.

“The regulations...now govern, and will continue to govern, the abbreviated application process. See Fort Stewart Schools v. FLRA, 495 U.S. 641, 654, 110 S.Ct. 2043, 2051, 109 L.Ed.2d. 659 (1990). No matter what an agency said in the past, or what it did not say, after an agency issues regulations it must abide by them.”
[Schering Corp. v. Shalala, 995 F.2d. 1103 (D.C.Cir. 1993)]

3. The plain language of 26 U.S.C. §83 states that when compensation is received in [exchange] for services rendered, ONLY the “excess” of the “property” [compensation] over the “amount paid” [labor] in costs is to be included in gross income:

§ 83. Property transferred in connection with performance of services

(a) General rule

*If, in connection with the performance of services [labor], property is transferred [compensation] to any person [employee] other than the person for whom such services are performed [employer], the excess of—

*(1) the fair market value of such property [compensation] (determined without regard to any restriction other than a restriction which by its terms will never lapse) at the first time the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever occurs earlier, over

(2) the amount (if any) paid [labor] for such property [compensation], shall be included in the gross income of the person who performed such services [employee] in the first taxable year in which the rights of the person having the beneficial interest in such property are transferable or are not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture, whichever is applicable. The preceding sentence shall not apply if such person sells or otherwise disposes of such property in an arm's length transaction before his rights in such property become transferable or not subject to a substantial risk of forfeiture.

4. Here is the formula for 26 U.S.C. §83:
  - 4.1. “Gross Income” = “Excess”; and
  - 4.2. “Excess” = (“property”)—(the “amount paid”)... or
  - 4.3. “Excess”=(“compensation”)---(value of labor)
5. The “amount paid” is defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) as: definition of cost:

26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\)

(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term “amount paid” refers to the value of any money or property [labor is property.] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which section 83 applies...

6. The value of the “amount paid” [labor] is determined by what the employer paid for the services [labor] rendered. 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) is all inclusive and includes “any money or property.”
7. The fair market value (“FMV”) of property (“amount paid” or “labor”) is established through the terms of an “arm’s length transaction.”<sup>288</sup>
8. To confirm that this understanding is correct, we can come to the same conclusion by reviewing other sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder.
9. To properly calculate what constitutes “Gross Income”, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §83, one needs to know “the amount paid” (cost of labor) so it can be deducted from the “property” (compensation) in order to calculate the “excess” [profit] which is to be included in the “Gross Income”. To determine these factors, one must turn to the regulations:

1 [\[26 C.F.R. § 1.83-4\(b\)\(2\)\]](#)

- 2 10. Before one can determine the “excess”, one must identify the “amount paid.”
3 11. As property, labor has a value with regard to the related compensation transaction and 26 U.S.C. §1012 will either
4 include or exclude said cost for labor.

5 § 1012. Basis of property—cost

6 The basis of property [labor] shall be the cost [compensation] of such property...

- 7 12. The regulations confirm the basis of property:

8 26 C.F.R. §1.1012 -1 Basis of property.

9 (a) General rule. In general, the basis of property [compensation] is the cost thereof. The cost is the amount 10 paid [labor] for such property [compensation] in cash or other property [labor]...

- 11 13. Congress has cited what it considers to be a “cost”. The “amount paid for such property in cash or other 12 property”. The Secretary will take note that nothing is excluded from that which is considered by Congress to be a
13 cost. If Congress intended to exclude labor from that which is a cost, 26 U.S.C. §1012 would reflect such an
14 exclusion. Since it is not excluded, it is to be considered as a cost in the calculation of the “excess” which is included
15 in “Gross Income” and in the determination as to whether one has enough “gross income” to make it necessary to even 16 file a return.
17 14. The “amount paid” [labor] is the value of the cost [labor] and is also known as the “adjusted basis”. Regulations
18 require that this amount be “withdrawn” from the amount realized in the [payment for services] transaction and that it
19 be “restored to the taxpayer.”

20 26 C.F.R. §1.1011-1 Adjusted basis.

21 *The adjusted basis for determining the gain or loss from the sale or other disposition of property is the cost or 22 other basis prescribed in section 1012 or other applicable provisions of subtitle A of the code, adjusted to the 23 extent provided in sections 1016, 1017, and 1018 or as otherwise specifically provided for under applicable
24 provisions of internal revenue laws.*

25 26 C.F.R. § 1.1001-1\(a\)

26 *(a) ...from the amount realized upon the sale or exchange there shall be withdrawn a sum sufficient to restore the 27 adjusted basis prescribed by section 1011 and the regulations thereunder...The amount which remains [excess]
28 after the adjusted basis [cost of labor] has been restored to the taxpayer constitutes the realized gain [profit].*

- 29 15. After determining the value of property (labor) that is a cost, as defined by United States law (see 26 C.F.R. § 1.1012-
30 1\(a\) , and 26 C.F.R. § 1.1001-1\(a\)), the value of the “amount paid,” or the “adjusted basis” (labor), must be subtracted
31 from the amount realized (compensation) BEFORE including ONLY the “excess” balance which remains (if any) in 32 “Gross Income”. The Federal 1040 type returns do not accommodate § 83 in any way and therefore it is not possible
33 for any Citizen to complete a 1040 return and claim the right as articulated by Congress in § 83.
34 16. Again, the conclusion reached by reviewing additional sections of the IRC and the regulations thereunder, as cited
35 above, is the same conclusion articulated by Congress in 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) where the “amount paid” is defined as 36 “any money or property” (labor is not excluded):

37 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\)

38 *(g) Amount paid. For purposes of section 83 and the regulations thereunder, the term “amount paid” [labor]
39 refers to the value of any money or property [labor] paid for the transfer of property [compensation] to which 40 section 83 applies...*

- 41 17. The sections of the IRC which embraces intangible personal property as a cost (see 26 U.S.C. §1012) is calculated as 42 one’s cost when having only sold one’s labor, and 26 C.F.R. §1.83-3\(g\) does the same. In fact, in order to impose
43 amounts which are not to be included in “Gross Income” upon those who may be “taxpayers”, the Secretary must deny
44 even “taxpayers” their rights as identified by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §§83, 1011, and 1012.

18. The law does not exclude any property for which there is no basis from cost. The cost equals the value of any and all property (labor) disposed to obtain other property (compensation), unless it is expressly excluded under 26 U.S.C. §1012.

19. The difference between cost and income is further articulated by Congress in 26 U.S.C. §212 as follows:

§ 212. Expenses for production of income

In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses [cost] paid or incurred during the taxable year—

(1) for the production or collection of income;

(2) for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income; or

(3) in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax.

20. The Secretary has a duty to notice that a deduction is mandated (“shall”) but it is not specified from where or what the expenses are to be deducted. Based on 26 U.S.C. §83, the deduction (labor) is to be taken from “such property” (compensation) to create the “excess” which then is included in “Gross Income”.

21. The Secretary is hereby put on notice that to deny the rights of Sovereign Americans simply for the purpose of converting them into a “taxpayer” status or to exact amounts from them in excess of that which is provided by law is criminal conversion and United States law mandates filing of a criminal complaint, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §4, against the Secretary and his subordinates pursuant for any violation of United States law or denial of rights.

In conclusion, if you run into either a public servant or a judge who tries to argue with you about whether there is a cost to produce labor that the laborer should be compensated for, indirectly, they are:

1. Admitting that their labor is worth nothing.
2. Receiving unjust compensation or enrichment. Anyone who paid anything for something that worth nothing has benefited from unjust enrichment.

Unjust enrichment doctrine. General principle that one person should not be permitted unjustly to enrich himself at expense of another, but should be required to make restitution of or for property or benefits received, retained or appropriated, where it is just and equitable that such restitution be made, and where such action involves no violation or frustration of law or opposition to public policy, either directly or indirectly. Tulalip Shores, Inc. v. Moriland, 9 Wash.App. 271, 511 P.2d. 1402, 1404. Unjust enrichment of a person occurs when he has and retains money or benefits which in justice and equity belong to another. L & A Drywall, Inc. v. Whitmore Cons. Co., Inc., Utah, 608 P.2d. 626, 630.

Three elements must be established in order to sustain a claim based on unjust enrichment: A benefit conferred upon the defendant by the plaintiff; and appreciation or knowledge by the defendant of the benefit; and the acceptance or retention by the defendant of the benefit under such circumstances as to make it inequitable for the defendant to retain the benefit without the payment of its value. Everhart v. Miles, 47 Md.App. 131, 136, 422 A.2d. 28. See also Quantum meruit.

Unjust enrichment. Retention of a benefit conferred by another without offering compensation in circumstances where compensation is reasonably expected. A benefit obtained from another not intended as a gift and not legally justifiable for which the beneficiary must make restitution or recompense. The area of law dealing with unjustifiable benefits of this kind. [Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, p. 1536]

3. Asking for a pay cut and are admitting they are paid too much.
4. Admitting the corporations, which routinely deduct the cost of labor from their earnings in computing corporate profits, are being given favored status and that you are not entitled to the same equal protection. This violates the requirement for equal protection of the law mandated in Fourteenth Amendment, Section 1.

Therefore, tell them their labor isn't worth anything and that the government pays them too much and that they should refund all their pay and benefits. After all, if it isn't an equal exchange of value, any amount of money accepted for it amounts to STEALING from the government.

1 5.6.16 IRS Has no Authority to Convert a Tax Class 5 “gift” into a Tax Class 2 liability

2 This section builds on the content of section 5.6.8, where we showed that payroll deductions you make to the federal
3 government are classified as Tax Class 5, which means estate and gift taxes, and that these taxes are donations or gifts to the
4 U.S. government. In this section we will add to this analysis to also show that the IRS has no delegated authority to change
5 a Tax Class 5 gift into a Tax Class 2 Liability that would appear on an IRS Form 1040. This is equivalent to saying that the 6 IRS has no authority to do a Substitute For Return (SFR) on a natural person.

7 The table below establishes the various tax classes.

When you submit IRS Form W-4 to your private employer, he becomes the equivalent of a de facto, unlawful withholding agent for Tax Class 5 gifts to the U.S. government. After you submit this form, he will complete and submit an IRS Form W-2 at the end of each year, which is called an "Information Return". The above table also classifies Information Returns as Tax Class 5, which means a gift or estate tax. Since an Information Return is NOT a tax, then the only type of tax it can be is one of these two types. However, notice that:

1. IRS Form 1040 is Tax Class 2, which means "Individual Income Tax, Fiduciary Tax, Partnership return".
2. Tax Class 5 is NOT the same as Tax Class 2, and that they may not be interchanged, because doing so would convert what amounts to a gift into a liability.
3. There is no statute in the Internal Revenue Code nor implementing regulation in 26 C.F.R. that authorizes the IRS to convert what amounts to a gift made through withholding into a liability that is owed.
4. Only the filing of an IRS Form 1040 or some variant can turn the gift into a liability, which is why when you file a 1040, you must staple the Information Returns, including W-2, 1099's, etc to the return and sign the form under penalty of perjury indicating a liability.
5. No statute or authorizes the IRS to do an involuntary Substitute For Return upon a natural person. This was covered earlier in section 5.4.15.
6. No provision within the Internal Revenue Manual authorizes Substitute For Returns against natural persons. In fact, Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8 specifically exempts IRS Form 1040 and all its variants from the Substitute For Return program.

One of our readers did a Freedom Of Information Act request asking the IRS for the statute, implementing regulation, and the Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section authorizing the IRS to convert a Tax Class 5 Information Return into a Tax Class 2 liability, and below is the response they got back:

"We have no documents responsive to your request."

What they are admitting indirectly is that they have no authority to perform involuntary assessments or Substitute For Returns against natural persons who would ordinarily file an IRS Form 1040. This is consistent with Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8, which indicates that SFR's using IRS Form 1040 are NOT legally allowed.

5.6.17 Taxes are not "debts" and therefore not a liability

Another very good reason we aren't liable to pay taxes is that no less than the U.S. Supreme Court has indicated that "taxes" as legally defined are not "debts". If "taxes" are not debts, then a Notice of Federal Tax Lien cannot and does not create a valid or collectible "debt" as legally defined.

*In his work on the Constitution, the late Mr. Justice Story whose praise as a jurist is in all civilized lands, speaking of the clause in the Constitution giving to Congress the power to lay and collect taxes, says of the theory which would limit the power to the object of paying the debts that, thus limited, it would be only a power to provide for the payment of debts then existing. [Footnote 4] And certainly if a narrow and limited interpretation would thus restrict the word "debts" in the Constitution, the same sort of interpretation would in like manner restrict the same word in the act. Such an interpretation needs only to be mentioned to be rejected. We refer to it only to show that a right construction must be sought through larger and less technical views. We may, then, safely decline either to limit the word "debts" to existing dues, or to extend its meaning so as to embrace all dues of whatever origin and description.

What, then, is its true sense? The most obvious, and, as it seems to us, the most rational answer to this question is that Congress must have had in contemplation debts originating in contract or demands carried into judgment, and only debts of this character. This is the commonest and most natural use of the word. Some strain is felt upon the understanding when an attempt is made to extend it so as to include taxes imposed by legislative authority, and there should be no such strain in the interpretation of a law like this.

We are the more ready to adopt this view because the greatest of English elementary writers upon law, when treating of debts in their various descriptions, gives no hint that taxes come within either. [Footnote 5] while American state courts of the highest authority have refused to treat liabilities for taxes as debts in the ordinary sense of that word, for which actions of debt may be maintained.

The first of these cases was that of Pierce v. City of Boston, [Footnote 6] 1842, in which the defendant attempted to set off against a demand of the plaintiff certain taxes due to the city. The statute allowed mutual debts to be set off, but the court disallowed the right to set off taxes. This case went, indeed, upon the construction of the statute of Massachusetts, and did not turn on the precise point before us, but the language of the court shows that taxes were not regarded as debts within the common understanding of the word.

The second case was that of Shaw v. Pickett, [Footnote 7] in which the Supreme Court of Vermont said,

"The assessment of taxes does not create a debt that can be enforced by suit, or upon which a promise to pay interest can be implied. It is a proceeding in invitum."

The next case was that of the City of Camden v. Allen, [Footnote 8] 1857. That was an action of debt brought to recover a tax by the municipality to which it was due. The language of the Supreme Court of New Jersey was still more explicit: "A tax, in its essential characteristics," said the court, "is not a debt nor in the nature of a debt. A tax is an impost levied by authority of government upon its citizens or subjects for the support of the state. It is not founded on contract or agreement. It operates in invitum. A debt is a sum of money due by certain and express agreement. It originates in and is founded upon contracts express or implied."

These decisions were all made before the acts of 1862 were passed, and they may have had some influence upon the choice of the words used. Be this as it may, we all think that the interpretation which they sanction is well warranted.

We cannot attribute to the legislature an intent to include taxes under the term debts without something more than appears in the acts to show that intention.

The Supreme Court of California, in 1862, had the construction of these acts under consideration in the case of Perry v. Washburn. [Footnote 9] The decisions which we have cited were referred to by Chief Justice Field, now holding a seat on this bench, and the very question we are now considering, "What did Congress intend by the act?" was answered in these words:

"Upon this question, we are clear that it only intended by the terms debts, public and private, such obligations for the payment of money as are founded upon contract."

In whatever light, therefore, we consider this question, whether in the light of the conflict between the legislation of Congress and the taxing power of the states, to which the interpretation, insisted on in behalf of the County of Lane, would give occasion, or in the light of the language of the acts themselves, or in the light of the decisions to which we have referred, we find ourselves brought to the same conclusion, that the clause making the United States notes a legal tender for debts has no reference to taxes imposed by state authority, but relates only to debts in the ordinary sense of the word, arising out of simple contracts or contracts by specialty, which include judgments and recognizances. [Footnote 10]

Whether the word "debts," as used in the act, includes obligations expressly made payable or adjudged to be paid in coin has been argued in another case. We express at present, no opinion on that question. [Footnote 11]

5.6.18 The "Constitutional Rights" Position

"It is elementary when the constitutionality of a statute is assailed, if the statute be reasonably susceptible of two interpretations, by one of which it would be unconstitutional and by the other valid, it is our plain duty to adopt that construction which will save the statute from constitutional infirmity. [Cite omitted.] And unless this rule be considered as meaning that our duty is to first decide that a statute is unconstitutional, and then proceed to hold that such ruling was unnecessary because the statute is susceptible of two constructions, by one of which grave and doubtful constitutional questions are avoided, our duty is to adopt the latter."
[United States v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 213 U.S. 366; 29 S.Ct. 527 (1909)]

Any tax system creates a threat to individual liberty because "the power to tax involves the power to destroy," as Chief Justice John Marshall observed.<sup>289</sup> But the federal income tax and its illegal enforcement within states of the union by the IRS harm civil liberties much more than necessary to raise needed funds for the government. Certainly, the IRS performs poorly and too easily abuses the rights of citizens. But ultimately Congress is to blame for creating an excessively complex and high-rate tax system. New laws to increase taxpayer protections and replacement of the income tax with a simpler, flatter consumption-based tax could greatly reduce the following 10 areas of civil liberties abuse.

1. "Vertical" Inequality. Although equality under the law is a bedrock American principle, the income tax treats citizens unequally. "Vertical" inequality is created by hugely different tax burdens on citizens at different income levels. For example, households earning between $30,000 and $75,000 pay an average 10 percent of their income in federal income taxes, compared to 27 percent for households earning more than $200,000.<sup>290</sup> Fully 36 percent of U.S. households pay no income tax.<sup>291</sup> Besides violating the spirit of equal protection guarantees of the Constitution, such unequal burdens distort perceptions about the costs and benefits of government because programs appear to be free of cost to many.
2. "Horizontal" Inequality. Even people with similar incomes are treated unequally by the many exemptions, deductions, credits, and other intricacies of the income tax. For example, there are 59 income tax provisions that vary depending on marital status.<sup>292</sup> Likewise, the tax differences between homeowners and renters with the same incomes can be thousands of dollars because of itemized deductions for property taxes and mortgage interest. Another disparity is the unequal access to savings vehicles in the tax code depending on individuals' work situations and other factors. If all individual savings were exempt from tax, as under a consumption-based system, individuals would be treated more equally.
3. Complexity, Ambiguity, and Uncertainty. Certainty in the law is a bulwark against arbitrary and abusive government. But there is no certainty under the income tax because it rests on an inherently difficult-to-measure tax base, uses no consistent definition of "income" or other concepts, and is a labyrinth of narrow and limited provisions created by politicians intent on social engineering.<sup>293</sup> The current IRS commissioner concedes that the income tax has become too complex for accurate administration, which is evident in the 28 percent IRS error rate on phone inquiries and 60 percent error rate on audits.<sup>294</sup> Business tax rules are so ambiguous that many disputes drag on for years and are valued in the hundreds of millions of dollars.<sup>295</sup> Individuals are baffled by the complex rules on capital gains, pension and savings plans, and a growing list of targeted incentives. Those complexities would be eliminated under a flat consumption-based tax system.
4. Huge Size and Instability of Tax Code. Citizens are required to know the country's laws and comply with them. Yet federal tax rules are massive in scope and constantly changing. Tax statutes, regulations, and related documentation span 45,662 pages.<sup>296</sup> There were 441 changes to tax rules in last year's tax-cut law alone.<sup>297</sup> That law guaranteed a decade of

1 tax instability with phased-in changes lasting until 2010. Income tax instability is typified by changes in taxes on capital.
2 There have been 25 substantial changes in the treatment of long-term capital gains since 1922.<sup>298</sup> Pension taxing statutes
3 have been substantially changed nearly every year since the early 1980s, creating regulatory backlogs and leaving
4 employers unsure about how to comply.<sup>299</sup> Last year's tax-cut law alone had 64 separate rule changes for pension and 5 saving plans.<sup>300</sup>

- 6 5. Lack of Financial Privacy. The broad-based income tax necessitates a large invasion of financial privacy that a low-rate
7 consumption-based tax could avoid. The IRS regularly gains access to a myriad of personal records, such as mortgage
8 records, credit card data, phone records, banking and investment records, real property transaction data, and personal
9 correspondence. This broad IRS authority to obtain records without court supervision has been referred to by the Supreme
10 Court as "a power of inquisition."<sup>301</sup>
- 11 6. Denial of Due Process. The Fifth Amendment right to due process is ignored in many respects by the federal income tax
12 regime. Due process requires that government provide accused citizens a clear notice of a claim against them and allow 13 the accused a hearing before executing enforcement action. But the IRS engages in many summary judgments, and
14 enforces them prior to any judicial determinations. Moreover, the very complexity and ambiguity of the income tax
15 seems to violate due process. In 1926, the Supreme Court noted that a statute that is "so vague that men of common
16 intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates that first essential of due process 17 of law."<sup>302</sup>
- 18 7. Shifting of the Burden of Proof. For non-criminal tax cases -- the vast majority of cases -- the tax code reverses the 19 centuries-old common law principle that the burden of proof rests with the accuser. Except in some narrow
20 circumstances, the IRS does not have to prove the correctness of its determinations. When the IRS makes erroneous
21 assessments, as it often does, citizens carry the burden to prove that they are wrong. Efforts to shift the burden of proof
22 to the IRS in the 1998 IRS Restructuring and Reform Act did not accomplish that goal. In addition, the new rules do not
23 apply to the 97 percent of IRS actions that are deemed administrative in nature.<sup>303</sup>
- 24 8. No Trial by Jury in U.S. Tax Court. Despite Sixth and Seventh Amendment guarantees of trial by jury, the federal tax
25 system carefully sidesteps such protections. To contest an IRS tax calculation prior to assessment, one must file a petition
26 in the U.S. Tax Court. But since this is an administrative court, not an Article III court, no jury trial is required. To obtain
27 a jury trial and related rights for civil tax cases, one must file suit in a U.S. District Court. But before that can happen,
28 the alleged tax, penalties, and interest must be paid in full. And if the citizen wins, there is a burdensome route to 29 retrieving the disputed money. For most people, those rules effectively eliminate the right to trial by jury in tax cases.
- 30 9. Unreasonable Searches and Seizures. In most situations, the Fourth Amendment guarantees that, before the government 31 can search private property and seize records, it must demonstrate to a court that there is "probable cause" to believe that
32 lawless conduct exists. However, the IRS's summons authority under tax code section 7602 allows it to obtain records
33 of every description from any person without showing probable cause and without a court order. There has also been an 34 explosion in information reporting required by the IRS and a big expansion in its computer searching for personal records.
35 Recently, the IRS won the power to access financial data on Visa cards issued by foreign banks. Many examples of 36 abusive IRS searches and seizures were revealed in U.S. Senate hearings in 1997.<sup>304</sup>
- 37 10. Forced Self-Incrimination. The requirement to file tax returns sworn to under penalty of perjury operates to invalidate 38 the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination. Citizens face a legal dilemma. On the one hand, refusing to 39 file a return would expose a citizen to prosecution for failure to file. On the other hand, disclosing information sought in 40 tax returns constitutes a waiver of Fifth Amendment protections. The IRS can and does release that information to federal,
41 state, and local agencies for both tax and non-tax related enforcement purposes.

Below is a summarized listing of Constitutional Provisions that are violated or conflicted as a result of imposing direct federal income taxes on earnings from within the United States of America, also called the 50 union states. See section 5.2.2 of this book for further details on these issues:

Income taxes are direct taxes.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |

Also protects security of property and personal effects from the government.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

| Violation of due process—government cannot take property from a Citizen without a court hearing                      | 5 th and 14th Amendments require that citizens cannot be deprived of their property without a court hearing                                                              | Tax collections violate due process protections, because seizures and levies are commonly instituted without a hearing                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Definition of "income"                                                                                               | Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 Sixteenth Amendment                                                                                                                                  | Supreme court indicated in several cases that "income" means ONLY corporate profit , and not what most people think it is. See Eisner v. Macomber , 252 U.S. 189 (1920); Stratton's Independence v. Howbert , 231 U.S. 399 (1913); Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co. , 247 U.S. 179 (1918); Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. , 220 U.S. 107 (1911); Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co. , 271 U.S. 170 (1926) |

Of great interest is the idea that we can use the above conflicts of constitutional law to point out precisely where the federal income tax can lawfully operate. The only place it can operate legally and not conflict with the above statutes and Constitutional provisions are those places that do not have Constitutional rights (Bill of Rights), and those areas are limited to foreign countries, U.S. territories and possessions, and enclaves within the states that are not covered by the Constitution, as we pointed out earlier in sections 4.8 and 5.2.12. You don't want to live there or mistakenly tell the government you live there by signing the default perjury statement they provide at the end of their tax forms (see 28 U.S.C. §1746 for more about this)! Below are some of the rights you don't have in such areas:

1. Free speech (First Amendment)

- 1 2. Due process of law (Fourth and Fifth Amendment)
- 2 3. A jury trial (Sixth and Seventh Amendment)
- 3 4. Freedom from direct taxes (1:9:4, 1:2:3 of Constitution).
- 4 5. Freedom from slavery (Thirteenth Amendment)
- 5 6. Financial Privacy (see Fourth Amendment)

6 Without due process of law, then the government can define its jurisdiction and the word “includes” any way it likes. If you
 7 then petition your case to U.S. Tax Court as a “taxpayer” and/or a “U.S. person” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) or statutory 8 “U.S. citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 (a federal serf), which is an Article I court that exercises authority only within such 9 areas, this is exactly the kind of tyranny you have volunteered to subject yourself to.

- 10 • No rights. 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) took away the ability of the court to rule on your rights related to federal taxes. This 11 legislation alone would be illegal if you lived in the 50 Union states and were a “national” as we pointed out in section 12 5.2.12.
- 13 • No jury trial. We show later on in section 6.12.2 that the federal courts aren't even obligated to give you a jury trial if 14 you are suing the federal government for wrongdoing, because they have sovereign immunity and the Constitution
 15 doesn't require it! In the case of U.S. Tax Court, one person who isn't even a judge rules on the case, and the only
 16 reason he has any authority at all is because you gave him jurisdiction by petitioning to hear your case in that court. You
 17 didn't have to and you are a fool to do this. You could have gone to U.S. District court instead and been much more 18 likely to get a jury trial.
- 19 • No freedom from direct taxes. Why would a kangaroo Tax Court judge tell you that you don't owe taxes, especially 20 after you realize that the term of his appointment is 15 years and if he rules in your favor, he could be fired? If the IRS
 21 can audit and harass him for not enforcing taxes, why would he rule in your favor, even if the law required it?
- 22 • No free speech. They will suppress your legitimate evidence, and refuse to allow you to bring up religious or first 23 amendment issues.
- 24 • No due process of law. The pseudo-judge can, for instance, define the word “includes” any way he likes to legally
 25 expand federal jurisdiction because he doesn't have a Fifth Amendment right he would be violating for doing so! He 26 can even deny your demand that the government meet its burden of proof by showing the statute that makes you liable 27 for income taxes, which we now know doesn't even exist!
- 28 • Slavery. Remember that volunteering into the jurisdiction of the U.S. Tax court virtually guarantees that you are 29 volunteering into federal slavery. When you are inside the federal zone, you are inside of a totalitarian monarchy where 30 the king (Congress/President) are false gods and you are one of their subjects/serfs.

31 The judge in U.S. Tax Court laughs at people who expect their rights to be honored and respected, because he's not obligated
 32 to by law under 26 U.S.C. §2201(a)! Your lie to him about your citizenship status and filing a 1040 form, which is the wrong
 33 form, describing yourself as a “U.S. individual” (which is a “U.S. person” under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30)) at the top of the 34 form was the only thing he needed to know in order to conclude that you live in a federal territory not covered by the 35 Constitution and that you are a federal serf/slave! Shut up BOY, or we'll empty your pocket, throw you in federal prison,
 36 give you 40 lashes and send you to bed hungry without a blanket!

37 Later in section 6.9.4, we will talk about First Amendment violations of church rights by the IRS. We will show how the IRS
 38 violates freedom of speech and assembly by denying 501(c ) tax exemptions to religious organizations that are politically
 39 active. However, since the First Amendment doesn't apply within foreign countries, federal territories, and selected enclaves
 40 within the states not covered by the Constitution, then the IRS and the federal courts can legally silence those churches whose 41 members have incorrectly claimed that they are “U.S. citizens”, which we said in section 4.11.3 means that they have
 42 volunteered into the jurisdiction of the federal courts and have lied to the government that they reside inside the federal zone.

43 Some members of the legal profession like to contradict the content of this section by asserting that rights can be taxed and 44 they will cite some of the following Supreme Court Cases as their ammunition:

45 “[T]he laws of all civilized states recognize in every citizen the absolute right to his own earnings, and to the 46 enjoyment of his own property, and the increase thereof, during his life, except so far as the state may require 47 him to contribute his share for public expenses ...”
 48 [U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S. 625, 627 (1896) ]

49 “Taxes, which are but the means of distributing the burden of the cost of government, are commonly levied on 50 property or its use, but they may likewise be laid on the exercise of personal rights and privileges.” [Carmichael
 51 v. Southern Coal & Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495, 508 (1937)]

1 "Government in casting about for proper subjects of taxation is not confined by the traditional classification of
2 interests or estates. It may tax, not only ownership, but any right or privilege that is a constituent of ownership."
3 [Burnett v. Wells, 289 U.S. 670 (1933)]

4 "However absolute the right of an individual may be, it is still in the nature of that right, that it must bear a
5 portion of the public burdens; and that portion must be determined by the legislature."
6 [Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514, 563 (1830)]

7 The above cases, for instance, are cited by the following at the address below as proof that income taxes do not violate rights:

Anti-Tax Protester, Brian Rookyard
http://www.geocities.com/b\_rookard/letters.html

8 What all of the above cases have in common is that all of the entities who were being taxed were in receipt of government
9 privileges and/or made some kind of voluntary choice to accept those privileges. We have analyzed each of these cites below
10 for your benefit:

- 11 • U.S. v. Perkins, 163 U.S. 625, 627 (1896): This case was about a state trying to tax the inheritance of a man who 12 died within its jurisdiction and who bequeathed his entire estate to the United States Government. The court ruled
13 that the state had a right to tax the inheritance. The court ruled that the tax was on the deceased and the right of 14 transfer of his property, and not upon the recipient, which in this case was the United States government. The case
15 had nothing to do with personal income taxes and is therefore irrelevant to the theme of this book. The constitution
16 does not forbid inheritance taxes, nor does it even mention them, and we don't dispute anywhere in this book that 17 inheritance taxes are authorized.
- 18 • Carmichael v. Southern Coal & Coke Co., 301 U.S. 495, 508 (1937): This case was filed by two corporations
19 against the government to stop it from levying an unemployment tax against them. Corporations don't have rights,
20 only government granted privileges. The Supreme Court ruled against the corporations and in favor of the state, as 21 they should have. Private rights of a private business that was not a corporation were not in question in this case.
22 Neither were the private rights of a natural person in question.
- 23 • Burnett v. Wells, 289 U.S. 670 (1933): This case dealt with whether life insurance on the creator of a trust which 24 was paid for by the trust he created is considered taxable income, given that the recipient was already a "taxpayer"
25 for his other income and was already filing returns on his other income. Since he was already a "taxpayer" and was 26 therefore "liable" for taxes on income, then it's silly to argue that certain of his income was taxable while other
27 income wasn't. By claiming to be a "taxpayer", his goose was cooked and he gave the government an opportunity
28 to tax whatever he made. This case has no relationship to the audience for this book, which is entirely and only
29 "nontaxpayers". This case doesn't decide anything as it relates to "nontaxpayers". Since Mr. Burnett was a
30 "taxpayer" and identified himself as such by filing a return, he had no rights and essentially admitting to being 31 domiciled in the federal zone and being a "public officer" of the United States government. Saying that the 32 government can tax rights by using as an example a natural person who put himself in the unfortunate position of 33 having no rights is ridiculous.
- 34 • Providence Bank v. Billings, 29 U.S. 514, 563 (1830): This case concerned a state-chartered banking corporation
35 in Rhode Island that sought to avoid taxation by a state. Corporations are creatures of law in receipt of government
36 privileges, and must submit to taxation by the government or state that created them, and the Supreme Court agreed.

37 Can you see the kind of deception that Mr. Rookyard attempted on his unsuspecting readers? He accuses tax honesty
38 advocates of deception all the time but he is guilty of worse deception. In fact, the hypothesis that the government may not 39 tax the exercise of rights of natural persons remains intact, since he has given no concrete examples of the government's 40 ability to tax a natural person who was a "nontaxpayer", who was not in receipt of privileges, and who therefore had rights.

41 The one thing we want to emphasize from this section is that yes, the exercise of rights of a natural person can be taxed, but 42 only if these rights have been relinquished through an informed, voluntary choice of a natural person. That informed choice
43 manifests itself in one of two ways:

- 44 1. The choice of volunteering or consenting to become a "taxpayer" who is therefore "liable" for tax.
- 45 2. The choice to become part of a group of people who have formed a corporation or partnership in receipt of government 46 privileges.

1 The other thing we want to emphasize is that businesses, corporations, partnerships, and trusts are not natural persons and
2 therefore neither they nor the people who function within them have rights relative to the entity they are part of. For instance,
3 neither a corporation nor its officers have a Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate the corporation if they are put on the
4 stand and asked questions about the conduct of the corporation. The only basis they have to refuse to answer under the Fifth
5 Amendment is if they personally were involved in criminal activity. Likewise, a corporation or business does not have a First
6 Amendment right of free speech or freedom of religion.

7 On the basis that income taxes violate all of the constitutional provisions mentioned in this section in the context of natural
8 persons (biological people), Americans domiciled in states of the Union (but NOT in the federal zone) have a massive case
9 against the federal government for fraud, extortion, and racketeering, and a class action lawsuit for these issues is long 10 overdue!

11 5.6.19 The Internal Revenue Code was Repealed in 1939 and we have no tax law

12 What? You didn't know that the Internal Revenue Code was repealed in 1939? Well maybe you should write your 13 Congressman and ask him! We didn't know either until we started to read the Internal Revenue Code for ourselves. Below
14 is the section of the REAL statute that accomplished this:

15 Internal Revenue Code of 1939, Chapter 2, 53 Stat 1

16 Sec. 4. Repeal and Savings Provisions.—(a) The Internal Revenue Title, as hereinafter set forth, is intended to 17 include all general laws of the United States and parts of such laws, relating exclusively to internal revenue, in 18 force on the 2d day of January 1939 (1) of a permanent nature and (2) of a temporary nature if embraced in 19 said Internal Revenue Title. In furtherance of that purpose, all such laws and parts of laws codified herein, to 20 the extent they relate exclusively to internal revenue, are repealed, effective, except as provided in section 5, 21 on the day following the date of enactment of this act.

22 (b) Such repeal shall not affect any act done or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had
23 or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal, but all rights and liabilities under said acts shall 24 continue, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if said repeal had not been made; nor shall any office,
25 position, employment board, or committee, be abolished by such repeal, but the same shall continue under the 26 pertinent provisions of the Internal Revenue Title.

27 (c) All offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures incurred under any statute hereby repealed, may be
28 prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed.

29 Sec. 5. Continuance of Existing Law.—Any provision of law in force on the 2d day of January 1939
30 corresponding to a provision contained in the Internal Revenue Title shall remain in force until the
32 [Revenue Act of 1939, 53 Stat. 1, Section 4, emphasis added]

33 If you want to read this for yourself, the link is below:

34 <https://sedm.org/law-dvd/Federal/RevenueActs/Revenue%20Act%20of%201939.pdf>

35 Some people look at the above and try to argue the point that it was repealed. They will cite paragraph 4(b) above and say
36 that the repeal changed nothing. The reason for that paragraph is that for certain persons who had installment agreements
37 and existing liabilities under the old code, the government needed a way to continue their debts until after they were paid off
38 following the repeal. Likewise, there are no committees, employments, positions, etc established by the code so there is 39 nothing to continue. In fact, we have a letter from a Congressman indicating the entire IRS was NOT established by law, so
40 what is there to disestablish if the "code" is repealed?:

42 Paragraph 4(b) is therefore a red herring. These weasels are slippery and they don't want you to know the truth. What they 43 did was enact the "Title" but not the code within the Title. It is only enacted in the sense that it represents the Statutes at 44 Large from which it was derived, but it DOES NOT and cannot obligate anyone to do anything who does not live on federal 45 property unless they at least volunteer, as we pointed out earlier. The Congress and the Supreme Court both have said many 46 times that the income tax is an indirect excise tax, and all such excise taxes are avoidable by avoiding the activity that is 47 taxed.

1 Based on the above, the Internal Revenue Code of 1939 is not positive law and has been repealed. Every revision of the
 2 Internal Revenue Code since then, including the 1954 code, the 1986 code, etc, have all been "amendments" to this repealed
 3 code. How can you amend something that isn't an enacted positive law?

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: If you don't believe it was repealed, then please answer some questions for us:

1. Why would the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204 say that Title 26 is NOT enacted into positive law?
2. Since the IRS does not exist by the authority of any part of the I.R.C., then of what significance is it to say above that "nor shall any office, position, employment board, or committee, be abolished by such repeal, but the same shall continue under the pertinent provisions of the Internal Revenue Title."? The I.R.C. doesn't establish any committees, employments, offices, or positions whatsoever so this provision has not significance.

4 The 1939 code and all of its successors can therefore not have any effect on anyone except those in government by and for
 5 whom it was written. The phrase

6 "all rights and liabilities under said acts shall continue, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if said
 7 repeal had not been made".

8 is deliberately misleading. At this point in this chapter, we now know by now that there are not "liabilities" under I.R.C.,
 9 Subtitles A and C, and that the only natural person made "liable" for anything is in 26 U.S.C. §1461 is the paymaster for 10 Congressmen and the President. Therefore, no rights or liabilities of natural persons in the general public are affected by the 11 Internal Revenue Code since 1939, except for those who declare themselves to be any one of the following three things:

- 12 1. "employees", which are elected or appointed, of the United States government as defined in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c), 26
 13 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1.
- 14 2. "nonresident aliens" engaged in a "trade or business in the United States" as required by 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), 26
 15 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv). "Trade or business" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as the "functions of a public office", 16 and that public office is in the United States Government.
- 17 3. Those ignorant and mislead members of the general public who enter into "voluntary withholding agreements" with the 18 federal government using an IRS Form W-4 and thereby declare themselves to be "employees" of the federal government,
 19 who by implication are involved in a "trade or business within the United States government". Look at the upper left
 20 corner of the IRS Form W-4. It says "Employee Withholding Allowance Certificate".

21 We also learned earlier in the chapter that the IRS is not an "enforcement" agency, that there are not implementing regulations
 22 authorizing collection or enforcement of Subtitle A income taxes (see section 5.4.15 through 5.4.19), and that the revenues
 23 collected under Subtitle A are therefore donations and gifts to the United States government, which are defined in 31 U.S.C.
 24 §321(d). Consequently, the repeal of the code in 1939 meant that only government employees could be affected by it from 25 that point forward, and that no one else's rights could be affected domiciled in states of the Union. The IRS had their "balls"
 26 chopped off at that point, so why are they still with us?

27 Sometimes, the truth about our tax system can be stranger than fiction, folks! This is so because money is the root of all evil,
 28 and the great lengths that politicians will go to steal your money astounds the average person when they find out about it.

29 5.6.20 Use of the Term "State" in Defining State Taxing Jurisdiction

30 Most state constitutions do not allow residents of the state to be liable for state income taxes because of the constraints
 31 imposed by the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution under the Fourteenth Amendment. This creates a difficult
 32 situation for the states in collecting income taxes. The legislators at the state level had to play the same kind of word games
 33 as the federal government to fool natural persons who are state residents into thinking they were liable for state income taxes.
 34 How did they do it? They played with the definition of the word "State" in their tax codes!

35 For the sake of comparison, we begin by crafting a definition of "State" which is deliberately designed to create absolutely
 36 no doubt or ambiguity about its meaning:

37 For the sole purpose of establishing a benchmark of clarity, the term "State" means any one of the 50 States of 38 the Union, the District of Columbia, the territories and possessions belonging to the Congress, and the federal 39 enclaves lawfully ceded to the Congress by any of the 50 States of the Union.

1 Now, compare this benchmark with the various definitions of the word "State" that are found in Black's Law Dictionary and
 2 in the Internal Revenue Code. Black's is a good place to start, because it clearly defines two different kinds of "states". The
 3 first kind of state defines a member of the Union, i.e., one of the 50 Union states which are united by and under the U.S.
 4 Constitution:

5 *The section of territory occupied by one of the United States***. One of the component commonwealths or states*
 6 of the United States of America.

7 [emphasis added]

8 The second kind of state defines a federal state, which is entirely different from a member of the Union:

9 *Any state of the United States**, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory*
 10 or possession subject to the legislative authority of the United States. Uniform Probate Code, Section 1-201(40).

11 [emphasis added]

12 The term "State" is also defined in 4 U.S.C. §§105-113 as part of the Buck Act of 1940. 4 U.S.C. §110(d) defines "State"
 13 as follows:

14 TITLE 4 - FLAG AND SEAL, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, AND THE STATES
 15 CHAPTER 4 - THE STATES
 16 Sec. 110 Definitions

17 (d) The term "State" includes any Territory or possession of the United States.

18 Notice carefully that a state of the Union is not defined as being "subject to the legislative authority of the United States"
 19 because states are sovereign. Also, be aware that there are several different definitions of "State" in the IRC, depending on 20 the context. One of the most important of these is found in a chapter specifically dedicated to providing definitions, that is,
 21 Chapter 79 (not exactly the front of the book). To de-code the Code, read it backwards! In this chapter of definitions, we 22 find the following:

23 When used in this title, where not otherwise distinctly expressed or manifestly incompatible with the intent thereof
 24 -- ...

25 (10) State. -- The term "State" shall be construed to include the District of Columbia, where such 26 construction is necessary to carry out provisions of this title.

28 [emphasis added]

29 Already, it is obvious that this definition leaves much to be debated because it is ambiguous and it is not nearly as clear as 30 our "established benchmark of clarity" (which will be engraved in marble a week from Tuesday). Does the definition restrict 31 the term "State" to mean only the District of Columbia? Or does it expand the term "State" to mean the District of Columbia
 32 in addition to the 50 States of the Union? And how do we decide? We would argue the that confusion
 33 created by this definition on the part of the authors in Congress is deliberate!

34 The California Revenue and Taxation Code (R&TC) capitalizes on this confusion by introducing a similar definition of the 35 term "State" that is consistent with the one above but is more clear:

36 17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
 37 [California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 17018]

38 [which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal enclaves within those states]

39 You can read the above for yourself at:

40 [http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/codes\_displayText.xhtml?lawCode=RTC&division=2.&title=&part=10.&chapter=1.
 41 &article=](http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/codes_displayText.xhtml?lawCode=RTC&division=2.&title=&part=10.&chapter=1.&article=)

1 This definition basically says that “State” means federal enclaves within the borders of the state. We only present California
2 law here as an example, but most states do the same thing in their tax code as California with their definition of “State”.

3 Why does the definition of “State” matter? Because California, it turns out, only taxes nonresidents of California!
4 California’s Franchise Tax Board Form 590, the Withholding Exemption Certificate, says:

5 I certify that for the reasons checked below, the entity or individual named on this form is exempt from California
6 income tax withholding requirements on payment(s) made to the entity or individual. Read the following carefully
7 and check the box that applies to the vendor/payee:

8 Individuals—Certification of Residency

9 I am a resident of California and I reside at the address shown above. If I become a nonresident at any time, I
10 will promptly inform the withholding agent. See instructions for Form 590. General Information D. for the 11 definition of resident.

12 B. Law

13 R&TC Section 18662 and the related regulations require withholding of income or franchise tax on payments
14 of California source income made to nonresidents of this state.

15 So you only pay income tax if you are a nonresident of California. But how do they fool residents of California into declaring
16 they are nonresidents or have income as a nonresident? They do it with the word “State”. On line 12 of the California form
17 540 income tax return, the state companion to the 1040, they state:

18 “12. State income”.

19 Why didn’t they just put “income” on this line, you might ask? The answer is that they wanted to fool you! So what they 20 are saying is that the income appearing on line 12 is income originating from within federal enclaves within California! If 21 you put anything other than zero on this line, you are admitting that you:

- 22 1. Are a nonresident of California because you live in a federal enclave within the state.
- 23 2. Have income from within that federal enclave within the state.
- 24 3. Because you live within that enclave, you have no Constitutional rights under the Fourteenth Amendment because the 25 Fourteenth Amendment only applies on nonfederal land within the states.
- 26 4. Without Constitutional rights, you are liable for paying income taxes and can’t claim the Fifth Amendment protections 27 of due process and the privilege of not incriminating yourself.

28 The Federal government has cooperated with them in the above fraud by passing what is called the Assimilated Crimes Act,
29 found in 18 U.S.C. §13. Subsection (a) of this section of the federal criminal code at first glance would appear attempt to 30 apply prevailing state law inside of federal enclaves within States. However, the definition of “State” used in that section
31 actually means federal States and not the sovereign 50 Union states or areas within those states outside of federal jurisdiction.
32 Otherwise, the Separation of Powers Doctrine would be nullified. You can read more about this trickery earlier in section 33 5.2.14.

34 When you expose this fraud for what it is on your state tax return as we have and call the bluff of your state taxing authority,
35 they will respond with an automated letter that has all kinds of court case cites, but if you look at the cites closely, they are
36 almost entirely from federal courts. They couldn’t cite any cases from their own state courts even if they wanted to, because 37 they know that the federal zone is outside of their territorial jurisdiction and if you are paying income taxes, you by implication
38 reside there and are a nonresident of your state! As we pointed out in section 5.2.14, the states are “foreign countries” and 39 “foreign states” with respect to the federal government, which means that your state in effect is admitting in their responsive
40 letter that you reside inside of the federal zone by using federal courts as their authority! Leave it to a slimy state tax lawyer
41 to think up a scheme and a scam like this! This is a conspiracy against rights if we ever saw one and it should have been 42 exposed on a massive scale a long time ago.

43 5.6.21 Why you aren’t an “exempt” individual

44 Below is a definition of “exempt” from Black’s Law Dictionary:

The Great  IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

1           “Exempt. To release, discharge, waive, relieve from liability. To relieve, excuse, or set free from a duty or service
2 imposed upon the general class to which the individual exempted belongs; as to exempt from military service. [
3 . . .] See also Exemption; Exemption laws.”
4 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 571]

5 “Exempt individuals” are statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(5).

6           TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
7           Sec. 7701. - Definitions

8           (b)(5) Exempt individual defined

9           For purposes of this subsection –

10           (A) In general

11           An individual is an exempt individual for any day if, for such day, such individual is -

- 12                   (i) a foreign government-related individual,
13                   (ii) a teacher or trainee,
14                   (iii) a student, or
15                   (iv) a professional athlete who is temporarily in the United States to compete in a charitable sports
16                   event described in section 274(l)(1)(B).

17           (B) Foreign government-related individual

18           The term “foreign government-related individual” means any individual temporarily present in the United States
19 by reason of -

- 20                   (i) diplomatic status, or a visa which the Secretary (after consultation with the Secretary of State)
21                   determines represents full-time diplomatic or consular status for purposes of this subsection, 22                   (ii) being a full-time employee of an international organization, or 23                   (iii) being a member of the immediate family of an individual described in clause (i) or (ii).

24           (C) Teacher or trainee

25           The term “teacher or trainee” means any individual -

- 26                   (i) who is temporarily present in the United States under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of section 101(15)
27                   of the Immigration and Nationality Act (other than as a student), and 28                   (ii) who substantially complies with the requirements for being so present.

29           (D) Student

30           The term “student” means any individual -

- 31                   (i) who is temporarily present in the United States -
32                   (I) under subparagraph (F) or (M) of section 101(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, or 33                   (II) as a student under subparagraph (J) or (Q) of such section 101(15), and (ii) who substantially
34                   complies with the requirements for being so present.

35           (E) Special rules for teachers, trainees, and students

36                   (i) Limitation on teachers and trainees

37                   An individual shall not be treated as an exempt individual by reason of clause (ii) of subparagraph
38                   (A) for the current year if, for any 2 calendar years during the preceding 6 calendar years, such person
39                   was an exempt person under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A). In the case of an individual all of 40                   whose compensation is described in section 872(b)(3), the preceding sentence shall be applied by 41                   substituting “4 calendar years” for “2 calendar years”.

42                   (ii) Limitation on students

43                   For any calendar year after the 5th calendar year for which an individual was an exempt individual
44                   under clause (ii) or (iii) of subparagraph (A), such individual shall not be treated as an exempt
45                   individual by reason of clause (iii) of subparagraph (A), unless such individual establishes to the 46                   satisfaction of the Secretary that such individual does not intend to permanently reside in the United 47                   States and that such individual meets the requirements of subparagraph (D)(ii).

49 To be “exempt”, one must first be otherwise liable in general for something and then lose the liability by virtue of meeting
50 some special provision of the I.R.C. listed above. Most people are not “exempt individuals” because they do not meet any 51 of the above criteria, and only those who are “exempt” should be filling out the word “EXEMPT” on an IRS Form W-4. As 52 we point out repeatedly throughout this book and especially the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008, the W-4, in 53 fact, is the WRONG form to be using to stop withholding for most Americans. The correct form is the W-8BEN form, which 54 may be used by “nationals” and “non-resident non-persons”. The form should be modified to add to Block 3 “non-resident 55 non-person non-taxpayers”. We showed earlier in section 5.6.13 and following that this is the status of Americans born in 56 states of the Union and living and working outside of federal jurisdiction.

57 Being an “exempt individual” and being an “nontaxpayer” are entirely different things that are not equivalent. The term
58 “nontaxpayer” is not even defined in the Internal Revenue Code or the legal dictionary and is only defined by the courts, but 59 it means someone who is not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code because he or she does not come under 60 its provisions. This condition may be caused by any one of the following factors and possibly others not listed:

1. One is a “nonresident” of the jurisdiction, meaning that he is not subject to the territorial jurisdiction of the law or statute.
2. One is not engaged in any excise taxable activity identified in the code and has no earnings that would “effectively connect” them to the I.R.C. Recall that 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) says that only income of “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” which is “effectively connected with a trade or business” is subject to the code. Since “trade or business” is statutorily defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as the “functions of a public office”, if one is not engaged in a public office, is not a federal corporation involved in interstate or foreign commerce coming under the provisions of Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution, then one is not the proper subject of the code.
3. One is not the subject of the code by virtue of a Constitution restriction on the taxing power of Congress. For instance, Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 specifically state that the federal government has no power to institute direct taxes on anything other than a State, and may not directly tax individuals. If one is an individual domiciled in a state of the Union, then one is not the proper subject of any direct federal tax, and this includes all of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.

Of the two statuses, “exempt” and “nontaxpayer”, the preferable one to have is that of a “nontaxpayer”, which is a person not subject to the jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code at all. For instance, people domiciled in China are all “nontaxpayers” relative to the Internal Revenue Code. As soon as they either get involved in importing goods into the country, which is foreign commerce, or hold a “public office” in the United States government for compensation, then they become subject to federal jurisdiction because they involved themselves in an excise taxable privileged activity. Likewise, a person who lives in California is a “nonresident” and an “alien” with respect to an adjacent state such as Nevada, and therefore is a “nontaxpayer” with respect to Nevada state tax laws.

The pamphlet available below on our website contains a detailed rebuttal to most of the false statements and propaganda you are likely to hear from the IRS. In an effort to conserve space, we have not included it in this book. If you are writing a representative of the IRS to complain about the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code, you may wish to send this document and ask them to rebut the rebuttal:

5.7.3 Rebutted Version of Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A entitled “Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax”

The pamphlet available below on our website contains a detailed rebuttal to the Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A entitled Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax. If you write your Congressman to complain about the illegal activities of the IRS, in many cases, you will receive the original copy of this report. It is filled with errors and propaganda that we believe you should know about. If you are writing your Congressman or political representative to complain about the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code, you might want to send them this rebutted report and ask them to rebut it:

5.7.4 Rebutted Version of Dan Evans "Tax Resister FAQ"

The pamphlet available below on our website contains a detailed rebuttal to most of the false statements and propaganda you are likely to hear from members of the legal profession concerning the illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code. Mr. Evans is an asset protection attorney. If you are dealing with a state-licensed tax professional, you may want to present him with this document and ask him to rebut the rebuttal.

5.7.5 The Irwin Schiff Position

There are many different approaches to rid oneself of income taxes illegally enforced by the IRS. The most popular approach by far as of the writing of this book is the Irwin Schiff approach. Mr. Schiff has been de-taxing people since 1985, which is longer than most other people in the freedom movement. During that time, he has perfected his approach to make many of his techniques very effective. His overall approach has some serious flaws that have drawn warranted government ire, but there is still much that we can learn from his approach. We'll give a summary of his approach in this section to show you how what we have learned elsewhere in this book applies to the practical aspects of untaxing yourself. We have attended his seminars and are impressed with the thoroughness of his approach but we don't recommend his zero return method because he uses the wrong form, which is the 1040 instead of the 1040NR. You are also encouraged to visit his website at:

The Irwin Schiff approach relies on the following basic elements:

| 1.1                                  | The IRS has no delegated authority to do anything! The 1954 code removed all references to the Commissioner of the IRS from the 1939 code and replaced these references with the Secretary of the Treasury.                                           | Read the code yourself or search it electronically online at http://www4.law.cornell.edu/uscode/ . You will not find a single reference anywhere giving the IRS authority to do anything . There are also NO delegation of authority orders from the Secretary of the Treasury to the IRS delegating that authority.                                                                                                                             |

| 2.1                                  | We don't file tax returns, we file "confessions". Since the constitution says that we can't be compelled to testify against ourself under the Fifth Amendment, then we can't be compelled to file tax returns or assess ourself.                      | Justice Hugo Black declared in U.S. v. Kahriger, 345 U.S. 22 (1953) that, "The United States has a system of taxation by confession." (Italics added). Since the courts are corrupt, however, Irwin recommends filing zero returns to avoid "Willful Failure to File" convictions under 26 U.S.C. 7203. Doing so ensures that the clock starts on the statute of limitations so they can't go back indefinitely for taxes not paid (there is no statute of limitations for back taxes if you don't file). |
| 2.2                                  | "Income" means Corporate Profit according to the Supreme Court                                                                                                                                                                                        | Congress cannot either define statutorily or change the definition of "income". The Constitution is the only thing that can define it. The Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is an indirect excise tax on corporate profits . See section 5.6.5 earlier for an exhaustive treatment of this subject.                                                                                                                                                                          |

| 2.3                                              | We have no taxable "income" as defined by the Supreme Court.                                                                                                                                                                                    | Because natural persons or biological people can't have a "profit" and they aren't corporations, then they have no taxable income. Look at 26 U.S.C. §61 and you will find that it defines "gross income" without defining "income". You can't have "gross income" until you have "income".                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |

| 2.5                                              | Most state income taxes require a federal liability before there is a state liability. Therefore, if you file a federal return saying you have zero income, then you would be committing perjury to not do the same thing on your state return. | California is one example of this, but it also applies in New York and Texas and other states.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

It says "you must file a return or statement for any tax you are liable for." But there is NO LAW that makes you liable!The government tries to confuse people on this issue by throwing in the word "compliance" after the word "voluntary" to keep people in cognitive dissonance so they think they have to comply, but in fact, they aren't liable for any tax. | 3.2                                 | Since we have never been assessed as having anything other than zero income, then we can't be expected to pay any tax.                                                                                                                                                                                  | The IRS likes to try to drag people into tax court so the corrupt pseudo-judges there can extort your money. He has proven techniques to win in U.S. Tax Court as well.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 3.3                                 | The IRS must issue a "Notice and Demand" before it can attempt collection activity, including liens, levies, and seizures and it never issues a valid one.                                                                                                                                       | See 26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1. This regulation, however, does not have the force of law because it is not a legislative regulation and does not point to a statute for its authority. It exceeds the delegated authority of the IRS to issue such a notice and demand. | 3.4                                 | There is no law requiring us to keep records of income or expenses under Subtitles A and C income taxes. 26 U.S.C. Section 6001 says the Secretary of the Treasury must personally notify us of the requirement to keep records and absent a regulation requiring records, we aren't liable to do this. | 26 U.S.C. §6001 says:"Whenever in the judgment of the Secretary it is necessary, he may require any person, by notice served upon such person or by regulations, to make such returns, render such statements, or keep such records, as the Secretary deems sufficient to show whether or not such person is liable for tax under this title."There are not laws mentioning records under Subtitles A and C, even though the other subtitles have such requirements. | 4.2                                 | Collection activity requires a proper delegation order by the agent administering the code, and NO agents have enforcement or collection authority as indicated by their pocket commission.                                                                                                             | Agents must have enforcement ability and an "E" suffix on their badge in order to institute collections. See Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), [1.16.4]3.1 through [1.16.4] 3.2.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| 4.3                                 | We should at all times question authority of everyone we are dealing with at the IRS by insisting on seeing their pocket commission and their Delegation Orders.                                                                                                                                        | IRS agents routinely try to exceed their delegated authority in order to maximize their "productivity" (the amount of extorted assets) so that they can get raises and promotions. Read the Supreme Court case of Federal Crop Insurance v. Merrill , 332 U.S. 380-388 for the following quote:"Anyone entering into an arrangement with the government takes the risk of having accurately ascertained that he who purports to act for the government stays within the bounds of his authority, even though the agent himself may be unaware of the limitations upon his authority." |

| 4.4 | There are three types of regulations: legislative, interpretive, and procedural. Only legislative regulations have the force of law. Only those regulations that have a citation of a specific statute at the bottom are legislative and have the force of law. Most regulations that purport to try to enforce Subtitle A income taxes are not legislative regulations and do not have the force of law as indicted by the absence of a statutory citation at the bottom | Examples of regulations that are NOT legislative because they do NOT refer to a section of the Internal Revenue Code in the notes are:26 C.F.R. §301.6303-1 (Notice and Demand)26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1 (Levy and distraint)These are bogus or bootleg regulations that you must remind everyone do not have the force of law! |
| 4.5 | The Parallel Table of Authorities in the 26 C.F.R. indicates that the only regulations that authorize distraint are contained in 27 U.S.C. having to do with Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. There are NO regulations for any of the enforcement provisions of Subtitle F that point anywhere in Subtitles A and C, for instance.                                                                                                                                         | Look at the Parallel Table of Authorities for yourself at:http://www.access.gpo.gov/nara/cfr/parallel/parallel_table.html                                                                                                                                 |

1 Because we describe most of the above issues he raises elsewhere in this book and even in this chapter, we won't repeat them
2 here to keep the size of the book to a minimum. We did, however, want to summarize his position very succinctly to give
3 you a flavor for how the most popular untaxing advocate in the country approaches the problem. Based on the above
4 approaches, Mr. Schiff recommends to his thousands of students the annual filing of a "zero return" on an IRS Form 1040.
5 A zero return is one where everything on the return is zero except for the tax paid, and therefore, by filing a return you are
6 requesting everything back. Even if you have a nonzero number reported on the W-2's from your employer, the "income" is 7 zero because the Supreme Court defines "income" as corporate profit. Mr. Schiff is correct on this point, but what he fails to
8 realize is that anyone who works for the government works for a federal corporation as an "employee", and especially those
9 who file even the W-4 Exempt. As such, they earn "corporate profit" for the federal corporation, which is their "employer"
10 and the tax return is a "profit and loss statement" for what essentially amounts to a privileged federal business trust that is a
11 "public office" wholly owned by the national government, for which all "employees" are trustees and "public officers"
12 completely subject to the I.R.C. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/SSTrustIndenture.pdf>

13 Schiff describes his "zero return" approach in a book he publishes entitled The Federal Mafia: How the Government Illegally
14 Imposes and Unlawfully Collects Income Taxes, ISBN 0-930374-09-6 available from Freedom Books, Las Vegas, NV 89104;
15 702-385-6920 for $38. Mr. Schiff's tangles with the federal government have been numerous over the years, and his Mafia
16 book is a storyteller's perspective on his odyssey, which is quite interesting.

17 Mr. Schiff publishes an annual product called his "Schiff Reports" for $100 per year which is a series of audio cassettes that 18 contain excerpts from his lectures and seminars and which address selected topics. Each new Schiff report incorporates the 19 latest updates to his procedures based on lessons learned to that point. These reports are where you learn about his processes
20 and the practical aspects of how to deal with the IRS. He does not discuss processes in any of his books because he says they 21 are too dynamic. He therefore does not document or publish a description of his processes and procedures as we attempt to 22 do in Chapter 3 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008. Everything is in audio format and is not indexed, which 23 means that it may be more difficult than necessary to find the specific help that you need for your given situation.
24 Nevertheless, his materials are very good and we recommend them highly.

25 The weak point of Mr. Schiff's approach is that he thinks citizenship is irrelevant and unimportant and that it doesn't matter
26 what tax return or withholding form you file, so he says filing an IRS Form 1040 filled with zeros and a W-4 Exempt is fine.
27 This is a HUGE mistake. We instead use either a "not liable" or a one cent return and file an IRS Form 1040NREZ instead of a 1040 so that our return reflects our proper status as “non-resident non-persons” to the foreign jurisdiction known as the Internal Revenue Code. For our withholding forms, we use a modified version of the W-8BEN form. See:

About IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

We believe that the reason Mr. Schiff has gotten into so much trouble in the federal courts over the years most likely is because of what we perceive are the following weaknesses in his position which he doesn't seem inclined to want to fix:

1. He is obstinate, arrogant, and refuses to learn from the research of others or listen to anything they have to say. It is difficult to get a word in edge wise when he is in the same room with you.
2. Files form 1040, indicating that he is an “alien” domiciled inside the federal zone, which means he has no Constitutional rights. At the same time, he wonders why the federal courts disregard his Constitutional rights. We instead suggest filing the 1040NREZ. IRS Document 7130 says that the 1040 form is only for use by statutory “U.S. citizens and residents”, who collectively are “U.S. persons” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) who have a domicile in the federal zone. This needlessly subjects Schiff to the jurisdiction of what actually are foreign courts for a person domiciled in a state of the Union. Bad idea!
3. Doesn't know what a “nontaxpayer” is or doesn't declare himself to be a “nontaxpayer” as we discussed earlier in section 5.3.1. He therefore erroneously uses the Internal Revenue Code for his basis of claims against the U.S. government, never realizing that he should instead not be using any part of the IRC in his legal defense other than to prove he is a “nontaxpayer” and file a due process violation suit under 28 U.S.C. §1331 and 28 U.S.C. §1332, claiming “diversity of citizenship”. Instead, he never claims diversity of citizenship, creating a false presumption by the court that he is a “U.S. citizen”, which means he has no Constitutional rights. The lack of Constitutional rights then forms the basis for why the court can disregard his rights, so he just sits there and goes in circles, runs up legal fees unnecessarily, and litigates the wrong issues.
4. Erroneously thinks he is a statutory “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, which makes him a “U.S. person” domiciled in the federal zone and needlessly gives federal courts jurisdiction they wouldn't otherwise have over him. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) says that the law applicable to anyone is the law of their domicile, and if you have a domicile outside the federal zone, then you aren't subject to federal law, including the I.R.C.
5. Uses form W-4 Exempt to stop withholding, which constitutes an erroneous assertion that you are a “U.S. person” and a federal “employee”, which is a “public officer” of the United States government as defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) who is completely subject to the penalty provisions of the I.R.C. §6671(b) and 7343. We instead use one of the following two forms:
  - 5.1. Amended IRS Form W-8BEN, Form #04.202
<http://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/W-8BEN/AboutIRSFormW-8BEN.htm>
  - 5.2. Affidavit of Citizenship, Domicile, and Tax Status, Form #02.001
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
6. Doesn't think it's important to modify the perjury statement on the forms he files with the government to put him OUTSIDE of federal jurisdiction so that he is outside of the legislative and judicial jurisdiction of the government.
7. Attacks other freedom advocates for their weaknesses and doesn't complement them for the things they do right. This isolates him and makes him an easy government target for persecution. Without friends and a support network of like-minded freedom fighters, he is literally a sitting duck.
8. Schiff doesn't understand federal jurisdiction or any of the implications of the separation of powers doctrine. Consequently, he, like many others, does not endorse or agree with the Non-Resident Non-Person Position that is the foundation of this book. This incomplete understanding is the main reason the government keeps hauling him into court: Because his own behavior has given them false evidence on government forms he has submitted over the years which demonstrates that he has a domicile in the foreign jurisdiction of the federal government.
9. Doesn't understand that I.R.C., Subtitle A describes an indirect excise tax upon a “trade or business”. Therefore, he doesn't rebut information returns that create a prima facie presumption that his earnings are “taxable income”. This is a HUGE oversight. See:

Income Tax Withholding and Reporting Course, Form #12.004
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Other than the above defects, we believe that Mr. Schiff's ideas summarized above correct but terribly incomplete and inadequate and unusable for the average American. We follow his zero income tax return idea but use the 1040NR form instead, and use our own letter instead of the one he sells on CD-ROM to his students. Our example letter remedies the

1 weaknesses in his position above by emphasizing non-resident non-person status, rescission of signatures, and amendment
2 of government records to correctly reflect your "national" citizenship status. You can find that letter at:

3 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/IncomeTaxRtn/Federal/1040NRFedLetter.htm>

4 While at his seminar on October 7, 2001, we asked Mr. Schiff what he had to say about various other untaxing experts and
5 the various positions mentioned in this book and this chapter that they advocate. We have summarized his answers in the list
6 below for your benefit.

7 DISCLAIMER: The views expressed below are not those of the author, but those imputed to Mr. Irwin Schiff. We are 8 simply reporting what we heard for the purpose of expanding your education about freedom and taxes.

- 9 1. Avoid Bill Conklin. He is a fraud. All he wants is your money but he can't do anything for you. He'll charge you
10 $700 and then tell you that you should pay your taxes in full and ask for a refund, which you will never get. He 11 advises not filing W-4 Exempts and it's perfectly legal and proper to do so.
- 12 2. Otto Skinner is way off base. His books are ridiculous nonsense. He spends more time criticizing other untaxing 13 experts than he spends helping his own people with his flawed arguments.
- 14 3. The 861 argument advocated by Larken Rose is myopic and doesn't look at the big picture. It's way too complicated 15 for the average person to deal with and doesn't focus on the real issues of the voluntary nature of income taxes and the 16 limited authority and jurisdiction of the IRS.
- 17 4. Changing your citizenship, becoming a nonresident alien, or expatriating to avoid tax are unnecessary, because the law
18 very clearly says Citizens aren't liable for income taxes. The problem is not our citizenship or the tax code. The 19 Internal Revenue Code is fine and it clearly says most Americans born in and living within states of the Union aren't 20 liable for income taxes. The problem is the corruption in the federal courts and the legal profession. We agree with 21 him on that!
- 22 5. The biggest collection of criminals in the country sits on the federal bench. You are a fool if you trust a lawyer to 23 protect your rights when it comes to income taxes. Most lawyers are incompetent wimps who are only interested in 24 their own pocketbook. And after they get tired of practicing law, they promote themselves to the next highest level of 25 incompetence consistent with the Peter Principle and become corrupt federal judges!

26 5.7.6 The 861 "Source" Position

27 The "861 source" argument is a complicated argument used most often by those who profess themselves to be any of the 28 following:

- 29 1. Statutory "U.S.** citizens" under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c).
- 30 2. Statutory "residents" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A).
- 31 3. Statutory "taxpayers" as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(14) and 26 U.S.C. §1313.

32 . . . instead of their proper status as "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" (see discussion starting in section 5.6.13
33 later). Most often, this position is used by itself with no other supporting arguments or defenses by those who prefer to "live
34 within the code" (the I.R.C.) and keep their position simple and easy to deal with administratively. On a number of occasions,
35 it has embarrassed the IRS, who gave its proponents refunds. In the case of Dave Bossett, an accountant, he got several 36 thousand dollars back in refunds. The IRS was so embarrassed by the highly publicized event that they sued to get their 37 refund money back. Starting in February 2001, the IRS went on a rampage against those who promoted this argument,
38 including Thurston Bell, who now has an injunction against him, Larken Rose, who was convicted on failure to file in August
39 2005, and Dave Bossett, who had an injunction issued against him. As of 2005, federal courts have taken a dim view of those
40 who use this argument, even though not one case has actually dealt directly with the issues. Consequently, they are proceeding
41 under presumption and legislating from the bench on this issue to keep the dam from breaking.

42 The 861 position relies on 26 U.S.C. §861 and implementing regulations to show that "income" as legally defined from 43 "within the (federal) United States" and not associated with specific taxable activities or sources is not subject to tax. The 44 weakness of the 861 argument is that because the people who use it are simplistic in their legal approach, they most often
45 don't understand the following:

1. The effect of "domicile" on one's status and liability. See section 5.4.8 earlier, which has some VERY important information on this subject.
2. The separation of powers between the state and federal government and the affect this has on the legislative jurisdiction of the federal government within states of the Union.
3. The fact that the Internal Revenue Code is not "positive law", and therefore Subtitles A and C are irrelevant to those outside of exclusive/general federal jurisdiction. See section 5.4.4 and following.
4. The definition of words of art like "United States", or "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701 or in section 4.6.
5. "income" means corporate profit because Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes as we discussed earlier in section 5.6.5
6. The definitions of "employee", and "trade or business" found earlier in sections 3.12.1.5 or 3.12.1.22.
7. The very limited territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government and federal courts, which is limited to the federal zone for all matters relating to the Internal Revenue Code Subtitles A through C.
8. Their proper citizenship status as "nationals" or "state nationals" rather than "U.S. citizens", which we clarified earlier in chapter 4.
9. The lack of liability statutes under Subtitle A and no implementing regulations authorizing enforcement activity like penalties or collection. Consequently, the code can only be enforced against federal employees without implementing regulations, as shown in 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1). We explained this, for instance, earlier in sections 5.4.15, 5.4.17, and 5.4.18.
10. That I.R.C., Subtitle A is primarily a tax upon a "trade or business", and that most people end up owing money primarily because the forms that they file or are filed against them in most cases contain false information that creates a false presumption that they are "taxpayers". They don't understand, for instance, that these false reports must be corrected to remove the prima facie presumption that they are "taxpayers", and that life will be hell if they don't correct these false reports. See:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

In our own personal case, we avoid this argument because it is too complicated to defend and overlooks much more important issues like those above. Because of their relative ignorance (in most but not all cases), proponents of the 861 position therefore get trapped into committing fraud on their tax returns by incorrectly claiming that they are "U.S.** individuals", which is what it says at the top of the 1040 form they file, and they are tricked and confused by specious and downright incorrect arguments of the IRS that invalidate the 861 position. They also misrepresent their domicile status on the 1040 form they file by basically admitting that they live in the federal united States (see 28 U.S.C. §1746(2)). Their relative ignorance, in turn, needlessly subjects them to the jurisdiction of the federal courts, which then use their ignorance to financially and legally abuse and enslave them and deprive them of constitutional rights. This is the same failing of Irwin Schiff and his followers, because they also file form 1040 and claim to be statutory "U.S. citizens" and "U.S. Individuals". Remember that once you falsely conclude that you live inside the federal zone as 861 proponents do:

1. You lose your constitutional rights because constitutional rights don't apply to federal territories over which the U.S. is sovereign as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).
2. All of your earnings are classified as a "trade or business" under 26 U.S.C. §864(c)(3). See our article on the trade or business scam starting earlier in section 5.6.12.

The above considerations are why we said in Chapter 4 that you are making a BIG mistake to claim you are a "U.S.** citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401 or "resident" (alien), under 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A), because most people don't maintain a domicile in the federal zone. We know based on the definition of "United States" in 26 U.S.C. §7701 that Natural born persons born in the 50 Union states are born as "nationals" who are regarded as non-resident non-persons with respect to federal jurisdiction. Because of their ignorance, they then deceive the government into thinking that they are domiciliaries of the federal zone by getting a Social Security Number and claiming to be a statutory "U.S. citizen" on the SSA Form SS-5 they fill out. When they reach age 18, they complete the masochistic process of becoming a "U.S.** citizen" by filing their first IRS Form 1040, which is explained in 26 C.F.R. §1.871-10 as an "Election to treat their income as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States". This process is also described in IRS Publication 54 as "making a choice". In effect, however, they are telling their government that they live in the District of Columbia or other federal territory or enclave within the "federal zone", hold public office (see the definition of "trade or business" in section 3.12.1.22), and therefore are in receipt of government privileges and are accordingly liable for paying the communistic graduated income tax. This whole process is sheer fraud that anyone with minimal legal training and a little time surfing the web could easily figure out for themselves, like we did.

1 Some tax freedom advocates like Lynne Meredith (author of Vultures in Eagles Clothing) claim that the 861 argument isn't
 2 even relevant unless and until we declare our proper status as "non-resident non-persons", and we agree with her! Why?
 3 Because as "U.S.** citizens" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, we have no constitutional rights, and filing the 1040 form amounts to an
 4 admission that we have a domicile in the federal zone and are subject to the sovereignty of the U.S. government. Without
 5 rights or Constitutional protections, are taxable sources or due process protections under the Bill of Rights even relevant?
 6 Definitely not!

7 The 861 position was first popularized by Save-A-Patriot Fellowship (<http://www.save-a-patriot.org/>). Rumor has it that it
 8 was discovered by Thurston Bell, who then left Save-A-Patriot Fellowship to join Taxgate, John Feld
 9 (<http://www.taxgate.com/>). He later left Taxgate to start his own de-taxing business called the National Institute for Taxpayer
 10 Education (NITE) at <http://www.nite.org/>. That business is now defunct and has been illegally shut down by a corrupted
 11 judge in an act of obstruction of justice. The 861 position most recently has been championed by a fellow named Larken
 12 Rose, whose name you may recognize from earlier sections of this book. Larken maintains a website called
 13 TaxableIncome.net (<http://www.taxableincome.net/>). Larken has also been affiliated with the We The People group
 14 (<http://www.givemeliberty.org>) and has appeared at Congressional Hearings on the subject of taxation along with We the 15 People Representative Bob Schulz. In about June of 2002, Larken began selling a fine non-profit video he produced titled 16 Theft By Deception that very clearly explains the 861 position in a way that the average American can understand. The video
 17 is available at <http://www.theft-by-deception.com> at a price of $20, which is a very good bargain and it makes an excellent
 18 defense against willful failure to file. We bought a copy for use as a defense of our beliefs in court. Larken has been careful
 19 to stay out of the federal cross-hairs by avoiding giving legal advice or telling people how to stop paying taxes, and that is
 20 one of the main reasons he is still around after all these years while all of his compatriots were shut down.

21 We have prepared a series of deposition questions that focus on the 861 position for use in an administrative due process
 22 hearing or an IRS deposition. You can use this series of questions to reveal the truth to the IRS and defeat most of their bogus
 23 arguments. These questions are derived from the We The People Truth in Taxation Hearing Questions. We have expanded 24 the original questions considerably to make them more potent. These questions are found at:

Tax Deposition Questions, Family Guardian Fellowship

25 Refer to section 11 entitled "Taxable 'Sources'" in the above deposition. This part of the 861 position questions may be

28 5.7.6.1 Introduction and definitions

29 Recall from section 5.6.5 earlier that "income" is defined as corporate profit. This is a direct consequence of the fact that 30 Title 26 Subtitle A revenues are indirect excise taxes on federal privileges within the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S.
 31 government, which is the federal zone. The Congress and especially the IRS have a vested interest in hiding these critical
 32 facts from the average American. The only way they could hide these facts was to obfuscate the tax code over the years to 33 obscure the truth. We talk about how they did it later in Chapter 6, sections 6.7 and 6.8 and their subsections. Most of this
 34 obfuscation occurs in the regulations, which are written by the Secretary of the Treasury, who incidentally has no delegated
 35 authority to legislate by enlarging the scope of the statutes to illegally expand their jurisdiction. The Secretary, however, has 36 done his very best over the years to confuse the regulations he is responsible to write and has tried to systematically scare
 37 people away from reading the regulations associated with 26 U.S.C. §861, because they reveal the truth about the very limited
 38 nature of Subtitle A income taxes. The federal circuit courts have also colluded in this fraud by sanctioning those who focus
 39 their litigation on the nature of income taxes as indirect excise taxes. In effect, the courts have repeatedly avoided ruling on 40 which of the five constitutional taxes that the income tax is from in section 5.1. We will describe how they continue to do
 41 this later in section 6.6 and its subsections.

42 The key to unraveling the fraud is to realize that Subtitle A federal income taxes are and always have been indirect excise
 43 taxes on federal corporate privileges according to the U.S. Supreme Court. Excise taxes are always tied to taxable activities,
 44 which are also called "sources" in the regulations under section 861. The people who lose the 861 position argument with 45 the IRS usually don't understand this simple fact. Once we know that Subtitle A income taxes are indirect excise taxes, we 46 also know that the tax is on privileged taxable "sources" or "activities", as they are called in the regulations under 26 U.S.C.
 47 §861. These privileged activities are associated with "operative sections" and "statutory groupings" of the code, which are

1 identified in the regulations as corporate activities under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1), to include mainly profit of Domestic
2 International Sales Corporations (DISC) or Foreign International Sales Corporations (FSC).

3 To fully understand and use the 861 position, you must review older versions of the Internal Revenue Code to show how the 4 truth has been carefully obscured and hidden by the government over the years. Earlier versions of the law were written
5 much more clearly to show the truth. The law still tells the truth, but it has been obfuscated over the years to conceal and
6 confuse the truth. This is especially true of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, which is the main regulation upon which the 861 position is
7 based. This regulation especially has been considerably obfuscated over the years to hide the truth from the average American
8 and illegally expand the perceived jurisdiction of Subtitle A federal income taxes. Regulation 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 has been 9 obfuscated, for instance, with needless confusing terms and definitions and the inclusion of an unnecessary procedure that
10 shows how to compute taxable income. Even the title of the section has also been disguised by the government to hide what 11 it is to be used for. Those who know the law, however, also know that titles of code sections have no legislative effect or 12 significance under 26 U.S.C. §7806(b).

13 Some devious opponents of the 861 position such as IRS agents like to point to the title of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2), which
14 says "Allocation and apportionment of deductions in general", and say that the regulation is only to be used for calculating
15 deductions and not for identifying proper "sources" of taxable gross income. This position, however, is simply frivolous and 16 false, because it would be meaningless to group deductions by taxable source or activity if we aren't going to identify what
17 a taxable source or activity is and the amount of taxable gross income from each source! It is also frivolous to give any 18 credence at all to the title of any section of the code or regulations as we said earlier, because 26 U.S.C. §7806(b) specifically 19 says that section titles and tables of contents don't mean anything from a legal perspective.

20 Before we launch into an explanation of the 861 position, some critical definitions are in order for the enlightenment of the 21 reader. Most of the terms below are used in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8:

22 Table 5-78: 861 Position Definitions

The amount of a deduction applicable to a specific "class of gross income" cannot exceed the gross income, so that the net taxable income will never be less than zero.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(b)(1) |                                                              |

1 5.7.6.2 The Basics of the Federal Law

2 The laws enacted by Congress through the legislative process are compiled into statutes in the 50 "Titles" of the United
3 States Code. (Each "Title" deals with a category of law, and Title 26 is the federal tax title, often called the "Internal Revenue
4 Code.") A federal agency then has the duty (assigned by Congress) to implement and enforce the statutes by writing and
5 publishing regulations, which explain that agency's interpretation of the statutes, as well as setting the rules which govern
6 how the agency will enforce the statutes. The regulations, when published in the Federal Register, are the official notice to the public of what the law requires, and are binding on the federal agencies (including the IRS). For federal taxes, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to write such regulations.

*“Sec. 7805. Rules and regulations
(a) Authorization - ... the Secretary [of the Treasury] shall prescribe all needful rules and regulations for the enforcement of this title [Title 26]...” [26 U.S.C. §7805]*

(The citation “26 U.S.C. §7805” refers to Section 7805 of the statutes of Title 26, with “USC” meaning “United States Code.” The symbol “§” means “section.” Citations of regulations are similar, but contain “CFR” instead, meaning “Code of Federal Regulations.”)

Section 1 of the Title 26 statutes imposes the “income tax” in five different categories (unmarried people, married people filing jointly, etc.). In each case, the wording reads “there is hereby imposed on the taxable income of...” The law generally defines “taxable income” in the following section of the statutes:

(a) In general - ...the term “taxable income” means gross income minus the deductions allowed by this chapter...” [26 U.S.C. §63]*

In other words, when someone determines his “gross income,” and then subtracts all allowable deductions, the remainder is “taxable income.” (So for income to be “taxable income,” it must first be “gross income.”) The following section of the statutes gives a general definition of “gross income”:

*“Sec. 61. Gross income defined
(a) General definition - ... gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:
(1) Compensation for services...;
(2) Gross income derived from business;
(3) Gains derived from dealings in property;
(4) Interest;
(5) Rents;
(6) Royalties;
(7) Dividends;... [more items listed]” [26 U.S.C. §61]*

This is the point at which many tax “experts” err, either by assuming that the “items” of income listed constitute “sources” of income, or by assuming that “from whatever source derived” means that all of the “items” of income listed, regardless of where they come from, are subject to the “income tax.” Both of these assumptions are provably incorrect and even the Supreme Court agrees:

*“The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467, 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775.”

The difference and relationship between “items” and “sources” will be explained below.

5.7.6.3 English vs. Legalese

In our system of written law, Congress may use a term to mean almost anything, as long as the law itself defines that meaning. When the written law explains the meaning of a term used in the law, standard English usage becomes irrelevant. For example, by the definition in 26 U.S.C. § 7701(a)(1), the term “person” includes estates, companies and corporations. While no one would call Walmart a “person” in everyday conversation, Walmart is a “person” under federal tax code. The legal use of a term is often significantly different from basic English, and therefore reading one section of the law alone can be very misleading.

As a good example, 26 U.S.C. §5841 states that “[t]he Secretary [of the Treasury] shall maintain a central registry of all firearms in the United States which are not in the possession or under the control of the United States.” The law has a far more limited application than this section by itself would seem to imply. In 26 U.S.C. §5845(a) it is made clear that the term

1 “firearm” in these sections does not include the majority of rifles and handguns (while the term “firearm” in basic English
 2 obviously would), but does include poison gas, silencers and land mines. The average American reading the law will naturally
 3 tend to assume that he already knows what the words in the law mean, and may have difficulty accepting that the legal
 4 meaning of the words used in the law may bear little or no resemblance to the meaning that those words have in common
 5 English. For example, reading the phrase “all firearms” in Section 5841 in a way that excludes most rifles and handguns is 6 contrary to instinctive reading comprehension. (But any lawyer reviewing Sections 5841 and 5845 would confirm that such
 7 a reading would be absolutely correct.)

Reading one section of the law without being aware of the legal definitions of the words being used can give an entirely incorrect impression about the application of the law.

8 As demonstrated, sometimes the apparent meaning of a simple phrase in the law is very different from the legal meaning.
 9 The “income tax” is imposed on “income from whatever source derived.” If the law did not explain what constitutes “sources
 10 of income,” then the law would be interpreted using basic English. However, the law does explain what the term means, and 11 therefore standard English usage is irrelevant.

12 5.7.6.4 Sources of Income

13 Recall in our previous discussion that in the case of United States v. Burke, 504 U.S. 229, 119 L.Ed.2d. 34, 112 S.Ct. 1867
 14 (1992), the Supreme Court ruled that “gross income” that was to be taxed had to come from a “source”. Why? Because 15 otherwise the income tax code would be so broad as to tax EVERYONE in the world! Federal government income taxes
 16 are imposed on government sources (taxable activities) within specific geographical boundaries, and not the income itself.
 17 per United States v. Burke. Since the income tax is an indirect excise tax as ruled by the U.S. Supreme Court, then the income
 18 received is just a way to compute the amount of tax but the tax itself is on some taxable activity within a geographic
 19 government jurisdiction. Clearly, there has to be some section of the Internal Revenue Code that ties the income taxes we 20 pay to some geographical boundary and taxable activity, or the code would be “void for vagueness” as we point out later in 21 section 5.10 and following. The sections of the code that identify such privileged “taxable activities” are called “operative 22 sections” in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1). This section deals with that subject.

23 There is often a lot of confusion in people’s mind over the significance of the word “source” that we’d like to clear up before
 24 we go on. Therefore we’d like to refine the use of the term before continuing on with an explanation of specific “sources”.
 25 Merriam Webster Dictionary of Law defines “source” as follows:

26 source
 27 1: a point of origin
 28 Example: the source of the conflict

29 There are actually two uses of the word “source” in the Internal Revenue Code. “Source” is used to describe a TAX source
 30 (a source for government revenue) in 26 U.S.C. §861, the 16th Amendment, and the IRS regulations (26 C.F.R. §1.861) we 31 discuss subsequently. Revenue or tax “sources” for the government are always tied to a territorial jurisdiction and the 32 occurrence of a specific privileged taxable activity or situation (called a “situs”). With all excise taxes, the occurrence of a
 33 privileged taxable activity within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing authority creates a situs (or situation or government 34 right) for taxation and we already know based on our earlier discussion that the income tax is indeed an indirect excise tax,
 35 as confirmed both by the U.S. Supreme Court and the Congressional Research Service. For instance, there is a federal excise
 36 tax on gasoline. The privileged activity or event of a corporation selling imported gasoline (foreign commerce) to consumers
 37 within the geographical boundaries of the United States of America is an occasion for paying that particular federal excise
 38 tax. Note that the federal government can only tax this transaction if the gasoline was imported because Article 1, Section 8,
 39 Clause 3 limits federal taxing power to matters of trade and commerce external to the states and to the country.<sup>305</sup> So if a
 40 privileged corporation sells imported gasoline in California, for instance, then we have created a situs for imposing the tax,
 41 which is described in 26 U.S.C. §4611. But remember that such excise taxes fall under Subtitles D of the Internal Revenue
 42 Code, which applies throughout the country (the 50 states), instead of just within the federal zone. This is confirmed by the 43 definitions found in 26 U.S.C. §4612(a)(4)(A), which define the term “United States” to mean the 50 States. Note that this
 44 definition of “United States” is different than that one found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10), where the “United States”
 45 there includes only the District of Columbia. Subtitle A income taxes are different because they only apply to persons
 46 domiciled inside the federal zone and to federal payments from the government. If the sale of imported gasoline occurs

1 outside of the geographical boundaries of the U.S.A or the “United States of America” or doesn’t involve the selling of
2 imported gasoline, then the tax can’t be enforced and no one is liable because there is therefore no situs for taxation:

3 situs. Lat. Situation; location; e.g. location or place of crime or business. Site; position; the place where a thing
4 is considered, for example, with reference to jurisdiction over it, or the right or power to tax it. It imports
5 fixedness of location. Situs of property, for tax purposes, is determined by whether the taxing state has sufficient
6 contact with the personal property sought to be taxed to justify in fairness the particular tax. Town of Cady v.
7 Alexander Const. Co., 12 Wis.2d. 236, 107 N.W.2d. 267, 270.
8 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1387]

9 “Source” is also used to describe an INCOME source for individuals or “persons” (as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(1)) in
10 Chapter 24 of the I.R.C, which is entitled “CHAPTER 24 - COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX AT SOURCE ON WAGES
11 “ and section 3402 of the I.R.C. These sections deal with withholding, but the withholding is occurring on the natural 12 person’s income “source” as defined under 26 U.S.C. §61. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(3) identify sources of 13 income for people that fall under 26 U.S.C. §61 as “classes of gross income”. This “source” of income for the person then
14 becomes a “source” of tax revenue from the government upon receipt by the government of taxes paid by the person. In 15 this case, the withholding on wages occurs as an imputed “excise tax” based on the “event” or situs of a “resident” receiving
16 income from their employer in connection with a “trade or business” conducted within the territorial jurisdiction of the 17 “United States” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9), which is the District of Columbia ONLY. Note, however, that indirect
18 excise taxes that are Constitutional always occur on business or corporate transactions. In particular, the U.S. Supreme 19 Court has ruled that all such taxes are on profit from corporations involved in foreign commerce. Excise taxes are referred 20 to in the Constitution as indirect taxes, as we learned in our discussion of the Supreme Court case of Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule,
21 74 U.S. 433 (1868) in section 6.12.4.2 and they always fall on consumers of the product made by the business. These taxes
22 are built into the cost of the product we buy, and because the choice to buy the product is voluntary, the payment of the tax
23 is voluntary. If you want to avoid the tax, then you don’t have to buy the product!

24 Valid federal excise taxes CANNOT fall directly on natural persons within states of the Union or citizens because then they
25 become unapportioned direct taxes. Unapportioned direct taxes on biological people violate Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4
26 of the U.S. Constitution, which states “No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid unless in proportion to the Census or 27 Enumeration herein before directed to be taken.” Unapportioned direct taxes also violate Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of 28 the Constitution. This prohibition, by the way, relates exclusively to states of the Union, and does not prohibit such taxes
29 inside the federal zone or “federal United States”. However, there is no such prohibition if the direct tax is only imposed
30 upon “residents” or legal “persons” that have a domicile within exclusive federal jurisdiction, such as the District of 31 Columbia..

32 In the case of federal excise taxes on natural persons, the income taxes on “wages” are deducted and paid by the employer
33 (the business) with the consent or permission of the employee (W-4), but in actuality they also REDUCE the income of the 34 recipient and the taxes must be accounted for and a return prepared by the citizen/recipient, not the business, which makes
35 them act like a direct tax that is clearly unconstitutional if it is within states of the Union but which is perfectly legal inside
36 the federal zone. It is very important to understand this distinction between direct taxes and indirect taxes. A good way to 37 think about this is if a tax reduces the income of a biological or natural person from what they otherwise would have received
38 and if it is involuntary and not discretionary, then it’s a direct tax. This issue was settled in the Supreme Court Case of 39 Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895).

40 One of the devious tricks that both the IRS and the state taxing authorities like to pull is to try to confuse the definition of 41 “source” for the layman, so that proponents of the 861 position cannot use their arguments successfully. The most famous
42 case they will cite in this dishonest, devious, and underhanded obfuscation is the case of Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass
43 Company, 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955). Here is the portion of the case they will try to cite, which appears in IRS Notice 2001-
44 40:

45 “Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts.”

46 The above is correct, but misleading. Congress doesn’t have to apply any limitations because the Constitution itself, which 47 is “fundamental law”, implies all the needed limitations on sources as we have shown. Even the Supreme Court admits this:

48 “It is elementary law that every statute is to be read in the light of the constitution,” ...

49 “However broad and general its language, it cannot be interpreted as extending beyond those matters which it
50 was within the constitutional power of the legislature to reach”

1 [McCullough v. Com. Of Virginia, 172 U.S. 102 (1898)]

4 "The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a
5 purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give
6 is...] 'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever
7 source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165
8 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D,

11 Thieves and deceivers in the government who use this specious argument will then try to expand the above to conclude by 12 induction that the "source" of income doesn't matter, and that all sources are taxable without saying which of the above two
13 "sources" (sources within under IRC 861 and sources without under IRC 862 the federal "United States") they are referring 14 to, as if to say that there is no reason to even have 26 U.S.C. Section 861 through 865 at all and that everyone in the world is 15 subject to U.S. federal income taxes because all government sources are taxable everywhere, including China!. This is an
16 absurd conclusion to reach that is completely inconsistent with law, but that is what you have to believe if you believe their
17 specious and deceptive arguments. In effect, what they are trying to do is dishonestly remove the territorial jurisdiction and 18 requirement for a situs to impose the tax so that everything one receives becomes "gross income" which is taxable. This
19 simply isn't true, however, because 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i) specifically says that monies earned by a "nonresident alien"
20 not derived from a "trade or business in the [federal] United States" is not classified as "gross income" and therefore is not 21 taxable. That is the position that this book, as a matter of fact, tries to get you to take.

22 TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART I > Sec. 861.
23 Sec. 861. - Income from sources within the [federal] United States

24 (a) Gross income from sources within United States

25 (3) Personal services

26 Compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States; except that compensation for labor
27 or services performed in the United States shall not be deemed to be income from 28 sources within the United States if-

29 (A) the labor or services are performed by a nonresident alien individual temporarily present in the United States
30 for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year,

31 (B) such compensation does not exceed $3,000 in the aggregate, and

32 (C) the compensation is for labor or services performed as an employee of or under a contract with -

33 (i) a nonresident alien, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the 34 United States, or

35 When you read double-speak of liars and deceivers like the above cite from the Supreme Court, you therefore need to be very
36 clear what type of "source" they are talking about. Taxable "sources" of income for legal "persons" are found in 26 U.S.C.
37 §61, and taxable "sources" of revenue for the government with a situs requirement are found in 26 U.S.C. §861 and 862.
38 What the Supreme Court is talking about in the Glenshaw case are taxable sources of income for persons and the ruling
39 simply expands I.R.C. section 61, but does NOT invalidate or render ineffective any part of the situs to tax established in 26
40 U.S.C. Sections 861 through 865 and the supporting regulations. We talk about this devious deceit and show you the error
41 in the governments deception later in section 5.7.6.11.7. We strongly encourage you to read that section if you are going to 42 use the 861 position, because we can virtually guarantee that the deceitful feds or your state government will try to bring up
43 this case when you try to use 861 in an effort to confuse and dissuade you from using the 861 position, which stands up quite 44 well against this U.S. Supreme Court case.

45 With that out of the way, we'll spend the remainder of this section talking about government "sources" and situs of income,
46 so let's review: the "income tax" is imposed on "taxable income," which means "gross income" minus deductions. "Gross
47 income" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §61 as "all income from whatever source derived." The phrase "from whatever source

1 derived” may initially appear all-encompassing, but for the specifics about “income from sources,” the reader of the law is
 2 repeatedly referred to Section 861 and following (of the statutes) and the related regulations. For example, in the full version
 3 of Title 26 (with all notes and amendments) which appears on Congress’ own website, Section 61 itself has the following
 4 cross-reference:

5 “Income from sources -
 6 Within the United States, see section 861 of this title.
 7 Without the United States, see section 862 of this title.”

8 So the section which generally defines “gross income” specifically refers to 26 U.S.C. §861 regarding income from “sources”
 9 within the United States** (the federal zone). A similar reference is also found in the indexes of the United States Code, 10 which (although they vary somewhat in the exact wording) have entries such as:

11 “Income tax
 12 Sources of income
 13 Determination, 26 § 861 et seq.
 14 Within the U.S., 26 § 861”

15 Again, income from “sources” within the United States** (the federal zone) is specifically dealt with by Section 861, and 16 “determination” of sources of income is also dealt with by Section 861 and the following sections. In addition, Sections 79,
 17 105, 410, 414 and 505 each identify Section 861 as the section which determines what constitutes “income from sources
 18 within the United States,” and Section 306 even uses the phrase “part I of subchapter N (sec. 861 and following, relating to 19 determination of sources of income).”

20 As shown, 26 U.S.C. §861 and following (which make up Part I of Subchapter N of the Code) are very relevant to determining 21 what is considered a “source of income,” and Section 861 in particular deals with income from “sources” within the United 22 States** (the federal zone). Not surprisingly, Section 861 is entitled “Income from sources within the United States,” and 23 the first two subsections of Section 861 are entitled “Gross income from sources within the United States” and “Taxable
 24 income from sources within the United States.” Section 861 is also the first section of Subchapter N of the Code, which is 25 entitled “Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States.” Clearly this is relevant to a tax on “income 26 from whatever source derived.”

27 As mentioned before, the statutes passed by Congress are interpreted and implemented by regulations published in the Code
 28 of Federal Regulations (“CFR”) by the Secretary of the Treasury. The Index of the CFR, under “Income taxes,” has an entry
 29 that reads “Income from sources inside or outside U.S., determination of sources of income, 26 C.F.R. §1 (1.861-1--1.864-
 30 8T).” This is the only entry in the Index relating to income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone), and 31 the regulations listed (26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 and following) correspond to Section 861 of the statutes. (The “26” refers to Title
 32 26, the “1” after “CFR” refers to Part 1 of the regulations (“Income Taxes”), and the “.861” refers to Section 861 of the 33 statutes.) These regulations fall under the heading “Determination of sources of income.” The following is how these 34 regulations begin:

35 “Sec. 1.861-1 Income from sources within the United States.
 36 (a) Categories of income. Part I (section 861 and following), subchapter N, chapter 1 of the Code, and the 37 regulations thereunder determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”
 38 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-1]

39 The meaning of this is unmistakable. The “income tax” is imposed on “income from whatever source derived,” and Section
 40 861 and following, and the related regulations, determine what is considered a “source” of income “for purposes of the 41 income tax.” The first sentence of the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861 has stated this since 1954, when Section 861 first 42 came into existence. Note that these define “the” sources of income subject to the tax, meaning there are no others.
 43 Therefore, the meaning of “income from whatever source derived” (the definition of “gross income” in Section 61) is limited
 44 by Section 861 (and following sections) and the related regulations. The meaning of the phrase “whatever source” depends
 45 completely on the meaning of the word “source.” The word “whatever” does not expand the meaning of “source” any more
 46 than the phrase “all firearms” (in the example above) expands the legal meaning of the word “firearm.”

47 The above section of regulations also refutes the common but incorrect position that the “items” of income listed in Section
 48 61 are “sources,” since Section 61 is obviously not the section which determines the “sources” of income for purposes of the
 49 income tax.

(There is a chart at the end of this report showing the outline of Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations, and showing many of the citations used in this report.)

While the significance of Section 861 and the related regulations may be obvious, the point needs to be thoroughly proven, since most tax professionals concede that Section 861 and its regulations are not about the income of United States citizens living and working exclusively within the 50 Union states of the United States. (Below it will be shown why it is so significant that “section 861 and following... and the regulations thereunder, determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”). The IRS’s own publications clarify the issue of “source” for us. In IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 4, we read the following:

Source of Earned Income

The source of your earned income is the place where you perform the services for which you received the income. Foreign earned income is income you receive for performing personal services in a foreign country. Where or how you are paid has no effect on the source of the income. For example, income you receive for work done in France is income from a foreign source even if the income is paid directly to your bank account in the United States and your employer is located in New York City.

If you receive a specific amount for work done in the United States, you must report that amount as U.S. source income. If you cannot determine how much is for work done in the United States, or for work done partly in the United States and partly in a foreign country, determine the amount of U.S. source income using the method that most correctly shows the proper source of your income.

In most cases you can make this determination on a time basis. U.S. source income is the amount that results from multiplying your total pay (including allowances, re-imbursements other than for foreign moves, and noncash fringe benefits) by a fraction. The numerator (top number) is the number of days you worked within the United States. The denominator is the total number of days of work for which you were paid.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The term “United States” in the Internal Revenue Code by default actually means the “federal zone” and not the 50 Union states of the United States. That is because of the definition of the terms “United States” and “State” found in 26 U.S.C. section 7701(a)(9) and 7701(a)(10) respectively. There are two exceptions to this rule found in I.R.C. sections 3121 and 4612, which have to do with taxes other than personal income taxes. This finding is also consistent with Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution, which both forbid direct taxes on natural persons without using apportionment.

This is also suggested by the title of Part I of Subchapter N (of which 861 is the first section), “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income.” Under the usual overly-broad (and incorrect) interpretation of the legal scope of the term “gross income,” this would appear as a contradiction, since “Income from sources within the United States” (the title of Section 861) would at first glance seem to be the opposite of “foreign income.” The specific taxable sources shown later demonstrate that income from within the United States** (the federal zone) can be taxable only if received by certain individuals outside of the United States** (the federal zone), thus making the income foreign income. For the purposes of the income tax, as we discussed in section 5.3, income earned from within the 50 Union states is counted as “foreign income”.

While the title of a part of the statutes may indicate what that part is about, it should be mentioned that 26 U.S.C. §7806(b) states that such titles do not change the actual meaning of the law (“nor shall any... descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect”). The above explanation for the title of Part I, Subchapter N is therefore not crucial, but does give a possible explanation of why the title is as it is.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Does Part I (Section 861 and following) of Subchapter N, and related regulations, determine what is considered a “source” of income for purposes of the federal income tax?

5.7.6.5 Determining Taxable Income from U.S.** Sources

In addition to the fact that Section 861 and following, and related regulations, determine what is considered a “source” of income subject to the income tax, the regulations also repeatedly state that these are also the specific sections to be used to determine “gross income” and “taxable income” from sources within and/or without the United States** (the federal zone).

“Rules are prescribed for determination of gross income and taxable income derived from sources within and without the United States, and for the allocation of income derived partly from sources within the United States

1 and partly without the United States or within United States possessions. §§ 1.861-1 through 1.864. (Secs. 861-
2 864; '54 Code.)"
3 [Treasury Decision 6258]

4 The sections which are specifically for determining taxable income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone)
5 are 26 U.S.C. §861(b) of the statutes, and the corresponding regulations found at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8. (The regulations under 6 Section 63, the section defining “taxable income,” do not explain how to determine taxable income.) While the relevance of 7 these sections may quickly become obvious, the repeated documentation is important since most tax professionals are already
8 aware that these sections are not about the income of most Americans.

9 Section 861(b) (as mentioned above) is entitled “Taxable income from sources within the United States.” This section states
10 that taxable income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone) is the gross income described in 861(a) minus
11 allowable deductions. The regulations under Section 861 state (in the first paragraph):

12 “The statute provides for the following three categories of income:

13 (1) Within the United States. The gross income from sources within the United States... See Secs. 1.861-2 to 14 1.861-7, inclusive, and Sec. 1.863-1. The taxable income from sources within the United States... shall be 15 determined by deducting therefrom, in accordance with sections 861(b) and 863(a), [allowable deductions]. See 16 Secs. 1.861-8 and 1.863-1.”
17 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-1(a)(1)]

18 (The other two categories of income are income from “without” (outside of) the United States** (the federal zone), dealt with 19 by Section 862 and related regulations, and income from sources partly within and partly without the U.S., dealt with by 20 Section 863 and related regulations.)

21 As the above citation states, items of “gross income” from sources within the U.S. are dealt with by 861(a) of the statutes and
22 1.861-2 through 1.861-7 of the regulations. Taxable income is determined by 861(b) of the statutes, and the corresponding 23 regulations in 1.861-8. These regulations are predictably entitled “Computation of taxable income from sources within the 24 United States and from other sources and activities,” and reiterate the point:

25 “Sections 861(b) and 863(a) state in general terms how to determine taxable income of a taxpayer from sources
26 within the United States after gross income from sources within the United States has been determined.”
27 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8]

28 In the regulations under Section 863 (concerning income from sources inside and outside the U.S.), the following is stated:

29 “Determination of taxable income. The taxpayer's taxable income from sources within or without the United
30 States will be determined under the rules of Secs. 1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income
31 from sources within the United States.”
32 [26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c)]

33 (The vast majority of tax professionals do not use these sections to determine taxable income from sources within the United
34 States of America. At this point, the average American reading this report may guess that there must be some “context,” or 35 some other section, or something somewhere which would justify the tax professionals blatantly disregarding and disobeying
36 the clear language used in the citations shown above. There is not.)

37 Note how sections 1.861-8 and following of the regulations are identified as the sections “for determining taxable income
38 from sources within the United States,” as well as being the sections to be used whether the income is from sources within 39 or without the United States** (the federal zone). A similar structure occurs in the regulations under Section 862 (dealing 40 with income from outside of the United States**):

41 “(b) Taxable income. The taxable income from sources without the United States... shall be determined on the 42 same basis as that used in Sec. 1.861-8 for determining the taxable income from sources within the United
43 States.”
44 [26 C.F.R. §1.862-1]

45 Section 1.863-6 of the regulations (dealing with income from within a foreign country or federal possession) also identifies 46 sections 1.861-1 through 1.863-5 as applying “[t]he principles... for determining the gross and the taxable income from 47 sources within and without the United States.” Over and over again it is shown that 26 U.S.C. §861(b) of the statutes and 26

1 C.F.R. §1.861-8 of the regulations are to be used to determine the taxable income from sources within the United States**
2 (the federal zone).

3 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Are 26 U.S.C. §861(b) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 the sections to be used to determine taxable
4 *income from government sources of tax revenue within the United States**?*

5 After all the preceding discussion on taxable sources of income for the government, let us summarize with a picture/table,
6 exactly what we mean. The table on the following page was constructed directly from the Internal Revenue Code and the
7 underlying Treasury regulations to clearly show what is and is not subject to federal tax. In order for income received by an 8 American to be taxable, it must fit into at least one category in each of the three vertical columns appearing in the table. If it
9 does not, then the income cannot be lawfully taxed.

Table 5-79: Liability for tax summary: Income earned must fall into ALL THREE columns to be taxable

Accordingly, in this case, the statutory grouping is foreign source income (including, for example, interest received from a domestic corporation which meets the tests of section 861(a)(1)(B), dividends received from a domestic corporation which has an election in effect under section 936, and other types of income specified in section 862). Pursuant to sections 862(b) and 863(a) and sections 1.862-1 and 1.863-1, this section provides rules for identifying the deductions to be taken into account in determining taxable income from sources without the United States. See section 904(d) (as in effect after enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1976) and the regulations thereunder which require separate treatment of certain types of income. See example (3) of paragraph (g) of this section for one example of the application of this section to the overall limitation. (ii) [Reserved] (iii) DISC and FSC taxable income.Sections 925 and 994 provide rules for determining the taxable income of a FSC and DISC, respectively, with respect to qualified sales and leases of export property and qualified services. The combined taxable income method available for determining a DISC's taxable income provides, without consideration of export promotion expenses, that the taxable income of the DISC shall be 50 percent of the combined taxable income of the DISC and the related supplier derived from sales and leases of export property and from services. In the FSC context, the taxable income of the FSC equals 23 percent of the combined taxable income of the FSC and the related supplier. Pursuant to regulations under section 925 and 994, this section provides rules for determining the deductions to be taken into account in determining combined taxable income, except to the extent |

NOTES:

1. This table is used for determining the portion of a "person's" income that is subject to tax. Each "item" of gross income received by a "person" (which is a corporation or partnership involved in foreign commerce) must fall into a category found in each of the three columns, 1 through 3.
2. We will now give you some simplified examples of how to apply this table:
  - 2.1. Let's say you are an U.S.** citizen who has profit from an investment within the U.S.** (also called the federal zone, which is federal property only).
    - 2.1.1. Your income does not meet the description of "income" subject to tax under the U.S. Supreme Court in Column 1, and is therefore not taxable on this basis alone.
    - 2.1.2. Your income meets the definition of gross income under 26 C.F.R. § 1.61(a) above.
    - 2.1.3. Your income cannot be allocated to a taxable source within the United States** as identified in Column 3 and within 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f). Therefore, it is not subject to federal tax and the recipient cannot be liable for federal tax on the amount based on this exclusion alone.
  - 2.2. You are a non-resident non-person not involved in a "trade or business/public office in the U.S.**" (holding political office) in receipt of wage income as a federal statutory "employee".
    - 2.2.1. Your income does not meet the definition of "income" found in Column 1 per the Supreme Court because it is not profit from a corporation involved in foreign commerce.
    - 2.2.2. Your income meets the definition of "gross income" found in Column 2 and 26 C.F.R. §1.61(a) above.
    - 2.2.3. Your income also cannot be allocated to a taxable source of income "within the United States**" under Column 3 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f). Because the income cannot be allocated to something found in all three columns, then it is not taxable and the recipient cannot be liable for tax.

- 1       2.3. You are a U.S. Congressman who is a nonresident alien and who is in receipt of wages connected with political office.
2           2.3.1. Your income does not meet the definition of "income" found in Column 1 as defined by the Supreme Court, and is not taxable on that basis alone.
3           2.3.2. Your income meets the definition of "gross income" found in Column 2 and 26 C.F.R. §1.61(a).
4           2.3.3. Your income does fall in a taxable source from within the U.S.* as found in Column 3 above and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) (entitled Effectively
5           Connected Income).

5.7.6.6 Specific Taxable Sources

Source rules for purposes of gross income that is the subject of taxation are identified in 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 through 863. Section 861 covers sources “within” the “United States”, meaning income derived or effectively connected with a trade or business within the only the District of Columbia. Section 862 covers sources “without” the “United States”, which is to say income received from within or between the 50 Union states of the United States of America. We will now cover the requirements relating to these sources independently.

5.7.6.6.1 Sources “within” the United States: Income originating inside The District of Columbia

Section 861 of the statutes uses general language that at first seems to apply to all income coming from within the United States of America, by saying

However, as we emphasized in section 4.8 (entitled “The Federal Zone”) we need to keep reminding ourselves of the definition of the term “United States” as we read this section and all the implementing regulations. Once again, the “United States”, as defined in Section 7701 of the IRC, actually consists of only the “District of Columbia” and does not include the 50 Union states! The main reason for going through the mental exercise in this section of identifying specific sources in the implementing regulations is to confirm this limited jurisdiction of the Internal Revenue Code and that Congress stays within its Constitutional constraints in Article 1, Section 8, Clauses 1 through 3 and 1:9:4. As we will see, the statutes and the regulations are indeed completely consistent with these Constitutional constraints and the definition of the term “United States” as only the “federal zone” and not the 50 Union states.

Following the introductory statement indicated above, section 861 then lists similar “items” of income to those listed in Section 61 (while specifying that they are coming from within the United States**). As with Section 61, it is easy to misconstrue this list of “items” as being a list of “sources,” which it is not. The regulations related to Section 861 contradict this possible misinterpretation. (And, as will be shown later, the older regulations and statutes make the correct application of the law crystal clear.)

The regulations in Section 1.861-8 begins by saying that Section 861(b) of the statutes describes “in general terms” how to determine taxable income from sources within the United States** (the federal zone). These same regulations later specify that Section 861 is about items of income derived from “specific sources.”

“(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources.”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

In the first paragraph of Section 1.861-8 of the regulations (the section “for determining taxable income from sources within the United States”), it is again made clear that the section applies only to the listed “items” of income when derived from “specific sources.”

[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)]

Again, a few paragraphs later, in defining the term “statutory grouping,” these regulations again state that taxable income must come from a “specific source.”

“...the term ‘statutory grouping’ means the gross income from a specific source or activity which must first be determined in order to arrive at ‘taxable income’ from which specific source or activity...”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

In 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1) it is again made clear that Section 1.861-8 (the section “for determining taxable income from sources within the United States”) is applicable only to income derived from “specific sources.”

“...the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources or activities and which gives rise to statutory groupings [see previous citation] to which this section is applicable...”

1 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

2 From these it is clear that the term “source” as used in Sections 61 and 861 does not simply mean any activity from which
3 income is derived. If it did, there would be no need for Section 861 and following, and related regulations, to “determine the 4 sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” The following citations show that Section 1.861-8(f)(1) lists the “specific 5 sources” of income subject to the income tax.

6 Again, the first paragraph of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 states the following (the meaning of “operative section” will be explained 7 below):

8 “The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources
9 and activities under other sections of the Code, referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph
10 (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections.”
11 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(1)]

12 The definition of “statutory grouping” (mentioned above) also refers to “paragraph (f)(1)” as the list of “specific sources.”

14 determined in order to arrive at ‘taxable income’ from which specific source or activity under an operative
15 section. (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.)”
16 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

17 The regulations twice identify “paragraph (f)(1) of this section” (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)) as the list of specific sources.
18 Paragraph (f)(1) itself confirms this again, and then lists the “specific sources” subject to the income tax:

19 “The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from 20 specific sources or activities and which gives rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable
21 include the sections described below.
22 (i) Overall limitation to the foreign tax credit...
23 (ii) [Reserved]
24 (iii) DISC and FSC taxable income... [international and foreign sales corporations]
25 (iv) Effectively connected taxable income. Nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged
26 in trade or business within the United States...
27 (v) Foreign base company income...
28 (vi) Other operative sections. The rules provided in this section also apply in determining--
29 (A) The amount of foreign source items...
30 (B) The amount of foreign mineral income...
31 (C) [Reserved]
32 (D) The amount of foreign oil and gas extraction income...
33 (E) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
34 (F) (deals with Puerto Rico tax credits)
35 (G) (deals with Virgin Islands tax credits)
36 (H) The income derived from Guam by an individual...
37 (I) (deals with China Trade Act corporations)
38 (J) (deals with foreign corporations)
39 (K) (deals with insurance income of foreign corporations)
40 (L) (deals with countries subject to international boycott)
41 (M) (deals with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936)” [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)]

42 None of these “sources” apply to natural persons (people rather than artificial “person”) who live and work exclusively within 43 the 50 Union states of the United States of America. (Federal “possessions,” such as Guam, Puerto Rico, etc., are considered
44 “foreign” under the law.) This is the only list of “sources” in Part I of Subchapter N, or the regulations thereunder, which (as 45 the regulations say) “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” We can see quite clearly that all of 46 these taxable sources are part of the “federal zone”, which includes the District of Columbia and all federal possessions, or 47 pertain to foreign commerce as allowed under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the constitution.

48 The next subsection (1.861-8(g)) gives examples about how 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 works, and states that “[i]n each example,
49 unless otherwise specified, the operative section which is applied and gives rise to the statutory grouping of gross income is
50 the overall limitation to the foreign tax credit under section 904(a),” again showing that there must be some “operative
51 section” in order for the section to apply, and in order for there to be taxable income.

52 So, to review, the sections which “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax” (namely, 861 and 53 following and related regulations) apply only to income from the “specific sources” listed in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1). Most

1 people do not receive income from these “sources of income for purposes of the income tax,” and most people do not,
2 therefore, receive “income from whatever source derived” (the general definition of “gross income”) subject to the income
3 tax.

4 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, is income taxable only if derived from 5 “specific sources” related to international and foreign commerce (including federal possessions)?

6 5.7.6.6.2 Sources “without” the United States: Income originating inside the 50 Union states, territories and
7 possessions, and foreign nations

8 This section deals with income from sources “without” the [federal] United States** (the federal zone). Because the term
9 “United States” is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701 to include only the District of Columbia, then income from “without” the 10 “United States***” includes all income earned in the 50 Union states and in any foreign nation. The states of the Union are 11 also considered “foreign countries” and “foreign nations” for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, which is considered
12 municipal (private or special) law that applies only to the federal zone:

13 “The state governments, in their separate powers and independent sovereignties, in their reserved powers, are 14 just as much beyond the jurisdiction and control of the National Government as the National Government in its 15 sovereignty is beyond the control and jurisdiction of the state government.”

16 “...a State has the same undeniable and unlimited jurisdiction over all persons and things within its 17 territorial limits, as any foreign nation...”

20 “The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties,
21 *except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue
22 to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in
23 every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the 24 Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute.”
25 [Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 38 U.S. (13 Pet.) 519, 10 L.Ed. 274 (1839)]

26 By implication, any income derived from “without” the “United States” is “foreign income” connected with a “foreign 27 business” and a “foreign corporation” (see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(5)). The only exception to this is if you work for a corporation
28 that is registered in the District of Columbia and recognized by the U.S. Government, in which case you work for a “domestic 29 corporation” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(4). Keep in mind also that corporations within a state can be “U.S. citizens”
30 at law, which is how the extortionists in Congress and the IRS get their jurisdiction to tax them.

31 IRS publication 54 refers to areas where you receive “foreign income” as a “foreign country”. Interestingly, if you occupy
32 one of the 50 Union states of the United States, you do indeed occupy a “foreign country” per the IRS’ own “word of art”
33 definitions found in publication 54. We explain and justify this in both section 5.2.14 entitled “The definition of ‘foreign
34 income’ relative to the Internal Revenue Code” and in section 5.3.2 entitled “What’s Your Proper Federal Income Tax Filing
35 Status?”. This all sounds rather confusing, we’ll admit, but then again, that’s the way the IRS and our Congress likes to keep 36 things so they have plenty of wiggle room to manipulate and abuse ignorant Americans into paying an unlawfully enforced
37 income tax.

38 Section 862 of the I.R.C. describes income from sources “without” the United States as follows:

39 Sec. 862. Income from sources without the United States

40 (a) Gross income from sources without United States

41 The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources without the United States:

42 (1) interest other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 861(a)(1);

43 (2) dividends other than those derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 44 861(a)(2);

(3) compensation for labor or personal services performed without the United States;

(4) rentals or royalties from property located without the United States or from any interest in such property, including rentals or royalties for the use of or for the privilege of using without the United States patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulas, good will, trade-marks, trade brands, franchises, and other like properties;

(5) gains, profits, and income from the sale or exchange of real property located without the United States;

(6) gains, profits, and income derived from the purchase of inventory property (within the meaning of section 865(i)(1)) within the United States and its sale or exchange without the United States;

(7) underwriting income other than that derived from sources within the United States as provided in section 861(a)(7); and

(8) gains, profits, and income from the disposition of a United States real property interest (as defined in section 897(c)) when the real property is located in the Virgin Islands.

(b) Taxable income from sources without United States

From the items of gross income specified in subsection (a) there shall be deducted the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly apportioned or allocated thereto, and a ratable part of any expenses, losses, or other deductions which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income. The remainder, if any, shall be treated in full as taxable income from sources without the United States. In the case of an individual who does not itemize deductions, an amount equal to the standard deduction shall be considered a deduction which cannot definitely be allocated to some item or class of gross income.

On the surface, it would appear that everything without the U.S.** (the federal zone) fits into the category of "gross income". But examining the regulations further, we find a completely different story! In 26 C.F.R. §1.864-2(b)(i), we can see that income from personal services derived from "without" the United States and received by a nonresident alien individual is not subject to tax. Keep in mind that the definition of "foreign" in the below case is anything outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, which includes only the federal zone:

Sec. 1.864-2 Trade or business within the United States.

(b) Performance of personal services for foreign employer--(1) Excepted services. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, the term "engaged in trade or business within the United States" does not include the performance of personal services--

(i) For a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States at any time during the taxable year, or

(ii) For an office or place of business maintained in a foreign country or in a possession of the United States by an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States or by a domestic partnership or a domestic corporation, by a nonresident alien individual who is temporarily present in the United States for a period or periods not exceeding a total of 90 days during the taxable year and whose compensation for such services does not exceed in the aggregate gross amount of $3,000.

You will note that most of us fit in the above category, because we do not inhabit the U.S.*/federal zone and are a non-resident NON-person. We will explain why shortly. Even more enlightening is that the graduated income tax that most of us have needlessly paid all these years applies ONLY to income effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States:

26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX...

"(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining taxable income...gross income includes ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a TRADE OR BUSINESS within the United States."

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) makes it clear that public officers are engaged in a "trade or business". Residents and Citizens of the 50 Union states (which is most of us) are American Citizens who are NOT performing any of the functions of a public office* and, therefore, we are not engaged in, and have earned no income effectively connected to a "trade or business" within the United States (federal zone) or the U.S. Government.

26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) Definitions. Trade or Business. The term “trade or business” includes [only] the performance of the functions of a public office.”

Following is a definition of “public office”:

*Public Office, pursuant to Black’s Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

“Essential characteristics of a ‘public office’ are:

(11) Authority conferred by law,

(12) Fixed tenure of office, and

(13) Power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government.

(14) Key element of such test is that “officer is carrying out a sovereign function’.

(15) Essential elements to establish public position as ‘public office’ are:

(a) Position must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislature.

(b) Portion of sovereign power of government must be delegated to position,

(c) Duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by legislature or through legislative authority.

(d) Duties must be performed independently without control of superior power other than law, and

(e) Position must have some permanency.”

For the purposes of the income tax, “Trade or Business” 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26), is a “term” or “word of art” defined by Congress. Pursuant to Congressional rules of statutory construction a “term” may have a limited definition which is different than the common understanding or the dictionary definition of the same word(s). Such term must be clearly and specifically defined by Congress within the Code utilizing it.

*Term: “An expression or word especially one that has a particular meaning in a particular profession.” i.e.- term of art. –Ballentine’s Law Dictionary.

“Words of Art”—These are “words that have a particular meaning in a particular area of study and have either no meaning or a different meaning outside of that field.”-Barron’s Dictionary.

In statutes levying taxes, the word “includes” is a word of limitation. It limits the definition of the term to include only the specific elements or words following the word “includes”. However, granting a Congressional intent to make “includes”, a word of enlargement, pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §7701(c), it could only be enlarged to introduce other words, which are synonymous to, or in the precise same category or genus of, the other words used in the meaning.

The term ‘trade or business’ includes the performance of the functions of a ‘public office’, cannot, therefore, be expanded by implication, to also include the functions of private, independent, non-governmental occupations of common right, or occupations of common right within the government:

“(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace...(2) To enclose within; contain; confine...But granting that the word ‘including’ is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific elements constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding general language...The word ‘including’ is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising: comprehending; embracing.”

“Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, ‘including’ the primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than enlargement. Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.I. 135 A. 2nd 829, 832

“In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is the established rule not to extend their provisions by implication beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government and in favor of the citizen.”

[Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151, at 153]

Because residents and Citizens of the 50 Union states are not engaged in a “trade or business” within the United States, pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-1(b)(1)(i), for the purposes of the income tax, they are in a class of “non-resident alien individuals”, defined as follows:

26 C.F.R. §1.871-1

1                   “...(b) Classes of non-resident aliens-

2                   In general. For purposes of the income tax, nonresident alien individuals are divided into the following classes:

3                   Nonresident alien individuals who at no time during the taxable year engaged in a trade or business in the United
4                   States...”

5 Therefore, pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.871-7, state Citizens and “nationals” and residents of the 50 Union states, are not
6 subject to the graduated income tax imposed by 26 U.S.C. Section 1.

7                   26 C.F.R. §1.871-7

8                   Taxation of nonresident alien individuals not engaged in trade or U.S. business.—

9                   Imposition of tax. (1) “...a nonresident alien individual...is NOT subject to the tax imposed by Section 1” [Subtitle
10                   A, Chapter 1]

11 5.7.6.7        Operative Sections

12 The earlier sections of Title 26 (26 U.S.C. §61 and following) deal with types of income that may be taxable (such as 13 compensation for services). However, these sections do not specify where the transaction is taking place, or who is receiving
14 the income. Obviously not everyone on earth who receives “compensation for services” is taxable under U.S. law. A separate 15 part of the law, found in Subchapter N, deals with what types of commerce generate taxable income.

16 Subchapter N is entitled “Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States.” As the title suggests, this
17 subchapter explains when income from within or without the United States** (the federal zone) is subject to the income tax.
18 But on examining Subchapter N, it is readily apparent that it relates only to international and foreign commerce, but not to 19 citizens who receive all of their income from within the 50 Union states. This can be seen by the titles of the five “Parts” of 20 Subchapter N, which are “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income” (Part I), “Nonresident aliens and
21 foreign corporations” (Part II), “Income from sources without [outside of] the United States” (Part III), “Domestic 22 international sales corporations” (Part IV), and “International boycott determinations” (Part V).

23 The statutes of Part I of Subchapter N (beginning with 26 U.S.C. §861) give general rules about “within” and “without,” but 24 the regulations thereunder make it quite clear that these rules apply only to the taxable activities described throughout the 25 other “Parts” of Subchapter N.

26                   “(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four
27                   provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources.”
28                   [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

29 This term “specific sources” is used in three other places in the regulations, every one of which specifically refers to taxable
30 activities described in the “operative sections” of the statutes throughout Subchapter N (which are listed in 1.861-8(f)(1) of 31 the regulations). In other words, while the regulations list the taxable activities all in one place (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1),
32 the statutes describe those taxable activities in numerous sections throughout all of Subchapter N. The “specific sources”
33 listed in the regulations each refer specifically to sections of the statutes (called “operative sections”) describing those 34 activities. For example, item “(iv)” on the list in 1.861-8(f)(1) specifically refers to sections 871(b)(1) and 882(a)(1) of the 35 statutes, which state the following:

36                   “A nonresident alien individual engaged in trade or business within the United States... shall be taxable as 37                   provided in section 1...”
38                   [26 U.S.C. §871(b)(1)]

39                   “A foreign corporation engaged in trade or business within the United States... shall be taxable as provided in 40                   section 11...”
41                   [26 U.S.C. §882(a)(1) (Section 11 imposes the income tax on corporations, while Section 1 imposes it on 42                   individuals) ]

43 Here the statutes state that these specific activities (or “sources”) may produce taxable income. If an “item” of income (such 44 as compensation for services) derives from the activity described in this “operative section,” that income is subject to the

1 income tax. The “shall be taxable” phrase would be entirely unnecessary if “from whatever source derived” had the broad
2 meaning that the usual (and incorrect) interpretation of the law gives it.

3 There is no such “shall be taxable” phrase, nor any “operative section” describing an activity in which a United States Citizen
4 living and working exclusively within the 50 Union states receives income from within the 50 Union states. The regulations
5 under Section 861 make it clear that the “items” of income must derive from a taxable source or activity described in an
6 “operative section” of the statutes in order to be taxable. Other income does not legally constitute “income from whatever
7 source derived.”

8 The following analogy may help to clarify the matter of “items” of income and “sources” of income. Suppose that there was 9 a law imposing a tax on “Zonkos,” and that the law defined “Zonkos” as “all toys from whatever store derived, including the 10 following toys: plastic cars, dolls, yoyos,” etc. Then the law stated that another section “determines the stores for purposes
11 of the Zonko tax,” and that section listed “Bob’s Toys,” “Toy City,” and “Toy World” as “toy stores.”

12 In this example, there would be two distinct aspects of the term “Zonko”: whether an item is a taxable “toy,” and whether it
13 comes from a taxable “store.” Both criteria would have to be met for it to legally constitute a “Zonko.” For example, a baby
14 bottle bought at Toy World would not be a “Zonko” (even though it came from a “store”), if baby bottles are not within the 15 legal definition of “toys.” Also, a doll bought from “Chuck’s Bargain Basement” also would not be a “Zonko” (even though
16 it is a “toy”), as it did not come from something within the legal meaning of “store.” A yoyo from Toy World would be a
17 “Zonko” as it is both a “toy” and comes from a “store.”

18 Similarly, if an “item” of income (such as dividends) does not come from a taxable “source” or activity (such as a foreign 19 corporation doing business within the United States**), it does not constitute “gross income.” While the law goes to great
20 length to specify which “items” of income may be included in “gross income,” the other condition must still be met in order
21 for those items to be taxable: they must derive from a taxable “source” or activity under an “operative section” of Subchapter
22 N (as explained in Section 1.861-8(f)(1) of the regulations). (Note that the definition of “gross income” includes both criteria:
23 “all income from whatever source derived.”)

24 5.7.6.8 Summary of the 861 position

25 The current statutes and regulations show the correct, limited application of the “income tax” imposed by 26 U.S.C. §1, which 26 is in conflict with what the public generally believes regarding the matter.

27 TO SUMMARIZE:

- 28 1. A direct tax is one levied directly upon citizens. The federal income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A
29 is in actuality an indirect excise tax upon federal corporate privileges as ruled by the Supreme Court, but the IRS
30 attempts to illegally enforce it as though it were an direct tax on live people. Direct taxes were best explained in 31 the Supreme Court case of Knowlton v. Moore (178 U.S. 41) in 1900, which stated that:

32 “Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are
33 levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange.”

- 34 2. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution states that “Representatives and direct taxes shall be 35 apportioned among the several States...”
36 3. Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution states that “No Capitation or other direct tax shall be laid
37 unless in proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken.”
38 4. There can be no unapportioned direct tax, or it would violate the above constitutional limitations. This means that 39 direct taxes must be requested NOT from citizens, but requested from the individual states by the Federal 40 Government. Therefore, a Citizen CANNOT be made liable for the payment of federal income taxes.
41 5. The 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which allegedly authorized the imposition of federal taxes on 42 “income”, did not change the Constitution in such a way as to eliminate the constitutional distinction between 43 direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining, as a matter of fact, said the 44 following:

45 “... [the 16th Amendment] conferred no new power of taxation... [and]... prohibited the ... power of income
46 taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect [e.g. excise 47 taxes] taxation to which it inherently belonged...”
48 [United States Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

The 16th Amendment therefore did not authorize the imposition of direct, unapportioned Federal Income Taxes upon citizens of the United States of America, in spite of the lies that you hear from Congressmen and the IRS just about every day on this subject. Instead, it authorized the taxation of income as an indirect excise tax, which is to say that it is a business tax levied on federal corporate or business income, and not directly on individuals.

6. As we thoroughly covered earlier in section 5.6.5, the Supreme Court has ruled in the case of Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189, 207, 40 S.Ct. 189, 9 A.L.R. 1570 (1920) that Congress cannot by legislation define the word “income”. They also ruled that for the purposes of the income tax, “income” means corporate profit from foreign commerce of either federal or state corporations:

[Southern Pacific Co. v. Lowe, 247 U.S. 330, 335, 38 S.Ct. 540 (1918)]

“...Whatever difficulty there may be about a precise scientific definition of ‘income,’ it imports, as used here, something entirely distinct from principal or capital either as a subject of taxation or as a measure of the tax; conveying rather the idea of gain or increase arising from corporate activities.”

[Doyle v. Mitchell Brothers Co., 247 U.S. 179, 185, 38 S.Ct. 467 (1918)] [emphasis added]

[Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

7. From a legal standpoint, and as interpreted by the federal courts, income to be treated as taxable MUST meet all of the following three criteria
- a. Must be “income”, which means it must be “corporate profit”.
  - b. Must be a “class of gross income” found in 26 U.S.C. §61 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(3).
  - c. Must be an “item of income” (identified in 26 U.S.C. §861) that is taxable (e.g. profit, sales tax, etc),
AND
  - d. Must derive from a taxable source or activity identified in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1). Income that meets ALL FOUR of these criteria is called “gross income”. There are many taxable types or items of income but very few taxable sources as far as the federal government is concerned. All of these sources are identified only in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8, and all other types are excluded by implication. A favorite IRS trick is to talk about every type of conceivable income as taxable and say nothing about taxable source.
8. Federal income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are indirect excise taxes, and the Congressional Research Service report 97-59A entitled “Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax”. Indirect excise taxes are on corporations involved in foreign commerce only and apply only to specific taxable activities or sources. It is ludicrous to attempt to lay an indirect excise tax and then not specify which activities or sources are taxable anywhere in the statutes, and to do so is a blatant attempt to unlawfully extend federal jurisdiction to tax beyond the clear intent of the Constitution. The IRS and Congress have attempted over the years since the 16th Amendment was introduced to abuse their power to broaden the definition of “income” and eliminate the use of taxable activities and sources from the Internal Revenue Code so as to try to apply indirect excise taxes in Subtitle A to individuals and thereby transform the indirect excise taxes under Subtitle A into direct taxes. The Constitution, however, does not authorize them to do this and the Supreme Court on repeated occasions has pointed this out.
9. There has been a concerted effort over the years by the federal government, and more importantly by the IRS and the Congress, to disguise or hide the simple facts contained in section 5.6.10 and subsections. We have traced the history of changes to the law that they made to show that there is an intent to confuse and deceive the average American into thinking that all of their income is “gross income”, which simply is not true. Chapter 6 of this book also reveals the extent of collusion and conspiracy over the years between the various branches of government to enlarge and extent the perceived, but not actual, jurisdiction of the federal government to levy federal income taxes on private individuals domiciled in the 50 Union states outside of the federal zone. An examination of older versions of the Internal Revenue Code clearly shows to whom the tax applies and what types of sources are taxed, while the laws available today have been deliberately obfuscated and confused to hide the truth. Manipulation of the media by the IRS and the relative legal ignorance of the average American have prevented the word from getting out about the fraud and obfuscation involved with the federal government's attempts to hide and obfuscate the truth and illegally broaden the federal income tax beyond its clear Constitutional limits.

The following sections of the U.S. Code conclusively demonstrate that they are all collectively consistent in their entirety with the above constitutional limitations on the federal government's ability to tax:

1. 26 U.S.C. §1 imposes the income tax on "taxable income."
2. 26 U.S.C. §63 defines "taxable income" generally as "gross income" minus deductions.
3. 26 U.S.C. §61 defines "gross income" generally as income "from whatever source derived.". The Supreme Court has ruled in Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938) that "from whatever source derived" does not mean that the source is irrelevant:

*"The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S., 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D, 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452, 467, 52 S.Ct. 420, 424, 82 A.L.R. 775."*

4. 26 U.S.C. §§ 861 - 865, and related regulations, determine the taxable "sources of income."
5. 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f), which is the implementing regulation for 26 U.S.C. §861, shows that the taxable "sources of income" apply only to those engaged in international or foreign commerce (including commerce within federal possessions) or who hold public office. More precisely, it shows that the only thing taxable is federal corporate profit, which in that section of the regulation is identified as Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISC) and Foreign Sales Corporations (FSC's).

The income tax is therefore a "voluntary" tax and amounts to a "stupidity tax" on those individuals who are residents of the 50 Union states and who have only domestic income but who have allowed themselves to be deceived by the IRS into thinking they are "liable" for tax on all income from all "sources".

5.7.6.9 Why Hasn't The 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already?

After reading the essence of the evidence up to this point, skeptics often ask us the question:

"Why Hasn't The 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already? After all, the issue seems pretty straightforward and easy to understand?"

What follows is our answer to that question. We have searched Supreme Court Cases going back to 1900 and Federal Appellate cases going back to 1930 using both the FindLaw index (<http://www.findlaw.com>) and the Versus Law index (<http://www.versuslaw.com>). We have found absolutely no references to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issue. The fact is that the 861 loophole may already have been used and successfully litigated in the courts, but that there are no records of cases dealing with the issue in any of the Federal Reporters or online databases we could find. We are then left to ourselves to try to explain and understand how this might have happened. Let us offer three possible and even probable explanations:

1. IRS Doesn't Argue The 861 Issue or Impose Taxes on People Who Use It. The law on this issue is so clear it doesn't need to be litigated so it never gets into court and is settled by the IRS before it gets to court. They may be content in this case to just keep the truth out of the courts so the whole system doesn't collapse when everyone finds out about this undiscovered/unpublished loophole.

- 1 2. IRS Obfuscation. The IRS keeps coming up with lame excuses why section IRC section 861 doesn't apply, for 2 instance, by raising doubt about the meaning of "foreign". They also misinterpret the 16th Amendment phrase "from 3 whatever source derived", to mean that the source of income is irrelevant, which we clearly know is false.
- 4 3. Federal judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax. We have extensively documented the existence of a federal
 5 judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax in chapter 6. This has lead the federal courts hearing cases dealing with
 6 the 861 issue to ensure that the findings are "unpublished". Going unpublished means the judge seals the court record
 7 for that case and won't allow the court's findings to be put in the Federal Reporter or any online case database so that
 8 others may read the findings and use them as precedents that must be respected later by the courts as part of "stare
 9 decisis." They will do this if the case would be an embarrassment to either the judge personally (because of a conflict
 10 of interest by the judge, for instance) or the government generally. As an example, if a federal district or appellate
 11 court judge is ruling against the U.S. Supreme Court and violating precedent, and doesn't want to have to explain why
 12 or be questioned by the Supreme Court or his supervisors, then he will seal the case record and make the case
 13 unpublished. This conspiratorial tactic, for instance, was quite common among the several Fifth Amendment cases
 14 litigated by the famous tax freedom fighter Bill Conklin in the federal district courts (see section 6.12.7).

15 We think the most likely of the three explanations above is number 3. You will understand why after you read chapter 6
 16 completely, and especially section 6.6, which talks about the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax. If the federal 17 courts are doing what we believe they are doing, then the cases dealing with 26 U.S.C. §861 aren't being published and are
 18 being kept secret by the judges, who after all have a conflict of interest in wanting to perpetuate the flow of revenue that pays
 19 their salaries. However, in the process of sealing the court record for cases dealing with section 861, the courts are 20 demonstrating involvement in extortion, racketeering, and First Amendment and censorship and rights violation, for which 21 these judges should have been prosecuted for a "conspiracy against rights" under 18 U.S.C. §241.

22 Even for unpublished cases, there are still ways to overcome this conspiracy by the courts. If you know the case number and
 23 the court for an unpublished case, you can go directly to the court where the case was heard and request the transcripts and 24 the court's judgment. This will bypass the conspiracy and allow us to gather evidence that will implicate judges in the 25 conspiracy so that we can pursue a class action criminal lawsuit against them. All we need are at least 40 citizens who have 26 been injured by the IRS to put together a class action lawsuit. This leads to the following request we'd like to impose on 27 everyone reading this book:

28 If you litigate the 26 U.S.C. Section 861 issue, we request that you send us your case number and the court and date your
 29 case was heard in so that we can post the case judgment and transcripts, and this is especially true if the judge has sealed
 30 the record of your case or made it unpublished! We promise to post a record of it on our website and submit it to the 31 website at <http://iresist.com/ice/welcome.htm> (Investigation of Curious Evidence, e.g. ICE) for use as legal evidence by 32 other tax freedom fighters. Better yet, please send us a copy of the court's findings as well. Call us up to get the address
 33 to mail it to and we will scan it in and put it on our website. Let's work together against this conspiracy, folks!

34 5.7.6.10 Why the 861 argument is not good to use in court

35 In closing our treatment of the 861 Position, we want to provide valuable insight crafted by one of our more informed readers.
 36 His insights are very revealing in showing why it is probably not a good idea to use the 861 Position in court, and why it is 37 better to focus on jurisdictional issues. His comments will become even clearer after you read section 5.3.1 entitled 38 "Taxpayer" v. "Nontaxpayer". His comments follow this paragraph and occupy the remainder of the section.

39 Long ago, when I knew far less than I do right now, like many folks, I readily grasped the 861 Position that has been so
 40 eloquently explained by Larken Rose. And, I feel, Larken is a genuine American Hero for his noble efforts over the years.
 41 He has educated countless Americans and for that, he is a great man. However, that said, upon further reflection and after 42 much self-study, I came to the conclusion a long time ago, that the 861 thesis is wholly subordinate to the Jurisdictional
 43 Argument. At bottom, it is as simple as this.

44 The IRC is special law, not positive law, as revealed in the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204, and it applies to a small
 45 number of predefined people located in predefined locales. Since I am an American Citizen, I am not one of those predefined
 46 people. And since I am not located inside Washington, DC, or any other federal enclave, I am not located in the IRC's
 47 predefined locality. Therefore, since the IRC does not apply to me, it simply makes no sense to use and apply the IRS' IRC,
 48 in an effort to attempt to prove that it does not apply to me, excepting those applicable sections that reveal the IRC's limited
 49 geographic and territorial jurisdiction. One can readily rely upon U.S. Supreme Court cases and the Organic Laws to prove
 50 the same facts. A lot of well-meaning folks in the Tax Honesty Movement are going to a U.S. Government- controlled

1 territorial court, and attempting to defend themselves by citing the municipal code that is the IRC. I think such an approach
2 is a BIG mistake.

3 The fact is, the IRC is written to ensnare "taxpayers", and, quite appropriately, its provisions are therefore designed to extract
4 income tax from "taxpayers" while also setting forth the payment procedures and IRS practices of collection, etc. But one
5 must always keep in mind how the IRC defines the term, "taxpayer." According to the IRC, a "taxpayer" is one who is subject
6 to or liable for an income tax. So any section of the IRC or tax regulations that uses the term "taxpayer", should set off an
7 ALARM!!! I do not believe that one who believes themselves to be a "nontaxpayer", should be relying upon a regulation
8 that uses the term "taxpayer", within the actual regulation. The impact of this all-encompassing definition of "taxpayer" is 9 sweeping in its effect and it literally "sweeps-up" everything in its path.

10 Here is one example of what I mean. This reveals the danger of relying solely upon 861 without buttressing it with the more
11 powerful jurisdictional thesis. At 26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c) it says:

12 "The taxpayer's taxable income from sources within or without the United States will be determined under the 13 rules of Secs.1.861-8 through 1.861-14T for determining taxable income from sources within the United States."

14 DANGER!! DANGER!! WILL ROBINSON!! Notice how the regulation asserts "The taxpayers taxable income. . .blah,
15 blah" So, right up front they are saying if you use this section to determine taxable income, then ergo, you must be a
16 "taxpayer" who HAS taxable income.

17 Look, an 'alleged' taxpayer who uses 861 to demonstrate that they DO NOT have any taxable income, is arguing against 18 themselves and running in place. Why? Because they do not meet the definition of "taxpayer" as defined at 26 U.S.C.
19 §7701(a)(14). If one is truly a "non-taxpayer", then it makes no sense to use regulations written only for "taxpayers", in order
20 to try and prove that one is NOT a taxpayer!!!

21 The tax regulations are for the benefit (chuckle) of "taxpayers" and apply only to them. ONLY "taxpayers" can have taxable
22 income. The quoted section above is ONLY applicable to "taxpayers". And taxpayers are those who have taxable income.
23 The section is craftily written and applies circular logic to keep one within the jurisdiction of the IRC and the IRS.

24 What I am saying is very careful, because the 861 regulations are a trap and a ruse. Especially inside a courtroom. The 861
25 regulations are specifically designed to ensnare those poor souls who can't see the dangerous word-games that are being used
26 to trap them in a house of mirrors. And rest assured, judges continually take silent judicial notice of the ensnaring nature of 27 the 861 regulations, without ever recognizing evidence that refutes or disproves the 861 regs. 861 Regs apply a series of 28 circular logic stratagems to en-snare folks and keep them arguing within the scope (and the jurisdiction) of the IRC.

29 5.7.6.11 Common IRS and tax professional objections to the 861/source issue with rebuttal

30 In this subsection, we play the devil's advocate and document all of the deceiving, obfuscating, ill-informed criticisms,
31 complaints, and downright lies you are likely to hear from the IRS in responding to the issues raised in this chapter. The IRS
32 will take these approaches because they will do anything to hold on to your money (remember 1 Tim. 6:10 "The love of 33 money is the root of all evil."?), even if you aren't liable for tax. Their deceitful and unethical lawyers have no scruples and
34 will say whatever they have to, including lying to you in order to keep you paying taxes you aren't liable for. Why not lie?:
35 The regulations and the courts say they can't be held legally liable for the advice they give you! But if you give them bad
36 numbers based on your misunderstanding of the proper application of the Internal Revenue Code, they fine and penalize you.
37 Hypocrisy!!

38 We are including these arguments so you can take the offensive with the IRS by being proactive in anticipating the problems
39 they will try to create and having answers for them. We have to keep the Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) on the defensive
40 at all times. Don't ever let yourself be on the defensive or be unprepared with them, because they will try to carve you up by 41 intimidating you with your own ignorance and fear as their best offensive weapon! Don't hand them that card to play with.
42 Knowledge is power, and you can have the lion's share of the power just by reading and studying this book and our website!

43 5.7.6.11.1 "We are all taxpayers. You can't get out of paying income tax because the law says you are liable."

44 IRS OBJECTION: "We're all taxpayers. You can't get out of paying income tax because the law says you are liable."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “Show me the law that makes me liable as a Citizen of the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states and don’t refer in your answer to the fraudulent IRS Publications, but instead to the Internal Revenue Code and your Regulations themselves. The fact is, there is no law and I vehemently deny any liability for tax. Until such time as you can show me proof with the law itself that I am a ‘taxpayer’, I don’t want you referring to me as such, but instead using the term ‘National’. You are only using the term ‘taxpayer’ to keep me on the defensive and to shift the burden of proof onto me, but you are the person who has the burden of proof at this point until you demonstrate otherwise.”

5.7.6.11.2 “Section 861 says that all income is taxable.”

IRS OBJECTION: “26 U.S.C. §861 says that income of most people is taxable.”

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE:

This is a common erroneous “interpretation” which the IRS and tax professionals have regarding Section 861, which is that it is relevant to everyone, but that it does show the income of most people to be taxable. This is due in large part to the general language used in Section 861, which reads:

*“Sec. 861. Income from sources within the United States
(a) Gross income from sources within United States
The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States: (1)
Interest - Interest from the United States... (2) Dividends... (3) Personal services - Compensation for labor...”*
[26 U.S.C. §861]

(Interestingly, most tax professionals are aware that the application of this section is not as broad as it appears to be at first glance.)

As shown above, this section of the statutes applies only in determining taxable income from ‘specific sources,’ which are all related to international and foreign commerce. The history of the regulations and statutes, as shown above, make this point clear. However, certain sections of the regulations (taken out of context) are used to try to support the claim that the tax is not limited to the “specific sources.”

(The entire issue of “residual groupings” mentioned below is settled easily using the older regulations, but for the sake of completeness it will also be dealt with using the current regulations. The following explanation deals with an issue intended to be confusing; it is included for the purpose of being thorough in documenting and refuting anything likely to be used to try to refute the conclusions of this report.)

The regulations define a “statutory grouping” of gross income as income from a specific source, while “residual grouping of gross income” means income from anywhere else.

“...the term ‘statutory grouping of gross income’ or ‘statutory grouping’ means the gross income from a specific source or activity... (See paragraph (f)(1) of this section.) Gross income from other sources or activities is referred to as the ‘residual grouping of gross income’ or ‘residual grouping.’”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

The argument is that income from somewhere other than the “specific sources” may also be taxable. The idea is that “gross income” must constitute “taxable income” (after deductions are subtracted), since the definition of “taxable income” is “gross income” minus deductions. However, the regulations often use the term “gross income” in a more general way, meaning any income, whether taxable or not. In fact, the regulations specifically state that the “residual grouping” may be excluded from federal taxation.

“...the residual grouping may include, or consist entirely of, excluded income. See paragraph (d)(2) of this section with respect to the allocation and apportionment of deductions to excluded income.”
[26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

A clear example of tax-exempt income being referred to as “gross income” in a “residual grouping” is shown below. As stated in 26 U.S.C. §882(a)(2), foreign corporations are only taxable on “gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States.” The following example therefore shows

1 that any regulation which discusses “gross income” (not “taxable income”) from the “residual grouping” in no way
2 shows that the residual grouping must be taxable.

3 “(iii) Apportionment Since X is a foreign corporation, the statutory grouping is gross income effectively
4 connected with X's trade of business in the United States, namely gross income from sources within the United
5 States, and the residual grouping is gross income not effectively connected with a trade or business in the 6 United States, namely gross income from countries A and B.”
7 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(g), Example 21]

8 The fact that the regulations refer to income as “gross income” does not mean it is taxable. In discussing an item of 9 income, the regulations state the following:

10 “Gross income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services
11 performed in the United States...”
12 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-4]

13 In the generic sense, compensation for labor within the United States** (the federal zone) is "gross income."
14 However, as the current regulations repeatedly explain, it can only be “taxable income” if it comes from a “specific 15 source.” The older regulations dealt with this “item” of income in a very similar way, and the context of the 16 surrounding regulations made it perfectly clear in what situations this “item” could be taxable.

17 “Sec. 29.119-1. Income from sources within the United States.
18 Nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations
19 entitled to the benefits of section 251 are taxable only upon income from sources within the United States...”

20 The Internal Revenue Code divides the income of such taxpayer into three classes:

- 21 (1) Income which is derived in full from sources within the United States;
22 (2) Income which is derived in full from sources without the United States;
23 (3) Income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States...

24 Sec. 29.119-2. Interest...

25 Sec. 29.119-3. Dividends...

26 Sec. 29.119-4. Compensation for labor or personal services. - Except as provided in section 119(a)(3), gross
27 income from sources within the United States includes compensation for labor or personal services
28 performed within the United States...

29 Sec. 29.119-5. Rentals and royalties...

30 Sec. 29.119-6. Sale of real property...

31 Sec. 29.119-10. Apportionment of deductions.

32 From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources
33 within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations
34 engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted [allowable deductions]. The remainder
35 shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States...”

36 The fact that income is referred to in the regulations as “gross income” certainly doesn't mean it is taxable. In fact,
37 after stating that the “residual grouping of gross income” may or may not be taxable, the regulations refer the reader
38 to “paragraph (d)(2)” regarding “excluded income.” As shown above, the only types of income listed as not exempt 39 are:

40 “(A) In the case of a foreign taxpayer...

41 (B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC...

42 (C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code... the gross income of a possessions corporation...

43 (D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder...”

44 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii)]

45 Deductions must be divided between the “statutory grouping” (income from a specific source) and the “residual 46 grouping” (income from anywhere else). This does not mean that the “residual grouping” is taxable. The regulations
47 show in several places that there must be an “operative section” which applies in order to determine taxable income.

48 “A taxpayer to which this section applies is required to allocate deductions to a class of gross income and, then,
49 if necessary to make the determination required by the operative section of the Code, to apportion deductions
50 within the class of gross income between the statutory grouping of gross income (or among the statutory 51 groupings) and the residual grouping of gross income.”
52 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2)]

1 The regulation which states that the “residual grouping” may be exempt from taxation also shows that there must be
2 an “operative section” applicable.

3 “In some instances, where the operative section so requires, the statutory grouping or the residual grouping may 4 include, or consist entirely of, excluded income.”
5 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)]

6 This is only logical, based on the simple fact that the section “for determining taxable income from sources within 7 the United States” (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) states over and over again that it is for determining taxable income from 8 “specific sources,” not the “residual groupings.”

9 *“The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources
10 and activities under other sections of the Code, referred to in this section as operative sections...”*
11 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 (a)(1)]

12 “The operative sections of the Code which require the determination of taxable income of the taxpayer from 13 specific sources or activities and which give rise to statutory groupings to which this section is applicable include 14 the sections described below...”
15 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 (f)(1)]

16 *“A taxpayer to which this section applies is required to allocate deductions to a class of gross income and, then,
17 if necessary to make the determination required by the operative section of the Code, to apportion deductions...”*
18 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(2)]

19 The regulations (and statutes) are not about determining taxable income from anywhere other than the “specific 20 sources.” Part of the confusion is from the fact that, in stating that the “residual grouping” may consist of excluded
21 income, the regulations imply that it also may be taxable. This is correct, but deceptive. The possibility of the 22 “residual grouping” being taxable could easily lead to the erroneous conclusion that income from somewhere other
23 than the “specific sources” might be taxable. The assumption is that the “residual grouping” cannot be from one of 24 the listed “specific sources.” This is not the case.

25 If person ‘A’ gets taxable income from two “specific sources” (taxable activities described in “operative sections”),
26 the regulations state that all the calculations must be done for each “specific source” separately. Paragraph (f)(1)
27 lists the “specific sources” under the “operative sections,” and then the next paragraph states the following:

28 *“(i) Where more than one operative section applies, it may be necessary for the taxpayer to apply this section
29 separately for each applicable operative section.”*
30 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(2)]

31 While person ‘A’ is calculating all the deductions, etc. for the first “specific source,” his income from the second
32 “specific source” falls in the category of “residual grouping.” Likewise, when he is doing the calculations for the 33 taxable income from the second “specific source,” the income from the first is in the “residual grouping.” The 34 temporary regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T demonstrate this.

35 *“Thus, in determining the separate limitations on the foreign tax credit imposed by section 904(d)(1) or by section
36 907, the income within a separate limitation category constitutes a statutory grouping of income and all other 37 income not within that separate limitation category (whether domestic or within a different separate limitation 38 category) constitutes the residual grouping.”*
39 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(c)(1)]

40 (The same thing is said again in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(f)(1)(ii).)

41 Even an example in the regulations showing that the “residual grouping” may be taxable therefore does not imply
42 that income from somewhere other than the “specific sources” may be taxable. The “operative sections” involving 43 individuals receiving income from within federal possessions also makes it possible for an American to have 44 “taxable income” from within and without the United States** (the federal zone).

45 The “residual grouping” argument relies on making assumptions based on something that complex deduction 46 allocation examples might seem to suggest, but do not state (that income not from the “specific sources” can be 47 taxable), while at the same time ignoring several sections of regulations which contradict this theory. The over-
48 complexity of these regulations seems designed to cause confusion and uncertainty. But even if the current

1 complicated regulations by themselves, combined with some “creative interpretation,” allowed for the “residual
2 grouping” argument to have some credibility, the older regulations (as shown above) erase that credibility entirely.

3 The 1945 regulations made no mention of “operative sections,” “specific sources,” “statutory groupings” or “residual
4 groupings,” and didn’t take dozens of pages to create a jumbled, confusing mess. Since there was nothing about 5 “residual groupings” back then to base an argument on, to use the argument now would require the claim that since
6 1945 there must have been a massive expansion of what income is taxable, from international and foreign commerce
7 to all commerce, and that the Secretary decided to inform the public of this by innuendos hidden in confusing
8 examples about deduction allocation related to the per-country limitation on the foreign tax credit. (And, as shown
9 before, Congress stated that “no substantive change” was made anyway.)

10 The common “interpretation” of the Internal Revenue Code relies on multiple assumptions, as well as simply 11 ignoring various sections which contradict those assumptions. Some may wish to imagine that some other “sources”
12 of income which the law does not mention must also be taxable. Some may like to assume that everything is taxable
13 unless the law specifically says it is not. And some may say that if there is some uncertainty about what the law
14 requires, then the government by default “wins.” All of these are in direct conflict with a basic principle of tax law,
15 which has been explained on numerous occasions by the Supreme Court.

16 *“In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes it is the established rule not to extend their provisions, by
17 implication, beyond the clear import of the language used, or to enlarge their operations so as to embrace matters
18 not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the government, and in 19 favor of the citizen.”*

20 [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151 (1917)]

21 *“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by
22 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be
23 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”*

24 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

25 The extensive evidence of the correct, limited application of the income tax leaves little room for doubt. But even 26 if the IRS, or others who would challenge the conclusions of this report, could obfuscate and confuse matters to the 27 point where “it could go either way,” the Supreme Court makes it clear that such a disagreement is to be settled in 28 favor of the Citizen, not the government.

29 5.7.6.11.3 “IRC Section 861 falls under Subchapter N, Part I, which deals only with FOREIGN Income”

30 IRS OBJECTION: “26 U.S.C. Section 861 only deals with Foreign income and falls under Subchapter N (‘Subchapter N -
31 Tax Based on Income From Sources Within or Without’), Part I of the code, which is entitled ‘SOURCE RULES
32 AND OTHER GENERAL RULES RELATING TO FOREIGN INCOME’. You shouldn’t be looking in this 33 section to identify taxable sources because it doesn’t pertain to most Americans, who don’t have foreign income.”

34 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “First of all, 26 U.S.C. §7806 makes your comment irrelevant, because it says that the titles, 35 table of contents, and organization of the code mean nothing and have no force and effect. Since the word “Foreign”
36 is only used in the title, then it is irrelevant to the discussion:

37 United States Code
38 TITLE 26 - INTERNAL REVENUE CODE
39 Subtitle F - Procedure and Administration
40 CHAPTER 80 - GENERAL RULES
41 Subchapter A - Application of Internal Revenue Laws
42 Sec. 7806. Construction of title

43 (b) Arrangement and classification

44 No inference, implication, or presumption of legislative construction shall be drawn or made by reason of the 45 location or grouping of any particular section or provision or portion of this title, nor shall any table of
46 contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of 47 this title be given any legal effect. The preceding sentence also applies to the sidenotes and ancillary tables
48 contained in the various prints of this Act before its enactment into law.

Second, as we analyze in detail in section 6.8.8 of this document, the title of Part I used to be “Determination of sources of income” and was obfuscated by Congress in 1988 to instead read “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income”. The underlying procedures and source rules were not substantially changed. Only the title was changed to further confuse people about source rules and cover up the truth.

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: What other conclusion explains why this change was made other than to confuse and further conceal the truth? We can see none.

Even entertaining the notion that your argument about “foreign” is relevant, please answer the question of why does IRC section 861 deal with sources both ‘within and without’ the United States? Doesn’t “foreign income” only come from without the United States** (the federal zone) by the definition of “foreign” found in the collegiate dictionary? Let’s not forget the definition of the term “United States”, which really only means the District of Columbia and the “federal zone”. Furthermore, why does neither the Internal Revenue Code or 26 C.F.R. define the word “foreign” anywhere unless there was an intent to conceal the true jurisdiction of the U.S. government? Here are a few examples of the correct meaning of this word from commercial law dictionaries:

Foreign Laws: “The laws of a foreign country or sister state.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 647]

Foreign States: “Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term ‘foreign nations’, ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought; and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 648]

Why is the word ‘within’ also included in the title to Part I and section 861? As we discussed in section 5.2.14 “The definition of ‘foreign income’ relative to the Internal Revenue Code”, all income earned from outside the District of Columbia and other parts of the “federal zone” is counted as “foreign income” as far as Congress is concerned. If I am a natural person and a “national” but not a “U.S. citizen” domiciled in one of the 50 sovereign states of the United States of America outside of the federal zone, then as far as the U.S. Government is concerned, all of my income comes from a foreign “source” and therefore section 861 absolutely DOES apply to my tax situation and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1 does define state citizens engaged in a public office as a “nonresident alien”!

Also, how do you explain the changes made to section 61 of the tax code in approximately 1982 where references pointing to section 861 were deliberately removed by Congress? These references had previously been part of the code since 1921 and indicated that section 861 of the code was to be used for determining valid sources of income! What new law or court case permitted or requires this ‘hiding of evidence’ and further obfuscation of the tax code? Instead, we think Congress just changed the title of the subsection to confuse people into not looking in this section and to hide the fact that this applies to everyone! Earlier versions of the law made it much clearer that citizens with income from the 50 Union states weren’t liable for federal income tax. Under the original tax code, most “persons” outside of the “federal zone” were nonresident citizens of the U.S. paying taxes on income from a “foreign source”. Why has this been progressively hidden in the tax code over the years for no disclosed reason? The IRS is trying to blow smoke and confuse people with the law instead of telling the truth directly to people...that if they are state citizens domiciled in the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states, then they don’t owe tax. Please show me a positive law federal statute somewhere that contradicts this conclusion about tax liability and is consistent with 1:2:3 (apportionment requirement for direct taxes), 1:9:4 (constraints on direct taxes) and 1:8:1-3 (taxing authority) of the Constitution and the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Thirteenth Amendments to the Constitution. Direct taxes based on income violate so many provisions of the U.S. Constitution it isn’t funny, and the Sixteenth Amendment, even if you count it as a validly ratified law, didn’t change that situation or amend these sections to make an exception.

If you aren’t going to refer to section 861 for taxable sources within and without the United States** (the federal zone), then what section in the code ARE you going to use to specify specific taxable sources? There are at least two Supreme Court cases that state that a tax on income is NOT a tax on its “source”, including James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213 and United States v. Burke, 504 U.S. 229. You must tie the income tax somewhere in the code to a specific geographic area and/or taxable event (excise), which are collectively called a “situs”, or the IRC would be invalid and would apply to everyone in the world! This would violate the Sixth Amendment and the ‘void for vagueness’ criteria we define in sections 3.11.11 and 5.10. The Supreme Court has ruled repeatedly that the income tax is an excise/indirect tax and is unconstitutional as a direct tax (Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103; Evans v.

1 Gore, 253 U.S. 245), and excises always apply to geographic areas and events. I assume the event is the receipt of 2 income, but where is the section that identifies the geographic area if it isn't 861?"

3 5.7.6.11.4 "The Sixteenth Amendment says 'from whatever source derived'...this means the source doesn't 4 matter!"

5 IRS OBJECTION: "The Sixteenth Amendment says 'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes,
6 from whatever source derived'. This means that the source doesn't matter. Why all the big deal about something
7 that is irrelevant?"

8 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "The Treasury regulations on taxable source make it very clear that specific sources must be
9 identified as taxable in order for the income to be taxable. See 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 thru 1.861-14, which identify 10 specific taxable sources. If sources don't matter, why do these regulations even exist? For instance, 26 C.F.R.
11 §1.861-8(a) says:

12 "...The rules contained in this section apply in determining taxable income of the taxpayer from specific sources
13 and activities under other sections of the Code referred to in this section as operative sections. See paragraph 14 (f)(1) of this section for a list and description of operative sections."
15 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)]

16 And what about 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(a)(4)?:

17 (4) Statutory grouping of gross income and residual grouping of gross income.
18 For purposes of this section, the term "statutory grouping of gross income" or "statutory grouping" means the 19 gross income from a specific source or activity which must first be determined in order to arrive at "taxable
20 income" from which specific source or activity under an operative section. (See paragraph (f)(1) of this 21 section.)...

22 This approach by the IRS rests on the misreading of "from whatever source derived" (as used in 26 U.S.C. §61) to
23 mean "no matter where it comes from." This interpretation requires the reader to ignore all of the evidence presented
24 in section 5.7.6.4 ("Sources of Income") and section 5.7.6.5 ("Determining Taxable Income from U.S.** Sources")
25 of this document; most notably, the sections of regulations which state that Section 861 and following, and the 26 regulations thereunder, "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax," and the sections which
27 state that "determining taxable income from sources within the United States" is to be done using 26 U.S.C. §861(b)
28 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8. It is a frivolous position because it is in disagreement with the U.S. Supreme Court also:

29 "The Court has hitherto consistently held that a literal reading of a provision of the Constitution which defeats a
30 purpose evident when the instrument is read as a whole, is not to be favored... [and one of the examples they give
31 is...]'From whatever source derived,' as it is written in the Sixteenth Amendment, does not mean from whatever
32 source derived. Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245, 40 S.Ct. 550, 11 A.L.R. 519. See, also, Robertson v. Baldwin, 165
33 U.S. 275, 281, 282 S. 17 S.Ct. 326; Gompers v. United States, 233 U.S. 604, 610, 34 S.Ct. 693, Ann.Cas.1915D,
34 1044; Bain Peanut Co. v. Pinson, 282 U.S. 499, 501, 51 S.Ct. 228, 229; United States v. Lefkowitz, 285 U.S. 452,
36 [Wright v. U.S., 302 U.S. 583 (1938)]

37 How's that for an amazing admission? For support, the court cites another case (Evans v. Gore), and here are some 38 quotes from that case (emphasis added):

39 "[T]o enable Congress to reach all TAXABLE income more conveniently and effectively than would be possible
40 as to much of it if an apportionment among the states were essential, the Sixteenth Amendment was proposed and 41 ratified. In other words, the purpose of the amendment was to eliminate all occasion for such an apportionment
42 because of the source from which the income came, -A CHANGE IN NO WISE AFFECTING THE POWER
43 TO TAX but only the mode of EXERCISING it."
44 [Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

45 The court mentions that the governor of New York "expressed some apprehension lest [the 16th Amendment] might 46 be construed as EXTENDING THE TAXING POWER TO INCOME NOT TAXABLE BEFORE," but that those who 47 proposed the amendment described its purpose proving that was not the case. Back to Evans v. Gore, the court went 48 on...

"Thus the genesis and words of the amendment unite in showing that it DOES NOT EXTEND THE TAXING POWER TO NEW OR EXCEPTED SUBJECTS, but merely removes all occasion otherwise existing for an apportionment among the states of taxes laid on income, whether derived from one source or another."
[Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

We're not sure why they beat this point to death like they did, but we're glad they did.

"It is not, in view of recent decisions, contended that [the 16th Amendment] rendered anything taxable as income that was NOT so taxable before."
[Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

This frivolous position by the IRS is therefore the result of backwards logic. Tax professionals start with the incorrect assumption that most people receive taxable income. Therefore, when they discover that (for example) 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 does not show most income to be taxable income, they incorrectly conclude (based on a false premise) that that section should not be used by most people, even though the regulations clearly state otherwise. This is usually stated as "that section doesn't apply to you." The following analogy demonstrates the logical flaw with this half-truth.

As shown above (see "English vs. Legalese", section 5.7.6.3), one section of the statutes of Subtitle E states that the Secretary shall maintain a central registry of "all firearms." But a separate section defines the term "firearm," and the legal meaning is far more restrictive than the meaning of the word in common English. For example, a basic hunting rifle is obviously a "firearm" in common English, but is not considered a "firearm" for purposes of Section 5841. An individual who owns one hunting rifle could, therefore, correctly state that Section 5841 does not impose any obligation on him.

Now imagine someone arguing to him the following: "The definition of 'firearms' doesn't apply to your firearm, so you should just ignore the definition in Section 5845. Just look at Section 5841, where it says 'all firearms.' That includes your rifle." Such an argument would be ludicrous, and yet this is precisely the logic (or lack of logic) used by the tax professionals regarding 26 U.S.C. §861.

Section 61 defines "gross income" generally as "all income from whatever source derived," and Part I of Subchapter N (Section 861 and following) and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." Many tax professionals will argue that Section 861 "doesn't apply" to most people, and therefore most readers should ignore the sections which "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This is entirely illogical, but it is the only way for the tax professionals to avoid coming face-to-face with their monumental error. Contrary to the evidence, they continue to claim that most citizens receive taxable income.

The main citation used in an attempt to justify this misinterpretation is found in the regulations related to Section 1 of the statutes (which imposes the income tax).

"Sec. 1.1-1 Income tax on individuals.
(a) General rule. (1) Section 1 of the Code imposes an income tax on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States and, to the extent provided by section 871(b) or 877(b), on the income of a nonresident alien individual... The tax imposed is upon taxable income (determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from gross income).
(b) Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax. In general, all citizens of the United States, wherever resident, and all resident alien individuals are liable to the income taxes imposed by the Code whether the income is received from sources within or without the United States."

This section is a masterpiece of deception. While being literally correct (as the law must be), it is likely to give the wrong impression. Stating that a tax is imposed "on the income of every individual who is a citizen or resident" of the U.S. gives the impression that all income of these individuals is taxable. But anyone even slightly familiar with Internal Revenue Code knows this is not the case. The section goes on to specify that the tax is not on all income, but on "taxable income" (which is "gross income" minus deductions). As shown above, 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 is the section for determining "taxable income" from within the United States** (the federal zone). The language could just as easily (and just as correctly) stated that "everyone on earth, no matter where he is and no matter where his income comes from, is taxable upon his taxable income." The meaning of the statement is, of course, totally dependent upon the meaning of "taxable income."

Subsection “(b)” also gives a false impression at first glance, while being literally correct. It doesn't matter where someone lives, provided that he receives income from “sources” within or without the United States** (the federal zone). And Part I of Subchapter N and related regulations “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”

It is a word game, where what may be inferred differs from what is actually stated. If someone does not have “taxable income,” and if someone does not receive “income from sources” (as defined by law), then 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 becomes irrelevant. Nothing in the section has any effect on the legal meaning of “taxable income” or “sources of income.” Instead, the section uses these terms in a context which makes them sound less restricted.

The predecessors of the current regulations were worded slightly differently.

*“19.11-1 Income tax on individuals
Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code [*]... imposes an income tax on individuals, including a normal tax (section 11), a surtax (section 12), and a defense tax [*]... The tax is upon net income which is determined by subtracting the allowable deductions from the gross income. (See generally 21 to 24, inclusive.)”*

[* - Words omitted related only to which years the law was applicable.]

*“19.11-2 Citizens or residents of the United States liable to tax
In general, citizens of the United States, wherever resident, are liable to the tax, and it makes no difference that they may own no assets within the United States and may receive no income from sources within the United States. Every resident alien individual is liable to the tax, even though his income is wholly from sources outside the United States.”*

The wording of these regulations (from 1945), while deceptive, does not give quite as persuasive a deception as the current regulations. The only solid conclusion which can be inferred from these older regulations is that income from outside of the United States** (the federal zone) can be taxable to United States citizens and residents.

5.7.6.11.5 “The courts have consistently ruled against the 861 issue”

IRS OBJECTION: “The courts have consistently ruled against the 861 issue. This issue won't go anywhere and is frivolous.”

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “Oh really? We haven't found a single case since 1930 in any of the federal district or appellate courts or since 1900 in the U.S. Supreme Court that mentions the 861/source issue. Can you please quote me the specific case numbers and names so I can research it for myself to validate your specific assertions?” Furthermore, your own Internal Revenue Manual says in section 4.10.7.2.9.8 that you can't quote cases below the Supreme Court to apply to more than the person who was the subject of the suit, so please give me a Supreme Court cite that proves your contention.

LIKELY IRS RESPONSE TO YOUR RESPONSE: “I don't have time to deal with this and I'm not here to give legal advice. You need to get a lawyer who understands the laws because you certainly don't. You're walking on thin ice and headed for trouble, buddy.”

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: “IRS Publication 1 says about the rights of ‘taxpayers’:

“I. IRS employees will explain and protect your rights as a taxpayer throughout your contact with us.”

[QUESTION: What about my right to not be taxed directly per the constitution 1:9:4? What about my Fifth Amendment right not to be compelled to testify against myself? What about my First Amendment right to NOT be compelled or penalized NOT communicating with my government on a tax return? What about my right to understand the law and what is specifically prohibited as required by the Sixth Amendment?]

“IRS Mission Statement: ‘Provide Americas taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all.’”

[QUESTION: What about 'citizens' who technically aren't 'taxpayers' but are being deceived into thinking they are and want to know the law that makes them liable? Do they get equal treatment under the law and a proper explanation of their non-liability to pay income taxes and the legal foundation for it? How can I properly apply the tax laws if IRS employees won't interpret it for me or help or show me where I can read and interpret it myself? Why aren't employees at the IRS held liable for the advice they give, especially if following it causes me to end up paying a fine? Why have them helping me at all on your 800 number if they can't be held legally responsible for the advice they give me and refuse to describe my legal obligations without referring to the IRS Publications, which we have said repeatedly are a fraud and do not have the force of law?]

"You are responsible for paying only the correct amount of tax due under the law—no more, no less."

[QUESTION: How can a Citizen know the correct amount of tax due if IRS support people won't refer to the tax law and insist on using IRS Publications, which are clearly in error and which the courts have consistently ruled do not have the force of law?]

Did you notice that the IRS consistently called ALL PEOPLE "taxpayers" above? Does that mean that if you don't pay tax, you have NO rights and that you are fair game for the predators and extortionists at the IRS? We have found personally that you can easily answer this question for yourself by calling their 800 number for help. Call them and assert that you have no income tax liability, correct them when they refer to you as a "taxpayer" and insist instead that they refer to you as an American and that it is their responsibility under the law to demonstrate your liability and meet the burden of proof imposed upon them under the Administrative Procedures Act, 5 U.S.C. §556(d) before you will refer to yourself otherwise. You will find out, as we did, that they will put you on hold forever, get rude and belligerent, refuse to talk to you, and won't show you the law that makes you liable because there is none, and will then refuse to talk about anything but the fraudulent IRS Publications! This ought to be a big red flag that it's all a big fraud! Why do they do this? Because if they listen to you and learn the truth, someone might drag them into court and prosecute them for conspiracy to violate rights and misapplication of the law and breach of fiduciary duty. This is also the reason why they won't give you their full name or direct phone number or email or mail address—they don't want to be held legally liable in any way because they know they don't have a legal leg to stand on.

This last response by the IRS is a scare/intimidation tactic to keep you afraid and ignorant but avoid the law or liability for communicating the law to you correctly and completely in order to protect themselves from culpability for improperly implementing it (this is called "plausible deniability", and they use it as a self-defense mechanism). Instead, the IRS wants to force another expensive attorney to wear you out financially and abuse you in hopes that you will exhaust and wear out quickly and no longer be a bother to them. This same attorney they want you to get will let you die on the vine in front of the judge because he is an "officer of the court" who can only practice law in court with the permission and approval of a federal judge who receives bribes every month in his paycheck that are derived from tax dollars extorted illegally from you.

5.7.6.11.6 "You are misunderstanding and misapplying the law and you're asking for trouble"

IRS OBJECTION: "You are misunderstanding and misapplying the law and you're asking for trouble."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "Then why aren't you helping me interpret the law correctly? Why is it that you can make me afraid of misapplying the law but won't tell me how to correctly apply it to either define or meet my alleged tax liabilities as your mission statement obligates you to do? Could it be that you want to use my own fear and ignorance to make me compliant and paying the largest amount of tax and penalties instead of empowering me with the knowledge of the law needed to pay the minimum tax and penalties? Prove to me that I am wrong and prove to me that I am liable to pay tax, because I am convinced I'm not liable and would like to give you the benefit of the doubt!"

5.7.6.11.7 "Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co. case makes the source of income irrelevant and taxes all sources"

IRS OBJECTION: "The U.S. Supreme Court has already dealt with the frivolous 861 'source' issue in the case of Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955). That ruling makes the source of income irrelevant. See IRS Notice 2001-40. The IRS stated the following in their Notice 2001-40, available from <http://ftp.fedworld.gov/pub/irs-drop/n-01-40.pdf>. The Notice 2001-40 was issued on 07-Jun-01 00:30 and the hyperlink to this IRS Notice [ n-01-40.pdf ] can be found at: <http://ftp.fedworld.gov/pub/irs-drop/>

The proponents of this position misread the Code and the Treasury Regulations. Although the proponents acknowledge that section 1 imposes income tax on "taxable income," that taxable income "consists of "gross income” minus deductions (section 63) and that “gross income” is income “from whatever source derived” (section 61), they assert that sections 861 through 865 of the Code and the regulations thereunder (in particular, Treasury regulation section 1.861-8) limit taxable “sources” of income to certain foreign-based activities.

That assertion is refuted by the express and unambiguous terms of the Code. Section 61 includes in gross income “all income from whatever source derived.” As the Supreme Court stated in Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 429 (1955), “Congress applied no limitations as to the source of taxable receipts . . . @. Nothing in sections 861 to 865 of the Code limits the gross income subject to United States taxation to foreign-source income. The rules of sections 861 through 865 have significance in determining whether income is considered from sources within the United States or without the United States, which is relevant, for example, in determining whether a U.S. citizen or resident may claim a credit for foreign taxes paid. See Great-West Life Assurance Co. v. United States, 678 F.2d. 180, 183 (Ct. Cl. 1982) (stating that “[t]he determination of where income is derived or ‘sourced’ is generally of no moment to either United States citizens or United States corporations, for such persons are subject to tax under I.R.C. § 1 and I.R.C. §. 11, respectively, on their worldwide income” and that “[u]nikewise, the income of a resident alien individual is taxed under I.R.C. § 1 without regard to source”). The source rules do not operate to exclude from U.S. taxation income earned by United States persons from sources within the United States. Williams v. Commissioner, 114 T.C. 136 (2000) (rejecting the claim that income was not subject to tax because it was not from any of the sources listed in Treas. Reg. sec. 1.861-8(a)); Aiello v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1995-40 (1995) 2(rejecting the claim that section 861 lists the only sources of income relevant for purposes of section 61).

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE:

First of all, did you notice that the IRS committed a deliberate typo in their quote from Commissioner v. Glenshaw Glass Co., whereby you put an @ sign where there should have been a close quote. The IRS, in that Notice, was trying to deceive the reader that their own assertions were actually quoted from the Supreme Court. You want me to believe that the following statement came from the Supreme Court, when in fact it does not because we looked up the case:

Nothing in sections 861 to 865 of the Code limits the gross income subject to United States taxation to foreign-source income. The rules of sections 861 through 865 have significance in determining whether income is considered from sources within the United States or without the United States, which is relevant, for example, in determining whether a U.S. citizen or resident may claim a credit for foreign taxes paid.

More IRS deception. The close quote should appear where the @ sign was based on reading the case. Secondly, the Glenshaw case was about the following issue quoted directly from that case:

The common question is whether money received as exemplary damages for fraud or as the punitive two-thirds portion of a treble-damage antitrust recovery must be reported by a taxpayer as gross income under 22 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939.

The party to that case was not arguing the 861 position, and as a matter of fact, the case dealt with an older version of the code with different section numbers.

Next, we note that the most authoritative cite they have at the end of the article is from T.C. Memos, which may NOT be cited to apply generally to all Americans as per their own Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8:

“Decisions made at various levels of the court system are considered to be interpretations of tax laws and may be used by either examiners or taxpayers to support a position.

Certain court cases lend more weight to a position than others. A case decided by the U.S. Supreme Court becomes the law of the land and takes precedence over decisions of lower courts. The Internal Revenue Service must follow Supreme Court decisions. For examiners, Supreme Court decisions have the same weight as the Code.

Decisions made by lower courts, such as Tax Court, District Courts, or Claims Court, are binding on the Service only for the particular taxpayer and the years litigated. Adverse decisions of lower courts do not require the Service to alter its position for other taxpayers.”
[Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.9.8 (05/14/99)]

More IRS deception. So clearly, the only thing we can rely on in everything they cited above is the Supreme Court Glenshaw case. In that case, the court did not mention whether the party involved was a STATUTORY citizen or a STATUTORY “nonresident alien”. As we repeatedly suggest throughout this book, it’s important to correct government records describing your citizenship status because they create false presumptions that misrepresent your true status as a “non-resident non-person” and a “national under 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) but not “citizen” under 8 U.S.C. §401 to escape the reach of the tax

1 “imposed” in 26 U.S.C. §1. Based on the way they treated this party, we have to assume that he was a “U.S.** citizen” who
2 therefore had no Constitutional rights.

3 Moving on, the Glenshaw court stated:

4 The sweeping scope of the controverted statute is readily apparent:

5 "SEC. 22. GROSS INCOME.

6 "(a) GENERAL DEFINITION. - 'Gross income' includes gains, profits, and income derived 7 from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service . . . of whatever kind and in 8 whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or 9 sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or 10 use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the 11 transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income
12 derived from any source whatever . . ." (Emphasis added.) <sup>4</sup>

13 This Court has frequently stated that this language was used by Congress to exert in this field "the full measure
14 of its taxing power." Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 334; Helvering v. Midland Mutual Life Ins. Co., 300
15 U.S. 216, 223; Douglas v. Willcuts, 296 U.S. 1, 9; Irwin v. Gavit, 268 U.S. 161, 166. Respondents contend that 16 punitive damages, characterized as "windfalls" flowing from the culpable conduct of third parties, are not within 17 the scope of the section. But Congress applied no limitations as to the 18 source of taxable receipts, nor restrictive [348 U.S. 426, 430]
19 labels as to their nature. And the Court has given a liberal construction to this broad 20 phraseology in recognition of the intention of Congress to tax all gains except those specifically exempted.
21 Commissioner v. Jacobson, 336 U.S. 28, 49; Helvering v. Stockholms Enskilda Bank, 293 U.S. 84, 87-91. Thus,
22 the fortuitous gain accruing to a lessor by reason of the forfeiture of a lessee's improvements on the rented
23 property was taxed in Helvering v. Bruun, 309 U.S. 461. Cf. Robertson v. United States, 343 U.S. 711; Rutkin
24 v. United States, 343 U.S. 130; United States v. Kirby Lumber Co., 284 U.S. 1. Such decisions demonstrate that 25 we cannot but ascribe content to the catchall provision of 22 (a), "gains or profits and income derived from any 26 source whatever." The importance of that phrase has been too frequently recognized since its first appearance in 27 the Revenue Act of 1913 <sup>5</sup> to say now that it adds nothing to the meaning of "gross income."

28 The key to deciphering what was said here lies in the definition of “source” and in what context it is used. The question is:

29 Does the word “source” used here by the U.S. Supreme Court mean:

- 30 1. The “source” (or taxable activities within specific identified jurisdictions, which is also called the situs for taxation)
31 of income for the government as per 26 U.S.C. §§861 and 862, or...
32 2. The “source” of income for the subject of the tax, who is the “tax payer”?
33

34 BIG DIFFERENCE!

35 If the Glenshaw case above refers to the tax payer, which we believe it does, then what the court really meant is that if you
36 admit to being a “taxpayer” (meaning a person who mistakenly admits liability for tax) and if you have income, from wherever
37 you get it (“whatever tax payer source derived”), then you have to pay income tax on it, and we would agree with that
38 conclusion! However, that is not the assertion we are making with the 861 argument or the context we are talking about in 39 the context of the word “source”! We are not referring to “sources” of income for the tax payer, but the proper situs of 40 taxation (the lawful and constitutional sources of income) for the excise tax called the income tax assessed by the government,
41 which is completely different, and which the court did not address in the Glenshaw case cited. 26 U.S.C. Sections 861 and 42 862 do NOT talk about “sources” of income for the tax payer, but “sources” of income (taxation situs) for the government.
43 More IRS and government lies and deception.

44 Concluding that the Supreme Court in the Glenshaw case was referring to the situs for taxation or sources of income for the 45 government leads to some rather absurd and irrational conclusions. For instance it leads us to conclude that:

- 46 1. There is no reason for sections 861 (sources within the United States) and 862 (Sources without the United States) to 47 even exist in the tax code, because the “source” (or situs) of government income doesn't matter and all sources of

1 "income" are liable to taxation. Let's get rid of these two sections then, OK? Why do they appear in the code and under 2 what circumstances are they used, then?

- 3 2. That all "sources" of government income from anywhere in the world are taxable, including sources in China (try 4 explaining that to the Chinese!). This would expand the situs for taxation by the U.S. government to everyone in every 5 country anywhere in the world, which is clearly an irrational conclusion.

6 Therefore, the only rational way to interpret the code is to leave sections 861 and 862 intact and to treat them as applying to
7 all government sources of income (situs for taxation), and to ensure that the table found in section 5.7.6.5 entitled
8 "Determining Taxable Income from U.S.** Sources" is applied to every type of income received to determine whether or not
9 the person in receipt of it is liable for tax. That is exactly what 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 does: it tells Americans how to apply
10 the source rules for government income to every item of gross income he is in receipt of in order to determine whether or not 11 it is taxable and consequently, whether he is a "taxpayer".

12 5.7.6.11.8 Frivolous Return Penalty Assessed by IRS for those Using the 861 Position<sup>306</sup>

13 The IRS occasionally blatantly lies to you about your rights, in an attempt to avoid "due process." You ought to be told the 14 truth. The IRS does not want to directly address the 861/"source" issue. They occasionally will try to avoid the issue by 15 threatening to impose a $500 "frivolous return" penalty, supposedly under the authority of 26 U.S.C. §6702, on some who 16 use the 861/"source" issue to file claims for refund. The IRS' letter states that the courts, including the Supreme Court, have 17 ruled such a position to be "frivolous." This is an outright lie. (They are using a form letter which has nothing to do with the 18 861/"issue.") Feel free to ask them for a citation of such a ruling, but don't hold your breath waiting to actually get one.

19 The letter also states that the penalty must be paid in full, before the matter can be appealed. Again, this is an outright lie.
20 According to the Treasury regulations, appeals consideration applies to questions regarding "[I]ability for additions to the 21 tax, additional amounts, and assessable penalties provided under Chapter 68 of the Code [which includes 26 U.S.C. §6702]"
22 (26 C.F.R. §601.106(a)(1)(ii)(c)). And the Internal Revenue Manual agrees, and shows that Appeals consideration can occur
23 before any payment is made.

28 *1. Per IRC 6703, the following procedural rules apply to the penalties under IRC 6700, 6701 and 6702: A. The 29 burden of proof is on the Government...

30 4. IRC 6702 provides a $500 penalty for filing a frivolous return. This penalty is not subject to a reasonable
31 *cause/basis provision. However, penalties under IRC 6702 for returns filed after December 31, 1989, may be 32 appealed under the post-assessment penalty appeal program."

33 Internal Revenue Manual
34 Section 8.11.1.7 (02-26-1999)
35 Postassessment Penalty Appeal Procedure

36 1. Except for the penalties listed below [none applicable to 26 U.S.C. §6702], the Post Assessment Penalty
37 Appeal procedure applies to all assessed additions to the tax, additional amounts and penalties (commonly 38 referred to as penalties) imposed by Chapter 68 of the Code [which includes 26 U.S.C. §6702]...

39 3. Assessed penalties may be appealed before or after payment."

40 As you can also see in the citations above, in a meeting regarding a penalty under 26 U.S.C. §6702, they have the burden of 41 proof (see also 26 U.S.C. §6703). (Since there are no regulations promulgated under 26 U.S.C. §6702, you might also want 42 to ask to see a delegation order allowing them to impose the penalty at all.) It would be interesting (just as one example) to 43 watch them try to prove that it is "frivolous" to use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 for determining taxable income from sources within
44 the United States, when the Treasury regulations specifically and repeatedly state that you should use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8
45 "for determining taxable income from sources within the United States" (26 C.F.R. §1.863-1(c)).

46 Probably the main goal of the IRS is to come up with an excuse to avoid due process altogether, including in-person meetings
47 (which you have the right to record under 26 U.S.C. §7521). They don't want an administrative record showing that they 48 have no substantive rebuttal. However, their manual shows that the return is to be processed regardless of the penalty, so they should not be allowed to get away with ignoring the return, whether they impose the penalty or not. (And this would defeat the whole purpose of their letter, which is to "stonewall" any discussion of the issue.)

*Internal Revenue Manual
IRC section 6702*

*1. IRC section 6702 provides for an immediate assessment of a $500 civil penalty against individuals who file frivolous income tax returns or frivolous amended income tax returns... A frivolous return:... Does constitute a valid return when the Service is able to process the return.

For any return, if the Service challenges it, you have a right to an Examination meeting, a meeting with the examiner's supervisor, and if you can't reach an agreement, Appeals consideration (see 26 C.F.R. §§601.105, 601.106).

The IRS has a lot to lose if they address the issue, and not much to lose by making these stupid threats, false accusations, evasions, etc. They are relying on these tactics to scare or intimidate people. Anyone approaching the IRS, expecting them to act like reasonable, honest people, is in for a rude awakening. If they have nothing to lose, they will most likely ignore the law, ignore your rights, and ignore their own published procedures. Basically, the message from the IRS is this:

"It is frivolous for you to believe that the federal regulations mean what they say. If you ask us to explain what they mean, or ask us to answer any questions, we will accuse you of breaking the law, threaten to punish you, and then we will refuse to discuss the matter ever again. That is how we 'serve' you."

If this isn't exactly what you would call "due process of law," you might want to tell that to your "representative" or the "Taxpayer Advocate" (although you may find that neither of those terms is accurate).

5.7.6.11.9      The income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income, not an excise tax, so you still are liable for it

IRS OBJECTION: "The income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income, not an excise tax. See United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990)."

YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "First of all, this conclusion is in direct conflict with all the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court related to income taxes. The Supreme Court has consistently ruled that the income tax is an indirect excise tax. See Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895); Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916); Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920), etc. Secondly, let's just fallaciously assume for the sake of argument that the income tax is a direct, unapportioned tax on income. Under such circumstances, it would have to be an ad valorem tax on intangible assets (income or profit received). If it is an ad valorem tax on intangibles, then the income taxed must be beneficially received within the territorial jurisdiction of the 'United States'. The case of Wheeling Steel Corp. v. Fox, 298 U.S. 193 (1936) clearly establishes this requirement:

*"We have held that it is essential to the validity of such a tax, under the due process clause, that the property shall be within the territorial jurisdiction of the taxing state.... When we deal with intangible property, such as credits and choses in action generally, we encounter the difficulty that by reason of the absence of physical characteristics they have no situs in the physical sense, but have the situs attributable to them in legal conception. Accordingly we have held that a state may properly apply the rule mobilia sequuntur personam and treat them as localized at the owner's domicile for purposes of taxation. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Minnesota, 280 U.S. 204, 211, 50 S.Ct. 98, 65 A. L.R. 1000. And having thus determined 'that in general intangibles may be properly taxed at the domicile of their owner,' we have found 'no sufficient reason for saying*

1 that they are not entitled to enjoy an immunity against taxation at more than one place similar to that accorded
 2 to tangibles.' Id., 280 U.S. 204, at page 212, 50 S.Ct. 98, 100, 65 A.L.R. 1000. The principle thus announced in
 3 Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Minnesota has had progressive application. Baldwin v. Missouri, 281 U.S. 586,
 4 50 S.Ct. 436, 72 A.L.R. 1303; Beidler v. South Carolina Tax Commission, 282 U.S. 1, 51 S.Ct. 54; First National
 5 Bank v. Maine, 284 U.S. 312, 328, 329 S., 52 S.Ct. 174, 177, 77 A.L.R. 1401. But despite the wide application of 6 the principle, an important exception has been recognized."

7 The territorial jurisdiction of the United States is limited to areas over which the sovereignty (exclusive territorial
 8 jurisdiction under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 17 of the U.S. Constitution) of the government of the United States
 9 extends, to include the District of Columbia, federal enclaves within the states, and the territorial waters as per 26
 10 C.F.R. §301.7701:

11 26 C.F.R. Sec. 301.7701(b)-1 Resident alien

12 (ii) UNITED STATES.

13 For purposes of section 7701(b) and the regulations thereunder, the term "United States" when used in a
 14 geographical sense includes the states and the District of Columbia. It also includes the territorial waters of the 15 United States and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters
 16 of the United States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law,
 17 with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources. It does not include the possessions and 18 territories of the United States or the air space over the United States.

19 IRS Publication 54 for year 2000, entitled Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Aliens Abroad (which you can download 20 from our website), further helps to clarify the meaning of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States:

21 "A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the
 22 sovereignty of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not 23 include Puerto Rico, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S.
 24 possessions such as American Samoa."

25 [Emphasis added]

26 Consequently, Americans residing on nonfederal land (outside the federal zone) within the borders of the sovereign
 27 states are domiciled in a "foreign country" and outside of the territorial jurisdiction of the United States because they 28 are located on land outside the sovereignty of the United States government. Therefore, they cannot be the proper 29 subject of a federal ad valorem direct property tax.

30 5.7.6.11.10 "Source" issues only apply to expenses, and not income

31 This issue came from page 5 of the very revealing deposition of Larken Rose by the IRS which is posted at:

32 <http://www.taxableincome.net/extortion/thugs/transcript.html>

33 This deposition devolved into a debate and Larken really carved them up, and by doing so averted being indicted for 26
 34 U.S.C. §6700 Abusive Tax Shelter criminal charges which were simultaneously levied against three other individuals,
 35 including Thurston Bell of Hanover PA, Dave Bossett of FL, and Harold E. Hearn of Atlanta. You can read an article that 36 talks about the indictments at:

37 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/News/11120TXE.PDF>

38 IRS OBJECTION: "The vast majority of the regulations under 861 deal strictly with allocating expenses, deductions and 39 credits, but NOT income. The code sections referenced in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) are not specifically sources of 40 income, but instead are deductions and allocations."

41 YOUR PROPER RESPONSE: "The regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861 and 26 U.S.C. §862 specifically contradict that 42 assertion by saying you must use 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f) to determine taxable income both from sources within the 43 federal United States and from sources without the federal United States. They don't say you only use this regulation
 44 to allocate deductions or expenses. The regulations also don't say you only use those sections if you're involved in one of these activities. They say you use those sections, 'for determining taxable income from sources within the United States'. And they say it over and over and over again. You're fishing around in other sections so you can retroactively back into saying 'well you just use it for this and don't look at it otherwise.' Section 861 does deal with allocating expenses, but it is also used for allocating income to specific taxable sources and activities, and the regulations clearly say that. Both expenses and income must be allocated to the same source, either within or without, in order to derive taxable income for that source, and 26 U.S.C. §863 does most of that allocation. Total taxable income equals the taxable income from sources within the federal United States plus taxable income from sources without the federal United States. If you are going to assert that the only thing that 26 U.S.C. §861 does is allocate expenses, then why don't you show me a regulation or statute that says 861 and 862 are only used for allocating expenses, instead of both expenses and income. You won't be able to find one because there isn't one! You're trying to confuse the legal issues because your paycheck relies on people not understanding the law."

5.8 Considerations Involving Government Employment Income

Do you receive a check from City, County, State or Federal Government? Then on that amount the recommendations in this document do apply in most cases but require further explanation. In Article 1, Section 8, Clause 13, of the Constitution of the United States, Congress was delegated the authority "to make Rules for the Government." The truth is that the Internal Revenue Code as well as other U.S. Government Codes are merely special Codes created to regulate the U.S. Government's own employees. IBM has a "Dress Code" that their employees must either adhere to or not work for IBM. In the same manner, the Government has a Code that demands that "public officers", contractors, and instrumentalities either pay what is referred to as an official privilege tax (known as "The Income Tax") or not work for, or contract with, the U.S. Government. Citizens engaged in occupations of common right in the American states of the Union are not required by law to file a 1040 Form or to pay income tax! You have also already learned throughout the preceding sections in this chapter and by examining 44 U.S.C. §1505(a)(1) that when the government is managing its own employees, it doesn't have to write regulations or publish them in the Federal Register like it does for laws that apply to private citizens. That is why most of the enforcement provisions of the Internal Revenue Code that accomplish liens, levies, assessments, etc do not have implementing regulations.

Following are some definitions of "employee" and "employer" defined at 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) and "employer" at § 3401(d), as follows:

26 U.S.C. §3401(c)

Employee. For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation.

---

26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c)-1. Employee

a) the term 'employee', includes officers and employees, whether elected or appointed of the United States, a State, Territory, Puerto Rico, or any political subdivision thereof, ...

*c) Generally, physicians, lawyers, dentists, veterinarians, contractors, public stenographers, auctioneers, and others who follow an independent trade, business, or profession, in which they offer their services to the public, are not employees.

26 U.S.C. §3401(d) Employer.

For purposes of this chapter, the term "employer" means the person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person.

Now we throw in the government's definition of "wages" to tie things together. Below is an abbreviated version from 26 U.S.C. §3401\(a\) and section 5.6.7 earlier:

"For purposes of this chapter, the term 'wages' means all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official) for services performed by an employee for his employer..."

This is circular logic designed to deliberately confuse. The term "employee" is defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) to mean only elected or appointed officials of the U.S. government, but then the above statutes says that all "employees" other than

1 these are the only ones who receives "wages". Technically then, NO ONE receives "wages" as legally defined! But if we
 2 look at the ONLY persons who can have their pay levied in 26 U.S.C. §6331\(a\) in order to pay off a tax debt, we find once
 3 again that it is ONLY public officers and federal instrumentalities, which implies that these are the only persons who are
 4 really the subject of Subtitle A income taxes!:

5 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 64 > Subchapter D > PART II > Sec. 6331.
 6 Sec. 6331. - Levy and distraint

7 (a) Authority of Secretary

8 If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it
 9 shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the 10 expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under 11 section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of 12 such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official of 13 the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District
 14 of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer,
 15 employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice
 16 and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay
 17 such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

18 But why would these people's pay be subject to levy if there is no statute making anyone liable for Subtitle A income taxes?
 19 The question confounds us.

20 Some people might say that the definition of federal "employee" is rather restrictive, as demonstrated in 5 U.S.C. §2105.
 21 Take the cite below, for instance, from 26 U.S.C. Chapter 24: "Collection of Income Taxes at the Source" (Federal 22 employment tax withholding):

24 2105. DEFINITIONS

25 (a) For the purpose of this title, "employee", except as otherwise provided by this section 26 or when specifically modified, means an officer and an individual who is -
 27 (1) appointed in the civil service by one of the following acting in an official capacity -
 28 (A) the President;
 29 (B) a Member or Members of Congress, or the Congress;
 30 (C) a member of a uniformed service;
 31 (D) an individual who is an employee under this section;
 32 (E) the head of a Government controlled corporation; or 33 (F) an adjutant general designated by the Secretary concerned under section 709(c) of 34 title 32;
 35 (2) engaged in the performance of a Federal function under authority of law or an 36 Executive act; and
 37 (3) subject to the supervision of an individual named by paragraph (1) of this subsection
 38 while engaged in the performance of the duties of his position.

39 [...skipped a few entries since irrelevant...]

40 (d) A Reserve of the armed forces who is not on active duty or who is on active duty for training is deemed not 41 an employee or an individual holding an office of trust or profit or discharging an official function under or in 42 connection with the United States because of his appointment, oath, or status, or any duties or functions
 43 performed or pay or allowances received in that capacity.

44 We have heard people claim that all federal employees meet the definitions above, because they were appointed to federal
 45 civil service when they and another government official signed their SF-50 form. They will say that the other government
 46 official who signs the SF-50 form was given the authority to sign their form because the power they had was delegated
 47 to them through a chain of authority that ultimately derives from the president and/or the U.S. Congress. However, we don't 48 support this view because anyone else who is not elected or appointed by the President, Congress, etc. as above was hired in
 49 effect to perform a trade or skill as an occupation of "common right" as we will see shortly. Employees performing an
 50 occupation of "common right" do not depend chiefly on the privileges granted to them as an elected or appointed federal 51 employee in order to perform their job. Instead, they are exercising skills they could just as productively employ outside the 52 federal government, probably for greater pay.

1 The Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, was codified in 4 U.S.C. §111. Below is an excerpt from that law which clearly authorizes
2 taxation of federal employees:

3 (a) General Rule. - The United States consents to the taxation of pay or compensation for personal service as an
4 officer or employee of the United States, a territory or possession or political subdivision thereof, the government
5 of the District of Columbia, or an agency or instrumentality of one or more of the foregoing, by a duly constituted
6 taxing authority having jurisdiction, if the taxation does not discriminate against the officer or employee
7 because of the source of the pay or compensation.

8 What they are saying here is that the U.S. will honor whatever state or local taxes are imposed. It is very important in the 9 above cite to remember, however, that last phrase "if the taxation does not discriminate against the officer or employee
10 because of the SOURCE of pay or compensation." Why is this important? Because 26 U.S.C. §861 and the underlying 11 regulation found in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 defines the only authorized "sources" of income that may be taxed by the federal
12 government for the purposes of internal revenue, and we believe they are trying to say here that the taxable "sources" of 13 income are unchanged by virtue of being a federal "employee", and that such employees are to be treated no differently than 14 private sector employees for the purposes of the graduated federal income tax.

15 Each Federal department and agency is responsible for designating a withholding agent, and the General Accounting Office
16 has responsibility for making determinations as to whether or not someone is liable for additional obligations ... see 5 U.S.C.
17 §5512, 26 U.S.C. §7401 & 31 U.S.C. §3702, and attending regulations.

18 The income tax for federal "employees" does not rely on the definition of "gross income" at I.R.C. § 61 for the purposes of 19 computing the amount of withholding, which is different than the payment or liability for income taxes. Instead, it defines 20 all remuneration received as wages for the purpose of income tax withholding, which is clearly different from the way private
21 employers and employees are treated. However, like private employees, (which incidentally are not "employees" within 26
22 U.S.C.) the withholding still cannot occur without an IRS Form W-4 being completed and signed by the employee giving the
23 government permission to withhold. Why can they legally withhold on all wages, rather than relying directly on the definition
24 of "gross income" found in I.R.C. section 61? The IRS will tell you that the wages received are a direct result of the 25 "privileges" granted to federal "employees" who we allege are ONLY elected or appointed to office. Note that this does NOT
26 apply to employees who are not elected or appointed directly by the Congress or the President, but instead are practicing a
27 trade profession that is of "common right", which we will explain further later. You will also note that "employees" as defined
28 in 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(c) all work in the District of Columbia, which isn't subject to the same tax and withholding rules as 29 the rest of the 50 Union states. This face, incidentally, is why they had to define "employees" the way they did . (Rather 30 twisted, isn't all of this! That's the way lawyers like it because that's where they get their job security from....COMPLEX
31 LAWS!)

32 The distinction between the Chapter 1 income tax and wages, i.e., two different taxes, or tax sources, is recognized in several 33 court cases, with Commissioner v. Kowalski, 434 U.S. 77 (1977) among them:

34 The income tax is imposed on taxable income, 26 U.S.C. §1. Generally, this is gross income minus allowable
35 deductions. 26 U.S.C. §63(a). Section 61(a) defines as gross income "all income from whatever source derived"
36 including, under § 61(a)(1), "[c]ompensation for services." The withholding tax, in some contrast, is confined to 37 wages, § 3402(a), and § 3401(a) defines as "wages," all remuneration (other than fees paid to a public official)
38 for services performed by an employee for his employer, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any
39 medium other than cash.

40 The two concepts -- income and wages -- obviously are not necessarily the same. All wages of federal "employees" are
41 reported as income by the United States (the federal zone), but remember that the same source rules (e.g. 26 U.S.C. §861)
42 still apply to federal employees as to private employees as found in the Internal Revenue Code. This means that federal 43 employees can still ask for all the earnings back that they received because it did not derive from a taxable "source".

44 The Department of the Treasury has been helpful in unraveling the long standing income tax scam. Possibly the greatest
45 treasure posted on the Department of the Treasury Internet network is the Treasury Financial Manual, produced by the
46 Financial Management Service, Volume I, Part 3, Chapter 4000 prescribes the process by which Federal employee taxes are 47 to be collected by the agency, then transferred to IRS:

48 Section 4010 - SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

This chapter prescribes procedures for (1) withholding and depositing Federal income, social security, and Medicare taxes on wages paid to civilian and military employees; (2) for filing tax returns with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS); and (3) for filing income tax statements with the Social Security Administration (SSA).

For information beyond the scope of this chapter, refer to IRS Publication 15, Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide, or an IRS office. Circular E describes employer tax responsibilities; explains withholding, depositing, and reporting requirements; and paying taxes. It explains the forms your employees must use and those you must send to the IRS and SSA.

Withheld Federal taxes will be transferred to the IRS using the FEDTAX application of the Government-On-line Accounting Link System (GOALS). Any Federal agency that has not been established on FEDTAX should contact GOALS Marketing, Financial Management Service (FMS), on FTS 874-8788 or 202-874-8788.

Withholding of qualified State, county and local taxes, in accordance with 31 C.F.R. § 215, is then prescribed in Volume I, Part 3, Chapter 5000, here in part:

Section 5010 - SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

This chapter provides instructions for withholding State, city, or county income taxes when an agreement has been reached between a State, city, or county and the Secretary of the Treasury. Agreements between the Secretary of the Treasury and States, cities, or counties prescribe how Federal agencies withhold State, city, or county income or employment taxes from the compensation of Federal employees and Armed Forces members. (See 31 C.F.R. 215 at Appendix 1).

All of the above leads to another interesting question, however. If the income tax was an indirect excise tax which can only occur on businesses as a tax on sales relating to foreign commerce, then one might well ask:

"Why do I get involved at all in paying an income tax or keeping track of liability or payment, if this is supposed to be a tax on my employer and not directly on me? Why do I have to list it in my income tax return at all if it is a tax on my employer and not me? Why isn't the tax invisible to the point where it doesn't affect or reduce my compensation directly at all? Wouldn't it be a 'direct tax' within the meaning of the constitution if it negatively impacted my compensation as a private employer residing in a state of the Union? Likewise, if it is an excise tax on my employer, then why do I the employee need to sign a W-4 to give my permission to withhold or get directly involved at all in authorizing or deduction of the tax from my pay?"

The answer is that the sneaky Congress calls it an indirect excise tax (see Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A on our website) but let's federal employees treat it like a direct tax, so the government doesn't need to increase your compensation to adjust for its impact as the direct tax that it really is. Recall that direct taxes are prohibited by the Constitution, as explained in detail in section 3.10.6 and in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 and Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution. Being a federal employee doesn't change this situation at all, unless the person being paid is an elected or appointed (by the President) public officer, whose job depends primarily on the authority (and the privileges they contract to obtain by becoming a political officer) they get from their elected office to do their job.

Understanding the nature as well as the "source" of the income tax is important. On p. 2580 of the 1943 edition of the Congressional Record-House (March 27), we find the following (which is NOT a law, but is helpful for explanation):

"The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject of the tax; it is the basis for determining the amount of tax."

The term "income tax" is a general classification heading for excise taxes, all of which fall into the indirect tax category. Even the Federal employee tax is not a tax on the wage, but the wage simply provides a "measure" for the tax. The income tax on government "employees" is a tax on "privileges" attending Federal employment. However, this leads us to question the meaning of "privilege," since we saw from section 3.18.4 in the case of Sims v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720 (1925) that:

"An income tax is neither a property tax nor a tax on occupations of common right, but is an EXCISE tax...The legislature may declare as 'privileged' and tax as such for state revenue, those pursuits not matters of common right, but it has no power to declare as a 'privilege' and tax for revenue purposes, occupations that are of common right."

What does "occupations that are of common right" mean? Our understanding is that it includes any profession you can choose to do or undertake in private industry in any field or trade and which do not depend on the authority granted you as part of a political office. Occupations that are not of common right are things you can only do as an elected or appointed officer or

1 politician working for a government agency by virtue of the rights and privileges and delegated authority granted to you as a
 2 consequence of your election or appointment to that political office. That is why the definition of "employee" in 5 U.S.C.
 3 §2105 quoted above is so very restrictive: because it has to define "occupations that are not of common right and which
 4 depend on the privileges associated with government service alone".

5 Following is an example of the rambling verbiage of "terms" the Internal Revenue Code drafters created to try to hide the
 6 fact that the earnings of private Citizens are not taxable under the law. They could have just as easily summed up the following
 7 in one regulation that read, "Only elected or appointed government officials are liable for the graduated income tax imposed
 8 in Section 1 of Subtitle A of Title 26".

9 26 U.S.C. §871(b)(2)-GRADUATED RATE OF TAX

10 "...(2) DETERMINATION OF TAXABLE INCOME.—In determining taxable income...gross income includes 11 ONLY gross income which is effectively connected with the conduct of a 'trade or business,' within the United

 14 26 U.S.C. §864(b) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.— (b) Trade or business within the United States

15 For purposes of this part, part II, and chapter 3, the term "trade or business within the United States" includes 16 the performance of personal services within the United States at any time within the taxable year, but does not 17 include –

 19 26 C.F.R. Sec. 1.469-9 Rules for certain rental real estate activities.

20 (b)(4) PERSONAL SERVICES.

21 Personal services means any work performed by an individual in connection with a trade or business. However,
 22 personal services do not include any work performed by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor
 23 as described in section 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii).

 25 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) TRADE OR BUSINESS.—"Includes [only] the performance of functions of a public 26 office."

27 Following is the definition of Public Office, pursuant to Black's Law Dictionary, Abridged Sixth Edition, means:

28 "Essential characteristics of a 'public office' are: (1) authority conferred by law, (2) fixed tenure of office, and
 29 (3) power to exercise some of the sovereign functions of government; key element of such test is that 'officer is 30 carrying out sovereign function'. Essential elements to establish public position as 'public office' are: Position
 31 must be created by Constitution, legislature, or through authority conferred by legislation, portion of sovereign
 32 power of government must be delegated to position, duties and powers must be defined, directly or implied, by 33 legislature or through legislative authority, duties must be performed independently without control of superior
 34 power other than law, and position must have some permanency."

35 Therefore, to be involved in a "trade or business", as defined for the purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, an American 36 must hold a public office.

37 Administration of Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) Chapter 24 "employment taxes" , qualified State, county and local 38 taxes, and other Federal personnel obligations (not related to federal income taxes), is under authority of 5 U.S.C.
 39 §§5512-5520a, not Subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code generally. However, these sections only apply to parties
 40 who are either subject to State or local income tax or are in arrears to the U.S. Government for overpayment of wages
 41 or legal judgments, and DO NOT relate to the collection of income taxes that come under Title 26, the Internal 42 Revenue Code.

43 To briefly summarize this section:

1. Elected or appointed federal "employees" as defined legally in 5 U.S.C. §2105, are the only ones subject to graduated income tax withholding under the I.R.C. Chapter 24, and the withholding is on all compensation or wages received, regardless of source.
2. All income tax withholding, including that on federal "employees" (meaning elected or appointed officers of the U.S. government) is entirely voluntary and cannot be coerced because of limitations imposed by the Fifth Amendment that require that no person can be deprived of their property without due process of law or just compensation, unless they volunteer to give it away, in which case it is a donation and not a tax.
3. The fact that Subtitle C employment taxes are withheld for federal employees doesn't necessarily make them "liable" to pay income taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. As a matter of fact, Subtitle C employment taxes, as we discussed in section 5.6.8, Subtitle C employment withholding taxes are classified legally as "gifts" to the U.S. government! Federal employees can and should ask for all their employment withholding taxes back at the end of the year just like a private Citizen can, and they can still claim the same 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issues and other issues in this chapter as their basis just like private citizens and everyone else.
4. The reason the federal withholding tax rules for federal "employees" can be different from private sector employees in the 50 Union states is that all income of these "employees" is incident exclusively on the privileges of the elected political office they hold and are not a matter of "common right" nor are they associated with a commercial trade or profession. (see Sims v. Ahrens 271 S.W. 720 and others for more details).
5. Federal employees have a statutory obligation to pay social security taxes because of the retirement system they fall under. The statutory authority for this requirement comes from 5 U.S.C. §8422. This statute creates a "presumption" that they consent to contribute to the Social Security Program but they can rebut that presumption by providing a written, notarized affidavit to their federal employer. Technically and legally, this should be all the notification needed for federal or other government employers to stop contributing to the Social Security Program. Doing this does not terminate your right to collect benefits based on what you contributed up to that point. As long as you have 10 years or 40 quarters of participation, you qualify for full benefits without contributing further under the SSA program.
6. There are no references anywhere in Title 26 that indicate that the code DOES NOT apply to federal employees.
7. Federal employees can and should ask for all their employment withholding taxes back at the end of the year just like a private Citizen can, and they can still claim the same 26 U.S.C. §861 "source" issues and other issues raised in this chapter as their basis just like private Citizens and everyone else.

5.9 So What Would Have to be Done to the Constitution to Make Direct Income Taxes Legal?

A question that often arises is the question about what it would take to allow Congress to constitutionally impose the tax that the American public believes already exists? Could they not "fix" the law somehow, to make it apply to all Americans?

(One obstacle to this would be accomplishing it without anyone noticing, since an admission of the true purpose of such an endeavor would also be an admission that some in the federal government have already committed several trillion dollars' worth of fraud and extortion. Even if they could impose such a tax in the future, they could not retroactively undo the fraud of the past.)

If the Sixteenth Amendment didn't authorize Congress to directly tax the income of all Americans, what would it take to amend the Constitution to allow it? In short, it could not be done without repealing most of the Constitution. Because such a tax would necessarily constitute a massive regulation of behavior, behavior that is not under federal jurisdiction, the Tenth Amendment would first need to be repealed.

After that, Article I would have to be amended (and in effect, destroyed) by saying that Congress can regulate any behavior it wants within the 50 Union states, as long as it does it through "tax" legislation. To do this would, in the words of the Supreme Court, "break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states." It would mean the end of the Constitution, the end of the Union, the end of the 50 Union states, and the institution of a centralized police power. It cannot be done.

(Incidentally, for the same reasons, the entire debate over a flat income tax, a national sales tax, or any similar "replacement" for the current tax Code, is entirely pointless, as the limits on Congress' taxing power would limit all of these (and anything similar) to commerce under federal jurisdiction, i.e. international and foreign commerce.)

1 A well-known and universal rule of American Jurisprudence throughout the states and federal government that nearly 2 everyone is aware of is the following, elucidated by the Supreme Court:

3 The presumption of innocence plays a unique role in criminal proceedings. As Chief Justice Burger explained in
4 his opinion for the Court in Estelle v. Williams, 425 U.S. 501 (1976): [507 U.S. 284]:

5 The presumption of innocence, although not articulated in the Constitution, is a basic component of a
6 fair trial under our system of criminal justice. Long ago this Court stated:

7 The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law,
8 axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our
9 criminal law. Coffin v. United States, 156 U.S. 432, 453 (1895).

10 To implement the presumption, courts must be alert to factors that may undermine the fairness of the factfinding
11 process. In the administration of criminal justice, courts must carefully guard against dilution of the principle
12 that guilt is to be established by probative evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Winship, 397 U.S. 358,
13 364 (1970). [425 U.S. 501, 504]
14 [Delo v. Lashely, 507 U.S. 272 (1993)]

15 The implication of this rule to the interpretation of law is that the law must state clearly and unambiguously what conduct is 16 prohibited and what specific conduct is required.

17 "The purpose of law cannot be to compel confusion. The reason for this is that the purpose of law is to protect
18 by defining for the person of average intelligence exactly what behavior is required in order to sustain an orderly 19 society free from crime, injury, and duress."
20 [Family Guardian Fellowship]

21 The Supreme Court defined why laws must be written specifically for the audience of ordinary Americans when it stated:

22 "whether right or wrong, the premise underlying the constitutional method for determining guilt or innocence in 23 federal courts is that laymen are better than specialists [such as judges and lawyers] to perform this task."
24 [United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 18 (1955)]

25 The innocent until proven guilty rule is a "rule of presumption". It requires that a jury must presume the Defendant is not
26 guilty until evidence is produced which clearly and unambiguously demonstrates otherwise. Any presumption to the contrary
27 will prejudice the rights of the Defendant and is a violation of due process:

28 (1) [8:4993] Conclusive presumptions affecting protected interests: A conclusive presumption may be defeated
29 where its application would impair a party's constitutionally-protected liberty or property interests. In such 30 cases, conclusive presumptions have been held to violate a party's due process and equal protection
31 rights. [Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 US 441, 449, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2235; Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. LaFleur (1974)

34 [Federal Civil Trials and Evidence (2005), Rutter Group, paragraph 8:4993, p. 8K-34]

35 5.10.2 Role of Law and Presumption in Proving Guilt

36 Among the types of evidence that may be introduced in a court setting to establish guilt include quoting the enacted law itself.
37 Evidence based upon "law" only becomes admissible when the law cited is "positive law".

38 "Positive law. Law actually and specifically enacted or adopted by proper authority for the government of an 39 organized jural society. See also Legislation."
40 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1162]

41 Evidence that is NOT positive law, becomes "prima facie" evidence, which means that it is "presumed" to be evidence unless 42 challenged or rebutted:

43 TITLE 1 > CHAPTER 3 > § 204
44 § 204. Codes and Supplements as evidence of the laws of United States and District of Columbia; citation of
45 Codes and Supplements

46 In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home or abroad, of the District of Columbia,
47 and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States—

(a) United States Code.— The matter set forth in the edition of the Code of Laws of the United States current at any time shall, together with the then current supplement, if any, establish prima facie the laws of the United States, general and permanent in their nature, in force on the day preceding the commencement of the session following the last session the legislation of which is included: Provided, however, That whenever titles of such Code shall have been enacted into positive law the text thereof shall be legal evidence of the laws therein contained, in all the courts of the United States, the several States, and the Territories and insular possessions of the United States.

The above statute, which is “positive law”, establishes what is called a “statutory presumption” that courts are obligated to observe. The statute above creates the notion of “prima facie” evidence. “Prima facie evidence” is defined below:

“Prima facie evidence. Evidence good and sufficient on its face. Such evidence as, in the judgment of the law, is sufficient to establish a given fact, or the group or chain of facts constituting the party’s claim or defense, and which if not rebutted or contradicted, will remain sufficient. Evidence which, if unexplained or uncontradicted, is sufficient to sustain a judgment in favor of the issue which it supports, but which may be contradicted by other evidence. State v. Haremza, 213 Kan. 201, 515 P.2d. 1217, 1222.

That quantum of evidence that suffices for proof of a particular fact until the fact is contradicted by other evidence; once a trier of fact is faced with conflicting evidence, it must weigh the prima facie evidence with all the other probative evidence presented. Godesky v. Provo City Corp., Utah, 690 P.2d. 541, 547. Evidence which, standing alone and unexplained, would maintain the proposition and warrant the conclusion to support which it is introduced. An inference or presumption of law, affirmative or negative of a fact, in the absence of proof, or until proof can be obtained or produced to overcome the inference. See also Presumptive evidence.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1190]

Black’s Law Dictionary defines the term “presumption” as follows:

“presumption. An inference in favor of a particular fact. A presumption is a rule of law, statutory or judicial, by which finding of a basic fact gives rise to existence of presumed fact, until presumption is rebutted. Van Wart v. Cook, Okl.App., 557 P.2d. 1161, 1163. A legal device which operates in the absence of other proof to require that certain inferences be drawn from the available evidence. Port Terminal & Warehousing Co. v. John S. James Co., D.C.Ga., 92 F.R.D. 100, 106.

A presumption is an assumption of fact that the law requires to be made from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action. A presumption is not evidence. A presumption is either conclusive or rebuttable. Every rebuttable presumption is either (a) a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence or (b) a presumption affecting the burden of proof. Calif.Evid.Code, §600.

In all civil actions and proceedings not otherwise provided for by Act of Congress or by the Federal Rules of Evidence, a presumption imposes on the party against whom it is directed the burden of going forward with evidence to rebut or meet the presumption, but does not shift to such party the burden of proof in the sense of the risk of nonpersuasion, which remains throughout the trial upon the party on whom it was originally cast. Federal Evidence Rule 301.

See also Disputable presumption; inference; Juris et de jure; Presumptive evidence; Prima facie; Raise a presumption.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1185]

A “statutory presumption” is one that occurs in a court of law because it is mandated by a positive law statute. The U.S. Supreme Court has said that “statutory presumptions” which prejudice constitution rights are forbidden:

“A rebuttable presumption clearly is a rule of evidence which has the effect of shifting the burden of proof, Mobile, J. & K. C. R. Co. v. Turnipseed, 219 U.S. 35, 43, 31 S.Ct. 136, 32 L.R.A. (N. S.) 226, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 463; and it is hard to see how a statutory rebuttable presumptions is turned from a rule of evidence into a rule of substantive law as the result of a later statute making it conclusive. In both cases it is a substitute for proof; in the one open to challenge and disproof, and in the other conclusive. However, whether the latter presumption be treated as a rule of evidence or of substantive law, it constitutes an attempt, by legislative fiat, to enact into existence a fact which here does not, and cannot be made to, exist in actuality, and the result is the same, unless we are ready to overrule the Schlesinger Case, as we are not; for that case dealt with a conclusive presumption, and the court held it invalid without regard to the question of its technical characterization. This court has held more than once that a statute creating a presumption which operates to deny a fair opportunity to rebut it violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. For example, Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219, 238, et seq., 31 S.Ct. 145; Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 5-6, 49 S.Ct. 215.

‘It is apparent,’ this court said in the Bailey Case ( 219 U.S. 239 , 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) ‘that a constitutional prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory

1 presumption any more than it can be violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions
 2 is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions.'

3 "If a legislative body is without power to enact as a rule of evidence a statute denying a litigant the right to prove
 4 the facts of his case, certainly the power cannot be made to emerge by putting the enactment in the guise of a rule
 5 of substantive law."
 6 [Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932) ]

7 The Internal Revenue Code contains several statutory presumptions. Below is an example:

8 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 76 > Subchapter E > § 7491
 9 § 7491. Burden of proof

10 (a) Burden shifts where taxpayer produces credible evidence

11 (1) General rule

12 If, in any court proceeding, a taxpayer introduces credible evidence with respect to any factual issue relevant to
 13 ascertaining the liability of the taxpayer for any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, the Secretary shall have the
 14 burden of proof with respect to such issue.

15 (2) Limitations

16 Paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to an issue only if—

17 (A) the taxpayer has complied with the requirements under this title to substantiate any item;

18 (B) the taxpayer has maintained all records required under this title and has cooperated with reasonable requests
 19 by the Secretary for witnesses, information, documents, meetings, and interviews; and

20 (C) in the case of a partnership, corporation, or trust, the taxpayer is described in section 7430 (c)(4)(A)(ii).

21 Subparagraph (C) shall not apply to any qualified revocable trust (as defined in section 645 (b)(1)) with respect
 22 to liability for tax for any taxable year ending after the date of the decedent's death and before the applicable
 23 date (as defined in section 645 (b)(2)).

24 (3) Coordination

25 Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any issue if any other provision of this title provides for a specific burden of 26 proof with respect to such issue.

27 5.10.3 Statutory Presumptions that Injure Rights are Unconstitutional

28 A statutory presumption is a presumption which is mandated by a statute. Below is an example of such a presumption:

29 26 U.S.C. Sec. 7701\(c\) INCLUDES AND INCLUDING.

30 The terms 'include' and 'including' when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to exclude 31 other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined."

32 What Congress is attempting to create in the above is the following false presumption:

33 "Any definition which uses the word 'includes' shall be construed to imply not only what is shown in the statute
 34 and the code itself, but also what is commonly understood for the term to mean or whatever any government
 35 employee deems is necessary to fulfill what he believes is the intent of the code."

36 We know that the above presumption is unconstitutional and if applied as intended, would violate the Void for Vagueness
 37 Doctrine described later in section 5.10.6 and following. It would also violate the rules of statutory construction described 38 earlier in section 3.8 that say:

39 1. The purpose for defining a word within a statute is so that its ordinary (dictionary) meaning is not implied or assumed
 40 by the reader.

2. When a term is defined within a statute, that definition is provided usually to supersede and not enlarge other definitions of the word found elsewhere, such as in other Titles or Codes.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled many times that statutory presumptions which prejudice or threaten constitutional rights are unconstitutional. Below are a few of its rulings on this subject to make the meaning perfectly clear:

"Legislation declaring that proof of one fact of group of facts shall constitute prima facie evidence of an ultimate fact in issue is valid if there is a rational connection between what is proved and what is to be inferred. A prima facie presumption casts upon the person against whom it is applied the duty of going forward with his evidence on the particular point to which the presumption relates. A statute creating a presumption that is arbitrary, or that operates to deny a fair opportunity to repel it, violates the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. Legislative fiat may not take the place of fact in the judicial determination of issues involving life, liberty, or property. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 49 S.Ct. 215, 73 L.Ed. -, and cases cited."

"[I]t is unconstitutional for a legislature to remove from the jury the assessment of facts that increase the prescribed range of penalties to which a criminal defendant is exposed. It is equally clear that such facts must be established by proof beyond a reasonable doubt."
McMillan v. Pennsylvania, [477 U.S. 79 \(1986\)]

It has always been recognized that the guaranty of trial by jury in criminal cases means that the jury is to be the factfinder. This is the only way in which a jury can perform its basic constitutional function of determining the guilt or innocence of a defendant. See, e. g., United States ex rel. Toth v. Quarles, 350 U.S. 11, 15-19; Reid v. Covert, 354 U.S. 1, 5-10 (opinion announcing judgment). And of course this constitutionally established power of a jury to determine guilt or innocence of a defendant charged with crime cannot be taken away by Congress, directly or indirectly, in whole or in part. Obviously, a necessary part of this power, vested by the Constitution in juries (or in judges when juries are waived), is the exclusive right to decide whether evidence presented at trial is sufficient to convict. I think it flaunts the constitutional power of courts and juries for Congress to tell them what "shall be deemed sufficient evidence to authorize conviction." And if Congress could not thus directly encroach upon the judge's or jury's exclusive right to declare what evidence is sufficient to prove the facts necessary for conviction, it should not be allowed to do so merely by labeling its encroachment a "presumption." Neither Tot v. United States, 319 U.S. 463, relied [380 U.S. 63, 78] on by the Court as supporting this presumption, nor any case cited in Tot approved such an encroachment on the power of judges or juries. In fact, so far as I can tell, the problem of whether Congress can so restrict the power of court and jury in a criminal case in a federal court has never been squarely presented to or considered by this Court, perhaps because challenges to presumptions have arisen in many crucially different contexts but nevertheless have generally failed to distinguish between presumptions used in different ways, treating them as if they are either all valid or all invalid, regardless of the rights on which their use may impinge. Because the Court also fails to differentiate among the different circumstances in which presumptions may be utilized and the different consequences which will follow, I feel it necessary to say a few words on that subject before considering specifically the validity of the use of these presumptions in the light of the circumstances and consequences of their use.

In its simplest form a presumption is an inference permitted or required by law of the existence of one fact, which is unknown or which cannot be proved, from another fact which has been proved. The fact presumed may be based on a very strong probability, a weak supposition or an arbitrary assumption. The burden on the party seeking to prove the fact may be slight, as in a civil suit, or very heavy - proof beyond a reasonable doubt - as in a criminal prosecution. This points up the fact that statutes creating presumptions cannot be treated as fungible, that is, as interchangeable for all uses and all purposes. The validity of each presumption must be determined in the light of the particular consequences that flow from its use. When matters of trifling moment are involved, presumptions may be more freely accepted, but when consequences of vital importance to litigants and to the administration of justice are at stake, a more careful scrutiny is necessary. [380 U.S. 63, 79]

In judging the constitutionality of legislatively created presumptions this Court has evolved an initial criterion which applies alike to all kinds of presumptions: that before a presumption may be relied on, there must be a rational connection between the facts inferred and the facts which have been proved by competent evidence, that is, the facts proved must be evidence which is relevant, tending to prove (though not necessarily conclusively) the existence of the fact presumed. And courts have undoubtedly shown an inclination to be less strict about the logical strength of presumptive inferences they will permit in civil cases than about those which affect the trial of crimes. The stricter scrutiny in the latter situation follows from the fact that the burden of proof in a civil lawsuit is ordinarily merely a preponderance of the evidence, while in a criminal case where a man's life, liberty, or property is at stake, the prosecution must prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. See Morrison v. California, 291 U.S. 82, 96-97. The case of Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219, is a good illustration of this principle. There Bailey was accused of violating an Alabama statute which made it a crime to fail to perform personal services after obtaining money by contracting to perform them, with an intent to defraud the employer. The statute also provided that refusal or failure to perform the services, or to refund money paid for them, without just cause, constituted "prima facie evidence" (i. e., gave rise to a presumption) of the intent to injure or defraud. This Court, after calling attention to prior cases dealing with the requirement of rationality, passed over the test of rationality and held the statute invalid on another ground. Looking beyond the rational-relationship doctrine the Court held that the use of this presumption by Alabama against a man accused of crime would amount to a violation of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids "involuntary [380 U.S. 63, 80] servitude, except as a punishment for crime." In so deciding the Court made it crystal clear that rationality is only the first hurdle which a legislatively created presumption must clear - that a presumption, even if rational, cannot be used to convict a man of crime if the effect of using the presumption is to deprive the accused of a constitutional right.

The reason a statutory presumption that injures rights is unconstitutional was also revealed in the Federalist Papers, which say on the subject:

"No legislative act [including a statutory presumption] contrary to the Constitution can be valid. To deny this would be to affirm that the deputy (agent) is greater than his principal; that the servant is above the master; that the representatives of the people are superior to the people; that men, acting by virtue of powers may do not only what their powers do not authorize, but what they forbid...[text omitted] It is not otherwise to be supposed that the Constitution could intend to enable the representatives of the people to substitute their will to that of their constituents. It is far more rational to suppose, that the courts were designed to be an intermediate body between the people and the legislature, in order, among other things, to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority. The interpretation of the laws is the proper and peculiar province of the courts. A Constitution is, in fact, and must be regarded by judges, as fundamental law. If there should happen to be an irreconcilable variance between the two, the Constitution is to be preferred to the statute."
[Alexander Hamilton, Federalist Paper # 78]

The implication of the prohibition against statutory presumptions is that:

1. No human being who is domiciled within a state of the Union and protected by the Bill of Rights may be victimized or injured in any way by any kind of statutory presumption.
2. Statutory presumptions may only be applied against legal "persons" who do not have Constitutional rights, which means corporations or those who are domiciled in the federal zone, meaning on land within exclusive federal jurisdiction that is not protected by the First Ten Amendments to the United States Constitution. See Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901).
3. Any court which uses "judge made law" to do any of the following in the case of a natural person protected by the Bill of Rights is involved in a conspiracy against rights:
  - 3.1. Imposes a statutory presumption.
  - 3.2. Extends or enlarges any definition in the Internal Revenue Code based on any arbitrary criteria.
  - 3.3. Invokes an interpretation of a definition within a code which may not be deduced directly from language in the code itself.

The above inferences help establish who the only proper audience for the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is, which is federal corporations, payments from the federal government, and those domiciled within the federal zone but not within states of the Union. The reason is that those domiciled in the federal zone are not protected by the Bill of Rights. The only exception to this rule is that any natural person who is domiciled in a state of the Union but who is exercising agency of a federal corporation or legal "person" which has a domicile within the federal zone also may become the lawful subject of statutory presumptions, but only in the context of the agency he is exercising. For instance, we demonstrate in the following:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Family Guardian Fellowship

. . .that those participating in the Social Security program are deemed to be "agents", "employees", and "fiduciaries" of the federal corporation called the United States, which has a "domicile" in the federal zone (District of Columbia) under 4 U.S.C. §72. Therefore, unless and until they eliminate said agency using the above document, statutory presumptions may be used against them without an unconstitutional result, but only in the context of the agency they are exercising.

5.10.4 Purpose of Due Process: To completely remove "presumption" from legal proceedings

1 All presumption which prejudices a right guaranteed by the Constitution represents a violation of Constitutional Due Process.
2 The only exception to this rule is if the Defendant is not covered by the Constitution because:

- 3 1. Domiciled in areas not covered by the Bill of Rights, such as federal territories, possessions, and the federal areas
- 4 within the states. These areas are called the "federal zone" in this book.
- 5 2. Exercising agency of a corporation that is domiciled in the federal zone.

6 The above is also confirmed by reading Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b) , which says that the law to be applied in a 7 civil case must derive either from the law of the parties' domicile or from the domicile of the corporation they are acting as 8 an agent for.

9 According to the Bible, "presumption" also happens to be a Biblical sin in violation of God's law as well, which should result
10 in the banishment of a person from his society:

11 "But the person who does anything presumptuously, whether he is native-born or a stranger, that one brings 12 reproach on the LORD, and he shall be cut off from among his people."
13 [Numbers 15:30, Bible, NKJV]

15 "Keep back Your servant also from presumptuous sins; Let them not have dominion over me. Then I shall be 16 blameless, And I shall be innocent of great transgression."
17 [Psalm 19:13, Bible, NKJV]

19 "Now the man who acts presumptuously and will not heed the priest who stands to minister there before the 20 LORD your God, or the judge, that man shall die. So you shall put away the evil from Israel. 13 And all the people
21 shall hear and fear, and no longer act presumptuously."
22 [Deut. 17:12-13, Bible, NKJV]

23 We have therefore established that "presumption" is something we should try very hard to avoid, because it is a violation of 24 both man's law AND God's law. As a matter of fact, a whole book has been written about how "presumption" is 25 systematically promoted and exploited by your public servants to destroy the separation of powers and unlawfully enlarge
26 federal jurisdiction:

Presumption: Chief Weapon for Unlawfully Enlarging Federal Jurisdiction, Form #05.017
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

27 The chief purpose of Constitutional "due process" is therefore to completely remove bias and the presumption that produces
28 it from every legal proceeding in a court of law. This is done by:

- 29 1. Preventing the application of any "statutory presumptions" that might prejudice the rights of the Defendant.
- 30 2. Insisting that every conclusion is based on physical and non-presumptive (not "prima facie") evidence.
- 31 3. To apply the same rules of evidence equally against both parties.
- 32 4. Choosing jurists who are free from bias or prejudice during the voir dire (jury selection) process.
- 33 5. Choosing judges who are free from bias or prejudice during the voir dire process.
- 34 6. Counsel on both sides ensuring that all presumptions made by the opposing party are challenged in a timely manner at 35 all phases of the litigation.

36 You can tell when presumptions are being prejudicially used in a legal proceeding in federal court, for instance, when:

- 37 1. The judge or either party uses any of the following phrases:
  - 38 1.1. "Everyone knows. . ."
  - 39 1.2. "You knew or should have known..."
  - 40 1.3. "A reasonable [presumptuous] person would have concluded otherwise..."
- 41 2. The judge does not exclude the I.R.C. from evidence in the case involving a person who:
  - 42 2.1. Is not domiciled in the federal zone.
  - 43 2.2. Has no employment, contracts, or agency with the federal government.
  - 44 2.3. Who has provided evidence of the same above.

- 1 3. The judge allows the Prosecutor to throw accusations at the Defendant in front of the jury without insisting on evidence 2 to back it up.
- 3 4. The judge admits into evidence or cites a statutory presumption that prejudices your rights.

4 *"It is apparent," this court said in the Bailey Case ( 219 U.S. 239, 31 S.Ct. 145, 151) 'that a constitutional
5 prohibition cannot be transgressed indirectly by the creation of a statutory presumption any more than it can be
6 violated by direct enactment. The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional 7 restrictions."*

8 [*Heiner v. Donnan, 285 U.S. 312 (1932); Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U.S. 219, 238, et seq., 31 S.Ct. 145; Manley v.
9 Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 5-6, 49 S.Ct. 215.*]

- 10 5. A judge challenges your choice of domicile and/or citizenship. In such a case, the court is illegally involving itself in 11 what actually are strictly political matters and what is called "political questions". One's choice of domicile is a 12 political matter that may not be coerced or presumed to be anything other than what the subject himself has clearly and 13 unambiguously stated, both orally and on government forms. See our free memorandum of law below:

[Political Jurisdiction, Form #05.004
http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm](http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm)

14 Unscrupulous government prosecutors will frequently make use of false presumption as their chief means of winning a tax
15 case as follows:

- 16 1. They will choose a jury that is misinformed or under-informed about the law and legal process. This makes them into 17 sheep who will follow anyone.
- 18 2. They will use the ignorance and prejudices and the presumptions of the jury as a weapon to manipulate them into 19 becoming an angry "lynch mob" with a vendetta against the Defendant. This was the same thing that they did to Jesus.
20 See the Section 5.4.3.5 entitled "Modern Tax Trials are religious 'inquisitions' and not valid legal processes" available
21 at: <http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm>.
- 22 3. They will make frequent use of "words of art" to deceive the jury into making false presumptions that will prejudice 23 the rights of the defendant.

24 "The power to create presumptions is not a means of escape from constitutional restrictions,"
25 [New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964)]

26 Most of these Some of these "words of art" are identified in the sections 3.9.1 through 3.9.1.27 of this book.

- 27 4. They will:
- 28 4.1. Avoid defining the words they are using.
- 29 4.2. Prevent evidence of the meaning of the words they are using from entering the court record or the deliberations.
30 Federal judges will help them with this process by insisting that "law" may not be discussed in the courtroom.

31 A good judge will ensure that the above prejudice does not happen, because it is primary duty to defend and protect the 32 Constitutional rights of the parties. He must especially do so where the matter involves taxation and where there is no jury
33 or where anyone in the jury is either a "taxpayer" or a recipient of government benefits. He will do so in order to avoid 34 violation of 18 U.S.C. §597, which forbids bribing of voters, since jurists are a type of voter. However, in practice we have
35 observed that there are not have many good judges who will be this honorable in the context of a tax trial because their pay
36 and retirement, they think, depends on a vigorous illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code in violation of 28 U.S.C.
37 §455.

38 TITLE 28 > PART I > CHAPTER 21 > § 455
39 § 455. Disqualification of justice, judge, or magistrate judge

40 (a) Any justice, judge, or magistrate judge of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which 41 his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.

42 (b) He shall also disqualify himself in the following circumstances:

43 [ . . . ]

44 (4) He knows that he, individually or as a fiduciary, or his spouse or minor child residing in his household, has
45 a financial interest in the subject matter in controversy or in a party to the proceeding, or any other interest that
46 could be substantially affected by the outcome of the proceeding;

1 Most of the injustice that occurs in federal courtrooms across the country relating to income taxation occurs primarily because
2 the above statute is violated. This statute wasn't always violated. It was only in the 1930's that federal judges became 3 "taxpayers". Before that, they were completely independent, which is why most people were not "taxpayers" before that.
4 For details on this corruption of our judiciary, see sections 6.5.15, 6.5.18, 6.8.2 through 6.9.12:

5 <http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm>

6 The U.S. Supreme Court has declared that judges must be alert to prevent such unconstitutional encroachments upon the
7 sacred Constitutional Rights of those domiciled in the states of the Union, when it gave the following warning, which has 8 gone largely unheeded by federal circuit and district courts since then:

9 "It may be that it...is the obnoxious thing in its mildest and least repulsive form; but illegitimate and
10 unconstitutional practices get their first footing in that way; namely, by silent approaches and slight deviations
11 from legal modes of procedure. This can only be obviated by adhering to the rule that constitutional provisions
12 for the security of person and property should be liberally construed. A close and literal construction deprives
13 them of half their efficacy, and leads to gradual depreciation of the right, as if it consisted more in sound than in
14 substance. It is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against 15 any stealthy encroachments thereon. Their motto should be obsta principalis." [Mr. Justice Brewer, dissenting,
16 quoting Mr. Justice Bradley in Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616, 29 L.Ed. 746, 6 Sup.Ct.Rep. 524]
17 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906)]

18 If you would like to read more authorities on the subject of "presumption", see:

19 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/presumption.htm>

20 Another very important point needs to be made about the subject of "presumption", which is that "presumption", when it is 21 left to operate unchecked in a federal court proceeding:

- 22 1. Has all the attributes of religious "faith". Religious faith is simply a belief in anything that can't be demonstrated with 23 physical evidence absent presumption.
- 24 2. Turns the courtroom into a federal "church", and the judge into a "priest".
- 25 3. Produces a "political religion" when exercised in the courtroom.
- 26 4. Corrupts the court and makes it essentially into a political, and not a legal tribunal.
- 27 5. Violates the separation of powers doctrine, which was put in place to protect our rights from such encroachments.

28 If you would like to investigate the fascinating matter further of how the abuse of presumption in federal courtrooms has the 29 effect of creating a state-sponsored religion in violation of the First Amendment Establishment Clause, please consult sections
30 5.4 through 5.4.6.6 earlier.

31 5.10.5 Application of "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" rule

32 "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
33 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
34 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or
35 things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
36 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
37 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
38 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

39 The above important rule establishes that what is not enumerated in law can safely be ignored. The Supreme court has said
40 about the above rule:

- 41 1. That it is a rule of statutory construction and interpretation, and not a substantive law. See U.S. v. Barnes, 222 U.S. 513 42 (1912).
- 43 2. That the rule can never override clear and contrary evidences of Congressional intent. See Neuberger v. Commissioner
44 of Internal Revenue, 311 U.S. 83 (1940).
- 45 3. A few exceptions to the Exclusion Rule were made in the following cases:
  - 46 3.1. Springer v. Government of the Philippine Islands, 277 U.S. 189 (1928)
  - 47 3.2. U.S. v. Barnes, 222 U.S. 513 (1912)

1 3.3. Neuberger v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 311 U.S. 83 (1940)

2 5.10.6 Scams with the Word “includes”

3 One very frequently used trick the IRS likes to pull on uninformed Americans is to abuse the word “includes” to confuse
4 people and illegally expand their jurisdiction. They will attempt to do this using essentially statutory presumptions, which
5 we showed earlier were unconstitutional. Their false argument is based on the definition of “includes” found in [26 U.S.C.
6 §7701\(c\)](#) :

7 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
8 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

9 (c) Includes and including

10 The terms “includes” and “including” when used in a definition contained in this title shall not be deemed to 11 exclude other things otherwise within the meaning of the term defined.

12 They will point to this definition, and then say that any word whose definition uses this word essentially isn't bounded or 13 defined by that definition and can be arbitrarily expanded to include other things not listed. They will then try to apply this
14 false concept to the several places that “includes” is used in the Internal Revenue Code, most importantly in the definitions
15 of the following words:

- 16 • “State” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(10\) and 4 U.S.C. §110
- 17 • “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\)
- 18 • “employee” found in 26 U.S.C. §3401\(c\) and 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(c\) Employee
- 19 • “person” found in 26 C.F.R. §301.6671-1 (which governs who is liable for penalties under Internal Revenue Code)

20 If you are using the Non-Resident Non-Person Position, they will point to the definition of the term “United States” found in 21 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and say that it can mean anyplace in the country, because the definition uses the word “includes” and
22 therefore can be “expansive” and apply anywhere. Ridiculous nonsense! You must first realize that this flagrant abuse of 23 our language and of the meaning of the word “includes” is part of an obfuscation approach designed by Congress and the IRS
24 to illegally expand the jurisdiction of the federal government to assess I.R.C., Subtitle A income taxes beyond their clear
25 constitutional limits and beyond federal property or territories and into the 50 sovereign states. It violates common sense,
26 and every other use of the word “includes” in the English language we ever learned throughout our lifetime. It also violates 27 the government's own definition of the word “includes” published in the Federal Register, :

28 Treasury Decision 3980, Vol. 29, January-December, 1927, pgs. 64 and 65 defines the words includes and 29 including as:

30 “(1) To comprise, comprehend, or embrace... (2) To enclose within; contain; confine... But granting that the word
31 ‘including’ is a term of enlargement, it is clear that it only performs that office by introducing the specific elements
32 constituting the enlargement. It thus, and thus only, enlarges the otherwise more limited, preceding general
33 language... The word ‘including’ is obviously used in the sense of its synonyms, comprising; comprehending;
34 embracing.”

35 The IRS definition of the word includes also violates several court rulings. Below is just one example:

36 “Includes is a word of limitation. Where a general term in Statute is followed by the word, ‘including’ the 37 primary import of the specific words following the quoted words is to indicate restriction rather than enlargement.
38 Powers ex re. Covon v. Charron R.L., 135 A. 2nd 829, 832”*
39 [Definitions-Words and Phrases pages 156-156, Words and Phrases under ‘limitations’.]

40 As you may know, Black's Law Dictionary is the Bible of legal definitions. Let's see what it says about the definition of 41 “includes” from the Sixth Edition on p. 763:

42 “Include. (Lat. Includere, to shut in. keep within.) To confine within, hold as an inclosure. Take in, attain, shut
43 up, contain, inclose, comprise, comprehend, embrace, involve. Term may, according to context, express an
44 enlargement and have the meaning of and or in addition to, or merely specify a particular thing already included
45 within general words theretofore used. “Including” within statute is interpreted as a word of enlargement or of 46 illustrative application as well as a word of limitation. Premier Products Co. v. Cameron, 240 Or. 123, 400 P.2d.
47 227, 228.”

[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 763]

In other words, according to Black's, when the word "include" is used, it expands to take in all of the items stipulated or listed, but is then limited to them.

Abuses of the word includes by the Congress and the IRS is a clear assault on our liberty, as it undermines our very language and our means of comprehending precisely and exclusively not only what the law requires of us, but what it doesn't require. Here is what Confucius said about this kind of conspiracy:

"When words lose their meaning, people will lose their liberty."
[Confucius, 500 B.C.]

Such an approach also amounts to a clear violation of due process under the Fourth and Sixth Amendment, in that it causes the law to not specifically define what is or is not required of the citizen:

"A statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law."
[Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385 (1926)]

The above finding gives rise to a doctrine known as the "void for vagueness doctrine", that was advocated by the U.S. supreme Court. This doctrine is deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to know the nature and cause of any criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the contents of any criminal indictment. The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which a defendant is accused of violating. A statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to define and give adequate notice of the kind of conduct which it forbids.

The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute, is to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give due notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process of law.
[U.S. v. De Cadena, 105 F.Supp. 202, 204 (1952), emphasis added]

If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a number of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the development of the doctrine (see Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan v. De George, 341 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute or a vague (or expansive) definition must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th Amendments.

IMPORTANT: We should remember that without the Bill of Rights (including the 4th, 5th, and 6th Amendments), our federal government can define "includes" any way they want because absent a Bill of Rights, the Void for Vagueness Doctrine is irrelevant and inapplicable! As we clarified earlier, the Bill of Rights do not apply inside the federal zone as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) and so the expansive use of "includes" is lawful there! That is why we must never claim to be "U.S. persons" or "U.S. citizens" who reside inside the federal zone: because then the Internal Revenue Code really can mean whatever the judge says it means, and this is especially true in an Article 1 court! See section 4.5.5.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 for further details on the distinction between an Article 1 and Article III court. Note that the U.S. Tax Court is an Article I legislative court that can only address matters affecting citizens and residents of the federal zone. You're playing with fire and a hazard to yourself if you litigate in this court and claim to be a "U.S. citizen"! They will ALWAYS presume incorrectly and in their own self-interest that you mean a STATUTORY citizen and not a CONSTITUTIONAL citizen.

The abuse of the word "includes" or its expansive use also violates the rules of statutory construction, which are founded on the Fourth Amendment right of due process of law:

"Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

1 This fact only underscores our duty to refrain from reading a phrase into the statute when Congress has left it
 2 out. " [W]here Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another .... it is
 3 generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely in the disparate inclusion or exclusion. "
 4 Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23, 78 L.Ed.2d. 17, 104 S.Ct. 296 (1983) (citation omitted).
 5 [Keene Corp. v. United States, 508 U.S. 200, 124 L.Ed.2d. 118, 113 S.Ct. 1993. (emphasis added)]

6 Here are two particularly pertinent rules of statutory construction that confirm the restrictive use of the word "includes"
 7 advocated throughout this book:

8 "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. A maxim of statutory interpretation meaning that the expression of one
 9 thing is the exclusion of another. Burgin v. Forbes, 293 Ky. 456, 169 S.W.2d. 321, 325; Newblock v. Bowles,
 10 170 Okl. 487, 40 P.2d. 1097, 1100. Mention of one thing implies exclusion of another. When certain persons or
 11 things are specified in a law, contract, or will, an intention to exclude all others from its operation may be
 12 inferred. Under this maxim, if statute specifies one exception to a general rule or assumes to specify the effects
 13 of a certain provision, other exceptions or effects are excluded."
 14 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 581]

 16 "Ejusdem generis. Of the same kind, class, or nature. In the construction of laws, wills, and other instruments,
 17 the "ejusdem generis rule" is, that where general words follow an enumeration of persons or things, by words of 18 a particular and specific meaning, such general words are not to be construed in their widest extent, but are to 19 be held as applying only to persons or things of the same general kind or class as those specifically mentioned.
 20 U.S. v. LaBrecque, D.C. N.J., 419 F.Supp. 430, 432. The rule, however, does not necessarily require that the 21 general provision be limited in its scope to the identical things specifically named. Nor does it apply when the 22 context manifests a contrary intention.

23 Under "ejusdem generis" canon of statutory construction, where general words follow the enumeration of 24 particular classes of things, the general words will be construed as applying only to things of the same general
 25 class as those enumerated. Campbell v. Board of Dental Examiners, 53 Cal.App.3d. 283, 125 Cal.Rptr. 694, 26 696."
 27 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 517]

28 So when the word "includes" is used, then anything not specified is presumed excluded by the first rule of statutory 29 construction above "Expressio Unius est exclusio alterius". The second rule of statutory construction above says that when 30 the word "includes" introduces a list of items, then the list must be presumed to be of the same kind or class. For instance,
 31 the definition of "United States" found in Title 8 of the U.S. Code says:

32 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101\(a\)\(36\): State [Aliens and Nationality]

33 The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United
 34 States.

35 The above list of items introduced with the word "includes" in Title 8 of the U.S. Code are federal States or territories, and 36 so this is the "general class" that they all fall into. This definition of "State" is the basis for determining whether a person is 37 born in the "United States" for the purposes of citizenship, as defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(38) and 8 C.F.R. §215.1(f).

38 If the act doesn't specifically identify what is forbidden or "included" and we have to rely not on the law, but some judge or
 39 lawyer or politician or a guess to describe what is "included", then our due process has been violated and our government has 40 thereby instantly been transformed from a government of laws into a government of men. And in this case, it only took the 41 abuse of one word in the English language to do so!

42 The concept of "due process of law" as it is embodied in Fifth Amendment demands that a law shall not be
 43 unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious and that the means selected shall have a reasonable and substantial 44 relation to the object being sought.
 45 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500, under the definition of "due process of law"]

46 If the word "includes" can be lawlessly abused to mean other things not specifically identified or at least classified in the 47 statute, then the whole of the Internal Revenue Code essentially defines NOTHING, because it all hinges on jurisdiction, and 48 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\), which establishes jurisdiction uses the word "includes". How can the code define ANYTHING that 49 uses the word "includes", based on the definition of "definition" found below?:

50 definition: A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. The
 51 process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Such a description of the thing

1 defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things
2 and classes."
3 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 423]

4 Is the word "United States" defined exactly, if "includes" can mean that you can add whatever you arbitrarily want to be 5 "included" in the definition?

6 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9)

7 United States

8 The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes only the States and the District of Columbia.

9 This clear and flagrant disregard for due process of law strikes at the heart of our liberty and freedom and we ought to boycott
10 the income tax based on this clever ruse by the shysters in Congress and the IRS who invented it. If the word "includes" is 11 used in its expansive sense, we have, in effect, subjected ourselves to the arbitrary whims of however the currently elected
12 politician or judge wants to describe what is "included". That leads to massive chaos, injustice, and unconstitutional behavior
13 by our courts and our elected representatives, which is exactly what we have today. To put it bluntly, such deceptive actions
14 are treasonable. The abuse also promotes unnecessary litigation over the meaning of the tax code, to the benefit of lawyers,
15 lawmakers, and the American Bar Association, which is a clear conflict of interest. See section 3.20.1 for details on how the 16 legal profession has exploited this uncertainty to their advantage in maximizing litigation. Here is what the U.S. Supreme 17 Court says about the confusion created by the expansive abuse of the word "includes":

18 "In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes, it is THE ESTABLISHED RULE NOT TO EXTEND their
19 provisions, by implication, BEYOND THE CLEAR IMPORT OF THE LANGUAGE USED, OR TO ENLARGE
20 their operations SO AS TO EMBRACE MATTERS NOT SPECIFICALLY POINTED OUT".
21 [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S.151 (1917)]

22 If this ridiculous and abusive interpretation of the word "includes" by the IRS is allowed to stand by the courts and this assault
23 on our liberty by Congress is allowed to continue, then below is the essence of what the government has done to us,
24 represented as a satirical press release by the U.S. supreme Court:

25 NEW RULES FOR LAW

26 SMUCKWAP NEWSERVICE, Washington: The Supreme Court ruled today that judges can do whatever the hell
27 they want. In a landmark case, Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, the justices handed down their 28 inestimable judgment that since lawyers in general and judges in particular are such fine examples of humanity,
29 not to mention smart enough to get through law school, judges can do whatever they please.

30 "The Rule of Law has ended," proclaimed Supreme Court Justice Arrogant B. Astart, "and the Rule of Judges
31 begins!"

32 Turning their shiny black backs on the rest of America, the justices decided to toss out two hundred years of 33 Constitutional law and indeed, to rid themselves completely of having to heed the Constitution.

34 "The law is what we say it is," said Justice Whiney I. Diot. "It has been this way for some time now, but with 35 Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, we are coming out of our judicial closet. No more arguments will be 36 allowed from anyone, and we don't want to hear any more of your complaining about your rights. In fact, any 37 mention of so-called rights will guarantee you 100 years, hard labor."

38 Justice K. Rupt Assin concurred in his opinion that "judicial oligarchy has now fully come into its place in 39 American history and will be fully enforced by an iron rule of law, and remember, law is whatever we say it is."

40 The Center for People Who Want to Leave This Country Because It Is Beginning to Look Too Much Like Nazi
41 Germany analyzed the justices' decision.

42 "Judges now legally can put anyone in prison for any reason they want, for as long as they want," states the 43 analysis. "Judges can also put jurors in prison for 'obstructing justice' and for anything else, including not 44 handing the judge whatever money they may have on them at the time. Jurors who don't behave exactly as the 45 judge desired have been persecuted in the past, but "now they can receive prison terms much longer than their 46 own lifespans added to the lifespan(s) of the defendant(s) in any trial.

1           The report also mentioned the justices' decision that anyone who says anything disagreeable in their courtroom
2 can be immediately arrested and jailed, their property confiscated, and their spouses and children taken as 3 "wards" of the court under the justices own personal pleasure ... or... supervision.

4           The concept of separation of powers was addressed in the Center's report on the decision.

5           "There is no separation of powers," it reads, "when not only all the justices are lawyers, so are all Congressmen
6 and the President, his wife, his cabinet, the entire Department of Justice, most lobbyists and almost everyone else
7 in Washington, D.C."

8           When questioned about what effect the decision would have on all Americans, the spokesman for the Center said,
9 "I can't be certain. I suspect that emigration rather than immigration will become a major concern. Those 10 Americans who are lawyers will be fine, for the most part. No one will ever again show up for jury duty. But if 11 we thought we had an overcrowded prison problem before, we're in for a *major* shock!"

12 If you would like a more detailed treatment of why the word "includes" is used as a word of limitation within the Internal 13 Revenue Code, we have prepared a pamphlet on the subject specifically for this purpose with an exhaustive analysis of several 14 of the subjects covered in the last few sections:

Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud, Form #05.014

15 5.10.7 Guilty Until Proven Innocent: False Presumptions of Liability Based on Treacherous Definitions<sup>307</sup>

16 We described earlier in section 5.3.1 the definition of the term "taxpayer" and the monumentally important distinction
17 between the word "taxpayer" and other words like "nontaxpayer" and "Citizen". Recall from that section that a "taxpayer"
18 is someone who is "liable for" or "subject to" an imputed Internal Revenue tax and that the IRS calls everyone "taxpayers",
19 even though in most cases they are committing fraud in doing so. Many Americans have been systematically misinformed
20 about the proper application of the Internal Revenue Code by their government and a corrupted legal and tax preparation
21 profession to such an extent that they falsely believe or "presume" they are "taxpayers". This brainwashing usually occurs
22 because of a naive reading of the Internal Revenue Service's deceptive at best and downright fraudulent at worst publications,
23 which consistently use the term "taxpayer" to describe everyone. To further bias this presumption in the government's favor,
24 our deceitful government even created another name for your Social Security Number, by calling it a "Taxpayer Identification
25 Number" and requiring you to use it on every return under 26 U.S.C. §6109, but only if you are required to file, and there is 26 no such requirement under Subtitle A because there is no liability statute. We also know that the courts do not have the power
27 to turn a "nontaxpayer" into a "taxpayer" because only you, as the sovereign, can do that to yourself voluntarily:

28           *"And by statutory definition the term 'taxpayer' includes any person, trust or estate subject to a tax imposed by
29 the revenue act... Since the statutory definition of 'taxpayer' is exclusive, the federal courts do not have the power
30 to create nonstatutory taxpayers for the purpose of applying the provisions of the Revenue Act."
31 [C.I.R. v. Trustees of L. Inv. Ass'n., 100 F.2d. 18 (1939)]*

32 When an IRS bureaucrat is then asked about whether most Americans are "liable" to pay the tax, they will stack the deck in 33 their favor with their answer by saying such things as:

34           "A taxpayer has never won on that in court."

35 and they literally won't be telling a lie on that because a "taxpayer" is someone who is "liable" or has made himself or herself
36 "liable" by volunteering. We have a scene from an evening news clip in the "How to Keep 100% of Your Earnings Video"
37 online on our website (<http://famguardian.org/Media/movie.htm>) where an IRS representative does exactly that on the 38 evening news in response to a question about liability. What no IRS employee will tell you is that NO ONE in the context
39 of the Subtitle A personal income tax is "liable" or is a "taxpayer" unless they volunteer because their boss would probably 40 fire them for telling the truth! The disastrously false presumption that you are a "taxpayer" gets you into all kinds of due
41 process traps and Constitutional rights violations with the IRS that are very difficult to get out of without a much clearer
42 understanding of the law and the facts than most people have:

<sup>307</sup> Adapted from a paper by the Institute for Policy Innovation, Policy Report #165 entitled A Monument of Deficient Wisdom: The Constitutional Conflict in Federal Income Tax Law Enforcement.

1                    “The significant problems we face cannot be solved at the same level of thinking we were at when we created
2                    them.”
3                    [Albert Einstein]

4 This section examines one such due process violation arising out of this mistaken presumption that we are all “taxpayers” by
5 examining the issue of burden of proof. If we falsely presume we are “taxpayers”, then statutory and case law clearly
6 establishes that the burden of proof falls squarely on us as the alleged “taxpayer” to prove our lack of liability. This is exactly
7 the bargaining position our covetous and deceitful government wants us in so they can get the upper hand most of the time,
8 and we’ll explain just how deep a hole you will fall into when the government succeeds in tricking you with this subtle but
9 very effective word trap. Because of this word trap, when we fall for it, we basically end up with no constitutional protections,
10 no due process rights, and big legal bills trying to prove the government wrong. Just by the words they used to describe us,
11 they prejudiced our rights and the only thing that allowed them to get away with it was our own ignorance of the law and 12 imprecise language.

13 Before we launch further into some rather disturbing revelations about the burden of proof requirements applying to
14 “taxpayers”, we’d like to remind you again that it is a violation of due process of law for the government as a moving party
15 to call you a “taxpayer” absent your voluntary consent and cooperation without first meeting the burden of proving that you
16 indeed are a “taxpayer” with evidence. Remember what Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, says under the definition of 17 “due process of law” on page 500:

18                    Due process of law. Law in its regular course of administration through courts of justice. Due process of law*
19 in each particular case means such an exercise of the powers of the government as the settled maxims of law
20 permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe
21 for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs. A course of legal proceedings according to those 22 rules and principles which have been established in our systems of jurisprudence for the enforcement and
23 protection of private rights. To give such proceedings any validity, there must be a tribunal competent by its 24 constitution—that is, by the law of the creation—to pass upon the subject-matter of the suit; and, if that involves 25 merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant, he must be brought within its jurisdiction by 26 service of process within the state, or his voluntary appearance. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714, 24 L.Ed. 565.
27 Due process of law implies the right of the person affected thereby to be present before the tribunal which 28 pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard,
29 by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on 30 *the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively be presumed

31 [rather than proven] against him, this is NOT due process of law.
32 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 500]

33 So if there are any assumptions or presumptions about you that are unproven, including your identity as a “taxpayer”, your 34 due process rights have been violated, and any judge with integrity wouldn’t allow that in his courtroom. However, if the 35 government uses the word “taxpayer” to describe you and you don’t object, then you are a “taxpayer” by presumption
36 under the Law of Presumptions, which we discuss more fully in sections 3.4.4 and 3.4.6 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form
37 #06.008. Watch out! Incidentally, we show you in these two sections how to use the same devious tactic in reverse against 38 the IRS.

39 You therefore need to keep reminding yourself that the legal discussion in this section only pertain to “taxpayers” and not to
40 all Americans, and that the government must produce a statute making you liable for a tax and show taxable income, which 41 in all cases under Subtitle A means corporate profit (see section 5.6.5 earlier), before you become a “taxpayer”. This is the 42 only way you can successfully challenge their jurisdiction and play the cards right that they will try to deal you. Since there
43 is no statute under Subtitle A making private natural persons “liable” for the income tax imposed in 26 U.S.C. §1, this is a
44 burden of proof that they simply can’t meet in most cases, unless a tyrannical and corrupt judge steers the jury and the case
45 away from talking about this subject, thus violating your First Amendment right of free speech to communicate with your 46 government in the way that you see fit and in defense of your liberties.

47 The original article upon which this section was derived mistakenly used the terms “citizen” and “taxpayer” interchangeably,
48 so we had to edit it to clarify the subtle distinctions in order to avoid being deceived and to make the truth plain. More than
49 anything, the battle to empty your pocket is a war of words but it is still a war and amounts to treason against the Constitution,
50 and we must be vigilant to note guerilla warfare tactics such as the “taxpayer” trap appearing in this section.

51 The idea of placing the burden of proof upon the accuser derives from English common law. The common law was deeply
52 entrenched in the colonies during the time of the founding and continues as the basis of American law. The common law
53 itself derives from the Great Charter of Liberties, Magna Charta. Magna Charta was the declaration of the liberties of

1 English freemen signed by King John in 1215 AD. It was extracted from the King at the point of a sword as the price for
2 retaining his throne. Magna Charta was reconfirmed numerous times by English monarchs over the ensuing centuries to the 3 point where its principles became engrained in the fabric of English—and by extension, American—jurisprudence.

4 Chapter 39 of the Great Charter sets forth many of the fundamental rights of citizens in the judicial process. It established the
5 concepts of both due process of law and the burden of proof as we know them today. Chapter 39 (chapter 29 in the 1225
6 version) reads:

7 No freeman shall be seized, or imprisoned, or dispossessed, or outlawed, or in any way destroyed; nor will we
8 condemn him, nor will we commit him to prison, excepting by the legal judgment of his peers, or by the laws of 9 the land.

10 By this declaration, citizens were not to be considered guilty at any level in the judicial process until after a trial. In the Notes
11 on the Great Charters, English jurists declared that the protections afforded by Magna Charta chapter 39/29 are so important
12 that they alone “would alone have procured for it the title of the Great Charter.”<sup>62</sup> In practice, this principle created the axiom
13 of law holding that the accuser, whether in the criminal or civil context, was solely responsible to prove the verity of his 14 claims against the accused before any punishment could apply.

15 Income tax codes and regulations heap upon the shoulders of “taxpayers” innumerable requirements to carry out affirmative
16 duties under the pain of imprisonment, civil penalties, additional tax and interest assessments. Moreover, the code allows the 17 IRS to make determinations with respect to a taxpayer’s filing status, annual income, deductible expenses, dependent
18 exemptions, etc. In all but a few exceptions, the IRS never has to prove that its actions or determinations are correct. The 19 Supreme Court, in the 1933 case of Welch v. Helvering, 290 U.S. 111 (1933) declared that the IRS is entitled to the 20 “presumption of correctness” with regard to its determinations. As such, the “taxpayer” “has the burden of proving” such 21 actions to be wrong. In a very real way, the consequence of this is that the “taxpayer” is essentially guilty until proven
22 innocent, a reversal of the fundamental rule of law regarding the burden of proof. The Supreme Court, in the case of Bull v.
23 United States, 295 U.S. 247 (1935) used this explanation to describe how the litigation process is fundamentally altered in 24 tax cases:

25 Thus, the usual procedure for the recovery of debts is reversed in the field of taxation. Payment precedes defense,
26 and the burden of proof, normally on the claimant, is shifted to the taxpayer.

27 The [tax] assessment supersedes the pleading, proof, and judgment necessary in an action at law, and has the 28 force of such a judgment. The ordinary defendant stands in judgment only after a hearing. The taxpayer often is 29 afforded his hearing after judgment and after payment, and his only redress for unjust administrative action is
30 the right to claim restitution.<sup>308</sup>

31 The shift in the burden of proof does not apply to the various criminal provisions of the tax code. To place the burden of 32 proof on the accused in a criminal matter is a clear deprivation of due process and flatly unconstitutional. However, the vast 33 majority of the penalty provisions of the tax code are civil in nature and it naturally follows that the overwhelming number
34 of penalty assessments are likewise civil in nature. As a result, the courts seem content to dissolve the historic protection in 35 most civil cases. But despite the fact that the imposition of civil penalties does not carry the risk of loss of liberty, such 36 imposition, as well as civil collection in general, most certainly does imply the loss of property, a condition Magna Charta
37 referred to as being “dispossessed.” As the evidence presented above clearly shows, the Founders put the importance of 38 property and the protection thereof on par with that of personal liberty. The due process clauses of both the Fifth and 39 Fourteenth Amendments speak clearly to the protection of life, liberty and property.

40 What could justify a departure from the settled principles of due process such that the burden of proof is shifted from the 41 government to the citizen? The answer is found in a statement by the Bull court that has become a common thread woven 42 into the fabric of tax litigation for more than six decades. That statement is:

43 “But taxes are the lifeblood of government, and their prompt and certain availability an imperious need.”<sup>309</sup>

44 Thus, in the mind of the Supreme Court, the government’s “imperious need” for money justifies the abandonment of one of 45 the most important elements of American liberty. The concept of “need” was reiterated in the case of Carson v. United States,

1 where the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals more pointedly declared that such departure is justified based upon “the
2 government’s strong need to accomplish swift collection of revenues and in the need to encourage taxpayer recordkeeping.”

3 This reasoning presents a recurring theme: government’s need for money is, by itself, sufficient to override settled
4 constitutional protections. This notion is antithetical to liberty and to the notion of a government with limited, narrowly
5 prescribed powers. If the courts are able to set aside specific constitutional protections on the mere assertion by the 6 government of a “compelling need,” all the rights declared sacrosanct in the Constitution are but empty vessels.

7 This shift in the burden of proof is responsible for innumerable abuses by the IRS. Many of these were brought to light during
8 the 1997 Senate Finance Committee hearings into IRS abuse. Specifically, the practice of placing the burden on “taxpayers”
9 has the effect of allowing the IRS to issue penalty assessments at will, without regard to the specific facts of a case and in 10 violation of its own stated policy on penalty assessments. A good share of the more than thirty million penalties issued every 11 year are issued through automatic computer assessments. In this way, the IRS does not even make an effort to determine
12 whether the facts of a case justify imposition of the penalty. The “taxpayer” is left to assert defenses if he is able to navigate 13 the procedural quagmire.

14 This is equally true of the millions of computer notices issued by the IRS annually. Many such notices claim to correct errors
15 allegedly made by “taxpayers” in their tax returns. And while the law provides a means for a “taxpayer” to challenge these 16 notices, the burden is on the “taxpayer” to correctly respond to the notice in a timely fashion, craft a response sufficient to 17 apprise the IRS of the objection and prosecute the objection through the system while carrying the burden of proving not only 18 that the IRS’ determination is incorrect, but what the correct determination should be.

19 The unfortunate reality is that the vast majority of citizens embrangled with the IRS do not understand their rights or legal
20 remedies under the Internal Revenue Code. As such, people fail to realize that they are in fact “prosecutors” when it comes 21 to correcting errant IRS action. That is to say, the citizen must instigate appeal actions, both administrative and judicial, in 22 order to challenge a tax audit determination. The citizen must instigate proper challenges to collection actions in order to
23 prevent the loss of property in the collection process. The citizen must instigate administrative or judicial challenges to the 24 IRS’ investigative powers in the hope of maintaining any right of privacy. In the context of all such challenges (with rare and 25 narrow exceptions), the citizen must carry the burden of proving IRS error, with respect to both the law and facts of the case.

26 The extensive focus on the burden of proof issue led Congress to enact code section 7491 as part of the Internal Revenue
27 Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998. This provision received much attention because it purports to shift the burden of proof
28 to the IRS, thereby curing the problems set forth above. On careful inspection, however, it can be said that that law cannot 29 possibly attain that goal. Section 7491(a)(1) states as follows:

30 If, in any court proceeding, a taxpayer introduces credible evidence with respect to any factual issue relevant to
31 ascertaining the liability of the taxpayer for any tax imposed by subtitle A or B, the Secretary shall have the
32 burden of proof with respect to such issue.

33 The statute indeed purports to shift the burden to the IRS but only if the citizen first “introduces credible evidence” concerning
34 the issue. In other words, the citizen bears the burden of proof necessary to shift the burden of proof. What constitutes 35 “credible evidence” is undefined by statute and promises to be the subject of ongoing litigation. Thus, the “taxpayer” retains 36 the duty to present initial evidence to show the IRS is wrong with regard to a “factual issue.”

37 Even if he is successful in this first task, the burden shifts only in “any court proceeding.” The fact is, 97 percent of all IRS
38 actions are carried out, not in a judicial context, but rather, in the administrative context. For example, virtually all penalty
39 assessments and computer tax assessments are administrative in nature. The initial determination of tax liability by the IRS
40 is administrative in nature. Likewise, the vast majority of IRS’ collection actions are administrative in nature. And while 41 some courts have limited jurisdiction to review collection actions, the taxpayer must instigate the review. Moreover, as the 42 statute declares, the taxpayer bears the initial burden to introduce “credible evidence” with regard to the “factual issues.”

43 In the larger sense, as examined in more detail later in this report, federal laws expressly prohibit the courts from taking 44 jurisdiction over the IRS in collection cases. This is because of the Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421. It expressly denies 45 jurisdiction to the federal courts to enjoin or restrain the ascertainment, computation, assessment or collection of any internal 46 revenue tax.

47 Moreover, subsection (a)(2)(A) of code section 7491 places two serious limitations on the supposed shift. The first is that the 48 “taxpayer” must have “complied with the requirements under this title to substantiate any item.” This language vitiates all

1 the foregoing language to the extent that such could have been read to shift the burden to the IRS. In countless places in the
2 tax code, the law places the burden on the “taxpayer” to “substantiate” a given claim. The substantiation requirement is in
3 practical effect, a burden of proof. Without providing evidence to support one’s claim under a particular code section, he has 4 failed to “substantiate” his entitlement to the relief or benefit provided by that section.

5 Consider further the language of subsection (a)(2)(B). It provides that the burden shifts only if “the taxpayer has maintained
6 all records required under this title and has cooperated with the reasonable requests of the Secretary for witnesses,
7 information, documents and interviews.” The terms “reasonable requests” and “cooperated” are undefined. The practical
8 effect of this is for the IRS to assert a laundry list of demands for documents, evidence, exhibits, witnesses, etc., and for the
9 IRS to allege “lack of cooperation” in order to prevent the burden from shifting.<sup>68</sup>

10 This is standard procedure for the IRS and is precisely what happened in the U.S. Tax Court case of Higbee v. Commissioner,
11 the first case in which the Tax Court addressed the new burden of proof statute. Higbee asserted that the burden shifted to the 12 IRS under the new law. IRS argued that because Higbee “failed to meet the requirements of code section 7491(a)(1) and (2),”
13 the taxpayer and not the IRS should retain the burden of proof. As to each of the three issues presented by Higbee, the court
14 ruled against Higbee, claiming:

15 Again, we reiterate that petitioners have failed to provide this Court with credible evidence for us to allow
16 petitioners’ claims with respect to the disallowed deductions. We therefore reject all of petitioners’ contentions
17 as to these issues.<sup>310</sup>

18 In the final analysis, the burden of proof was in no way shifted to the IRS. Two other Restructuring Act amendments are 19 claimed to positively impact the burden of proof for citizens. The first is code section 6751. The second is section 7491(c).
20 Subsection 6751(a) states that with respect to an assessment:

21 The Secretary shall include with each notice of penalty under this title information with respect to the name of 22 the penalty, the section of this title under which the penalty is imposed, and a computation of the penalty.

23 Code section 7491(c) provides that the “burden of production” is upon the IRS with respect to any penalty assessment that is 24 the subject of a court proceeding.

25 Neither the language of code section 6751 nor section 7491(c) operates to shift the burden of proof to the IRS. Section 6751
26 is merely a notification provision. It says nothing whatsoever regarding a burden of proof.

27 The impact of section 7491(c) is clearly addressed by the Higbee Court. Analyzing the statute and the legislative history,
28 Higbee concludes:

29 Congress’ use of the phrase “burden of production” and not the more general phrase “burden of proof” as used
30 in section 7491(a) [discussed in detail above] indicates to us that Congress did not desire that the burden of proof
31 be placed upon the Commissioner with regard to penalties.<sup>311</sup>

32 In the overall scheme of the tax code, these laws do little to place the burden of proof upon the shoulders of the IRS. In sum,
33 both the IRS and “taxpayers” rest in essentially the same position now as they did before these provisions were enacted.

34 If the reader of this section didn’t know the subtle meaning of the term “taxpayer” and that there is no liability statute under 35 Subtitle A, then this section, without the warnings we placed here, could easily discourage anyone into thinking that the 36 Constitution is being violated because of the “burden of proof” games described. To the extent that the laws are applied as 37 described only within the federal zone, that would be an erroneous conclusion because that area, for the most part, isn’t 38 covered by the Bill of Rights as we describe repeatedly. However, to the extent that the rules in this section for burden of 39 proof are applied outside of the federal zone and inside the 50 Union states, it would be valid to conclude that the constitution
40 is indeed being violated. We must always remember that Subtitle A income taxes, however, can only be made mandatory to 41 persons domiciled in the federal zone or working in the government, wherever located. For everyone else, it’s not a tax, but 42 a donation!

5.10.8 Purpose of Vague Laws is to Chain you to IRS Control<sup>312</sup>

Vague laws are deliberately passed by Congress to aid governmental agencies to control natural persons through administrative process. Forcing the making and delivery of the "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns" based on false belief occurs because of such laws. It is the duty of the judge to prevent the use of vague laws as a vehicle to deprive persons of their rights or their property. It is also the function of the court to see that separation of powers exists so justice is served.

The system to serve justice in this country is adversarial. This means that lawyers in the private sector must attack vagueness in the law. Justice Department lawyers are also duty bound not to misuse any law, vague ones notwithstanding. If they do, judges must admonish and not permit any lawyer to proceed if he or she does not vigorously take exception to the vague law.

It will be argued that the accused must shoulder the responsibility if he hires an ineffective lawyer (one who refuses to be an advocate) because he exercised his free choice in selecting that attorney. In other words, one has the right to prejudice himself by his selection of an attorney. But, the duty of a judge is to see that justice prevails and overrides such a prejudice. Currently, however, free choice in legal counsel is not readily available to the average American because attorneys are not trained to take exception to vague laws.

Justice is not a person, but a condition. It is the duty of the judge to recognize and stop the use of the courtroom before injustice occurs. Injustice does not occur when the burden to prove innocence has been forced upon the accused by the vagueness of a law which prevents the accused from implementing any possible defense.

There is intent to commit injustice in the courtroom when a U.S. Justice Department lawyer uses vague laws to control the person accused in what is deemed a prosecution. Injustice also manifests itself when the lawyer for the accused cooperates with the Justice Department by not defending against a prosecution under a vague law. If the U.S. judge permits such conduct to occur, the rights of the accused are not protected by the court and justice is not served. Only the Justice Department and the lawyer in the private sector are served. What results is malicious prosecution—an action in a courtroom that is not a fair trial but a trial by ordeal.

Finding a lawyer who will defend a client and not merely represent him is very difficult. The client must literally know the law himself and dictate to the lawyer what he wants done. The matter of time becomes a factor since one does get a speedy trial. The matter of cost becomes a factor since the old saying "money talks" seems to apply in the courtroom. There is also a matter of understanding what to look for in a lawyer.

The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guarantees certain rights to the accused. It says:

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall...be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; ... and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

One is not informed of the nature and cause of a criminal accusation, or of the requirements on a civil basis, when he is accused or confronted in either a criminal or civil situation under laws that are vague. Proper notice is not available. Further, in any situation where the assistance of counsel for his defense is required, the U.S. Constitution guarantees that one shall have counsel who is concerned with defending your life, liberty, and property, not one who is partial to vague laws which lead to malicious prosecution in order to enhance the counsel's livelihood. When such attorneys do not attempt to destroy vague laws, they violate the Sixth Amendment rights of the accused and make a record of their ineffectiveness. The end result is to unduly convict a person. This violates the Sixth, Eighth and Thirteenth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution.

The burden to provide an adversarial process is upon the lawyer in the private sector, and the judge should demand that it exist in the U.S. courtroom.<sup>313</sup> In the process of serving justice, a U.S. judge must be ever diligent with regard to vague laws so as not to impair the rights of the accused. This is the duty of the court, not the duty of the accused. When vague laws are used, the accused is forced to defend against an unfair system and not against a violation of the law.

A U.S. judge actually cooperates in seeing that injustice is perpetuated in his or her courtroom when vague laws are permitted to be used for the purpose of enforcing the intentions of a government agency. In this process, the person and his rights are controlled to his prejudice. Such conduct impairs the integrity of the court and raises the question of whether or not the

1 Federal Government employees involved are in contempt of the court as well as being involved in concealment of violations
2 of due process of law.

3 The vague laws of the I.R. Code are intended to control property of the general public that is not authorized under law.
4 Competent attorneys would attempt to destroy these vague laws.

5 The story of the alleged conviction of Frank Kowalik described in his book IRS Humbug: Weapons of Enslavement, Frank
6 Kowalik, ISBN 0-9626552-0-1, 1991 reveals how lawyers cooperated to send him to prison, and how vague law made it
7 possible. In place of an adversarial process, it was a malicious prosecution with intent to force him to cooperate with the 8 lawyers and the IRS, and return him to a condition of peonage and slavery.

9 Vague laws along with lawyers cooperating with one another make the use of the U.S. courtroom for undue convictions
10 possible. Any person targeted by the IRS or other Federal Government agency can be unduly punished for doing what he or 11 she has the right to do under the law, simply because vague laws make possible a violation of his rights and liberties and are 12 used to create a false appearance of government jurisdiction where none actually exists.

13 5.10.9 Why the “Void for Vagueness Doctrine” Should be Invoked By The Courts to Render the Internal Revenue 14 Code Unconstitutional in Total

15 “Fundamental fairness requires that a person cannot be sent to jail for a crime he could not with reasonable
16 certainty know he was committing; reasonable certainty in that respect is all the more essential when vagueness
17 might induce individuals to forgo their rights of speech, press, and association for fear of violating an unclear
18 law.”

19 [Scull v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 359 U.S. 344, 79 S.Ct. 838, 3 L.Ed.2d. 865 (1959)]

20 As we stated clearly earlier in section 3.20.1 entitled “Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws”, it is quite evident that there is a
21 lot of disagreement and a complete lack of consistency (or “stare decisis”, or adherence to precedent) about how to interpret
22 and apply the Internal Revenue Code at every level of the federal judiciary, including the Federal District and Appellate 23 Courts as well as the U.S. Supreme Court, not to mention the state courts. This ought to be more than ample evidence that 24 the IRC lacks clarity.

25 We would argue that the Internal Revenue Code is deliberately vague, because if the code told the complete truth clearly,
26 then citizens of the 50 Union states with income from the 50 Union states would not pay direct income taxes and could 27 successfully use as their justification Article 1, Section 9, clause 4 of the U.S. Constitution., which is still in force and was 28 not changed by the Sixteenth Amendment.

29 The most effective way to discover where the truth is being hidden by the greedy lawyer-conspirators in Congress is to look
30 in the Internal Revenue Code for either undefined terms or for terms, confusing definitions, or particular parts of the code
31 over which the most litigation has occurred. Most of the controversy and illegal taxation would end if Congress would 32 accurately define the following terms. Note that we have included the proper definition for each of these terms:

33 “employee”: This term means an elected or appointed officer of the federal United States government in receipt of excise 34 taxable privileges.

35 “source”: This term defines the geographical or territorial boundaries that this Title shall apply to.

36 “State” and “States”: Within this Title, the term State refers to a federal possession or territory, to include Guam, Puerto
37 Rico, American Samoa, etc. State DOES NOT include the 50 states of the Union, but does apply to federal 38 possessions and facilities within those states. Note that the District of Columbia is not a “State”, but instead is 39 described in Title 4 as the seat of government.

40 “United States”: The term “United States” is defined as any federal territory or land over which the federal government has
41 exclusive control and jurisdiction, including District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and federal reservations
42 within the 50 states of the Union. It does NOT include the 50 States of the Union. The term “federal zone” shall 43 also be synonymous with the term “United States” as used in this title.

44 “foreign income”: Income from outside of the “United States” or the “federal zone”. Income from within one of the 50
45 Union states is counted as foreign income.

1 Do you think there might be a conflict of interest by the lawyers in Congress who write the laws to not define these terms
2 accurately because:

- 3 1. They would destroy income taxes on individuals and make the country financially insolvent.
- 4 2. They would undermine their livelihood after they left Congress, because they 5 are only in office temporarily. Remember that lawyers make most of their money litigating, or fighting in court. If the 6 tax code was clear, litigation over taxes would end, and they would be without jobs because there would be no more
7 people victimized by an unjust or obfuscated tax system. The law would be so clear that we wouldn't need to hire
8 lawyers to act as "high priests" to interpret the confusing laws for us.

9 For these and many other reasons, conflict of interest on the part of the U.S. Congress and the legal profession in general
10 (American Bar Association, or ABA) to keep the tax system the way it is will guarantee that the system will never improve
11 until the citizens relentlessly apply heat to their representatives to fix things and speak with one very clear voice on the issue.

12 That is why we wrote this book: to make the issues sufficiently clear that we can all speak with one loud and unanimous
13 voice to the IRS and Congress, and all simultaneously use the same processes in dealing with both of them.

14 The vagueness of the IRC, in turn, represents a violation of our due process protections guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment
15 and described in section 3.11.8.4 entitled "6th Amendment: Rights of Accused in Criminal Prosecutions". We will 16 demonstrate how this is the case in this section.

17 There is a concept called the "void for vagueness" doctrine that was advocated by the U.S. Supreme Court. This doctrine is 18 deeply rooted in our right to due process (under the Fifth Amendment) and our right to know the nature and cause of any 19 criminal accusation (under the Sixth Amendment). The latter right goes far beyond the contents of any criminal indictment.
20 The right to know the nature and cause of any accusation starts with the statute which a defendant is accused of violating. A
21 statute must be sufficiently specific and unambiguous in all its terms, in order to define and give adequate notice of the kind
22 of conduct which it forbids.

23 The essential purpose of the "void for vagueness doctrine" with respect to interpretation of a criminal statute, is
24 to warn individuals of the criminal consequences of their conduct. ... Criminal statutes which fail to give due 25 notice that an act has been made criminal before it is done are unconstitutional deprivations of due process of 26 law.

27 [U.S. v. De Cadena, 105 F.Supp. 202, 204 (1952), emphasis added]

28 If it fails to indicate with reasonable certainty just what conduct the legislature prohibits, a statute is necessarily void for
29 uncertainty, or "void for vagueness" as the doctrine is called. In the De Cadena case, the U.S. District Court listed a number
30 of excellent authorities for the origin of this doctrine (see Lanzetta v. New Jersey, 306 U.S. 451) and for the development of 31 the doctrine (see Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, Williams v. United States, 341 U.S. 97, and Jordan v. De George, 341
32 U.S. 223). Any prosecution which is based upon a vague statute must fail, together with the statute itself. A vague criminal 33 statute is unconstitutional for violating the 5th and 6th Amendments. The U.S. Supreme Court has emphatically agreed:

34 "That the terms of a penal statute creating a new offense must be sufficiently explicit to inform those who are
35 subject to it what conduct on their part will render them liable to its penalties is a well-recognized requirement,
36 consonant alike with ordinary notions of fair play and the settled rules of law; and a statute which either forbids
37 or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at 38 its meaning and differ as to its application violates the first essential of due process of law."

39 [Connally et al. v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385, 391 (1926), emphasis added]

40 The debate that is currently raging over the correct scope and proper application of the IRC is obvious, empirical proof that
41 men of common intelligence are differing with each other. Section 3.20.1 on "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws" is proof
42 of the extent of the conflicts in interpreting the Internal Revenue Code by the federal appellate courts. For example, some 43 people advocate definitions of "includes" and "including" which are expansive, not restrictive. The matter could be easily
44 decided if the IRC would instead exhibit sound principles of statutory construction, state clearly and directly that "includes"
45 and "including" are meant to be used in the expansive sense, and itemize those specific persons, places, and/or things that are
46 "otherwise within the meaning of the terms defined". If the terms "includes" and "including" must be used in the restrictive
47 sense, the IRC should explain, clearly and directly, that expressions like "includes only" and "including only" must be used,
48 to eliminate vagueness completely. Instead, they currently define the term "includes" and "including" using the expansive
49 sense and then contradict their own definition in IRC section 61 by adding the phrase "(but not limited to)".

1 Alternatively, the IRC could exhibit sound principles of statutory construction by explaining clearly and directly that
2 "includes" and "including" are always meant to be used in the restrictive sense.

3 Better yet, abandon the word "include" entirely, together with all of its grammatical variations, and use instead the word
4 "means" (which does not suffer from a long history of semantic confusion). It would also help a lot if the 50 Union states
5 were consistently capitalized and the federal states were not. The reverse of this convention can be observed in the regulations
6 for Title 31 (see 31 C.F.R. Sections 51.2 and 52.2). Section 2.9 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form
7 #10.005 entitled "What would it take for the IRS and the U.S. Congress to 'come clean'" talks about how to rewrite the tax
8 code in Title 26 of the U.S.C. in s.

9 These, again, are excellent grounds for deciding that the IRC is vague and therefore null and void. Of course, if the real intent
10 is to unconstitutionally expand federal jurisdiction in order to subjugate the 50 Union states under the dominion of federal 11 government (defined along something like ZIP code boundaries a la the Buck Act, codified in Title 4), and to replace the 12 sovereign Republics with a monolithic totalitarian socialist dictatorship, carved up into arbitrary administrative "districts",
13 that is another problem altogether. Believe it or not, the case law which has interpreted the Buck Act admits to the existence
14 of a "State within a state"! So, which State within a state are you in? Or should we be asking this question: "In the State
15 within which state are you?" (Remember: a preposition is a word you should never end a sentence with!)

16 The absurd results which obtain from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50 Union states, however, are problems which 17 will not go away, no matter how much we clarify the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC. There are 49 other
18 U.S. Codes which have the exact same problem. Moreover, the mountain of material evidence impugning the ratification
19 of the so-called 16th Amendment should leave no doubt in anybody's mind that Congress must still apportion all direct
20 taxes levied inside the sovereign borders of the 50 Union states. The apportionment restrictions have never been repealed.

21 Likewise, Congress is not empowered to delegate unilateral authority to the President to subdivide or to join any of the 50
22 Union states. There are many other constitutional violations which result from expanding the term "State" to mean the 50
23 States of the Union. In this context, the mandates and prohibitions found in the Bill of Rights are immediately obvious,
24 particularly as they apply to Union state Citizens (as distinct from United States** citizens a/k/a federal citizens). Clarifying
25 the definitions of "includes" and "including" in the IRC is one thing; clarifying the exact extent of sovereign jurisdiction is 26 quite another. Congress is just not sovereign within the borders of the 50 Union states.

27 Sorry, all you Senators and Representatives. When you took office, you did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Ten
28 Commandments. You did not take an oath to uphold and defend the Uniform Commercial Code. You did not take an oath
29 to uphold and defend the Communist Manifesto, Karl Marx. You did take an oath to uphold and defend the Constitution for 30 the United States of America.

31 It should be obvious, at this point, that capable authors do agree that the 50 Union states do not belong in the standard
32 definition of "State" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10) of the IRC because they are in a class that is different from the class
33 known as federal states. Within the borders of the 50 Union states, the "geographical" extent of exclusive federal jurisdiction
34 is strictly confined to the federal enclaves; this extent does not encompass the 50 Union states themselves. See 40 U.S.C.
35 §3112, which clearly shows that the jurisdiction of the federal courts only extend onto federal property.

36 This ruling was significant, because it divides the United States of America into what we call the "federal zone", which 37 includes the District of Columbia, U.S. Possessions, and Territories on the one hand, and the 50 Union states on the other
38 hand. This issue is very important and explains the definitions of "State" and "United States" found in sections 3.12.1.19
39 and 3.12.1.23 respectively.

40 We cannot blame the average American for failing to appreciate this subtlety. However, we can blame all of the federal 41 courts for failing to resolve these controversies to the benefit of the Citizen, as the U.S. Supreme Court has clearly said they 42 are obligated to do in the following case:

43 "Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by
44 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be
45 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
46 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]

1 The confusion that results from the vagueness we observe is inherent in the Code and evidently intentional, which raises some
2 very serious questions concerning the real intent of that Code in the first place. Could money have anything to do with it?
3 That question answers itself. An even more interesting question was raised by one of our readers, who wrote:

4 Family Guardian,

5 Greetings... The more that I mull this issue over, the more that I believe that the weak point of the tax laws are
6 that they do not meet nor surpass the "Void for Vagueness" criteria. If it is up to the individual to determine
7 their liability then, to ascertain that they must, at the very least, read and understand all of title 26. If they do not
8 then they cannot sign certifying that they are in compliance and that they are legally liable. If this is actually the 9 burden placed upon the American public then I believe that this should be the focus or at least one of the main
10 focuses of the issues and questions raised with the government and the Congress.

11 Regards,

12 Larry W.

13 In the meantime, the IRC should have been thrown out by the courts long ago because it violates the Sixth Amendment by 14 not being sufficiently specific as to clearly define who specifically is liable for paying federal income tax. But if the courts
15 did this, then judges would have to shut off what they think is the source of their paycheck, and you know that kind of honesty
16 and integrity is nowhere to be found in our corrupt government, much less anywhere in the legal profession.

17 5.11 Other Clues and Hints At the Correct Application of the IRC

18 There are numerous other bits of information that hint at the correct application of the law, a few of which are included here
19 as supporting evidence.

20 5.11.1 On the Record

21 As the Supreme Court and the Secretary of the Treasury have repeatedly stated, the federal income tax is (and has always 22 been) an indirect excise tax. Excises, generally speaking, are taxes imposed on certain activities or privileges. In light of 23 this, there are some interesting comments in the Congressional Record from March 27, 1943, p. 2580. A statement is included
24 by a "Mr. F. Morse Hubbard, formerly of the legislative drafting research fund of Columbia University, and a former 25 legislative draftsman in the Treasury Department" (clearly someone whose job would require a comprehensive 26 understanding of the proper application of the law). His comments include the following:

27 "The income tax is, therefore, not a tax on income as such. It is an excise tax with respect to certain activities
28 and privileges which is measured by reference to the income which they produce. The income is not the subject
29 of the tax: it is the basis for determining the amount of the tax."

30 The income tax is imposed on "income from whatever source derived" (minus deductions). The mere receipt of income, by 31 itself, is not (and could not be) the subject of this excise tax. It is the "source" which is the subject of the tax, and the amount
32 of income received from that "source" is what is used to determine the amount of tax due. All "sources" are taxable activities
33 and as we explained earlier in section 5.6.11 earlier, there are only two taxable activities under Internal Revenue Code,
34 Subtitle A: 1. Foreign commerce; 2. Public office in the United States Government. The above citations coincide well with 35 the fact that the section of regulations for determining taxable income (26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) states that it applies only to 36 income "from specific sources and activities." And the statutes and regulations under the part which "determine[s] the 37 sources of income for purposes of the income tax" all apply only to these same "specific sources and activities," which are 38 all related to international or foreign commerce.

39 5.11.2 Section 306

40 Section 306 of the statutes deals with individuals receiving income from selling certain stocks. After dealing with the income
41 itself, the section discusses the "source" of income.

42 "Sec. 306. Dispositions of certain stock
43 (a) General rule
44 If a shareholder sells or otherwise disposes of section 306 stock...
45 (1) Dispositions other than redemptions -
46 If such disposition is not a redemption...

(A) The amount realized shall be treated as ordinary income ...
 (f) Source of gain - The amount treated under subsection (a)(1)(A) as ordinary income shall, for purposes of part I of subchapter N (sec. 861 and following, relating to determination of sources of income), be treated as derived from the same source as would have been the source if money had been received from the corporation as a dividend at the time of the distribution of such stock. If under the preceding sentence such amount is determined to be derived from sources within the United States, such amount shall be considered to be fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income within the meaning of section 871(a) or section 881(a), as the case may be."
 [26 U.S.C. §306(f)]

The section states that if the income comes from "sources within the United States," then it constitutes "gains, profits, and income" under Section 871(a) or 881(a). Sections 871 and 881 deal exclusively with nonresident aliens and foreign corporations, respectively (both are found in Part II of Subchapter N, "Nonresident aliens and foreign corporations"). The wording of Section 306 implies that if the income in question comes from "sources within the United States**," then it must apply to one of these sections. If a statutory "U.S. citizen" domiciled in the United States** (the federal zone) receives the type of income dealt with in Section 306, and believes it constitutes "income from sources within the United States," halfway through the last sentence the reader is left in limbo. The sentence structure is "if A, then B." Using the usual overly-broad interpretation of the Code, if a citizen receives income from the type of stock mentioned from "sources within the United States," then that income "shall be considered to be" taxable for nonresident aliens or foreign corporations. A contradiction exists, unless one realizes that the term "sources of income" has a restricted meaning, which in this case would apply only to foreigners.

5.11.3 Strange Links

In various sections of the statutes, Section 911 is referenced where it does not seem to fit in (if one accepts the common, overly-broad interpretation of the Code). One example exists in Section 1 itself (the section imposing the income tax on individuals). Subsection (g) of Section 1 deals with certain income of children being treated as income of that child's parents, and shows that the term "earned income" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(2).

"(g) Certain unearned income of minor children taxed as if parent's income ...
 (4) Net unearned income
 For purposes of this subsection--
 (A) In general
 The term "net unearned income" means the excess of--
 (i) the portion of the adjusted gross income for the taxable year which is not attributable to earned income (as defined in section 911(d)(2))..."
 [26 U.S.C. §1(g)]

This section (26 U.S.C. §1(g)) is referred to later in Section 59(j), and Section 911(d)(2) is again mentioned as the section which defines "earned income." Other sections, such as 26 U.S.C. § 66(d) and 26 U.S.C. § 469(e), also refer to Section 911(d)(2) for the definition of "earned income." There is nothing peculiar about the definition in 26 U.S.C. §911(d)(2) itself, which states:

"(d) Definitions and special rules
 For purposes of this section--
 (2) Earned income
 (A) In general
 The term "earned income" means wages, salaries, or professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered, but does not include..."
 [26 U.S.C. §911(d)]

What is interesting is the location of the definition:

Subchapter N -- Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States
 Part III -- Income from sources without the United States
 Subpart B -- Earned income of citizens or residents of United States
Sec. 911. Citizens or residents of the United States living abroad

While it is true that the location of such a definition does not legally change the meaning of the definition, it is still somewhat telling that the definition is found in Subchapter N, rather than in Subchapters A and B (which impose the tax, and define "gross income" and "taxable income"). It is also telling that the definition itself (even though the definition is also "borrowed" by other sections) says that the definition is "for purposes of this section," meaning Section 911, which deals exclusively with the "foreign earned income" of United States citizens.

1 Another strange connection occurs in the section regarding “community income,” which comes shortly after Section 63
2 defining “taxable income.”

3 “Sec. 66. Treatment of community income

4 (a) Treatment of community income where spouses live apart

5 If- (1) 2 individuals are married to each other...;

6 (2) such individuals-- (A) live apart... (B) do not file a joint return...;

7 (3) one or both of such individuals have earned income for the calendar year which is community income;

8 and

9 (4) no portion of such earned income is transferred (directly or indirectly) between such individuals before 10 the close of the calendar year,

11 then, for purposes of this title, any community income of such individuals for the calendar year shall be 12 treated in accordance with the rules provided by section 879(a).”

13 [26 U.S.C. §66]

14 Note that this is giving the rules applicable to all of Title 26 regarding “community income.” But the section it refers to for 15 such rules reads:

16 “Sec. 879. Tax treatment of certain community income in the case of nonresident alien individuals

17 (a) General rule - In the case of a married couple 1 or both of whom are nonresident alien individuals and 18 who have community income for the taxable year, such community income shall be treated as follows:...”

19 [26 U.S.C. §879(a)]

20 The text here specifically states that it applies only where one or both are nonresident aliens. To use the same rules for two 21 citizens of the United States, Section 66 would have to say something similar to “shall be treated in accordance with the rules
22 provided by 879(a) regarding nonresident aliens, notwithstanding the fact that the individuals may be citizens or residents of 23 the United States.” But it says no such thing, implying that “community income” applies only if at least one partner is a 24 nonresident alien.

25 5.11.4 Following Instructions

26 Form 1040 is divided into several categories, such as personal information, “Filing Status,” “Exemptions,” “Income,” etc. In 27 the instruction booklet for that form, there is a section that gives line-by-line instructions. The general category of “Income”
28 begins:

29 “Foreign-Source Income

30 You must report unearned income, such as interest, dividends, and pensions, from sources outside the United 31 States unless exempt by law or a tax treaty. You must also report earned income, such as wages and tips, from 32 sources outside the United States.

34 If you worked abroad, you may be able to exclude part or all of your earned income. For details, see Pub. 54,
35 Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad, and Form 2555, Foreign Earned Income, or Form
36 2555-EZ, Foreign Earned Income Exclusion.

37
38 Community Property States... *

39 Rounding Off to Whole Dollars...”

40 [1996 Instruction Booklet for Form 1040]

41
42
43 (* - This concerns “community income,” which is dealt with above. This would apply only to a United States citizen married 44 to a nonresident alien.)

45 That is all it has to say about the general subject of income. The booklet then tells where the listed “items” (interest, dividends, 46 wages, etc.) should be entered on Form 1040. While there is a statement specifically saying that “you must report” these 47 items if from sources outside the United States** (the federal zone), there is no statement that these items must be reported
48 if they come from within the United States** (the federal zone).

49 This admission in the booklet is very easy for most readers to simply disregard as irrelevant to them. If there was the need
50 to say that foreign-source income must be reported, why was there no need to say that any other income must be reported?
51 Why did the statement not say that foreign source income “as well as domestic income” must be reported? One is left free
52 to make the incorrect assumption that all income must be reported, when this is not the case.

1 A similar situation exists with IRS Publication 525, "Taxable and Nontaxable Income." The first thing this publication says
2 concerning taxes, which appears on the cover, is:

3 "Important Reminder

4 Foreign Source Income

5 If you are a U.S. citizen, you must report income from sources outside the United States (foreign income) on 6 your tax return unless it is exempt by U.S. law."

7 Then, in the introduction (which follows the above "reminder"), the publication states that the publication "discusses many
8 kinds of income and explains whether they are taxable or nontaxable." Other than the "foreign source income" reminder,
9 the publication deals only with "items" of income, not "sources." Again, one is left free to assume that income from within 10 the United States** (the federal zone) is taxable to U.S. citizens, but it is not stated.

11 5.11.5 Treasury Decision 2313

12 The Supreme Court's decision in the Brushaber case in 1916 (240 U.S. 1) is often cited by the IRS as demonstrating that the 13 income tax is Constitutional (which it is, because of its very limited legal application). What the IRS fails to mention, and
14 what is not apparent from looking at the court's ruling in the case, is that the case concerned income from within the United
15 States** (the federal zone) accruing to a "nonresident alien", which is subject to the income tax. Treasury Decision 2313
16 makes this apparent.

17 "Under the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific
18 Railway Co., decided January 24, 1916, it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form
19 of interest from the bonds and dividends on the stock of domestic corporations is subject to the income tax
20 imposed by the act of October 3, 1913."

21 [Treasury Decision 2313]

22 Note how in this case an "item" of income (interest) is subject to the income tax when paid to nonresident aliens, because 23 that is one of the legal "sources" of taxable income. The decision also states a proper use of Form 1040.

24 "The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens, who are in charge of the property
25 owned or business carried on within the United States, shall make a full and complete return of the income
26 therefrom on Form 1040, revised, and shall pay any and all tax, normal and additional, assessed upon the 27 income received by them in behalf of their nonresident alien principals."

28 [Treasury Decision 2313]

29 While this in itself does not prove that Form 1040 should not be used in any other situation, something telling appears later
30 in the decision. Speaking of the responsibility of fiduciaries of domestic entities, it states:

31 "[W]hen there are two or more beneficiaries, one or all of whom are nonresident aliens, the fiduciary shall 32 render a return on Form 1041, revised, and a personal return on Form 1040, revised, for each nonresident
33 alien beneficiary."

34 This both implies that a Form 1041 is not required if there are no nonresident alien beneficiaries (only citizens and residents),
35 as well as implying that a Form 1040 is not to be issued for the citizen and resident beneficiaries.

36 5.11.6 Other Clues

37 As mentioned above, the only form ever approved for use with section 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 of the regulations (under the 38 Paperwork Reduction Act) was Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income." In addition, the only form approved by the Office of 39 Management and Budget for 26 C.F.R. §1.861-2 and -3 (which deal with interest and dividends from within the United States)
40 is Form 1040NR, "U.S. Nonresident Alien Income Tax Return." Similarly, the only form approved under 26 C.F.R. §1.861-
41 8 itself is Form 1120-F, "U.S. Income Tax Return of a Foreign Corporation."

42 Below each section of regulations in the C.F.R. there is a citation of the legal authority under which the regulations are made.
43 The statutory authority for 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 is listed as 26 U.S.C. §7805 (which is the general rule-making authority for 44 the Secretary, as shown in the first citation of this report), as well as 26 U.S.C. §882(c), which reads:

45 "Tax on income of foreign corporations connected with United States business...

46 (c) Allowance of deductions and credits

47 (1) Allocation of deductions

1 (A) General rule... the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions for this purpose shall be
2 determined as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary."
3 [26 U.S.C. §882(c)]

4 This matches the fact that only the income tax return for a foreign corporation has been approved for use with this section of
5 regulations by the OMB. The newer, temporary regulations in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T cite no statutory authority, but instead
6 cite Treasury Decision 8228, which states that the authors of the regulation both work in the "Office of the Associated Chief
7 Counsel (International)."
The scope of the regulations is identified in the first paragraph of Treasury Decision 8228:

8 "Summary: This document provides temporary Income Tax Regulations relating to the allocation and 9 apportionment of interest expense and certain other expenses for purposes of the foreign tax credit rules and 10 certain other international tax provisions."
11 [Treasury Decision 8228]

12 So the authorities cited as the legal basis for the regulations for "determining taxable income from sources within the United 13 States" (temporary and final) show that the regulations are about international commerce.

14 Another legal resource which demonstrates the true applicability of the "income tax" is the annotated index of the United
15 States Code. While there are different versions which vary somewhat in exact wording, under "Income tax, citizens," only 16 things such as citizens "living abroad" or "about to depart from U.S." are listed.

17 Both the indexes and the contents of "Internal Revenue Bulletins" (which contain rulings and decisions by the IRS regarding 18 interpretation of the law) reinforce the conclusions of this report. For example, the 1957-1960 cumulative bulletin has nine
19 listings under "Citizens," every one of which deals with citizens being outside of the United States** (the federal zone). This 20 same bulletin, under "Income - Source," has 35 listings, all of which deal with specific issues related to international
21 commerce, with one exception; and that exception again reinforces the significance of Part I of Subchapter N, and the related 22 regulations:

23 "Within and without United States; determination. - Rules are prescribed for determination of gross income
24 and taxable income derived from sources within and without the United States... §§ 1.861-1 through 1.864.
25 (Secs. 861-864; '54 Code) T.D. 6258, C. B. 1957-2, 368."

26 The bulletins show similar patterns year after year, from 1913 (when the basis of the current federal income tax was written)
27 to the present.

28 Another resource which indicates the true nature of the "income tax" is the Internal Revenue Manual, which is the instruction
29 manual for all divisions of the Internal Revenue Service. The Criminal Investigation Division of the IRS is the division which 30 deals with criminal violations of the federal "income tax" laws, including tax evasion and failure to file a return. Section
31 1132.55 of the Internal Revenue Manual (entitled "Criminal Investigation Division") begins as follows:

32 "The Criminal Investigation Division enforces the criminal statutes applicable to income, estate, gift,
33 employment, and excise tax laws... involving United States citizens residing in foreign countries and 34 nonresident aliens subject to Federal income tax filing requirements..."
35 [Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1132.55 (1991 Ed.)]

36 Similarly, the federal regulations found in 26 C.F.R. §601.101(a) describe in general the functions of the Internal Revenue
37 Service. The only specific mention in these regulations of who or what is subject to taxes administered by the Internal 38 Revenue Service reads as follows:

39 "The Director, Foreign Operations District, administers the internal revenue laws applicable to taxpayers
40 residing or doing business abroad, foreign taxpayers deriving income from sources within the United States, and 41 taxpayers who are required to withhold tax on certain payments to nonresident aliens and foreign 42 corporations..."
43 [26 C.F.R. §601.101(a)]

44 In keeping with the deceptive structure used throughout the statutes and regulations, the reader is left to assume that some 45 other matters are also under IRS jurisdiction, but nothing else is specifically mentioned.

46 5.11.7 5 U.S.C., Section 8422: Deductions of OASDI for Federal Employees

Personnel who are employed by the Federal Government and who fall under the Federal Employee Retirement System fall under 5 U.S.C. Section 8422. This law sets forth the requirement to withhold OASDI for such employees. Here is the text of the law (which you can view for yourself at http://uscode.house.gov/title\_05.htm). Please note the section which has a box around it, which was highlighted for emphasis:

(a) (2) The percentage to be deducted and withheld from basic pay for any pay period shall be equal to -

(A) the applicable percentage under paragraph (3), minus

(B) the percentage then in effect under section 3101(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to rate of tax for old-age, survivors, and disability insurance).

(3) The applicable percentage under this paragraph for civilian service shall be as follows:

(b) Each employee or Member is deemed to consent and agree to the deductions under subsection (a). Notwithstanding any law or

1 regulation affecting the pay of an employee or Member, payment less
 2 such deductions is a full and complete discharge and acquittance of 3 all claims and demands for regular services during the period
 4 covered by the payment, except the right to any benefits under this 5 subchapter, or under subchapter IV or V of this chapter, based on 6 the service of the employee or Member.

7 Now isn't that interesting? The tyrants in Washington, D.C. who you elected to office just decided to in effect make 8 contributions to Social Security "a precondition of employment" for federal "employees". They in effect have told federal
 9 employees:

10 We know that if you were out in private industry, you wouldn't need to pay Social Security, so if you want to come
 11 to work for us, then you'll have to agree to allow us to take it out of your paycheck. And by the way, when we do,
 12 don't count on being able to take us to court for reducing your take home pay and depriving you of your property
 13 without due process, because by coming to work for us, you become indentured servants who agree implicitly
 14 that they are not being taken advantage of unfairly.

15 I'll bet the vast majority of federal employees don't even know that they are involuntarily consenting in this way to subsidize
 16 a bankrupt system such as Social Security by hiring on with the Federal Government. If contributing to social security were 17 mandatory, do you think they would need a statute like this? Absolutely NOT!

18 All is not lost, however, because the "employee" they are talking about is that defined in 5 U.S.C. §2105, and does not include
 19 ordinary workers, but only public officers.

20 5.12 How Can I Know When I've Discovered the Truth About Income Taxes?

21 "Income tax has made more liars out of the American people than golf."
 22 [Will Rogers]

23 One of the important questions people ask us about the contents of this book goes something like this:

24 QUESTION: Since there is a big government and legal profession cover-up and I therefore can't get the
 25 government or the IRS to even discuss with me or admit the truths that I've discovered about income taxes by 26 virtue of reading this book, then how can I know that my conclusions are correct? The same argument applies to 27 finding a legal coach, because most lawyers enjoy keeping their clients as ignorant as possible since that is how 28 they can extort the most legal fees.

29 Good question! This is one of the first questions we asked ourselves when we started writing this book because we wanted
 30 to make sure everything in it was correct and obtain evidence supporting every aspect of our position right from the 31 government's own mouth. In addition to answering the above question, we also wanted to answer the following even more
 32 important questions in the writing of this book, and we believe we have succeeded in answering all the questions posed in 33 this section in this book. The reason for these additional questions is that if we can't answer them, then we don't have the 34 basis for a sound "reliance defense" that we can use in court, should we ever be indicted for a tax crime and want to show the 35 jury that there is no way we could have a "willful" intent to evade a known legal duty:

- 36 1. How can we establish a sound basis for understanding our tax liabilities if all the sources available from the government
 37 are not trustworthy? What exactly IS a trustworthy source? None of the following are trustworthy sources for a good-
 38 faith belief for a person who doesn't reside in the federal zone and isn't a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401,
 39 so what exactly are the trustworthy sources of good faith belief?:
  - 40 1.1. The IRS and the federal courts say you can't rely on any of its forms and publications as a basis for belief about 41 liability. See section 3.19 earlier for details on this scam.
  - 42 1.2. The Internal Revenue Code is not positive law, according to the legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204, so you can't 43 rely on it. It is "prima facie evidence" of law, but that simply means it is "presumptive evidence". Anything
 44 involving presumption is a violation of due process and it is a sin for Christians to presume anything. Therefore,
 45 the I.R.C. is not a sound basis for belief. See section 5.4.2.4 and following earlier for details on this scam.
  - 46 1.3. All of the legal and accounting professionals who handle tax issues are government-licensed and therefore have a 47 conflict of interest, so you can't trust them. See section 1.11.5 earlier for details on this scam.
  - 48 1.4. Federal judges who either receive benefits from the income tax, or who pay income taxes and are subject to IRS
 49 extortion cannot be objective in ruling on income tax issues. Our original constitutional model called for them to
 50 be paid from taxes on imports by people over which they have no jurisdiction to ensure no conflict of interest.

Since the advent of unconstitutional federal taxation within the states of the Union by the IRS starting in 1942, the system has been totally corrupt. Therefore, all federal judges who participate in Subtitle A income taxation are biased and have a conflict of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208. See 28 U.S.C. §960 and the following link for details on this scam:

- 1.5. Juries who try the issue in a federal court are not authorized by law to do so in most cases, because they don't live on federal property and are not statutory "citizens of the United States" (under 8 U.S.C. §1401) as required by 28 U.S.C. §1865. Therefore their findings are a violation of due process and not admissible as evidence of liability.
- 1.6. The rulings of federal district and circuit courts are irrelevant to people who are "nationals" and "non-resident non-persons" and who do not have a domicile or presence on federal property or within exclusive federal jurisdiction. Only the Supreme Court can rule on Constitutional issues anyway, and there aren't any Supreme Court rulings that contradict the content of this book. Why then should American nationals who are not connected to federal jurisdiction be expected to rely on irrelevant sources of law such as district and circuit courts?
2. How can we explain the irrational and inconsistent behavior of the federal judiciary towards the income tax issue? The constitutionality of the income tax has been continually debated in the federal district and circuit courts since the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913. These courts have had over 90 years to reach a sound and consistent policy and approach and yet there is still wide variations between the circuit courts on the constitutionality and authority of the federal income tax? The Fourteenth Amendment guarantees us equal protection of the laws, and yet the protection is NOT equal between circuit courts. Why is this? See section 3.20.1 earlier for detailed coverage of this area of "cognitive dissonance" in relation to income taxation.
3. Who are the specific key individuals chiefly responsible throughout history for erecting and maintaining this fraud and usury by our government called income tax? We answer that question in detail in the next chapter and put everything into historical context so you can see exactly how the "scheme" was created and who was responsible for it.
4. How has the legislative intent of the founding fathers been violated in erecting the fraudulent system of taxation we have now? What elements of the legislative intent have been violated? We answer that question in the next chapter, in section 6.1.
5. What efforts has the federal judiciary and the legal profession taken to conceal or hide the truth about these issues? What is the detailed history on this subject? We answer this question in the next chapter. We believe that the most reliable source of truth is to observe the things that people hide or avoid, and this tendency is confirmed by John 3:18-21 in the Bible.

To get to the answer to your question and the above additional equally important questions, you must take into consideration the following factors:

1. The IRS doesn't want you to know the truth. They won't respond to or acknowledge any of your good arguments. Usually, they will instead pick the weakest argument that won't stand up in court and assess you with a $500 frivolous return penalty for it using a meaningless form letter that doesn't teach you anything about the truth.
2. The legal profession doesn't want you to know the truth. That ought to be very clear from reading this chapter and section 6.13 of this book. The legal profession also has a monopoly of influence over all three branches of the federal government, because most of the people at the top are or have been lawyers, so they have a vested interest to preserve and enhance their power by keeping the general populace ignorant.
3. The courts don't want you to know the truth about income taxes. If they let the truth out, it would destroy the income tax system and eliminate the main source of pay for most federal judges, which amounts to a conflict of interest. Most federal judges probably also think you would destabilize our country economically if they entertained your valid arguments and the truth about income taxes. We know this isn't necessarily the case by reading section 1.10.9, but that is what they think. You can use the data in that section to convince them otherwise. Section 6.12 also clearly documents a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax and how it is being implemented. Nevertheless, there are therefore strong incentives for judges to nix any and all arguments and to do everything they can to keep you from getting your evidence admitted and in keeping the jury, if there is one, from hearing the truth.
4. Your Congressman doesn't want you to know the truth. If he let the public hear the truth, he would probably:
  - 4.1. Reduce his benefits and fat retirement because of funding shortfalls in the government.
  - 4.2. Destroy his chances of being elected President.
  - 4.3. See a reduction of his power and influence by virtue of controlling half of your income to be spend on his favorite pet project.

If you look through the list above, the one that stands out and which provides the clearest evidence of conspiracy and actually allows you to research the cover-up and expose it is item 3 above: the federal courts. The courts are required to keep

1 everything on the record, so when there is a cover-up, it's easier to spot and document. The key elements of the arguments
2 we raise in this book have to do with the following issues:

- 3 1. No liability statutes in section 5.4.15.
- 4 2. The 861 source position in section 5.6.10.
- 5 3. The Non-Resident Non-Person Position in section 5.6.13, which hinges mainly on the definition of "State" and "United 6 States".
- 7 4. Deceiving definitions found in section 3.12.1.

8 What we are trying to expose is a large-scale federal court cover-up of approaches that are successful in litigating against the
9 income tax in court, so what we are looking for is the absence of discussion about the above subjects in the court records,
10 and the avoidance of publication of cases that deal with them. When we say "court" here, we don't mean "U.S. Tax Court",
11 because U.S. Tax Court is a Kangaroo court that isn't even a court, which is why we recommend staying away from it!
12 Instead, we mean Article III federal courts at the District and Circuit level, as well as the Supreme Courts. We are also 13 looking for information from persons who have litigated any of these issues where judges have deliberately chosen to not
14 publish their case and have sealed the court record (a violation of the First Amendment, we might add!). For such cases, we 15 then want to go to the particular court where it was tried and request the findings of the court directly, because they would
16 not be published in any electronic case databases we could search.

17 The above tactics describe exactly what we have done and the most convincing evidence we have of the truthfulness of the 18 conclusions in this book is the conspicuous absence in any of the federal case databases of cases dealing with any of the four
19 issues above. We searched over 200 years of case databases for the Supreme Court, Circuit courts, and District courts and 20 found nothing that talks about any of these issues. Certainly, none of the issues we raise in this book are novel or new, and
21 as a person who isn't a lawyer and who wrote this book, we would expect that there would have been at least one lawyer out
22 there smarter than us who had used our arguments, but we found no record of any. The reason is because federal judges
23 won't allow anything about those issues, which are guaranteed to be successful, to end up in any court record, for obvious
24 reasons related to their continued employment and pay and in what appears to be a clear conflict of interest in violation of 28
25 U.S.C. 455. Section 6.12.7 (an ominous number!) talks about a positive act by a specific federal judge of covering up several 26 cases litigated by William Conklin on issues of the Fifth Amendment relative to the income tax. The case of Lloyd Long
27 found in section 9.2.6 is another example where a person was successful in defeating the income tax in court and which 28 therefore went unpublished by the court. That is why we posted the court's findings for this case on our website at:

29 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CaseStudies/LloydLong/long1.htm>

30 The case of Loren C. Troescher is another example of someone who was successful against the income tax in federal court
31 and whose judgment went unpublished. We have the judgment posted at:

32 <http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/CaseStudies/LTroescher/LorenTroescher.htm>

33 We are sure there are other concrete examples of federal court cover-ups like Lloyd Long, William Conklin, and Loren C.
34 Troescher. We therefore welcome your anecdotes, and especially those with specific information about cases you litigated
35 that were unpublished. We would like to get the transcripts from a few such cases to post on our website, so please send us
36 information about your cases, including hearing date(s), case numbers, and the court they were litigated in.

37 One more thing you will discover as you use the knowledge you have learned in this book against the IRS and your state
38 taxing authorities is that as your skills improve and your arguments become clearer and better, the amount of time required
39 for them to respond to your correspondence and income tax filings will go up dramatically. Our first tax refund filing was 40 rejected in less than a couple months when we were still learning and had some flawed ideas. After we fixed all of the 41 misconceptions in our logic, expanded this book considerably, and re-filed during a down season when few people were 42 filing, we have been waiting over six months for a response from the California Franchise Tax Board. Sticking to the main
43 arguments listed above and avoiding spurious arguments or weaker arguments clearly makes it very difficult for the IRS and 44 state taxing authorities to respond to refund requests and zero income tax return filings (no income). Why? Remember that
45 whenever you file a tax refund request or a zero tax return, the IRS and the state taxing authorities like to respond by citing
46 the corrupt federal courts as their justification or precedent, which by the way are irrelevant if you don't reside in the federal
47 zone. They will seldom respond by quoting taxing statutes or regulations to justify their position, because then you can hold
48 them accountable for incorrectly applying the law and they can no longer claim "plausible deniability" as a defense. If you

1 use successful arguments in your tax return filing that the courts have tried to cover up and won't publish, then you leave the
 2 IRS and your state taxing authorities with nothing to cite except the law in their response, and the law clearly shows that no
 3 one is liable! They are speechless and have no way to respond! For such a case, they will assign your return to some junior
 4 lawyer or clerk, who then gets stuck with "high maintenance" returns that no one wants to deal with, and these people are
 5 even less equipped to respond, so it takes forever.

6 The failure of the IRS or your state taxing authorities to respond to you is what we call a "Fifth Amendment" response. The 7 Fifth Amendment, by the way, does not apply collectively to organizations like the IRS and only applies to natural persons
 8 (people). Therefore, they can't legally use it while representing the IRS, so they instead will just refuse to respond so they
 9 can keep you in fear and guessing. Likewise, if you call them on the carpet about assessing penalties against you and they
 10 recognize their error and eliminate the penalties or the invalid assessment, then they aren't likely to call you or send a letter
 11 letting you know they did this because they would then have to admit they were wrong and who they were, and that would
 12 subject them to personal liability. Therefore, if they drop penalties or assessments because you prove them wrong, don't 13 expect any confirmation. If you want to find out who dropped the penalty or assessment and why they did it, you will most
 14 often have to call them back and demand information about who did it and why they did it. Or you will have to do a Freedom
 15 of Information Act request to get the documents showing what they did, and in some cases, they will redact the identity of 16 the specific agent by blacking out the employee number so he isn't culpable. These people are criminals and weasels and 17 they know it! It is very rare that you will get anything in writing about their mistakes, because then you could use it as 18 evidence to sue them! They will therefore wait for you to call back and ask, and you ought to get it on tape for use as evidence
 19 in court. Under such circumstances, get the name and number of the incompetent employee and sue him for malfeasance
 20 using the information he provides about himself.

21 The principles revealed in this section are the Achilles Heel of the government's fraudulent and corrupt tax system and the 22 secret to DESTROYING it. If you stick to good, sound arguments, stay on point, insist on your due process rights, and submit
 23 correspondence and returns that are MASSIVE, flawless, and so difficult and time consuming to deal with that they can't 24 automate it and must hand it to an expensive IRS attorney to deal with, then the whole corrupt system will come crashing and
 25 burning down just like the statue of Lenin and the Berlin Wall did when communism fell in the Soviet Union! Make no
 26 mistake about it: communism and socialism are the SAME evil monsters we are fighting in this country in the case of the 27 income tax, but our fight is a little bit different and mostly on an economic, political, and legal scale rather than by military 28 means. Here is what the U.S. supreme Court said about the communism we are fighting, and these words are very profound:

29 "... the maxim that the King can do no wrong has no place in our system of government; yet it is also true, in 30 respect to the State itself, that whatever wrong is attempted in its name is imputable to its government and not
 31 to the State, for, as it can speak and act only by law, whatever it does say and do must be lawful. That which 32 therefore is unlawful because made so by the supreme law, the Constitution of the United States, is not the 33 word or deed of the State, but is the mere wrong and trespass of those individual persons who falsely spread 34 and act in its name."

35 "This distinction is essential to the idea of constitutional government. To deny it or blot it out obliterates the line
 36 of demarcation that separates constitutional government from absolutism, free self- government based on the 37 sovereignty of the people from that despotism, whether of the one or the many, which enables the agent of the 38 state to declare and decree that he is the state; to say 'L'Etat, c'est moi.' Of what avail are written constitutions, 39 whose bills of right, for the security of individual liberty, have been written too often with the blood of martyrs
 40 shed upon the battle-field and the scaffold, if their limitations and restraints upon power may be overpassed
 41 with impunity by the very agencies created and appointed to guard, defend, and enforce them; and that, too,
 42 with the sacred authority of law, not only compelling obedience, but entitled to respect? And how else can these
 43 principles of individual liberty and right be maintained, if, when violated, the judicial tribunals are forbidden
 44 to visit penalties upon individual offenders, who are the instruments of wrong, whenever they interpose the 45 shield of the state? The doctrine is not to be tolerated. The whole frame*
 46 and scheme of the political institutions of this country, state
 47 and federal, protest against it. Their continued existence is not
 48 compatible with it. It is the doctrine of absolutism, pure, simple,
 49 and naked, and of communism which is its twin, the double
 50 progeny of the same evil birth."

5.13 How the Government exploits our weaknesses to ILLEGALLY manufacture fraudulent "taxpayers"

1 The federal government uses a very methodical and sophisticated process to convert sovereign American Nationals into
2 "taxpayers" who are subject to their laws and to illegal IRS extortion. Before you could understand all the nuances of this
3 approach, you had to read nearly this entire chapter, which is why we waited until the end of this chapter to explain it. The 4 process exploits the many human weaknesses and sins we talked about earlier in section 2.8 in order to expand the operation
5 of the income tax to every person in society, including: Deception, presumption, fear, and ignorance.

6 "Objections to its [the income tax] renewal are long, loud, and general throughout the country. Those who pay
7 are the exception, those who do not pay are millions; the whole moral force of the law is a dead letter. The honest
8 man makes a true return; the dishonest hides and covers all he can to avoid this obnoxious tax. It has no moral
9 force. This tax is unequal, perjury-provoking and crime encouraging, because it is a war with the right of a
10 person to keep private and regulate his business affairs and financial matters. Deception, fraud, and falsehood
11 mark its progress everywhere in the process of collection. It creates curiosity, jealousy, and prejudice among the 12 people. It makes the tax-gatherer a spy...The people demand that it shall not be renewed, but left to die a natural 13 death and pass away into the future as pass away all the evils growing out of the Civil War."
14 [Congressional Globe, 41st Congress, 2d Session, 3993 (1870)

15 In order to retain and protect your sovereignty as a "nontaxpayer" and a "non-resident non-person" or "state national" , you
16 must understand exactly how their "matrix" functions so they won't be able to connect you up to it and so that you can
17 disconnect yourself from it completely if you are already connected. Hence, this section. We have taken the time to break
18 the "Government Matrix" into a detailed sequence of process steps that are employed against the average American so you
19 can see how you progress from a free person to a government serf with no rights or privacy. At each step, we show you:

- 20 1. The event that denigrates or undermines your sovereign status as a "nontaxpayer" and a "non-resident non-person"
- 21 2. How your legal status, or at least your "presumed" status, changes at the conclusion of each significant event.
- 22 3. How the government uses the event to perform the abuse.
- 23 4. The legal authorities and references elsewhere in this book where you can learn more about the technique described in 24 the step.
- 25 5. A few things you can do to fight their tactics at each stage.

26 These process steps are summarized below for your benefit. The table shows all the steps for a typical American who is born
27 in a state of the Union, from the time he his born until the time that he reaches full adulthood.

Table 5-80: How the federal government manufactures "taxpayers" from Americans born in states of the Union

They refuse to answer any questions about the law itself or teach the students about the Constitutional limitations on the taxing power of the government. Likewise, the history teacher never taught the students about the Constitution limits on the government, and since the teacher and the school endorsed the visitors, the class full of teenagers believes them. Anyone else from the outside who insists on being present when the IRS and ABA are there to balance the story is told they aren't welcome, because the government that runs the school wants to "own" and control the sheep. The guests will base their visit on the deceptive IRS publications but will say nothing about the actual law. | See section 1.11.3, where we show an actual announcement by the IRS Tax Practitioner Newsletter showing their school mentorship program.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Remind your child that if a teacher or school attempts this, then you want to know about it. Call your school and find out if they have such a program. Then demand equal time and tell the students the "rest of the story" BEFORE the IRS agent and lawyer show up. They will be booted out. He will do everything to transfer all the risks associated with noncompliance to the child by forcing him/her to provide an SSN and fill out an IRS Form W-4 so that he can begin withholding. | 6 | The child receives his first W-2 from his private employer         | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. IRS assumes they elected or volunteered to become federal serfs and treats SSN as a TIN, even though TINs can only be issued to "aliens" under 26 C.F.R. §301.6109-1(d)(3).</li> <li>2. Child is now a "taxpayer" because he provided an SSN that IRS will illegally treat as a "TIN" in their system.</li> </ol> | The IRS now has the kid's name in their computer connected with a number. 26 USC 6109 says the only type of number that is mandatory is a TIN, and an SSN is not a TIN. The IRS will try to match the SSN with an existing TIN in their system. When they find no match, they "assume" that the child volunteered to allow the IRS to treat the SSN on the W-2 form as a TIN. They won't tell the child that they made this presumption, but they have to make the presumption in order to collect anything from him or justify keeping the withheld funds. Otherwise, they are in receipt of monies wrongfully paid and must return them.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | W-2 Form reports "wages". The only people who earn "wages" under 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(a)-3 are "public officers" of the federal government engaged in a "trade or business" under 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) and 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1)(iv) who have volunteered to participate in the tax system. Participation is not mandatory.                                                            | The child can send to the IRS a form 4852 which zeros out all reported wages and therefore nullifies the false W-2. Make sure to include an attached letter indicating that the SSN/TIN reported by your employer was provided under duress, is wrong, and that the person responsible for the fact that it is wrong is the person instituting the duress, which is the payroll clerk at the private employer.                                                                          |

If child/person already owes taxes or any kind of child support, the federal government will not issue him a passport or let him leave the country until he/she "pays up".</li> </ol> | The child fills out a DS-11 Passport form to get a passport. The form asks for a Social Security Number and warns that failure to disclose one can result in a $500 penalty by the IRS. This is a bogus warning, as we point out, because it has no implementing regulations, violates the Constitution because it is a Bill of Attainder. The form also creates a false presumption that the child is a statutory "U.S. citizen" under 8 U.S.C. §1401, because the only option it gives is that of statutory "U.S. citizen" for both you or your parents. If you fill out the form the way the government wants, you get an SSN and declare yourself under federal jurisdiction by being a statutory "U.S. citizen". Some states will even try to interfere with your free speech on their forms by preventing you from attaching anything to the voter application form, defining any of the words on the form, or clarifying the citizenship you are describing on the form, in a clear attempt to try to restrain you from leaving the "federal slave plantation", as we call it. When this happens you have a tort and you can sue the Registrar of Voters for violation of your First Amendment rights. |

5.14 Federal Income Taxes Within Territories and Possessions of the United States

This section summarizes liability for federal taxes within possessions and territories of the United States. The territories and possessions of the United States are enumerated in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Throughout this book, we have said that these territories and possessions, the District of Columbia, and enclaves within states of the Union collectively comprise the entire “United States” that is the proper subject of Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. Each of these areas, however, has its own unique constraints that are prescribed by the Internal Revenue Code.

We will now enumerate the major territories and possessions and summarize the constraints applicable to each. We’ll also provide the applicable statutes and regulations that describe the requirements for each. The table below contains a list of the territories and possessions of the United States and the liability for payroll and income taxes within those areas:

The interesting thing about the statutes and regulations listed above is the use of the term “citizen of the United States”. That “citizen of the United States” is an 8 U.S.C. §1401 citizen born in a territory of the United States. If he/she was not born in a territory or was born in a possession, then he/she is a “national of the United States**” under 8 U.S.C. §1408 and 8 U.S.C. §1452. Several federal publications we have read, which are mentioned in section 4.11.7.5 identify the only “nationals of the United States” under federal law as those persons born in American Samoa and Swains Island. The other type of “national of the United States”, the one born in a state of the Union, is not specifically mentioned but also included in that category by implication.

To summarize the above table, the only territory or possession that is subject to income tax under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is the Virgin Islands. 48 U.S.C. §1397 says that all revenues collected from income taxes within the Virgin Islands shall be given to the government of the Virgin Islands instead of the United States government. All the other territories and possessions don't have to participate in the tax system or get involved with payroll withholding. Earlier versions of IRS internal manuals relating to IMF decoding reveal that the people domiciled in the Virgin Islands are the only parties who for which a Transaction Code 150 is appropriate within the Individual Master File (IMF). The Individual Master File, recall, is the electronic record that the IRS uses to maintain the tax account of “individuals”. Individuals, in turn, consist of only “aliens” and “nonresident aliens” under 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3).

5.15 Congress has made you a Political “tax prisoner” and a “feudal tax serf” in your own country!

The U.S. Congress wants to obfuscate and abuse the law and your rights to make you a political tax prisoner and a “feudal tax serf” in your own country.

“Shall the [throne of iniquity \[the U.S. Congress and the federal judiciary\]](#), which devises evil by [obfuscating the] law [to expand their jurisdiction and consolidate all economic power in their hands by taking it away from the states], have fellowship with You? They gather together against the life of the righteous, and condemn innocent blood of “nontaxpayers” and [persons outside their jurisdiction, which is an act of extortion and racketeering]. But the Lord has been my defense, and my God the rock of my refuge. He has brought on them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; the Lord our God and those who obey Him and [His word] shall cut them off from power and from receiving illegal bribes cleverly disguised by an obfuscated “code” as legitimate “[taxes”].”
[Psalm 94:20-23, Bible, NKJV.]

QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Who else BUT Congress and the judiciary can devise “evil by law”?

They want the slaves to stay in “tax prison” and live on the federal plantation so they can harvest the loot from them. You're a host organism for the federal parasite and you better learn to like it, boy. You're part of the matrix! 26 U.S.C. §877, entitled “Expatriation to avoid tax” compels people domiciled inside the federal zone to continue paying extortion money for up to ten years after they expatriate their “national” status if they did so in order to avoid “taxes”. Here is an excerpt from that statute, which by the way isn't a “law”:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter N > PART II > Subpart A > Sec. 877.
 Sec. 877. - Expatriation to avoid tax

(a) Treatment of expatriates

(1) In general

Every nonresident alien individual who, within the 10-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year, lost United States citizenship, unless such loss did not have for one of its principal purposes the avoidance of taxes under this subtitle or subtitle B, shall be taxable for such taxable year in the manner provided in subsection (b) if the tax imposed pursuant to such subsection (after any reduction in such tax under the last sentence of such subsection) exceeds the tax which, without regard to this section, is imposed pursuant to section 871.

(2) Certain individuals treated as having tax avoidance purpose

For purposes of paragraph (1), an individual shall be treated as having a principal purpose to avoid such taxes if -

(A) the average annual net income tax (as defined in section 38(c)(1)) of such individual for the period of 5 taxable years ending before the date of the loss of United States citizenship is greater than $100,000, or

(B) the net worth of the individual as of such date is $500,000 or more.

In the case of the loss of United States citizenship in any calendar year after 1996, such $100,000 and $500,000 amounts shall be increased by an amount equal to such dollar amount multiplied by the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year by substituting "1994" for "1992" in subparagraph (B) thereof. Any increase under the preceding sentence shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $1,000.

Note one very important aspect of the above!: That a person who is a "nonresident alien" and who is expatriating their "nationality", is the proper subject of this law. This confirms the main hypothesis of this book, which is that you can indeed be a "nonresident alien" and a "national" and still not be a statutory "U.S. citizen" (8 U.S.C. §1401), because a "nonresident alien" is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7791(b)(1)(B) as a person who is neither a "[statutory] citizen nor a [statutory] resident of the United States**[federal zone]".

Based on the above, if you have property inside the federal zone and attempt to abandon your "national" status by expatriating and do it for the specific and main purpose of avoiding federal "taxes", then you are punished by having to pay taxes for the next ten years on any earnings you declare on a tax return! Don't let this law scare you though, because if you are an "alien" or a "nonresident" with respect to the federal zone, then you don't come under the jurisdiction of this law because Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A is internal to the federal zone only. The IRS may try to misuse this law, however, to jeopardize or attach property that you have inside the federal zone if you refuse to pay extortion they will mistakenly say you owe under this provision. In other words, the IRS may try to use this as a source for "in rem" jurisdiction over your real property within the federal United States.

The U.S. Congress said long ago that the ability to expatriate is a right fundamental in protecting our liberties and must not be hindered or interfered with by government, and yet that same Congress is now contradicting itself by punishing those who expatriate because they want to pick their pockets before they leave the federal slave plantation!:

"Almost a century ago, Congress declared that "the right of expatriation [including expatriation from the District of Columbia or "U.S. Inc", the corporation] is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government." 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, 8 U.S.C. § 800 (1940).<sup>314</sup> Although designed to apply especially to the rights of immigrants to shed their foreign nationalities, that Act of Congress "is also broad enough to cover, and does cover, the corresponding natural and inherent right of American citizens to expatriate themselves." Savorgnan v. United States, 1950, 338 U.S. 491, 498 note 11, 70 S.Ct. 292, 296, 94 L.Ed. 287.<sup>315</sup> The Supreme Court has held that the Citizenship Act of 1907 and the Nationality Act of 1940 "are to be read in the light of the declaration of policy favoring freedom of expatriation which stands unrepealed." Id., 338 U.S. at pages 498-499, 70 S.Ct. at page 296. That same light, I think, illuminates 22 U.S.C.A. §211a and 8 U.S.C.A. §1185." [Walter Briehl v. John Foster Dulles, 248 F.2d. 561, 583 (1957)]

On the other hand, when states of the Union have attempted to do almost exactly the same thing in their statutes by trying tax and thereby punish those who try to physically leave the state or travel outside it and thereby escape its jurisdiction, the U.S. Supreme Court hypocritically struck down the law that did this. Here is an example:

"It was so decided in 1867 by Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 39. In that case this Court struck down a Nevada tax 'upon every person leaving the State' by common carrier. Mr. Justice Miller writing for the Court held that the right to move freely throughout the nation was a right of national citizenship. That the right was implied did not make it any the less 'guaranteed' by the Constitution. Id., 6 Wall. page 47. To be sure, he emphasized that the Nevada statute would obstruct the right of a citizen to travel to the seat of his national government or its offices throughout the country. And see United States v. Wheeler, 254 U.S. 281, 299, 41 S.Ct. 133, 136. But there is not a shred of evidence in the record of the Crandall case that the persons there involved were en route on any such mission any more than it appears in this case that Duncan entered California to interview some federal agency. The point which Mr. Justice Miller made was merely in illustration of the damage and havoc which would ensue if the States had the power to prevent the free movement of citizens from one State to another. [314 U.S. 160, 179] This is emphasized by his quotation from Chief Justice Taney's dissenting opinion in the Passenger Cases, 7 How. 283, 492: 'We are all citizens of the United States, and as members of the same community must have the right to pass and repass through every part of it without interruption, as freely as in our own States.' Hence the dictum in United States v. Wheeler, supra, 254 U.S. page 299, 41 S.Ct. page 136, which attempts to limit the Crandall case to a holding that the statute in question directly burdened 'the performance by the United States of its governmental functions' and limited the 'rights of the citizens growing out of such functions,' does not bear analysis.

"The conclusion that the right of free movement is a right of national citizenship stands on firm historical ground. If a state tax on that movement, as in the Crandall case, is invalid, a fortiori a state statute which obstructs or in substance prevents that movement must fall. That result necessarily follows unless perchance a State can curtail the right of free movement of those who are poor or destitute. But to allow such an exception to be engrafted on the rights of national citizenship would be to contravene every conception of national unity. It would also introduce a caste system utterly incompatible with the spirit of our system of government. It would permit those who were stigmatized by a State as indigents, paupers, or vagabonds to be relegated to an inferior class of citizenship. It would prevent a citizen because he was poor from seeking new horizons in other States. It might thus withhold from large segments of our people that mobility which is basic to any guarantee of freedom of opportunity. The result would be a substantial dilution of the rights of national citizenship, a serious impairment of the principles of equality. Since the state statute here challenged involves such consequences, it runs afoul of the privileges and immunities clause of the Fourteenth Amendment."
[Edwards v. People of the State of California, 314 U.S. 160 (1941)]

In effect, the state of Nevada in Crandall was trying to punish people for leaving the state by taxing them, so they would stay in the state. "Expatriation" has the equivalent effect of removing one's "res in public trust" from the jurisdiction and purview of the federal corporation called the "United States" government. In effect, people who expatriate are "divorcing" themselves from the corporate state and become political dissidents and "stateless persons" who refuse to subsidize what they may often view as unethical, immoral, and evil activities of that state. The federal government has no more right to obstruct, punish, or interfere with your ability to choose your citizenship or to leave the "federal corporation" (slave plantation) than the states have a right to tax citizens who choose to physically leave them. On that basis, the above punishment for those expatriating their nationality and allegiance is an unconstitutional deprivation of due process of law, not to mention unspeakably hypocritical on the part of the federal government. This kind of hypocrisy also amounts to an unconstitutional Bill of Attainder, which is a penalty imposed absent a court judgment, if the tax is imposed or collected without a court judgment in each specific instance of attempted collection.

5.16 The government's REAL approach to tax law

"The more corrupt the state, the more numerous the laws."
[Tacitus, Roman historian 55-117 A.D.]

"Sometimes the law defends plunder and participates in it. Thus the beneficiaries are spared the shame and danger that their acts would otherwise involve... But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them and gives it to the other persons to whom it doesn't belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime. Then abolish that law without delay ... No legal plunder; this is the principle of justice, peace, order, stability, harmony and logic"
[The Law, Frederic Bastiat]

"It's a game. We [tax lawyers] teach the rich how to play it so they can stay rich-- and the IRS keeps changing the rules so we can keep getting rich teaching them."
[John Grisham]

"The prestige of government has undoubtedly been lowered considerably by the prohibition law. For nothing is more destructive of respect for the government and the law of the land than passing laws which cannot be enforced. It is an open secret that the dangerous increase of crime in this country is closely connected with this."

1 [Albert Einstein, "My First Impression of the U.S.A.", 1921]

2 One of the most fascinating and informative books we've read about the subject of government and politics in general is Atlas Shrugged by Ayn Rand. This book changed
3 my life when I read it for the first time at age 19. Here is how Ayn Rand describes government's approach to writing laws. We provide it here as intriguing food for thought
4 and a nice dog biscuit (thanks!) for all of you with the diligence to read this far. It fits in very nicely with the previous section about the "void for vagueness" doctrine. The
5 excerpt from Atlas Shrugged which follows describes a situation where the government [represented by Dr. Ferris] has cornered an honest and good man [Rearden] with bad
6 laws into trying to make him believe that he has committed a crime so they can get what they want to STEAL from him, which is a valuable invention of his, the Rearden
7 Metal:

8 Dr. Ferris smiled. . . . "We've waited a long time to get something on you. You honest men are such a problem and such a headache. But we knew you'd slip sooner or 9 later - and this is just what we wanted."

10 "You seem to be pleased about it."

11 "Don't I have good reason to be?"

12 "But, after all, I did break one of your laws."

13 "Well, what do you think they're for?"

14 Dr. Ferris did not notice the sudden look on Rearden's face, the look of a man hit by the first vision of that which he had sought to see. Dr. Ferris was past the stage of seeing;
15 he was intent upon delivering the last blows to an animal caught in a trap.

16 "Did you really think that we want those laws to be observed?" said Dr. Ferris. "We want them broken. You'd better get it straight that it's not a bunch of boy scouts you're
17 up against - then you'll know that this is not the age for beautiful gestures. We're after power and we mean it. You fellows were pikers, but we know the real trick, and you'd 18 better get wise to it. There's no way to rule innocent men. The only power any government has is the power to crack down on criminals. Well, when there aren't enough
19 criminals, one makes them. One declares so many things to be a crime that it becomes impossible for men to live without breaking laws. Who wants a nation of law-abiding
20 citizens? What's there in that for anyone? But just pass the kind of laws that can neither be observed nor enforced nor objectively interpreted - and you create a nation of 21 law-breakers - and then you cash in on guilt. Now, that's the system, Mr. Rearden, that's the game, and once you understand it, you'll be much easier to deal with."

1 "The only thing new in the world is the history you do not know"
2 [Author unknown]

3 "A nation can survive its fools, and even the ambitious. But it cannot survive treason from within [our own
4 government]. An enemy at the gates is less formidable, for he is known and carries his banners openly. But the
5 traitor moves amongst those within the gate freely, his sly whispers rustling through all the alleys, heard in the 6 very halls of government[and Congress] itself. For the traitor appears not a traitor; he speaks in accents familiar
7 to his victims, and he wears their face and their garments, and he appeals to the baseness that lies deep in the 8 hearts of all men. He rots the soul of a nation, he works secretly and unknown in the night to undermine the pillars
9 of a city, he infects the body politic so that it can no longer resist. A murderer is less to be feared"
10 [Marcus Tullius Cicero 42 BC]

11 "Americans have the government officials they deserve. Our society openly castigates the Almighty, thus making 12 tolerable judicial pronouncements like that of today (6-26-02, Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declared the 13 national pledge unconstitutional because it used the phrase "one nation under God") which banished God from 14 our national pledge. The darkness of night follows the light of day, and similarly when any nation shakes its angry
15 fist at the maker of the universe, it can expect the withdrawal of divine protection. Conditions are now riper for 16 a strike by our national tormenters. Those who disdain our sacred pledge are no better than our enemies."
17 [Larry Becraft, Attorney]

18 "A nation which does not remember what it was yesterday, does not know what it is today, nor what it is trying 19 to do. We are trying to do a futile thing if we do not know where we came from or what we have been about."
20 [Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States]

21 "I believe there are more instances of the abridgement of the freedom of the people by gradual and silent 22 encroachments of those in power than by violent and sudden usurpations."
23 [James Madison (1751-1863), President of the United States]

24 "In politics, nothing happens by accident. If it happens, it was planned that way."
25 [Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States]

26 "The strongest reason for the people to retain the right to keep and bear arms is, as a last resort, to protect 27 themselves against tyranny in government."
28 [Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826), Founding father and President of the United States]

29 "There is no pillow so soft as a clear conscience."
30 [French Proverb]

31 After having diligently read Chapter 5 of this book, which documents extensively using current case law, statutes, and
32 regulations why most Americans, and especially those who do not consent, are not liable to either file returns or pay income
33 taxes under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A, you most likely are thinking something like the following:

34 "The conclusions you reached and thoroughly documented in Chapter 5 of this book are totally incredible! I am
35 simply stunned and rendered speechless by them and still have trouble believing them because they sound too
36 good to be true. Surely our federal government wouldn't lie to us on that large a scale and get away with it, would 37 they? Wouldn't the courts have blown the whistle on this a long time ago? Why doesn't my lawyer know this
38 and if he does, why won't he tell me? I would feel much more thoroughly convinced of your arguments if you
39 could analyze the issues and assertions you are making from a historical perspective to show how our nation
40 evolved to the allegedly lawless state it currently finds itself in with regard to federal income taxes. If what you
41 are saying is true, and so far I have no reason to doubt that it isn't, then there is a historical explanation for all
42 of this that is completely consistent with your conclusions. Being the perpetual skeptic that I am [GOOD!..KEEP 43 IT UP!], I therefore demand to see historical evidence that is consistent with your conclusions to make the picture
44 completely clear for me and remove all remaining doubt."

45 Answering the above concerns is therefore the main focus of this chapter. We will show how corrupt lawyers and politicians
46 over the years have conspired to deceive you into volunteering for a tax that didn't apply to you and which they had no
47 jurisdiction to make you liable for paying. We will show how they cleverly weaved and perfected the deceptive spider web
48 that snares you into their system and makes you into an unwilling slave of a federal government that has turned from the chief
49 protector of your rights to the worst possible violator of your rights. Other additional but very valid reasons for documenting
50 the history of this alleged conspiracy to defraud Americans of their income include the following:

- 51 1. There are two main statutory crimes involving federal income taxes that could possibly affect those who choose not to 52 "volunteer" to pay federal income taxes:
  - 53 1.1. Tax Evasion, 26 U.S.C. §7201
  - 54 1.2. Willful Failure to File, 26 U.S.C. §7203

- 1 2. Both of the above statutory crimes are most often proved or demonstrated conclusively in court by the government by 2 showing the jury that there was a willful attempt to conceal “taxable” income by the defendant. This requires the 3 government to prove that:
 4 2.1. The defendant is completely familiar with the Internal Revenue Code and the implementing regulations found in
 5 26 C.F.R..
 6 2.2. The defendant had income that was “taxable”, which means that Internal Revenue Code (somewhere in the code)
 7 made you liable (you had a legal duty) for paying the tax.
 8 2.3. Because the defendant was liable to pay a tax, then he was also liable to file a return under the tax imposed in 26
 9 U.S.C. §1.
 10 2.4. The defendant knew that that the law made him liable to pay the tax but he still refused to pay it and tried to 11 circumvent it or the collection of it (Tax Evasion, 26 U.S.C. §7201)
 12 2.5. He violated a legal duty he knew he had by refusing to file the return showing his liability (26 U.S.C. §7203).
 13 3. The motive for the act of concealment is extremely important in establishing the basis for the charge of “willfulness”. If
 14 the motive for the concealment did not involve hiding taxable income or violating a known legal duty, but simply a desire
 15 to protect one’s constitutional rights, one’s property, obey the law, and guarantee that the government also obeys the law,
 16 then the act of concealment cannot be “willful”.
 17 4. There are more motives or reasons to conceal “income” from the government than simply just to evade taxes. One major
 18 additional reason might be because the government is quite frankly corrupt and lawless and simply can’t be trusted to 19 obey the laws on federal income taxes, which clearly show that there is no liability to either file a return or pay a tax.
 20 The act of concealing income under such circumstances is simply an exercise of liberty and pursuit of justice in 21 conformance with laws designed to protect oneself from unlawful government abuse which essentially amounts to 22 organized extortion and fraud.
 23 5. The contents of this chapter will therefore trace the history of our country to convincingly and clearly show the basis for 24 the conclusion and good faith belief that:
 25 5.1. We have a criminal and abusive federal government that tramples our Constitutional rights and which is downright
 26 dishonest in its dealings with most Americans with regard to federal income taxes. The main motive for that 27 dishonesty is a love and lust for money and power, which the Bible says in 1 Tim. 6:10 is “the root of all evil”.
 28 5.2. The criminal nature of our federal government and its widespread violation of our Constitutional rights and tax
 29 statutes found in the Internal Revenue Code and regulations undermines its credibility and violates the public trust
 30 and fiduciary relationship that it clearly has with Americans as document in Section 2.1 of this book.
 31 5.3. This tyrannical violation of law and public trust causes Americans to distrust their government, creates civil unrest,
 32 undermines our prosperity, and makes most people want to run and hide from the government to protect their 33 privacy and liberty rather than risk being harmed by it. For instance, it makes people want to conceal private 34 information from the federal government because of a fear that the information they provide will be misused to 35 illegally single them out or prosecute them wrongfully using fabricated evidence and misquoted or falsified or 36 misleading statements about their lawful tax responsibilities. This type of treatment is called blackmail and 37 extortion when anyone other than the government does it, but the government seldom prosecutes or enforces such 38 criminal laws when its own officers undertake such abuses.
 39 5.4. Running and hiding from our government because of our mistrust and its lawless behavior is a legitimate and 40 honorable motivation for concealing income, and that this motivation has nothing to do with defying a known legal 41 duty or with the notion of “willfulness”. To the contrary, it is the only cost-effective way, in the absence of a
 42 government that obeys its own taxing statutes and the presence of a corrupt legal profession, to ensure that the 43 outcome in our case is more consistent with the requirements of the law in the presence of a criminal government.

44 “When the wicked arise, men hide themselves:
 45 But when they perish, the righteous increase.”
 46 [Prov. 28:28, Bible, NKJV]

47 “A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself [and his assets from plunder and harm],
 48 But the simple pass on and are punished.”
 49 [Prov. 22:3, Bible, NKJV]

50 “A prudent man foresees evil and hides himself; The simple pass on and are punished.”
 51 [Prov. 27:12, Bible, NKJV]

52 “The simple believes every word,
 53 But the prudent man considers well his steps.
 54 A wise man fears and departs from evil.
 55 But a fool rages and is self-confident.”
 56 [Prov. 14:15, Bible, NKJV]

- 1 5.5. Because there is no such thing as taxable income under Subtitle A for Americans who refuse to volunteer for the 2 tax, it constitutes a fraud for our government to claim or imply otherwise, whether it be in the IRS Publications, the
 3 Internal Revenue Code, or 26 Code of Federal Regulations. In spite of this fact, we will show how the government
 4 has committed a constructive fraud by obfuscating the tax code over the years to further violate the public trust and
 5 illegally and fraudulently broaden public perception of their otherwise very limited jurisdiction to tax incomes only
 6 within the federal United States.
- 7 5.6. Fear created in the reader by a knowledge and complete understanding of this chapter will hopefully provide a 8 sufficient basis to forever avoid the charge of “willfulness” in the act of concealment because we can show a valid
 9 and honorable and lawful motive for concealment related to other than criminal intent or defiance of a known legal
 10 duty.

11 Before we begin our first section within the chapter, we’d like to give you the big picture, or 20,000 foot view, of why you
 12 should believe that history confirms what we said in Chapter 5. All you have to do is consider the scenario below to realize 13 that there is something seriously wrong going on here with our federal government.

- 14 1. The Supreme Court in 1895, in the case of Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), 15 declared that the first income tax imposed on Americans as unconstitutional.
- 16 2. The Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America,, fraudulently ratified in 1913, is what 17 most federal politicians and tax lawyers erroneously say overcame the Pollock decision in 1895 and authorized the 18 imposition of direct income taxes on sovereign Americans.
- 19 3. The Supreme Court declared in 1916, after the passage of the Sixteenth Amendment , the following in a case that has 20 never been overruled:

21 *“..by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth
 22 Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the* 23 previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being
 24 taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category
 25 of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived,
 26 that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin
 27 or source of the income taxed. ”
 28 [Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

- 29 4. No changes to the Constitution that would affect income taxation have been made that would authorize the ruling in 30 Pollock v. Farmers’ Loan and Trust, 158 U.S. 601 (1895) to be invalidated or superseded.
- 31 5. In spite of all of the above, to this day, the federal government, and especially our dishonest Congressmen and the IRS, 32 still continues to commit fraud and deceive the public by insisting that:
- 33 5.1. The Sixteenth Amendment authorized Subtitle A income taxes on natural persons.
- 34 5.2. The Sixteenth Amendment was properly ratified and therefore valid.
- 35 5.3. Income taxes are legal and lawful for natural persons.
- 36 5.4. Income taxes do not violate our constitutional rights.
- 37 5.5. All Americans are “taxpayers” (persons liable for the payment of income taxes under Subtitle A), even though there 38 is not statute or regulation creating such a liability.
- 39 5.6. All Americans are statutory “U.S. citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, which means they are domiciled federal 40 territory subject to the sovereignty of the U.S. government. This is a fraud, because they are in most cases
 41 “nationals” but not statutory “citizens” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21) who are effectively “nonresident aliens”
 42 as far as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned. “U.S. citizens” are defined in 26 C.F.R. §31.3121\(e\)-1 to mean

43 “... a citizen of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, and, effective January 1, 1961, a citizen
 44 of Guam or American Samoa.”

- 45 5.7. That being a statutory “U.S. citizen” is what makes a person liable for income taxes, and that it is a patriotic duty 46 to “pay our fair share.”
- 47 5.8. That the “individual” described at the top of the income tax form means statutory “U.S. citizen”, when in fact it 48 really means “U.S. resident alien” or “nonresident alien” as per 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1\(c\)\(3\).
- 49 5.9. That the IRS publications are to be trusted to establish a good faith belief about our legal liabilities, even though
 50 the courts and even the IRS claim that they can’t be relied upon for such purposes and that only the law is useful in 51 establishing good faith belief.

1 Do you smell something REALLY FISHY going on here? We hope we have at least made you curious enough to finish
 2 reading this chapter and see for yourself that what we are saying is truthful and completely consistent with the law and with
 3 our country's history.

4 George Washington, in his Farewell Address to our country, said that religion and morality are indispensable aspects of our
 5 government. We believe this chapter painfully and forcefully confirms what happens when they cease to be priorities of our
 6 government and our courts:

7 Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable
 8 supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars
 9 of human happiness—these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with 10 the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private 11 and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, "where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense
 12 of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice?" And let 13 us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be
 14 conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid
 15 us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.

16 It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule indeed extends 17 with more or less force to every species of free government. Who that is a sincere friend to it can look with 18 indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?

19 Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In 20 proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should 21 be enlightened.

22 George Washington also confirmed the above assertions in the following quotes:

23 "Propitious smiles of heaven can never be expected on a nation that disregards the eternal rules of order and 24 right which heaven itself has ordained." - George Washington (1732-1799)

25 "One's god dictates the kind of law one implements and also controls the application and development of that law
 26 over time. Given enough time, all non-Christian systems of law self-destruct in a fit of tyranny."

27 The history of our country is ripe with examples of noble statesmen like George Washington, who were wise statesmen of 28 faith and character. Contemporary liberal media, liberal politicians, and a liberal education system have conspired to hide
 29 the deeds and beliefs of these noble men from the view of our young ones, and corrupted them to believe that there is no God,
 30 no absolute source of truth, and no right and wrong and everything is relative. The new god of the 21st century has become 31 science and evolutionism, which together have robbed our children of religion and faith and mocked the Bible and God and 32 our marvelous national birthright.

33 In the process of promoting their selfish agenda in our educational system, licentious and corrupt individuals in the legal,
 34 education, and media professions have made us into a carnal, licentious, and idolatrous society where the government robs
 35 us of our income using the ignorance it created in us as a weapon and thereby forces us to therefore depend on and trust it
 36 instead of God or our own initiative. In effect, they have outlawed personal responsibility by forcing us to participate in a
 37 Social Security Ponzi Scheme and income tax system. This violates the first commandment of the Bible.

38 "You shall have no other gods [including government] before Me."
 39 [Exodus 20:3, Bible, NKJV]

40 Now we have a whole generation of conceited and idolatrous people (the "ME generation") who have known nothing but this 41 selfish lie and deception and who do not know any other reality or even the way things used to be in our country because our 42 public school history books have been censored to remove our spiritual heritage. See the following website created by David
 43 Barton for more information on this liberal censorship scam:

44 <http://www.wallbuilders.com/>

45 To make things even worse, public distaste for lawyers has caused few men of character to be attracted to public service or 46 political office, thus leaving our government and our courts in the hands of selfish rogue lawyers and arrogant thieves. As 47 our leaders, these losers set the standard for our society and are dragging it down with them:

1           "Our government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or of for ill, it teaches the whole people by its
 2 example. Crime is contagious. If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for the law; it invites
 3 every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal
 4 law the end justifies the means...would bring terrible retribution. Against that pernicious doctrine this Court
 5 should resolutely set its face."
 6 [Justice Brandeis, Olmstead v. United States, 277 U.S. 438, 485 (1928)]

7 Is it therefore any surprise to see the extent of corruption in our government with these types of selfish and lawless individuals
 8 writing our laws and enforcing them? We think not.

9 The one thought we want you to finish this chapter with is the following, right from the Bible in Jeremiah 17:9-11:

10           The heart is deceitful above all things,
 11           And desperately wicked:
 12           Who can know it?
 13           I, the Lord, search the heart,
 14           I test the mind,
 15           Even to give every man according to his ways,
 16           According to the fruit of his doings
 17           As a partridge that broods but does not hatch,
 18           So is he who gets riches, but not by right:
 19           It will leave him in the midst of his days,
 20           And at his end he will be a fool.
 21           [Jeremiah 17:9-11, Bible, NKJV]

22 In the meantime while we are waiting for Divine Justice and doing justice ourselves at every turn as Micah 6:8 requires, the 23 Bible warns us what to expect and how we should behave in Micah 7:2-10:

24           The faithful man has perished from the earth,
 25           And there is no one upright among men,
 26           They all lie in wait for blood;
 27           Every man hunts his brother with a net.
 28
 29           That they may successfully do evil with both hands—
 30           The prince asks for gifts,
 31           The judge seeks a bribe,
 32           And the great man utters his evil desire;
 33           So they scheme together.
 34           The best of them is like a brier;
 35           The most upright is sharper than a thorn edge;
 36           The day of your watchman and your punishment comes;
 37           Now shall be their perplexity.
 38
 39           Do not trust in a friend;
 40           Do not put your confidence in a companion;
 41           Guard the doors of your mouth
 42           From her who lies in your bosom.
 43           For son dishonors father,
 44           Daughter rises against her mother,
 45           Daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law;
 46           A man's enemies are the men of his own household.
 47           Therefore I will look to the Lord;
 48           I will wait for the God of my salvation;
 49           My God will hear me.
 50
 51           Do not rejoice over me, my enemy;
 52           When I fall, I will arise;
 53           When I sit in darkness,
 54           The Lord will be a light to me.
 55           I will bear the indignation of the Lord,
 56           Because I have sinned against Him,
 57           Until He pleads my case
 58           And executes justice for me.
 59           He will bring me forth to the light;
 60           I will see His righteousness.
 61           Then she who is my enemy will see,
 62           And shame will cover her who said to me,
 63           "Where is the Lord your God?"

1            My eyes will see her;
 2            Now she will be trampled down
 3            Like mud in the streets.”
 4            [Micah 7:2-10, Bible, NKJV]

5 Finally, if you find that the contents of the chapter leave questions unanswered about the history of the income tax fraud and
 6 the moral decay in this country and you would like a clearer or more complete picture, we refer you to another excellent book
 7 that is very thoroughly researched and authoritative by David Barton:

11 If you also happen to be interested generally in the subject of freedom and would like a much broader and more complete
 12 view of the history of freedom in our country that focuses on all aspects of freedom, including taxation, then we refer you to
 13 the CD-ROM entitled Highlights of American Legal and Political History: The Conquering of the American Republic by the
 14 U.S. Democracy. This CD is jam-packed with 640 Mbytes of evidence from the government’s own original publications and 15 documents showing how our freedoms and liberties have been systematically, maliciously, and willfully destroyed and
 16 undermined in violation of the Constitution from the very foundation of this country. Over three years and 2,000 man-hours
 17 went into assembling the CD that will save you thousands of hours of research on your own. This resource will therefore

19 6.1 Main purpose of law is to LIMIT government power to ensure freedom and sovereignty of the people<sup>316</sup>

20 The main purpose of law is to limit government power in order to protect and preserve, freedom, choice, and the sovereignty
 21 of the people.

22            “When we consider the nature and theory of our institutions of government, the principles upon which
 23 they are supposed to rest, and review the history of their development, we are constrained to conclude
 24 that they do not mean to leave room for the play and action of purely personal and arbitrary power.
 25 Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the author and source of law; but in our
 26 system, while sovereign powers are delegated to the agencies of government, sovereignty itself
 27 remains with the people, by whom and for whom all government exists and acts. And the law is the 28 definition and limitation of power.”
 29            [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) ]

30 An important implication of the use of law to limit government power is the following inferences unavoidably arising from 31 it:

- 32 1. The purpose of law is to define and thereby limit government power.
- 33 2. All law acts as a delegation of authority order upon those serving in the government.
- 34 3. You cannot limit government power without definitions that are limiting.
- 35 4. A definition that does not limit the thing or class of thing defined is no definition at all from a legal perspective and 36 causes anything that depends on that definition to be political rather than legal in nature. By political, we mean a
 37 function exercised ONLY by the LEGISLATIVE or EXECUTIVE branch.
- 38 5. Where the definitions in the law are clear, judges have no discretion to expand the meaning of words. Therefore the 39 main method of expanding government power and creating what the supreme court calls “arbitrary power” is to use
 40 terms in the law that are vague, undefined, “general expressions”, or which don’t define the context implied.
- 41 6. We define “general expressions” as those which:
  - 42 6.1. The speaker is either not accountable or REFUSES to be accountable for the accuracy or truthfulness or definition 43 of the word or expression.
  - 44 6.2. Fail to recognize that there are multiple contexts in which the word could be used.
    - 45 6.2.1. CONSTITUTIONAL (States of the Union).
    - 46 6.2.2. STATUTORY (federal territory).

- 6.3. Are susceptible to two or more CONTEXTS or interpretations, one of which the government representative interpreting the context stands to benefit from handsomely. Thus, “equivocation” is undertaken, in which they TELL you they mean the CONSTITUTIONAL interpretation but after receiving your form or pleading, interpret it to mean the STATUTORY context.

equivocation

EQUIVOCATION, n. Ambiguity of speech; the use of words or expressions that are susceptible of a double signification. Hypocrites are often guilty of equivocation, and by this means lose the confidence of their fellow men. Equivocation is incompatible with the Christian character and profession.

[SOURCE: <http://1828.mshaffer.com/d/search/word/equivocation>]

Equivocation (“to call by the same name”) is an informal logical fallacy. It is the misleading use of a term with more than one meaning or sense (by glossing over which meaning is intended at a particular time). It generally occurs with polysemic words (words with multiple meanings).

Albeit in common parlance it is used in a variety of contexts, when discussed as a fallacy, equivocation only occurs when the arguer makes a word or phrase employed in two (or more) different senses in an argument appear to have the same meaning throughout.

It is therefore distinct from (semantic) ambiguity, which means that the context doesn't make the meaning of the word or phrase clear, and amphiboly (or syntactical ambiguity), which refers to ambiguous sentence structure due to punctuation or syntax.

Wikipedia: [Equivocation, Downloaded 9/15/2015; SOURCE: <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Equivocation>]

- 6.4. PRESUME that all contexts are equivalent, meaning that CONSTITUTIONAL and STATUTORY are equivalent.
- 6.5. Fail to identify the specific context implied.
- 6.6. Fail to provide an actionable definition for the term that is useful as evidence in court.
- 6.7. Government representatives actively interfere with or even penalize efforts by the applicant to define the context of the terms so that they can protect their right to make injurious presumptions about their meaning.
7. Any attempt to assert any authority by anyone in government to add anything they want to the definition of a thing in the law unavoidably creates a government of UNLIMITED power.
8. Anyone who can add anything to the definition of a word in the law that does not expressly appear SOMEWHERE in the law is exercising a LEGISLATIVE and POLITICAL function of the LEGISLATIVE branch and is NOT acting as a judge or a jurist.
9. The only people in government who can act in a LEGISLATIVE capacity are the LEGISLATIVE branch under our system of three branches of government: LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, and JUDICIAL.
10. Any attempt to combine or consolidate any of the powers of each of the three branches into the other branch results in tyranny.

“When the legislative and executive powers are united in the same person, or in the same body of magistrates, there can be no liberty; because apprehensions may arise, lest the same monarch or senate should enact tyrannical laws, to execute them in a tyrannical manner.”

Again, there is no liberty, if the judiciary power be not separated from the legislative and executive. Were it joined with the legislative, the life and liberty of the subject would be exposed to arbitrary control; for the judge would be then the legislator. Were it joined to the executive power, the judge might behave with violence and oppression [sound familiar?].

There would be an end of everything, were the same man or the same body, whether of the nobles or of the people, to exercise those three powers, that of enacting laws, that of executing the public resolutions, and of trying the causes of individuals.”

[. . .]

In what a situation must the poor subject be in those republics! The same body of magistrates are possessed, as executors of the laws, of the whole power they have given themselves in quality of legislators. They may plunder the state by their general determinations; and as they have likewise the judiciary power in their hands, every private citizen may be ruined by their particular decisions.”

6.2 How our system of government became corrupted: Downes v. Bidwell<sup>317</sup>

The dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan in the monumentally important U.S. Supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell described how the word game mechanisms at the end of the previous section would be abused to corrupt our system of government with a stern warning to future generations:

*In view of the adjudications of this court, I cannot assent to the proposition, whether it be announced in express words or by implication, that the National Government is a government of or by the States in union, and that the prohibitions and limitations of the Constitution are addressed only to the States. That is but another form of saying that like the government created by the Articles of Confederation, the present government is a mere league of States, held together by compact between themselves; whereas, as this court has often declared, it is a government created by the People of the United States, with enumerated powers, and supreme over States and individuals, with respect to certain objects, throughout the entire territory over which its jurisdiction extends. If the National Government is, in any sense, a compact, it is a compact between the People of the United States among themselves as constituting in the aggregate the political community by whom the National Government was established. The Constitution speaks not simply to the States in their organized capacities, but to all peoples, whether of States or territories, who are subject to the authority of the United States. *Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 327.

*In the opinion to which I am referring it is also said that the "practical interpretation put by Congress upon the Constitution has been long continued and uniform to the effect that the Constitution is applicable to territories acquired by purchase or conquest only when and so far as Congress shall so direct;" that while all power of government may be abused, the same may be said of the power of the Government "under the Constitution as well as outside of it;" that "if it once be conceded that we are at liberty to acquire foreign territory, a presumption arises that 379*379 our power with respect to such territories is the same power which other nations have been accustomed to exercise with respect to territories acquired by them;" that "the liberality of Congress in legislating the Constitution into all our contiguous territories has undoubtedly fostered the impression that it went there by its own force, but there is nothing in the Constitution itself, and little in the interpretation put upon it, to confirm that impression;" that as the States could only delegate to Congress such powers as they themselves possessed, and as they had no power to acquire new territory, and therefore none to delegate in that connection, the logical inference is that "if Congress had power to acquire new territory, which is conceded, that power was not hampered by the constitutional provisions;" that if "we assume that the territorial clause of the Constitution was not intended to be restricted to such territory as the United States then possessed, there is nothing in the Constitution to indicate that the power of Congress in dealing with them was intended to be restricted by any of the other provisions;" and that "the executive and legislative departments of the Government have for more than a century interpreted this silence as precluding the idea that the Constitution attached to these territories as soon as acquired."*

These are words of weighty import. They involve consequences of the most momentous character. I take leave to say that if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will be the result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism.

*Although from the foundation of the Government this court has held steadily to the view that the Government of the United States was one of enumerated powers, and that no one of its branches, nor all of its branches combined, could constitutionally exercise powers not granted, or which were not necessarily implied from those expressly granted, *Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 326, 331, we are now informed that Congress possesses powers outside of the Constitution, and may deal with new territory, 380*380 acquired by treaty or conquest, in the same manner as other nations have been accustomed to act with respect to territories acquired by them. In my opinion, Congress has no existence and can exercise no authority outside of the Constitution. Still less is it true that Congress can deal with new territories just as other nations have done or may do with their new territories. This nation is under the control of a written constitution, the supreme law of the land and the only source of the powers which our Government, or any branch or officer of it, may exert at any time or at any place. Monarchical and despotic governments, unrestrained by written constitutions, may do with newly acquired territories what this Government may not do consistently with our fundamental law. To say otherwise is to concede that Congress may, by action taken outside of the Constitution, engraft upon our republican institutions a colonial system such as exists under monarchical governments. Surely such a result was never contemplated by the fathers of the Constitution. If that instrument had contained a word suggesting the possibility of a result of that character it would never have been adopted by the People of the United States. The idea that this country may acquire territories anywhere upon the earth, by conquest or treaty, and hold them as mere colonies or provinces — the people inhabiting them to enjoy only such rights as Congress chooses

1 to accord to them — is wholly inconsistent with the spirit and genius as well as with the words of the
2 Constitution.

3 The idea prevails with some — indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar — that we have in this
4 country substantially or practically two national governments; one, to be maintained under the Constitution,
5 with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument,
6 by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise. It is one thing to give such
7 a latitudinarian construction to the Constitution as will bring the exercise of power by Congress, upon a
8 particular occasion or upon a particular subject, within its provisions. It is quite a different thing to say that
9 Congress may, if it so elects, proceed outside of the Constitution. The glory of our American system <sup>381*381</sup> of 10 government is that it was created by a written constitution which protects the people against the exercise of 11 arbitrary, unlimited power, and the limits of which instrument may not be passed by the government it created,
12 or by any branch of it, or even by the people who ordained it, except by amendment or change of its provisions.
13 "To what purpose." Chief Justice Marshall said in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 176, "are powers
14 limited, and to what purpose is that limitation committed to writing, if these limits may, at any time, be passed
15 by those intended to be restrained? The distinction between a government with limited and unlimited powers 16 is abolished if those limits do not confine the persons on whom they are imposed, and if acts prohibited and 17 acts allowed are of equal obligation."

18 The wise men who framed the Constitution, and the patriotic people who adopted it, were unwilling to depend for 19 their safety upon what, in the opinion referred to, is described as "certain principles of natural justice inherent
20 in Anglo-Saxon character which need no expression in constitutions or statutes to give them effect or to secure
21 dependencies against legislation manifestly hostile to their real interests." They proceeded upon the theory — the 22 wisdom of which experience has vindicated — that the only safe guaranty against governmental oppression was 23 to withhold or restrict the power to oppress. They well remembered that Anglo-Saxons across the ocean had 24 attempted, in defiance of law and justice, to trample upon the rights of Anglo-Saxons on this continent and had 25 sought, by military force, to establish a government that could at will destroy the privileges that inhere in liberty.
26 They believed that the establishment here of a government that could administer public affairs according to its 27 will unrestrained by any fundamental law and without regard to the inherent rights of freemen, would be 28 ruinous to the liberties of the people by exposing them to the oppressions of arbitrary power. Hence, the 29 Constitution enumerates the powers which Congress and the other Departments may exercise — leaving
30 unimpaired, to the States or the People, the powers not delegated to the National Government nor prohibited
31 to the States. That instrument so expressly declares in <sup>382*382</sup> the Tenth Article of Amendment. It will be an 32 evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside of the supreme law of the land finds 33 lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full 34 authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.

35 Again, it is said that Congress has assumed, in its past history, that the Constitution goes into territories
36 acquired by purchase or conquest only when and as it shall so direct, and we are informed of the liberality of 37 Congress in legislating the Constitution into all our contiguous territories. This is a view of the Constitution
38 that may well cause surprise, if not alarm. Congress, as I have observed, has no existence except by virtue of 39 the Constitution. It is the creature of the Constitution. It has no powers which that instrument has not granted,
40 expressly or by necessary implication. I confess that I cannot grasp the thought that Congress which lives and 41 moves and has its being in the Constitution and is consequently the mere creature of that instrument, can, at 42 its pleasure, legislate or exclude its creator from territories which were acquired only by authority of the 43 Constitution.

44 By the express words of the Constitution, every Senator and Representative is bound, by oath or affirmation, to 45 regard it as the supreme law of the land. When the Constitutional Convention was in session there was much
46 discussion as to the phraseology of the clause defining the supremacy of the Constitution, laws and treaties of the 47 United States. At one stage of the proceedings the Convention adopted the following clause: "This Constitution,
48 and the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, and all the treaties made under the authority of the
49 United States, shall be the supreme law of the several States and of their citizens and inhabitants, and the judges
50 of the several States shall be bound thereby in their decisions, anything in the constitutions or laws of the several 51 States to the contrary notwithstanding." This clause was amended, on motion of Mr. Madison, by inserting after 52 the words "all treaties made" the words "or which shall be made." If the clause, so amended, had been inserted
53 in the Constitution as finally adopted, perhaps <sup>383*383</sup> there would have been some justification for saying that
54 the Constitution, laws and treaties of the United States constituted the supreme law only in the States, and that 55 outside of the States the will of Congress was supreme. But the framers of the Constitution saw the danger of 56 such a provision, and put into that instrument in place of the above clause the following: "This Constitution,
57 and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which 58 shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges
59 in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary
60 notwithstanding." Meigs's Growth of the Constitution, 284, 287. That the Convention struck out the words
61 "the supreme law of the several States" and inserted "the supreme law of the land," is a fact of no little 62 significance. The "land" referred to manifestly embraced all the peoples and all the territory, whether within 63 or without the States, over which the United States could exercise jurisdiction or authority.

64 Further, it is admitted that some of the provisions of the Constitution do apply to Porto Rico and may be invoked
65 as limiting or restricting the authority of Congress, or for the protection of the people of that island. And it is said

1 that there is a clear distinction between such prohibitions "as go to the very root of the power of Congress to act
2 at all, irrespective of time or place, and such as are operative only 'throughout the United States' or among the
3 several States." In the enforcement of this suggestion it is said in one of the opinions just delivered: "Thus, when
4 the Constitution declares that 'no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed,' and that 'no title of
5 nobility shall be granted by the United States,' it goes to the competency of Congress to pass a bill of that
6 description." I cannot accept this reasoning as consistent with the Constitution or with sound rules of 7 interpretation. The express prohibition upon the passage by Congress of bills of attainder, or of ex post facto
8 laws, or the granting of titles of nobility, goes no more directly to the root of the power of Congress than does the 9 express prohibition against the imposition by Congress of any <sup>384</sup>*<sup>384</sup> duty, impost or excise that is not uniform
10 throughout the United States. The opposite theory, I take leave to say, is quite as extraordinary as that which
11 assumes that Congress may exercise powers outside of the Constitution, and may, in its discretion, legislate
12 that instrument into or out of a domestic territory of the United States.

13 In the opinion to which I have referred it is suggested that conditions may arise when the annexation of distant
14 possessions may be desirable. "If," says that opinion, "those possessions are inhabited by alien races, differing
15 from us in religion, customs, laws, methods of taxation and modes of thought, the administration of government
16 and justice, according to Anglo-Saxon principles, may for a time be impossible; and the question at once arises
17 whether large concessions ought not to be made for a time, that ultimately our own theories may be carried out,
18 and the blessings of a free government under the Constitution extended to them. We decline to hold that there is 19 anything in the Constitution to forbid such action." In my judgment, the Constitution does not sustain any such 20 theory of our governmental system. Whether a particular race will or will not assimilate with our people, and
21 whether they can or cannot with safety to our institutions be brought within the operation of the Constitution, is 22 a matter to be thought of when it is proposed to acquire their territory by treaty. A mistake in the acquisition of 23 territory, although such acquisition seemed at the time to be necessary, cannot be made the ground for violating
24 the Constitution or refusing to give full effect to its provisions. The Constitution is not to be obeyed or disobeyed
25 as the circumstances of a particular crisis in our history may suggest the one or the other course to be pursued.
26 The People have decreed that it shall be the supreme law of the land at all times. When the acquisition of 27 territory becomes complete, by cession, the Constitution necessarily becomes the supreme law of such new 28 territory, and no power exists in any Department of the Government to make "concessions" that are 29 inconsistent with its provisions. The authority to make such concessions implies the existence in Congress of 30 power to declare that constitutional provisions may be ignored under special or <sup>385</sup>*<sup>385</sup> embarrassing
31 circumstances. No such dispensing power exists in any branch of our Government. The Constitution is 32 supreme over every foot of territory, wherever situated, under the jurisdiction of the United States, and its full
33 operation cannot be stayed by any branch of the Government in order to meet what some may suppose to be
34 extraordinary emergencies. If the Constitution is in force in any territory, it is in force there for every purpose
35 embraced by the objects for which the Government was ordained. Its authority cannot be displaced by 36 concessions, even if it be true, as asserted in argument in some of these cases, that if the tariff act took effect in 37 the Philippines of its own force, the inhabitants of Mandanao, who live on imported rice, would starve, because 38 the import duty is many fold more than the ordinary cost of the grain to them. The meaning of the Constitution
39 cannot depend upon accidental circumstances arising out of the products of other countries or of this country.
40 We cannot violate the Constitution in order to serve particular interests in our own or in foreign lands. Even 41 this court, with its tremendous power, must heed the mandate of the Constitution. No one in official station, to 42 whatever department of the Government he belongs, can disobey its commands without violating the obligation
43 of the oath he has taken. By whomsoever and wherever power is exercised in the name and under the authority
44 of the United States, or of any branch of its Government, the validity or invalidity of that which is done must be
45 determined by the Constitution.

46 In DeLima v. Bidwell, just decided, we have held that upon the ratification of the treaty with Spain, Porto Rico
47 ceased to be a foreign country and became a domestic territory of the United States. We have said in that case 48 that from 1803 to the present time there was not a shred of authority, except a dictum in one case, "for holding 49 that a district ceded to and in possession of the United States remains for any purpose a foreign territory;" that
50 territory so acquired cannot be "domestic for one purpose and foreign for another;" and that any judgment to the
51 contrary would be "pure judicial legislation," for which there was no warrant in the Constitution or in the powers
52 conferred upon this court. Although, as we have just decided, <sup>386</sup>*<sup>386</sup> Porto Rico ceased, after the ratification
53 of the treaty with Spain, to be a foreign country within the meaning of the tariff act, and became a domestic
54 country — "a territory of the United States" — it is said that if Congress so wills it may be controlled and governed
55 outside of the Constitution and by the exertion of the powers which other nations have been accustomed to 56 exercise with respect to territories acquired by them; in other words, we may solve the question of the power of 57 Congress under the Constitution, by referring to the powers that may be exercised by other nations. I cannot 58 assent to this view. I reject altogether the theory that Congress, in its discretion, can exclude the Constitution
59 from a domestic territory of the United States, acquired, and which could only have been acquired, in virtue of 60 the Constitution. I cannot agree that it is a domestic territory of the United States for the purpose of preventing 61 the application of the tariff act imposing duties upon imports from foreign countries, but not a part of the United
62 States for the purpose of enforcing the constitutional requirement that all duties, imposts and excises imposed by
63 Congress "shall be uniform throughout the United States." How Porto Rico can be a domestic territory of the 64 United States, as distinctly held in DeLima v. Bidwell, and yet, as is now held, not embraced by the words
65 "throughout the United States," is more than I can understand.

66 We heard much in argument about the "expanding future of our country." It was said that the United States is to 67 become what is called a "world power;" and that if this Government intends to keep abreast of the times and be 68 equal to the great destiny that awaits the American people, it must be allowed to exert all the power that other nations are accustomed to exercise. My answer is, that the fathers never intended that the authority and influence of this nation should be exerted otherwise than in accordance with the Constitution. If our Government needs more power than is conferred upon it by the Constitution, that instrument provides the mode in which it may be amended and additional power thereby obtained. The People of the United States who ordained the Constitution never supposed that a change could be made in our system of government 387*387 by mere judicial interpretation. They never contemplated any such juggling with the words of the Constitution as would authorize the courts to hold that the words "throughout the United States," in the taxing clause of the Constitution, do not embrace a domestic "territory of the United States" having a civil government established by the authority of the United States. This is a distinction which I am unable to make, and which I do not think ought to be made when we are endeavoring to ascertain the meaning of a great instrument of government.

[Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Justice Harlan, Dissenting]

Could it possibly be doubted that if Congress has been handed by the U.S. Supreme Court ANY CIRCUMSTANCE in which it can exercise its discretion in a way that COMPLETELY disregards the entire constitution, that they would not succumb to the temptation to enact it, expand it, and make it apply through trickery to everyone, as they have done with the income tax and federal franchises in general? NOT!

"In every government on earth is some trace of human weakness, some germ of corruption and degeneracy, which cunning will discover, and wickedness insensibly open, cultivate and improve."

[Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XIV, 1782. ME 2:207]

THIS in fact, is what Justice Harlan was talking about in the following excerpt in the above:

"These are words of weighty import. They involve consequences of the most momentous character. I take leave to say that if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will be the result. We will, in that event, pass from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative absolutism."

"This nation is under the control of a written constitution, the supreme law of the land and the only source of the powers which our Government, or any branch or officer of it, may exert at any time or at any place. Monarchical and despotic governments, unrestrained by written constitutions, may do with newly acquired territories what this Government may not do consistently with our fundamental law. To say otherwise is to concede that Congress may, by action taken outside of the Constitution, engraft upon our republican institutions a colonial system such as exists under monarchical governments. Surely such a result was never contemplated by the fathers of the Constitution. If that instrument had contained a word suggesting the possibility of a result of that character it would never have been adopted by the People of the United States. The idea that this country may acquire territories anywhere upon the earth, by conquest or treaty, and hold them as mere colonies or provinces — the people inhabiting them to enjoy only such rights as Congress chooses to accord to them — is wholly inconsistent with the spirit and genius as well as with the words of the Constitution."

"The idea prevails with some — indeed, it found expression in arguments at the bar — that we have in this country substantially or practically two national governments: one, to be maintained under the Constitution, with all its restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside and independently of that instrument, by exercising such powers as other nations of the earth are accustomed to exercise." It is one thing to give such a latitudinarian construction to the Constitution as will bring the exercise of power by Congress, upon a particular occasion or upon a particular subject, within its provisions. It is quite a different thing to say that Congress may, if it so elects, proceed outside of the Constitution. "To what purpose," Chief Justice Marshall said in Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 176, "are powers limited, and to what purpose is that limitation committed to writing, if these limits may, at any time, be passed by those intended to be restrained? The distinction between a government with limited and unlimited powers is abolished if those limits do not confine the persons on whom they are imposed, and if acts prohibited and acts allowed are of equal obligation."

Justice Harlan is saying that we now have a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde government. They did in fact do what he predicted: Graft a monarchical colonial system for federal territory onto an egalitarian free republican system. Starting with the Downes case, the U.S. Supreme Court declared and recognized essentially that:

1. NO PART of the Constitution limits what the national government can do in a territory, including the prohibition against Titles of Nobility and even ex post facto laws.
2. As long as Congress is legislating for territories, it can do whatever it wants, including an income tax, just like every other nation of the earth. In fact, this is the source of all the authority for enacting the income tax to begin with.
3. If Congress wants to invade the states commercially and tax them, all it has to do is:
  - 3.1. Write such legislation ONLY for the territories and implement it as a franchise. Since all franchises are based on contract, then they can be enforced extraterritorially, including in a state. This is the basis for the Social Security Act of 1935, in fact.

Debt and contract [franchise agreement, in this case] are of no particular place.

"It is generally conceded that a franchise is the subject of a contract between the grantor and the grantee, and that it does in fact constitute a contract when the requisite element of a consideration is present.<sup>318</sup> Conversely, a franchise granted without consideration is not a contract binding upon the state, franchisee, or pseudo-franchisee.<sup>319</sup> "

3.2. Entice people in states of the Union with a bribe to sign up for the territorial franchise, and make it IMPOSSIBLE to quit the system. This uses capitalism to implement socialism.

3.3. Through legal deception and fraud, make the franchise legislation LOOK like:

3.3.1. It applies to CONSTITUTIONAL states rather than only STATUTORY "States" and territories.

3.3.2. It ISN'T a franchise or excise.

These things are done through "equivocation", in which TERRITORIAL STATUTORY "States" under 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and CONSTITUTIONAL States of the Union are made to appear and act the same. This was also done in the Sixteenth Amendment, which granted no new powers to Congress, as held by the U.S. Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916). See:

Why You Aren't Eligible for Social Security, Form #06.001

3.4. Establish a EXTRACONSTITUTIONAL revenue collection apparatus that is NOT part of the constitutional government. Namely the I.R.S. is not now and never has been part of the U.S. Government. Instead, it is a straw man for the Federal Reserve. The Federal Reserve, in fact, is not more governmental than Federal Express. See:

3.5. Use propaganda and abusive regulation of the banking system and employers to turn banks and private companies in states of the Union into federal employment recruiters, in which you can't open an account or pursue

3.6. Bribe CONSTITUTIONAL states with “commercial incentives” or subsidies if they in essence agree by compact or agreement to act as federal territories and allow the income tax to be enforced within their borders. This is done through DEBT and the Federal Reserve as well as the Agreements on Coordination of Tax Administration (A.C.T.A.) between the national government and the states. Now obviously, they can only do that within ENCLAVES within their external borders using the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939, but they will PRETEND for the sake of filthy lucre that it applies EVERYWHERE in the state by:

3.6.1. Not defining the term “State” within their revenue codes.

3.6.2. Calling those who insist on these limits “frivolous” in court.

3.7. Engage in an ongoing propaganda campaign to discredit and persecute all those who expose and try to remedy the above. This is done by making the government UNACCOUNTABLE for the truth or accuracy of ANYTHING it says or does administratively. We have been a target of that campaign. See:

Reasonable Belief About Income Tax Liability, Form #05.007
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

3.8. Legislatively create a conflict of interest in the judges administering the territorial franchise so that they will be forced to apply it to the states of the Union.

3.9. Get the U.S. Supreme Court, through pressure on individual justices, to allow the financial conflict of interest to stand and expand.

3.10. Use the U.S. Supreme Court as a method to embargo challenges to the above illegalities by denying appeals. This was done using the Certiorari Act of 1925 proposed by former President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft. This was the same President who proposed the Sixteenth Amendment and FRAUDULENTLY got it passed by lame duck Secretary of State Philander Knox.<sup>320</sup>

That last step: creating a conflict of interest in judges was accomplished starting in 1918, right after Downes v. Bidwell and just after the Sixteenth Amendment and Federal Reserve Act were passed in 1913. In particular, here is how it was accomplished:

1. Making judges into “taxpayers” started in 1918. This allowed them to become the target of political persecution by the Bureau of Internal Revenue if they properly enforce and protect the civil status of parties.

1.1. This began first with the Revenue Act of 1918, 40 Stat. 1065, Section 213(a) and was declared unconstitutional.

1.2. The second attempt to make judges taxpayers occurred the Revenue Act of 1932, 47 Stat. 169 and this time it stuck.

1.3. This conflict of interest is also documented in Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920), Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501 (1925), O'Malley v. Woodrough, 309 U.S. 277 (1939), and U.S. v. Hatter, 532 U.S. 557, 121 S.Ct. 1782, (2001).

2. Judges have been allowed, illegally, to serve as BOTH franchise judges under Article IV of the Constitution and CONSTITUTIONAL judges under Article III. When given a choice of the two, they will always pick the Article IV franchise judge status, because it financially rewards them and unduly elevates their own importance and jurisdiction.

3. The IRS is allowed to financially reward judges and prosecutors for convicting those who do not consent to the identity theft. See 26 U.S.C. §7623, I.R.M. 25.2.2.

The above process is EXACTLY what they have done. From the 10,000 foot or MACRO view, it essentially amounts to identity theft. That identity theft is exhaustively described in the following:

Government Identity Theft, Form #05.046
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The rest of this document essentially describes how that identity theft is accomplished by the abuse of conflict of interest, the rules of statutory interpretation, and equivocation from a general perspective. That language abuse is also particularized in the above document to specific other legal contexts, such as:

<sup>320</sup> See: The Law that Never Was, William Benson. It documents the fraudulent ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment. See also Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 6.6.1; <http://famguardian.org/Publications/GreatIRSHoax/GreatIRSHoax.htm>.

1. Domicile identity theft.
2. Citizenship identity theft.
3. Franchise identity theft.

Ultimately, however, all of the identity theft they employ is accomplished by misrepresenting their authority and enforcing laws outside their territory. It really boils down to:

1. Replacing PRIVATE rights with PUBLIC privileges.
2. Turning “citizens” and “residents” into the equivalent of government public officers or employees.
3. Turning all civil law essentially into the employment agreement of virtually everyone who claims to be a STATUTORY “citizen” or “resident”.
4. A commercial invasion of the states of the Union in violation of Article 4, Section 4.
5. The abuse of franchises and privileges within the states of the Union to create a caste system that emulates the British Monarchy we tried to escape by fighting a revolution.
6. Using the civil statutory law as a mechanism to limit and control PEOPLE rather than the GOVERNMENT.
7. Creating a government of UNLIMITED powers. There are no limits on what an EMPLOYER can order his EMPLOYEES or OFFICERS to do, and THAT is what you are if you claim to be a STATUTORY “citizen” under any act of Congress.
8. Using “selective enforcement” to discredit and destroy all those who attempt to QUIT their job as a government officer or employee called a STATUTORY “citizen” or “resident”. THIS is how the fraudulent identity theft scheme and government mafia protects and expands itself.

6.3 How Scoundrels Corrupted Our Republican Form of Government

"All systems of government suppose they are to be administered by men of common sense and common honesty. In our country, as all ultimately depends on the voice of the people, they have it in their power, and it is to be presumed they generally will choose men of this description: but if they will not, the case, to be sure, is without remedy. If they choose fools, they will have foolish laws. If they choose knaves, they will have knavish ones. But this can never be the case until they are generally fools or knaves themselves, which, thank God, is not likely ever to become the character of the American people." [Justice Iredell] (Fries's Case (CC) F Cas No 5126, supra.)
[Ludecke v. Watkins, 335 U.S. 160, 92 L.Ed. 1881, 1890, 68 S.Ct. 1429 (1948)]

"The chief enemies of republican freedom are mental sloth, conformity, bigotry, superstition, credulity, monopoly in the market of ideas, and utter, benighted ignorance."

6.3.1 Original Design of our Republic

We very thoroughly covered the foundations of our republican form of government earlier in chapter 4. We showed you in section 4.1 the hierarchy of sovereignty and where you fit personally in that hierarchy. We showed you in section 4.4.1 that Article 4, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution guarantees to all Americans a “republican form of government”. Then in section 5.1.1 we showed you the order that our state and federal governments were created and the distinct sovereignties that comprise all the elements of our republican (not democratic) political system. Now we are going to tie the whole picture together and show you graphically the tools and techniques that specific covetous government servants have used over the years to corrupt and debase that system for their own personal financial and political benefit.

"The king establishes the land by justice; but he who receives bribes overthrows it."
[Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

After you have learned these techniques by which corruption was introduced, we will spend the rest of the chapter showing exactly how these techniques have been specifically applied over the years to corrupt and debase and destroy our political system and undermine our personal liberties, rights, and freedoms. This will train your perception to be on the lookout for any future attempts by our covetous politicians to further corrupt our system so that you can act swiftly at a political level to oppose and prevent it.

First of all, the foundation of our republican form of government is all the following as a group:

1. Sovereign power held by the People through their direct participation in the affairs of government as jurists and voters.

1 "The sovereignty of a state does not reside in the persons who fill the different departments of its government, but
2 in the People, from whom the government emanated; and they may change it at their discretion. Sovereignty, then
3 in this country, abides with the constituency, and not with the agent; and this remark is true, both in reference to 4 the federal and state government."
5 [Spooner v. McConnell, 22 F. 939, 943]

7 "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in the government of the United States .... In this
8 country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can exercise no power which they have not, by their 9 Constitution entrusted to it: All else is withheld."
10 [Julliard v. Greenman: 110 U.S. 421, (1884)]

- 11 2. All powers exercised by government are directly delegated to those serving in government by the people, both 12 collectively and individually.

13 "The question is not what power the federal government ought to have, but what powers, in fact, have been given
14 by the people... The federal union is a government of delegated powers. It has only such as are expressly conferred
15 upon it, and such as are reasonably to be implied from those granted. In this respect, we differ radically from 16 nations where all legislative power, without restriction or limitation, is vested in a parliament or other legislative 17 body subject to no restriction except the discretion of its members." (Congress)
18 [U.S. v. William M. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936)]

19 "The Government of the United States is one of delegated powers alone. Its authority is defined and limited by 20 the Constitution. All powers not granted to it by that instrument are reserved to the States or the people."
21 [United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

22 "It is again to antagonize Chief Justice Marshall, when he said: 'The government of the Union, then (whatever 23 may be the influence of this fact on the case), is emphatically and truly a government of the people. In form and 24 in substance it emanates from them. Its powers are granted by them, and are to be exercised directly on them and 25 for their benefit. This government is acknowledged by all to be one of enumerated powers.' 4 Wheat. 404, 4 L.Ed.
26 601."
27 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

28 The implication is that the people AS INDIVIDUALS are EQUAL to the government in the eyes of the law because 29 you can't delegate what you don't have:

30 "Derativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva.
31 The power which is derived cannot be greater than that from which it is derived."

32 Nemo dat qui non habet. No one can give who does not possess. Jenk. Cent. 250.

33 Nemo plus juris ad alienum transfere potest, quam ispe habent. One cannot transfer to another a right which he 34 has not. Dig. 50, 17, 54; 10 Pet. 161, 175.

35 Nemo potest facere per alium quod per se non potest. No one can do that by another which he cannot do by 36 himself.

37 Qui per alium facit per seipsum facere videtur. He who does anything through another, is considered as doing it
38 himself. Co. Litt. 258.

39 Quicquid acquiritur servo, acquiritur domino. Whatever is acquired by the servant, is acquired for the master.
40 15 Bin. Ab. 327.

41 Quod per me non possum, nec per alium. What I cannot do in person, I cannot do by proxy. 4 Co. 24.

42 What a man cannot transfer, he cannot bind by articles.

- 45 3. Separation of powers between three branches of government. That separation is described in:

Government Conspiracy to Destroy the Separation of Powers, Form #05.023

<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 46 4. Distinct separation of property rights between PUBLIC and PRIVATE. By "public" we mean GOVERNMENT
47 property. That separation is described in:

Separation Between Public and Private Course, Form #12.025
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

1 Without ALL of the above, every government becomes corrupt and turns into a de facto government as described in:

De Facto Government Scam, Form #05.043
<https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

2 The concept separation of powers is called the "Separation of Powers Doctrine":

3 "Separation of powers. The governments of the states and the United States are divided into three departments
 4 or branches: the legislative, which is empowered to make laws, the executive which is required to carry out the
 5 laws, and the judicial which is charged with interpreting the laws and adjudicating disputes under the laws.
 6 Under this constitutional doctrine of "separation of powers," one branch is not permitted to encroach on the
 7 domain or exercise the powers of another branch. See U.S. Constitution, Articles I-III. See also Power
 8 (Constitutional Powers)."
 9 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1365]

10 Here is how no less than the U.S. Supreme Court described the purpose of this separation of powers:

11 "We start with first principles. The Constitution creates a Federal Government of enumerated powers. See U.S.
 12 Const., Art. I, 8. As James Madison wrote, "[t]he powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal 13 government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and 14 indefinite." The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). This constitutionally 20 of tyranny and abuse from either front." Ibid.

 21 [U.S. v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995) ]

22 The founding fathers believed that men were inherently corrupt. They believed that absolute power corrupts absolutely so
 23 they avoided concentrating too much power into any single individual.

24 "When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the 25 center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become 26 as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated."
 27 [Thomas Jefferson to Charles Hammond, 1821. ME 15:332 ]

28 "Our government is now taking so steady a course as to show by what road it will pass to destruction; to wit: by 29 consolidation first and then corruption, its necessary consequence. The engine of consolidation will be the 30 Federal judiciary; the two other branches the corrupting and corrupted instruments."
 31 [Thomas Jefferson to Nathaniel Macon, 1821. ME 15:341 ]

32 "The [federal] judiciary branch is the instrument which, working like gravity, without intermission, is to press us 33 at last into one consolidated mass."
 34 [Thomas Jefferson to Archibald Thweat, 1821. ME 15:307 ]

35 "There is no danger I apprehend so much as the consolidation of our government by the noiseless and therefore 36 unalarming instrumentality of the Supreme Court."
 37 [Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:421 ]

38 "I wish... to see maintained that wholesome distribution of powers established by the Constitution for the 39 limitation of both [the State and General governments], and never to see all offices transferred to Washington
 40 where, further withdrawn from the eyes of the people, they may more secretly be bought and sold as at market."
 41 [Thomas Jefferson to William Johnson, 1823. ME 15:450 ]

42 "What an augmentation of the field for jobbing, speculating, plundering, office-building and office-hunting would 43 be produced by an assumption of all the State powers into the hands of the General Government!"
 44 [Thomas Jefferson to Gideon Granger, 1800. ME 10:168 ]

"I see,... and with the deepest affliction, the rapid strides with which the federal branch of our government is advancing towards the usurpation of all the rights reserved to the States, and the consolidation in itself of all powers, foreign and domestic; and that, too, by constructions which, if legitimate, leave no limits to their power... It is but too evident that the three ruling branches of [the Federal government] are in combination to strip their colleagues, the State authorities, of the powers reserved by them, and to exercise themselves all functions foreign and domestic."

[Thomas Jefferson to William Branch Giles, 1825. ME 16:146 ]

"We already see the [judiciary] power, installed for life, responsible to no authority (for impeachment is not even a scare-crow), advancing with a noiseless and steady pace to the great object of consolidation. The foundations are already deeply laid by their decisions for the annihilation of constitutional State rights and the removal of every check, every counterpoise to the engulfing power of which themselves are to make a sovereign part."

[Thomas Jefferson to William T. Barry, 1822. ME 15:388]

For further quotes supporting the above, see:

Thomas Jefferson on Politics and Government

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Politics/ThomasJefferson/jeff1060.htm>

They instead wanted an egalitarian and utopian society. They loathed the idea of a king because they had seen how corrupt the monarchies of Europe had become by reading the history books. They loathed it so much that they specifically prohibited titles of nobility in Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8:

U.S. Constitution; Article I, Section 9, Clause 8

No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign State.

So the founders instead distributed and dispersed political power into several independent branches of government that have sovereign power over a finite sphere and prohibited the branches from assuming each other's duties. This, they believed, would prevent collusion against their rights and liberties. They therefore divided the government into the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches and made them independent of each other, and assigned very specific duties to each. In effect, these three branches became "foreign" to each other and in constant competition with each other for power and control.

The founders further dispersed political power by dividing power between the several states and the federal government and gave most of the power to the states. They gave each state their own seats in Congress, in the Senate. They made the states just like "foreign countries" and independent nations so that there would be the greatest separation of powers possible between the federal government and the states:

"The States between each other are sovereign and independent. They are distinct and separate sovereignties, except so far as they have parted with some of the attributes of sovereignty by the Constitution. They continue to be nations, with all their rights, and under all their national obligations, and with all the rights of nations in every particular; except in the surrender by each to the common purposes and objects of the Union, under the Constitution. The rights of each State, when not so yielded up, remain absolute."*

Then the founders created multiple states so that the states would be in competition with each other for citizens and for commerce. When one state got too oppressive or taxed people too much, the people could then move to an economically more attractive state and climate. This kept the states from oppressing their citizens and it gave the people a means to keep their state and their government in check. Then they put the federal government in charge of regulating commerce among and between the states, and the intention of this was to maximize, not obstruct, commerce between the states so that we would act as a unified economic union and like a country. Even so, they didn't want our country to be a "nation" under the law of nations, because they didn't want a national government with unlimited powers. They wanted a "federation", so they called our central government the "federal government" instead of a "national government". To give us a "national government" would be a recipe for tyranny:

“By that law the several States and Governments spread over our globe, are considered as forming a society, not a NATION.

It has only been by a very few comprehensive minds, such as those of Elizabeth and the Fourth Henry, that this last great idea has been even contemplated. 3rdly. and chiefly, I shall examine the important question before us, by the Constitution of the United States, and the legitimate result of that valuable instrument. “
[Chisholm v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 440 (1793)]

The ingenious founders also made the people the sovereigns in charge of both the state and federal governments by giving them a Bill of Rights and mandating frequent elections. Frequent elections:

1. Ensured that rulers would not be in office long enough to learn enough to get sneaky with the people or abuse their power.
2. Kept the rulers accountable to the people and provided a prompt feedback mechanism to make sure politicians and rulers were incentivized to listen to the people.
3. Created a stable political system that would automatically converge onto the will of the majority so that the country would be at peace instead of at war within itself.

The founders even gave the people their own house in Congress called the House of Representatives, so that the power between the states, in the Senate, and the People, in the House, would be well-balanced. They also made sure that these sovereign electors and citizens were well armed with a good education, so they could keep their government in check and capably defend their freedom, property, and liberty by themselves. When things got rough and governments became corrupt, these rugged and self-sufficient citizens were also guaranteed the right to defend their property using arms that the U.S. Constitution said in the Second Amendment that they had a right to keep and use. This ensured that citizens wouldn't need to depend on the government for a handout or socialist benefits and wouldn't have to worry about having a government that would plunder their property or their liberty.

Finally, the founding fathers created the institution of trial by jury, so that if government got totally corrupt and passed unjust laws that violated God's laws, the people could put themselves back in control through jury nullification. This also effectively dealt with the problem of corrupt judges, because both the jury and the grand jury could override the judge as well when they detected a conflict of interest by judging both the facts and the law. Here is how Thomas Jefferson described the duty of the jury in such a circumstance:

“It is left... to the juries, if they think the permanent judges are under any bias whatever in any cause, to take on themselves to judge the law as well as the fact. They never exercise this power but when they suspect partiality in the judges; and by the exercise of this power they have been the firmest bulwarks of English liberty.”

[Thomas Jefferson to Abbe Arnoux, 1789. ME 7:423, Papers 15:283]

Then the founders separated church and state and put the state and the church in competition with each other to protect and nurture the people. We talked about this church/state separation and dual sovereignty earlier in section 4.3.6.

The design that our founding fathers had for our political system was elegant, unique, unprecedented, ingenious, perfectly balanced, and inherently just. It was founded on the concept of Natural Order and Natural Law, which as we explained in section 4.1 are based on the sequence that things were created. This concept made sense, even to people who didn't believe in God, so it had wide support among a very diverse country of immigrants from all over the world and of many different religious faiths. Natural Law and Natural Order unified our country because it was just and fair and righteous. That is the basis for the phrase on our currency, which says:

“E Pluribus Unum”

...which means: “From many, one.” Our system of Natural Law and Natural Order also happened to be based on God's sovereign design for self-government, as we explained throughout chapter 4. The founders also recognized that liberty without God and morality are impossible:

“We have no government armed with the power capable of contending with human passions unbridled by morality and religion. Avarice [greed], ambition, revenge, or gallantry [debauchery], would break the strongest cords of our Constitution as a whale goes through a net. Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other.”

1 So the founders included the requirement for BOTH God and Liberty on all of our currency. They put the phrase “In God
2 We Trust” and the phrase “Liberty” side by side, and they were probably thinking of the following scripture when they did
3 that!:

4 “Now the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.”
5 [2 Cor. 3:17, Bible, NKJV]

6 By creating such distinct separation of powers among all the forces of government, the founders ensured that the only way
7 anything would get done within government was exclusively by informed consent and not by force or terror. The Declaration
8 of Independence identifies the source of ALL "just" government power as "consent". Anything not consensual is therefore 9 unjust and tyrannical. An informed and sovereign People will only do things voluntarily and consensually when it is in their
10 absolute best interests. This would ensure that government would never engage in anything that wasn't in the best interests
11 of everyone as a whole, because people, at least theoretically, would never consent to anything that would either hurt them
12 or injure their Constitutional rights. The Supreme Court described this kind of government by consent as "government by 13 compact":

14 “In Europe, the executive is synonymous with the sovereign power of a state...where it is too commonly acquired
15 by force or fraud, or both...In America, however the case is widely different. Our government is founded upon 16 compact [consent expressed in a written contract called a Constitution or in positive law]. Sovereignty was,
17 and is, in the people.”
18 [The Betsy, 3 (U.S.) Dall 6]

19 Here is the legal definition of “compact” to prove our point that the Constitution and all federal law written in furtherance of 20 it are indeed a “compact”:

21 “Compact, n. An agreement or contract between persons, nations, or states. Commonly applied to working 22 agreements between and among states concerning matters of mutual concern. A contract between parties, which 23 creates obligations and rights capable of being enforced and contemplated as such between the parties, in their 24 distinct and independent characters. A mutual consent of parties concerned respecting some property or right
25 that is the object of the stipulation, or something that is to be done or forborne. See also Compact clause;
26 Confederacy; Interstate compact; Treaty.”
27 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 281]

28 Enacting a mutual agreement into positive law then, becomes the vehicle for expressing the fact that the People collectively
29 agreed and consented to the law and to accept any adverse impact that law might have on their liberty. Public servants then,
30 are just the apparatus that the sovereign People use for governing themselves through the operation of positive law. As the 31 definition above shows, the apparatus and machinery of government is simply the “rudder” that steers the ship, but the 32 "Captain" of the ship is the People both individually and collectively. In a true Republican Form of Government, the REAL
33 government is the people individually and collectively, and not their "public servants". That is the true meaning of the 34 phrase "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people" used by Abraham Lincoln in the Gettysburg Address.

35 Our de jure Constitutional Republic started out as a perfectly balanced and just system indeed. But somewhere along the 36 way, it was deliberately corrupted by evil men for personal gain. Just like Cain (in the Bible) destroyed the tranquility and
37 peace of an idyllic world and divided the family of Adam by first introducing murder into the world, greedy politicians who 38 wanted to line their pockets corrupted our wonderful system and brought evil into our government. How did it happen? They 39 did it with a combination of force, fraud, and the corrupting influence of money. This process can be shown graphically and
40 described in scientific terms over a period of years to show precisely how it was done. We will now attempt to do this so that 41 the process is crystal clear in your mind. What we are trying to show are the following elements in our diagram:

- 42 1. The distinct sovereignties between governments:
  - 43 1.1. States
  - 44 1.2. The federal government
- 45 2. The sovereignties within governments:
  - 46 2.1. Executive branch
  - 47 2.2. Legislative branch
  - 48 2.3. Judicial branch
- 49 3. The hierarchy of sovereignty between all the sovereignties based on their sequence of creation.
- 50 4. The corrupting influence of force, fraud, and money, including the branch that initiated it, the date it was initiated, and 51 the object it was initiated against.

1 To meet the above objectives, we will start off with the diagram found in section 5.1.1 and expand it with some of the added
2 elements found in the Natural Order diagram found earlier in section 4.1. To the bottom of the diagram, we add the Ten
3 Commandments, which establishes the “Separation of Church v. State”. The first four commandments in Exodus 20:2-11
4 establish the church and the last six commandments found in Exodus 20:12-17 define how we should relate to other people,
5 who Jesus later called our “neighbor” in Matt. 22:39. The main and only purpose of government is to love and protect and
6 serve its inhabitants and citizens, who collectively are "neighbors". What results is a schematic diagram of the initial political
7 system that the founders gave us absent all corruption. This is called the “De jure U.S. Government”. It is the only lawful
8 government we have and its organization is defined by our Constitution. It’s organization is also defined by the Bible, which 9 we also call "Natural Law" throughout this document.

2 Each box in the above diagram represents a sovereignty or sovereign entity that helps distribute power throughout our system
 3 of government to prevent corruption or tyranny. The arrows with dark ends indicate an act of creation by the sovereign above. That act of creation carries with it an implied delegation of authority to do specific tasks and establishes a fiduciary relationship between the Creator, and his subordinate creation. The above system as shown functions properly and fully and provides the best defense for our liberties only when there is complete separation between each sovereignty, which is to say that all actions performed and all choices made by any one sovereign:

1. Are completely free of fraud, force, conflict of interest, or duress.
2. Are accomplished completely voluntarily, which is to say that they are done for the mutual benefit of all parties involved rather than any one single party exercising undue influence.
3. Involve fully informed consent made with a full awareness by all parties to the agreement of all rights which are being surrendered to procure any imputed benefits.
4. Are done mainly or exclusively for the benefit of the Sovereign above the agent who is the actor.
5. Are done for righteous reasons and noble intent, meaning that they are accomplished for the benefit of someone else rather than one's own personal or financial benefit. This requirement is the foundation of what a fiduciary relationship means and also the only way that conflicts of interest and the corruption they can cause can be eliminated.

6.3.2 Main Technique of Corruption: Introduce Franchises to replace UNALIENABLE PRIVATE Rights with REVOCABLE PUBLIC Statutory PRIVILEGES

*"The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower [is] servant to the lender."
[Prov. 22:7, Bible, NKJV]*

The secret to how scoundrels corrupt our republic based on inalienable rights and replace it with a democracy based on revocable statutory privileges is to offer to loan you government property with conditions or legal strings attached. That process is called a "franchise". The Bible and the U.S. Supreme Court both describe EXACTLY, from a legal perspective, WHEN AND HOW you personally facilitate this inversion of the de jure hierarchy in the previous section to make public servants into masters and make you the sovereign into a government employee or officer. It is done with loans of government property that have legal strings attached. This loan is what we call "government franchises" (Form #05.030) on our website. The word "privilege" in fact is synonymous with loans of absolutely owned GOVERNMENT property and the legal strings attached to the loan.

*"The rich rules over the poor,
And the borrower is servant to the lender."
[Prov. 22:7, Bible, NKJV]*

*"The State in such cases exercises no greater right than an individual may exercise over the use of his own property when leased or loaned to others. The conditions upon which the privilege shall be enjoyed being stated or implied in the legislation authorizing its grant, no right is, of course, impaired by their enforcement. The recipient of the privilege, in effect, stipulates to comply with the conditions. It matters not how limited the privilege conferred, its acceptance implies an assent to the regulation of its use and the compensation for it."
[Munn v. Illinois, 94 U.S. 113 (1876)]*

Curses of Disobedience [to God's Laws]

"The alien [Washington, D.C. is legislatively "alien" in relation to states of the Union] who is among you shall rise higher and higher above you, and you shall come down lower and lower [malicious destruction of EQUAL PROTECTION and EQUAL TREATMENT by abusing FRANCHISES]. He shall lend to you [Federal Reserve counterfeiting franchise], but you shall not lend to him; he shall be the head, and you shall be the tail.

"Moreover all these curses shall come upon you and pursue and overtake you, until you are destroyed, because you did not obey the voice of the Lord your God, to keep His commandments and His statutes which He commanded you. And they shall be upon you for a sign and a wonder, and on your descendants forever.

"Because you did not serve [ONLY] the Lord your God with joy and gladness of heart, for the abundance of everything, therefore you shall serve your [covetous thieving lawyer] enemies, whom the Lord will send against you, in hunger, in thirst, in nakedness, and in need of everything; and He will put a yoke of iron [franchise codes] on your neck until He has destroyed you. The Lord will bring a nation against you from afar [the District of CRIMINALS], from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flies [the American Eagle], a nation whose language [LEGALESE] you will not understand, a nation of fierce [coercive and fascist] countenance, which does not respect the elderly [assassinates them by denying them healthcare through bureaucratic delays on an Obamacare waiting list] nor show favor to the young [destroying their ability to learn in the public FOOL system]. And they

1 shall eat the increase of your livestock and the produce of your land [with “trade or business” franchise taxes],
 2 until you [and all your property] are destroyed [or STOLEN/CONFISCATED]; they shall not leave you grain
 3 or new wine or oil, or the increase of your cattle or the offspring of your flocks, until they have destroyed you.
 4 [Deut. 28:43-51, Bible, NKJV]

5 The problem with all such loans is that the covetous de facto \(Form #05.043\) government offering them can theoretically
 6 attach ANY condition they want to the loan. If the property is something that is life threatening to do without, then they can
 7 destroy ALL of your constitutional rights and leave you with no judicial or legal remedy whatsoever for the loss of your
 8 fundamental or natural PRIVATE rights and otherwise PRIVATE property! This, in fact, is EXACTLY what Pharaoh
 9 did to the Israelites during the famine in Egypt, described in Genesis 47.

10 *“But when Congress creates a statutory right [a “privilege” or “public right” in this case, such as a “trade or 11 business”], it clearly has the discretion, in defining that right, to create presumptions, or assign burdens of 12 proof, or prescribe remedies; it may also provide that persons seeking to vindicate that right must do so before
 13 particularized tribunals created to perform the specialized adjudicative tasks related to that right. FN35 Such
 14 provisions do, in a sense, affect the exercise of judicial power, but they are also incidental to Congress’ power
 15 to define the right that it has created. No comparable justification exists, however, when the right being 16 adjudicated is not of congressional creation. In such a situation, substantial inroads into functions that have 17 traditionally been performed by the Judiciary cannot be characterized merely as incidental extensions of 18 Congress’ power to define rights that it has created. Rather, such inroads suggest unwarranted encroachments
 19 upon the judicial power of the United States, which our Constitution reserves for Art. III courts.”*
 20 [Northern Pipeline Const. Co. v. Marathon Pipe Line Co., 458 U.S. 50, 102 S.Ct. 2858 (1983)]

 22 The Court developed, for its own governance in the cases confessedly within its jurisdiction, a series of rules
 23 under which it has avoided passing upon a large part of all the constitutional questions pressed upon it for 24 decision. They are:

 35 *“The words “privileges” and “immunities,” like the greater part of the legal phraseology of this country, have
 36 been carried over from the law of Great Britain, and recur constantly either as such or in equivalent expressions
 37 from the time of Magna Charta. For all practical purposes they are synonymous in meaning, and originally 38 signified a peculiar right or private law conceded to particular persons or places whereby a certain individual
 39 or class of individuals was exempted from the rigor of the common law. Privilege or immunity is conferred upon 40 any person when he is invested with a legal claim to the exercise of special or peculiar rights, authorizing him to 41 enjoy some particular advantage or exemption.”*

49 Whether you know it or not, by accepting such physical or intangible property you are, in effect, manifesting your implied
 50 consent (assent) under the Uniform Commercial Code (U.C.C.) to enter into a contract with the government that offered it in
 51 the process. Lawyers commonly call this type of interaction a “quid pro quo”. That contract represents a constructive waiver
 52 of the sovereignty and sovereign immunity that comes from God Himself. Because the government is asking you to GIVE
 53 PRIVATE/CONSTITUTIONAL rights in relation to them as consideration that would otherwise be INALIENABLE \(Form
 54 #12.038\), they are acting in a private, non-governmental capacity as a de facto government \(Form #05.043\) with no real

That franchise contract \(Form #12.012\) will, almost inevitably, end up being an adhesion contract that will be extremely one-sided and will not only NOT "benefit" you (the "Buyer") in the aggregate, but will work an extreme injury, inequality, and injustice \(Form #05.050\) that God actually forbids:

Lending to the Poor

If one of your brethren becomes poor [desperate], and falls into poverty among you, then you shall help him, like a stranger or a sojourner transient foreigner and/or [non-resident non-person, Form #05.020], that he may live with you. Take no usury or interest from him; but fear your God, that your brother may live with you. You shall not lend him your money for usury, nor lend him your food at a profit. I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan and to be your God.

The Law Concerning Slavery

And if one of your brethren who dwells by you becomes poor, and sells himself to you, you shall not compel him to serve as a slave. As a hired servant and a sojourner he shall be with you, and shall serve you until the Year of Jubilee. And then he shall depart from you—he and his children with him—and shall return to his own family. He shall return to the possession of his fathers. For they are My servants [Form #13.007], whom I brought out of the land of Egypt; they shall not be sold as slaves. You shall not rule over him with rigor, but you shall fear your God.”

Adhesion Contract

A type of contract, a legally binding agreement between two parties to do a certain thing, in which one side has all the bargaining power and uses it to write the contract primarily to his or her advantage.

An example of an adhesion contract is a standardized contract form that offers goods or services to consumers on essentially a "take it or leave it" basis without giving consumers realistic opportunities to negotiate terms that would benefit their interests. When this occurs, the consumer cannot obtain the desired product or service unless he or she acquiesces to the form contract.

There is nothing unenforceable or even wrong about adhesion contracts. In fact, most businesses would never conclude their volume of transactions if it were necessary to negotiate all the terms of every Consumer Credit contract. Insurance contracts and residential leases are other kinds of adhesion contracts. This does not mean, however, that all adhesion contracts are valid. Many adhesion contracts are Unconscionable; they are so unfair to the weaker party that a court will refuse to enforce them. An example would be severe penalty provisions for failure to pay loan installments promptly that are physically hidden by small print located in the middle of an obscure paragraph of a lengthy loan agreement. In such a case a court can find that there is no meeting of the minds of the parties to the contract and that the weaker party has not accepted the terms of the contract.

adhesion contract (contract of adhesion)

n. a contract (often a signed form) so imbalanced in favor of one party over the other that there is a strong implication it was not freely bargained. Example: a rich landlord dealing with a poor tenant who has no choice and must accept all terms of a lease, no matter how restrictive or burdensome, since the tenant cannot afford to move. An adhesion contract can give the little guy the opportunity to claim in court that the contract with the big shot is invalid. This doctrine should be used and applied more often, but the same big guy-little guy inequity may apply in the ability to afford a trial or find and pay a resourceful lawyer. (See: contract)

The temptation of the offer of the government franchise as an adhesion contract is exhaustively described, personified, and even dramatized in the following:

1. The Temptation of Jesus by Satan on the Mountain in Matthew 4:1-11.

James Madison, whose notes were used to draft the Bill of Rights, predicted this perversion of the de jure Constitutional design, when he very insightfully said the following:

"With respect to the words general welfare, I have always regarded them as qualified by the detail of powers connected with them. To take them in a literal and unlimited sense would be a metamorphosis of the Constitution into a character which there is a host of proofs was not contemplated by its creator."

"If Congress can employ money indefinitely to the general welfare, and are the sole and supreme judges of the general welfare, they may take the care of religion into their own hands; they may appoint teachers in every State, county and parish and pay them out of their public treasury; they may take into their own hands the education of children, establishing in like manner schools throughout the Union; they may assume the provision of the poor; they may undertake the regulation of all roads other than post-roads; in short, every thing, from the highest object of state legislation down to the most minute object of police, would be thrown under the power of Congress.... Were the power of Congress to be established in the latitude contended for, it would subvert the very foundations, and transmute the very nature of the limited Government established by the people of America."

"If Congress can do whatever in their discretion can be done by money, and will promote the general welfare, the government is no longer a limited one possessing enumerated powers, but an indefinite one subject to particular exceptions."
[James Madison. House of Representatives, February 7, 1792, On the Cod Fishery Bill, granting Bounties]

The term "general welfare" is synonymous with "benefit" in franchise language. "general welfare" as used above is, in fact, the basis for the entire modern welfare state that will eventually lead to a massive financial collapse and crisis worldwide.<sup>321</sup> Anyone who therefore supports such a system is ultimately an anarchist intent on destroying our present dysfunctional government and thereby committing the crime of Treason.<sup>322</sup>

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016
<https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SocialismCivilReligion.pdf>

The Bible also describes how to REVERSE this inversion, how to restore our constitutional rights, and how to put public servants back in their role as servants rather than masters. Note that accepting custody or "benefit" or loans of government property in effect behaves as an act of contracting, because it accomplishes the same effect, which is to create implied "obligations" in a legal sense:

"If the time shall ever arrive when, for an object appealing, however strongly, to our sympathies, the dignity of the States shall bow to the dictation of Congress by conforming their legislation thereto, when the power and majesty and honor of those who created shall become subordinate to the thing of their creation, I but feebly utter my apprehensions when I express my firm conviction that we shall see 'the beginning of the end.'"
[Steward Machine Co. v. Davis, 310 U.S. 548, 606 (1937)]

1 "For the Lord your God will bless you just as He promised you; you shall lend to many nations, but you shall
 2 not borrow; you shall reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over you."
 3 [Deut. 15:6, Bible, NKJV]

 5 "The Lord will open to you His good treasure, the heavens, to give the rain to your land in its season, and to bless
 6 all the work of your hand. You shall lend to many nations, but you shall not borrow."
 7 [Deut. 28:12, Bible, NKJV]

8 "You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan
 9 government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by 10 becoming a "resident" or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against 11 Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely 12 be a snare to you."
 13 [Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

 15 "I [God] brought you up from Egypt [slavery] and brought you to the land of which I swore to your fathers; and 16 I said, 'I will never break My covenant with you. And you shall make no covenant [contract or franchise or 17 agreement of ANY kind] with the inhabitants of this [corrupt pagan] land; you shall tear down their
 18 [man/government worshipping socialist] altars.' But you have not obeyed Me. Why have you done this?

19 "Therefore I also said, 'I will not drive them out before you; but they will become as thorns [terrorists and 20 persecutors] in your side and their gods will be a snare [slavery!] to you.'"

21 So it was, when the Angel of the LORD spoke these words to all the children of Israel, that the people lifted up 22 their voices and wept.
 23 [Judges 2:1-4, Bible, NKJV]

24 Following the above commandments requires not signing up for and quitting any and all government benefits and services
 25 you may have consensually signed up for or retained eligibility for. All such applications and/or eligibility is called "special 26 law" in the legal field.

27 "special law. One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places
 28 or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is 29 "special" when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited
 30 in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A "special law" relates to either particular 31 persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any 32 method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm
 33 Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass'n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual
 34 or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of 35 County Com'rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill;
 36 Private law. Compare General law; Public law."
 37 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, pp. 1397-1398]

38 We also prove that all such "special law" is not "law" in a classical sense, but rather an act of contracting, because it does not
 39 apply equally to all. It is what the U.S. Supreme Court referred to as "class legislation" in Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust
 40 in which they declared the first income tax unconstitutional:

41 "The income tax law under consideration is marked by discriminating features which affect the whole law. It
 42 discriminates between those who receive an income of four thousand dollars and those who do not. It thus
 43 vitiate, in my judgment, by this arbitrary discrimination, the whole legislation. Hamilton says in one of his 44 papers, (the Continentalist,) "the genius of liberty reprobates everything arbitrary or discretionary in taxation. It
 45 exacts that every man, by a definite and general rule, should know what proportion of his property the State
 46 demands; whatever liberty we may boast of in theory, it cannot exist in fact while [arbitrary] assessments
 47 continue." 1 Hamilton's Works, ed. 1885, 270. The legislation, in the discrimination it makes, is class legislation.
 48 Whenever a distinction is made in the burdens a law imposes or in the benefits it confers on any citizens by
 49 reason of their birth, or wealth, or religion, it is class legislation, and leads inevitably to oppression and abuses,
 50 and to general unrest and disturbance in society [e.g. wars, political conflict, violence, anarchy]. It was hoped 51 and believed that the great amendments to the Constitution which followed the late civil war had rendered such 52 legislation impossible for all future time. But the objectionable legislation reappears in the act under 53 consideration. It is the same in essential character as that of the English income statute of 1691, which taxed
 54 Protestants at a certain rate, Catholics, as a class, at double the rate of Protestants, and Jews at another and 55 separate rate. Under wise and constitutional legislation every citizen should contribute his proportion, however 56 small the sum, to the support of the government, and it is no kindness to urge any of our citizens to escape from

1 that obligation. If he contributes the smallest mite of his earnings to that purpose he will have a greater regard
 2 for the government and more self-respect 597\*597 for himself feeling that though he is poor in fact, he is not a
 3 pauper of his government. And it is to be hoped that, whatever woes and embarrassments may betide our people,
 4 they may never lose their manliness and self-respect. Those qualities preserved, they will ultimately triumph over
 5 all reverses of fortune.”
 6 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (Supreme Court 1895)]

7 To realistically apply the above biblical prohibitions against contracting with any government so as to eliminate the reversal
 8 of roles and destroy the dulocracy, see:

Path to Freedom, Form #09.015
<https://sedm.org/Forms/09-Procs/PathToFreedom.pdf>

9 Section 5 of the above document in particular deals with how to eliminate the dulocracy. Section 5.6 also discusses the above
 10 mechanisms.

11 The idea of a present day dulocracy is entirely consistent with the theme of our website, which is the abuse of government
 12 franchises and privileges to destroy PRIVATE rights, STEAL private property, promote unhappiness, and inject malice and 13 vitriol into the political process, as documented in:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
 FORMS PAGE: <https://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
 DIRECT LINK: <https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/Franchises.pdf>

14 The U.S. Supreme Court and the Bible both predicted these negative and unintended consequences of the abuse of government
 15 franchises, when they said:

16 “Here I close my opinion. I could not say less in view of questions of such gravity that they go down to the very
 17 foundations of the government. If the provisions of the Constitution can be set aside by an act of Congress, where 18 is the course of usurpation to end?”

19 The present assault upon capital [THEFT! and WEALTH TRANSFER by unconstitutional CONVERSION of 20 PRIVATE property to PUBLIC property] is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping stone to others larger
 21 and more sweeping, until our political contest will become war of the poor against the rich; a war of growing 22 intensity and bitterness.”
 23 [Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), hearing the case against the first
 24 income tax passed by Congress that included people in states of the Union. They declared that first income tax
 25 UNCONSTITUTIONAL, by the way]

 27 “Where do wars and fights come from among you? Do they not come from your desires for pleasure [unearned
 28 money or “benefits”, privileges, or franchises, from the government] that war in your members [and your 29 democratic governments]? You lust [after other people's money] and do not have. You murder [the unborn to 30 increase your standard of living] and covet [the unearned] and cannot obtain [except by empowering your
 31 government to STEAL for you!]. You fight and war [against the rich and the nontaxpayers to subsidize your 32 idleness]. Yet you do not have because you do not ask the Lord, but instead ask the [deceitful government]. You
 33 ask and do not receive, because you ask amiss, that you may spend it on your pleasures. Adulterers and 34 adulteresses! Do you not know that friendship [statutory “citizenship”] with the world [for the governments of 35 the world] is enmity with God? Whoever therefore wants to be a friend [STATUTORY “citizen”, “resident”,
 36 “inhabitant”, “person” franchisee] of the world or [the governments of the world] makes himself an enemy of 37 God.”
 38 [James 4:4, Bible, NKJV]

39 The “foundations of the government” spoken of above are PRIVATE property, separation between public and private, and 40 equality of treatment and opportunity, which collectively are called “legal justice”, as we point out on our opening page:

41 Our ministry accomplishes the above goals by emphasizing:

42 12. The pursuit of legal “justice” (Form #05.050), which means absolutely owned private property (Form
 43 #10.002), and equality of TREATMENT and OPPORTUNITY (Form #05.033) under REAL LAW (Form
 44 #05.048). The following would be INJUSTICE, not JUSTICE:

1 12.1 Outlawing or refusing to recognize or enforce absolutely owned private property \(Form #12.025\).

2 12.2 Imposing equality of OUTCOME by law, such as by abusing taxing powers to redistribute wealth. See Form
3 #11.302.

4 12.3 Any attempt by government to use judicial process or administrative enforcement to enforce any civil
5 obligation derived from any source OTHER than express written consent or to an injury against the equal rights
6 of others demonstrated with court admissible evidence. See Form #09.073 and Form #12.040.

7 12.4 Offering, implementing, or enforcing any civil franchise \(Form #05.030\). This enforces superior powers on
8 the part of the government as a form of inequality and results in religious idolatry. This includes making justice
9 into a civil public privilege (Form #05.050, Section 13) or turning CONSTITUTIONAL PRIVATE citizens into 10 STATUTORY PUBLIC citizens engaged in a public office and a franchise (Form #05.006).

11 Not only would the above be INJUSTICE, it would outlaw HAPPINESS, because the right to absolutely own
12 private property is equated with “the pursuit of happiness” in the Declaration of Independence, according to the 13 U.S. Supreme Court. See Form #05.050 for the definition of “justice”. Click here to view a video on why all 14 franchises produce selfishness, unhappiness, inequality, and ingratitude.

16 Too many public servants have assumed absolute authority over the people they are supposed to serve. This REVERSAL of 17 roles and making the SERVANTS into the MASTERS was never the intent of the Founding Fathers who established the 18 American governments as republics where the rights of the people are to be paramount and the sovereignty of the governments
19 are limited by the rights of the people. Sovereignty in America is not based on the same premise as sovereignty in Europe.
20 Sovereignty in Europe was based on the notion of the Divine Right of Kings where the king's sovereignty was absolute and
21 the people were his subjects. Sovereignty in America is based on the notion that citizens are endowed by the Creator with 22 unalienable rights and then lend their permission to the governments to carry out certain, limited responsibilities on their 23 behalf. In a republican form of government, the government is never allowed to overstep its authority or trample on the rights 24 of the citizen no matter how egalitarian the political arguments may be.

25 Jesus Himself also emphasized that public SERVANTS should never become RULERS or have superior authority to the 26 people they are supposed to SERVE when He said the following.

27 “You know that the rulers of the Gentiles [unbelievers] lord it over them [govern from ABOVE as pagan idols],
28 and those who are great exercise authority over them [supernatural powers that are the object of idol worship].
29 Yet it shall not be so among you; but whoever desires to become great among you, let him be your servant
30 [serve the sovereign people from BELOW rather than rule from above]. And whoever desires to be first among 31 you, let him be your slave—just as the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give His life 32 a ransom for many.”
33 [Matt. 20:25-28, Bible, NKJV]

34 Notice the word “ransom for many” in the above. This is an admission that Jesus acknowledges that cunning public servant
35 lawyers have KIDNAPPED our legal identity from the protection of God’s law and that legal identity has been transported
36 to a legislatively foreign jurisdiction, the District of Criminals. We exhaustively prove this with evidence in the following
37 memorandum of law:

Government Identity Theft, Form #05.042
<https://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/GovernmentIdentityTheft.pdf>

38 Jesus also states in Matt. 20:25-28 that it is the DUTY and obligation of every Christian to fight this corruption of our political 39 system. The Holy Bible is our Delegation of Authority to do precisely this, in fact, and to restore God to His proper role as 40 the ruler of ALL nations and ALL politicians and the only rightful Lawgiver of all human law. That delegation of authority 41 is described in:

42 6.3.3 Graphical Depiction of the Corruption

43 With the above in mind, we will now add all of the corrupting influences accomplished to our system of government over the 44 years. These are shown with dashed lines representing the application of unlawful or immoral force or fraud. The hollow

1 end of each line indicates the sovereign against which the force or fraud is applied. The number above or next to the dotted line indicates the item in the table that follows the diagram which explains each incidence of force or fraud.

That amendment along with "words of art" were used as a means to deceive constitutional citizens to falsely believe that they were also privileged statutory "U.S. citizens" pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1401, and thus to unconstitutionally extend federal jurisdiction and enforce federal franchises within states of the Union. The citizenship status described in that amendment was only supposed to apply to emancipated slaves but the federal government in concert with the states confused the law and the interpretation of the law enough that everyone thought they were statutory federal citizens rather than the "non-resident non-persons" immune from federal jurisdiction, which is foreign with respect to states of the Union. This put Americans in the states in a privileged federal status and put them under the jurisdiction of the federal government. At the point that Americans voluntarily and unknowingly accept privileged federal citizenship, they lose their sovereignty and go to the bottom of the sovereignty hierarchy. State courts and state legislatures cooperated in this conspiracy against rights by requiring electors and jurists to be presumed statutory "U.S. citizens" in order to serve. At the same time, they didn't define the term "U.S. citizen" in their election laws or voter registration, creating a "presumption" in favor of people believing that they are statutory "citizens of the United States", even though technically they are not.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |

The corrupting influence of the money they had led them to dominate the U.S. senate and the Republican party., which was the majority party at the time. The people became restless because they were paying most of the taxes indirectly via tariffs on imported goods while the big corporations were paying very little. This led to a vote by Congress to send the new Sixteenth Amendment to the states for ratification. Corporations heavily influenced this legislation so that it would favor taxing individuals instead of corporations, which led the Republicans in the Senate to word the Amendment ambiguously so that it could or would be misconstrued to apply to natural persons instead of the corporations it was really intended to apply to by the American people. This created much subsequent litigation and confusion on the part of the Average American about exactly what the taxing powers of Congress are, and gave Congressman a lot of wiggle room to misrepresent the purpose of the Sixteenth Amendment to their constituents. Today, Congressmen use the ambiguity of the Amendment to regularly lie to their Constituents by saying that the "Sixteenth Amendment" authorizes Congress to tax the income of every American. This is an absolute lie and is completely inconsistent with the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court. Courts below the Supreme Court have also used the same ambiguity mechanism to expand the operation of the income tax beyond its clearly limited application to the federal zone. During the same year as the Sixteenth Amendment was ratified, in 1913, the Congress also passed the Federal Reserve Act immediately after the Sixteenth Amendment. By doing this, they surrendered their control over the money system to a consortium of private banks. The Sixteenth Amendment was passed first in February of 1913 because it was the lender-security for the Non-Federal Reserve that would be needed to create a "credit line" and collateral. The Federal Reserve Act was passed in December of that same year. At that point, the Congress had an unlimited private credit line from commercial banks and a means to print as much money as they wanted in order to fund socialist expansion of the government. But remember that the bible says: "The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower [is] servant to the lender."[Prov. 22:7] |

All the federal courts except the U.S. Supreme Court changed character from being Article III courts to Article IV territorial courts only. All the district courts were renamed from “District Court of the United States” to “United States District Court”. The Supreme Court said in Balzac v. Porto Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922) that the “United States District Court” is an Article IV territorial court, not an Article III constitutional court. Consequently, all the federal courts excepting the Supreme Court became administrative courts that were part of the Executive rather than the Judicial Branch of the government and all the judges became Executive Branch employees. See our article “Authorities on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts” for further details. The Revenue Act of 1932 then tried to apply income taxes against federal judges. The purpose was to put them under complete control of the Executive Branch through terrorism and extortion by the IRS. This was litigated by the Supreme Court in 1932 in the case of O’Malley v. Woodrough, 309 U.S. 277 (1939) just before the war started. The court ruled that the Executive Branch couldn’t unilaterally modify the terms of their employment contracts, so they rewrote the tax code to go around it subsequent to that by only taxing NEW federal judges and leaving the existing ones alone so as not to violate the Constitutional prohibition against reducing judges salaries. Since that time, federal judges have been beholden to the greed and malice of the Legislative branch because they are under IRS control. This occurred at a time when we had a very popular socialist President who threatened the Supreme Court if they didn’t go along with his plan to replace capitalism with socialism, starting with Social Security. President Roosevelt tried to retire all the U.S. Supreme Court justices and then double the size of the court and pack the court with all of his own socialist cronies in a famous coup called “The Roosevelt Supreme Court Packing Plan”. |

Woodrough in 1939, the U.S. Congress wasted no time in passing a new Revenue Act that skirted the findings of the Supreme Court’s that declared income taxes levied against them to be unconstitutional. In effect, they made the payment of income taxes by federal judges an implied part of their employment agreement as “appointed officers” of the United States government in receipt of federal privileges. Once the judges were under control of the IRS, they could be terrorized and plundered if they did not cooperate with the enforcement of federal income taxes. This also endowed all federal judges with an implied conflict of interest in violation of 28 U.S.C. §455 and 28 U.S.C. §144                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |

Art. 1, Sect.9, Clause 418 U.S.C. §1589(3)(forced labor)                                                       | The Revenue Act of 1939 passed by the U.S. Congress instituted a very oppressive income tax to fund the upcoming World War II effort. It was called the “Victory Tax” and it was a voluntary withholding effort, but after the war and after people on a large scale got used to sending their money to Washington, D.C. every month through payroll withholding, the politicians cleverly decided not to tell them the truth that it was voluntary. The politicians then began rewriting the tax code to further confuse and deceive people and hide the truth about the voluntary nature of the income tax. This included the Internal Revenue Codes of 1954 and 1986, which were major updates of the IRC that further hid the truth from the legal profession and added so much complexity to the tax code that no one even understands them anymore.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |

Instead of paying off the war debt and ending the income tax like we did after the Civil war in 1872, the government adopted socialism and borrowed itself into a deep hole, following the illustrious example of Franklin Roosevelt's "New Deal" program. This socialist expansion was facilitated by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, which gave the government unlimited borrowing power. The income tax, however, had to continue because it was the "lender security" for the PRIVATE Federal Reserve banking trust that was creating all this debt and fake money. The income tax had the effect of making all Americans into surety for government debts they never authorized. The Civil Rights movement of the 1960's accelerated the growth of the socialist cancer to cause voters to abuse their power to elect politicians who would subsidize and expand the welfare-state concept."Democracy has never been and never can be so desirable as aristocracy or monarchy, but while it lasts, is more bloody than either. Trial by jury becomes MOB RULE and a means to mug and rob the producers of society. The jurists are also under duress by the judge, who does not allow evidence to be admitted that would be prejudicial to government (or his retirement check) and who makes cases unpublished where the government lost on income tax issues. Because these same jurists were also educated in public schools, they are easily lead like sheep to do the government's dirty work of plundering their fellow citizens by upholding a tax that is actually voluntary. The result is slavery of wage earners and the rich to the IRS. The war of the "have-nots" and the "haves" using the taxing authority of the government continues on and expands.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 10                            | 1960-Present   | Federal judicialbranch      | God's laws (bible)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Federal judiciary eliminates God and prayer in the schools. This leaves kids in a spiritual vacuum. Drugs, sex, teenage pregnancy run rampant. Families begin breaking apart. God is blasphemed. Single parents raise an increasing number of kids and these children don't have the balance they need in the family to have proper sex roles. Gender identity crisis and psychology problems result, causing homosexuality to run rampant. This further accelerates the breakdown of the family because these dysfunctional kids have dysfunctional families of their own. Because God is not in the schools, eventually the people begin to reject God as well. This expands the power of government because when the people aren't governed by God, they are ruled by tyrants and become peasants and serfs eventually. That is how the Israelites ended up in bondage to the Egyptians: because they would not serve God or trust him for their security. They wanted a big powerful Egyptian government to take care of them and be comfortable and safe, which was idolatry toward government.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

Licensing requirements become so high that only public schools have the capital to comply, virtually eliminating private and home schooling. Teachers and inferior environment in public schools further contributes to bad education and liberal socialist values, further eroding sovereignty of the people and making them easy prey for sly politicians who want to enslave them with more unjust laws and expand their fiefdom. Government continues to grow in power and rights and liberties simultaneously erode further. |

1 After our corrupt politicians are finished socially re-engineering our system of government using the tax code and a corrupted
2 federal judiciary, below is what happens to our original republican government system. This is what we refer to as the “De
3 facto U.S. Government”. It has replaced our “De jure U.S. Government” not through operation of law, but through fraud,
4 force, and corruption. One of our readers calls this new architecture for social organization “The New Civil Religion of
5 Socialism”, where the collective will of the majority or whatever the judge says is sovereign, not God, and is the object of 6 worship and servitude in courtrooms all over the country, who are run by devil-worshipping modern-day monarchs called
7 “judges”. These tyrants wear black-robos and chant in Latin and perform exorcism on hand-cuffed subjects to remove
8 imaginary “demons” from the people that are defined by majority vote among a population of criminals (by God’s law),
9 homosexuals, drug abusers, adulterers, and atheists. The vilification of these demons are legislated into existence with “judge-
10 made law”, which is engineered to maximize litigation and profits to the legal industry. The legal industry, in turn, has been
11 made into a part of the government because it is licensed and regulated by government. This profession “worships” the judge
12 as an idol and is comprised of golf and law school buddies and fellow members of the American Bar Association (ABA),
13 who hobnob with the judge and do whatever he says or risk having their attorney license pulled. In this totalitarian socialist
14 democracy/oligarchy shown below, the people have no inalienable or God-given individual rights, but only statutory 15 “privileges” and franchises granted by the will of the majority that are excise taxable. After all, when God and Truth are 16 demoted to being a selfish creation of man and a politically correct vain fantasy, then the concept of “divine right” vanishes
17 entirely from our political system.

1 Figure 6-3: Result of Corrupting Our Republican Form of Government

 3 In the above diagram, all people in receipt of federal funds stolen through illegally collected or involuntarily paid federal
 4 income taxes effectively become federal "employees" or "public officers". They identified themselves as such when they
 5 filed their W-4 payroll withholding form, which is a contract that says on the top "Employee Withholding Allowance
 6 Certificate". The Internal Revenue Code identifies "employee" to mean someone who works for the federal government in
 7 26 U.S.C. §3401(c). These federal "employees" are moral and spiritual "whores" and "harlots". They are just like Judas or

1 Essau...they exchanged the Truth for a lie and liberty for slavery and they did it mainly for money and personal security.
2 They are:

- 3 1. So concerned about avoiding being terrorized by their government or the IRS for “making waves”.
- 4 2. So immobilized by their own fear and ignorance that they don’t dare do anything.
- 5 3. So addicted to sin and other unhealthy distractions that they don’t have the time to do justice.
- 6 4. So poor that they can’t afford an expensive lawyer to be able to right the many wrongs imposed on them by a corrupted
7 government. Justice is a luxury that only the rich can afford in our society.
- 8 5. So legally ignorant, thanks to our public “fool”, I mean “school” system that they aren’t able to right their wrongs on 9 their own in court without a lawyer.
- 10 6. So afraid of corrupt judges and lawyers who are bought and paid for with money that they stole from hardworking
11 Americans in illegally enforcing what is actually a voluntary Subtitle A income against those who in fact and indeed can 12 only be described per the law as “nontaxpayers”.
- 13 7. So unable to take care of their own needs because:
  - 14 7.1. Most of their money has been plundered by a government unable and unwilling to control its spending.
  - 15 7.2. They have allowed themselves to depend too much on government and allowed too much of their own hard-earned 16 money to be stolen from them.
  - 17 7.3. They spent everything they had and went deep in debt to buy things they didn't need.
- 18 8. So covetous of that government welfare or socialist security or unemployment check or paycheck that comes in the mail 19 every month.

20 ...that they wouldn’t dare upset the apple cart or try to right the many wrongs that maintain the status quo by doing justice as
21 a voter or jurist. As long as they get their socialist handout and they live comfortably on the “loot” their “Parens Patriae”, or
22 “Big Brother” sends them, they don’t care that massive injustice is occurring in courtrooms and at the IRS every day and that
23 they are sanctioning, aiding, and abetting that injustice as voters and jurists with a financial conflict of interest in criminal
24 violation of 18 U.S.C. §§201 and 208. In effect, they are bribed to look the other way while their own government loots and 25 oppresses their neighbor and then uses that loot to buy votes and influence.

26 “Thou shalt not steal.”
27 [Exodus 20:15 ]

28 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: “You shall love your neighbor as yourself.”
29 [Gal 5:14, Bible, NKJV]

30 Would you rob your neighbor? No you say? Well then, would you look the other way while someone else robs him in your
31 name? Government is YOUR AGENT. If government robs your neighbor, God will hold you, not the agent who did it for 32 you, personally responsible, because government is your agent. God put you in charge of your government and you are the 33 steward. Frederic Bastiat described the nature of this horrible corruption of the system in the following book on our website:

The Law, Frederic Bastiat
<http://famguardian.org/Publications/TheLaw/TheLaw.htm>

34 If you want to know what the above type of government is like spiritually, economically, and politically, read the first-hand
35 accounts in the book of Judges found in the Bible. Corruption, sin, servitude, violence, and wars characterize this notable
36 and most ignominious period and “social experiment” as documented in the Bible. Now do you understand why God’s law
37 mandates that we serve ONLY Him and not be slaves of man or government? When we don’t, the above totalitarian socialist 38 democracy/tyranny is the result, where politicians and judges in government become the only sovereign and the people are 39 there to bow down to and “worship” and serve an evil and corrupt government as slaves.

40 6.3.4 God's Remedy for the Corruption

41 Below is the way God himself describes the corrupted dilemma we find ourselves in because we have abandoned the path
42 laid by our founding fathers, as described in Isaiah 1:1-26:

43 Alas, sinful nation,
44 A people laden with iniquity
45 A brood of evildoers
46 Children who are corrupters!

They have forsaken the Lord

They have provoked to anger

The Holy One of Israel,

They have turned away backward.

Why should you be stricken again?

You will revolt more and more.

The whole head is sick [they are out of their minds!: insane or STUPID or both].

And the whole heart faints....

Wash yourselves, make yourselves clean;

Put away the evil of your doings from before My eyes.

Cease to do evil,

Learn to do good;

Seek justice.

Rebuke the oppressor [the IRS and the Federal Reserve and a corrupted judicial system];

Defend the fatherless.

Plead for the widow [and the "nontaxpayer"]....

How the faithful city has become a harlot!

It [the Constitutional Republic] was full of justice;

Righteousness lodged in it.

But now murderers [and abortionists, and socialists, and democrats, and liars and corrupted judges].

Your silver has become dross,

Your wine mixed with water.

Your princes [President, Congressmen, Judges] are rebellious.

Everyone loves bribes.

And follows after rewards.

They do not defend the fatherless.

nor does the cause of the widow [for the "nontaxpayer"] come before them.

Therefore the Lord says,

The Lord of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel,

"Ah, I will rid Myself of My adversaries,

And take vengeance on My enemies.

I will turn My hand against you.

And thoroughly purge away your dross,

And take away your alloy.

I will restore your judges [eliminate the BAD judges] as at the first,

And your counselors [eliminate the BAD lawyers] as at the beginning.

Afterward you shall be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city."

[Isaiah 1:1-26, Bible, NKJV]

So according to the Bible, the real problem is corrupted lawyers and judges and people who are after money and rewards, and God says the way to fix the corruption and graft is to eliminate the bad judges and lawyers. Whose job is that? It is the even more corrupted Congress! (see 28 U.S.C. §134\(a\) and 28 U.S.C. §44\(b\))

"O My people! Those who lead you cause you to err,

And destroy the way of your paths."

[Isaiah 3:12, Bible, NKJV]

"The king establishes the land by justice; but he who receives bribes overthrows it."

[Prov. 29:4, Bible, NKJV]

Can thieves and corrupted judges and lawyers and jurors, who are all bribed with unlawfully collected money they lust after in the pursuit of socialist benefits, reform themselves if left to their own devices?

"When you [the jury] saw a thief [the corrupted judges and lawyers paid with extorted and stolen tax money], you consented with him, And have been a partaker with adulterers."

[Psalm 50:18, Bible, NKJV]

"The people will be oppressed,

Every one by another and every one by his [socialist] neighbor [sitting on a jury who was indoctrinated and brainwashed in a government school to trust government];

The child will be insolent toward the elder,

And the base toward the honorable."

[Isaiah 3:5, Bible, NKJV]

"It must be conceded that there are rights [and property] in every free government beyond the control of the State [or any judge or jury]. A government which recognized no such rights, which held the lives, liberty and property of its citizens, subject at all times to the disposition and unlimited control of even the most democratic depository of power, is after all a despotism. It is true that it is a despotism of the many--of the majority, if you choose to call it so--but it is not the less a despotism."

The answer is an emphatic no. It is up to We The People as the sovereigns in charge of our lawless government to right this massive injustice because a corrupted legislature and judiciary and the passive socialist voters in charge of our government today simply cannot remedy their own addiction to the money that was stolen from their neighbor by the criminals they elected into office. These elected representatives were supposed to be elected to serve and protect the people, but they have become the worst abusers of the people because they only got into politics and government for selfish reasons. Notice we didn't say they got into "public service", because we would be lying to call it that. It would be more accurate to call what they do "self-service" instead of "public service". One of our readers has a name for these kinds of people. He calls them SLAT: Scum, Liars, and Thieves. If you add up all the drug money, all the stolen property, all the white collar crime together, it would all pale in comparison to the "extortion under the color of law" that our own de facto government and the totally corrupted people who work for it are instituting against its own people. If we solve no crime problem other than that one problem, then the government will have done the most important thing it can do to solve our crime problem and probably significantly reduce the prison population at the same time. There are lots of people in jail who were put there wrongfully for income tax crimes that aren't technically even crimes. These people were maliciously prosecuted by a corrupted Satan worshipping DOJ with the complicity of a corrupted judiciary and they MUST be freed because they have become slaves and political prisoners of a corrupted state for the sake of statutes that operate as the equivalent of a "civil religion" and which are not and cannot be law in their case. That's right: the corrupted state has erected a counterfeit church and religion that is a cheap imitation of God's design complete with churches, prayers, priests, deacons, tithes, and even its own "Bible" (franchise) and they have done so in violation of the First Amendment. The nature of that civil religion is exhaustively described below:

Socialism: The New American Civil Religion, Form #05.016

DIRECT LINK: <http://sedm.org/Forms/05-MemLaw/SocialismCivilReligion.pdf> (OFFSITE LINK)

FORMS PAGE: <http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm> (OFFSITE)

Why does God describe the source of the corruption as bad lawyers and judges instead of the people accepting the franchises as "Buyers", you might ask? The answer is that:

1. The Constitution and the Declaration of Independence recognize natural rights as INALIENABLE. See Unalienable Rights Course, Form #12.038
<https://sedm.org/LibertyU/UnalienableRights.pdf>
2. An INALIENABLE right is one that YOU AREN'T ALLOWED BY LAW to consent \(Form #05.003\) to give away.
3. If you can't even lawfully consent \(Form #05.003\) to give away the right, then you can never lose it or contract it away by participating in a government franchise \(Form #05.030\) or accepting a loan of government property.
4. The fact that judges and lawyers ALLOW inalienable rights \(Form #12.038\) to be given away in a place where they aren't allowed to be given away is a sign that they love money and enhancing their own power more than they love freedom or the Constitution.
5. Because they love money and power more than they love freedom and obeying the constitution, they are committing treason punishable by death in violation of 18 U.S.C. §2381 and serving Satan himself.

Below is how we explain this conundrum in our Disclaimer:

Every attempt by anyone in government to alienate rights that the Declaration of Independence says are UNALIENABLE shall also be treated as "PRIVATE BUSINESS ACTIVITY" that cannot be protected by sovereign, official, or judicial immunity. So called "government" cannot make a profitable business or franchise out of alienating inalienable rights without ceasing to be a classical/de jure government and instead becoming in effect an economic terrorist and de facto government in violation of Article 4, Section 4.

"No servant [or government or biological person] can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will be loyal to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon [government]."
[Luke 16:13, Bible, NKJV]

6.3.5 De Jure v. De Facto Government

We will now close this section with a tabular summary that compares our original “de jure” government to the “de facto” government that we presently suffer under. This corrupted “de facto” government only continues to exist because of our passive and tolerant approach towards the illegal activities of our government servants. We can fix this if we really want to, folks. Let’s do it!

Table 6-2: Comparison of our "De jure" v. "De facto" government

| 2 | Separation of Money and State                                               | Only lawful money is gold and the value of the dollar is tied to gold. Government can't manufacture more gold so they can't abuse their power to coin money to enrich themselves.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | Fiat currency is Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs). Government can print any amount of these it wants and thereby enrich itself and steal from the those who hold dollars by lowering the value of the dollars in circulation (inflation)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 3 | Separation of Marriage and State                                            | People getting married did not have marriage licenses from the state. Instead, the ceremony was exclusively ecclesiastical and it was recorded only in the family Bible and church records.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Pastor acts as an agent of both God and the state. He performs the ceremony and is also licensed by the state to sign the state marriage license. Churches force members getting married to obtain state marriage license by saying they won't marry them without a state-issued marriage license.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 4 | Separation of School and State                                              | Schools were rural and remote and most were private or religious. There were very few public schools and a large percentage of the population was home-schooled.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Most student go to public schools. They are dumbed-down by the state to be good serfs/sheep by being told they are “taxpayers” and being shown in high school how to fill out a tax return without even being shown how to balance a check book. They are taught that government is the sovereign and not the people, and that people should obey the government.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| 5 | Separation of State and Federal government                                  | States control the Senate and all legislation and taxation internal to a state. Federal government controls only foreign commerce in the form of imposts, excises, and duties under Article 1, Section 8, Clause 3 of the Constitution.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Federal government receives lion's share of income taxes over both internal and external trade. It redistributes the proceeds from these taxes to the socialist states, who are coerced to modify their laws in compliance with federal dictates in order to get their fair share of this stolen “loot”.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 6 | Separation between branches of government: Executive, Legislative, Judicial | Three branches of government are entirely independent and not controlled by other branches.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Judges are “employees” of the executive branch and have a conflict of interest because they are beholden to IRS extortion. Executive controls the illegal tax collection activities of the IRS and dictates to other branches it's tax policy through illegal IRS extortion. Using the IRS, Executive becomes the “Gestapo” that controls everything and everyone. Congress and the courts refuse to reform this extortion because they benefit most financially by it.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| 7 | Separation of Commerce and State                                            | Federal government regulates only foreign commerce of corporations. States regulate all internal commerce. Private individuals have complete privacy and are not regulated because they don't have Socialist Security Numbers and are not monitored by the IRS Gestapo. Banks are independent and do not have to participate in a national banking system so they don't coerce their depositors to bet government-issued numbers nor do they snoop/spy on their depositors as an agent of the IRS Gestapo. Private employers are not regulated or monitored by federal Gestapo and their contracts with their employees are private and sacred. | All credit issued by a central, private Federal Reserve consortium. Federal Reserve rules coerce private banks to illegally enforce federal laws in states of the Union that only apply in the federal zone. Namely, they force depositors to have Socialist Security Numbers and they report all currency transactions over $3,000 to the Dept of the Treasury (CTR's). “Spying” on financial affairs citizens by government makes citizens afraid of IRS and government and coerces them to illegally pay income taxes by government. Employers are coerced to enslave their employees to IRS through wage reporting and withholding, often against the will of employees. |

| 8  | Separation of Media and State             | Press was free to report as they saw fit under the First Amendment. Most newspapers were small-town newspapers and were private and independent.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Television, radio, the internet, and corporations have taken over the media and concentrated control of it to the hands of a very few huge and "privileged" corporations that are in bed with the federal and state governments. Media is no longer independent, and broadcasters don't dare cross the government for fear of either losing their FCC license, being subjected to an IRS audit, or having their government sponsorship revoked.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 9  | Separation of Family and State            | Families were completely separate from the state. Private individuals were not subject to direct taxation or regulation by either state or federal government. No Socialist Security Numbers and no government surveillance of private commerce by individuals. Women stayed home and out of the workforce. Men dominated the political and commercial landscape and also defended their family from encroachments by government. Children were home-schooled and worked on the farm. They inherited the republican values of their parents. Morality was taught by the churches and there was an emphasis on personal responsibility, modesty, manners, respect, and humility. | Using income taxes, mom was removed from the home to enter the workforce so she could replace the income stolen from dad by the IRS through illegal enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code. Conflict over money breaks families down and divorce rate reaches epidemic proportions. Children are neglected by their parents because parents both have to work full-time and duke it out with each other in divorce court. Majority of children raised in single parent homes. Television and a liberal media dominates and distorts the thoughts and minds of the children. Public schools filled with homosexuals and liberals, many of whom have no children of their own, teach our children to be selfish, rebellious, sexually promiscuous, homosexual drug-abusers. Pornography invades the home through the internet, cable-TV, and video rentals, creating a negative fixation on sex. Television interferes with family communication so that children are alienated from their parents so that they do not inherit good morals or respect for authority from their parents.. Crime rate and prison population reaches unprecedented levels. Citizens therefore lose their ability to govern themselves and the legal field and government come in and take over their lives. |
| 10 | Separation of Charity and State           | Churches and families were responsible for charity. When a person was old or became unemployed, members of the church or family would take them. Personal responsibility and morality within churches and families would encourage them to improve their lives.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Monolithic, huge, and terribly inefficient government bureaucracies replace families and churches as major source of charity. These bureaucracies have no idea what personal responsibility is and are not allowed to talk about morality because they are not allowed to talk about God. Generations of people grow up under this welfare umbrella without ever having to take responsibility for themselves, and these people abuse their voting power to perpetuate it. Supremacy of families and churches is eliminated and government becomes the new "god" for everyone to worship. See Jeremiah 2:26-28.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| 11 | Separation of Public and Private Property | All property is presumed to be absolutely owned, private, and not subject to state or public or government control. This is the foundation of the Fifth Amendment protection for private property. See Separation Between Public and Private, Form #12.025 .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Corrupt and covetous public servants implement socialism, where all property is presumed to be absolutely owned by the government, and everyone is a BORROWER of said property with conditions. Those conditions are called "franchises", and government can regulate and control ANYONE and ANYTHING it wants. See Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030 .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |

6.4 How De Jure Governments are Transformed into Corrupt De Facto Governments<sup>323</sup>

“Governments never do anything by accident; if government does something you can bet it was carefully planned.”
[Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States]

Franchises and/or their abuse are the main method by which:

1. De jure governments are transformed into corrupted de facto governments.
2. The requirement for consent of the governed is systematically eliminated.
3. The equal protection that is the foundation of the Constitution is replaced with inequality, privilege, hypocrisy, and partiality in which the government is a parens patriae and possesses an unconstitutional “title of nobility” in relation to those it is supposed to be serving and protecting.
4. The separation of powers between the states and federal government are eliminated.
5. The separation between what is “public” and what is “private” is destroyed. Everything becomes PUBLIC and is owned by the “collective”. There is no private property and what you think is ABSOLUTE ownership of PRIVATE property is really just equitable title and QUALIFIED ownership of PUBLIC property.
6. Constitutional rights attaching to the land you stand on are replaced with statutory privileges created through your right to contract and your “status” under a franchise agreement.

“You shall make no covenant [contract or franchise] with them [foreigners, pagans], nor with their [pagan government] gods [laws or judges]. They shall not dwell in your land [and you shall not dwell in theirs by becoming a “resident” or domiciliary in the process of contracting with them], lest they make you sin against Me [God]. For if you serve their [government] gods [under contract or agreement or franchise], it will surely be a snare to you.”
[Exodus 23:32-33, Bible, NKJV]

7. Your legal identity is “laundered”, and kidnapped or transported to a foreign jurisdiction, the District of Criminals, and which is not protected by the Constitution. This is usually done by compulsion or duress, as in the case of compelled licensing.

“For the upright will dwell in the land,
And the blameless will remain in it;
But the wicked will be cut off from the earth,
And the unfaithful will be uprooted from it.”
[Prov. 2:21-22, Bible, NKJV]

8. The protections of the Constitution for your rights are eliminated.
9. Rights are transformed into privileges.
10. Republics based on individual rights are transformed into socialist democracies based on collective rights and individual privileges.
11. The status of “citizen, resident, or inhabitant” is devolved into nothing but an “employee” or “officer” of a corporation.
12. Constitutional courts are transformed into franchise courts.
13. Conflicts of interest are introduced into the legal and court systems that perpetuate a further expansion of the de facto system.
14. Socialism is introduced into a republican form of government.
15. The sovereignty of people in the states of the Union are destroyed.

The gravely injurious effects of participating in government franchises include the following.

1. Those who participate become domiciliaries of the federal zone, “U.S. persons”, and “resident aliens” in respect to the federal government.
2. Those who participate become “trustees” of the “public trust” and “public officers” of the federal government and suffer great legal disability as a consequence:

<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>.

1 "As expressed otherwise, the powers delegated to a public officer are held in trust for the people and are to be
 2 exercised in behalf of the government or of all citizens who may need the intervention of the officer. 324
 3 Furthermore, the view has been expressed that all public officers, within whatever branch and whatever level
 4 of government, and whatever be their private vocations, are trustees of the people, and accordingly labor under
 5 every disability and prohibition imposed by law upon trustees relative to the making of personal financial gain
 6 from a discharge of their trusts. 325 That is, a public officer occupies a fiduciary relationship to the political
 7 entity on whose behalf he or she serves. 326 and owes a fiduciary duty to the public. 327 It has been said that
 8 the fiduciary responsibilities of a public officer cannot be less than those of a private individual. 328
 9 Furthermore, it has been stated that any enterprise undertaken by the public official which tends to weaken public
 10 confidence and undermine the sense of security for individual rights is against public policy.329"
 11 [63C American Jurisprudence 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §247 (1999)]

- 12 3. Those who participate are stripped of ALL of their constitutional rights and waive their Constitutional right not to be 13 subjected to penalties and other "bills of attainder" administered by the Executive Branch without court trials. They then 14 must function the degrading treatment of filling the role of a federal "public employee" subject to the supervision of their 15 servants in the government.

16 "The restrictions that the Constitution places upon the government in its capacity as lawmaker, i.e., as the 17 regulator of private conduct, are not the same as the restrictions that it places upon the government in its 18 capacity as employer. We have recognized this in many contexts, with respect to many different constitutional 19 guarantees. Private citizens perhaps cannot be prevented from wearing long hair, but policemen can. Kelley v.
 20 Johnson, 425 U.S. 238, 247 (1976). Private citizens cannot have their property searched without probable cause,
 21 but in many circumstances government employees can. O'Connor v. Ortega, 480 U.S. 709, 723 (1987) (plurality 22 opinion); id., at 732 (SCALIA, J., concurring in judgment). Private citizens cannot be punished for refusing to
 23 provide the government information that may incriminate them, but government employees can be dismissed when

35 "These general rules are well settled: (1) That the United States, when it creates rights in individuals against

- 7 6. Those who participate can be directed which federal courts they may litigate in and can lawfully be deprived of a
 8 Constitutional Article III judge or Article III court and forced to seek remedy ONLY in an Article I or Article IV
 9 legislative or administrative tribunal within the Legislative rather than Judicial branch of the government.

10 Although Crowell and Raddatz do not explicitly distinguish between rights created by Congress and other rights,
 11 such a distinction underlies in part Crowell's and Raddatz's recognition of a critical difference between rights
 12 created by federal statute and rights recognized by the Constitution. Moreover, such a distinction seems to us
 13 to be necessary in light of the delicate accommodations required by the principle of separation of powers reflected 14 in Art. III. The constitutional system of checks and balances is designed to guard against "encroachment or 15 aggrandizement" by Congress at the expense of the other branches of government. Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S.,
 16 at 122, 96 S.Ct., at 683. But when Congress creates a statutory right [a "privilege" in this case, such as a "trade 17 or business"], it clearly has the discretion, in defining that right, to create presumptions, or assign burdens of
 18 proof, or prescribe remedies; it may also provide that persons seeking to vindicate that right must do so before
 19 particularized tribunals created to perform the specialized adjudicative tasks related to that right.FN35 Such
 20 provisions do, in a sense, affect the exercise of judicial power, but they are also incidental to Congress' power to
 21 define the right that it has created. No comparable justification exists, however, when the right being adjudicated
 22 is not of congressional creation. In such a situation, substantial inroads into functions that have traditionally 23 been performed by the Judiciary cannot be characterized merely as incidental extensions of Congress' power to 24 define rights that it has created. Rather, such inroads suggest unwarranted encroachments upon the judicial 25 power of the United States, which our Constitution reserves for Art. III courts.
 26 [Northern Pipeline Const. Co. v. Marathon Pipe Line Co., 458 U.S. at 83-84, 102 S.Ct. 2858 (1983)]

27 Since the founding of our country, franchises have systematically been employed in every area of government to transform a
 28 government based on equal protection into a for-profit private corporation based on privilege, partiality, and favoritism. The 29 effects of this form of corruption are exhaustively described in the following memorandum of law on our website:

Government Instituted Slavery Using Franchises, Form #05.030
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

30 What are the mechanisms by which this corruption has been implemented by the Executive Branch? This section will detail
 31 the main mechanisms to sensitize you to how to fix the problem and will relate how it was implemented by exploiting the 32 separation of powers doctrine.

33 The foundation of the separation of powers is the notion that the powers delegated to one branch of government by the 34 Constitution cannot be re-delegated to another branch.

35 ". . . a power definitely assigned by the Constitution to one department can neither be surrendered nor delegated 36 by that department, nor vested by statute in another department or agency. Compare Springer v. Philippine 37 Islands, 277 U.S. 189, 201, 202, 48 S.Ct. 480, 72 L.Ed. 845."
 38 [Williams v. U.S., 289 U.S. 553, 53 S.Ct. 751 (1933)]

39 Keenly aware of the above limitation, lawmakers over the years have used it to their advantage in creating a tax system that 40 is exempt from any kind of judicial interference and which completely destroys all separation of powers. Below is a summary
 41 of the mechanism, in the exact sequence it was executed at the federal level:

- 42 1. Create a franchise based upon a "public office" in the Executive Branch. This:
 43 1.1. Allows statutes passed by Congress to be directly enforced against those who participate.
 44 1.2. Eliminates the need for publication in the Federal Register of enforcement implementing regulations for the statutes.
 45 See 5 U.S.C. §553\(a\) and 44 U.S.C. §1505\(a\)\(1\).
 46 1.3. Causes those engaged in the franchise to act in a representative capacity as "public officers" of the United States
 47 government pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 17(b), which is defined in 28 U.S.C. §3002\(15\)\(A\) as a
 48 federal corporation.
 49 1.4. Causes all those engaged in the franchise to become "officers of a corporation", which is the "United States",
 50 pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6671\(b\) and 26 U.S.C. §7343.
 51 2. Give the franchise a deceptive "word of art" name that will deceive everyone into believing that they are engaged in it.

- 1 2.1. The franchise is called a “trade or business” and is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as “the functions of a public
2 office”. How many people know this and do they teach this in the public (government) schools or the IRS
3 publications? NOT!
- 4 2.2. Earnings connected with the franchise are called “effectively connected with a trade or business in the United 5 States”. The term “United States” deceptively means the GOVERNMENT, and not the geographical United States.
- 6 3. In the franchise agreement, define the effective domicile or choice of law of all those who participate as being on federal
7 territory within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. 26 U.S.C. §7408(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(39) place
8 the effective domicile of all “franchisees” called “taxpayers” within the District of Columbia. If the feds really had 9 jurisdiction within states of the Union, do you think they would need this devious device to “kidnap your legal identity”
10 or “res” and move it to a foreign jurisdiction where you don’t physically live?
- 11 4. Place a excise tax upon the franchise proportional to the income earned from the franchise. In the case of the Internal 12 Revenue Code, all such income is described as income which is “effectively connected with a trade or business within 13 the United States”.

14 *“Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon
15 licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges...the requirement to pay such taxes
16 involves the exercise of [220 U.S. 107, 152] privileges, and the element of absolute and unavoidable demand 17 is lacking..*

18 *...It is therefore well settled by the decisions of this court that when the sovereign authority has exercised the right
19 to tax a legitimate subject of taxation as an exercise of a franchise or privilege, it is no objection that the measure
20 of taxation is found in the income produced in part from property which of itself considered is nontaxable...*

21 Conceding the power of Congress to tax the business activities of private corporations.. the tax must be measured 22 by some standard...”

23 [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

- 24 5. Mandate that those engaged in the franchise must have usually false evidence submitted by ignorant third parties that 25 connects them to the franchise. IRS information returns, including IRS Forms W-2, 1042-S, 1098, and 1099, are the 26 mechanism. 26 U.S.C. §6041 says that these information returns may ONLY be filed in connection with a “trade or 27 business”, which is a code word for the name of the franchise.
- 28 6. Write statutes prohibiting interference by the courts with the collection of “taxes” (kickbacks) associated with the 29 franchise based on the idea that courts in the Judicial Branch may not interfere with the internal affairs of another branch
30 such as the Executive Branch. Hence, the “INTERNAL Revenue Service”. This will protect the franchise from 31 interference by other branches of the government and ensure that it relentlessly expands.
- 32 6.1. The Anti-Injunction Act, 26 U.S.C. §7421 is an example of an act that enjoins judicial interference with tax 33 collection or assessment.
- 34 6.2. The Declaratory Judgments Act, 28 U.S.C. §2201(a) prohibits federal courts from pronouncing the rights or status
35 of persons in regard to federal “taxes”. This has the effect of gagging the courts from telling the truth about the 36 nature of the federal income tax.
- 37 6.3. The word “internal” means INTERNAL to the Executive Branch and the United States government, not 38 INTERNAL to the geographical United States of America.
- 39 7. Create administrative “franchise” courts in the Executive Branch which administer the program pursuant to Articles I 40 and IV of the United States Constitution.
- 41 7.1. The U.S. Supreme Court calls such courts “The Fourth Branch of Government”, as indicated in:
42

- 43 7.2. U.S. Tax Court. 26 U.S.C. §7441 identifies the U.S. Tax Court as an Article I court.
- 44 7.3. U.S. District Courts. There is no statute establishing any United States District Court as an Article III court.
45 Consequently, even if the judges are Article III judges, they are not filling an Article III office and instead are filling
46 an Article IV office. Consequently, they are Article IV judges. All of these courts were turned into franchise courts
47 in the Judicial Code of 1911 by being renamed from the “District Court of the United States” to the “United States
48 District Court”.

8. Create other attractive federal franchises that piggyback in their agreements a requirement to participate in the franchise.
For instance:

- 1 8.1. The original Social Security Act of 1935 contains a provision that those who sign up for this program, also
2 simultaneously become subject to the Internal Revenue Code.

3 Section 8 of the Social Security Act
4 INCOME TAX ON EMPLOYEES

6 SECTION 801. In addition to other taxes, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the income of every
7 individual a tax equal to the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 811) received by him after 8 December 31, 1936, with respect to employment (as defined in section 811) after such date:

10 (1) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1937, 1938, and 1939, the rate shall be 1 per centum.
11 (2) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1940, 1941, and 1942, the rate shall 1 1/2 per centum.
12 (3) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1943, 1944, and 1945, the rate shall be 2 per centum.
13 (4) With respect to employment during the calendar years 1946, 1947, and 1948, the rate shall be 2 1/2 per 14 centum.
15 (5) With respect to employment after December 31, 1948, the rate shall be 3 per centum.

- 16 8.2. Most state vehicle codes have “residence” in the state as a prerequisite to signing up for a driver’s license and they 17 also mandate supplying a Social Security Number to get a license. Hence, by signing up for a driver’s license, you
18 are signing up for the following THREE franchises:

19 8.2.1. The Vehicle code franchise.

20 8.2.2. The domicile “civil protection franchise” tied to those who are “residents”. This is what makes the applicant
21 a “taxpayer” in the state’s income tax codes. See:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

22 8.2.3. The Social Security Franchise. See:

Resignation of Compelled Social Security Trustee, Form #06.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

- 23 9. Offer an opportunity for private citizens not domiciled within the jurisdiction of Congress to “volunteer” by license or 24 private agreement to participate in the franchise and thereby become “public officers” within the Legislative Branch.
25 The IRS Form W-4 and Social Security SS-5 form are an example of such a contract.

26 9.1. Call these volunteers “taxpayers”.

27 9.2. Call EVERYONE “taxpayers” so everyone believes that the franchise is MANDATORY.

28 9.3. Do not even acknowledge the existence of those who do not participate in the franchise. These people are called 29 “nontaxpayers” and they are not mentioned in any IRS publication, even though the following recognize their 30 existence:

31 9.3.1. The U.S. Supreme Court in South Carolina v. Regan, 465 U.S. 367 (1984).

32 9.3.2. 26 U.S.C. §7426, which refers to them as “persons other than taxpayers”.

33 9.4. Make the process of signing the agreement invisible by calling it a “Withholding Allowance Certificate” instead of 34 what it really is, which is a “license” to become a “taxpayer” and call all of your earnings “wages” and “gross 35 income”.

36 26 C.F.R. §31.3401\(a\)-3 Amounts deemed wages under voluntary withholding agreements

37 (a) In general.

38 Notwithstanding the exceptions to the definition of wages specified in section 3401(a) and the regulations
39 thereunder, the term “wages” includes the amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section with respect
40 to which there is a voluntary withholding agreement in effect under section 3402(p). References in this chapter
41 to the definition of wages contained in section 3401(a) shall be deemed to refer also to this section (§31.3401(a)-

46 Subpart E—Collection of Income Tax at Source

47 §31.3402\(p\)-1 Voluntary withholding agreements.

48 (a) In general.

49 An employee and his employer may enter into an agreement under section 3402(b) to provide for the withholding
50 of income tax upon payments of amounts described in paragraph (b)(1) of §31.3401(a)-3, made after December
51 31, 1970. An agreement may be entered into under this section only with respect to amounts which are includible in the gross income of the employee under section 61, and must be applicable to all such amounts paid by the employer to the employee. The amount to be withheld pursuant to an agreement under section 3402(p) shall be determined under the rules contained in section 3402 and the regulations thereunder. See §31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-3 concerning agreements to have more than 20-percent Federal income tax withheld from eligible rollover distributions within the meaning of section 402.

10. Create a commissioner to service the franchise who:

10.1. Becomes the “fall guy”, who then establishes a “bureau” without the authority of any law and which is a private corporation that is not part of the U.S. government.

53 Stat. 489
Revenue Act of 1939, 53 Stat. 489
Chapter 43: Internal Revenue Agents
Section 4000 Appointment

The Commissioner may, whenever in his judgment the necessities of the service so require, employ competent agents, who shall be known and designated as internal revenue agents, and, except as provided for in this title, no general or special agent or inspector of the Treasury Department in connection with internal revenue, by whatever designation he may be known, shall be appointed, commissioned, or employed.

10.2. Creates and manages a PRIVATE company that is not part of the government. The IRS, in fact, is NOT part of the U.S. government and has no legal authority to exist, and therefore can service only those INTERNAL to the government. All agencies that interact DIRECTLY with the PRIVATE public must be authorized by Congress. Hence, “INTERNAL Revenue Service”. See:

Origins and Authority of the Internal Revenue Service, Form #05.005
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

The above means that everyone who works for the Internal Revenue Service is private contractor not appointed, commissioned, or employed by anyone in the government. They operation on commission and their pay derives from the amount of plunder they steal. See also:

Department of Justice Admits under Penalty of Perjury that the IRS is Not an Agency of the Federal Government, Family Guardian Fellowship
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Evidence/USGovDeniesIRS/USGovDeniesIRS.htm>

11. Create an environment that encourages omission in enforcing justice, irresponsibility, lies, and dishonesty within the bureau that administers the franchise.

11.1. Indemnify these private contractors from liability by giving them “pseudonyms” so that they can disguise their identify and be indemnified from liability for their criminal acts. The IRS Restructuring and Reform Act, Pub.Law 105-206, Title III, Section 3706, 112 Stat. 778 and Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 1.2.4 both authorize these pseudonyms.

11.2. Place a disclaimer on the website of this private THIEF contractor indemnifying them from liability for the truthfulness or accuracy of any of their statements or publications. See Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8.

“IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position.”
[Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 4.10.7.2.8 (05-14-1999)]

11.3. Allow employees of the agency to operate without either identifying their full legal birthname but rather a pseudonym. IRS employees DO NOT use their real name so they can act essentially as anonymous, masked, international terrorists (the states are nations under the law of nations) sanctioned by law. See:

Notice of Pseudonym Use and Unreliable Tax Records, Form #04.206
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11.4. Omit the most important key facts and information from publications of the franchise administrator that would expose the proper application of the “tax” and the proper audience. See the following, which is over 2000 pages of information that are conveniently “omitted” from the IRS website about the proper application of the franchise and its nature as a “franchise”:

Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

11.5. Establish precedent in federal courts that you can’t trust anything that anyone in the government tells you, and especially those who administer the franchise. See:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/Articles/IRSNotResponsible.htm>

12. Use the lies and deceptions created in the previous step to promote several false perceptions in the public at large that will expand the market for the franchise. These include:
- 12.1. That the franchise is NOT a franchise, but a mandatory requirement that applies to ALL. In fact it can and does apply ONLY to statutory “taxpayers” and you have to VOLUNTEER to become a statutory “taxpayer” before it can have the “force of law” in your case.
- 12.2. That participation is mandatory for ALL, instead of only for franchisees called “taxpayers”.
- 12.3. That the IRS is an “agency” of the United States government that has authority to interact directly with the public at large. In fact, it is a “bureau” that can ONLY lawfully service the needs of other federal agencies within the Executive Branch and which may NOT interface directly with the public at large.
- 12.4. That the statutes implementing the franchise are “public law” that applies to everyone, instead of “private law” that only applies to those who individually consent to participate in the franchise.
13. Create a system to service those who prepare tax returns for others whereby those who accept being “licensed” and regulated get special favors. This system created by the IRS essentially punishes those who do not participate by deliberately giving them horrible service and making them suffer inconvenience and waiting long in line if they don’t accept the “privilege” of being certified. Once they are certified, if they begin telling people the truth about what the law says and encourage following the law by refusing to volunteer, their credentials are pulled. This sort of censorship is accomplished through:
- 13.1. IRS Enrolled Agent Program.
- 13.2. Certified Public Accountant (CPA) licensing.
- 13.3. Treasury Circular 230.
14. Engage in a pattern of “selective enforcement” and propaganda to broaden and expand the scam. For instance:
- 14.1. Refuse to answer simple questions about the proper application of the franchise and the taxes associated with it. See:
- If the IRS Were Selling Used Cars, Family Guardian Fellowship*
<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/FalseRhetoric/IRSSellingCars.htm>
- 14.2. Prosecute those who submit false TAX returns, but not those who submit false INFORMATION returns. This causes the audience of “taxpayers” to expand because false reports are connecting innocent third parties to franchises that they are not in fact engaged in.
- 14.3. Use confusion over the rules of statutory construction and the word “includes” to fool people into believing that those who are “included” in the franchise are not spelled out in the law in their entirety. This leaves undue discretion in the hands of IRS employees to compel ignorant “nontaxpayers” to become franchisees. See the following:
- Legal Deception, Propaganda, and Fraud*, Form #05.014
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>
- 14.4. Refuse to define the words used on government forms, use terms that are not defined in the code such as “U.S. citizen”, and try to confuse “words of art” found in the law with common terms in order to use the presumptuous behavior of the average American to expand the misperception that everyone has a legal DUTY to become a “franchisee” and a “taxpayer”.
- 14.5. Refuse to accept corrected information returns that might protect innocent “nontaxpayers” so that they are inducted involuntarily into the franchise as well.

The above process is WICKED in the most extreme way. It describes EXACTLY how our public servants have made themselves into our masters and systematically replaced every one of our rights with “privileges” and franchises. The Constitutional prohibition against this sort of corruption are described as follows by the courts:

“It would be a palpable incongruity to strike down an act of state legislation which, by words of express divestment, seeks to strip the citizen of rights guaranteed by the federal Constitution, but to uphold an act by which the same result is accomplished under the guise of a surrender of a right in exchange for a valuable privilege which the state threatens otherwise to withhold. It is not necessary to challenge the proposition that, as a general rule, the state, having power to deny a privilege altogether, may grant it upon such conditions as it sees fit to impose. But the power of the state in that respect is not unlimited, and one of the limitations is that it may not impose conditions which require the relinquishment of Constitutional rights. If the state may compel the surrender of one constitutional right as a condition of its favor, it may, in like manner, compel a surrender of all. It is inconceivable that guaranties embedded in the Constitution of the United States may thus be manipulated out of existence.”

[Frost v. Railroad Commission, 271 U.S. 583, 46 S.Ct. 605 (1926)]

“A right common in every citizen such as the right to own property or to engage in business of a character not requiring regulation CANNOT, however, be taxed as a special franchise by first prohibiting its exercise and then permitting its enjoyment upon the payment of a certain sum of money.”

1 [Stevens v. State, 2 Ark. 291, 35 Am.Dec. 72; Spring Val. Water Works v. Barber, 99 Cal. 36, 33 Pac. 735, 21

3 "The individual, unlike the corporation, cannot be taxed for the mere privilege of existing. The corporation is an
4 artificial entity which owes its existence and charter power to the State, but the individual's right to live and own
5 property are natural rights for the enjoyment of which an excise cannot be imposed."
6 [Redfield v. Fisher, 292 Oregon 814, 817]

7 "Legislature...cannot name something to be a taxable privilege unless it is first a privilege." [Taxation West Key
8 43]..."The Right to receive income or earnings is a right belonging to every person and realization and receipt 9 of income is therefore not a 'privilege', that can be taxed."
10 [Jack Cole Co. v. MacFarland, 337 S.W.2d. 453, Tenn.]

11 Through the above process of corruption, the separation of powers is completely destroyed and nearly every American has 12 essentially been "assimilated" into the Executive Branch of the government, leaving the Constitutional Republic bequeathed
13 to us by our founding fathers vacant and abandoned. Nearly every service that we expect from government has been
14 systematically converted over the years into a franchise using the techniques described above. The political and legal changes
15 resulting from the above have been tabulated to show the "BEFORE" and the "AFTER" so their extremely harmful effects
16 become crystal clear in your mind. This process of corruption, by the way, is not unique to the United States, but is found in 17 every major industrialized country on Earth.

9 6.5 General Evolution

10 If the average American is not legally liable to pay taxes on his earned income, then how did we evolve to the point where 11 we have to pay income taxes in violation of our constitutional rights? We’ve scoured every tax book and government
12 publication we could find totaling thousands of pages to compile a chronological sequence for how the fraud was perpetrated
13 over the last century. Because this process involves essentially criminal activity, there has been a concerted effort by the 14 government to cover it up, which we will describe in detail later. The most glaring evidence of that cover-up is found in the 15 testimony of Shelley Davis, the IRS’ only historian, who testified in front of Congress during the IRS Restructuring hearings
16 in 1998 and whose testimony we captured for you to read later in section 6.9.9.1. She also wrote a book documenting the secret culture within the IRS entitled Unbridled Power which we highly recommend. Criminals, you will recall, don't want any historical information maintained about their misdeeds, and the IRS is one of the few organizations associated with the federal government that has no historical records, no current historian, and a concerted effort to provide as little information about their activities in their FOIA responses as possible. In most cases, you actually have to litigate against the IRS in federal court to get the information you want because they are so tight-lipped in their cover-up of their wrongdoing.

The most fruitful single source for information about the history of the Internal Revenue Service is found in a publication written by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in 1948 entitled The Work and Jurisdiction of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, 1948, which we have published electronically and made freely available on our website at the below address:

<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/IRS/WorkAndJurisOfTheBIR1948s.pdf>

You will DEFINITELY want to download this large book (10.8 Mbytes) and read the history of the IRS right out of the horse's mouth. Below is a brief chronology of w the fraud was perpetrated over the years, as compiled from the many government publications at our disposal:

1. 1776: Declaration of Independence Signed.

2. 1818: U.S. v. Bevens, 16 U.S. 336 (1818)

The U.S. supreme Court ruled that there are two separate and distinct jurisdictions within the United States of America:

*"The exclusive jurisdiction which the United States have in forts and dock-yards ceded to them, is derived from the express assent of the states by whom the cessions are made. It could be derived in no other manner; because without it, the authority of the state would be supreme and exclusive therein," 3 Wheat., at 350, 351.
[U.S. v. Bevens, 16 U.S. 336 (1818)]*

This case is very significant, because it has never been overruled and when we read laws in the U.S. Codes, it is very important for us to establish which of these two jurisdictions apply. If it is the latter jurisdiction, the 50 union states, then the law applies to us. If it is the former jurisdiction, also called the "federal zone", then the law doesn't apply to the vast majority of citizens domiciled in the 50 union states. The Internal Revenue Code, incidentally, ONLY applies to the "federal zone"...not to you!

3. 1861-1865: Civil War

4. January 1, 1863: Emancipation Proclamation signed by President Lincoln

5. 1862: The Nation's First Income Tax

- 5.1 President Lincoln introduced the first income tax to pay for the Civil War. Congress eliminated the tax in 1872.
- 5.2 The Tax Act of 1862 was passed and signed by President Lincoln July 1 1862. The rates were 3% on income above $600 and 5% on income above $10,000. The rent or rental value of your home could be deducted from income in determining the tax liability. The Commissioner of Revenue stated "The people of this country have accepted it with cheerfulness, to meet a temporary exigency, and it has excited no serious complaint in its administration." This acceptance was primarily due to the need for revenue to finance the Civil War.
- 5.3 Although the people cheerfully accepted the tax, compliance was not high. Figures released after the Civil War indicated that 276,661 people actually filed tax returns in 1870 (the year of the highest returns filed) when the country's population was approximately 38 million.
- 5.4 With the end of the Civil War the public's accepted cheerfulness waned. The Tax Act of 1864 was modified after the war. The rates were changed to a flat 5 percent with the exemption amount raised to $1,000. Several attempts to make the tax permanent were tried but by 1869 "no businessman could pass the day without suffering from those burdens" From 1870 to 1872 the rate was a flat 2.5 percent and the exemption amount was raised to $2,000.

6. 1868: States Ratify the 14th Amendment

- 6.1 Citizenship was extended to Blacks. This was done in order to protect blacks, because southern states would give them no citizenship or rights under state law.
- 6.2 Legislatures of the Southern States under gun point were forced to ratify the 14th Amendment.
- 6.3 Just before the passage of the 14th Amendment, Congress passed a revision to the Statutes at Large which gave people a way out of being constitutional "citizens of the United States", 15 Stat. 223-224 (1868), R.S. § 1999, which stated that:

"the right of expatriation is a natural and inherent right of all people, indispensable to the enjoyment of the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and decreed that "any declaration, instruction, opinion, order, or decision of any officers of this government which denies, restricts, impairs, or questions the right of expatriation, is hereby declared inconsistent with the fundamental principles of this government."

7. 1871: U.S. Inc. Federal Corporation Established

District of Columbia Organic Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419-429 created a "municipal corporation" to govern the District of Columbia. Considering the fact that the municipal corporation itself was incorporated in 1801, an "Organic Act" (first Act) using the term "municipal corporation" in 1871 can only mean a private corporation owned by the municipality. Hereinafter we will call that private corporation, "Corp. U.S." By consistent usage, Corp. U.S. trademarked the name, "United States Government" referring to themselves. The District of Columbia Organic Act of 1871, 16 Stat. 419-429 places Congress in control (like a corporate board) and gives the purpose of the act to form a governing body over the municipality; this allowed Congress to direct the business needs of the government under the existent martial law and provided them with corporate abilities they would not otherwise have. This was done under the constitutional authority for Congress to pass any law within the ten mile square of the District of Columbia..

8. 1872: Nation's First Income Tax was Repealed

The Internal Revenue Act of 1862 was repealed, ending the nation's first income tax. The civil war was over and paid for and there was no longer any reason for the tax.

9. 1872: Office of the Assessor of Internal Revenue Eliminated

Functions of Assessor delegated to the Collector of Internal Revenue. See: 17 Statutes at Large, p. 401, 42nd Congress, Session III Chapter XIII (December 24, 1872).

10. 1875: U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875). Supreme Court Confirms that there are Two Types of Citizens: federal and state

"We have in our political system a Government of the United States and a government of each of the several States. Each of these governments is distinct from the others, and each has citizens of its own

...

"Both before and after the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, it has not been necessary for a person to be a citizen of the United States in order to be a citizen of his state."
[Citing U.S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1875)]

11. 1894: Caha v. United States, 152 U.S. 211 (1894)

The U.S. supreme Court ruled that Congress can only make laws that apply to areas over which it has exclusive jurisdiction, which is the "federal zone", including the District of Columbia and other federal territories. It cannot make laws affecting activity within the states unless the Constitution explicitly grants that authority:

"The law of Congress in respect to those matters do not extend into the territorial limits of the states, but have force only in the District of Columbia, and other places that are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the national government."

12. 1895: Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895)

12.1 U.S. Supreme court ruled that direct taxes on the income of individuals are unconstitutional and are forbidden.

12.2 Here was the court's ruling:

"Nothing can be clearer than that what the constitution intended to guard against was the exercise by the general government of the power of directly taxing persons and property within any state through a majority made up from the other states. It is true that the effect of requiring direct taxes to be apportioned among the states in proportion to their population is necessarily that the amount of taxes on the individual [157 U.S. 429, 583] taxpayer in a state having the taxable subject-matter to a larger extent in proportion to its population than another state has, would be less than in such other state; but this inequality must be held to have been contemplated, and was manifestly designed to operate to restrain the exercise of the power of direct taxation to extraordinary emergencies, and to prevent an attack upon accumulated property by mere force of numbers.

1 It is the duty of the court in this case simply to determine whether the income tax now before it does or does not
2 belong to the class of direct taxes, and if it does, to decide the constitutional question which follows . . .

3 First. That the law in question, in imposing a tax on the income or rents of real estate, imposes a tax upon the
4 real estate itself; and in imposing a tax on the interest or other income of bonds or other personal property, held
5 for the purposes of income or ordinarily yielding income, imposes a tax upon the personal estate itself; that such
6 tax is a direct tax, and void because imposed without regard to the rule of apportionment; and that by reason
7 thereof the whole law is invalidated.

8 Second. That the law is invalid, because imposing indirect taxes in violation of the constitutional requirement of 9 uniformity, and therein also in violation of the implied limitation upon taxation that all tax laws must apply
10 equally, impartially, and uniformly to all similarly situated. Under the second head, it is contended that the rule
11 of uniformity is violated, in that the law taxes the income of certain corporations, companies, and associations,
12 no matter how created or organized, at a higher rate than the incomes of individuals or partnerships derived
13 from precisely similar property or business; in that it exempts from the operation of the act and from the burden
14 of taxation numerous corporations, companies, and associations having similar property and carrying on similar 15 business to those expressly taxed; in that it denies to individuals deriving their income from shares in certain 16 corporations, companies, and associations the benefit of the exemption of $ 4,000 granted to other persons
17 interested in similar property and business; in the exemption of $4,000; in the exemption of building and loan
18 associations, savings banks, mutual life, fire, marine, and accident insurance companies, existing solely for the 19 pecuniary profit of their members,-these and other exemptions being alleged to be purely arbitrary and 20 capricious, justified by no public purpose, and of such magnitude as to invalidate the entire enactment; and in 21 other particulars. "

23 13. 1900: Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)

24 The U.S. supreme Court defined the difference between direct taxes [income taxes on persons] and excise taxes:

25 "Direct taxes bear immediately upon persons, upon the possession and enjoyment of rights; indirect taxes are 26 levied upon the happening of an event as an exchange."
27 [Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41 (1900)]

28 14. 1901: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901): Corruption of our Tax System

29 14.1 The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that people domiciled in federal territories such as Puerto Rico, Guam, the District
30 of Columbia, and the Virgin Islands, are NOT protected by the U.S. Constitution. Therefore, these people could 31 be subjected to direct taxes on income because they were classified as citizens of the U.S.

32 14.2 Below is an excerpt from that ruling:

33 "CONSTITUTIONAL RESTRICTIONS AND LIMITATIONS [Bill of Rights] WERE NOT APPLICABLE to the 34 areas of lands, enclaves, territories, and possessions over which Congress had EXCLUSIVE LEGISLATIVE 35 JURISDICTION"
36 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)]

37 14.3 This lead subsequently to the imposition of direct taxes on the income of individuals who were U.S. Citizens
38 following the fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment in 1913.

39 14.4 This ruling was also behind why income tax returns after this case ask you: "Are you a U.S. Citizen?". Once you
40 answer yes, you give up your constitutional rights! See sections 4.6 and 4.8 for further details on this.

41 15. 1909: Congress proposed the 16th Amendment and sent to states for ratification

42 15.1 The Senate approved it by an astounding vote of 77 to zero and the House followed suit with a roll call of 318 to 43 14.

44 15.2 The measure then went to the states for ratification.

45 16. 1909: Corporate Excise Tax of 1909 was passed, 36 Stat 112.

46 16.1 This was the country's first income tax, where "income" was defined as corporate profit.

47 16.2 All subsequent income tax laws and the Internal Revenue Code itself were based on this.

48 16.3 The Supreme Court ruled in Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926) that:

49 "Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112)
50 in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
51 Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., [271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

52 17. 1911: Judicial Code of 1911:

This act abolished the existing circuit courts and replaced them with Circuit Courts of Appeals. The District Courts of the United States became "United States District Courts". This left no Article III courts to hear cases involving constitutional rights. All district and circuit courts became, at that point, Article II courts which may only have jurisdiction within territories of the United States Government. These courts are part of the executive branch, not the judicial branch, of the U.S. government. The judges in these Art. II courts are civil service employees of the Office of Personnel Management, which is part of the Executive Branch. The judges are not judicial officers as required under Art. III of the Constitution, but federal employees.

18. Feb. 12, 1913: 42nd state "allegedly" voted for approval of 16th Amendment, and the following words became a part of the United States Constitution:

"The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Of course, we all know that the claim that the 16th amendment was ratified by the then secretary of state Philander Knox this was indeed one of the biggest "frauds" in history that has not to this day ever been questioned or investigated by a Congress that wants YOUR money. It ought to be quite obvious why the Supreme court won't touch this and the Congress has refused to investigate this fraud from the beginning. You can read about this fraud in a book called "Law That Never Was" by ordering the book from the following website:

19. Oct. 3, 1913: Tariff Act

The Tariff Act of October 3, 1913, IIE, 38 Stat. 170 was passed, and it contained, perhaps somewhat surprisingly, a fairly expansive withholding provision. It was later repealed and replaced with the 1954 Code, 26 U.S.C. §6041 et seq.

20. 1913: Congress creates the Federal Reserve System with the Federal Reserve Act of 1913

20.1 Congress creates the FRS; permits the emission of FRNs, redeemable in "lawful money"; and declares FRNs to be "obligations of the United States", but not "legal tender". In practice, the Federal Reserve Banks and the United States Treasury redeem FRNs for gold coin on demand. FRNs are a fiduciary currency.

20.2 Note that the Federal Reserve and the income tax were enacted at the same time because they cannot function without each other. If we are going to put our money supply in the hands of private bankers, then we need a way to sop up excess printed dollars with an income tax, or the economy will go out of control and inflation will spiral. Since both the income tax and the Federal Reserve are evil, we must eliminate both of them at the same time as well.

21.1 Announced after its alleged ratification that it was the basis for the new income tax which only the wealthy would pay. The camel now had its nose under the tent and all Congress had to do was raise the tax rates over time and let the camel all the way in.

21.2 Who controlled the printed media in 1913? John D. Rockefeller and his bankers, through stock ownership.

21.3 Most of the papers parroted what they were instructed to tell the people.

21.4 To this day, a nationwide chorus of politicians, TV economists and Law school professors alike all repeat that the 16th Amendment authorized the imposition of an income tax on U.S. citizens. They are all mistaken.

22.1 The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the 16th Amendment conferred "no new powers of taxation"!

22.2 Here are some excerpts. The 16th Amendment...:

"...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."
[Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916)]

22.3 This was a big blow to the IRS. Shortly after that case Treasury Decision 2313 was issued as a form of "damage control".

23. March 21, 1916: Treasury Decision 2313

The Great IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship

<http://famguardian.org/>

23.1 Thwarted by the Brushaber and Stanton decisions, the Department of Treasury issued Treasury Decision Number 2313. Here are a few excerpted quotes from T.D. 2313 in reference to the Brushaber decision:

"...it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends...is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on ...Form 1040..."

23.2 So there you have it. The Treasury Department has stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal." So don't forget to do that next April 15th! Of course, since you'll be signing Form 1040 under penalties of perjury and stating that every material fact is 100% correct to the best of your knowledge, and since the commission of perjury is a felony that attaches criminal fines and penalties, be sure you really are filing Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal"!

23.3 By reading Internal Revenue Code section 871(a), we see that it imposes a tax of 30% on the amount received by non-resident aliens from sources within the United States. Code section 871(b) states that the nonresident alien shall be taxable under code section 1, thus authorizing the use of the charts in section 1 to compute and reduce his tax, so he can get a tax refund from the 30% which is withheld under the provisions of section 1441.

23.4 Also, under section 874(a), the nonresident alien is entitled to the benefit of deductions and credits filing or having his agent file, a 1040, as stated in TD 2313.

23.5 Of course, this whole fiasco has nothing whatsoever to do with most Americans, who aren't liable for federal income taxes at all unless they make themselves liable by "volunteering"!

24. 1920: Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920); Supreme Court Declares Direct Taxes on Federal Judges to Not be Authorized by the 16th Amendment and Unconstitutional

24.1 In this case, the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether a tax on salary was authorized:

"After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not authorize or support the tax in question." [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]

[Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920)]

24.2 This case has a very thorough treatment of the 16th Amendment taxing issues, and discusses nearly all of the issues critical to the income tax, and by the way, fully supports the entire position advocated in this document with regards to the 26 U.S.C. §861 issues and taxable source issues.

25. 1922: Supreme Court Rules Against Socialism in the Case of Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922)

25.1 This case was about the validity of Child Labor Tax law imposed by Congress. The Drexel Furniture Company filed suit because it didn't want to be forced to pay the Child Labor Tax to the IRS. The Supreme Court ruled that the Child Labor Tax Law was unconstitutional because it amounted to social engineering and exceeded the powers conferred by the Constitution on the federal government. In effect, they called it socialism and an abuse of the taxing and legal authority of Congress conferred by the Constitution and amounted to legislating socialism by legislatively plundering the employer profits for the benefit of the employees. The findings in this case are similar to the case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935). The arguments used here apply equally well to the federal income tax, as we pointed out in the preface to this document.

"Out of a proper respect for the acts of a co-ordinate branch of the government, this court has gone far to sustain taxing acts as such, even though there has been ground for suspecting, from the weight of the tax, it was intended to destroy its subject. But in the act before [259 U.S. 20, 38] us the presumption of validity cannot prevail, because the proof of the contrary is found on the very face of its provisions. Grant the validity of this law, and all that Congress would need to do, hereafter, in seeking to take over to its control any one of the great number of subjects of public interest, jurisdiction of which the states have never parted with, and which are reserved to them by the Tenth Amendment, would be to enact a detailed measure of complete regulation of the subject and enforce it by a so-called tax upon departures from it. To give such magic to the word 'tax' would be to break down all constitutional limitation of the powers of Congress and completely wipe out the sovereignty of the states."

25.2 Keep in mind the historical context of this ruling. The Federal Reserve had just been created by Congress AND the 16th Amendment had just been claimed fraudulently to have been ratified by Philander Knox, also in 1913. The tax code of 1921 had just been passed by 1922, which was a major rewrite of the code designed to conceal the unconstitutionality of income taxes on individuals. Now Congress was trying to expand its power even further by abusing its legislative authority to force employers to increase benefits to their workers!

26. 1925: Certiorari Act of 1925 Passed

- 26.1 Former President William Howard Taft, then acting as Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, helped author a bill called the Certiorari Act of 1925. Recall that William Taft had been the President who introduced the Sixteenth Amendment to the U.S. Congress in 1909 (see section 3.11.11.1 for further details on this). This Act authorized the U.S. Supreme Court to have discretion to deny the hearing of appeals from lower federal appeal courts. By refusing to hear an appeal, the Supreme Court in effect had the right to deny Constitutional rights of the appellants from the circuit courts if such rights had been violated by the lower courts or the then Bureau of Internal Revenue (now called the IRS). Justices of the Supreme Court take an oath to support and defend the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and by denying appeals, they could in effect violate their oath and condone extortion by the BIR. This kind of scandal is called a sin of omission and its commonplace in the Supreme Court now.
- 26.2 When you think about it, the Certiorari Act of 1925 violates the separation of powers doctrine because the Judiciary and the Congress are supposed to be separate and sovereign powers within the federal government. How can one branch of government, the Congress in this case, authorize another supposedly independent branch of federal government, the Supreme Court in this Case, to violate the Constitutional rights of Americans by denying their appeals? They can't, because if the appeal involves constitutional issues, then they would not be upholding the constitution as their oath of office requires them to do!
- 26.3 As we explain subsequently in section 6.7.1, this bill was an important new tool that our corrupt government could use to uphold the federal income tax, because it allows the federal district and circuit courts to uphold and expand federal income taxes while allowing the U.S. Supreme Court to deny appeals from such cases, even if the findings of the lower court disagreed with numerous precedents set on previous Supreme Court cases that invalidate direct federal income taxes. It creates a schizophrenic, split personality federal government which, out of one side of its mouth, the Supreme Court, says income taxes are indirect excise taxes that are not authorized on natural persons as direct taxes, but then out of the other side of its mouth in the federal district and circuit courts, says direct income taxes are authorized by the Sixteenth Amendment. This represents not only hypocrisy of the highest order but also a violation of our fundamental right to due process under the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh Amendments! How can you know what the Internal Revenue Code requires of you if the Supreme Court and the federal circuit courts can't even consistently agree and the Supreme Court refuses to hear appeals that contradict its own precedents?

27. 1933: FDR Amends the Trading With The Enemy Act of 1917 to Confiscate all Gold and Declare Emergency

- 27.1 Trading With The Enemy Act invoked to criminalize holding of gold. Penalty was $10,000 and imprisonment for 10 years. Act only applied on federal territories and possessions but not inside nonfederal areas of the 50 union states. However, FDR make it "appear" that it applied to EVERYONE.
- 27.2 Congress repudiates redemption of FRNs in gold for United States citizens, and declares that FRNs shall be "legal tender". The government continues to redeem FRNs in gold for foreigners; and United States citizens can redeem FRNs for "lawful money" (such as United States Treasury Notes and silver certificates), which is redeemable in silver coins. Therefore, FRNs remain a fiduciary currency, redeemable directly in gold internationally and indirectly in silver domestically.

28. 1935: FDR Proposes and Congress Passes the Social Security Act of 1935

- 28.1 FDR gave a pep talk to congress on January 17, 1935 trying to sell Social Security.
- 28.2 Congress passed FDR's Social Security Act of 1935 on August 14, 1935.
- 28.3 Once passed, socialism is officially "institutionalized" within our republican government. This marks the beginning of the end of "rugged individualism" in America. The tumor is planted and begins to grow. Eventually, this cancer will destroy the country.
- 28.4 Voluntary Social Security tax deductions begin.

29. 1935: Supreme Court Rules Against Socialism AGAIN in the Case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)

- 29.1 After the Great Wall Street Crash in 1929, daily newspaper photographs of mile-long soup and bread lines persuaded a frightened public to eagerly embrace the introduction of the European style socialism in the form of Social Security, written and contrived in smoke-filled rooms by the same politician-puppets of the bankers who had engineered both the crash and the depression.
- 29.2 A public eager to exchange liberty for benefits would vote for those politicians who would promise to provide them with the greatest "fair share" of the public trough. Congress made its first attempt at socialist wealth redistribution when it passed legislation in 1934 to provide for the retirement of railroad workers. Here's what the Supreme Court had to say when they shot this act down as unconstitutional in their decision in Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Company decided May 6, 1935:

1                   "The catalog of means and actions which might be imposed upon an employer in any business, tending to the
 2                   comfort and satisfaction of his employees, seems endless.

3                   Provisions for free medical attendance and nursing, for clothing, for food, for housing, for the education of
 4                   children, and a hundred other matters might with equal propriety be proposed as tending to relieve the employee
 5                   of mental strain and worry.

6                   Can it fairly be said that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce extends to the prescription of 7                   any or all of these things?

8                   Is it not apparent that they are really and essentially related solely to social welfare of the worker, and therefore
 9                   remote from any regulation of commerce as such? We think the answer is plain. These matters obviously lie
 10                   outside the orbit of Congressional power."
 11                   [Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)]

12           29.3 There you have it--the high court informing Congress that it has no constitutional authority whatsoever to legislate
 13           for the social welfare of the worker. The result was that when Social Security was instituted, it had to be treated as 14           strictly voluntary.

15 30. 1937: President Franklin D. Roosevelt "Stacks" the Supreme Court to Ramrod His Socialist Programs Down 16 Our Throats!!!

17           Thwarted by resistance to his socialist programs, including Social Security, in 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt
 18           announced he was going to "stack" the Supreme Court (see <http://www.hpol.org/fdr/chat/>). This was called "the court
 19           packing plan". The Supreme court originally had 6 justices, and he doubled its size by adding several of his own
 20           "cronies" who would uphold and defend his socialist programs, including Social Security and the Victory Tax. He also 21           proposed to replace all the justices over 70, which included 5 of the 6 justices then in office.

22 31. 1939: Congress Obfuscates the Tax Code by Removing References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of 23 "Gross Income"

24           31.1 In particular, they removed the phrase "in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits
 25           of section 262" from the 1921 code, which was the predecessor to 26 U.S.C. §861 we have today. There was not
 26           fundamental change in the constitution or the law. They made these changes to further conceal the truth.
 27           31.2 See section 6.3.7 "Cover-Up of 1939: Removed References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of 'Gross
 28           Income'" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

29 32. Victory Tax Act of 1942, imposed by the Revenue Act of 1942, 172, 56 Stat. 884. Part of the 1939 Tax Code.

30           32.1 This act was a voluntary employer payroll deduction of income taxes required in order to fight World War II. It
 31           represented the start of employer withholding, but note that it was entirely voluntary.
 32           32.2 As a part of the Victory Tax Act, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt created the Voluntary W-4 Withholding
 33           System, making income tax withholding mandatory for all citizens of the Union. This was a two year tax, and as 34           expected, both the Victory Tax and the Voluntary W-4 Withholding were repealed by Congress in 1944.
 35           Unfortunately, they forgot to tell America.
 36           32.3 Under the disguise of the 1913 Internal Income tax, the machinery of the Victory tax remained in operation.
 37           Voluntary compliance with the Federal internal income tax jumped from an anemic 5 percent to a robust 60 percent
 38           in a matter of a couple years via the repealed Victory tax system of tax collection. By using two illegitimate tax
 39           systems, Congress created the beast we have today, taxing us under rates and conditions exceeding those which 40           prompted the Boston Tea Party and the Declaration of Independence.
 41           32.4 The Victory Tax was replaced by the Current Tax Payment Act of 1943, 57 Stat. 126, and was repealed by the 42           Individual Income Tax Act of 1944, 6 (a), 58 Stat. 234.

43 33. 1943: President Franklin Delano Roosevelt's Executive Order 9397 made Social Security Numbers a standard 44 tracking mechanism across all federal agencies. Bye-bye privacy and Fourth Amendment!

46           http://resource.lawlinks.com/Content/Legal\_Research/Executive\_Orders/1940-1960/executive\_order\_9397.htm

47 34. 1947: U.S. v. Silk, 331 U.S. 704 (1947) Declares Social Security Taxes are Legitimate Excise Taxes On Businesses

48           34.1 FDR's stacking of the Supreme Court finally pays off!
 49           34.2 The cancer of socialism begins to spread further with encouragement by the state.

34.3 Thomas Jefferson's warnings and predictions are realized:

"In every government on earth is some trace of human weakness, some germ of corruption and degeneracy, which cunning will discover, and wickedness insensibly open, cultivate and improve."
[Thomas Jefferson: Notes on Virginia Q.XIV, 1782. ME 2:207]

35. 1952: IRS Reorganization and elimination of the Office of Collector of Internal Revenue

35.1 Office of Collector of Internal Revenue abolished. See Reorganization Plans No. 26 of 1950 and No. 1 of 1952, and Notes under 26 U.S.C. §7804, "Amendments" at:

https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/26/7804?qt-us\_code\_temp\_noupdates=1#qt-us\_code\_temp\_noupdates

35.2 As part of this reorganization, the government manufactured a scandal concerning the collectors. The real reason, however, was to make the code voluntary.

35.3 This office of the Collector of Internal Revenue made possible to protest a tax. Without a Collector of Internal Revenue, it is impossible to protest a tax because it has to be voluntary without a collector. If you don't make a demand in the law, then no one has to do anything. This reorganization made the process of tax collection into an administrative process, which allowed all U.S. District courts into administrative courts in regards to federal taxes. The only people who should go to these courts at this point are "taxpayers", which are people who volunteered to pay the tax.

35.4 Section 29 of the 1894 Revenue Act was the last federal law that imposed a legal duty to pay upon citizens and residents of the United States. The duty to pay the tax was subsequently eliminated by Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429 (1895) and does not appear in any Revenue Law after that date.

36. 1954: Congress Rewrites the Tax Code Again to Hide Constitutional Limitations on The Right To Tax

36.1 Deleted any phrases referring to income that is, under the Constitution or fundamental law, not taxable by the government. This was done by changing the definition of gross income from "unless exempt from tax by law" to "unless excluded by law". There were no changes to the law or the Constitution that would necessitate deleting the reference to the Constitution; it was done for no other credible reason than to obscure the Constitutionally-limited application of the income tax, but without making the regulation technically incorrect - only deceiving and misleading.

36.2 They obfuscated locating taxable sources by adding double-negatives "list of sources that are NOT considered tax exempt". Why not just state what IS taxable, which is foreign income?

36.3 Removed from the regulations the phrase "in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States" from the regulations in section 1.861-8. This made it appear that the applicability of the income tax was expanded. As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious.

36.4 The admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining "gross income," but remained in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

36.5 See section 6.8.12 "Cover-Up of 1954: Hiding Constitutional Limitations on the Right To Tax" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

37. 1968: Congress Repudiates Redemption of All Forms of "lawful money" in silver

37.1 This turned FRNs into a fiat currency domestically for the first time.

38. 1971: President Nixon Repudiates Redemption of FRNs in Gold

38.1 This turned FRNs into a fiat currency internationally for the first time.

39. 1978: Congress Rewrites the Tax Code Again to Confuse the IRS Regulations on "Sources"

39.1 In 1978, the wording of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 was changed significantly, and the title was changed from "Computation of Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States" to "Computation of taxable income from sources within the United States and from other sources and activities." Some have suggested that the current title implies that one should not be using this section unless he has income both from within the United States and from "other sources and activities." The older title, as well as the text of the current regulations, shows that this is not the case.

39.2 See section 6.8.11 "Cover-Up of 1978: Confused IRS Regulations on 'Sources'" for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

40. 1979: The Zaritsky Report

40.1 Congressional Research Service report #79-131, written in 1979 by Howard Zaritsky and titled Some Constitutional Questions Regarding the Income Tax Laws agreed in stating:

"...therefore it is clear that the income tax is an 'indirect' tax...subject to the rule of uniformity, rather than the rule of apportionment."

40.2 So the so-called "income tax amendment" that everybody and their uncle believe authorized the income tax and that many patriotic Americans object to since there is overwhelming evidence that it was never properly ratified by the States...changed absolutely nothing!

40.3 The 16th Amendment was constitutional window dressing and might as well have never been written. Why? In the original draft of the 16th Amendment, Senate Joint Resolution 39, as per page 3138 of the June 11, 1909 Congressional Record, included the word "direct." Fearing that the Supreme Court would again strike it down, Senator Nelson Aldrich, Chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, and as you will recall, the host of the Jekyll Island conference, presented Senate Joint Resolution No. 40, entered on page 3900 of the Congressional Record of June 28, 1909, in which the word "direct" is omitted.

40.4 By deliberately omitting the word "direct" and then ending with the phrase, "...without apportionment among the several States", the language of the 16th was cleverly crafted to create the illusion that some new type of presumably direct, yet unapportioned tax was being imposed on "income."

40.5 But here's the problem. Article 1, Section 2, Clause 3, and Article 1, Section 9, Clause 4 requiring the apportionment of direct taxes, and Article 1, Section 8, Clause 1 requiring that indirect taxes be uniform had never been repealed and, at the time the 16th was drafted, they were still standing law. As the Supreme Court ruled in the famous Marbury v. Madison case in 1803, the Constitution cannot conflict with itself! An unapportioned income tax, as the 16th called for, would by very definition, have to be an indirect tax, because direct taxes still had to be apportioned.

40.6 The Supreme Court was alert to this ruse and chided Congress by deciding in Stanton that the inclusion of the phrase "without apportionment" could only mean that Congress intended to clarify that the income tax is indeed an indirect tax. The 16th Amendment to the United States Constitution did not repeal or alter Congress' power, or obligation, to impose the emergency direct tax should a deficit arise.

40.7 The power of Congress to impose a direct tax still exists, and direct taxes are still required to be apportioned among the states.

The fact that the 16th Amendment did not change one word or phrase in the Constitution has, for years, been one of the U.S. government's best kept secrets!

Many college professors in our country's most prestigious institutions still teach that the income tax is neither a direct nor an indirect tax, but is a hybrid tax that falls somewhere between the two. Such a gross lack of understanding by those charged with teaching the Law to future lawyers is, in my opinion, unpardonable. It also explains many of the unexplained controversies and inconsistencies in the application of the Internal Revenue Code in the various circuit and district courts in section 3.20.1.

41. 1982: Congress Rewrites 26 U.S.C. to Remove Footnotes from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861

41.1 The Code contains many footnotes and references to allow readers to search back and trace the origins and evolution of laws and regulations, since this often clarifies intent. IRC 61(a) on gross income used to have a footnote informing readers that it came from Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code and that the law hadn't been changed. The footnote said, "Source: Sec. 22(a), 1939 Code, substantially unchanged." That footnote was in the 1954 version of the Internal Revenue Code at least up to the 1982 edition, but then it vanished, making it difficult for tax professionals to understand how the wording has been deceptively altered, leading to misapplication of the law. Constitutional limitations discussed above were thus hidden.

41.2 Deletion of the footnote has also made it much more difficult to notice and understand the close connection between IRC 61 and IRC 861 (or 26 C.F.R. § 1.61 and 26 C.F.R. §1.861), especially as 26 C.F.R. §1.861 is now thousands of pages distant from C.F.R. 1.61, and in the earlier versions, the section was not numbered 861, but 119.

41.3 See section 6.8.10 “Cover-Up of 1982: Footnotes Removed from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861” for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code.

42. 1986: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986), Federal District Court Refused to Hear Arguments on the Fraudulent Passage of the 16th Amendment, which Allegedly Authorized Income Taxes

This case was a major scandal for the Federal appellate court. The defendant Stahl presented credible evidence that the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was fraudulently claimed to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, Philander Knox, in 1913. The court refused to deal with the issue and ignored all the evidence presented. Instead, they said it wasn't their business to deal with the issue. Congress said the same thing. This leads to the conclusion that there is a federal judicial (as well as a Congressional) conspiracy to protect the income tax!

"[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government...."

43. 1988: Congress Obfuscates the 26 U.S.C./IRC Further to Change the title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income

43.1 Prior to 1988, the title of Part I of Subchapter N (which begins with Section 861) was “Determination of sources of income” (which is still the heading of the related regulations). In 1988, this title was changed to “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income.”

43.2 It should be mentioned that while the titles of parts may give an indication of what the part is about, the title has no effect on the actual legal application.

“...nor shall any table of contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect.”
[26 U.S.C. §7806(b)]

43.3 So when the title was changed (but the text of the law was not), the application of the law did not change. What changed was the appearance of the table of contents.

43.4 When the title of Part I was changed, and the new title stated that the part was about “foreign income,” it no longer appeared to be an obvious place for most people to look when determining their taxable income. This would certainly have the effect of drawing attention away from Section 861.

43.5 See section 6.8.8 “Cover-Up of 1988: Changed Title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income” for details of how Congress obfuscated the tax code in this case.

44. 1993: IRS Removes References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for Income Tax and Confused New Language.

44.1 Here's what was . Inside Publication 515, there appears a statement the IRS hopes you never see. Under the main heading "Withholding Exemptions and Reductions" and within the paragraph titled "Evidence of Residence", the IRS states in speaking to the payer of income:

"If an individual gives you a written statement stating that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States, and you do not know otherwise, you do not have to withhold tax."

44.2 The 1994 version of Publication 515 varied somewhat. Instead of ending with "...you do not have to withhold tax", it continues:

"...you do not have to withhold tax under the rules discussed in this publication. Instead, get Publication 15, Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide."

44.3 This change was in response to tax protester groups, who at the time were citing this publication as proof that they weren't liable to pay taxes as citizens of the 50 union states with income from domestic sources!

44.4 See section 6.9.18 “Cover-Up of 1993: IRS Removed References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for Tax and Confused New Language” for details of how IRS obfuscated their publications in this case.

45. 1995: IRS Modifies Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for Federal Income Tax Under the Paperwork Reduction Act

- 1 45.1 The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 requires that every form used by the federal government to collect
 2 information from the public first be approved by the Office of Management and Budget (“OMB”). The regulations
 3 at 26 C.F.R. §602.101 contain a table listing the OMB-approved forms for each section of regulations. The
 4 regulations 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 are entitled “Income tax on individuals,” and correspond to 26 U.S.C. §1 (which 5 imposes the “income tax”). Up until 1995, the first line in this table identified Form 2555, “Foreign Earned
 6 Income,” as the only approved form under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.
 7 45.2 In 1995, after many “tax resistance” groups had become aware of this, the listing for “1.1-1” was removed from the
 8 list, in order to avoid “confusion,” according to the Department of the Treasury. The process of applying for, and 9 receiving OMB approval for a form makes the possibility of an error extremely remote. The Department of the 10 Treasury requested that Form 2555 be approved for 1.1-1, and the Office of Management and Budget approved it.
 11 When the entry drew too much attention, it was removed. At present no forms are approved for use with 26 C.F.R.
 12 §1.1-1.
 13 45.3 See section 6.9.17 “Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section
 14 1 Liability for Federal Income Tax” for details of how IRS obfuscated the regulations in this case.

15 46. 1998: IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998

- 16 46.1 Because of widespread abuse of due process rights of Americans, the U.S. Congress passed the IRS Restructuring
 17 and Reform Act of 1998 (<http://www.irs.gov/irs/display/0..i1%3D46%26genericId%3D23294.00.html>). It was 18 designed to remedy many of the abuses of the IRS, including:
 19 46.1.1 A shifting of the burden of proof from the Citizen to the IRS for certain circumstances. This eliminated the 20 widespread perception by citizens that with regard to tax matters, citizens were “guilty until proven innocent”.
 21 46.1.2 Illegal liens, levies, and seizures of the property of citizens.
 22 46.1.3 The labeling of Citizens as “illegal tax protesters”.
 23 46.1.4 Creation of the Taxpayer Advocate office to resolve complaints of citizens.
 24 46.1.5 Prohibition of the IRS contacting third parties of the citizen without prior notice.
 25 46.1.6 Refunds of overpayments prior to final determination.
 26 46.1.7 Allowance for accountant-client privilege.
 27 46.1.8 Prohibition of threat of audit to coerce TRAC agreements.
 28 46.1.9 Severe penalties ranging between $100,000 and $1,000,000 for wrongful collection of taxes by revenue
 29 agents.
 30 46.1.10 Citizens allowed to quash 3rd party summons by IRS.
 31 46.2 During the hearings prior to the enactment of this legislation, there was unbelievable publicized testimony of many 32 different individuals who had been abused illegally by the IRS. The witnesses were so afraid of the IRS that they 33 had to have their voices and identities concealed to avoid retribution. This was a clear indication that the IRS had 34 way too much power.
 35 46.3 You will note by examining the statistics in section 2.12 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 that
 36 IRS abusive behavior toward citizens was significantly curbed following the passage of this act. This act did exactly
 37 what it was supposed to do, which points to the fact that if we want real reforms of the tax system and the IRS, then
 38 ultimately it is up to us as citizens to vote and to be politically involved enough to make sure that our elected
 39 representatives know what we expect from them and from our tax system.

40 6.6 The Laws of Tyranny

41 This section contains a description of what is called The Laws of Tyranny. These laws describe the major techniques by 42 which governments are systematically corrupted. As you read through the rest of this chapter, try to deduce for yourself how 43 these laws apply to the specific instance of corruption described in each section. Nearly every section within this chapter can 44 be associated with one of these laws.

45 The Laws of Tyranny

- 46 1. Any power that can be abused will be abused.
 47 1.1. The main mechanism for abusing law is through obfuscation of the law to turn it into a mechanism for terrorizing
 48 the ignorant and uninformed.
 49 1.2. Any law the electorate sees as being open to being perverted from its original intent will be perverted in a manner
 50 that exceeds the manner of perversion seen at the time.

- 1.3. Any law that is so difficult to pass it requires the citizens be assured it will not be a stepping stone to worse laws, will in fact be a stepping stone to worse laws.
  - 1.4. Any law that requires the citizens be assured the law does not mean what the citizens fear, means exactly what the citizens fear.
  - 1.5. Any law passed in a good cause will be interpreted to apply to causes against the wishes of the people.
  - 1.6. Any law enacted to help any one group will be applied to harm people not in that group.
  - 1.7. Everything the government says will never happen, will happen.
  - 1.8. What the government says it could not foresee, the government has planned for.
  - 1.9. When there is a budget shortfall to cover non-essential government services, the citizens will be given the choice between higher taxes or the loss of essential government services.
  - 1.10. Should the citizens mount a successful effort to stop a piece of legislation, the same legislation will be passed under a different name or as a rider to a more popular measure.
2. All deprivations of freedom and choice will be increased rather than reversed. Abuse and tyranny will always expand to fill the limits of resistance to them.
  3. If people don't resist the abuses of others, they will have no one to resist the abuses of themselves, and tyranny will prevail.

Frederick Douglas, an early American Civil Rights advocate, summed up these laws with the following statement:

Find out just what the people will submit to and you have found out the exact amount of injustice and wrong which will be imposed upon them; and these will continue until they are resisted with either words or blows, or with both. The limits of tyrants are prescribed by the endurance of those whom they oppress.
[Frederick Douglass, civil rights activist, Aug. 4, 1857]

6.7 Presidential Scandals Related to Income Taxes and Socialism

"The illegal we do immediately. The unconstitutional takes a bit longer."
[Henry Kissinger]

"Politicians are the same all over. They promise to build a bridge where there is no river."
[Nikita Khrushchev]

"The current income tax code is the chief source of political corruption in the nation's capitol. Tax reform is not for the timid."
[Rep. Richard K. Armey, R-Texas]

6.7.1 1925: William H. Taft's Certiorari Act of 1925

As we have stated repeatedly throughout this book, there is a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax (see sections 6.12 and 1.7). The basic problem is that the federal district and circuit courts are acting as a protection racket for the IRS while the U.S. Supreme Court has been looking the other way by denying appeals to correct such abuses. How did we arrive at the point where the Supreme Court even had the discretion to deny such appeals? That is a scandal all by itself, as you will find out.

President Howard Taft is the single person most responsible for the federal income tax that we have today. He was a brilliant man and the only person who had all the qualifications necessary to engineer an overthrow of our de jure government and the replacement of it with the de facto criminal government we have today. For instance, he is the only person who ever did all of the following:

1. Served as the President of the United States
2. Served as the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court
3. Served as a Collector of Internal Revenue in Michigan
4. Was able to get the Sixteenth Amendment into the hands of the states for ratification in 1909.
5. Was still in office when the Sixteenth Amendment was declared ratified and the Federal Reserve Act was passed.

Let's examine item 2 above in more detail. President Taft was the ONLY President who ever served as a Collector of Internal Revenue. Even as President of the United States and later as a Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, he apparently continued in that role. Here is what Wikipedia says on this subject:

Legal career

After admission to the Ohio bar, Taft was appointed Assistant Prosecutor of Hamilton County, Ohio,<sup>330</sup><sup>[12]</sup> based in Cincinnati. Nearly all the financial corruption that exists in our country's money and tax systems was introduced during his tour of office as President and this corruption was later perfected and expanded during his nine year tenure as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court starting in 1921. If you would like to learn more about this man, we recommend The Complete Book of U.S. Presidents, by William A Degregorio, ISBN 0-517-18353-6.

In section 3.11.11.1 we revealed the legislative intent of the Sixteenth Amendment by showing you the Presidential Speech that introduced the Sixteenth Amendment for the first time, given by William H. Taft before Congress in 1909. That speech showed clearly that then President Taft understood that federal income taxes were excise taxes that could not be instituted against other than federal corporations. He introduced the Sixteenth Amendment to Congress in 1909 as a way to circumvent this restriction and broaden the application of federal income taxes to authorize a supposed direct income tax on private persons. Subsequent to the introduction of the Sixteenth Amendment for state ratification in 1909, Secretary of State Philander Knox committed fraud in 1913 by claiming that the Sixteenth Amendment had been properly ratified by ¾ of the states. Knox was Taft's hand-picked Secretary of State.

During his presidency, Taft made six appointments to the Supreme Court -- more than any other one-term President. Many think that when Taft named Edward White Chief Justice rather than the other obvious choice, Charles Evans Hughes, there was a political agenda to pave a way for his own later appointment as Chief Justice. Taft appointed White because White was twelve years older than Hughes. Naming White gave Taft a better shot at being Chief Justice one day himself -- in spite of Thomas Jefferson's famous complaint that "few [Justices] die and none resign.". You can read more about Taft's history from the speech given by Chief Justice Rehnquist on April 13, 2002, and which is posted on the Supreme Court website at:

We know by reading excerpts from Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103 (1916) in section 3.17.11, that the Supreme Court, subsequent to the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913, disagreed with President Taft about the effect of the Sixteenth Amendment by saying that it conferred “no new power of taxation” upon Congress. Here is what the U.S. Supreme Court said in 1916, three years after the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment:

“..by the previous ruling it was settled that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation subject to apportionment by a consideration of the sources from which the income was derived, that is by testing the tax not by what it was -- a tax on income, but by a mistaken theory deduced from the origin or source of the income taxed.”

President Taft, who would later leave office in 1913 to be appointed by President Harding to become Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1921, must have known this was going to happen when he introduced the Sixteenth Amendment in 1909. So how did he skirt this declaration by the Supreme Court that nullified the 16th Amendment to allow the fraud of federal income taxes to perpetuate anyway? The answer is quite interesting.

As Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, President Taft sponsored a bill called the Certiorari Act of 1925. In the year that Taft was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1921, the docket of the Supreme Court was reportedly 5 years behind, according to Chief Justice Rehnquist, so when Taft became Chief Justice, he complained to Congress and the President that the Supreme Court was hopelessly backed up in hearing appeals from lower courts and that the court needed the discretion to be able to deny appeals from lower courts. What sort of appeals might those be? How about federal income tax trials to begin with! Here is the way Chief Justice Rehnquist described this situation:

“When he was appointed Chief Justice in 1921, the Court had fallen nearly five years behind in its docket. He resolved this caseload congestion in the Court by convincing Congress to pass the Judiciary Act of 1925 -- also known as the Certiorari Act -- which gave the Court discretion as to which cases to hear. Some members of Congress were doubtful -- why shouldn't every litigant have a right to get a decision on his case from the Supreme Court? Taft responded that in each case, there had already been one trial and one appeal. "Two courts are enough for justice," he said. To obtain still a third hearing in the Supreme Court, there should be some question involved more important than just who wins this lawsuit.”

He must have figured that if the appeals courts below the Supreme Court would uphold the income tax and if the Supreme Court could deny appeals, then in spite of the Supreme Court precedents established earlier which nullified the Sixteenth Amendment, we could have a schizophrenic and split personality federal judicial system that on the one hand, would declare at the Supreme Court level that direct income taxes were unconstitutional, but at courts below the Supreme Court would declare them constitutional. As long as the Supreme Court under the Certiorari Act of 1925 could deny appeals, it wouldn't have to correct the abuses of the lower courts and the split personalities could continue. This sin of omission by the Supreme court which was authorized and even encouraged by Taft's unconstitutional Certiorari Act would then serve to perpetuate the income tax fraud. This would open the doors for the U.S. Congress to perpetuate the myth of income tax liability by lying to their constituents and telling them that they “must pay federal income taxes because the Sixteenth Amendment authorizes it”. This, in a nutshell, is exactly the legacy and the heritage that we live with to this day, and we have President Taft in large part, to thank for it. The obscenely dishonest people in Congress who know the truth and yet continue to perpetuate this fraud are simply maintaining the system that Taft setup through his skullduggery.

Former President Taft served only four years as Chief Justice after the passage of the Certiorari Act of 1925, resigning from office in February 1930 because of illness and dying a month later. He must have figured he had accomplished the job he set out to do. E.B. White, his predecessor Chief Justice, served almost 10 years and Justice Fuller before him served 21 years.

To summarize the big picture, Chief Justice Taft must have known that the federal income tax fraud could not continue if the Supreme Court lacked the discretion to deny appeals, or Writs of Certiorari as they are called, from lower courts. If the Bureau of Internal Revenue, or BIR (now called the IRS) kept trying at the time to extort money from people and the Supreme Court consistently was saying that the Sixteenth Amendment didn't authorize them to do this, then people could eventually appeal all the way up to the Supreme Court and stop the unlawful assessment and collection, which would destroy federal revenues and keep the BIR in check. Allow the Supreme Court to deny appeals, however, and the situation would be very different. With his Certiorari Act passed by Congress in 1925 in place, President William Howard Taft had all the pieces in place needed to perpetuate and enlarge the federal income tax fraud:

1. A Supreme Court stacked with six of his own hand-picked justices during his term as President from 1909-1913.
2. The Sixteenth Amendment that Taft himself had introduced in 1909.
3. A fraudulent ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment by Philander Knox in 1913. Philander Knox was his own hand-picked Secretary of State.
4. The Federal Reserve Act of 1913, scandalously passed by just four members of Congress during a Christmas recess immediately after the Sixteenth Amendment was ratified and during Taft's administration.
5. The Certiorari Act of 1925 that authorized the Supreme Court to deny justice to people who had been defrauded of federal income taxes they didn't owe by the then Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR).
6. Control of the Supreme Court for five years following the passage of the Certiorari Act, so he could get in place several circuit court rulings favorable to the income tax that the Supreme Court would deny writs to. Taft served as Chief Justice from 1921 to 1929 until his death in 1930.
7. At the end of Taft's term as Chief Justice, our country plunged into the Great Depression, which most knowledgeable people say was caused by a deliberate and systematic contraction of the money supply by the Federal Reserve in order to engineer the socialist reforms that FDR would later propose in the form of Socialist Security. Our purely capitalist economic system had to be made to look like it was failing by the bankers before most rugged individualist Americans would willingly accept anything as radical as Socialist Security or a government handout.

The fundamental defect in the Certiorari Act was the fact that the Supreme Court could:

1. Deny appeals without explaining why (and evade accountability for its decision). If the people are the sovereigns and the government is their servant, what gives the servant the right to tell the sovereign what to do with its appeal?
2. Deny appeals even though decisions of lower courts clearly conflicted with its precedents. This amounts to condoning government wrongs.
3. Deny appeals of parties whose constitutional rights were claimed to be injured. The ability to deny justice to parties whose constitutional rights had been violated clearly violates the oath that the justices take to "support and defend the Constitution against all enemies, foreign and domestic".

If the above three defects in the unconstitutional Certiorari Act of 1925 were remedied, we wouldn't have the split personality Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde court system we have today and the fraud of the income tax, because they would be impossible to maintain with an accountable Supreme Court that was obligated to:

1. Correct rulings below it that violated or contradicted its precedents.
2. Correct rulings which violated constitutional rights without exception.
3. Explain why it would not hear the case or defend the constitutional rights of the injured party (be accountable).

The necessity of doing all the above has been described by the U.S. Supreme Court as "The Rule of Necessity" as follows:

Rule of Necessity

*The Rule of Necessity had its genesis at least five and a half centuries ago. Its earliest recorded invocation was in 1430, when it was held that the Chancellor of Oxford could act as judge of a case in which he was a party when there was no provision for appointment of another judge. Y. B. Hil. 214*214 8 Hen. VI, f. 19, pl. 6.<sup>340</sup> Early cases in this country confirmed the vitality of the Rule<sup>341</sup>.*

The Rule of Necessity has been consistently applied in this country in both state and federal courts. In State ex rel. Mitchell v. Sage Stores Co., 157 Kan. 622, 143 P.2d. 652 (1943) the Supreme Court of Kansas observed:

"[I]t is well established that actual disqualification of a member of a court of last resort will not excuse such member from performing his official duty if failure to do so would result in a denial of a litigant's constitutional right to have a question, properly presented to such court, adjudicated." Id., at 629, 143 P. 2d, at 656.

Similarly, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania held:

"If an action is sued in the bench against all the Judges there, then by necessity they shall be their own Judges." 2 H. Rolle, An Abridgment of Many Cases and Resolutions at Common Law 93 (1668) (translation).

"The true rule unquestionably is that wherever it becomes necessary for a judge to sit even where he has an interest—where no provision is made for calling another in, or where no one else can take his place—it is his duty to hear and decide, however disagreeable it may be." Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 169, 185 (1870).

Other state<sup>342</sup> and federal<sup>343</sup> courts also have recognized the Rule.

215*215 The concept of the absolute duty of judges to hear and decide cases within their jurisdiction revealed in Pollack, supra, and Philadelphia v. Fox, supra, is reflected in decisions of this Court. Our earlier cases dealing with the Compensation Clause did not directly involve the compensation of Justices or name them as parties, and no express reference to the Rule is found. See, e. g., O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939); O'Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516 (1933); Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920). In Evans, however, an action brought by an individual judge in his own behalf, the Court by clear implication dealt with the Rule:

"Because of the individual relation of the members of this court to the question . . . , we cannot but regret that its solution falls to us . . . . But jurisdiction of the present case cannot be declined or renounced. The plaintiff was entitled by law to invoke our decision on the question as respects his own compensation, in which no other judge can have any direct personal interest; and there was no other appellate tribunal to which under the law he could go." Id., at 247-248.<sup>344</sup>

216*216 It would appear, therefore, that this Court so took for granted the continuing validity of the Rule of Necessity that no express reference to it or extended discussion of it was needed.<sup>345</sup>

[United States v. Will Et Al, 449 U.S. 200 (1980)]

Now do you see how the pieces of the puzzle were cleverly and invisibly weaved together by conspiracies involving all three branches of the federal government over several years to create the totally unjust and extortionary slavery tax system we have now? Now do you understand why Thomas Jefferson said:

"Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day. But a series of oppressions, pursued unalterably through every change of ministers, too plainly proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery".
[Thomas Jefferson]

Do you also now understand why Franklin Delano Roosevelt said?:

"In politics, nothing happens by accident. If it happens, it was planned that way."
[Franklin D. Roosevelt]

6.7.2 1933: FDR's Great American Gold Robbery

6.7.2.1 Money Background

Genuine money must have the following three qualities:

1. It must be a storehouse of intrinsic value.

<sup>344</sup> O'Malley cast doubt on the substantive holding of Evans, see n. 31, infra, but the fact that the Court reached the issue indicates that it did not question this aspect of the Evans opinion.

<sup>345</sup> In another, not unrelated context, Chief Justice Marshall's exposition in Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264 (1821) could well have been the explanation of the Rule of Necessity; he wrote that a court "must take jurisdiction if it should. The judiciary cannot, as the legislature may, avoid a measure because it approaches the confines of the constitution. We cannot pass it by, because it is doubtful. With whatever doubts, with whatever difficulties, a case may be attended, we must decide it, if it be brought before us. We have no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given. The one or the other would be treason to the constitution. Questions may occur which we would gladly avoid; but we cannot avoid them." Id., at 404 (emphasis added).

- 1 2. It must be a universal, portable medium of exchange.
- 2 3. It must have a common unit of account.
- 3 4. It must be immune to attempts by the government to lower its value by printing more and thereby use inflationary forces
- 4 to “tax” all money in circulation. This ensures what we called earlier in section 2.8.9.2 “separation of money and state”.

5 Black’s Law Dictionary, 5th Edition, defines “money” as:

6 “In its usual and ordinary explanation it means coins and paper currency used as circulating medium of 7 exchange, and does not embrace notes, bonds, evidences of debt or other personal or real estate.”

8 Gold and silver coins and the previous gold and silver certificates were a storehouse of “intrinsic” value. They actually 9 increased in value with inflation. Therefore, they were a hedge against inflation.

10 LAWFUL MONEY is defined in Black’s Law Dictionary, 2nd Ed., as:

11 “Money which is legal tender in payment of debts; e.g. gold and silver coined at the mint.”

12 The responsibility of coining gold and silver money was ceded to Congress in our Constitution; Article I, Section 8, Clause
 13 5:

14 “The Congress shall have the power...To coin money and regulate the value thereof...”

15 Because the Constitution is the Supreme Law of the Land, nothing but gold or silver coin is “lawful” money for the 50 union
 16 states. Because of heaviness of gold and silver coins, “Gold and Silver Certificates” were created by the Department of 17 Treasury of the United States. These certificates were representative of actual gold and silver coins which were owned by the 18 People holding the Certificates and maintained in the vaults of the banks and Fort Knox. These Gold and Silver Certificates
 19 were convertible to gold and silver coin, “PAYABLE ON DEMAND.” It is important to understand that this gold and silver,
 20 represented by the Certificates, belonged to the People or Certificate Holders and NOT the banks or the government.

21 At one time, reference to the laws that made money “lawful” were printed directly on the face of our currency. The laws
 22 printed on the bills were enacted on March 14, 1900 and December 24, 1919.

23 66th Congress Sess. II Chapter 15, (December 24, 1919)-Public Law No. 103

24 CHAP. 15-An Act to make gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand legal tender.

25 “Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that gold
 26 certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand shall be and are hereby made legal tender in payment of all 27 debts and dues, public and private.

28 §2 That all acts or parts of Acts which are inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.”

29 Approved, December 24, 1919

30 The above law has NEVER been and CANNOT be repealed, as it is applicable to the 50 sovereign states, without amending
 31 the Constitution. Note that the Act, says “gold certificates payable to the bearer on demand “shall be and are.” This means 32 not only when the Act was passed, but also into the future!

33 §2 of the Act, repealing Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with the above Public Law 103, would, therefore, not only be
 34 applicable to past Acts which were inconsistent with its intent but also future inconsistent Acts. It also says to be legal tender;
 35 the certificates MUST be payable to bearer on demand. Our current ‘Federal Reserve Notes’ do not meet either of these 36 lawful requirements for legal tender for the Citizens of the several states.

37 Perhaps Federal Reserve Notes are “legal tender” for the Territorial (federal zone) United States, under the EXCLUSIVE
 38 jurisdiction and not under Constitutional restrictions and protections. However, both the Constitution and the Law lead only 39 to one inescapable conclusion, which is that:

1 Federal Reserve Notes certainly are NOT Constitutional tender or lawful money for the Citizens of the 50
 2 sovereign states in these united states of America!

3 Because the Constitution prohibited the states from coining gold and silver (which would logically extend to the gold and
 4 silver certificates which were representative of the ownership of these coins) and because We the People specifically
 5 delegated monetary powers to Congress, it was not within the Congressional authority to transfer the issuing of gold and 6 silver certificates and ultimately federal reserve notes to the private Federal Reserve.

7 Remember:

8 “Congress may not abdicate [‘to give up.. renounce or relinquish...authorities, duties...powers, or responsibility]
 9 to transfer to others its legitimate [delegated] functions”
 10 [Schechter Poultry v. U.S., 29 U.S., 495 U.S. 837, 842 (1935)]

11 Gold Reserve Act of March 14, 1900. “Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of 12 America in Congress assembled, that the dollar consisting of twenty-five and eight tenths grains of gold, nine-tenths fine as 13 established by section thirty-five hundred and eleven [§3511] of the Revised Statutes of the United States, shall be the 14 standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and
 15 all forms of money issued or coined by the United States, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued
 16 or coined by the United States shall be maintained at the parity of value with this standard, and it shall be the duty of the 17 Secretary of the Treasury to maintain such parity.

18 Sec. 2. That United States notes, and Treasury notes issued under the Act of July 14, 1890, when presented to the Treasury
 19 for redemption, shall be redeemed in gold coin of the standard fixed in the first section of this Act...”

20 So where is our gold?...you ask. Where’s our gold certificates?

21 Gold certificates were originally the idea of goldsmiths who would hold the gold of Citizens and issue much less bulky
 22 certificates as evidence of gold on deposit. The Certificate Holders could redeem their Certificates for their gold at any time.
 23 Greedy goldsmiths soon began to realize that the majority of the gold in their vaults just sat there because the Certificate
 24 Holders were using their certificates as a medium of exchange instead of the gold. Realizing this, the goldsmiths made up
 25 extra gold certificates and starting making loans, at interest, using OTHER Citizen’s gold as backing. These loans were then
 26 repaid to the goldsmith in GOLD COIN! As long as all the gold owners didn’t show up at once, the goldsmiths got away
 27 with their scheme. When the lawful owners of the gold got wise and demanded their gold back, the goldsmiths who couldn’t 28 produce it were hung from the nearest tree!

29 6.7.2.2 Outlawing of Gold Coin

30 Starting in 1933, FDR outlawed gold coin with the following sequence of executive orders:

- 31 1. Executive Order 6073: Regulations Concerning the Operation of Banks, March 10, 1933. Required banks trading in 32 gold to be licensed by the Secretary of the Treasury.
 33 https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Executive\_Order\_6073

44 In 1933, U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued Executive Order 6102, which outlawed the private ownership of gold
 45 coins, gold bullion, and gold certificates by American citizens, forcing them to sell these to the Federal Reserve. As a result,

1 the value of the gold held by the Federal Reserve increased from $4 billion to $12 billion between 1933 and 1937.<sup>346</sup> This left
 2 the federal government with a large gold reserve and no place to store it. In 1936, the U.S. Treasury Department began
 3 construction of the United States Bullion Depository at Fort Knox, Kentucky, on land transferred from the military. The Gold
 4 Vault was completed in December 1936 for US $560,000. The site is located on what is now Bullion Boulevard at the
 5 intersection of Gold Vault Road. The building was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1988, in recognition
 6 of its significance in the economic history of the United States and its status as a well-known landmark.<sup>347</sup> It is constructed
 7 of granite mined at the North Carolina Granite Corporation Quarry Complex.<sup>348</sup>

8 The first gold shipments were made from January to July 1937. The majority of the United States' gold reserves were gradually
 9 shipped to the site, including old bullion and newly made bars made from melted gold coins. Some intact coins were stored.
 10 The transfer used 500 rail cars and was sent by registered mail, protected by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service, and the U.S.
 11 Treasury Department agents. In 1974, a Washington attorney named Peter David Beter circulated a theory that the gold in 12 the Depository had been secretly removed by elites, and that the vaults were empty. A group of reporters was allowed inside
 13 in order to refute the theory, which had gained traction thanks to coverage in tabloid newspapers and on the radio. Other than 14 this 1974 event, no member of the public has been allowed inside.<sup>349</sup>

15 During World War II, the depository held the original U.S. Declaration of Independence and U.S. Constitution. It held the 16 reserves of European countries and key documents from Western history. For example, it held the Crown of St. Stephen, part
 17 of the Hungarian crown jewels, given to American soldiers to prevent them from falling into Soviet hands. The repository
 18 held one of four copies (exemplifications) of the Magna Carta, which had been sent for display at the 1939 New York World's
 19 Fair, and when war broke out, was kept in the US for the duration.

20 During World War II and into the Cold War, until the invention of different types of synthetic painkillers, a supply of 21 processed morphine and opium was kept in the Depository as a hedge against the US being isolated from the sources of raw 22 opium.<sup>350</sup>

30 "Since March 9, 1933, the United States has been in a state of national emergency. A majority of the people of the United 31 States have lived their lives under emergency rule. For 40 years freedoms and government procedures, guaranteed by the 32 constitution have, in varying degrees, been abridged by laws brought forth by states of national emergency..."

33 "These hundreds of statutes delegate to the President extraordinary powers, ordinarily exercised by Congress, which affect

1 law; seize and control all transportation and communication; regulate the operation of private enterprise, restrict travel; and,
2 in a plethora of ways, control the lives of all American citizens.”

3 Franklin D. Roosevelt was a shrewd banker, himself. In the 1920's, he made a considerable amount of money by floating
4 millions of dollars in worthless German bonds. The artificially engineered Great Depression and a desperate country, paved
5 the way for acceptance of the new unconstitutional socialistically oriented governmental policies of FDR. Families, desperate
6 to survive, lost touch with the Constitution.

7 This section will provide powerful and irrefutable evidence that on March 9, 1933, the United States declared war on its own
8 citizen subjects through Franklin D. Roosevelt, by amending the war powers, “Trading With The Enemy Act” of December
9 6, 1917, to include, as an enemy of the United States:

10 *“any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof”!!! [This was the Territorial
11 United States or the federal zone, but the People were not told this.]*

12 The above trick is exactly the same trick our government is STILL playing on us with the whole of Subtitle A income
13 taxes...fooling us into believing that the jurisdiction of the Subtitle A income tax extends into the borders of the sovereign
14 50 union states when it actually does NOT, according to 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)9-(a)10!

15 The purpose of this unconscionable and treasonous Act was to justify the theft and seizure of the People's gold by the 16 Government and to cancel the contractual obligation of the bankers to redeem the People's Gold Certificates! This Act, if 17 applicable to the Citizens of these united States, would have been a direct violation of Public Law 103 of Dec. 24, 1919,
18 previously quoted, which stated, that only

19 “gold certificates of the United States payable to bearer on demand shall be and are legal tender in payment of 20 all debts and dues, public and private.”

21 The amended Act also blatantly violated the Constitutional prohibition against making anything other than gold and silver
22 legal tender for the payment of debts in the several states!

23 The Trading With The Enemy Act, called upon the extraordinary dictatorial war powers. These powers were only to be used
24 in life-threatening circumstances and ONLY against the declared enemy of the United States. Obviously, the intent of the 25 law was NEVER to seize the assets of American Citizens in the time of peace or war! These powers have been grossly
26 abused to turn America from a free constitutional Republic into an enslaved statutory presidential dictatorship! We warned
27 you this kind of scam would be used to rob you of your liberty in section 2.8.12 entitled “Surrendering Freedoms in the Name
28 of ‘Government Induced Crises’.

29 In other countries, emergency powers can suspend the Constitution. Adolf Hitler used the Emergency Powers to suspend
30 the German Constitution and institute an unfathomable dictatorial reign of terror! The German Emergency Power
31 Law was merely titled Article 48 and stated:

32 “If the public safety and order in the German Reich are seriously disturbed or endangered, the President of the 33 Reich may...suspend in whole or in part the fundamental rights established [including] inviolability of person, 34 inviolability of domicile, freedom of opinion and expression, freedom of assembly and association, secrecy in 35 communication and inviolability of property.”

36 Even with the broad war powers, in America, where the Constitution is the supreme law of the land and ANY law contrary
37 to it NULL and VOID, it is not within the power of the President, the Congress or the Judiciary to create a law or an emergency
38 which suspends the Constitution and unalienable rights of the Sovereign People! Not even war can alienate the rights of the 39 People in relationship to the government!

40 THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION IS NON-SUSPENDIBLE!

41 “No emergency justifies the violation of any of the provisions of the United States Constitution.<sup>351</sup> An 42 emergency, however, while it cannot create power, increase granted power, or remove or diminish the restrictions

1 imposed upon the power granted or reserved, may allow the exercise of power already in existence, but not
2 exercised except during an emergency.<sup>352</sup>

3 The circumstances in which the executive branch may exercise extraordinary powers under the Constitution are
4 very narrow.<sup>353</sup> The danger must be immediate and impending, or the necessity urgent for the public service,
5 such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the
6 means which the occasion calls for.<sup>354</sup> For example, there is no basis in the Constitution for the seizure of steel
7 mills during a wartime labor dispute, despite the President's claim that the war effort would be crippled if the 8 mills were shut down.<sup>355</sup>

9 [16 American Jurisprudence 2d, Constitutional Law, §52 (1999)]

10 Contrary to what the People were fraudulently misled into believing, the Trading With the Enemy Act could not be, and 11 therefore was not, applicable to the Citizens of the several states. In fact, in a section of the Trading With the Enemy Act,
12 that was never amended, or repealed, the Citizens of these United States were specifically and logically exempted from being 13 defined as the enemy. Therefore, the regulations and punishments of the Trading With the Enemy Act were not and could 14 not later become applicable to the Citizens of the United States.

15 SIXTY FIFTH CONGRESS Sess. 1 Chapter 106, Page 411, October 6, 1917

16 CHAP. 106—An Act To Define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes.

17 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
18 That this Act shall be known as the "Trading With the Enemy Act."

19 ...SEC. 2. That the word "enemy" as used herein shall be deemed to mean, for the purposes of trading and of this 20 Act—

21 "...(c) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any
22 nation with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States..."

23 Again, it was the "persons" born in Territories over which the United States is exclusively sovereign and NOT the Citizens
24 of the Sovereign states, who were the purported "Enemy" targets of the Trading With The Enemy Act. Even though the 25 Citizens were specifically excluded from the Emergency War Powers Act, in the most heinous act of Government and Banker
26 Fraud ever perpetrated, American Citizens were coerced by fear and defrauded into turning over all of their gold to the banks.
27 They were threatened [coerced by fear] through the national media, with a $10,000 fine and 10 years in prison, if they refused
28 to comply.

29 It is important to remember that the gold in the banks was the property of the Citizens, holding the gold certificates. The
30 gold did NOT belong to the Government or the Banks. The Federal Reserve is a PRIVATE CORPORATION and gold
31 certificates represented a legitimate contractual obligation to convert the certificates to an equivalent amount of gold,
32 payable on demand of the bearer, whenever that demand might be! The Federal Reserve was required by law to maintain 33 a 40% gold reserve and enough other liquid assets to meet the demands of all citizens who wanted to convert their certificates
34 into gold.

35 Under normal circumstances, only a small percentage of Citizens would exchange their certificates for their gold. However,
36 because of the depression, and well-founded rumors circulating that the private Federal Reserve was taking large amounts of 37 gold belonging to the Citizens out of the country, people lined up at the bank to redeem their gold certificates for gold. This
38 was the lawful prerogative of the People. The Citizens were merely demanding what was lawfully theirs. They had lawfully

1 earned the gold certificates and gold which they represented and it was not within the power of the Government or the Bankers
2 to take the sovereign American's property and substance, emergency or no emergency!

3 When FDR took office, he declared a national emergency. In Proclamation 2039, using the very words the Federal Reserve
4 had written for him, He stated:

5 *"Whereas there have been heavy and unwarranted withdrawals of gold and currency from our banking
6 institutions for the purposes of hoarding..."*

7 "Hoarding???" Doesn't that mean "saving?" It was the People's gold and not the bankers and, of course, it was their
8 absolute prerogative to spend it or save it. Most were spending it on SURVIVAL during a time of depression, which 9 incidentally some informed economists blame as the cause a money supply that was deliberately contracted by the Federal
10 Reserve! The President was certainly not delegated the power to ORDER the People not to "save" their own gold! When 11 the smoke screen was removed, the real emergency was that the private federal reserve had breached its contract with 12 American Citizens. They were repudiating their contractual obligation to redeem the People's gold Certificates and were 13 removing the People's gold from the country. The Bankers were like the goldsmiths who had their corrupt scheme exposed.
14 The emergency was that the People were ready to hang the bankers from the nearest tree! Demanding the return of the 15 People's gold to the bankrupt private bankers was like having Americans return their cars if General Motors went bankrupt!

16 6.7.2.4 FDR Defends the Federal Damn Reserve

17 As representatives of the Citizens, the President's first duty was to the People who were the victims of banking fraud.
18 Emergency legislation should have been passed, demanding an immediate and complete audit of the federal reserve (which 19 has NEVER been audited). The 40% gold reserve should have been turned over to the People holding the gold Certificates
20 and all of the bankers remaining assets should have been liquidated and converted to gold. This gold should have been
21 returned to the holders of the gold certificates. If the audit found evidence of self-dealing and embezzlement of the People's 22 gold, those involved should have been criminally prosecuted and their assets should have been seized. If an emergency
23 currency needed to be issued, it should have been debt free currency, issued by the Treasury of these United States and People
24 should have been compensated for their loss of gold. This is how a good President would have protected the People. Instead,
25 FDR was in the pocket of the Bankers!

26 Let's go back to March 6-9, 1933 and find out what FDR did do. Instead of formulating a plan demanding that the Federal
27 Reserve honor their contractual obligations to the People he instead consulted the Federal Reserve as to how they believed
28 the crisis should be solved! Remember the REAL emergency was that the bankers did not want to honor their contractual
29 obligation to convert the People's gold certificates to gold. The cats were consulted about what their punishment should be
30 for eating mice. Of course, the cats ruled that they should be fed more mice! What did the private federal reserve conclude
31 that their punishment should be for embezzling the People's gold and dishonoring their fiduciary responsibilities and 32 legitimate contractual obligations? The cats at the FED decided that they should be fed more mice and the President was 33 instructed to pass a law demanding that the People return ALL of their gold to the bankers or be subjected to a stiff fine and 34 jail time. Roosevelt's Proclamations were taken word for word from the Resolution adopted by Federal Reserve.

35 Resolution Adopted by the Federal Reserve Board of New York.

36 "Whereas, in the opinion of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the continued and 37 increasing withdrawal of currency and gold from the banks of the country has now created a national 38 emergency..."

39 Remember, the controllers of the Federal Reserve were extremely well educated in law. History has shown them to be the 40 brains behind all major Wars throughout the world. They create a conflict and then fund all sides. War is big business for 41 banks. The fed understood how Congress can legislate for its Territorial subject "persons" through Art. I, Sec. 8, Clause 17,
42 without regards to the Constitution (see also Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)). These same scoundrels probably 43 created the loophole! They also knew the difference between CONSTITUTIONAL citizens and STATUTORY citizens and 44 they were well aware of the War Powers. Following is the original October 6, 1917 combined with the Amendments of 45 March 9, 1933:

46 Note: Bold faced and single underlines are added by the author for emphasis and understanding. Double underlines and

SIXTY FIFTH CONGRESS Sess. I Chapter 106, Page 411, October 6, 1917

CHAP 106—An Act To define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that this Act shall be known as the “Trading With the Enemy Act.”

SEC. 2. That the word “enemy” as used herein shall be deemed to mean, for the purposes of such trading and of this Act—

(a) Any individual, partnership, or other party of individuals, or any nationality, resident within the territory (including that occupied by the military and naval forces of any nation with which the United States is at war or resident outside the United States and doing business within such territory and any corporation incorporated within any country other than the United States and doing business with such [enemy] territory, and any corporation incorporated within such territory with which the United States is at war or incorporated within any country other than the United States.

(b) The government of any nation with which the United States is at war, or any political or municipal subdivision thereof.

(c) Such other individuals or body or class of individuals, as may be natives, citizens, or subjects of any nation with which the United States is at war, other than citizens of the United States, wherever resident or wherever doing business, as the President, if he shall find the safety of the United States or the successful prosecution of the war shall so require may, by proclamation, include within the term enemy”

[this section then continues to define an “ally of an enemy” in the same terms as the “enemy” and again states, “other than citizens of the United States.”]

Public Laws of the Seventy-Third Congress, Chapter 1, Title I, March 9, 1933 Sec. 2

Subdivision (b) of Section 5 of the Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 411), as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 5(b) “During time of war or during any other period of national emergency declared by the President, the President may through any agency that he may designate, or otherwise, investigate, regulate, or prohibit, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, by means of licenses or otherwise, any transactions of foreign exchange, export or earmarkings of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency, transfers of credits in any form (other than credits relating solely to transactions to be executed wholly within the United States) between or payments by banking institutions as defined by the President, and export, hoarding melting, or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency by any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof; and transfers of evidences of indebtedness or of ownership of property between the United States and any foreign country, whether enemy, ally of enemy or otherwise, or between residents of one or and he the President may require any such person engaged in any such transaction referred to in this subdivision to furnish under oath, complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters or other papers, in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person, either before or after such transaction is completed. Whoever willfully violates any of the provisions of this subdivision or of any license, order, rule or regulation issued thereunder, shall, upon conviction be fined not more than $10,000, or, if a natural person, may be imprisoned for not more than ten years, or both;’...”

SOME DARE CALL IT TREASON!*Constitution for the United States, Article III, Section 3, Clause 1

“Treason against the United States shall consist only of levying war against them, or adhering to their enemies...”

The supreme Court decision of Stoehr v. Wallace, 255 U.S. 239 (1921) declared:

“The Trading With the Enemy Act, originally and as amended is strictly a war measure, and finds its sanction in the provision empowering Congress ‘to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal and make rules concerning captures on land and water.’” Const. Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 11

How did FDR and the Federal Reserve get away with this treasonous robbery of the American People’s substance? Probably for the same reason Congress is currently passing a multitude of un-American bills and Acts. Congress just does not read them! In the words of Congressman McFadden:

Congressman McFadden: "Mr. Speaker, I regret that the membership of the House has had no opportunity to consider or even read this bill. The first opportunity I had to know what this legislation is, was when it was read from the clerk's desk. It is an important banking bill. It is a dictatorship over finance in the United States, it is complete control over the banking system in the United States...It is difficult under the circumstances to discuss this bill. The first section of the bill, as I grasped it is the War Powers that were given back in 1917."

In spite of warnings of McFadden, the amended Trading With the Enemy Act was immediately passed by a trusting, uneducated and ignorant Congress.

What were the banking institutions as defined by the President?

TITLE II

Sec. 202. As used in this title, the term "bank" means (1) any national bank. [Because this is federal legislation this would mean a U.S. national ie. U.S. Territorial bank, not a sovereign state bank.] (2) any bank or trust company located in the District of Columbia and operating under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency..."

What is the collateral for federal reserve notes? To add insult to injury, it became the People's own property!

Congressman McGugin: "This money will...represent a mortgage on all the homes and other property of the people in the Nation."

Senate Document No. 43, 73rd Congress, 1st Session: "The ownership of all property is in the State [Remember, what the term "in the State" means?]; individual so called 'ownership' is only by virtue of Government, ie. Law, amounting to mere user; and use must be in accordance with law and subordinate to the necessities of the State."

6.7.3.1 FDR's Pep-Talk to Congress, January 17, 1935

Below is a speech given January 17, 1935 by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt to Congress on the issue of advocating a proposed new program he called "Social Security". This speech resulted in the eventual passage of the Social Security Act of 1935 on August 14, 1935:

In addressing you on June 8, 1934, I summarized the main objectives of our American program. Among these was, and is, the security of the men, women, and children of the Nation against certain hazards and vicissitudes of life. This purpose is an essential part of our task. In my annual message to you I promised to submit a definite program of action. This I do in the form of a report to me by a Committee on Economic Security, appointed by me for the purpose of surveying the field and of recommending the basis of legislation.

I am gratified with the work of this Committee and of those who have helped it: The Technical Board on Economic Security drawn from various departments of the Government, the Advisory Council on Economic Security, consisting of informed and public - spirited private citizens and a number of other advisory groups, including a committee on actuarial consultants, a medical advisory board, a dental advisory committee, a hospital advisory committee, a public - health advisory committee, a child - welfare committee and an advisory committee on employment relief. All of those who participated in this notable task of planning this major legislative proposal are ready and willing, at any time, to consult with and assist in any way the appropriate Congressional committees and members, with respect to detailed aspects.

It is my best judgment that this legislation should be brought forward with a minimum of delay. Federal action is necessary to, and conditioned upon, the action of States. Forty - four legislatures are meeting or will meet soon. In order that the necessary State action may be taken promptly it is important that the Federal Government proceed speedily.

The detailed report of the Committee sets forth a series of proposals that will appeal to the sound sense of the American people. It has not attempted the impossible, nor has it failed to exercise sound caution and consideration of all of the factors concerned: the national credit, the rights and responsibilities of States, the capacity of industry to assume financial responsibilities and the fundamental necessity of proceeding in a manner that will merit the enthusiastic support of citizens of all sorts.

1 It is overwhelmingly important to avoid any danger of permanently discrediting the sound and necessary policy
 2 of Federal legislation for economic security by attempting to apply it on too ambitious a scale before actual
 3 experience has provided guidance for the permanently safe direction of such efforts. The place of such a
 4 fundamental in our future civilization is too precious to be jeopardized now by extravagant action. It is a sound
 5 idea - a sound ideal. Most of the other advanced countries of the world have already adopted it and their
 6 experience affords the knowledge that social insurance can be made a sound and workable project.

7 Three principles should be observed in legislation on this subject. First, the system adopted, except for the money
 8 necessary to initiate it, should be self-sustaining in the sense that funds for the payment of insurance benefits
 9 should not come from the proceeds of general taxation. Second, excepting in old-age insurance, actual
 10 management should be left to the States subject to standards established by the Federal Government. Third, sound
 11 financial management of the funds and the reserves, and protection of the credit structure of the Nation should 12 be assured by retaining Federal control over all funds through trustees in the Treasury of the United States.

13 At this time, I recommend the following types of legislation looking to economic security:

14 1. Unemployment compensation.

15 2. Old-age benefits, including compulsory and voluntary annuities.

16 3. Federal aid to dependent children through grants to States for the support of existing mothers' pension systems
 17 and for services for the protection and care of homeless, neglected, dependent, and crippled children.

18 4. Additional Federal aid to State and local public-health agencies and the strengthening of the Federal Public
 19 Health Service. I am not at this time recommending the adoption of so-called "health insurance," although groups
 20 representing the medical profession are cooperating with the Federal Government in the further study of the 21 subject and definite progress is being made.

22 With respect to unemployment compensation, I have concluded that the most practical proposal is the levy of a
 23 uniform Federal payroll tax, 90 percent of which should be allowed as an offset to employers contributing under 24 a compulsory State unemployment compensation act. The purpose of this is to afford a requirement of a
 25 reasonably uniform character for all States cooperating with the Federal Government and to promote and 26 encourage the passage of unemployment compensation laws in the States. The 10 percent not thus offset should 27 be used to cover the costs of Federal and State administration of this broad system. Thus, States will largely 28 administer unemployment compensation, assisted and guided by the Federal Government. An unemployment
 29 compensation system should be constructed in such a way as to afford every practicable aid and incentive toward 30 the larger purpose of employment stabilization. This can be helped by the intelligent planning of both public and
 31 private employment. It also can be helped by correlating the system with public employment so that a person who 32 has exhausted his benefits may be eligible for some form of public work as is recommended in this report.
 33 Moreover, in order to encourage the stabilization of private employment, Federal legislation should not foreclose
 34 the States from establishing means for inducing industries to afford an even greater stabilization of employment.

35 In the important field of security for our old people, it seems necessary to adopt three principles: First,
 36 noncontributory old-age pensions for those who are now too old to build up their own insurance. It is, of course,
 37 clear that for perhaps 30 years to come funds will have to be provided by the States and the Federal Government
 38 to meet these pensions. Second, compulsory contributory annuities which in time will establish a self-supporting 39 system for those now young and for future generations. Third, voluntary contributory annuities by which 40 individual initiative can increase the annual amounts received in old age. It is proposed that the Federal
 41 Government assume one-half of the cost of the old-age pension plan, which ought ultimately to be supplanted by 42 self-supporting annuity plans.

43 The amount necessary at this time for the initiation of unemployment compensation, old-age security, children's 44 aid, and the promotion of public health, as outlined in the report of the Committee on Economic Security, is 45 approximately $100,000,000.

46 The establishment of sound means toward a greater future economic security of the American people is dictated
 47 by a prudent consideration of the hazards involved in our national life. No one can guarantee this country against 48 the dangers of future depressions but we can reduce these dangers. We can eliminate many of the factors that
 49 cause economic depressions, and we can provide the means of mitigating their results. This plan for economic 50 security is at once a measure of prevention and a method of alleviation.

51 We pay now for the dreadful consequence of economic insecurity - and dearly. This plan presents a more equitable
 52 and infinitely less expensive means of meeting these costs. We cannot afford to neglect the plain duty before us. I
 53 strongly recommend action to attain the objectives sought in this report.

<http://newdeal.feri.org/index.htm>

A revolution was made when Social Security was enacted in 1935 and it radically changed our country. After remarkably little public and Congressional debate, Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law on August 14, 1935. FDR knew that the welfare state wouldn't end with Social Security. Many of his disappointed allies had wanted much more. But FDR assured them this was just the beginning.<sup>357</sup>

FDR said, on signing the bill into law, that Social Security "represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete."<sup>358</sup> The federal government through programs such as Social Security would create its own business cycle, it would "flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and inflation,"<sup>359</sup> Roosevelt promised. Social Security was representative of national planning schemes – some of which had been tried during World War I – and which became popular again with intellectuals. Many of them believed that the government could wage war on poverty; that, by using the techniques of wartime planning so popular with progressives during World War I, the government could generate and control the business cycle.<sup>360</sup>

Social Security was a Keynesian device to ensure that buying power would remain strong in times of high unemployment. By Keynesian, I mean a kind of thinking that pre-dated Keynes by centuries, which held that injecting inflation into a weak economy would work miracles. Keynes, in the 1920s, 30s and 40s, was merely one member of this inflationist school. But his thought was influential in America in the 1930s. One of the founding fathers of Social Security has said that the contribution of Keynes was not appreciated.<sup>361</sup> Keynes' philosophy helped justify a massive welfare state.

The original Social Security package, for instance, was a lot more than so-called old age insurance. The program initially contained 10 programs and included 11 titles. Besides, pensions, the federal government was initiating vocational rehabilitation, unemployment insurance, aid to dependent children and public health programs, among others. Myriad additional programs would follow over the years because of the initial triumph of Social Security. It would help bring about a signal change in American culture and government: The federal government would take on many new powers and radically change our economy.<sup>362</sup>

But, most important of all, Social Security changed our culture in ways the authors of the original Social Security Act may or may not have realized: It would, among other things, also discourage savings, expand the state's reach into the family, redistribute income in ways no one imagined (quite often from the working poor and the lower middle-class to the upper middle-class because the latter group tended to have more political clout as exercised through organizations such as the AARP) and create a huge unprecedented peacetime bureaucracy, a bureaucracy that frequently pushed for more expansion under the guise of serving the people.<sup>363</sup>

The program also had a much more profound effect on American life: It invented the concept of a passive retirement in which individuals would stop working, stop making more than a few dollars a year, or what a Social Security advocate called "pin

<sup>360</sup> Some socialists said FDR was going in the direction of planning and economic nationalism. Said Stuart Chase: "National Planning and economic nationalism must go together or not at all. President Roosevelt has accepted the general philosophy of planning." He added that the nation could confidently move toward autarchy. Also see George Soule's comments in Walter Lippmann's The Good Society, p 91, (Grosset & Dunlap, New York, 1936). "It is nonsense to say that there is any physical impossibility of doing for peace purposes the sort of thing we did for war purposes."

<sup>363</sup> The best example is one of the founding fathers of Social Security, Wilbur Cohen. With the Republicans back in power in 1953, the supposedly non-partisan Cohen quietly "wrote speeches and supplied information" for the Democrats. Says a friendly biographer: "It was not the first time that the non-partisan Social Security administration shaded into partisan politics." See Mr. Social Security: The Life of Wilbur Cohen, by Edward Berkowitz, p41, (University Press of Kansas, Lawrence, 1995).

1 money<sup>364</sup>. To make more than pin money would mean Social Security penalties, an idea added to the original bill by the labor
2 unions.

3 Social Security advocates implicitly convinced tens of millions of Americans that their golden years meant "taking it easy,"
4 withdrawing from the most challenging parts of their lives. That would free up millions of jobs, an important consideration
5 in the midst of the Great Depression, an economic calamity in which FDR's policies failed even after six years of huge
6 spending.<sup>365</sup> By 1940, an FDR historian would implicitly concede that the New Deal had failed to restore a strong economy.
7 "The America over which Roosevelt presided in 1940 was in its eleventh year of depression. No decline in American history
8 had been so deep, so lasting, so far reaching."<sup>366</sup> Clearly, America's recovery from the Great Depression did not begin until 9 the buildup for World War II and the war itself. That's when FDR discovered his affinity for a military Keynesianism.<sup>367</sup>

10 Many changes triggered by Social Security. The changes triggered debates over basic social and economic issues such as 11 personal responsibility vs. the general welfare, and who defines the nature of retirement, the individual or the government, as 12 well as who should control the retirement assets of millions of people.

13 "Why, then was America so far behind? The first reason was out of the cherished ideal of rugged 14 individualism."<sup>368</sup>

15 6.7.3.2 FDR and the Birth of Social Security: Destroying Rugged Individuality

16 Social Security has become the crown jewel of a welfare state, which is why its defenders are today so ardent in fighting any 17 move to privatize any part of it. The welfare state will always be safe as long as Social Security survives. Social Security has 18 continued to expand in good times and bad, under Democrats and Republicans, even though a few of the latter actually
19 claimed that they would bring Social Security under control. Those who thought they would tame this huge program lost time
20 and again. These politicians who once criticized Social Security, usually ended up praising it<sup>369</sup> or kept their criticisms to 21 themselves.<sup>370</sup> And this was FDR's goal in designing the program: Insuring that no succeeding group of politicians could ever
22 undo his work.<sup>371</sup>

23 Today those who would privatize or even reform Social Security<sup>372</sup> face a formidable task, a task as difficult as dismantling
24 the military-industrial complex or selling off Amtrak. That's because decrepit government bureaucracies – as opposed to

<sup>364</sup> Barbara Armstrong, executive director of the Committee on Economic Security (CES), which wrote the Social Security plan said that retirement would mean "that you've stopped working for pay." See The History of Retirement: The Meaning and Functioning of an American Institution, 1885-1978, by William Graebner, p185, (Yale University Press, New Haven, Conn., 1980)

<sup>365</sup> By 1938, in the midst of a brutal recession, it was clear to many of FDR's advisers that the New Deal was failing. One of his political advisers, vice president John Nance Garner said that "I don't think the Boss has any definite programs to meet the business. I don't think much of the spending program. You can't keep spending forever. Some day you have to meet the bills." See Jim Farley's Story: The Roosevelt Years, P138, (McGraw Hill, New York, 1948). Roosevelt also complained when Secretary of Commerce Dan Roper told him that the economy was slipping into recession. "Dan, you've got to stop issuing these Hooverish statements all the time." Ibid, p101.

<sup>369</sup> For instance Ronald Reagan, who had been a great critic of Social Security, would say, toward the end of his presidential years, that "Social Security has proven to be one of the most successful and popular [federal] programs." See Social Security After 50: Successes and Failures. Edward Berkowitz, editor, (Greenwood Press, New York, 1987).

<sup>372</sup> The problem of privatizers is what are they to do with the huge unfunded liabilities of this system. It would cost billions, maybe trillions of dollars just for the transition costs to a private system. Meantime, according to economist Milton Friedman and observers such as Marshall Carter and William Shipman, the unfunded liabilities of the system are about $7 trillion. For more see my "Insecure Promise" in the November 1999 issue of Financial Planning magazine. Also, a former Social Security official likes to brag that the program is so entrenched that it would be also impossible to destroy.

1 rotten private bureaucracies – have the power to tax and to preserve their existence. And the first rule of any bureaucracy is
2 survival at any cost. The second rule is always try to expand.

3 The welfare state took much longer to take hold in the United States than in Europe, where socialism had a better name and 4 a longer tradition.

5 By the early 1930s, Germany had a Social Security program for nearly a half century. Britain had a government pension
6 scheme since before the World War I, when the Liberal/Labour government of Herbert Henry Asquith in 1911<sup>373</sup> laid the
7 foundations of a welfare state that would be later carried out by the Labor and Conservative parties over the next two
8 generations. Germany under Bismarck had passed a Social Security plan as part of an alliance with Social Democrats.
9 Bismarck was ready for socialism<sup>374</sup>. Dozens of European countries had put Social Security schemes by the outbreak of 10 World War I.

11 But in America, there was a tradition of "rugged individualism" that resisted most forms of collectivism. Even labor leaders
12 like Samuel Gompers,<sup>375</sup> who had called for many other government initiatives, opposed a mandatory social insurance
13 program, a concept that stressed an insurance that was not for profit, but was run for the benefit of society. But Gompers was 14 wary of that idea. To him, it smacked of German socialism. "Compulsory social insurance," he complained, "is in essence
15 undemocratic."<sup>376</sup> Foreshadowing the objections of those who would later complain that the government would mismanage
16 the assets of a program, Gompers wanted workers to depend on themselves, private institutions, their unions – anything but 17 the government.

18 The opposition to social insurance was owing to an American individualist tradition whose adherents held that individuals,
19 families and community groups should take care of people in old age, not the government. And, most importantly, it was a
20 voluntarist tradition that resisted compulsory government programs.<sup>377</sup>

21 FDR, who was credited as the first major American politician to support a social security system, nevertheless had
22 campaigned in 1932 in favor of limited government. He bitterly criticized Herbert Hoover's huge deficits. On the campaign
23 trail he promised to roll back, not expand, the size of the federal government. "For three long years I have been going up and 24 down this country preaching that government – federal government, state and local – costs too much. I shall not stop that 25 preaching."<sup>378</sup>

26 FDR gave not the slightest indication that was he committed to a massive expansion of the power of the federal government.
27 Later, as we will see, FDR would say that circumstances had changed. His supporters would argue that the Great Depression,
28 and the more radical social insurance proposals of men like Huey Long, Upton Sinclair and Frances Townsend,<sup>379</sup> had led 29 him to back this "moderate" program called Social Security.

30 Yet even before he took office, FDR was quietly committed to a social insurance program<sup>380</sup> as part of a program of counter-
31 cyclical measures he believed would cure the problems of the business cycle. These initiatives were failures if one is to

1 measure by unemployment numbers and traditional economic indices<sup>381</sup>. They did not restore prosperity, FDR was told by
2 advisers six years into the New Deal.<sup>382</sup>

3 Social Security was a key part of his revolutionary corporatist economic policies. It was a revolution that shifted the
4 responsibility for income maintenance from the private to the public sector, from the family to the state and from voluntary
5 organizations to public bureaucracies. And it was a revolution carried out by elite groups of welfare workers, Social
6 Democrats and other who believed European socialism could be imported to the United States on a step-by-step basis.<sup>383</sup>
7 They believed in a "new liberalism." Classical liberalism would die in the United States in the 1930s through programs such
8 as Social Security just as it had died in Britain some four decades before. A new liberalism celebrated the expanded powers
9 of the federal government. The old American individualist tradition was distrustful of distant central governments and the 10 bureaucracies they spawned.

11 "Americans assumed that their country was unique in assigning to private voluntary institutions a wide range of 12 responsibilities which in other nations were relegated to governments or elite groups," writes one historian of Social 13 Security.<sup>384</sup>

14 Almost everyone, FDR critics as well as admirers, agree that Social Security was a watershed event in our history. FDR said
15 of the legislation that, if it was the only bill passed in the 1935-36 congressional session, Congress would have accomplished
16 a lot.<sup>385</sup> Why was it so important to those such as FDR who scorned the individualist tradition? Social Security was the 17 centerpiece of a revolution that one historian has said meant that "big government, modern government" was here to stay.<sup>386</sup>

18 When Social Security survived – and, in its earlier years, it was a dicey question if it would or not, requiring the most effective
19 political skills that FDR and his allies could summon – Americans implicitly accepted the most essential part of a new social 20 policy. Washington, not individuals, would now have huge powers over the individual citizen's retirement planning,
21 unemployment insurance and welfare payments. When FDR signed the Social Security Act, the United States, for the first
22 time in her history, would have "a significant, permanent social welfare bureaucracy."<sup>387</sup>

23 FDR assured his social democratic allies that the Social Security was just the beginning of an expanded role for the federal
24 government. But it wasn't until toward the end of his life, in the Economic Bill of Rights speech that so "thrilled" his social 25 democratic supporters<sup>388</sup>, that he was ready to publicly walk away from the campaign promises of 1932 and the American 26 individualist tradition.

27 Some four years after its creation, the structure of this landmark program was expanding. Some 12,000 employees would be
28 working in the Social Security administration, which would become bigger and bigger . Once in place, there were calls for 29 sister bureaucracies. American Socialists were disappointed that more people were not included in the 1935 act (such as 30 servants and farm workers); that disability insurance wasn't initially covered, that health insurance had not been included.
31 But many of those leftist critics, who had at the time claimed that it was too little, later would concede that Social Security's

<sup>381</sup> After some five years of the New Deal, another recession began in 1937. Two historians have written that "The resulting downturn began in August 1937 and continued through the winter and spring of 1938. It was nothing short of catastrophic." See FDR, Russell D. Buhite and David W. Levy, editors, p111 (Penguin Books, New York, 1992)

<sup>382</sup> FDR conceded there were problems in talks with Farley but blamed a conspiracy against him: "I know that the present situation is the result of a concerted effort by big business and concentrated wealth to drive the market down and just to create a situation unfavorable to me." See Jim Farley's Story, p101.

<sup>383</sup> "The vast expansion of public assistance functions and expenditures beginning in the 1930s was superimposed upon a long tradition of disdain totally incongruous with the political and economic power assumed by the public welfare sector." See The Professional Altruist: The Emergence of Social Work as a Career, 1880-1930, p54, (New York, Atheneum, 1969)

<sup>384</sup> See The Struggle for Social Security, 1900-1935, Roy Lubove, (University of Pittsburgh Press, 1986, p. 5 .

<sup>385</sup> FDR understood that Social Security's passage represented radical change: "If the Senate and the House of Representatives in this long and arduous session had nothing more than pass this Bill, the session would have been regarded as historic for all time." See The New Deal: A Documentary History, William E. Leuchtenburg, p 80, (Harper and Row, New York, 1968)

<sup>386</sup> Frances Perkins said "modern government" was here to stay when she saw the 1944 GOP platform, which accepted many of the welfare state initiative of FDR. The Republicans were in the process of becoming "a me too party." See Frances Perkins: a Member of the Cabinet, by Bill Severin, p. 223, (Hawthorn Books, New York, 1976).

1 establishment, no matter how modest, opened the door for the government to do many other things.<sup>389</sup> All the measures left
2 out of the original bill would be included within 30 years.

3 That is why even many of those socialists who scorned FDR, who said that he was a bumbling savior of capitalism, could
4 still summon up some grudging praise for FDR. Socialism would be quietly achieved over generations as part of a mixed
5 economy that seemed, on the surface, to be a traditional laissez-faire American economy.

6 Social Security, whether it was called social insurance or government pensions, was the first vital step on the road to the 7 welfare state. How it finally happened in the United States, after decades of frustrating unsuccessful efforts by social 8 democrats and professional bureaucrats, is a fascinating story. FDR went around Congress, which was too unpredictable and
9 whose review process might not have given him what he wanted. FDR found his own experts that he knew would give him
10 what he wanted, then would unveil a Social Security proposal that he expected to be adopted whole. Congress, generally 11 intimidated by the experts, went along with few objections.

12 This process, this masterful strategy of building a welfare state in a country with a historic commitment to individualism, will 13 be discussed in the next report.

14 6.7.4 1937: FDR's Stacking of the Supreme Court

15 President Franklin D. Roosevelt, during his long 12-year tenure in office in the 1930's, tried to ram his socialist programs
16 down our throat. To name a few of these programs he tried to institute:

- 17 1. Social Security (1935).
- 18 2. Outlawing of the holding of gold by private individuals and forcing citizens to use paper currency.
- 19 3. Direct income taxes on individuals. These taxes were struck down by the following Supreme Court rulings:
  - 20 3.1. 1920: Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920) (struck down direct income taxes on federal judges).
  - 21 3.2. 1922: Bailey v. Drexel Furniture Co., 259 U.S. 20 (1922). The Supreme Court ruled that a federal income tax on 22 child labor was unconstitutional.
  - 23 3.3. 1924: Cook v. Tait, 265 U.S. 47 (1924) (ruled that direct taxes on individuals cannot be sustained based on income).
  - 24 3.4. 1938: Hassett v. Welch, 303 U.S. 303 (1938). The Supreme Court ruled that all doubts about the construction of 25 tax statutes, codes, and laws should be resolved in favor of taxpayers, not the government.
- 26 4. Social security numbers.
- 27 5. Railroad retirement (struck down in 1935 in the Supreme Court Case of Railroad Retirement Board v. Alton Railroad 28 Co., 295 U.S. 330 (1935)).

29 Because of these rulings against his socialist programs, FDR was feeling thwarted by the Supreme Court. Therefore, on 30 March 9, 1937, he announced his intention via radio to the entire country that he was going to "stack" the Supreme Court
31 (see <http://www.hpol.org/fdr/chat/>). This was called "the court packing plan". The Supreme court originally had 6 justices,
32 and he doubled its size by adding several of his own "cronies" who would uphold and defend his socialist programs, including
33 Social Security and the Victory Tax. He also proposed to replace all the justices over 70, which included 5 of the 6 justices
34 then in office. Here are some of FDR's own words, given during a radio address on March 9, 1937:

35 "But since the rise of the modern movement for social and economic progress through legislation, the Court has 36 more and more often and more and more boldly asserted a power to veto laws passed by the Congress and by 37 state legislatures in complete disregard of this original limitation which I have just read.

38 [...]

39 The Court in addition to the proper use of its judicial functions has improperly set itself up as a third house of the 40 Congress - a super-legislature, as one of the justices has called it - reading into the Constitution words and 41 implications which are not there, and which were never intended to be there.

42 We have, therefore, reached the point as a nation where we must take action to save the Constitution from the 43 Court and the Court from itself. We must find a way to take an appeal from the Supreme Court to the Constitution

<sup>389</sup> One Democrat who noticed the transformation was FDR's fellow Democrat Al Smith. By the mid 1930s he was complaining that the "Brain Trusters caught the Socialists swimming and ran away with their clothes." See Al Smith, Hero of the Cities, by Matthew and Hannah Josephson, p459, (Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston, 1969). That's a good comparison given that the American Socialist Party of 1928 had called for a mandatory government pension system.

1           itself. We want a Supreme Court which will do justice under the Constitution and not over it. In our courts we 2           want a government of laws and not of men.

3           [...]

4           What is my proposal? It is simply this: whenever a judge or justice of any federal court has reached the age of 5           seventy and does not avail himself of the opportunity to retire on a pension, a new member shall be appointed by
6           the president then in office, with the approval, as required by the Constitution, of the Senate of the United States.

7           That plan has two chief purposes. By bringing into the judicial system a steady and continuing stream of new and
8           younger blood, I hope, first, to make the administration of all federal justice, from the bottom to the top, speedier
9           and, therefore, less costly; secondly, to bring to the decision of social and economic problems younger men who
10          have had personal experience and contact with modern facts and circumstances under which average men have 11          to live and work. This plan will save our national Constitution from hardening of the judicial arteries.

12          [...]

13          Those opposing this plan have sought to arouse prejudice and fear by crying that I am seeking to "pack" the 14          Supreme Court and that a baneful precedent will be established.

15          What do they mean by the words "packing the Supreme Court?" Let me answer this question with a bluntness that 16          will end all honest misunderstanding of my purposes.

17          If by that phrase "packing the Court" it is charged that I wish to place on the bench spineless puppets who would
18          disregard the law and would decide specific cases as I wished them to be decided, I make this answer: that no
19          president fit for his office would appoint, and no Senate of honorable men fit for their office would confirm, that 20          kind of appointees to the Supreme Court.

21          [...]

22          But if by that phrase the charge is made that I would appoint and the Senate would confirm justices worthy to sit
23          beside present members of the Court, who understand modern conditions, that I will appoint justices who will not
24          undertake to override the judgment of the Congress on legislative policy, that I will appoint justices who will act
25          as justices and not as legislators - if the appointment of such justices can be called "packing the Courts," then I
26          say that I and with me the vast majority of the American people favor doing just that thing - now.

27          Is it a dangerous precedent for the Congress to change the number of the justices? The Congress has always had,
28          and will have, that power. The number of justices has been changed several times before, in the administrations
29          of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson - both of them signers of the Declaration of Independence - in the 30          administrations of Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, and Ulysses S. Grant.

31          [...]

32          Like all lawyers, like all Americans, I regret the necessity of this controversy. But the welfare of the United States,
33          and indeed of the Constitution itself, is what we all must think about first. Our difficulty with the Court today rises
34          not from the Court as an institution but from human beings within it. But we cannot yield our constitutional
35          destiny to the personal judgment of a few men who, being fearful of the future, would deny us the necessary means
36          of dealing with the present.

37          Could it be any clearer, after reading this and looking at the history of the Supreme Court rulings at that time following his 38          "packing plan" that he was trying to stack the deck and ramrod his socialist programs down our throats?

39          Below is what the U.S. Senate Report 711 said about the packing plan, which they had a very dim view of:

42          6.7.5    1943: FDR's Executive Order 9397: Bye-Bye Privacy and Fourth Amendment!

43          Below is a presidential Executive Order issued by our socialist President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in which the infamous
44          Social Security Number became the standard number for monitoring all transactions of every citizen. This was the day we 45          lost our privacy and gutted the Fourth Amendment. This infamous day marked the start of socialism in America and it was 46          accomplished in a time of national crisis (World War II) and in the name of the public "good".

EXECUTIVE ORDER 9397

WHEREAS certain Federal agencies from time to time require in the administration of their activities a system of numerical identification of accounts of individual persons; and

WHEREAS some seventy million persons have heretofore been assigned account numbers pursuant to the Social Security Act; and

WHEREAS a large percentage of Federal employees have already been assigned account numbers pursuant to the Social Security Act; and

WHEREAS it is desirable in the interest of economy and orderly administration that the Federal Government move towards the use of a single unduplicated numerical identification system of accounts and avoid the unnecessary establishment of additional systems:

NOW THEREFORE, by virtue of the authority vested in me as President of the United States, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. Hereafter any Federal department establishment, or agency shall, whenever the head thereof finds it advisable to establish a new system of permanent account numbers pertaining to individual persons, utilize exclusively the Social Security Act account numbers assigned pursuant to Title 26, section 402.502 of the 1940 Supplement to the Code of Federal Regulations and pursuant to paragraph 2 of this order.

2. The Social Security Board shall provide for the assignment of an account number to each person who is required by any Federal agency to have such a number but who has not previously been assigned such number by the Board. The Board may accomplish this purpose by

(a) assigning such numbers to individual persons,

(b) assigning blocks of numbers to Federal agencies for reassignment to individual persons, or

(c) making such other arrangements for the assignment of numbers as it may deem appropriate.

3. The Social Security Board shall furnish, upon request of any Federal agency utilizing the numerical identification system of accounts provided for in this order, the account number pertaining to any person with whom such agency has an account or the name and other identifying data pertaining to any account number of any such person.

4. The Social Security Board and each Federal agency shall maintain the confidential character of information relating to individual persons obtained pursuant to the provisions of this order.

5. There shall be transferred to the Social Security Board, from time to time, such amounts as the Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall determine to be required for reimbursement by any Federal agency for the services rendered by the Board pursuant to the provisions of this order.

6. This order shall be published in the Federal Register.

6.8 Congressional Cover-Ups, Scandals, and Tax Code Obfuscation

"I, _____, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."
[Congressional Oath of Office]

---

"Suppose you were an idiot, and suppose you were in Congress, But I repeat myself."
[Mark Twain]

---

"If 'pro' is the opposite of 'con', a wise man once said, then 'progress' must be the antonym of 'Congress'."

---

Late one night in the capitol city a mugger wearing a ski mask jumped into the path of a well-dressed man and stuck a gun in his ribs. "Give me your money!" he demanded.

Indignant, the affluent man replied, "You can't do this - I'm a U.S. Congressman!"

"In that case," replied the robber, "give me MY money!"

This section shall show conclusively the history of increasing obfuscation, confusion, and deception of our income tax laws from 1921 to the present. We will show that Congress has, with each successive revision of the U.S. Code and the Code of Federal Regulations, deliberately tried to make the law more confusing and deceptive by:

1. Removing focus of the law on "sources" or "taxable activities", by removing pointers to legitimate "sources" whenever discussing income in the Internal Revenue Code. This can lead to the mistaken assumption by the Citizen that all sources of income are taxable instead of just specific sources. But we know that Congress doesn't have the authority to tax people in China, so wherever there is an income, there must be an associated source.
2. Remove references to the fact that "foreign corporations" and only withholding agents for "nonresident aliens" are liable for income taxes and replace "foreigners" with "taxpayers". Thus, if American citizens (most of whom are NOT "U.S. citizens") can erroneously be convinced that they are "taxpayers", then they will think that the section applies to them.
3. Add more indirection by using new terms whose definition is not referred to where they are used. These terms include:
  - 3.1. "items of income"
  - 3.2. "statutory groupings"
  - 3.3. "operative sections"
4. Adding double negatives (in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T, for instance) instead of just referring to the positive of what can and cannot be taxed.
5. Changing the definitions of certain words to make them appear universal and yet in actuality they aren't. For instance, below are some confusing words in the tax code and their REAL definitions:
  - 5.1. "Employer": The Federal government as an employer of federal workers. There are repeated references to how employers are liable for taxes they don't withhold but little is said about the fact that the only people by the code who are liable for the deductions are Federal government agencies!
  - 5.2. "Taxpayer": A nonresident alien domiciled in the U.S. or a citizen living overseas.
  - 5.3. "The States": The District of Columbia and all federal States but not one of the Union states or several states.
  - 5.4. "trade or business in the United States": functions involving the holding of public office with the United States government (e.g. congressional office or presidential appointment).

We will argue that such an obfuscating evolution of the tax code as directed by lawyers (does anyone like lawyers?) in Congress would point to the fact that there is a conspiracy by the lawyers in Congress to defraud the citizens (notice we didn't say "taxpayers") illegally of their come by abusing the law and the tax code. This also points to the fact that we need better configuration management of the laws so that there is traceability for each modification of the law to a specific individual in Congress so that person can be prosecuted (and defamed and fired from office) appropriately when they either demonstrate a conflict of interest or try to obfuscate the code. We believe that a petition (under the First Amendment) and conviction of the government for the following crimes is inevitable based on current law and that it is only a matter of time before this issue ends up in front of the Supreme Court. Below are just a few of the crimes you will likely see the IRS and members of Congress convicted of based on the evidence presented here:

1. "Conspiracy against rights" (18 U.S.C. §241).
2. "Federally protected rights being violated" (18 U.S.C. §245).
3. "Illegally taking more money than is required by law" (26 U.S.C. §7214).
4. "Illegal extortion of taxes" (18 U.S.C. §872).
5. "Receiving the proceeds of extortion" (18 U.S.C. §880).

6. "Mailing threatening communications" (18 U.S.C. §876).
7. "Blackmail" (18 U.S.C. §873).
8. "Retaliating against a witness, victim, or an informant" (18 U.S.C. §1513).
9. "False writings" (18 U.S.C. §1018).
10. "Taking of property that is not based on law" (26 C.F.R. §601.106(f)(1)
11. "Retaliating against or harassing taxpayer" (Section 1203, IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998).
12. "Unauthorized collection actions" (26 U.S.C. §7433).
13. "Fraud" (18 U.S.C. §1018).
14. "Fraud and swindling" (18 U.S.C. §1341).
15. "Sale or receipt of stolen goods" (18 U.S.C. §2315).
16. Running of a "continuing financial crimes enterprise" (18 U.S.C. §225).
17. "Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity" (18 U.S.C. §1957).

6.8.1 No taxation without representation!

No taxation without representation!

This was one of the rallying cries before the American revolution. We have all heard it in high school and read it in the history books, and perhaps felt some sense of pride in it. But do we REALLY know what it means and if we still have it? The answer is, unfortunately, probably not. Because the Constitution SPECIFICALLY STATES that if anyone imposes a tax and tries to collect it, it must be Congress!!

This is what REPRESENTATION with TAXATION means. If you don't like a tax, you can vote against the people who passed it and who enforce it. When was the last time you voted for an agent of the Internal Revenue Service? Instead, our corrupt Congress as created a new executive agency, given it no delegated authority in the Internal Revenue Code, allowed it to write its own regulations to enforce the tax (a conflict of interest, I might add) and then hypocritically and habitually complained that it has overstepped its bounds, as if they had no responsibility for its existence! Here is the way Irwin Schiff insightfully describes this situation:

The government has done a masterful job at subterfuge. The same Congress that created the IRS is the one that complains about it. They complain about it like it is some evil and independent agency of the federal government with a life of its own and as though they have no control over it because it is outside the legislative branch, but it was created through the legislation of Congress in 26 U.S.C. §7805! Congress complaining about the abuses of the IRS is like people saying about me:

"You know Irwin Schiff is a really nice guy, but Oh.....HIS FIST. It really hurts and it's such an evil thing when it goes around hitting people all the time!"

Don't let your Congressman suck you into his pity party! Tell him to get off his ass and fix the lawless behavior of the IRS!

Congress and the Courts have, by allowing the current situation with the IRS to exist, failed to live up to their oath of office to support and defend the Constitution, and thereby abdicated their powers to another branch of government. Congress has abdicated their responsibility to collect taxes by delegating it to another branch of the government: The Department of the Treasury and the IRS are in the EXECUTIVE BRANCH! The Constitution does not allow the Congress to delegate or abdicate their duty to collect taxes! Punish the bastards by penalizing them for 2/3 of their salary until they fix this problem! Or better yet, cancel their retirement until they fix it. If we had a national referendum process, this would have happened hundreds of years ago!

"The accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive and judiciary, in the same hands ... may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny." - James Madison (1751-1863)

"Taxation WITH representation ain't so hot either." -- Gerald Barzan

6.8.2 The Corruption of Our Tax System by the Courts and the Congress: Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901)

Recall that the Supreme Court in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901) fracturing the United States into the equivalent of two countries: One with constitutional protections in the 50 union states, and the other one in the federal zone with no constitutional protections. We describe these two countries as:

The Great  IRS Hoax: Why We Don't Owe Income Tax, version 4.54

TOP SECRET: For Official Treasury/IRS Use Only (FOUO)

Copyright Family Guardian Fellowship

<http://famguardian.org/>

1 “One nation [the 50 union states] under God. The other nation [the federal zone] under fraud.”

2 In discussing the supreme Court case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Judge Harlan, in the most eloquently
3 expressed dissenting opinion, supported equal Constitutional protections for all territories and possessions of the United
4 States, in the same manner that the 50 union states are protected. Following are excerpts from that opinion, along with
5 Harlan’s accurate predictions of the consequences of that decision:

6 “I take leave to say that, if the principles thus announced should ever receive the sanction of a majority of this
7 court, a radical and mischievous change in our system of government will result. We will, in that event, pass
8 from the era of constitutional liberty guarded and protected by a written constitution into an era of legislative 9 absolutism..”

10 [. . .]

11 “The idea prevails with some, indeed it has found expression in arguments at the bar, that we have in this country
12 substantially two national governments: one to be maintained under the Constitution, with all of its 13 restrictions; the other to be maintained by Congress outside the independently of that instrument, by exercising 14 such powers [of absolutism] as other nations of the earth are accustomed to..”

15 [. . .]

16 It will be an evil day for American liberty if the theory of a government outside the supreme law of the land
17 finds lodgment in our constitutional jurisprudence. No higher duty rests upon this court than to exert its full
18 authority to prevent all violation of the principles of the Constitution.”
19 [Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901), Justice Harlan, Dissenting]

20 Judge Harlan’s extremely prudent advice was ignored and his prediction of a “radical and mischievous change in our system”
21 because of this ruling was right on target! This dual United States ruling is the root of the evil of the Internal Revenue Service,
22 the Federal Reserve System, with its subsequent robbery of our gold and silver, and the many other unjust federal agencies
23 that have abused American Right, confiscated their property, and strangled them with red-tape. A government established to 24 protect the happiness of American people has become the root of their misery and the worst abusers of the Rights it was 25 established to protect! Because of this ruling, Congress has been able to circumvent the Constitution for the united States of 26 America, as follows:

- 27 1. The United States Government legally creates legislation, which may be unconstitutional for the 50 union states, 28 under the authority and guise of legislating for the citizens and residents of the territories and possessions “belonging 29 to” the United States, over which the United States has exclusive authority.
- 30 2. Such federal legislation is made applicable only to the citizens born and residing in Territories, possessions,
31 instrumentalities and enclaves under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. These “individuals” are called
32 “U.S. citizens” or “citizens of the United states, subject to its jurisdiction” in such legislation. The average
33 American, of course, believes he or she is such a citizen (because it was never disclosed to them that our Congress
34 legislates for two different types of citizens). Because that American has respect for the law, he or she voluntarily
35 consents to obey this legislation that is contrary to the Constitution.

36 6.8.3 The Anti-Injunction Act statute, 26 U.S.C. §7421

37 This statute states:

38 Sec. 7421. Prohibition of suits to restrain assessment or collection

39 (a) Tax

40 Except as provided in sections 6015(e), 6212(a) and (c), 6213(a), 6225(b), 6246(b), 6331(i), 6672(b), 6694(c), 41 and 7426(a) and (b)(1), 7429(b), and 7436, no suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of 42 any tax shall be maintained in any court by any person, whether or not such person is the person against whom 43 such tax was assessed.

44 (b) Liability of transferee or fiduciary

45 No suit shall be maintained in any court for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection (pursuant to 46 the provisions of chapter 71) of -

(1) the amount of the liability, at law or in equity, of a transferee of property of a taxpayer in respect of any internal revenue tax, or

(2) the amount of the liability of a fiduciary under section 3713(b) of title 31, United States Code [1] in respect of any such tax.

The problem with this statute is that it is also commonly used as an excuse by our federal courts to NOT stop illegal assessment and collection of taxes for the government, which means that the IRS can act lawlessly and violate due process of Americans without a court order and cannot be restrained from illegally assessing and collecting the tax. The only recourse in any court above U.S. Tax Court is to pay the illegally assessed or collected tax and then sue the federal government. By that time, the plundered Citizen usually has so little property and cash left that he can't afford to defend his rights and an expensive lawyer will try to victimize and extort unreasonable fees from him to get him out of the predicament that this unconstitutional law put him in to begin with.

If you would like to know what the federal courts think about the Anti-Injunction Act, read the following cases:

- Willits v. Richardson, 497 F.2d. 240, 5th Circuit, (1974)
- Laing v. U.S., 423 U.S. 161 \(1976\): Upheld the Anti-Injunction Act.
- Enochs v. Williams Packing, 370 U.S. 1 \(1961\): Upheld the Anti-Injunction Act.

The state of California has enacted two laws that are similar to the Federal Anti-Injunction Act as follows:

- California Constitution: Section 32.

No legal or equitable process shall issue in any proceeding in any court against this State or any officer thereof to prevent or enjoin the collection of any tax. After payment of a tax claimed to be illegal, an action may be maintained to recover the tax paid, with interest, in such a manner as may be provided by the Legislature. [New section adopted November 5, 1974].

- California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 19081: Legal or equitable processes to enjoin assessment or collection of tax prohibited; Exception in residence cases.

No injunction or writ of mandate or other legal or equitable process shall issue in any suit, action, or proceeding in any court against this State or against any officer of this State to prevent or enjoin the assessment or collection of any tax under this part; provided, however, that any individual after protesting a notice or notices of deficiency assessment issues because of his alleged residence in this State and after appealing from the action of the Franchise Tax Board to the State Board of Equalization becomes final commence an action, on the grounds set forth in his protest, in the Superior Court of the County of Sacramento, in the County of Los Angeles or in the City and County of San Francisco against the Franchise Tax Board to determine the fact of his residence in this State during the year or years set forth in the notice or notices of deficiency assessment. No tax under this part based solely upon the residence of such an individual shall be collected from such individual until 60 days after the action of the State Board of Equalization becomes final and, if he commences an action pursuant to this section, during the pendency of such action, other than by way of or under the jeopardy assessment provisions of this part.

The thing to notice about the California version of the Anti-Injunction Act is the use of the term “this State” repeatedly throughout both the California Constitution and R&TC §19081. The important thing to remember is the meaning of the term “this State”, which means federal enclaves within California. Recall that we said in section 5.2.6 that “State” is really just the federal enclaves within California as per California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 17018:

17018. "State" includes the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States.
[which don't include the 50 sovereign states but do include federal areas within those states]

Also recall that California Revenue and Taxation Code, Section 6017 further defines the term "this State" explicitly to mean:

6017. "In this State" or "in the State" means within the exterior [outside] limits of the [Sovereign] state of California and includes [only] all territory within these limits owned by or ceded to the United States

So what they are saying here is that California's version of the Anti-Injunction act only applies in federal enclaves that are within California.

With respect to the comments in this section, the provisions of the Anti-Injunction Act may be easily circumvented if you know what you are doing. We describe how to do this in section 1.4.1 of the following:

6.8.4 Why the Lawyers in Congress Just Love the Tax Code

"All the Congress, all the accountants and tax lawyers, all the judges, and a convention of wizards all cannot tell for sure what the income tax law says." -- Walter B. Wriston

Merriam Webster's New International Dictionary (unabridged, 2d ed.), defines the term "sentence" as follows:

"sentence: 5. A series of connected words extending from one period or full stop to another. See sense 8, below."

"8. Gram. According to the degrees of complication in their structure, sentences are described as simple, complex, compound, and compound-complex."

A full, completed sentence ends with a period. The entire text of section 3121(b) of the federal Internal Revenue Code (IRC) contains only two completed sentences that end with a period. Printed below is the full text of section 3121(b) of the IRC. Inspection of the 1994, CCH Incorporated edition (volume 2) of the IRC reveals that the entire text of section 3121(b) required five pages to print in size 10 font. (This does not include the five additional pages that reference the "amendments" to section 3121(b).) A computer count of the entire text of section 3121(b) totaled some 19,098 characters, comprising some 3,834 words. The first completed sentence alone contained 18,880 characters or 3,788 words. According to Merriam Webster's ranking of the various degrees of complication that a sentence may take, those 3,788 words must surely classify that first sentence in section 3121(b) as a compound-complex sentence.

Below is printed the entire text of section 3121(b) comprised of 3,834 words which, properly and grammatically speaking, comprise only two completed sentences. Who said you can't have fun with the tax code!

"(b) Employment For purposes of this chapter, the term "employment" means any service, of whatever nature, performed (A) by an employee for the person employing him, irrespective of the citizenship or residence of either, (i) within the United States, or (ii) on or in connection with an American vessel or American aircraft under a contract of service which is entered into within the United States or during the performance of which and while the employee is employed on the vessel or aircraft it touches at a port in the United States, if the employee is employed on and in connection with such vessel or aircraft when outside the United States, or (B) outside the United States by a citizen or resident of the United States as an employee for an American employer (as defined in subsection (h)), or (C) if it is service, regardless of where or by whom performed, which is designated as employment or recognized as equivalent to employment under an agreement entered into under section 233 of the Social Security Act; except that such term shall not include - (1) service performed by foreign agricultural workers lawfully admitted to the United States from the Bahamas, Jamaica, and the other British West Indies, or from any other foreign country or possession thereof, on a temporary basis to perform agricultural labor; (2) domestic service performed in a local college club, or local chapter of a college fraternity or sorority, by a student who is enrolled and is regularly attending classes at a school, college, or university; (3)(A) service performed by a child under the age of 18 in the employ of his father or mother; (B) service not in the course of the employer's trade or business, or domestic service in a private home of the employer, performed by an individual under the age of 21 in the employ of his father or mother, or performed by an individual in the employ of his spouse or son or daughter; except that the provisions of this subparagraph shall not be applicable to such domestic service performed by an individual in the employ of his son or daughter if - (i) the employer is a surviving spouse or a divorced individual and has not remarried, or has a spouse living in the home who has a mental or physical condition which results in such spouse's being incapable of caring for a son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter (referred to in clause (ii)) for at least 4 continuous weeks in the calendar quarter in which the service is rendered,

1 and (ii) a son, daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter of such employer is living in the home, and (iii) the son,
2 daughter, stepson, or stepdaughter (referred to in clause (ii)) has not attained age 18 or has a mental or physical

6 individual is employed on and in connection with such vessel or aircraft, when outside the United States and
7 (B)(i) such individual is not a citizen of the United States or (ii) the employer is not an American employer; (5)
8 service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States, if such service -
9 (A) would be excluded from the term "employment" for purposes of this title if the provisions of paragraphs (5)
10 and (6) of this subsection as in effect in January 1983 had remained in effect, and (B) is performed by an 11 individual who - (i) has been continuously performing service described in subparagraph (A) since December 31,
12 1983, and for purposes of this clause - (I) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A)
13 returns to the performance of such service after being separated therefrom for a period of less than 366
14 consecutive days, regardless of whether the period began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, then such 15 service shall be considered continuous, (II) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A)
16 returns to the performance of such service after being detailed or transferred to an international organization as
17 described under section 3343 of subchapter III of chapter 33 of title 5, United States Code, or under section 3581
18 of chapter 35 of such title, then the service performed for that organization shall be considered service described
19 in subparagraph (A), (III) if an individual performing service described in subparagraph (A) is reemployed or 20 reinstated after being separated from such service for the purpose of accepting employment with the American
21 Institute in Taiwan as provided under section 3310 of chapter 48 of title 22, United States Code, then the service
22 performed for that Institute shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), (IV) if an individual
23 performing service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after performing 24 service as a member of a uniformed service (including, for purposes of this clause, service in the National Guard
25 and temporary service in the Coast Guard Reserve) and after exercising restoration or reemployment rights as 26 provided under chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code, then the service so performed as a member of a
27 uniformed service shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A), and (V) if an individual performing 28 service described in subparagraph (A) returns to the performance of such service after employment (by a tribal 29 organization) to which section 105(e)(2) of the Indian Self-Determination Act applies, then the service performed
30 for that tribal organization shall be considered service described in subparagraph (A); or (ii) is receiving an 31 annuity from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, or benefits (for service as an employee) under
32 another retirement system established by a law of the United States for employees of the Federal Government

54 service in the legislative branch (determined without regard to the provisions of subparagraph (B) relating to 55 continuity of employment), for any period of time after December 31, 1983, and for purposes of this subparagraph
56 (G) an individual is subject to such subchapter III or to any such other retirement system at any time only if (a)
57 such individual's pay is subject to deductions, contributions, or similar payments (concurrent with the service 58 being performed at that time) under section 8334(a) of such title 5 or the corresponding provision of the law

 39 if the average size of the operating crew on trips made during the preceding 4 calendar quarters consisted of 40 fewer than 10 individuals."

41 The ridiculous, complex text of section 3121(b) leaves small wonder why Philadelphian, Orwellian type lawyers are able to 42 spend their lifetimes arguing the federal tax code at the expense of "We the people."

43 It's no wonder they call it "code"...because like the lawyers in Congress and like the safes in most banks, you need to be a
 44 thief to crack it and thereby extract the truth! Doesn't this kind of ruse amount to a violation of the Sixth Amendment right
 45 to due process of law?

46 Isn't it one of the first and foremost principles of due process that the law must be written simply and clearly enough that the
 47 defendant can read and understand it himself/herself without the aid of a lawyer and thereby know what behavior is prohibited
 48 by the law? However, who but some judge or lawyer with four or more years of college and three years of law school and
 49 several years practicing law can understand the above? We believe the lawyers in Congress have deliberately used legalese
 50 to hide the truth and thereby create a new (upper) class of society and an order of "priests and priestcraft" (in this case
 51 witchcraft!) that is the only one within our society qualified or allowed by law to read and interpret the laws. This is how 52 they stole our birthright, our freedoms, and have systematically violated our fundamental due process rights! This is how
 53 they have nullified the value of serving as a juror...by ensuring that people like you and I serving on jury duty can't read
 54 and understand the law for ourselves and have to rely on the judge, who is a government employee and has the
 55 government's best interests in mind whenever he rules on cases or advises jurors. Jesus warned about this kind of insidious
 56 "lawyer abuse" and evil at the beginning of chapter 3, where we quoted from Luke 11:52 in the Bible. We also talk about 57 this in section 6.12, where we discuss the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax.

58 It's time for Citizens everywhere to remove this kind of pernicious evil trash and the unscrupulous lawyers who peddle it
 59 from our society once and for all, starting with throwing out every one of the bastards in Congress every election until they 60 start paying attention to this issue. We should communicate this intent to them consistently and repeatedly and prevalently
 61 until they simplify the laws to give us our right to due process back.

1. I suggest that every person reading this document forward a web pointer to it (by snail mail) to his or her two senators and representative in the Congress and ask if they understand this tax statute, viz., 3121(b).
2. Ask them to explain to you what it means - if they know what it means.
3. If they admit that they don't know what it means, ask them to please rewrite it and all other laws that they don't know the meaning of until they themselves - the legislators - know the meanings of the laws they vote on.

6.8.5 Congressional Propaganda and Lies

"When Congress talks about simplification, taxpayers may well be reminded of Emerson's comments regarding an acquaintance, 'the louder he talked of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons'."
 [Michael J. Graetz]

Congressmen frequently get correspondence from constituents about the illegality of the income tax. In response to these requests, they commissioned the Congressional Research Service to prepare a report entitled "Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax", CRS Report number 97-59A. The report is 29 pages and you can buy a copy of it for yourself from <http://pennyhill.com> for $29.95. Another way you can get this report is to write you Congressman with a question or an issue about income taxes. Oftentimes, they will write a short, one-page letter and attach the report. This document was recently updated on May 7, 2001. It is filled with lies, obfuscation, and deception. We got a copy of it, scanned it in and converted it to text, and then proceeded to write a rebuttal as part of the document itself. The rebutted version is a whopping 75 pages, more than twice the size of the original report. You can read this document yourself at:

Rebutted Version of Congressional Research Service Report 97-59A: Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax
<http://famguardian.org/PublishedAuthors/Govt/CRS/CRS-97-59A-rebuts.pdf>

We encourage you to download the complete version and look at it. We have posted it on the Taxes area of our website at:

<http://famguardian.org/Subjects/Taxes/taxes.htm>

under the Main heading of "False Government Propaganda With Rebuttal", and the subheading "Congressional Research Report 97-59A: Frequently Asked Questions Concerning the Federal Income Tax." Reading the rebutted version of this report is very enlightening in explaining how Congressmen like to deceive their constituents. It is also useful in preparing for a confrontation with the IRS, for instance, during a summons or deposition. We strongly encourage you to download and read this report, and to send it to your Congressman to ask him to rebut any part of it. You probably won't get an answer. It's just too hot to touch! ### 6.8.6 Whistleblower Retaliation, Indifference, and Censorship

6.8.6.1 We The People Truth In Taxation Hearing, February 27-28, 2002

On February 27 and 28, 2002, the We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education held a Truth In Taxation Hearing. The hearing was a result of a hunger strike staged back in July 2001 by its founder, Bob Schulz, who indicated that he would starve himself to death on the steps of the U.S. Capitol unless Congress would have the Department of Justice and the IRS appear in a public hearing to answer questions they were legally obligated to answer under the petition clause of the First Amendment. Congressman Roscoe Bartlett of Maryland came to the aid of Bob Schulz a couple weeks into the fast and by July 20, had negotiated an agreement in writing with the DOJ and IRS to appear to answer the questions proposed by Bob Schulz. The hearing would be scheduled for September 27, 2001.

Bob Schulz then went immediately off his fast and assembled a group of tax researchers to put together the questions he was going to ask. They met initially in Las Vegas in August 2001 to coordinate and organize their research into questions that could be asked. At least 40 of the top researchers from around the country appeared at that meeting. The group began assembling their evidence and questions and had a complete package. However, because of the terrorist attack on September 11, 2001, the hearings were postponed until February 27-28 at the request of Bob Schulz. Subsequent to the postponement, Congressman Bartlett was contacted in November 2001 by the DOJ and IRS and told that the DOJ and IRS would not be participating in the hearing rescheduled for 27-28 Feb. 2002. Congressman Bartlett did not relay this fact to Bob Schulz until

1 late January 2002. Apparently, he was waiting for Bob to commit some kind of faux pas that would justify the government
2 pulling out without losing face.

3 Bob Schulz then launched his campaign called “Operation Wait and File Until The Trial” on January 12, 2002, where he
4 encouraged Americans to wait to file their tax returns until after the Truth in Taxation Hearing on 27-28 Feb. This, he
5 believed, would put pressure on the government to appear at the hearings. He posted a flyer on his website about it and sent
6 that article to his mailing list. The article included the flyer to be published in newspapers and a letter to be direct mailed to 7 about 300,000 individuals. Then he mailed or faxed the flier to:

- 8 • Members of the American Judges Association
- 9 • Judges of The Federal Circuit
- 10 • Mayors of Largest U.S. Cities
- 11 • Federal Tax Court Judges
- 12 • Supreme Court Justices
- 13 • Radio Station General Managers
- 14 • Radio Talk Show Hosts
- 15 • 550 Partners of the Big Five Accounting Firms
- 16 • Executive Cabinet Members and Cabinet Legal Advisors
- 17 • Members of the Association of Copy Editors

18 Subsequently on January 17, 2002, Congressman Roscoe Bartlett notified Bob that the government had pulled out of the 19 hearings. Congressman Roscoe Bartlett’s assistant Lisa Wright stated that the Congressman was “canceling the forum,” and 20 that he was “dismayed” by the “rhetoric” of the “Wait to File” ad and that he would not be party to any movement that tells 21 people not to pay their federal income taxes. This, of course, was not what Bob Schulz was advocating. He never told people
22 not to PAY income taxes, only to delay filing their returns until after the hearing, which they were perfectly and legally
23 entitled to do. Bob tried to reason with her, but it was late and she was in no mood to listen.

24 Bob then decided to go ahead with the hearing anyway. He invited several expert witnesses to appear as a substitute for the 25 government’s witnesses. Subsequently, on February 10, 2002, he put a full page add in the New York Times regarding a 26 Constitutional Crisis. Here is an excerpt from the add off his website at <http://www.givemeliberty.org>:

(BEGINNING OF ADD)

IRS & Department of Justice: Why Won't You Answer Our Questions?

On July 20, 2001, IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti and U.S. Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant formally agreed to have IRS and DOJ participate in a recorded, public hearing on Capitol Hill to officially answer questions under oath in response to a Petition For Redress Of Grievances from the American People. Our Citizen's Petition directly challenges:

- The jurisdiction and legal authority for the IRS
- The unlawful enforcement of the Internal Revenue Code against American citizens
- The pervasive abuse of the People's constitutional rights in the daily operations of the IRS

After agreeing in writing to publicly answer questions related to the unconstitutional origin of the IRS, and the devastating harm caused by the income tax system to the working men and women of our country, The Department of Justice and IRS on January 17, 2002, without explanation, canceled the hearing.

WE NOW HAVE A CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS

What must a free People do when their government repeatedly refuses to honor its legal and moral obligation to respond to a proper Petition for Redress of Grievance as guaranteed by the 1st Amendment to the United States Constitution?

We ask the People: Is Alan Dershowitz Correct?

- We have NO unalienable rights?
- The Constitution is merely a piece of paper?
- Government should not be restrained because it can do good things for people? 9/27/00 debate at Franklin & Marshall

Can We The People simply accept that our Constitution has become a dead letter?

Must we resort to the same desperate measures that our Founders did to defend their unalienable rights to life, liberty and justice?

Do We Have a Constitution or Not?

For decades, the government has steadfastly refused to honor the petitions of a growing number of honorable, well-educated, professional legal researchers whose work has raised significant and legitimate questions about the Constitutional and statutory authority of the income tax system. These issues are of the utmost importance to the American People and to our Republic.

Our respectful petitions to our servant government have fallen on deaf ears, have been arbitrarily and unjustly thrown out of the courts, and have been used as grounds for criminal prosecution, asset seizure and other unlawful abuse by the IRS and DOJ.

Three years ago, We The People Foundation began a series of formal, public initiatives to convince the U.S. government to answer our questions regarding the jurisdiction and legal authority of the IRS and the personal income tax system. As the chronology of events outlined below demonstrates, we have worked diligently to show the American People the truth about the unconstitutional origin, abusive history and criminal conduct of the IRS, and the un-American nature of the personal income tax system.

1 Bob Schulz then held the hearings and webcasted the event to 2,100 Americans throughout the country. There were about
 2 100 people in the live audience as well. Although the mainstream media was informed of the event, only one representative,
 3 David Kay Johnston, appeared from the New York Times, and even he ducked out after the morning of the first day because
 4 he couldn't find anything to slander We The People with! There were two solid days of hearings, and representatives from
 5 around the country from various groups appeared in the audience, including J.A.I.L. For Judges, the Fully Informed Jury
 6 Association, the Libertarian party, and several other activists groups. The tax researcher group he had assembled had put
 7 together 540 questions to ask the government. 440 of these questions were asked at the hearings, which included about 130
 8 questions assembled by the author relating to the Fourth Amendment and the First Amendment. All of the questions and the 9 evidence used at the hearings and those that were not asked are posted on our website at:

10 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Deposition.htm>

11 Each question included the evidence to back it up, and as each question was asked, the evidence was displayed on two large
 12 projection panels on either side of the meeting room. The evidence and complete text of the questions were also made
 13 available via the live webcast to the large audience so they could browse and examine it for themselves in digital form. It
 14 was a watershed and unprecedented event. Bob Schulz and the author, Family Guardian Fellowship, took turns asking the 15 questions of a panel of various experts. These questions and the answers provided by experts stunned the audience and 16 provided irrefutable proof of government fraud, extortion, and conspiracy to deprive sovereign Americans of their rights.
 17 Among the experts testifying included (some names not listed):

- 18 • Paul Rooney, a tax attorney with over 30 years' experience and who served as a U.S. Tax Court clerk for several 19 years before going into private practice.
- 20 • Bill Benson, the person who investigated the Sixteenth Amendment and gathered overwhelming evidence supporting 21 the conclusion that it was fraudulently ratified by a lame duck Secretary of State, Philander Knox.
 22 (<http://www.thelawthatneverwas.com/>)
- 23 • Joe Banister, X IRS agent from the IRS' Criminal Investigation Division (CID), who served there 5 years before 24 resigning after finding out the truth (<http://www.freedomabovefortune.com/>).

32 Subsequent to the event in March 2002, the IRS delivered a threatening CP-518 notice (Willful Failure to File) to the person
 33 who had handled the webcasting of the event, who shall remain nameless to protect his identity. This person was responsible
 34 for making the videotapes and CD's containing the evidence available for sale to the public. Apparently, they were trying to 35 get some legal leverage on that person so they could blackmail him to suppress the release of the questions and evidence.
 36 Can you believe the kind of games the government played to suppress the truth from being heard?!

37 6.8.6.2 We The People Efforts: April 5, 2001 Senate Finance Committee Hearing

38 During the month of March 2001, We The People Foundation (<http://www.givemeliberty.org/>), a tax freedom and liberty
 39 advocacy, placed full page anti-income-tax adds in the USA Today Newspaper on March 2, and March 23, of 2001. The 40 March 2, 2001 add featured a pointer to this book on our website. It talked about five employers who had stopped withholding
 41 federal income taxes from the pay of their employees. The March 23, 2001 add featured information about how income taxes
 42 violated the constitution. Subsequent to these adds, 60 Minutes (CBS) decided to do a story on the anti-income tax movement
 43 on April 3, 2001, and featured a 20 minute segment on the activities of the employers featured in the March 2, 2001 add. The 44 story was rather skewed, because they put a lot of credible people on the show from the opposing side, but wouldn't let 45 spokespeople from We The People talk. They opened the story with a picture of a We The People meeting and even showed 46 a picture of the We The People add, but didn't allow anyone from We The People to talk.

47 Shortly after the 60 Minutes story, our website started going crazy. In the following two days, we had about 500 downloads
 48 of this book. Then the U.S. Senate Finance Committee announced that it was going to have a hearing on April 5, 2001 at 49 10am. The subject of the hearing was "Tax Scams". We The People was one of the organizations they were going to talk

1 about, and yet they denied a request by that organization to speak at the session! Bob Schulz, the leader of We The People,
2 had the following to say about this situation:

3 A New York Times reporter, David Cay Johnston, telephoned us after 5 p.m. on Friday, March 30, 2001, to inform
4 us of the fact that the Senate Finance Committee has scheduled a formal hearing for 10 a.m. on Thursday, April
5 5, 2001. Mr. Johnston said the subject of the hearing would be the full-page ads we have published in USA
6 TODAY and that the Committee intended to have the ads on display during the hearing. Johnston said that our
7 side of the story needs to be told, that we should try to get on the witness list and that all the major media outlets
8 would attend any press conference we were to hold in the hallway outside the hearing room, if we were not
9 allowed to testify before the Committee.

10 Early Monday morning, April 2, 2001, we telephoned the Senate Finance Committee to request that we be added
11 to the witness list. We were told that the witness list was closed before the Committee scheduled and publicly
12 announced the hearing, but that we could fax a letter to the Committee Chairman to request that we be added to 13 the list.

14 On Monday morning we faxed our letter to Senator Grassley, requesting to be added to the witness list.

15 Late Monday afternoon we received by fax a letter from Senator Grassley which reads: "Dear Mr. Schulz: Thank
16 you for your letter requesting to be added to the witness list for the Senate Finance Committee Hearing on April
17 5, 2001. We will be unable to add you to our witness list. However, should your organization chose to submit a
18 written statement regarding our hearing, 'Taxpayer Beware: Schemes, Scams and Fraud,' we will consider
19 including it in the hearing record. Sincerely, Charles E. Grassley, Chairman Senate Finance Committee."

20 It seems incongruous that the Senate would hold a hearing featuring our full-page ads and not invite us to testify.
21 They apparently have a message that they want to convey, which is inapposite to our message. They apparently
22 want to divert attention away from questions of whether the IRS is collecting taxes without legal authority by
23 trying to portray those who raise such questions as scammers. In fact, those in the tax honesty movement see the 24 IRS as the scammers! The question is not who is putting their money in an offshore trust, or who is not filing their
25 tax return or which employers have stopped withholding from the paychecks of their employees. The primary
26 question is: "What legal authority requires most Americans to file an income tax return and pay the income tax?
27 There ought to be a moratorium on the IRS' enforcement activities, and all those people who are sitting in prison
28 for not paying the income tax should be released, pending the determination of this fundamental question.

29 Our government leaders apparently want to label anyone and everyone, including this Foundation, who are
30 questioning the legal authority of the IRS to collect the individual income tax as schemers, scammers and frauds,
31 while they continue to conduct their tax enforcement activities as usual, without addressing the compelling
32 allegations of fraud and the illegal operations of the income tax system and without justifying their behavior.

33 We have decided that we will hold a press conference in the hallway outside the Senate hearing room at 9:30
34 a.m. on Thursday. We will have press kits available which will include copies of letters inviting Commissioner
35 Rossotti and the leaders of the executive and legislative branches of the government to identify their most 36 knowledgeable people and have them participate with the experts in the tax honesty movement in the four 37 symposiums and conferences we sponsored at the National Press Club to debate and discuss the issues. We will
38 highlight the major allegations regarding the fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment, the demonstrable
39 lack of evidence of any law that requires most citizens to file or pay the income tax, and the problems relating to 40 routine violations by the IRS of the People's rights under the 4th, 5th, 6th and 13th Amendments in their day-to-
41 day administrative procedures. We will point out that the government chose to evade the public forums and chose
42 not to even acknowledge receipt of the invitations! We will also include a copy of the video tape of the April 13,
43 2000 meetings in the White House and in the Capitol with President Clinton's economic advisor Jason Furman,
44 Speaker Hastert's policy advisor, Dr. William Koetzle and the Senate Majority Leader's policy director, Keith
45 Hennessey. The tape shows these gentlemen meeting with Joe Banister and Bob Schulz and accepting a
46 REMONSTRANCE for Clinton, Hastert and Lott. The tapes also show these men promising to have their experts
47 review the research reports authored by Bill Benson, Joe Banister and William Conklin and to participate in our
48 fourth attempt to get the two sides to meet on June 29, 2000, in a public forum, to debate the allegations of the
49 fraudulent and illegal operations of the income tax system -- promises which were broken on June 2, 2000, when 50 Jason Furman told Schulz; "The legality of the income tax is not a high priority matter for the White House and 51 we will not be participating in any conference on the subject." The press kits will also include a copy of each ad
52 we decided to publish in the wake of the government's reversal of its decision to review and then meet to discuss 53 the research reports by Benson, Banister and Conklin.

54 Our message will be a simple one: We want the government to answer the serious questions that have been raised
55 by numerous tax researchers who say that the IRS is collecting the individual income tax without legal authority
56 and that the IRS operates illegally when it tries to force citizens to pay taxes they do not owe. Instead of the Senate
57 and House encouraging the IRS to increase enforcement of laws that apparently do not exist, wouldn't it be easier
58 and better for them to have their experts meet with the tax researchers in a public forum, show them where they
59 are wrong, embarrass them, and put it all to rest? Why is the government so averse to doing so? Are they worried
60 that they can't show the researchers to be in error? When does evasion become admission?

1                   The government's dual actions of evading the public discussion of the issues while strengthening its steel-fisted,
2                   heavy-handed enforcement campaign of fear and terror only serves to strengthen the resolve and determination
3                   of a People who see themselves as free and sovereign, and who see all of government limited by a written
4                   constitution.

5   6.8.6.3        Cover-Up of Jan. 20, 2002: Congress/DOJ/IRS/ Renege on a Written Agreement to Hold a Truth in 6   Taxation Hearing with We The People Under First Amendment

7   The We the People foundation (<http://www.givemeliberty.org/>), which was founded to fight government corruption, has been
8   protesting the federal income tax for years. During July 2001, the leader of that organization, Bob Schulz, went on a 21 day
9   hunger strike, telling the press and the government that he would die of starvation if the government would not grant him a
10   hearing under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution to Petition the U.S. Government for Redress of Grievances
11   related to the illegal enforcement of the federal income tax. On July 20, 2001, Congressman Rosco Bartlett negotiated a
12   signed written agreement between the Department of Justice, the IRS, and Mr. Schulz to hold the requested hearing to address
13   his concerns and questions. Prior to signing the written agreement, the DOJ and IRS insisted that the hearings be private (do 14   you smell a cover-up here?), but Mr. Schulz said that this was a public matter of great concern to millions of Americans and 15   that it must be open and the press must also be able to attend. The press was also invited. The hearing were to be in late
16   Sept. 2001, but the terrorist attacks disrupted the meeting and it was postponed until Feb. 27, 2002 by Mr. Schulz.

17   Subsequent to the new hearing being scheduled, on January 20, 2002, Mr. Schulz launched a media campaign called “Wait
18   and File Until the Trial”, informing Americans that they should wait to file their tax returns until the Truth in Taxation hearing
19   was over, because the income tax was on trial. He mailed out hundreds of thousands of fliers and emails to federal judges,
20   congressmen, the IRS, and citizens. Immediately after the fliers went out, our website went crazy and we had five times the 21   normal daily volume we usually have. Immediately after the start of the “Wait and File Until the Trial” campaign, Roscoe
22   Bartlett cancelled the hearings, saying that he could not sponsor or support them because they were “encouraging Americans
23   to not pay their income taxes”, which was clearly not the case, as explained in Mr. Schulz’ letter shown below. Later
24   investigation by We the People revealed that in Nov. 2001, the IRS and DOJ both told Congressman Bartlett that they would
25   not attend the hearings ever. Congressman Bartlett withheld this information, hoping that Bob Schulz would unilaterally
26   cancel the hearings himself or commit a political faux pas that would eliminate the need to have them. When the Wait and 27   File campaign started in earnest, Congressman Bartlett apparently thought he had enough excuse to terminate the meeting,
28   but as Mr. Schulz’ letter clearly explains, he was not justified in doing so and the comments about the Wait and File campaign
29   were really just more deceptive and fraudulent government propaganda to discredit Mr. Schulz and further expand the 30   government cover-up of the illegal operations of the IRS. Read the letter yourself below for enlightening information. Keep 31   in mind that all Mr. Schulz has ever expected was for the government to honor his Constitutional, First Amendment right to 32   a Petition for Redress of Grievance with the federal government.

Hon. Roscoe G. Bartlett
Member of Congress
2412 Rayburn Building
Washington, DC 20515
Dear Congressman Bartlett:

On behalf of myself and the We The People Foundation for Constitutional Education, I want to thank you for all that you have done to support the People's Petition for Redress of our grievances related to the fraudulent origin of the IRS and unlawful operations of the income tax system. I thank you for your wisdom, your courage and your independence. Your steadfast and heroic efforts in defense of the American People's guaranteed constitutional right to have our government answer this historic petition are deeply appreciated by all of us who placed our trust in your integrity and leadership.

I know that you have tried your best in our behalf, and for that I am most thankful. I continue to hold you in high esteem. No matter what the future may hold, I will always remember your courageous defense of our Constitution.

Neither of us has shared with the general public the details of your actions and what happened behind the scenes in the days leading up to July 20, 2001. This was the day Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant and IRS Commissioner Rossotti, as a result of your personal intervention and persuasion, contracted with the American people to have experts from their departments appear in a recorded, congressional-style, public meeting to answer the people's questions regarding the federal income tax system.

We also have not shared with the public the details of what has been happening behind the scenes since July 20, 2001. Under the present circumstances, it is appropriate that these details be made available to the American people. Following is a chronology of the facts related to our Petition for Redress of Grievances.

- On June 11, 2001, I personally delivered a letter to President Bush at the White House. Copies of the letter were also hand-delivered to Speaker of the House Hastert and Senate Majority Leader Daschle at the Capitol. The letter recited the numerous requests made by We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education to the Executive and Legislative Branches since May 1999 to answer our Petition For Redress of Grievances related to the income tax system. The letter also provided a factual account of the government's evasive and unresponsive behavior, which ultimately led to my decision to embark on a hunger strike until either I died or the federal government agreed to meet in a public forum to answer the people's questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful operations of the income tax system.
- On July 1, 2001, I delivered a follow-up letter to President Bush, with copies to Speaker Hastert and Senator Daschle.
- On July 18, 2001, Lawrence B. Lindsey, Assistant to the President for Economic Policy and head of the National Economic Council, sent a letter to me which read, "The President has asked me to thank you for your letters of June 11 and July 1 regarding the income tax system. I understand your concerns and the arguments you make. Your letter of June 11 outlines extensively the concerns of the We The People Foundation for Constitutional Education, Inc. with regard to the efficacy of the current income tax system. While I believe the best way to address your concerns is through the court system, I have taken the liberty of sharing your letters with the Internal Revenue Service for their review. A more substantive response will be forthcoming from this office once the IRS has had the opportunity to assess your grievances. I would be remiss if I did not suggest that you end your fast. Whether or not federal tax experts attend a meeting your organization has scheduled for September 18 will be determined based upon their substantive assessment of your

1 arguments. While your personal commitment to the cause of tax reform is dramatic, I hope that you will not
2 endanger yourself physically in this cause. Please be assured that your letters will receive careful attention
3 at the IRS.

5 Note: In reviewing my file and the events of last summer, I must now assume that when Commissioner Rossotti
6 spoke with you by telephone on July 19th, and agreed to have his experts meet with our experts in a recorded
7 public forum to answer our questions, he was responding to Mr. Lindsey's directive.

- 8 • On July 9, 2001, I delivered an updated version of the People's Petition for Redress of Grievances to one of 9 President Bush's aides at the White House. I also met with you and three members of your staff, where we first
10 discussed the issues related to the fraudulent origin and unlawful operations of the IRS, and you made the 11 decision to help the American People in their quest for a response to this historic Petition.
12
- 13 • On July 17, 2001, you held a press conference on the House Triangle to announce the fact that you had placed top
14 priority on getting the appropriate people in the government to agree to respond to our Petition. Rep. Ron Paul
15 also strongly supported the fundamental right to be answered.
16
- 17 • It is now known that between July 9th and July 18th, 2001, management level personnel at DOJ and IRS were 18 steadfast in their refusal to have their experts meet with representatives of the American People in a recorded
19 public forum. For instance, Floyd Williams, the IRS Director of the Office of Congressional Affairs, stated the IRS
20 would only agree to a private, unrecorded meeting between myself and the IRS Chief Counsel. Karen Wilson (Mr.
21 Williams' counterpart at DOJ) suggested we submit our questions to DOJ and IRS in writing and wait for a
22 response. She said she was otherwise in support of IRS' proposal for a private, unrecorded meeting. You replied
23 that the proposal for a private, unrecorded meeting was totally unacceptable and that the questions had to be
24 answered in a public forum. You emphasized the importance of allowing the public to see and hear the people
25 asking the questions and those answering them. You strongly and effectively argued that to submit the questions in 26 writing to DOJ and IRS would allow for delay, obfuscation and confusion, and would bring to ruin what you
27 considered to be a proper, Constitutional Petition For a Redress of Grievances.
28
- 29 • From July 18th through July 20th you negotiated on the People's behalf, by telephone, with IRS Commissioner
30 Rossotti and with DOJ's Assistant Attorney General Daniel Bryant. They expressed concerns about the security of 31 a public meeting and wanted to know who would be "on the gavel" to control the meeting and keep it professional 32 and orderly. After speaking with me about their concerns, you contacted Dan Bryant and Charles Rossotti and 33 offered to hold the meeting on Capitol Hill and to personally gavel the meeting if Henry Hyde was not available.
34
- 35 • On or about July 19th, in a telephone conversation between you and Commissioner Rossotti, Rossotti agreed to 36 have his experts participate in a recorded, public, congressional-style hearing on Capitol Hill, with appropriate
37 controls. You telephoned me and asked to see me in your office. When I arrived, you told me of Commissioner 38 Rossotti's agreement.
39
- 40 • On July 20th, Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant also agreed, but told you he needed a formal request from 41 you. He asked that you put your request for the meeting in writing. You telephoned me and asked to see me in 42 your office. When I arrived, you prepared a hand-written letter to Dan Bryant. You then telephoned Mr. Bryant to 43 tell him you had the formal request in hand and asked how soon he could meet with us. Bryant said he would see
44 us right away in his office at the Department of Justice building. We met with Dan Bryant that afternoon. We fully 45 discussed our written Petition for Redress of Grievances (he had previously received a copy of the Petition that 46 was hand-delivered to the White House on April 13, 2000 and again on July 9, 2001). We also reviewed the terms
47 and conditions of your offer to preside over the proposed congressional-style hearing on Capitol Hill. He penned a 48 note at the bottom of your written request, agreeing to "do everything within my power to ensure that the Dept.
49 of Justice will provide appropriate representatives to participate in a congressional briefing hosted by Congressman Bartlett in connection with the above referenced matter." Roland Croteau and Burr Deitz (a Director of the WTP Foundation) were also in attendance.
- Later that day, Friday, July 20, 2001, my office issued a press release and posted it on our web site, announcing the details of the agreement. Apparently, the news quickly found its way around the Internet.

- 1 • Between Friday, July 20th and Monday, July 23rd, as I would later learn from you, Dan Bryant apparently received
2 a phone call or two from “higher ups,” protesting his July 20th commitment to have DOJ answer our questions in a
3 public forum.
- 4 • On July 23, 2001, I received an e-mail from your aide, Lisa Wright, which read: {“Congressman Bartlett asked me
5 to contact you to inform you must take URGENT action in order to preserve the agreement as a result of your 7/20
6 meeting with Dan Bryant at USDOJ.1) Immediately pull down from the website the previous presentation of the 7 meeting that begins with the subject – “The fast is over”. 2) Replace it with a corrected version ASAP and 8 distribute this to your list. Reference to Bryant must be limited explicitly to quoting only his handwritten
9 comments. "I will do everything within my power. . .”Reference to Hyde -- that he will be invited -- NOT 10 EXPECTED. Reference to a date -- to be determined, hopefully in mid to late September. 3) You must call Dan
11 Bryant ASAP and apologize for the inaccuracies in the e-mail. This is his personal number -- 202-514-2141.”}

12 NOTE: On or about July 25th, I placed a call to Dan Bryant. He did not return the call.

- 13 • On July 30th, I issued a revised press release and posted it on our web site.
- 14 • On July 30th Lisa Wright of your office sent an e-mail to Dan Bryant at DOJ and Floyd Williams at IRS. It read:
15 “Mr. Bryant and Mr. Williams: Attached is a 7/30/01 news release from We the People Foundation for 16 Constitutional Education which follows up a meeting Congressman Bartlett had on July 20 at DOJ w/ Asst.
17 Atty. Gen. Dan Bryant and Bob Schulz concerning Mr. Schulz's Petition for Redress concerning the tax
18 code and IRS enforcement of the tax code. Congressman Bartlett personally affirmed that this release is an 19 accurate reflection of the July 20 meeting. Congressman Bartlett discussed the request for a public forum at 20 which appropriate IRS representatives would participate in an earlier meeting with Floyd Williams of IRS
21 and Karen Wilson of DOJ and subsequently in a phone conversation with IRS Commissioner Rossotti.
22 Congressman Bartlett hopes that DOJ and IRS officials will contact Mr. Schulz directly concerning
23 coordinating and ironing out the details for the public forum on Capitol Hill. Please feel free to contact
24 Congressman Bartlett if you have any questions and so that we may procure the necessary space for the 25 meeting.”
- 26 • On July 30th Lisa Wright forwarded to me a message from IRS' Floyd Williams. It read: “Treasury/IRS has not 27 agreed (either verbally or in writing) to participate in a public forum with Bob Schulz.”
- 28 • On August 13, 2001, Tax Notes published an article under the heading, “Backroom Deals, Fleeting Promises Put 29 Income Tax Hearing in Jeopardy,” by Warren Rojas. In the article, IRS spokesman Frank Keith is quoted as 30 saying, “As of right now, no final agreements have been made.”
- 31 • On August 29, 2001, your office issued the following statement; “Congressman Bartlett is continuing to actively 32 pursue and secure participation by representatives of both the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue
33 Service at the September 25-26 forum organized by We the People,” said Lisa Wright, a spokesman for 34 Congressman Roscoe Bartlett. “He expects Dan Bryant, Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legislative 35 Affairs at the Department of Justice, and IRS Chairman Charles Rossotti to fulfill their personal commitments to 36 him.”(my emphasis).
- 37 • In early September, I met in your office with you and three of your aides, including Sallie Taylor and Lisa Wright.
38 You said DOJ and IRS were trying to “wiggle off the hook” and that Sallie and Lisa had an “alternative proposal.”
39 Sallie and Lisa proceeded to describe their alternative proposal, which, instead of having the agree-upon public
40 forum, would have me submit the Peoples’ questions to you in writing. You would then post the questions on your 41 web site and send them to DOJ and IRS for an answer. The answers would also be posted on your web site. I told
42 Sallie and Lisa that their proposal was unacceptable to me and that you had already argued with DOJ and IRS
43 (successfully) the futility of such an approach. Upon hearing my response you turned to an aide and asked him to 44 call Dick Armey, the House Majority Leader, to request an immediate meeting with him. We were told to proceed
45 to Mr. Armey’s office. You, I, Sallie Taylor, and another of your aides (I don’t remember his name) met with Dick 46 Armey and one of his aides, who took extensive notes during the meeting. You told Mr. Armey that DOJ and 47 IRS were trying to wiggle off the hook and break their commitment to answer the People’s questions in a
48 public forum. Mr. Armey said it was important to have the hearing proceed as planned and that DOJ and 49 IRS had to be “locked down.” Armey said the way to do that would be to show DOJ and IRS that they were 50 running the risk of offending many more Congressman than you if they broke their commitment. Mr.
51 Armey then suggested that you prepare a letter to Attorney General Ashcroft and to Treasury Secretary
52 O’Neil, which would thank them for their commitment to have the appropriate personnel from their 53 departments participate in the income tax hearing and which would be signed by numerous members of the 54

1 House of Representatives. Mr. Arney and you discussed a list of House members that both of you believed 2 would sign the letter.

- 3 • On September 12, 2001, I communicated my request to you that the tax hearing be postponed due to the events of 4 September 11th. I posted that message on our web site.
- 5 • On October 12, 2001, you delivered a letter and video message to me in which you announced that the event had 6 been rescheduled for February 27 and 28, 2002. Your letter stated “A letter of support and confirmation signed
7 by myself and other members of Congress has been drafted, circulated, and will be sent to officials at the 8 Department of Justice, Treasury and the IRS, informing them of the dates and times and requiring their 9 attendance. I will personally chair the event and have invited other members of Congress to attend and sit
10 on the panel...You have my word as an elected member of the United States Congress that I will do all
11 within my power that this event go forward, the IRS and DOJ attend as they have promised to do, and are 12 compelled to do by the Constitution.”(My emphasis).
- 13 • On January 7, 2002, Tax Notes published an article under the heading, “Schulz Hopes to Bury Tax Code at 14 February Hearing,” by Warren Rojas. In the article, Mr. Rojas wrote, “While the IRS has yet to officially confirm 15 or deny its participation in the hearing, a Bartlett press aide acknowledged receiving a letter from Justice
16 around Thanksgiving stating plainly that the DOJ would not attend any Schulz-related events.” (my 17 emphasis). Note: I was never told about the “Thanksgiving letter.” This was the first time any of the three 18 government officials who were parties to the July 20th contract with the American People had put in writing that 19 they were reneging on their agreement.
- 20 • On or about January 8, 2002, I telephoned Lisa Wright to tell her that I had read the Tax Notes article and was 21 very concerned about the Thanksgiving letter from DOJ which informed you that DOJ would not attend the 22 income tax hearing. I called to inform Ms. Wright that it was my intention to bring the February hearing to the 23 attention of tens of millions of Americans, and ask them to wait to file their tax returns until they heard all of the 24 questions and answers at the February hearing. I felt it was now time, as Mr. Arney had previously suggested, to 25 do all I could to “lock the DOJ and IRS down” and demand that they keep their commitment to the American
26 People. It was time to demand that they respond to our questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and 27 the unlawful operation of the personal income tax system. I informed Ms. Wright that many thousands of 28 Americans were already aware of the February hearing and were waiting for the answers to the questions before
29 deciding how to file their tax returns. I explained that if DOJ and IRS were going to renege on their commitments,
30 they were going to have to answer to a very large number of Americans. My call was passed through to Lisa’s
31 voice message system where I left a message. I asked her to call me.
- 32 • On January 11, 2002, Lisa returned my call. We discussed “Operation Wait to File Until the Trial.” After we 33 completed the call Lisa called back to say that if your name was mentioned in the “Wait to File” flyer/ad, she 34 would like to approve the wording. I told her your name, together with those of Dan Bryant and IRS
35 Commissioner Rossotti were mentioned in the first paragraph, which I then read to her. She said my use of the 36 phrase “public hearing” was wrong, that the word “hearing” had a technical meaning on the Hill and that I should 37 use the phrase “public forum.” She also said that you did not have the power to force DOJ and IRS to attend the 38 meeting. I replied that I understood that you had no more power at that time than you did on July 20, 2001, when 39 you merely requested that Commissioner Rossotti and Assistant Attorney General Dan Bryant have appropriate 40 personnel from their departments participate in the “public, recorded congressional-style briefing- hearing” on
41 Capitol Hill to answer questions “concerning the legal jurisdiction and authority of the IRS.” At the July 20
42 meeting both Mr. Rossotti and Mr. Bryant agreed to your request and formally entered into a contract with 43 the American people to have their “appropriate representatives participate in a congressional briefing 44 hosted by Congressman Bartlett.”
- 45 • On January 12, 2002, in response to Lisa’s one concern, I changed the phrase “public hearing” in the first 46 paragraph of the Wait to File flyer/ad to “congressional-style hearing”. We then launched “Operation Wait to File
47 Until the Trial” by posting an article on our web site and by sending that article to our mailing list. The article 48 included the flyer to be published in newspapers and a letter to be direct mailed to about 300,000 individuals.
- 49 • On Monday, January 14th I was in Milwaukee working with one of our attorneys on the questions for the hearing. I
50 received word that Lisa had called my office and asked me to return the call. I tried several times on Monday and 51 Tuesday to reach her by phone. I left voice messages on her machine, informing her that I would be returning to 52 my office that afternoon at approximately 3 p.m. While en route from Milwaukee to Albany on Tuesday, January
53 15th I tried unsuccessfully to reach you by phone. I did manage to speak to Sallie Taylor. I told her to let Lisa and 54 you know that I would be back in my office at 3 p.m. should either of you need to speak to me. I would not hear 55 from anyone in your office until 8:20 p.m. Thursday evening, January 17th.

- On Monday, January 14th, Kim Herb, Legislative Assistant to Congressman John Linder sent an e-mail to “District Directors” which read, “Recently, it has been stated that there will be a Congressional hearing on the IRS. I wanted to dispel this rumor. There will be NO hearing. I repeat, there will be no Congressional hearing on the IRS in February. In response to a hunger strike by Mr. Robert Schulz, Congressman Roscoe Bartlett agreed to facilitate a meeting on IRS and tax topics. Accordingly, Mr. Bartlett arranged for "We the People" to have a public forum on the IRS, at which time "We the People" will debate such questions as the legality of the Sixteenth Amendment and the ratification process. However, no officials from the IRS or Justice Department will attend. Again, for emphasis, NO officials from either the IRS or Justice Department will be in attendance. The administration believes that these questions have been sufficiently addressed, and there is a fair amount of judicial precedence on this issue to confirm that assertion. Congressman Bartlett will likely give an opening statement, however, I understand that his comments will be limited to acknowledging that the "We the People" organization has a right to free speech and to voice their opinion. I recognize and support the Bush Administration's position. We have no interest in pursuing the ratification of the Sixteenth Amendment as a viable and legitimate argument in the fundamental tax reform movement. As such, I do not anticipate that Congressman Linder, as the official sponsor of the FairTax, will have any role in the February public forum organized by "We the People."

- At 3 p.m. Thursday, January 17th, as part of Operation Wait to File Until the Trial, I delivered several thousand letters and flyers to the personal fax machines of the following individuals:

- Members of the American Judges Association
- Judges of The Federal Circuit
- Mayors of Largest U.S. Cities
- Federal Tax Court Judges
- Supreme Court Justices
- Radio Station General Managers
- Radio Talk Show Hosts
- 550 Partners of the Big Five Accounting Firms
- Executive Cabinet Members and Cabinet Legal Advisors
- Members of the Association of Copy Editors

- At 8:20 p.m. on Thursday, January 17th I received a call from Lisa Wright. She stated that she had just forwarded via FedEx your letter informing me that you were “canceling the forum,” and that you were “dismayed” by the “rhetoric” of the “Wait to File” ad and that you would not be party to any movement that tells people not to pay their federal income taxes. I tried to reason with her, but it was late and she was in no mood to listen.

I hope that you can understand how very disappointed I am with your actions. From the beginning of our discussions, I expected you to encounter great difficulty in holding both Mr. Rossotti and Mr. Bryant to their word regarding the February hearing. At this point, it is clear that neither DOJ nor IRS ever intended to keep their commitment to you or the American People. Their refusal to answer these substantive questions regarding the fraudulent origin of the IRS and unlawful operation of the income tax system demonstrates the federal government’s pervasive and arrogant disregard for the constitutional rights of the American People. It is now clear, that on July 20, 2001, their objective was to stop the hunger strike and temporarily mollify the outrage of thousands of Americans who were demanding that our government agree to publicly answer the People’s Petition For Redress of Grievances.

However, I shared your faith in our Constitution and your belief that at the top of our government were trustworthy men and women of moral integrity. Like you, I believed that no matter the practical difficulty, there were enough people of honor at the highest levels of our government, that the People’s Constitutional Petition For Redress of Grievances would be heard. I did not believe that those who we have trusted to lead our country would turn their backs on the American People, disregard our Constitution and Bill of Rights, and hold in such low esteem the personal liberty so many of our countrymen have sacrificed and died to defend over the past 225 years. I believed that our highest government officials would honor their oaths of office to defend the United States Constitution, and its guarantee of every American’s right to petition our government for a redress of grievances.

1 Congressman Bartlett, I wish you had told me sooner about the Thanksgiving letter from DOJ, and your apparent decision (if
2 Kim Herb is to be believed) to merely give an opening statement at the February hearing, “limited to acknowledging that the
3 ‘We the People’ organization has a right to free speech and to voice their opinion.” I wish that you had told me then that our 4 Petition was not going to be publicly and officially answered by the government.

5 You say in your letter to me dated January 17 that the newspaper ad is “misleading” and “has made it impossible for the 6 forum to take place because the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and the Department of Justice (DOJ) will not participate.”

7 This is most offensive to me. There was no need to misrepresent the facts. As the paragraphs above demonstrate, the ad had
8 nothing to do with the reluctance of DOJ and IRS to participate in the February income tax hearing. We now know that their
9 decision not to participate was put in writing to you last Thanksgiving, nearly two months before the “Wait to File” campaign
10 idea occurred to us. In fact, the Wait to File campaign is a direct result of learning from the January 7th edition of Tax Notes
11 that you had received DOJ’s Thanksgiving letter of withdrawal.

12 In your press release you say, “I will not be a party to advocating the non-payment of federal income taxes.” This statement
13 is also highly offensive, for it is nothing more than an unjustifiable, aggressive attack on my reputation and character. Your 14 statement is also a misrepresentation of the facts and reflects a deliberate attempt to paint me and the Foundation as 15 irresponsible law-breakers. In fact, the ad does not advocate the non-payment of federal income taxes. It suggests people do
16 what the law allows them to do-- wait until February 27th to file their tax returns.

17 Neither I nor the Foundation have ever advocated, supported or encouraged anyone not to pay a tax they lawfully owe or not
18 to file any tax return documents they are required by law to file. Ever. As we both know, the purpose of these important
19 hearings is to have the government show us the law so that all Americans may be guided by specific requirements for filing.

20 In your letter and press release you say that you “remain[s] committed to ensuring the right of Bob Schulz and other citizens
21 to exercise their constitutional rights under the First Amendment to get answers about federal tax policy from the 22 government,” and you propose, as an alternative to the public forum, that you deliver our questions to DOJ and IRS and that
23 you post our questions and the answers on your web site. In fact, as you yourself argued so effectively last July, this would 24 be tantamount to our agreeing not to have our questions answered. To use your own words, this approach “would allow for 25 delay, obfuscation, confusion and to otherwise bring to ruin” what we have so patiently, intelligently, professionally and 26 rationally developed into a proper petition for a remedy of the people’s grievances.

27 I now fear for the future of our Constitutional Republic. A constitutional crisis has now developed. Whether we have a written
28 Constitution that protects our unalienable rights as Americans is now a question. Whether the Constitution is any more than 29 a piece of paper is now a question. Whether we have a federal government limited by a Constitution and Bill of Rights is now
30 a question.

31 Here is what I have decided must now be done in response to the decision by DOJ and IRS not to participate in the public,
32 recorded truth-in-taxation hearing on February 27-28, and also your decision last Thursday to withdraw your commitment to 33 support this public forum.

34 First: Last week I spoke to your aide, Sallie Taylor, to request a meeting with you as soon as possible. She said your calendar
35 would not allow such a meeting before Wednesday, January 23rd, and that she would have to speak with you to see if that is 36 what you wanted to do. My purpose is to respectfully request that you reconsider your decision to cancel the February
37 meeting.

38 Second: We plan to proceed with a recorded, public forum on February 27 and 28 in Washington DC. Because of the
39 importance of this issue to the American People, we hope that you will decide to help us hold this event as planned in the 40 secure location of the Science and Technology Committee Hearing Room. However, in the alternative, we have booked the 41 Marriott Hotel for the two days.

42 Third: I am attaching to this letter our initial set of questions relating to the fraudulent origin of the IRS and the unlawful
43 operation of the income tax system. These are the preliminary questions that we intend to present to the IRS and DOJ at the 44 February meeting. We are releasing these questions several weeks earlier than planned. We have a number of additional 45 questions currently being prepared that will be released upon completion. By copy of this letter to Attorney General Ashcroft,
46 Treasury Secretary O’Neil and Mr. Lawrence B. Lindsey, we are demanding that experts from DOJ and IRS be present on

1 February 27 and 28 to answer the questions in a public forum. As you previously stated, the written exchange of questions
2 and answers with DOJ and IRS would be utterly futile.

3 Fourth: We are posting the questions on our web site along with an invitation for all learned persons to answer these questions
4 and participate in the February 27 and 28 hearing. We will request that interested parties contact us by e-mail using a prepared
5 form.

6 Fifth: We will extend an invitation to the February 27 and 28 event to every organization, large or small, that is concerned
7 about the protection, preservation and enhancement of human liberty in America, and that is interested in limiting the size,
8 scope and costs of the federal government to the enumerated powers of the Constitution.

9 It is now imperative to summon all patriots in this cause for liberty and justice. It is time to ask all right thinking
10 Americans to stand united and put a collective foot down against this arrogant disregard for our liberties, rights and
11 freedoms, whether it be an erosion of our right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, our right to
12 privacy, our right to property, our right to firearms, our right to fully-informed juries, our right to honest
13 representation and voting, our right to a truly independent judiciary, our freedom from the influence of the “same
14 hands” in all three branches, our right to honest checks and balances, our right to the fruits of our labor, our right
15 not to have the government waste the fruits of our labor under the pretense of caring for us, our right to laws that do
16 not favor public over private education, our right to home school our children, our right to have the war powers
17 clauses adhered to, our right to have all treaties approved by the Senate, et al.

18 If the DOJ and the IRS do attend the event and provide honest, forthright answers to the people’s questions relating to the
19 authority of the IRS to force employers to withhold the income tax from the paychecks of their employees and to force most 20 Americans to file a tax return and to pay the tax, we believe the probable outcome will be a more limited federal government, 21 a cleansing of our political system and a restoration of power to the states and the people.

22 Sixth: We are calling on all patriotic Americans to help reveal the truth regarding the true limits to the federal taxing powers
23 by standing up for our Country and its founding principles. In light of the decision by DOJ and IRS to ignore the People’s 24 fundamental, Constitutional right to petition our government for a redress of these grievances, we are respectfully requesting 25 all Americans to:

26 1) Demand that the IRS and DOJ attend the February hearing and publicly answer the questions, as they
27 committed to do last July.

28 2) Wait to file their tax returns at least until February 27th. If IRS and DOJ fail to appear at the citizens’
29 hearing to answer the People’s questions, we will then respectfully request every American citizen and 30 business to defer filing of their tax returns and suspend employee withholding. The American People
31 should not be obligated to pay a tax that the federal government will not, and cannot, publicly defend on 32 lawful or moral grounds.

33 3) Stand together on the mall in Washington DC on Sunday, ~~March 31~~ April 14, 2002, and peacefully
34 protest the unlawful income tax by filing their blank 1040 forms in metal waste drums.

35 Congressman Bartlett, do we still have a written Constitution in America? Do we still have a Bill of Rights? Do those 36 documents still memorialize in writing what we believe most deeply in our hearts as Americans? Or have they become mere 37 abstract concepts that have no real bearing on our moral conduct as country? What good is our Constitution and Bill of Rights 38 if we do not treasure them and protect them?

39 It has been said that the limits of tyrants are prescribed by the tolerance of those whom they oppress.

40 I, for one, will not accept the decision by the DOJ and the IRS (our servant government) not to answer the People’s questions
41 in a recorded public forum---a decision that continues a longstanding history of unlawful, abusive and unaccountable conduct
42 by our government. The refusal of DOJ and IRS to answer these questions in a public forum can only be interpreted as a 43 glaring admission of guilt.

44 Congressman Bartlett, you gave your word to the American People. I respectfully ask that you keep your word to protect and 45 defend our Constitution at this critical moment in America’s history.

46 Wholeheartedly,

6.8.7 Cover-Up of 2002: 40 U.S.C. §255 obfuscated

For over three years, this book made frequent reference to the original 40 U.S.C §255 to point out that there is no federal jurisdiction inside states of the Union. This section of the codes had remained intact and unchanged for over 62 years. Eventually, the Congress caught onto the fact that this section of code plainly showed the limits on their jurisdiction so in August 2002, they tried to hide the truth by splitting the section into two sections found in 40 U.S.C. §3111 and §3112 and by complicating the language in these two sections.

When the statute was broken up and restated, the notes section had the relevant quotes from the Supreme Court removed so that the implications of no federal jurisdiction within states of the Union would be less obvious and harder to find.

6.8.8 Cover-Up of 1988: Changed Title of Part I, Subchapter N to Make it Refer Only to Foreign Income

Prior to 1988, the title of Part I of Subchapter N (which begins with Section 861) was “Determination of sources of income” (which is still the heading of the related regulations). In 1988, this title was changed to “Source rules and other general rules relating to foreign income.” It should be mentioned that while titles of parts may give an indication of what the part is about, the title has no effect on the actual legal application.

“...nor shall any table of contents, table of cross references, or similar outline, analysis, or descriptive matter relating to the contents of this title be given any legal effect.”
[26 U.S.C. §7806(b)]

So when the title was changed (but the text of the law was not), the application of the law did not change. What changed was the appearance of the table of contents. Prior to the change, in light of the fact that the income tax applies to “income from whatever source derived,” the table of contents made the relevance of 26 U.S.C. §861 obvious:

Subtitle A, “Income taxes”
Chapter 1, “Normal taxes and surtaxes”
Subchapter N, “Tax based on income from sources within or without the United States”
Part I, “Determination of sources of income”
Section 861, “Income from sources within the United States”
(a) “Gross income from sources within the United States”
(b) “Taxable income from sources within the United States”

When the title of Part I was changed, and the new title stated that the part was about “foreign income,” it no longer appeared to be an obvious place for most people to look when determining their taxable income. This would certainly have the effect of drawing attention away from Section 861. Many tax professionals concede that Section 861 and the related regulations show income to be taxable only when it comes from certain activities related to international and foreign commerce. The new title gives the appearance that the part has no relevance to most people, and should not even be examined.

But this change resulted in a curious situation: a part whose title says it is about “foreign income” is identified as the part which (along with the related regulations) “determine[s] the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.”

6.8.9 Cover-Up of 1986: Obfuscation of IRC Section 931

Since 26 U.S.C. §61 does not indicate the fact that "gross income" is restricted to specific property the I.R. Code had to detail this fact elsewhere. This is accomplished in section 931.

Prior to 1986, section 931 of the 1954 I.R. Code provided the exact terms as to what income is deemed to be "gross income" in the I.R. Code in this manner:

Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES [provided in part]

(a) General rule.

In the case of individual citizens of the United States, gross income means only gross income from sources within the United States if the conditions of both paragraph (1) and paragraph (2) are satisfied:

(1) 3-year period. If 80 percent or more of the gross income of such citizen...was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and

(2) Trade or business. If 50 percent or more of his gross income was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States either on his own account or as an employee or agent of another.

...
(h) Employees of the United States

For purposes of this section, amounts paid for services performed by a citizen of the United States as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof shall be deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

Chapters 4 and 5 laid the foundation for understanding that "within" and "without" in conjunction with the "United States" means within or without the United States Government. This section 931 confirms this by saying that "gross income" MEANS ONLY gross income from sources within a possession of the United States and from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States. The 50 States of the United States of America are not possessions of the United States. But, Federal areas within the 50 States are deemed to be possessions (definition in chapter 14). The U.S. Congress can only pass laws for United States possessions and laws with regard to income only when the U.S. Government is the source of the income within its possession. This is the reason for having to state that the pay of employees of the United States is deemed to be derived from sources within the United States.

The old section 931 is provided to demonstrate the difference between it and the current section 931. In the 1954 I.R. Code, the source was emphasized, whereas in the 1986 I.R. Code the place is emphasized and the source of one's income is concealed. By adding vagueness, the intent could only be to mislead. This is part of the IRS humbug.

The 1986 I.R. Code section 931 reads in part:

Sec. 931. INCOME FROM SOURCES WITHIN GUAM, AMERICAN SAMOA, OR THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS

(a) GENERAL RULE.--In the case of an individual who is a bona fide resident of a specified possession during the entire taxable year, gross income shall not include--

(1) income derived from sources within any specified possession, and

(2) income effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business by such individual within any specified possession.

(c) SPECIFIC POSSESSIONS.--For purposes of this section, the term "specific possession" means Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

(d) SPECIAL RULES.--For purposes of this section--

(1) EMPLOYEE OF THE UNITED STATES.--Amounts paid for services performed as an employee of the United States (or any agency thereof) shall be treated as not described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a).

Inverse construction similar to that used in section 6012 is used here. Unlike the old section 931 (which made a definite statement restricting the meaning of gross income) section 931 in the 1986 I.R. Code excludes certain income from "gross income" and then, pursuant to section 931(d), excludes amounts paid to Federal Government employees from the exclusion. This accomplished the same result as section 931(h) of the 1954 I.R. Code where amounts paid to anyone for performance of personal services as an employee of the United States was deemed to be "gross income" without regard to any formulas put forth in section 931(a) of the 1954 I.R. Code for "individuals" employed by the U.S. Government by virtue of a trade or business effectively connected within the United States. Again showing that the term "within the United States" means within the U.S. Government and that income from sources other than the U.S. Treasury is foreign to the jurisdiction of the IRS.<sup>390</sup>

With section 931(a) and (d) of the 1986 I.R. Code, Congress is saying that "gross income" does not include income received by an individual (Federal Government employee) who is a bona fide resident of a specified possession when that income was derived from sources within the specified possession or if the income was effectively connected with the conduct of a trade

1 or business by such individual (Federal Government employee) within any specified possession unless the U.S. Government
2 was the source of the income. Since there is equal treatment under the laws of the United States of America, this cannot be
3 limited to persons who are bona fide residents of these specified possessions. The fact that "gross income" does not include
4 what anyone receives from a source other than the U.S. Government applies to anyone. But, by emphasizing specified
5 possessions, there is enough vagueness injected to cloud the fact the source of the income, not the place, is the controlling
6 factor. The fact that the term "gross income" in the I.R. Code includes only income derived from the U.S. Government as
7 compensation "for services performed as an employee of the United States or any agency thereof" is demonstrated here (also 8 see section 3401(a) in chapter 6). You cannot enter into an employment agreement with a place, the employer must be the 9 source. Again confirming it is legal kickback pursuant to employment agreements which control whether income is "gross
10 income" subject to the I.R. Code laws.

11 6.8.10 Cover-Up of 1982: Footnotes Removed from IRC Section 61 Pointing to Section 861

12 The Code contains many footnotes and references to allow readers to search back and trace the origins and evolution of laws
13 and regulations, since this often clarifies intent. IRC 61(a) on gross income used to have a footnote informing readers that it
14 came from Section 22(a) of the 1939 Code and that the law hadn't been changed. The footnote said, "Source: Sec. 22(a), 1939
15 Code, substantially unchanged." That footnote was in the 1954 version of the Internal Revenue Code at least up to the 1982
16 edition, but then it vanished, making it difficult for tax professionals to understand how the wording has been deceptively
17 altered, leading to misapplication of the law. Constitutional limitations discussed above were thus hidden.

18 Deletion of the footnote has also made it much more difficult to notice and understand the close connection between IRC 61
19 and IRC 861 (or C.F.R. 1.61 and C.F.R. 1.861), especially as 26 C.F.R. §1.861 is now thousands of pages distant from 26
20 C.F.R. § 1.61, and in the earlier versions, the section was not numbered 861, but 119. In pre-1954 versions, the "gross income"
21 regulations under Section 22(a) mentioned the taxable sources as income of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations doing
22 business in the U.S. and its possessions and profits of citizens, residents, and domestic corporations derived from foreign 23 commerce. The same sources were described in the regulations under IRC 119 "Income from sources within the United
24 States."

25 The 1921 version was even more clear (and the law hasn't materially changed since then). It said explicitly "that in the case
26 of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262, the following items of gross income
27 shall be treated as income from sources within the United States." (IRC 262 applied if at least 80% of a citizen's gross income
28 was from a U.S. possession.)

29 In 1954, while the law still hadn't materially changed, the regulations were changed so that the "foreign" sources were omitted
30 from the "gross income" description in C.F.R. 1.61(a), but remained in the regulations as C.F.R. 1.861 (renumbered from the 31 regulations previously under IRC 119). Wording was put in those regulations stating that they "determine the sources of 32 income for purposes of the income tax," and they stated that it was the foreign sources noted below that were the sources.
33 These sources today are the ones listed in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(1).

34 6.8.11 Cover-Up of 1978: Confused IRS Regulations on "Sources"

35 In 1978, the wording of 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 was changed significantly, and the title was changed from "Computation of 36 Taxable Income from Sources Within the United States" to "Computation of taxable income from sources within the United 37 States and from other sources and activities." Some have suggested that the current title implies that one should not be
38 using this section unless he has income both from within the United States and from "other sources and activities." The older
39 title, as well as the text of the current regulations, shows that this is not the case.

40 Another change regarding 26 C.F.R. §1.861 that can only be seen as an intent to deceive occurred in 1978. 26 C.F.R. §1.861-
41 8, which contains the key list of sources, went from less than one page before 1978 to more than forty pages. There was no
42 underlying change in the law or even in the substance of the regulation, but the regulation became a maze of new phrases,
43 such as "statutory groupings," or "operative sections," or "specific sources" that require much more effort to sort out, but lead
44 to the same conclusion as before. There can no other explanation for such a masterpiece of regulatory obfuscation but the 45 intent to confuse, obscure, deceive and defraud. Those who claim that IRC 861 is not relevant to citizens should explain why
46 officials would go to such great lengths to obfuscate what would otherwise be a relatively little-used part of the Code. If it
47 didn't apply to most citizens, such a masterful job of creating confusion would be a waste of lawyerly talent.

1 It's well worth the government's while to have the cleverest lawyers and officials try to keep playing with the wording of the
 2 income tax Code and regulations to further disguise the true meaning of the law without actually changing it, in order to make
 3 it appear that most citizens are required to file and pay even if they aren't. The payoff to the government is enormous - several 4 hundred billion dollars a year.

5 6.8.12 Cover-Up of 1954: Hiding of Constitutional Limitations in IRC On Congress' Right To Tax

6 Here is a brief summary of what we will discuss in this section below, as far as what congress changed in the law:

- 7 1. Deleted any phrases referring to income that is, under the Constitution or fundamental law, not taxable by the 8 government. This was done by changing the definition of gross income from "unless exempt from tax by law" to "unless 9 excluded by law". There were no changes to the law or the Constitution that would necessitate deleting the reference to 10 the Constitution; it was done for no other credible reason than to obscure the Constitutionally-limited application of the 11 income tax, but without making the regulation technically incorrect - only deceiving and misleading.
- 12 2. Obfuscated locating taxable sources by adding double-negatives "list of sources that are NOT considered tax exempt".
 13 Why not just state what IS taxable, which is foreign income?
- 14 3. Removed from the regulations the phrase "in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations engaged 15 in trade or business within the United States" from the regulations in section 1.861-8. This made it appear that the 16 applicability of the income tax was expanded. ." As Congress stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, 17 but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to make the truth less obvious.
- 18 4. The admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining "gross income," but remained in the 19 regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following
 20 and related regulations "determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." This change removed any 21 chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

22 In 1954, the Code underwent a major rearranging and renumbering (and to some extent, rewording). This change-over did
 23 not substantially change the law itself, but simply rearranged it. While there have been several amendments, the current Code
 24 retains the same general structure, numbering and content of the 1954 Code. At the time of the 1954 "transformation" of the 25 Code, several changes helped to conceal the truth about the limited application of the federal income tax.

26 As shown above, the regulations in 1945 specifically stated (twice) that some income not exempt by statute was nonetheless
 27 exempt from federal taxation because of the Constitution. The 1945 regulations under the definition of "gross income" began
 28 as follows:

29 "Sec. 29.22(a)-1. What included in gross income.
 30 *Gross income includes in general [items of income listed] derived from any source whatever, unless exempt
 31 from tax by law." [1945 regulations]*

32 Those regulations then went on to explain that this refers to income exempt by statute or "fundamental law," meaning the 33 Constitution. The current corresponding regulations begin in a similar manner:

34 "Sec. 1.61-1 Gross income. (a) General definition. Gross income means all income from whatever source 35 derived, unless excluded by law."
 36 [26 C.F.R. §1.61-1]

37 However, no mention of the Constitution remains. The phrase "unless excluded by law" is now read as being synonymous
 38 with "unless excluded by statute." The Constitutional limitations still apply (there have been no subsequent constitutional 39 amendments relative to the taxing power), but the present regulations under 26 U.S.C. §61 do not explicitly say that this is 40 part of the "law" which exempts certain income. Instead, they use the general wording that leaves the reader free to assume 41 that only income specifically exempted by statute is exempt from taxation.

42 But this was only one part of a major shift in the structure of the Great Deception that occurred in 1954. Prior to 1954, the 43 regulations stated that "gross income" included everything not exempt, and then made clear that some types of income were 44 not taxable by the federal government because of the Constitution. The regulations regarding "What included in gross
 45 income" then went on to say the following:

46 *"Profits of citizens, residents, or domestic corporations derived from sales in foreign commerce must be included
 47 in their gross income; but special provisions are made for nonresident aliens and foreign corporations... and,*

1 in certain cases...for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within possessions of the
 2 United States."

3 This list of taxable activities is absent from the current regulations under 26 U.S.C. §61. However, something very similar
 4 is found in the current regulations under Section 861. The regulations under Section 861 twice define the term "class of gross
 5 income," saying that a "class of gross income" "*may consist of one or more items... of gross income enumerated in section
 6 61." The regulations then refer the reader to "paragraph (d)(2) of this section which provides that a class of gross income
 7 may include excluded income." In other words, the "items" of income listed in Section 61 are not necessarily taxable, but
 8 may be "exempt" or "excluded" from the federal income tax. Paragraph (d)(2) states only "[Reserved]" (meaning there is no
 9 current regulation) but refers the reader to paragraph (d)(2) of the temporary regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T. This section 10 describes what is meant by exempt income.

11 "(ii) Exempt income and exempt asset defined--(A) In general. For purposes of this section, the term exempt
 12 income means any income that is, in whole or in part, exempt, excluded, or eliminated for federal income tax
 13 purposes."
 14 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(ii)]

15 The section then goes on to specify what is not exempt. The following should be read carefully, since it starts with a double
 16 negative. If a certain kind of income is not exempt, it means it is subject to the federal income tax. Therefore, after being 17 told that "items" of income (which make up "classes of gross income") may not be taxable, a list is given of the types of 18 income which are subject to the federal income tax:

19 "(iii) Income that is not considered tax exempt. The following items are not considered to be exempt,
 20 eliminated, or excluded income and, thus, may have expenses, losses, or other deductions allocated and 21 apportioned to them:
 22 (A) In the case of a foreign taxpayer...
 23 (B) In computing the combined taxable income of a DISC or FSC...
 24 (C) For all purposes under subchapter N of the Code... the gross income of a possessions corporation...
 25 (D) Foreign earned income as defined in section 911 and the regulations thereunder..."
 26 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8T(d)(2)(iii)]

27 This is the entire list of non-exempt (taxable) income. The idea that other types of income are also taxable (not exempt),
 28 despite not being listed, is contradicted by the regulations stating that paragraph (d)(2) "provides that a class of gross income
 29 [consisting of the "items" of income listed in 26 U.S.C. §61] may include excluded income." Unless those types of income
 30 not listed are exempt, paragraph (d)(2) does not show that the "items" of income listed in Section 61 may be exempt. (A 31 basic principle of law is that such a list is assumed to be exclusive and complete, unless a phrase such as "including, but not 32 limited to..." is used.)

33 While it is arranged and worded differently, this list of non-exempt income is essentially the same as the regulations under 34 the old statute defining "gross income." It lists foreign earned income of citizens, income from within possessions, and 35 income of foreigners. But while the 1945 regulations listed these "non-exempt" activities under the regulations defining 36 "gross income," they are currently buried in dozens of pages of less prominent regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861. So while 37 the 1945 statute and regulation defining "gross income" by themselves indicated the limited application of the law, the trail
 38 to find the truth in the current law is more involved (though the end conclusion is the same).

39 The basic shift in the Great Deception (in 1954) can be summed up as this: While the older version showed the limitations of 40 the law in "step one" (the definition of "gross income"), the current statute and regulation defining "gross income" use the 41 word "source" without further explanation, and additional steps must be followed to discover that the meaning of that term
 42 ("source") is determined by 26 U.S.C. §861 and following, and related regulations.

43 Prior to 1954, the regulations did not say that Section 119 (predecessor to the current 861) and its regulations "determined
 44 the sources of income for purposes of the income tax." Instead, the regulations under 22(a) (defining "gross income") list
 45 the exact same activities as Section 119 when discussing income from within the United States. In effect, both the regulations 46 defining "gross income," and Section 119 and related regulations "determined the sources of income for purposes of the 47 income tax."

48 (The regulations defining "gross income" mention "nonresident aliens and foreign corporations by sections 211 to 237,
 49 inclusive, and, in certain cases, by section 251 for citizens and domestic corporations deriving income from sources within
 50 possessions of the United States." At the same time the regulations under 119 mention "nonresident alien individuals,
 51 foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251.")

In 1954, the admission of the limited application vanished from the regulations defining “gross income,” but remained in the regulations under 26 U.S.C. §861, and (to maintain literal accuracy) the regulations began to say that 861 and following and related regulations “determine the sources of income for purposes of the income tax.” This change removed any chance of the regulations under Section 61 raising suspicions.

(The way federal law works, there is no requirement that a section which uses a term point to where the definition or explanation of that term can be found. As ludicrous as it seems, it would be perfectly legal for Section 1 of some law to impose a tax “on the transfer of each automobile,” and then have Section 14523(g)(4)(iii) say that “for the purposes of Section 1, the term ‘automobile’ means a blue Corvette owned by a foreigner.” That is in essence how the Great Deception has been structured since 1954.)

While this makes the truth more difficult (but certainly not impossible) to demonstrate with the current statutes and regulations alone, in retrospect it strongly confirms the limited nature of the tax, by showing that while the structure of deception has changed, the conclusion remains the same.

But the regulations defining “gross income” were not the only place where the truth became less clear during the 1954 “transformation.” When the statutes were being rearranged and renumbered, Section 119 of the 1939 Code became all of Part I of Subchapter N. The Senate report on the 1954 Code states the following:

“SUBCHAPTER N - TAX BASED ON INCOME FROM SOURCES
WITHIN OR WITHOUT THE UNITED STATES

PART I - Determination of Sources of Income

§ 861. Income from sources within the United States
§ 862. Income from sources without the United States
§ 863. Items not specified in section 861 or 862
§ 864. Definitions

These sections, which are identical with sections 861-864 of the House bill, correspond to section 119 of the 1939 Code. No substantive change is made, except that section 861(a)(3) would extend the existing 90-day $3,000 rule in the case of a nonresident alien employee of a foreign employer to a nonresident alien employee of a foreign branch of a domestic employer.”

Congress here states that the application of the law did not change (except for the specific detail mentioned). As would be expected, the statutes are nearly identical.

Sec. 119. [1939 Code] Income from sources within the United States

(a) Gross Income from Sources in United States.

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:...

Sec. 861 [current Code]. Income from sources within the United States

(a) Gross income from sources within United States

The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:...

Section 119 of the old statutes and Section 861 of the current statutes use general terms that could easily be misread as applying to any income from within the United States. But while the statutes did not change, the honesty of the regulations corresponding to these sections changed dramatically. The older regulations admitted the truth so plainly and so often that no step-by-step explanation is needed. The following is the equivalent of the current 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1, in its entirety.

Nonresident alien individuals, foreign corporations, and citizens of the United States or domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 [this applies only to those who receive a large percentage of their income from within federal possessions] are taxable only upon income from sources within the United States. Citizens of the United States and domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251 are, however, taxable upon income received within the United States, whether derived from sources within or without the United States. (See sections 212(a), 231(c), and 251.)

The Internal Revenue Code divides the income of such taxpayers into three classes:

(1) Income which is derived in full from sources within the United States;

- 1 (2) Income which is derived in full from sources without the United States;
 2 (3) Income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from sources without the United States.

3 The taxable income from sources within the United States includes that derived in full from sources within the
 4 United States and that portion of the income which is derived partly from sources within and partly from
 5 sources without the United States which is allocated or apportioned to sources within the United States.”

6 Note that the second paragraph in the old regulations under Section 119 states that the Code (specifically Section 119) is for 7 determining taxable income of “such taxpayers,” meaning those deriving income from specific taxable activities or sources.
 8 The general language of the statutes is applicable only to those involved in certain types of international and foreign 9 commerce.

10 The subsequent sections of the older regulations (like the current regulations) then deal with specific “items” of income. The 11 sections of regulations following that (which correspond to the current 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8) then deal with determining taxable
 12 income from sources within the United States. Again, the regulations clearly show the limited application of the law.

13 “Sec. 29.119-9. Deductions in general.

14 The deductions provided for in chapter 1 shall be allowed to nonresident alien individuals and foreign
 15 corporations engaged in trade or business within the United States, and to citizens of the United States and 16 domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of section 251, only if and to the extent provided in sections 213,
 17 215, 232, 233, and 251.

18 Sec. 29.119-10. Apportionment of deductions.

19 From the items specified in sections 29.119-1 to 29.119-6, inclusive, as being derived specifically from sources
 20 within the United States there shall, in the case of nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations
 21 engaged in trade or business within the United States, be deducted [allowable deductions]. The remainder
 22 shall be included in full as net income from sources within the United States...”

23 Regarding income from within the United States, the older regulations defining “gross income” describe the exact same
 24 taxable activities as the regulations of that time related to “income from sources within the United States” (namely,
 25 nonresident aliens and foreign corporations getting income from within the United States, and citizens and domestic 26 corporations who receive much of their income from within federal possessions). “No substantive change” was made when 27 Section 119 became Sections 861 and following, which implies that Section 119 and its regulations “determine[d] the sources
 28 of income for purposes of the income tax” (as the current regulations state). The older regulations did not need to say this,
 29 since the regulations defining “gross income” also specifically listed what activities could generate taxable income. So in 30 1945, the regulations defining “gross income” and the regulations under the old Section 119 “determine[d] the sources of 31 income for purposes of the income tax.” Today only the regulations under Section 861 list the taxable activities.

32 (There is a chart in section 3.15.5 of this document showing the outline and excerpts from Part I of Subchapter N and related 33 regulations, and another chart showing the outline and excerpts from the corresponding statutes and regulations from before 34 1954.)

 36 citizens living and working within the 50 union states as taxable?

37 Can it be considered an accident that the current regulations are so overly-complex and confusing, while the older regulations
 38 blurted out the truth in plain English in the very first sentence? The fact that the statutes apply only to income from certain 39 “specific sources” (relating to international and foreign commerce) is still stated in the current regulations, but rather than 40 being in first sentence, it is buried deep in the jumbled mess:

41 “(ii) Relationship of sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b). Sections 861, 862, 863(a), and 863(b) are the four 42 provisions applicable in determining taxable income from specific sources.”
 43 [26 C.F.R. §1.861-8(f)(3)(ii)]

44 In fact, even here it does not specify to which “specific sources” it is referring; the meaning of that term has to be discovered
 45 by searching elsewhere in the regulations. (Three other sections of the regulations say that “specific sources” means the 46 taxable activities described in the “operative sections” throughout Subchapter N.) The regulations prior to 1954 were short, 47 plain, and very clear about who they applied to. (While many tax professionals are now aware of the correct application of 48 Section 861 and its regulations, it certainly is not evident at first glance.)

1 When the regulations changed in 1954, they did not change directly into what the regulations are today. The current maze
 2 of “statutory groupings,” “specific sources,” “operative sections,” etc. did not come about until 1978. Of particular note is
 3 how the regulations in 26 C.F.R. §1.861-8 appeared just after the change in 1954, and how the corresponding regulations
 4 appeared prior to 1954. The wording was only very slightly changed, but gives one of the most obvious examples of intent
 5 to deceive.

7 The wording is nearly identical, except for two changes. The phrase stating that the whole section applies only to
 8 nonresident aliens and foreign corporations simply vanished! In addition, while the specifics of the example in the 9 regulation remained identical, the phrase “a nonresident alien individual” was replaced with “a taxpayer.” As Congress
 10 stated, the application of the law did not change in 1954, but some key phrases in the regulations were removed so as to 11 make the truth less obvious. A similar disappearance of a phrase occurred at the same time in the section of regulations
 12 dealing with the “item” of interest. The wording remained identical except for the disappearing phrase.

4 6.8.13 1952: Office of Collector of Internal Revenue Eliminated

5 The Office of the Collector of Internal Revenue abolished. See Reorganization Plans No. 26 of 1950 and No. 1 of 1952, and 6 Notes under 26 U.S.C. §7804, “Amendments” at:

7 https://www.law.cornell.edu/uscode/text/26/7804?qt-us\_code\_temp\_noupdates=1#qt-us\_code\_temp\_noupdates

8 As part of this reorganization, the government manufactured a scandal concerning the collectors. The real reason, however,
 9 was to make the code voluntary.

10 This office of the Collector of Internal Revenue made it possible to protest a tax. Without a Collector of Internal Revenue, it
 11 is impossible to protest a tax because it has to be voluntary without a collector. Recall that earlier in section 5.4.6.6, we 12 pointed out that a free people can only be free if they consent to their taxation. There are two ways to consent:

- 13 1. Indirectly consent by electing a Collector of Internal Revenue or have him appointed by a person who was elected.
- 14 2. Directly consent by sending a donation form called a “tax return”, which gives the authority to the government to 15 take your money by virtue of the liability that you assessed against yourself.

16 If you don't make a liability to pay a tax in the law, then no one has an obligation to do anything. This reorganization of the 17 IRS made the process of tax collection into an administrative process which could only touch “volunteers” called “taxpayers”.
 18 This made the U.S. District courts into administrative courts in regards to federal taxes. Administrative courts are “non-
 19 judicial” and are only there to hear cases where all parties appear by consent and confer jurisdiction on the court to resolve
 20 the matter by virtue of them appearing. The only people who should go to these courts are “taxpayers”, which are people
 21 who volunteered to pay the tax. If you are a “nontaxpayer” or choose not to participate in income taxation, then you shouldn't 22 appear in these courts and if you don't appear or are forced to appear involuntarily because you were extradited, simply refuse
 23 to plead and refuse to accept a public defender. That ends the jurisdiction of the court and they will eventually have to let 24 you go because of the requirement for habeas corpus.

25 Recall that the original office of the Collector was in the House of Representatives, which is part of the Legislative Branch.
 26 The office of the Collector was created at 1 Stat. 65 of the Statutes at Large, before the Treasury Department even existed, so
 27 he was in the Legislative branch. From the founding of this country, tax Collectors were private parties who were bonded
 28 and who had to put their house up for surety with a federal lien while they were Collectors. If they collected unlawfully, then

1 they could lose their house and would have to forfeit their bond in order to compensate those they hurt. The Collector was
2 moved from the Legislative Branch to the Executive Branch in 1862, when the income tax was restructured during the Civil
3 War and without explanation or fanfare. This was a violation of the legislative intent of the Constitution, which requires that
4 taxation and representation must coexist with the same person, which could only be your Representative in the House of
5 Representatives: Taxation WITH representation. Once the taxation and representation functions were separated to two 6 separate branches of the government, then all of the corruption began because the separation of powers doctrine had been 7 violated.

8 Section 29 of the Revenue Act of 1894 was the last federal law that imposed a legal duty to pay upon citizens and residents
9 of the United States. The duty to pay the tax was subsequently eliminated by Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157
10 U.S. 429 (1895) and does not appear in any Revenue Law after that date.

11 6.8.14 Cover-Up of 1939: Removed References to Nonresident Aliens from the Definition of "Gross Income"

12 As shown above, some very telling phrases simply vanished from the regulations in 1954. But it was not only the regulations
13 that lost some honesty along the way. The statutes found in the Revenue Act of 1921 show why the regulations said what 14 they said up until 1954. But just as happened with the regulations, a telling phrase that existed in 1921 is no longer found in 15 the statutes. The current Section 861 and its predecessors have remained basically the same for more than 70 years. The text
16 begins "The following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:" The section
17 then lists "items" of income (interest, dividends, compensation for labor, rents and royalties, etc.). In 1921 the section was 18 very similar, but it began "That in the case of a nonresident alien individual or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section
19 262, the following items of gross income shall be treated as income from sources within the United States:..."

20 (While Section 217 itself mentions only individuals, Section 232 of the Act states that "[i]n the case of a foreign corporation
21 or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 the computation shall also be made in the manner provided in
22 section 217." As the current regulations and historical regulations state, the section is applicable to nonresident aliens, foreign 23 corporations, and citizen or domestic corporations which receive much of their income from within federal possessions.)

1 Although it is obvious to whom this section applied in 1921, some may question whether this is at all relevant to current law.
2 Treasury Decision 8687, in discussing what the regulations under the current 26 U.S.C. §863 should say (regarding sales of 3 natural resources), specifically refer to Section 217 of the 1921 Code in trying to determine the “legislative intent” of 4 Congress.

5 “The legislative history to section 863’s predecessor, section 217(e) of the Revenue Act of 1921, also reflects an 6 intention that...”
7 [Treasury Decision 8687]

8 This Treasury Decision, passed in late 1996, confirms that Section 217 of the Revenue Act of 1921 is the predecessor of the 9 current Part I of Subchapter N, and shows that the IRS still refers to the 1921 Code to determine the proper application of the 10 current Code. The Internal Revenue Manual shows that the courts, as well as the IRS, considers legislative history when 11 determining the correct application of the law.

12 “The courts give great importance to the literal language of the Code but the language does not solve every tax
13 controversy. Courts also consider the history of a particular code section...”
14 [Internal Revenue Manual, (4.2)7.2.1.1]

15 When the phrase disappeared from the statutes after 1921, the application of the law did not change. What changed was how 16 easily the truth could be found.

17 6.8.15 1932: Revenue Act of 1932 imposes first excise income tax on federal judges and public officers

18 Congress knew from past court actions that Federal judges already in office would not permit impairment of their existing 19 contracts. By changes in the wording in the Revenue Act of 1932, c. 209, to read:

20 Sec. 22...In the case of Presidents of the United States and judges of courts of the United States taking office after 21 *June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall be included in gross income; and all Acts fixing the 22 compensation of such Presidents and judges are hereby amended accordingly.

23 Congress managed to get the cooperation of Federal judges taking office after June 6, 1932. Cooperation is evidenced by 24 acceptance of the job.

25 Note that this change in wording accomplished two things. First, by specifying that it applied to judges taking office after 26 June 6, 1932 it did not affect existing employment contracts. Hence existing judges could not say it diminished their
27 compensation. Secondly, the working of "all Acts are hereby amended accordingly" means that new judges are informed up
28 front that their employment contract includes a kickback in the compensation. Just like other Federal Government employees,
29 their compensation for labor was the amount arranged for under law by Congress less the kickback, which varies depending 30 on the deduction benefits available to each judge.<sup>391</sup> Judges could have challenged the lawfulness based on unequal pay for 31 like work, but then that argument would hold true for all other Federal Government employees as well.

32 The effect of this Act upon the compensation of judges who enter into a new employment agreement is brought out by the 33 court cases after 1932. For example, in O’Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939), Judge Woodrough brought action
34 when his compensation as an Appeals Court judge was assessed. He had been a U.S. District Court judge prior to accepting 35 his new position with the Appellate Court in 1933. The Supreme Court Justices decided that judges of courts of the United
36 States taking office after June 6, 1932, had agreed to allow their salary to be deemed "gross income" and subject to a legal 37 kickback. In other words, they agreed that, as a condition of employment, the salary of judges as set by Congress--as with 38 all other Federal Government employees--includes their remuneration for personal service (income) and a kickback (gain) to 39 the U.S. Government.<sup>392</sup> In essence, the Supreme Court said to Judge Woodrough--tough cookies, when you accepted a
40 higher position, you agreed to a new employment contract and accepted the employment condition of kickback that all judges 41 taking office after June 6, 1932 accepted.

<sup>391</sup> The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals clarified this issue in Baker et al. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 149 F.2d. 342 (1945) with the statement:
"The necessary effect of the Woodrough case seems to us to be that a judge who takes office under an established Congressional policy of taxing his salary becomes entitled only to the salary prescribed by statute less income taxes, and that in consequence his salary is not diminished by the tax.."

As for periodic changes, it is no known if U.S. judges actually do agree and permit Congressional unilateral changes in their employment contracts through the varying rates and deduction benefits. It they do, it certainly is contrary to their tradition. To prove whether or not U.S. judges use current rates and deduction benefits or that which was in existence when they first took office would require review of their "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns," which is a violation of their personal rights to privacy. So, it is something the public will never know, but the question is there.

This act was passed on March 4, 1923 as H.R. 8928. Chapter 265 created several custom terms and definitions to be used throughout the government from that point on, including in subsequent Revenue Acts as well as the Internal Revenue Code, first codified in the U.S. Code in the Internal Revenue Code of 1939. Among the important terms defined and subsequently used in the I.R.C. include:

1. "department": "the term 'department' means an executive department of the United States Government, a governmental establishment in the executive branch of the United States Government which is not a part of an executive department, the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Botanic garden, Library of Congress, Library Building and Grounds, Government Printing Office (GPO), and the Smithsonian Institution."
2. "position": "means a specific civilian office or employment, whether occupied or vacant, in a department other than the following: Offices or employments in the Postal Service; teachers, librarians, school attendance officers, and employees of the community center department under the Board of Education of the District of Columbia; officers and members of the Metropolitan police, the fire department of the District of Columbia, and the United States park police; and the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, the public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey."
3. "employee": "means any person temporarily or permanently in a position."
4. "service": "means the broadest division of related offices and employments."
5. "compensation": "means any salary, wage, fee, allowance, or other emolument paid to an employee for service in a position."

Nearly all of the above definitions would be very carefully used to deceive the American public in subsequent acts of Congress, because they would be misconstrued by the general public to have their common definition, rather than the very specific legal definition above. This act much better concealed the nature of the I.R.C., Subtitle A income tax as an excise tax upon the privileges incident to public office (e.g. "trade or business", see 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26)) by disguising hidden meanings within the terms "compensation" and "services" and "employee", all of which, by the above act, can ONLY be incident to service in the United States government as a public officer, whether elected or appointed.

The effect of this act carried over into the IRC's of 1954 and 1986 insofar as they merely restate relevant elements incorporated in the 1939 version. It is particularly important in the modern I.R.C. Section 61, "Gross Income Defined", wherein "compensation for services" is listed as a specific "item of income" and its misleadingly ambiguous distinction from "income derived", seen in the 1921 Revenue Act, is restored. The restoration was accompanied by a notation to the effect that the reconstruction of the 1928 language (which the 1939 code section duplicated) represented no substantial change in its meaning. Below is the content of 26 U.S.C. §61, "Gross Income Defined" so you can now apply the above definitions properly. We have boldfaced and underlined the words from the above definitions contained in the Classification Act and added bracketed material so you can clearly see the meanings:

TITLE 26 > Subtitle A > CHAPTER 1 > Subchapter B > PART I > § 61
§ 61. Gross income defined

(a) General definition Except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:

- (1) Compensation for services [as a public official], including fees, commissions, fringe benefits, and similar items;
- (2) Gross income derived from [a trade or] business;
- (3) Gains derived from dealings in property [within the District of Columbia, see 26 U.S.C. 871];
- (4) Interest;
- (5) Rents;
- (6) Royalties;
- (7) Dividends;
- (8) Alimony and separate maintenance payments;
- (9) Annuities;

<sup>393</sup> Adapted from Cracking the Code, Pete Hendrickson, ISBN 0-9743936-0-6, pp. 52-53.

- (10) Income from life insurance and endowment contracts;
- (11) Pensions;
- (12) Income from discharge of indebtedness;
- (13) Distributive share of partnership gross income;
- (14) Income in respect of a decedent; and
- (15) Income from an interest in an estate or trust [in the District of Columbia].

6.8.17 1918: "Gross income" first defined in the Revenue Act of 1918<sup>394</sup>

The Revenue Act of 1918, c. 18, 40 Stat. 1057, enacted by Congress on February 24, 1919, specifically placed the compensation for personal services of Federal judges and the U.S. President under the definition of "gross income" in an attempt to bring them into the existing kickback program. That statute reads:

Sec. 213. That for the purposes of this title...the term "gross income"-

( a) Includes gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service (including the case of the President of the United States, the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States, and all other officers and employees, whether elected or appointed, of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, the compensation received as such), of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, businesses, commerce, or sales, or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in such property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever....[emphasis added]

You will note that Congress is making reference to gross income where the U.S. Government is the source of that income. Again making it clear that ONLY the compensation for personal services for the labor of Federal Government employees is includible in "gross income." The compensation of a person working in the private sector or for a state or local government, which includes state judges, is not included. Therefore, the subject matter "gross income" in the I.R. Code only applies to Federal Government employees. Income not derived from the U.S. Government is not subject to the I.R. Code Laws. The sections of the current I.R. Code that provide this notice will be discussed in detail later.

The U.S. Government, like any other employer, can establish the terms of its own employment agreement. Legally the U.S. Government cannot unilaterally impose new conditions or terms to existing employment agreements with Federal Government employees, which is confirmed by the stand the judges have taken and expressed in court opinions. Also, Congress cannot legally establish the terms of an employment agreement in the private sector or make the U.S. Government a party to such agreements.

6.8.18 1911: Judicial Code of 1911

This act abolished the existing circuit courts and replaced them with Circuit Courts of Appeals. The District Courts of the United States became "United States District Courts". This left no Article III courts to hear cases involving constitutional rights. All district and circuit courts became, at that point, Article II courts which may only have jurisdiction within territories of the United States Government. These courts are part of the executive branch, not the judicial branch, of the U.S. government. The judges in these Art. II courts are civil service employees of the Office of Personnel Management, which is part of the Executive Branch. The judges are not judicial officers as required under Art. III of the Constitution, but federal employees.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SEC. 289. The circuit courts of the United States, upon the taking effect of this Act, shall be, and hereby are, abolished; and thereupon, on said date, the clerks of said courts shall deliver to the clerks of the district courts of the United States for their respective districts all the journals, dockets, books, files, records, and other books and papers of or belonging to or in any manner connected with said circuit courts; and shall also on said date deliver to the clerks of said district courts all moneys, from whatever source received, then remaining in their hands or under their control as clerks of said circuit courts, or received by them by virtue of their said offices. The journals, dockets, books, files, records, and other books and papers so delivered to the clerks of the several district courts shall be and remain a part of the official records of said district courts, and copies thereof, when certified under the hand and seal of the clerk of the district court, shall be received as evidence equally with the originals thereof; and the clerks of the several district courts shall have the same authority to exercise all the powers and to perform all the duties with respect thereto as the clerks of the several circuit courts had prior to the taking effect of this Act.

SEC. 290. All suits and proceedings pending in said circuit courts on the date of the taking effect of this Act, whether originally brought therein or certified thereto from the district courts, shall thereupon and thereafter be proceeded with and disposed of in the district courts in the same manner and with the same effect as if originally begun therein, the record thereof being entered in the records of the circuit courts so transferred as above provided.

SEC. 291. Wherever, in any law not embraced within this Act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the circuit courts, such reference shall, upon the taking effect of this Act, be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the district courts.

SEC. 292. Wherever, in any law not contained within this Act, a reference is made to any law revised or embraced herein, such reference, upon the taking effect hereof, shall be construed to refer to the section of this Act into which has been carried or revised the provision of law to which reference is so made.

SEC. 293. The provisions of sections one to five, both inclusive, of the Revised Statutes, shall apply to and govern the construction of the provisions of this Act. The words "this title," wherever they occur herein, shall be construed to mean this Act.

SEC. 294. The provisions of this Act, so far as they are substantially the same as existing statutes, shall be construed as continuations thereof, and not as new enactments, and there shall be no implication of a change of intent by reason of a change of words in such statute, unless such change of intent shall be clearly manifest.

SEC. 295. The arrangement and classification of the several sections of this Act have been made for the purpose of a more convenient and orderly arrangement of the same, and therefore no inference or presumption of a legislative construction is to be drawn by reason of the chapter under which any particular section is placed.

SEC. 296. This Act may be designated and cited as "The Judicial Code."

6.8.19 1909: Corporate Excise Tax of 1909

Country's first income tax. The U.S. Supreme Court would later rule in Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) that the word "income" may not be defined by Congress, and that it can only be defined by the Constitution. It also ruled in the case of Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., 271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926) that:

"Income has been taken to mean the same thing as used in the Corporation Excise Tax Act of 1909 (36 Stat. 112) in the 16th Amendment, and in the various revenue acts subsequently passed."
Bowers v. Kerbaugh-Empire Co., [271 U.S. 170, 174 (1926)]

All income tax acts under Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A are based on the above, and are classified by the Supreme Court in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) as indirect taxes, which means they can only be excise taxes on privileges and may only fall on businesses and not directly on citizens:

"... [the 16th Amendment] conferred no new power of taxation... [and]... prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."

1 6.8.21 1862: First Tax on “Officers” of the U.S. Government<sup>395</sup>

2 The impairment of the Federal Government employee employment contracts began with the kickback program that Congress
3 promulgated as law in the year 1862. Once the Federal Government kickback program was well established by forced
4 acceptance, employees and employers in the private sector were forced to believe that the terms of the Federal Government
5 employment agreements applied to them. Here is how it all happened.

6 Up until year 1862, Federal Government employees worked under the same kind of employment agreement as anyone who
7 agrees to exchange their time and talent for the personal property of an employer. Then, in 1862, the Thirty-seventh Congress
8 passed Ch. 119, 12 Stat. 472, Section 86 of that Public Law reads as follows:

9 SALARIES AND PAY OF OFFICERS AND PERSONS IN THE SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES, AND
10 PASSPORTS

11 Sec. 86. And be it further enacted, That on and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-two,
12 there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all salaries of officers, or payments to persons in the civil, military,
13 naval, or other employment or service of the United States, including senators and representatives and delegates
14 in Congress, when exceeding the rate of six hundred dollars per annum, a duty of three per centum on the excess
15 above the said six hundred dollars; and it shall be the duty of all paymasters and all disbursing officers, under
16 the government of the United States, or in the employ thereof, when making any payments to officers and persons
17 as aforesaid, or upon settling and adjusting the accounts of such officers and persons, to deduct and withhold the 18 aforesaid duty of three per centum, and shall, at the same time, make a certificate stating the name of the officer
19 or person from whom such deduction was made, and the amount thereof, which shall be transmitted to the office
20 of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and entered as part of the internal duties; and the pay-roll, receipts, or 21 account of officers or persons paying such duty, as aforesaid, shall be made to exhibit the fact of such payment.
22 ...[Balance of section 86 applied to passports]

23 First, you will note that it only applied to persons who received compensation for their services as an employee of the United
24 States. Secondly, although Congress placed this into a Tax Act, and implies it is an indirect tax by the use of the word "duty," 25 it cannot be a tax. A tax on labor would necessarily fall into the class of a direct tax that needs apportionment to be 26 constitutional.

27 Note also that the only persons required to make an accounting of the kickback in section 86 were the officers who made the 28 deductions and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, not the Federal Government employee. As you continue to read, you
29 will see that this is also true today.

30 The effect of section 86 identifies what it really is--a kickback of part of the property agreed under contract to be paid for 31 labor of Federal Government employees [see chapter 1, footnote 3]. With this Act, the amount of compensation agreed to be 32 paid was diminished by one party to the agreement (Congress) without the consent of the other (the Federal Government 33 employee). A unilateral change in the employment contract of all persons then employed by the Federal Government was 34 not legal just because Congress promulgated it as a law, and the conduct of U.S. judges proved this. The result of arranging 35 for the withholding of 3 percent of the compensation due Federal Government employees under existing contracts was 36 deprivation of liberty and property without due process of law, which is violative of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S.
37 Constitution.

38 The facts presented above were expressed by the Supreme Court in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429
39 (1895), where they said:

40 Subsequently, in 1869, and during the administration of President Grant, when Mr. Boutwell was Secretary of 41 the Treasury and Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, was Attorney General, there were in several of the statutes of the 42 United States, for the assessment and collection of internal revenue, provisions for taxing the salaries of all civil 43 officers of the United States, which included, in their literal application, the salaries of the President and of the 44 judges of the United States. The question arose whether the law which imposes such a tax upon them was 45 constitutional. The opinion of the Attorney General thereon was requested by the Secretary of the Treasury. The 46 *Attorney General, in reply, gave an elaborate opinion advising the Secretary of the Treasury that no income tax
47 could be lawfully assessed and collected upon the salaries of those officers who were in office at the time
48 the statute imposing the tax was passed, holding on this subject the views expressed by Chief Justice Taney.
49 His opinion is published in volume XIII of the Opinions of the Attorneys General, at page 161. I am informed
50 that it has been followed ever since without question by the department supervising or directing the collection of 51 the public revenue. [emphasis added]

1 This "kickback" program illegally forced a 3 percent debt obligation upon Federal Government employees working under an
2 existing employment agreement in 1862. However, the "kickback program" established by section 86 was legal when applied
3 to the salary of persons who took employment with the Federal Government after that Act was passed because they were on 4 notice that a 3 percent kickback was part of their employment agreement. Thus illegal and legal kickbacks existed then and,
5 though they have changed in form, they exist today.

6 "Kickback" is defined in Webster's Dictionary as "a return of a part of a sum received often because of confidential agreement
7 or coercion." Was not a "kickback" coerced from Federal Government employees when Congress promulgated a change in 8 their employment agreement as if it were a tax when, in essence, it was, and is, a kickback program?

9 By presenting the "kickback" program in the form of "law," Congress (the legislative branch of government) provided the 10 implied authority of law needed to get Federal Government employees in the executive branch of government (the IRS) to 11 act illegally in depriving other Federal Government employees of property rightfully due them under existing contracts.

12 U.S. Supreme Court Judges understood this, and were legally and morally obligated to correct any illegal action of Congress
13 or the IRS for all Federal government employees. The primary function of the Supreme Court is to provide opinions of public
14 importance. Instead they chose, by misdirection and silence, to cooperate with Congress in the implementation of this 15 kickback which forced a debt obligation upon all Federal Government employees except U.S. judges and the U.S. President.
16 This was accomplished when Federal judges allowed the contracts of fellow Federal Government employees to be illegally
17 impaired while seeing to it that their employment contracts remained intact. Does not such conduct demonstrate that the U.S.
18 judges were partial to assuring that the illegal kickback scheme was implemented? Does not such indifference and 19 cooperation violate their duty? Does their conduct not raise the question of concealment?<sup>396</sup>

31 As we established in section 5.4.20, the Treasury Secretary, for whom the IRS Commissioner works, has NO lawful delegated
32 authority to collect income taxes in the 50 union states. Below are some examples of illegal and unethical acts of extortion
33 committed in the name of the Treasury Secretary in the absence of any legal authority to impose or enforce such income 34 taxes.

2 6.9.1 Elements of the IRS Cover-Up/Conspiracy to Watch For

3 Here are a few things to watch out for as you see history being made by legislators and the IRS in the future relative to the
4 income tax issue. These are the kinds of things that should clearly evidence to you that the IRS is part of a massive conspiracy
5 to defraud U.S. citizens of their income by fooling them into thinking that income taxes are mandatory for citizens domiciled
6 in the 50 union states with domestic income:

7 1. IRS will refuse to answer questions about the following:

- 8 1.1 "What specific statute in either the U.S. Code (Internal Revenue Code), or the Code of Federal Regulations, makes
- 9 me as a U.S. Citizen domiciled in the 50 union states and receiving nothing but income from within the 50 union
- 10 states liable for paying taxes on that income?"
- 11 1.2 "Please define what you mean by voluntary compliance?"
- 12 1.3 IRS will not respond to invitations by tax freedom groups to discuss the legality of the income tax. This happened
- 13 recently at a very public meeting where congress, the president, and the IRS were invited to attend. ALL declined!
- 14 This was documented on the following website of a group called "We the People": <http://www.givemeliberty.org/>
- 15 1.4 The IRS will refuse to define the term "United States" because then they would have to admit that the Internal
- 16 Revenue Code doesn't apply in the 50 contiguous states to your average citizen who is by default NOT a
- 17 federal/U.S.** citizen or government employee.

18 2. IRS will try to manipulate the litigation of cases involving the issues raised in this document, including the 19 861/source issue by:

- 20 2.1 Keeping these cases in the U.S. Tax Court, where there is only one judge and no jury. It is easier to bribe or
- 21 influence one judge rather than a whole jury.

- 2.2 Keeping these cases out of Federal Circuit courts where there might be juries, to avoid the risk of losing. They will do this by either fining individuals who raise the issue (violating the First Amendment right to free speech), or by encouraging the court to dismiss the case (motion to dismiss).
- 2.3 Keeping these cases out of the Supreme Court, because litigating them could shut down income taxes permanently and deprive the government of revenues. They will do this by either fining individuals who raise the issue (violating the First Amendment right to free speech), or by encouraging the court to dismiss the case, or by litigating so fiercely that the average Citizen can't afford the legal fees required to get their case to the Supreme Court level.
- 2.4 Abusing due process of litigants to the maximum extent possible by depriving them early on in their fight of financial resources needed to litigate the case to the Supreme Court. They will do this by seizing or levying the wages of tax freedom fighters as quickly as possible, rather than waiting till the end of litigation.
- 2.5 Doing complete tax background checks of any persons who act as jurors in these tax trials, to ensure that they choose only jurors who are ignorant of the Internal Revenue Code, have faithfully paid their "voluntary taxes", and who have contempt for people who don't. They need social security numbers to do this, so if you are acting as a juror in one of these trials, we strongly suggest that you NOT provide your social security number to anyone, because it is strictly voluntary. See section 2.9.19.1 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 entitled "Stacking the Deck During Jury Selection".
3. Discovery Abuses. Discovery is the process during tax litigation in which information is requested by a party to a legal action from the other side. Here are some of the ways you can expect the IRS to execute discovery abuse to cover up the conspiratorial nature of hiding the truth about the fact that income taxes are voluntary:
  - 3.1 Covering up truths about the voluntary nature of tax cases by requesting "protective orders" to oppress plaintiff citizens as part of the discover process who are serving requests for admissions and interrogatories on the IRS.
  - 3.2 Requesting that evidence related to the voluntary nature of income taxes be sealed and kept secret and only available to the court but not other individuals or citizens. This will prevent the truth from getting out about the voluntary nature of income taxes.
4. IRS will try to get tax freedom organizations and individuals in trouble by:
  - 4.1 Subsidizing "Tax Freedom" organizations to act as their operatives in attracting individuals and then giving them bad advice to get them into trouble. Remember that the IRS collects interest and penalties on back taxes if it can catch people "cheating" on taxes. Of course, we all now know that most citizens don't owe income taxes, but that never stopped the IRS from demagoguery, grand-standing, and avoiding legal issues in the presentation of their case in front of juries. CAVEAT EMPTOR!
  - 4.2 Paying their operative cronies to publish bogus books that tell tax freedom fighters the wrong methods to get out of income taxes as an inexpensive and ineffective way to have more people to make into examples to scare the rest of us into "voluntary compliance".
5. IRS will try to confuse tax freedom groups who are focusing on the issues raised in this document. For example, <http://www.egroups.com/> has a group called "legality-of-income-tax" that is enlightening for people who are looking for tools and information to end their income tax. IRS agents regularly join into these groups anonymously and try to criticize and obfuscate the participants to keep themselves out of trouble.
6. IRS will subsidize newspapers to slander individuals who legally stop paying income taxes. For instance, read the article in section 9.3.1 by the New York Times. It was completely biased and didn't talk about the law at all. Even if the IRS didn't pay for this add, the secretive bankers at the Federal Reserve have more than enough reason to subsidize this in order to keep their interest payments on the national debt coming in.
7. They will not maintain a historian position or will fire or retaliate against any historians who become whistleblowers to expose past cover-ups.
8. They will post confusing, misleading, and incomplete information on their website at <http://www.irs.gov/> about the voluntary nature of income taxes for citizens living and working in the 50 union states. For instance, look up the term "voluntary compliance" if you want some lawyer weasel words to obfuscate yourself with. Below is their definition of "voluntary compliance" from <http://www.irs.gov/prod/taxi/taxterms.html> - V:

"Your mom might order you to clean up your room. Well, the IRS doesn't have time to tell every single taxpayer to file taxes correctly and on time . . . there are millions of taxpayers in this country after all. This system relies on citizens to report their income, calculate tax liability and file tax returns on time. Everyone's gotta grow up sometime. Check out It's Payday!"
9. There have been cover-ups over the years as the Internal Revenue Codes have been craftily modified to maximize their "confusion factor" and legalese content so that only legislators can understand them. As these laws have been "obfuscated" over the years, the IRS has systematically tried to cover its tracks by concealing the older laws, which are written much more clearly to state that income taxes are voluntary. Consequently, you can be sure that the IRS:

- 1 9.1 Would not want to keep any records of the old laws that citizens could use to show that they indeed don't owe
- 2 income tax.
- 3 9.2 Would not want to make the older laws computer searchable.
- 4 9.3 Would not want to designate anyone to be a historian for the organization who could compile these old laws and
- 5 publications. As a matter of fact, the IRS fired the only historian they had! Did she uncover the truth when she
- 6 was compiling the archives to post on the website and tried to get the word out? Was she regarded as a
- 7 "whistleblower"?

8 If you have heard of any of the above types of tactics by the IRS, please let us know so we can get the word out immediately

9 and post the information on our website!

10 6.9.2 26 C.F.R. 1.0-1: Publication of Internal Revenue Code WITHOUT Index

11 The Dept. of the Treasury is responsible for writing most implementing regulations relating to federal income taxes. The

12 first thing you notice about the Internal Revenue Code (I.R.C.) in the very first section is the information contained in its

13 implementing regulation in 26 C.F.R. §1.0-1. This implementing regulation describes how the Internal Revenue Code is to 14 be published by the government for consumption by the general public.

15 Sec. 1.0-1 Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and regulations.

17 This Act shall be published as volume 68A of the United States Statutes at Large, with a comprehensive table of* 18 contents and an appendix; but without an index or marginal references. The date of enactment, bill number,

19 public law number, and chapter number, shall be printed as a headnote.

20 The Internal Revenue Code itself is 9,500 pages, and publishment of anything that large without an index would deliberately

21 create a situation for the public and the legal profession where it would be very difficult to find anything relevant to any

22 subject of inquiry. This means that you can't order the code from the U.S. government printing office that has an index. How

23 many commercial book vendors do you think would publish ANY book that large without an index? Their book wouldn't

24 sell very many copies! If you want an index, then you have to order the publication from a private third party.

25 We would argue that devious act deliberately obfuscates the tax code and makes it much more difficult for most Americans

26 to either read or understand the law. The lawyers in Congress want it that way because that is how they perpetuate the legal

27 "priesthood" that maintains their power. They want to make it so people need special research tools and published sources

28 for the code available only to legal professionals in order to locate information relevant to their inquiry. That way, ordinary

29 citizens will be encouraged to read third party publications like the IRS' fraudulent publications in order to understand the

30 tax code, and as we point out in section 3.19, these publications contain deliberate fraud. We expose this legal priesthood

31 later in section 6.12 where we talk about the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax and section 6.13, where we talk

32 about legal profession scandals to protect the income tax.

33 The above regulation, by the way, violates an Act of Congress, which states in the Statutes at Large, 42nd Congress, Volume

34 17, Ch. 315, p. 258, Section 45. Unless the below act was repealed, the Secretary of the Treasury exceeded his authority to

35 specify that the Internal Revenue Code should be published without an index:

36 "That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to revise and prepare for publication the

37 internal-revenue laws in force after the passage of this act, with amendments incorporated in their proper places,

38 conveniently arranged for reference, and with a proper index..."

39 [Statutes at Large, 42nd Congress, Volume 17, Ch. 315, p. 258, Section 45]

40 If you want a version of the code that includes an index, you can order a very nice one with an index and colored tabs for use

41 in an audit or due process hearing from Irwin Schiff's website at:

42 <http://www.paynoincometax.com/>:

43 The cost is $38. Irwin sells the I.R.C. published by:

44 Research Institute of America (RIA)

800-950-1216

<http://www.riahome.com>

If you buy the latest edition of the above commercial version of the Internal Revenue Code and you examine the extensive index under “liability for tax”, which is almost one page long by itself, you will see LOTS of entries. The January 2001 version of the code has this portion on page 201. Guess what? If you look up “income taxes” or “citizen” or “American” you will not find a single entry. Now do you understand why the Treasury directed that the I.R.C. not be published with an index? This is a very powerful argument to use in court, and the court and the Treasury sometimes will respond to this argument by making such excuses as:

“Well, this commercial publisher is not a trusted source of information so your evidence isn’t credible. Only government sources are credible.”

And of course, there IS no government source that would ever publish such information because it is simply too incriminating! Wow!

6.9.3 Official/Qualified Immunity and Anonymity

“Counsel for the claimant, ...makes a very ingenious argument... That the maxim of English constitutional law, that the king can do no wrong, is one which the courts must apply to the government of the United States, and that therefore there can be no tort committed by the government....”

It is not easy to see how the first proposition can not have any place in our system of government.

We have no king to whom it can be applied. The President, in the exercise of the executive functions, bears a nearer resemblance to the limited monarch of the English government than any other branch of our government, and is the only individual to whom it could possibly have any relation. It cannot apply to him, because the Constitution admits that he may do wrong, and has provided a means for his trial for wrongdoing,... by the proceeding of impeachment.

It is to be observed that the English maxim does not declare that the government, or those who administer it, can do no wrong; for it is a part of the principle itself that wrong may be done by the government power, for which the ministry, for the time being, is held responsible; and the ministers personally, like our President, may be impeached; or, if the wrong amounts to a crime, they may be indicted and tried at law for the offense.

We do not understand that either in reference to the government of the United States, or to the several States, or of any of their officers, the English maxim has an existence in this country.”
[Langford v. U.S., 101 U.S. 341, 3423 (1879). ]

Why do IRS agents get away with so many violations of due process with immunity? The answer is that they are protected from prosecution by our federal courts under the contemporary doctrine of “sovereign immunity”. As you can tell by the quote above from the U.S. Supreme Court back in 1879, support for sovereign immunity was not always endorsed by the courts. As these courts have become corrupted over the years in the process of expanding and upholding the income very tax that pays their salaries, the corrupt black-robed lawyers in these courts have had to contradict historical precedent by protecting especially those who enforce and administer the income tax from personal liability for criminal wrongdoing and lawlessness. Below is an explanation of how agents of the government are insulated and protected from legal liability for wrongdoing:

1. According to one IRS revenue agent we spoke with IRS agents are told by their management that they are not allowed to reveal their first name, only their employee number. Without the full name and identifying information about the employee, it is more difficult to figure out who to serve with legal papers if you want to prosecute individual agents.
2. The IRS service bureaus for specific regions are usually located outside of the jurisdiction of the state they serve. For instance, Ogden Utah services large parts of California. Why isn’t the service bureau for California inside of California? We would argue it is because that makes it much more difficult to personally serve agents who have broken the law or to prosecute them under the laws of your state, because they don’t live in your state. Citizens who want to sue IRS agents or criminally prosecute them have to go outside of their state to serve the agent, which is much more difficult to coordinate, costly, and expensive.

3. The U.S. supreme Court has upheld the notion that persons acting as agents for the U.S. government have at least a limited immunity from prosecution because of illegal, unethical, or questionable acts they commit while on duty. This is called official immunity. As we talked about in section 5.12 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.006 entitled "How the Federal Judiciary Stole the Right to Petition: Judicial Arrogance and Bias Against the Right to Petition", the federal judiciary has also for all intents and purposes destroyed our right to petition the government for redress of grievances and wrongs committed either by agents working for the government or by the government itself. One also cannot sue the U.S. government without their consent, and this is called judicial immunity or sovereign immunity. Why would they give their consent if you sued them for wrongful taking of federal income taxes? All of these factors conspire to make it very difficult if not impossible for the average sovereign American of the several states to protect his/her constitutional rights.

Below is a quote from the U.S. supreme Court on the subject of the types of official immunity in the case of Nevada v. Hicks, No. 99-1994 (U.S. 06/25/2001):

"The doctrines of official immunity, see, e.g., Westfall v. Erwin, 484 U.S. 292, 296-300 (1988), and qualified immunity, see, e.g., Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 813-819 (1982), are designed to protect state and federal officials from civil liability for conduct that was within the scope of their duties or conduct that did not violate clearly established law. These doctrines short circuit civil litigation for officials who meet these standards so that these officials are not subjected to the costs of trial or the burdens of discovery. 457 U. S., at 817-818. For example, the Federal Employees Liability Reform and Tort Compensation Act of 1988, commonly known as the Westfall Act, allows the United States to substitute itself for a federal employee as defendant upon certifying that the employee was acting within the scope of his duties. 28 U.S. C. §2679(d). Nevada law contains analogous provisions. See Nev. Rev. Stat. §§41.032, 41.0335-41.0339 (1996 and Supp. 1999). The employee who successfully claims official immunity therefore invokes the immunity of the sovereign. When a state or federal official asserts qualified immunity, he claims that his actions were reasonable in light of clearly established law. Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635 (1987). In those cases, we allow that official to take an immediate interlocutory appeal from an adverse ruling to ensure that the civil proceedings do not continue if immunity should be granted. Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 524-530 (1985)."

[Nevada v. Hicks, No. 99-1994] (U.S. 06/25/2001)

Below is a quote from the U.S. supreme Court on the subject of official immunity in the case of "Westfall Et Al. v. Erwin Et Ux," 484 U.S. 292 (1988):

"In Barr v. Matteo, 360 U.S. 564 (1959), and Howard v. Lyons, 360 U.S. 593 (1959), this Court held that the scope of absolute official immunity afforded federal employees is a matter of federal law, "to be formulated by the courts in the absence of legislative action by Congress." Id., at 597. The purpose of such official immunity is not to protect an erring official, but to insulate the decisionmaking process from the harassment of prospective litigation. The provision of immunity rests on the view that the threat of liability will make federal officials unduly timid in carrying out their official duties, and that effective government will be promoted if officials are freed of the costs of vexatious and often frivolous damages suits. See Barr v. Matteo, supra, at 571; Doe v. McMillan, 412 U.S. 306, 319 (1973). This Court always has recognized, however, that official immunity comes at a great cost. An injured party with an otherwise meritorious tort claim is denied compensation simply because he had the misfortune to be injured by a federal official. Moreover, absolute immunity contravenes the basic tenet that individuals be held accountable for their wrongful conduct. We therefore have held that absolute immunity for federal officials is justified only when "the contributions of immunity to effective government in particular contexts outweigh the perhaps recurring harm to individual citizens." Doe v. McMillan, supra, at 320.

And finally, below is a description of qualified immunity from the u.S. supreme Court in the case of Harlow Et Al. v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800 (1982):

"Government officials whose special functions or constitutional status requires complete protection from suits for damages -- including certain officials of the Executive Branch, such as prosecutors and similar officials, see Butz v. Economou, 438 U.S. 478, and the President, Nixon v. Fitzgerald, ante, p. 731 -- are entitled to the defense of absolute immunity. However, executive officials in general are usually entitled to only qualified or good-faith immunity. The recognition of a qualified immunity defense for high executives reflects an attempt to balance competing values: not only the importance of a damages remedy to protect the rights of citizens, but also the need to protect officials who are required to exercise discretion and the related public interest in encouraging the vigorous exercise of official authority. Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232. Federal officials seeking absolute immunity from personal liability for unconstitutional conduct must bear the burden of showing that public policy requires an exemption of that scope. Pp. 806-808."

6.9.4 Church Censorship, Manipulation, and Castration by the IRS

1 Churches are moral and social organizations. A big component of morality is social responsibility. However, the IRS has
2 twisted the arms of churches by being empowered to pull their 501(c ) tax exemption if they engage in socially responsible
3 activities, such as eliminating bad laws, changing the laws, or advocating or opposing specific candidates for political office.
4 This effectively neutralizes any negative impact churches might have on the IRS, for instance, by advocating elimination of
5 income taxes, like Jesus did (see section 1.10.1 entitled "Jesus Christ, The Son of God, was a Tax Protester!). It also
6 eliminates the possibility that churches will either sponsor or endorse godly men of principle for public office. Is it any
7 wonder then why our politicians are so corrupt? This is a travesty and a disgrace. What good does it do to have free speech
8 if you can't exercise it in the most important realm, which is the political and legislative realm? We would argue that under 9 such circumstances, churches really don't have free speech.

10 IRS Publication 557, Tax Exempt Status for Your Organization, discusses the conditions under which churches can be tax-
11 exempt. The Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) section 7.25.3, entitled "Religious, Charitable, Educational, Etc.
12 Organizations" discusses how to qualify as an exempt church organization. The website below is where you can read this
13 section:

14 <http://www.irs.gov/irm/part7/ch10s03.html>

15 The below excerpt from the IRM establishes a federal tax exemption for religious organizations:

16 [7.25.3] 3.6 (02-23-1999)
17 Religion or Advancement of Religion

18 IRC 501(c)(3) provides for the exemption of organizations organized and operated exclusively for "religious"
19 purposes. Because activities often serve more than one purpose, an organization that is "advancing religion"
20 within the meaning of Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2) may also qualify under IRC 501(c)(3) as charitable or 21 educational organization.

22 Below is an excerpt from the IRM that determines the conditions under which a church will LOSE its tax exemption:

24 [7.25.3] 3.3.4 (02-23-1999)
25 Express Powers that Cause Failure of Organizational Test

26 1. An organization does not meet the organizational test if its articles expressly empower it:

- 27 A. To devote more than an insubstantial part of its activities to influence legislation by propaganda or 28 otherwise (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(3)(i));
- 29 B. Directly or indirectly to participate in, or intervene in (including the publishing or distributing of 30 statements), any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office
31 (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1 (b)(3)(ii));
- 32 C. To have objectives and to engage in activities which characterize it as an "action" organization (Reg.
33 1.501(c)(3)-1 (b)(3)(iii));
- 34 D. To carry on any other activities (unless they are insubstantial) which are not in furtherance of one or 35 more exempt purposes (Reg. 1.501(c)(3)-1(b)(1)(i)(a)).

36 In the IRS Regulations, 26 C.F.R. §1.501(c)(3)(ii), churches are prohibited from being action organizations:

37 (3) Action organizations. (i) An organization is not operated exclusively for one or more exempt purposes if it
38 is an action organization as defined in subdivisions (ii), (iii), or (iv) of this subparagraph.

39 (ii) An organization is an action organization if a substantial part of its activities is attempting to influence
40 legislation by propaganda or otherwise. For this purpose, an organization will be regarded as attempting to 41 influence legislation if the organization:

42 (a) Contacts, or urges the public to contact, members of a legislative body for the purpose of 43 proposing, supporting, or opposing legislation; or

44 (b) Advocates the adoption or rejection of legislation.

The implications of the above amount to silencing the churches in the political and legislative realm. This in effect completely neutralizes them and violates their First Amendment Right of Free speech. The federal courts, according to the IRS in their IRM, said this was not the case, which has made a travesty of justice, as indicated in the below excerpt from the IRM:

[7.25.3] 3.6.2 (02-23-1999)
Compliance with Statutory Requirements

1. Any religious organization, including a church, must satisfy the statutory requirements to be exempt under IRC 501(c)(3). As explained by the court in Christian Echos National Ministry, Inc. v. United States, 470 F.2d. 849 (10th Cir. 1972), cert. den., 414 U.S. 864 (1973), in which the court upheld denial of tax exemption to a religious organization engaged in substantial legislative activity, "[i]n light of the fact that tax exemption is a matter of grace rather than right, we hold that the limitations contained in Section 501(c)(3) withholding exemption from nonprofit corporations [that engage in substantial lobbying] do not deprive Christian Echoes of its constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech. The taxpayer may engage in all such activities without restraint, subject, however, to withholding of the exemption, or, in the alternative, the taxpayer may refrain from such activities and obtain the privilege of exemption."
2. Exemption from state or local taxation is neither conclusive nor relevant to the determination whether an organization is operated exclusively for religious purposes under federal tax law. Universal Life Church v. U.S., 721 U.S.T.C. 9467 (E.D. Cal. 1972).

Did you notice the above statement: "[i]n light of the fact that tax exemption is a matter of grace rather than right, we hold that the limitations contained in Section 501(c)(3) withholding exemption from nonprofit corporations [that engage in substantial lobbying] do not deprive Christian Echoes of its constitutionally guaranteed right of free speech." This is a devious tactic to make First Amendment religious rights into government privileges. They are a privilege if they can be taken away arbitrarily by a government bureaucrat. We discuss this in section 4.3.12 "Government-instituted slavery using 'privileges'." We will repeat what we have said before in section 4.2.2 about rights in the Supreme Court case of Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied," Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, or manipulated out of existence,' Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."
[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

The above situation also applies to the federal government. We assert that removing a tax exemption as a penalty for exercising exercise a First Amendment right is unconstitutional because transforms freedom of religion from being a right into a government-granted privilege. The supreme Court has in effect legislated making a First Amendment right into a government privilege that can be taken away with their ruling, which courts are not supposed to be doing. Removal of tax exemptions because of political views or activities amounts to political persecution and censorship of the freedom of religious rights and speech of people attending churches and the churches themselves. Is it any wonder why churches have become silent on government abuses and violations of laws and the reforming of our laws? This kind of tyranny must end!

If you have done your homework and read Chapter 5, you know enough to explain how the Supreme Court and the IRS can get away with this kind of tyranny. We concluded in that chapter that Subtitle A income taxes are voluntary for natural persons. The only people who are "taxpayers" liable for tax are those who volunteer. Since they volunteered, then technically, the IRS isn't interfering with the exercise of First Amendment rights because the consequence of volunteering to become "taxpayers" is that they have no rights. It's their own fault for not knowing this, and do you think the Supreme Court would share this subtle fact with anyone? In effect what the Supreme Court said in Christian Echos National Ministry, Inc. v. United States, 470 F.2d. 849 (10th Cir. 1972), cert. den., 414 U.S. 864 (1973) is similar to the following:

"You volunteered to marry your spouse, so don't come whining to us that she is infringing on your First Amendment free speech rights by telling you she wants a divorce because you told her she is fat!"

Funny! Because of the above type of censorship being imposed by the IRS and the Supreme Court against churches and other charitable organizations, if reform is going to come of our income tax system, then it will need to come either from outside the churches and based on volunteer efforts, or it we will need to educate the churches about this book so that they understand that they don't have to pay taxes and therefore need not worry about losing their tax exemption. Those churches who can't be convinced of their nonliability to pay income taxes but who still wish to politically protest income taxes will need to take a different approach as shown below:

Church officers should pursue political activity as individuals during their own off-duty time and when they are not acting as an officer or agent of the church.

1. Church facilities or computers should not be used to do solicitation or political lobbying. Instead, members of the church should donate their own time and computers for the purpose instead.
2. If officers or agents of the church get up on the pulpit during a meeting, the pastor should say that he has no position on what the party is saying and does not necessarily advocate what he/she is saying, but wanted to offer that person an opportunity to speak about an issue he isn't familiar with.
3. Churches can offer to their congregations a section in their handouts for public announcements and then disclaim any association or affiliation with the people making the announcements. These announcements can list times to coordinate political activities or educational or fund-raising events to take political action.

6.9.5 Illegal Treasury Regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1

Treasury regulation 26 C.F.R. §301.6331 implements 26 U.S.C. §6331. Recall that the scope of a regulation may not exceed that of the statute it implements. Recall that 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) states:

(a) Authority of Secretary

If any person liable to pay any tax neglects or refuses to pay the same within 10 days after notice and demand, it shall be lawful for the Secretary to collect such tax (and such further sum as shall be sufficient to cover the expenses of the levy) by levy upon all property and rights to property (except such property as is exempt under section 6334) belonging to such person or on which there is a lien provided in this chapter for the payment of such tax. Levy may be made upon the accrued salary or wages of any officer, employee, or elected official, of the United States, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of the United States or the District of Columbia, by serving a notice of levy on the employer (as defined in section 3401(d)) of such officer, employee, or elected official. If the Secretary makes a finding that the collection of such tax is in jeopardy, notice and demand for immediate payment of such tax may be made by the Secretary and, upon failure or refusal to pay such tax, collection thereof by levy shall be lawful without regard to the 10-day period provided in this section.

The purpose for this regulation is clear. It allows federal government employers to request that the agency employing a federal employee may withhold their wages for nonpayment of income taxes without the need for a court order. This also explains why under 26 U.S.C. §6331(e) allows for continuous levies upon federal wages without a court order even though this would otherwise violate the Fifth Amendment due process rights of the person levied upon. The process described in 26 U.S.C. §6331 is usually implemented using the IRS Form 668-A "Notice of Levy". However, the Notice of Levy may not be used against private employers or those who are not federal employers and instead requires a legal action and a corresponding court order before the levy may be instituted. The IRS very commonly and illegally misuses the "Notice of Levy form" against private employers, in part because the implementing regulation illegally expands the scope of the statute in 26 C.F.R. §301.6331-1 as follows:

"Levy may be made by serving a notice of levy on any person in possession of, or obligated with respect to, property or rights to property subject to levy, including receivables, bank accounts, evidences of debt, securities, and salaries, wages, commissions, or other compensation."

The regulation should say that it only applies to federal employers, since the persons to be levied upon under 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) are only federal employees. Private employers who are not part of the federal government can safely disregard both the IRS Form 668A and 668B forms and only surrender property of their employees when they receive a valid court order. This is confirmed by the Legal Reference Guide for Revenue Officers, [MT 58[10][0]-14, Internal Revenue Service, which states in pertinent part:

332 (10-29-79)

Constitutional Limitations

(1) During the course of administratively collecting a tax, an occasion may arise where service of a levy or notice of levy is not adequate to seize property of the taxpayer. However, it cannot be emphasized too strongly that constitutional guarantees and individual rights must not be violated. Property should not be forcibly removed from the person of a taxpayer. Such conduct may expose a revenue officer to an action in trespass, assault and battery, conversion, etc. Larson v. Domestic and Foreign Commerce Corp., 337 U.S. 682 (1949), rehearing denied, 337 U.S. 682 (1949). Maule Industries v. Tomlinson, 224 F.2d. 897, (5th Cir. 1949). If there is reason to suspect a failure to honor a notice of levy or an interference with levy, the matter should be referred for proper legal action against the offending party. Remedies available to the Government, as contained in the Code and other statutes, are more than adequate to cope with the problem.

The IRS also conveniently removes 26 U.S.C. §6331(a) from the back of the IRS Form 668-A\(c\)DO to hide the fact from private employers that they have no authority to demand property. It is only the ignorance of third party private employers and financial institutions that allows the IRS to seize assets through force using the “Notice of Levy” that they otherwise could not have gotten.

6.9.6 IRS Trickery on the 1040 Form to Get Us Inside the Federal Zone

For the purposes of the federal income tax we can lawfully be treated by the national government as though we were a “resident” (which is an alien) of the federal zone by actually being domiciled in the federal zone or by electing to be treated as though we do as a “person” married to a “U.S. citizen” pursuant to 26 U.S.C. §6013(g) and (h). When we file a 1040 income tax form without attaching an IRS Form 2555, for instance, we are fraudulently telling the federal government that we are an alien domiciled in the federal zone, insofar as the Internal Revenue Code is concerned, because we are claiming to be a “resident” of the U.S., which is to say from 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) that we live in the District of Columbia or some other federal territory or part of the “federal zone” and that we are an “alien” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(b)(1)(A). Why would we want to elect to be treated as an alien domiciled in the District of Columbia (federal zone) when there is absolutely no advantage to doing so on our tax forms? The only reason is because we have been tricked by our own government because of our own ignorance of the law into using the legally incorrect words and definitions they put in the IRS publications and on the 1040 form itself, which prominently says “U.S. Individual income tax return”, which means we live in the U.S. (the District of Columbia). This fraud is encouraged and allowed to propagate because the IRS in its publications and especially in the 1040 booklet, never clarifies the three definitions of United States (see Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), where we learned the three definitions of “United States”) or which of the three we are using when we prepare the tax return.

Technically, as people domiciled outside the federal zone and inside the 50 union states, we live in the U.S.A. but NOT in the [federal] U.S.**. for the purposes of the income tax, so we are already committing a fraud when we file the 1040 form and sign it under penalty of perjury. Do you think our own dishonest government would ever point that out when it advantages them financially in such a significant way? Pitman Buck, Jr. has written an entire book about this subject called The Colossal Fraud of “Involuntary Perjury”.

An interesting way to view this fraud is that it is an enticement into (financial) slavery, which violates 18 U.S.C. §1583, entitled “Enticement into slavery”. 18 U.S.C. §1581 also prohibits arresting or apprehending anyone into slavery, which is exactly what the federal marshal does when they arrest someone who is convicted of a federal tax crime for cases in which they technically are not in actuality liable for any tax, but for which the court refuses to apply the law correctly. Such cases might occur, for instance, when the judge knows the accused is not liable for tax and knows the correct application of the Internal Revenue Code but because the accused did not address it or express his understanding of the law correctly, the judge sides with the government so that the tax system would not be undermined and so that his judgeship would not be terminated by the irate President or Congress who appointed him for “bad behavior”.

6.9.7 IRS Form 1040: Irrational Conspiracy to Violate Rights

Many of the same arguments that as we present below in section 6.9.8 about the violations of our Constitutional rights with the IRS Form W-4 apply to the IRS Form 1040 as well. We won’t repeat those arguments here, except to say that being compelled in any way to either submit or to sign a 1040 form violates our First Amendment right to NOT communicate with our government, our Fourth Amendment right to the privacy of our personal papers and effects (of which we could classify our tax returns and financial records as falling into the category of personal papers and effects), and our Fifth Amendment right to due process in the taking of our property and to not incriminate ourselves. All we have to prove in order to justify the conclusion that there are violations of rights is to demonstrate that there is any kind of penalty, compulsion, or punishment by the government for exercising these rights. Below are some of the possible statutory penalties imposed for exercising our right not to file a tax return, and these penalties are imposed as a result of statutes developed by the U.S. Congress and prosecuted by the Department of Justice.

Table 6-4: Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to form 1040

| Statute | Condition when 5 th Amendment is violated | Notes |

| 26 U.S.C. §6702 | Frivolous Income Tax Return                                    | If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled submit a return or testify against yourself in the return, then why can they criminally prosecute you for filling out a frivolous return, including one with no signature, a modified jurat statement above the signature, or incomplete or inaccurate information? |
| 26 U.S.C. §7203 | Willful failure to file return, supply information, or pay tax | If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled to submit a return or to testify against yourself in the return, then why can the DOJ criminally prosecute you for not filing one and throw you in jail?                                                                                                            |
| 26 U.S.C. §7206 | Fraud and false statements                                     | If the First and Fifth Amendments say you can't be compelled submit a return or testify against yourself in the return, then why can they criminally prosecute you for what you do choose to say on the form without compulsion, as long as you don't represent that it is true or accurate by signing it?                       |

1 The fact that the U.S. Congress wrote these statutes and the fact that they were debated, discussed, and voted on before they
 2 were passed makes these statutes a “conspiracy against rights” under 18 U.S.C. Sec. 241, punishable by a fine or 3 imprisonment not more than ten years, or both!

4 Consider the purpose of § 6702 of the Internal Revenue Code as stated by the appellate court in Gary Holder v. Secretary of
 5 the Treasury, 791 F.2d. 68, 72 (7th Cir. 1986), when an individual is penalized $500 under § 6702 for failing or refusing —
 6 based upon his belief that he is not liable for income taxes — to sign the Form 1040 jurat. The jurat reads:

7 "Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return and accompanying schedules and 8 statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, they are true, correct, and complete."

9 Here is what the court in Holder said was the purpose of imposing a penalty under § 6702:

10 "The purpose of §§ 6673 and 6702, like the purpose of Rules 11 and 38 and of § 1927, is to induce litigants to 11 conform their behavior to the governing rules regardless of their subjective beliefs."

12 But hold on there, your honors! One of the governing rules is §7206 of the Internal Revenue Code, a rule whose purpose is 13 to affect or regulate behavior by prohibiting perjury. Section 7206 reads:

14 "Any person who- ... Willfully makes and subscribes any return, statement, or other document, which contains or 15 is verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury, and which he does not believe
 16 to be true and correct as to every material matter ... shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall 17 be fined not more than $100,000 ($500,000 in the case of a corporation) or imprisoned not more than 3 years, or 18 both, together with the costs of prosecution." See also 18 U.S.C. § 1621 for definition of perjury.

19 Belief is defined in Black's Law Dictionary (Sixth Edition, p. 155) as:

20 "A conviction of the truth of a proposition, existing subjectively in the mind, and induced by argument, persuasion,
 21 or proof addressed to the judgment."
 22 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 155]

23 The Holder court's explanation of the purpose of § 6702 is ridiculous when applied to regulate the behavior of individuals
 24 with regard to their decision to sign or not to sign the jurat of Form 1040. The Holder explanation about the purpose of §
 25 6702 is not applicable to the purpose of the governing rule § 7206 because the obvious purpose of § 7206 is to induce people
 26 to base their behavior upon their subjective belief. Thus, the purpose of § 7206 is the exact opposite of § 6702 as stated in 27 Holder.

1 It must be obvious to all but the most obtuse of minds that an interpretation of law or the application of an interpretation of
2 law that induces people to complete and sign the government's prescribed Form 1040 and its prescribed jurat regardless of
3 their beliefs is absolutely irrational and preposterous! The stated purpose of § 6702 is to induce people to disregard their
4 beliefs whereas § 7206 makes the act (behavior) of signing the Form 1040 jurat dependent upon the potential affiant's
5 knowledge and belief. Under the First Amendment rights to freedom of belief and the expression thereof, no individual who
6 believes he is not liable for income taxes is obligated to intentionally change his belief — if that were possible — so that,
7 with his new belief that he is liable for income taxes, he could honestly fill in the blanks of the prescribed IRS Form 1040
8 and conscientiously sign its prescribed jurat. Plainly, the imposition of a $500 penalty under color of § 6702 in order to
9 induce people to sign the Form 1040 regardless of their beliefs conflicts with the tax code rule that defines and punishes
10 perjury, i.e., § 7206. Any attempt or coercion under color of law to induce individuals to take an oath or sign a jurat that is 11 contrary to their knowledge and/or belief is nothing less than official oppression and intellectual tyranny. Welcome to George 12 Orwell's 1984!

13 The Supreme Court in Cheek v. United States, 498 U.S. 192, 111 S.Ct. 604 (1991), ruled that where one's belief is a relevant
14 question to a situation or case, the question must be judged by a jury using the subjective standard. It is abundantly clear that 15 a person's belief about whether he owes the federal government any income taxes is relevant to his conscientious ability to
16 make and sign, under penalties of perjury, a Form 1040 tax return. By penalizing people under color of § 6702 when they
17 fail or refuse to sign the Form 1040 jurat because of their belief (for example, the belief that they are not liable for income
18 taxes), the IRS is presumptively making judgments about individuals' beliefs using the Cheek-discredited objective standard
19 and without benefit of a jury. The signing of the government's prescribed Form 1040 jurat or a decision not to sign it is 20 dependent upon one's knowledge and belief about the Internal Revenue Code. Section 7206 makes it so.

21 Clearly, an individual cannot make an honest and intelligent decision to sign or not to sign a document without recourse to
22 his or her state of mind. The issue of penalizing individuals under 26 U.S.C. §6702 for failing or refusing to sign the Form
23 1040 jurat (based on their belief that they are not liable for income taxes) can never be properly settled as long as the IRS and
24 courts, using twisted logic, rule that individuals must declare their knowledge and belief on the government's prescribed Form
25 1040 jurat while also ruling that under § 6702 — the statute under color of which individuals are penalized for not signing
26 the jurat — their state of mind and good faith belief are irrelevant.

27 Belief is at once both subjective and a legal fact to be judged by a jury when it is relevant to behavior and in dispute. But the 28 IRS, being the arbitrary, despotic, Gestapo-like agency that it is, and with the indulgence of the lower courts, insists on 29 judging the subjective and factual question of one's belief using the objective standard and has yet to listen to reason. The 30 obvious lesson taught by the IRS and the lower courts in this matter is, to say the least, extraordinary and quite remarkable:
31 in order for individuals to escape the $500 penalty imposed under color of § 6702 for their failure or refusal to sign the jurat
32 based upon their study and conscientious belief that they are not liable for income taxes, they should complete the 33 government's prescribed Form 1040 and sign its prescribed jurat regardless of their beliefs and despite the perjury statutes!

34 6.9.8 IRS Form W-4 Scandals

35 This section discusses the fraud and the illegal or unconstitutional regulations and practices that the IRS and the Treasury
36 have developed and used in the administration of the W-4 income tax forms, which are called the “Withholding Allowance 37 Certificate”. The purpose of these forms is for the Citizen to give permission to their employer to institute “voluntary”
38 withholding of federal income taxes from their paychecks.

39 We'd like to remind you that throughout this book, we have used the 26 U.S.C. §861/source issues and other issues to prove 40 beyond a reasonable doubt that the federal income tax system is truly voluntary for most of us and that citizens domiciled in
41 the 50 union states with domestic rather than foreign income are not liable to pay these taxes. Because of this, the IRS and
42 the Treasury basically has to commit fraud on the W-4 application to trick or deceive citizens into believing that they can be
43 held criminally liable for the payment of income taxes. How do they do it? We'll explain here, and we'll show that they had 44 to violate the law and the constitution to do it.

45 6.9.8.1 Fraud on the W-4 Form

46 The first fraud of the Treasury/IRS is in the naming of the IRS Form W-4 itself. Instead of “Withholding Allowance
47 Certificate” the form really should be called a “Voluntary Monthly Donation Certificate” form, to remind people that the 48 paying of federal income taxes is voluntary and cannot be coerced or compelled. This is in keeping with the Supreme Court
49 Ruling in Flora v. U.S., 362 U.S. 145 (1960):

"Our tax system is based upon voluntary assessment and payment, not upon distraint".

For those of you who don't know, "distraint" means force or coercion. Such a name for the form would also reinforce that the for is NOT for the withholding of TAX, because taxes are something that citizens are assessed or made liable for, and most of us aren't liable for paying ANYTHING in federal income taxes. The few that are have foreign income or are nonresident aliens, and for those people, their permission isn't required, so you don't NEED an allowance form!

The second lie on the form is the definition of "employee", which they conveniently don't tell you on the IRS Form W-4, which we covered in section 3.12.1.4 and which also appears in 26 U.S.C. §3401(c) :

"the term "employee" includes [is limited to] an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation."

Do you think anyone would complete this form if they were familiar with the proper legal definition of the term "employee"? Instead, the IRS publications expand the definition of employee well beyond this definition (see table 3-10 in section 3.5.12) without any constitutional authority whatsoever to do so! Why aren't they being prosecuted for exceeding the constitutional bounds of their authority? Remember that the IRS regulations that expand the definition of "employee" (see 26 C.F.R. §31.3401(d)-1) can be no more expansive than the U.S. Codes they are based on because these definitions must implement the codes!

If you look at the IRS Form W-4 itself, there are a number of questionable and misleading things on the form. Below is the first one we'd like to discuss that appears at the top of the form. You can view this form at:

http://www.irs.gov/forms\_pubs/forms.html

"Routine uses of this form include giving it to the Department of Justice for civil and criminal litigation [AGAINST YOU!!!], to cities and states, and the District of Columbia for use in administering their tax laws".

This statement is there for a reason! They are putting you on notice, rather blandly and innocuously, that you are waiving your 5th Amendment rights to not be compelled to incriminate yourself, which can only be done voluntarily and without coercion! Of course, as a "resident" of the federal zone, you don't have fifth amendment rights, which is why they can make the warning so bland. This warning means that if you are a nonresident of the federal zone, you DON'T have to fill out this form and can't be compelled to do so! Remember that the main purpose of the Department of Justice is to PROSECUTE CRIMES, and the 5th Amendment says you can't be compelled to incriminate yourself. Don't let your employer incriminate you either by filling in any part of the form in for you! There's no law that says your employer has to do anything with the form or fill it out if you won't fill it out! The IRS, however, lies to you or doesn't tell you the whole truth because they don't tell you on the form that you don't have to fill out this form and can't be penalized in any way because of your failure to fill it out or submit it. Instead, they tell you on their website at:

<http://www.irs.gov/faqs/display/0,,i1%3D54%26genericId%3D16275,00.html>

That:

"You should inform your employees of the importance of submitting an accurate Form W-4. An employee may be subject to a $500 penalty if he or she submits, with no reasonable basis, a Form W-4 that results in less tax being withheld than is required. There is no penalty if your employee doesn't claim enough withholding allowances and has too much withheld."

It is obvious that the IRS is trying here to coerce your employer into coercing you to surrender your 5th Amendment rights on your behalf, which is a violation of several laws. Remember that the exercise of rights can't be fined or penalized, or they aren't rights (see section 4.2.2, "Fundamental Rights: Granted by God and Cannot be Regulated by the Government")! Remember the court ruling we quoted in that section for Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S. 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965):

"It has long been established that a State may not impose a penalty upon those who exercise a right guaranteed by the Constitution." Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Comm'n of California, 271 U.S. 583. "Constitutional rights would be of little value if they could be indirectly denied," Smith v. Allwright, 321 U.S. 649, 644, 80 S.Ct. 339, 345. Gomillion v. Lightfoot, 364 U.S. 339, 345."

[Harman v. Forssenius, 380 U.S 528 at 540, 85 S.Ct. 1177, 1185 (1965)]

And yet, the IRS also coerces you again on the back of the IRS Form W-4 by saying:

“Failure to provide a properly completed form will result in your being treated as a single person who claims no withholding allowances; providing fraudulent information may also subject you to penalties.”

The “penalty” here for exercising your Fifth Amendment right is being compelled to give away your property against your will and without your consent, which is in effect THEFT! Then because they stole your property, they compel you later to fill out a ton of forms to “qualify” to get tax money back that you were never liable for to begin with, during which time you have to surrender your Fifth Amendment right AGAIN by signing a 1040 form AGAIN under penalty of perjury, and in effect becoming a compelled witness against yourself! The violation of the right the first time lead to a compelled SECOND violation of the same right! And then what about the violation of your 4th Amendment right to privacy because completing the 1040 form coerces you to reveal intimate details not only about your own financial life, but that of your loved ones as well when you complete the form, and the law says the IRS can use your tax form to criminally prosecute your spouse! This kind of tyranny has to stop! It could destroy your marriage and it is compelled!

Here are only a few of the laws and rights violated by the IRS during this process:

1. Your First Amendment Right NOT to speak to your government or to be compelled to speak (or write) to your government. The right of free speech includes the right NOT to speak if you don’t want to!
2. Violation of your Fourth Amendment right to privacy (which you can petition the government to correct under the First Amendment to the Constitution, called the Petition clause).
3. Violating you Fifth Amendment rights (which you can petition the government to correct under the First Amendment to the Constitution, called the Petition clause).
4. 18 USC §242 provides that “whoever, under color of any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom, willfully subjects any person in any State, Territory, Commonwealth, Possession, or District to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States ... shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.”
5. 18 USC §245 “Violation of rights” provides that “Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, intimidates or interferes with any person from participating in or enjoying any benefit, service, privilege, program, facility, or activity provided or administered by the United States; [or] applying for or enjoying employment, or any perquisite thereof, by any agency of the United States; shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.”
6. 42 USC §1983 provides that “every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.”

6.9.8.2 Unconstitutional IRS/Treasury Regulations Relating to the W-4

To keep this corrupt tax system we have alive and well, in addition to committing fraud on the IRS Form W-4 documented above, the IRS/Treasury also have had to pass regulations that are clearly unconstitutional to administer the program. As we have emphasized before in section 3.15, the CFR’s are the official regulations of the Treasury and the Commissioner of the IRS that implement Title 26 of the U.S. Codes. The bounds of authority of the IRS are explicitly and clearly defined in the U.S. Codes, and the implementing regulations in the CFR’s may not exceed the strictly limited definitions and authority granted explicitly in these codes.

The right that is violated by the IRS/Treasury implementing regulations in 26 C.F.R. is once again the Fifth Amendment, which says in part:

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

1 Now we will put the IRS implementing regulations to the test. Below are a few regulations that will really get you steaming
2 and which quite clearly penalize the exercise of one's Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate oneself and one's right to
3 not be deprived of property without one's consent or a due process (court hearing). Remember, that in ALL of the 4 IRS/Treasury regulations cited below:

- 5 1. The IRS is NOT required to obtain your consent or even consult or notify you before taking your property.
- 6 2. The IRS has no obligation to demonstrate a liability to pay federal income tax before it STOLE YOUR MONEY!!
- 7 3. The IRS is NOT a part of the federal judiciary, and that no jury trial is being held by the IRS before it orders/tells your 8 employer to extort your property/money and give it to them without a trial.

The employer shall withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service.(vi) If and when the employee does file any new certificate (after an earlier certificate of the employee was considered to be defective), the employer shall withhold on the basis of that new certificate (whenever filed) as currently effective only if the new certificate does not make a claim of exempt status or of a number of withholding exemptions which claim is inconsistent with the advice earlier furnished by the Internal Revenue Service in its written notice to the employer. If any new certificate does make a claim which is inconsistent with the advice contained in the Service's written notice to the employer, then the employer shall disregard the new certificate, shall not submit that new certificate to the Service, and shall continue to withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service.                          |
| 31.3402(f)(2)-1(g)(vii) | (vii) If the employee makes a claim on any new certificate that is inconsistent with the advice in the Service's written notice to the employer, the employee may specify on such new certificate, or by a written statement attached to that certificate, any circumstances of the employee which have changed since the date of the Service's earlier written notice, or any other circumstances or reasons, as justification or support for the claims made by the employee on the new certificate. The employee may then submit that new certificate and written statement either to (A) the Internal Revenue Service office specified in the notice earlier furnished to the employer under this paragraph (g)(5), or to (B) the employer, who must then submit a copy of that new certificate and the employee's written statement (if any) to the Internal Revenue Service office specified in the notice earlier furnished to the employer. The employer shall continue to disregard that new certificate and shall continue to withhold amounts from the employee on the basis of the maximum number specified in the written notice received from the Service unless and until the Internal Revenue Service by written notice (under paragraph (g)(5)(iii) of this section) advises the employer to withhold on the basis of that new certificate and revokes its earlier written notice. |

We didn't mention above, the hundreds of different types of penalties the IRS assesses against individuals who don't pay their taxes, which in most cases they don't owe anyway based on the 861/source argument. If you factor in these penalties, there are even greater reasons to believe that a massive "conspiracy to deprive of rights" (in this case 5th Amendment Rights) exists, in violation of 18 U.S.C. 241.

With this kind of background, can you see not why our prudent founding fathers prohibited direct taxes on citizens? There are so many constitutional conflicts that result when we violate the prohibition on direct taxes without apportionment specified in Article I, Section 2, Clause 3 of the Constitution!

6.9.8.3 Line 3a of W-4 modifies and obfuscates 26 U.S.C. §3402 (n)

26 U.S.C. §3402(n) is the section that determines the conditions under which persons may declare on their W-4 that they are exempt and have no tax liability. It states:

(n) Employees incurring no income tax liability—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an employee shall not be required to deduct and withhold any tax under this chapter upon a payment of wages to an employee if there is in effect with respect to such payment a withholding exemption certificate (in such form and containing such other information as the Secretary may prescribe) furnished to the employer by the employee certifying that the employee—

- (1) incurred no liability for income tax imposed under subtitle A for his preceding taxable year, and
- (2) anticipates that he will incur no liability for income tax imposed under subtitle A for his current taxable year.

The Secretary shall by regulations provide for the coordination of the provisions of this subsection with the provision of subsection (f)

However, on the W-4, it states on line 3:

3 I claim exemption from withholding because (see instructions and check boxes below that apply):

- a.      Last year I did not owe any Federal Income tax and had a right to a full refund of ALL income tax withheld, AND
- b.      This year I do not expect to owe any Federal income tax and expect to have a right to a full refund of ALL income tax withheld. If both a and b apply, enter "EXEMPT" here.

You should notice that a different word is used on line 3a of the W-4 than is used in the code. Why did the IRS deviate from the wording in the statute when there is clearly no need for it? The law says nothing about tax refunds, and it speaks ONLY of tax "liability", not "owing" the tax. There can be no doubt that the W-4 was worded to conflict with the code in order to frustrate its proper application. If the IRS used the word "liable" instead of "owe" on the IRS Form W-4, they would draw attention to that word and people would start looking for it in the tax code and find that it isn't used anywhere in the context of any of the Subtitles A through C income taxes! They would virtually guarantee losing a court case over the use of this word if someone sued them, so they replace the word with "owe" to confuse things and so the word can't be interpreted literally in the code itself. In any case, natural persons who understand that there is not statute within Internal Revenue Code (26 U.S.C.) subtitles A through C making anyone liable for the payment of these voluntary donations (taxes), then they can safely write "EXEMPT" in the box and check boxes 3a and 3b. And since the tax was collected illegally on the basis of fraud and intimidation, all employees certainly have the "right" to a full refund—regardless of whether the federal mafia recognizes that right.

6.9.9 Whistleblower Retaliation

6.9.9.1 1998: IRS Historian Quits-Then Gets Audited<sup>397</sup>

1 Former official historian for the Internal Revenue Service, Shelley Davis, quit her post in protest over how the agency is
2 systematically destroying its historical documents, presumably to break the trail of any possible investigation into the
3 numerous ways that the internal revenue laws are being violated.

4 The IRS has also stated in 1999 (?) that it is abolishing the position of historian. The IRS has announced it wanted to audit
5 Ms. Davis' tax returns, who was a former IRS historian. Yes, the IRS will turn on anyone, including one of its own.

6 In the 1998 senate hearings that resulted in the approval of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act (RRA) during which IRS
7 abuses were exposed, the IRS agents who were blowing the whistle on the agency repeated over and over that they felt they
8 were doing a service by testifying against the agency, but that their biggest concern was now becoming targets of retaliation
9 by the IRS or Department of Justice.

10 Sure, and if they close their eyes and wish real hard, Tinkerbell will appear. As you may have surmised, if you've been paying 11 attention, I personally do not have the "highest confidence in the integrity" of the Internal Revenue Service. Yet, in spite of 12 Ms. Richardson's (the former IRS commissioner who quit over compliance issues) heartwarming sentiment and Publication
13 1's reassuring rhetoric about the "voluntary" nature of the income tax, just like the creature in the movie "Alien" that won't 14 stop until it has located and devoured your property--assuming you own property titled in your own name, of course--and has
15 totally destroyed you, both financially and personally. Remember, like the Alien, the government is hungry. It must eat to 16 survive and it will destroy you to feed itself if it has to, in blatant violation of your constitutionally protected rights as an
17 American. See:

18 Below is the text of Ms. Davis' prepared testimony in front of the Congressional Committee that investigated the IRS in 19 1998. We downloaded this speech off the About.com website under "Police Conduct: Internal Revenue Service" at

21 PREPARED STATEMENT OF
22 SHELLEY L. DAVIS
23 BEFORE THE SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE
24 OVERSIGHT HEARING ON THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE
25 TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1997

26 Mr. Chairman and Members of the Senate Finance Committee, I am pleased to be able to share a few of my
27 thoughts and experiences with you today as you explore specific issues of IRS abuse of those the tax agency likes
28 to call its "customers" -- American taxpayers.

29 For 16 years I worked as an historian for the federal government. Nine of those years were with the Department
30 of Defense and the final seven were spent as the first and unfortunately, the last, official historian for the Internal 31 Revenue Service. At the end of 1995, I resigned from my federal career in protest over the unwillingness of the 32 IRS, or the Treasury Department Inspector General, to investigate my complaint of illegal document destruction
33 by the IRS. I learned that the same federal investigator to whom I originally reported my concerns regarding this,
34 had turned around and opened an investigation of me on unfounded and false charges of "wrongful release of 35 confidential information." Later, I learned that this is a common tactic used against IRS employees who dare to 36 speak up against management. I knew then that I had no alternative but to resign and try to raise awareness of 37 the intransigence, arrogance, and abusive patterns of behavior that I found all too common inside the 38 headquarters of the IRS. I decided to write a book which was published earlier this year entitled, "Unbridled 39 Power."

40 My testimony today will touch briefly on three areas:

- 41 1. ) The cultural climate of the IRS;
- 42 2. ) List keeping at the IRS;
- 43 3. ) The IRS definition of "tax protester."

44 My introduction to the culture of the IRS came during my earliest days with the tax agency, in the fall of 1988.
45 Although I had been hired as the first historian for the IRS, I found little interest or support for my efforts. I found
46 even less history. By history I mean both an awareness of the heritage of the IRS as well as the raw material (the 47 documentation) from which narrative history is distilled. Neither the documents nor the heritage were to be found.

1 Initially, I found this curious. Later, I found it alarming. At the IRS National Headquarters, there seemed little
2 connection between the work of employees and actual tax collection--what I presumed to be the mission of the 3 IRS. Rather than possessing any basic curiosity about the past, the IRS employees I encountered exhibited a
4 wariness, a suspicion--assuming that anyone looking for records must have some definite agenda. An agenda
5 presumed to be negative.

6 This reluctance to think about the past translated into routine day-to-day operations, meaning that all documents
7 were tossed, shredded, whatever, when a program was completed--or shut down, as in the case of many IRS
8 computer projects. No records. No paper trail. No history.

9 As time went on, I realized that this not only made my job as historian virtually impossible, but that it guaranteed
10 that the IRS could never be held accountable for its actions. With a sense of historical development, I came up
11 with my own interpretation of this phenomenon. One could easily pass off the reluctance of the IRS to 12 acknowledge its past as a reaction to a constant barrage of criticism. But the IRS is certainly not the only federal 13 agency subjected to criticism from the press, Congress, or the public.

14 Instead of reflecting on positive actions in response to criticism, the IRS proclaims that any criticism of the agency
15 is "IRS bashing" and "will only lead to more tax protesters." Rather than respond with solid information,
16 historical examples, and analysis, the IRS jumps around skittishly, telling Congress that this reorganization, or 17 that new position, or another new task force will remedy the current problem. The IRS has learned that its most
18 effective response to inquiring questions from Congress, from the press, or from the American people is to hide
19 behind the privacy laws. These are the laws meant to protect taxpayers. But by endlessly citing restrictions on its 20 authority to comment on taxpayer cases, the IRS deflects criticism for any and all actions. In essence, the response
21 of the IRS to question about anything and everything is, "Trust us. We're doing the right thing. We just can't tell 22 you what that is because we're protecting American taxpayers."

23 A corollary to this defensive shield is the penchant of the IRS to destroy its paper trail. There were virtually no
24 records of IRS actions throughout the twentieth century in any of the repositories where one would normally find 25 federal records: the IRS itself, the National Archives (including the permanent archives in Washington, D.C., the 26 10 records centers around the country, or the Presidential libraries.)

27 In my early years with the IRS, a good question to ask was, "Where are the records?" What I learned was 28 shocking. The records had been destroyed. Gone. Shredded. Tossed. They no longer exist due to a lack of attention
29 to, or concern for, the law which requires all federal agencies to preserve records of what they do. It is as though
30 the IRS assumed that laws which apply to the FBI, to the CIA, to every other part of the federal establishment can 31 be ignored.

32 No other agency of our government could get away with this. I questioned the reason why it had taken so long
33 for anyone to realize that the records were not just missing, but destroyed. I believe the answer is based on fear.
34 As taxpayers, why would we ever question the one agency that can truly bite back? Our fear of suffering a personal
35 attack from the IRS generally keeps most of us in check. Our fear of being audited has allowed the IRS to 36 theoretically eliminate any potential smoking guns by trashing its own records. This ensures that it can never be 37 held accountable for its actions. How can you prove any wrongdoing when the evidence is already destroyed?

38 The IRS has learned that the privacy protections are its best weapon in its war against its "customers." There is 39 an "us against them" mentality which is far too common among IRS employees. I witnessed and experienced this 40 attitude firsthand for over seven years working at the IRS headquarters. When I questioned the lack of record
41 keeping by the IRS, it was made clear to me that I was a "lone ranger," a "loose cannon," and "not a team player."
42 Is it any wonder they investigated me?

43 I'll conclude this section with a stark example from my personal experience. After my protest resignation at the 44 end of 1995, admittedly I was not on the "most favored" list of IRS. But when I went to the IRS National Office on 45 Monday, April 15, 1996, to meet a friend who had invited me for lunch to celebrate my birthday, I did not expect
46 to be threatened with arrest. But that is what happened.

47 While waiting for my friend to meet me at the entrance of the building, I was pulled aside by an IRS internal 48 security agent who told me to leave immediately because I was officially "banned" from the building.

49 I thought this was odd as I was standing in the front entrance, a public space. When I asked for an explanation, I
50 was told that I was "banned" because I "did not turn in my official identification badge when I resigned four 51 months earlier."

52 This was untrue.

53 When the agent detaining me prepared to call for Federal Protective Service agents to carry out her threat to 54 arrest me, I knew I had to make a quick decision: let them carry through with this absurd threat, or turn and
55 leave. I left. To this day, I wish I had stayed and made them carry through with their threat. The IRS brought false
56 charges against me, used government resources to pursue a false investigation of me, and continued to harass

1 me even after I had resigned. With the IRS, as I am sure you will hear from others today, retaliation is prompt,
2 swift and catastrophic.

3 My years with the IRS were spent exclusively in the National Office, the headquarters of the tax agency.
4 Throughout my tenure at the IRS, I often heard stories that different types of codes were used to identify taxpayers
5 and returns.

6 I have specific knowledge of one type of list maintained inside the IRS. It is a product of a secretive, cloistered
7 unit of the IRS which existed from 1969 through 1973, known by the name "Special Services Staff," or SSS.

8 The SSS list had approximately 11,000 individuals and organizations designated as possible audit targets by the 9 IRS. Who were these people and organizations? Some were names you will recognize: Shirley MacLaine, Joan 10 Baez, John Lindsay, the Black Panthers, and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee(SNCC).

11 But most of those who made it onto the list were not household names but were individuals the SSS determined
12 were of questionable character as determined by the SSS.

13 Ten employees of the SSS dutifully clipped newspaper articles each day. The FBI willingly sent over its own files
14 on political dissidents and protesters, and subscriptions were taken to radical publications which were perused
15 for names and other leads. All in all, the SSS targeted individuals with no known tax problems for audit simply 16 because of their political activities.

17 The commissioner who abolished the SSS, Donald Alexander, actually testified before Congress in 1975 that he
18 believed the SSS records should be taken "out on the mall and burned."

19 Yet, despite the fact that the SSS files remain intact at the IRS (at least through my resignation at the end of 1995),
20 the IRS steadfastly refuses to release the files to researchers or even to the National Archives for safekeeping.
21 Why? Because they contain "taxpayer information." Who is protecting whom, one has to wonder? What has all
22 this got to do with the present? Today I believe there exist thousands of names of American taxpayers whose 23 Master Files are coded as TC-148, which brands them as "Illegal Tax Protesters." Whether this is a list, or 24 compilation of files which bear that designation, is semantics. Just how many Americans bear this designation?

25 At the very least, we need to know if we are on that list, We reserve that right. The IRS says we can't know and 26 don't have a right to know while simultaneously claiming Congress wants it this way.

27 The only thing being protected in this scenario is the IRS. Just what is a tax protester? Your definition, like mine,
28 is probably different from the IRS definition. I learned that while inside the IRS.

29 A tax protester, in my definition, is not someone who may oppose our system of taxation, but pays his taxes
30 nonetheless. A tax protester is not someone who says that our tax system is broken and must be dismantled, but 31 still files a Form 1040. A tax protester is not someone who merely criticizes the IRS. A tax protester is not someone
32 who challenges an IRS assessment. But in the mind of the IRS, all of the above ideas fit the unofficial IRS profile
33 of a tax protester. In the cloistered environment of the IRS, criticism of the IRS, or the income tax, equals tax
34 protester. Anyone who has the misfortune of bearing that title is most likely going to witness first hand just what 35 "taxpayer abuse" really means.

36 Don't get me wrong. I am not in any way condoning the actions of those who, by one manner or another, attempt
37 to cheat or not live up to their financial responsibilities as a U.S. citizen. But I do recognize the use of the label
38 of "Illegal Tax Protestor" as another powerful weapon of the most powerful agency in America. It is time for 39 Congress to compel the IRS to be more forthcoming about its audit procedures, even though the IRS would like
40 us to believe that our system of taxation will collapse if the American people know how their tax collector goes
41 about his or her business.

42 The IRS gains too much benefit from the privacy laws to come clean on its own. The culture of the IRS, built over
43 decades of learning to hide behind the privacy laws, will not change on its own. Without intervention from 44 Congress, it will not happen. Last year, a top career IRS executive testified before Congress that, "There is the 45 general view that the more mysterious tax enforcement is, the more likely taxpayers will voluntarily comply."
46 Mystery breeds distrust and contempt. It also breeds fear, which compels many taxpayers to comply with the tax
47 laws because they are afraid of the consequences, but it does not breed voluntary compliance or trust.

48 The arrogance of the IRS is outrageous and harmful. We lose more than we gain by allowing the IRS to operate
49 in this manner. Congress must demand accountability from the IRS. Congress must shine the spotlight on the IRS
50 and never switch the power off.

51 Thank you.

1 6.9.9.2 1993: IRS Raided the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship<sup>398</sup>

2 Unlike many so-called "tax groups" which are nothing more than boiler room operations, often moving from State to State to
3 avoid detection, the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship has been at the same physical location at 12 Carroll Street, Westminster,
4 Maryland, and at the same telephone number (410) 857-4441, since opening their doors in 1984.

5 Fellowship Fiduciary, John Kotmair, has employed individuals for thirteen years without applying for an employer
6 identification number, and therefore has not withheld taxes of any kind from those within the employ of the Fellowship in all
7 of this time.

8 The IRS raided the Fellowship in 1993, and one of the allegations was that he had no employer identification number and 9 was not withholding taxes. After requesting the requirement to do so in court, the IRS dropped the allegation.

10 Eventually they were ordered to return the property taken, which they did, and the federal court ruled on December 18, 1996,
11 against the IRS's allegation that the Fellowship could not exist without being regulated by the government. Judge Garbis of 12 the United States district Court for the District of Maryland ruled on December 18, 1996 that the Fellowship is in fact:

13 "...an unincorporated association and, as such, is legally capable of owning property",

14 needing no permission to exist and independent of government regulation. This ruling amounts to being given the "Good 15 Housekeeping Seal of Approval" by a federal court.

16 So why does the IRS "allow" the Fellowship to stay in business? Why haven't we been shut down? It wasn't for lack of 17 trying.

18 On December 10, 1993, the Internal Revenue Service conducted a raid on our national offices at 12 Carroll Street,
19 Westminster, Maryland. The Fellowship had suspected for some time that there were many misperceptions within the IRS
20 as to the purpose and goals of the Fellowship, and that under the circumstances it would be appropriate to explain their 21 position in order to ensure that it was not misrepresented either in the public forum or certain branches of the IRS. To 22 accomplish this, the Fellowship wrote to the Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Michael Dolan, on July 19, 1993,
23 expressing their concern. In that letter they extended an invitation to the Commissioner or any of his designates to visit the 24 Fellowship's national headquarters and observe firsthand their activities.

25 The same invitation was extended to all of the federal judges and magistrates in this district, and public notice of the invitation
26 was printed in the Carroll County Times, a local Maryland newspaper, on three consecutive Mondays. The Fellowship was 27 glad to see local Federal Magistrate Paul M. Rosenberg respond to our invitation and comment that we were doing "an 28 admirable job."

29 So on October 27, 1993, the Fellowship wrote to the new Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Margaret Milner Richardson,
30 and repeated their invitation. This time, because of their growth and national prominence, they even suggested a permanent
31 IRS liaison for the office, but instead of any spirit of cooperation, the IRS response was to notify them that the matter was 32 turned over to the Criminal Investigation Division in Baltimore. Magistrate Rosenberg, who was fully aware of the 33 Fellowship's intent, knew of the invitation. Therefore, he also knew that the Fellowship was not "concealing" anything.

34 Nevertheless, on December 8, 1993, Magistrate Rosenberg signed a search warrant stating:

35 "...property is now concealed on the premises.. and if the ...property be found there to seize same."

36 After making every effort to communicate their purpose and extending the above invitation, the Fellowship was accused of 37 "concealing" something, of what they are not sure. The fact is, it is believed that the IRS had ulterior motives.

38 Since the Fellowship documents the systematic denial of due process in the various assessment and collection procedures and
39 the fraudulent practice of various IRS agents, it is entirely possible that the seizure of such documents was intended to thwart
40 the association's investigations into such affairs, in other words, to cover up corruption at the highest levels.

1 The public should call for an investigation by the Justice Department into the circumstances surrounding the warrant and
2 subsequent raid, rather than to tacitly assume that the individuals responsible for this "raid" are above reproach.

3 The events leading up to the raid would further seem to support this hypothesis. They began on December 1, 1993, when
4 John B. Kotmair, Jr. the fiduciary of The Save-A-Patriot Fellowship, was subpoenaed to appear at a grand jury investigation
5 in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. The affidavit supporting the subpoena contained false statements made by an IRS Special
6 Agent, so Mr. Kotmair naturally notified the Court to inform them of the defect.

7 Nevertheless, the Federal District Court of South Dakota insisted that he appear in Sioux Falls on December 9, 1993, to 8 testify. During his testimony, John provided the Grand Jury with copies of the documentation showing the perjurious
9 statements of the IRS Special Agent.

10 The U.S. Attorney conspired with the perjurious Special Agent in an obvious attempt to obtain the indictment against Mr.
11 Kotmair.

12 Also during the proceedings, the U.S. Attorney asked Mr. Kotmair:

13 "..isn't it true that anyone who disagrees with an IRS assessment can pay the tax and then sue for a refund in 14 court?"

15 The implication was that Mr. Kotmair was "selling" the public a false information in the form of a "non-existent legal 16 remedy."

17 Mr. Kotmair responded by explaining to the jury that suing for a refund was only one option. He said:

18 "If the IRS claimed you owed a million dollars, could you afford to pay the tax then sue for a refund?"

19 "What about $25,000?"

20 "Could you afford to pay $25,000 and then sue for a refund?"

21 He then gave them a brief history lesson and explained that during the War Between the States, Congress passed the Anti-
22 Injunction Act that prevented the courts from enjoining (stopping) the collection of a tax. He told them that because of this
23 Anti-Injunction Act, a bureaucrat could literally pluck a figure out of thin air, (like a million dollars), claim you owe it, and 24 there would be no judicial remedy because the courts no longer had jurisdiction over such matters.

25 Then he explained why the U.S. Attorney was wrong and cited "the other option under the IR Code", section 6404, the section
26 that the IRS does not like to talk about! He explained that people with errant assessments have an administrative remedy that
27 the IRS was ignoring and/or denying in violation of due process requirements, and then he explained that he assisted people
28 in pursuing this administrative remedy and in requesting abatements if and when they believed an assessment had been made
29 in error.

30 There was no need to go through the expensive and often prohibitive process of appealing to a tax court. He added that he
31 had helped thousands of people and that at the present time he was helping a 72 year-old man in Alaska who had never even 32 paid him a dime!

33 The grand jury evidently agreed with the information about the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship! Mr. Kotmair was able to take a
34 late flight home and arrived just in time for the scheduled raid at the Fellowship shortly after 9AM the next day, December 35 10, 1993.

36 The whole affair reeks of shame, and the alleged liability of Mr. Kotmair appears to be nothing more than a ploy designed to 37 make the IRS's actions palatable to an increasingly suspicious public. They no doubt hoped to make a public spectacle out
38 of the indictment and subsequent raid.

39 As to what actually happened--one of the Fellowship's caseworkers had already arrived at the office and was busily working
40 at his computer. Hearing a noise from behind, he turned around only to find four 9-millimeter semi-automatic handguns
41 pointed at his head. In a calm, quizzical voice he asked, "What seems to be the problem?"

1 As luck would have it, this particular staff member was a former treasury agent himself, and by the purest of coincidences,
2 he was wearing his personalized "treasury" jacket.

3 The swat team was intimately familiar with the apparel and immediately asked him where he had obtained it. The staff
4 member replied, "I used to be one of you boys until I learned the truth!"

5 He was promptly ordered out of the building with his hands on his head. Federal agents then began to sort through the 6 Fellowship's property and loaded it onto trucks. To show just how ridiculous the raid was, the computers stored only
7 information pertaining to correspondence that had already been sent to the IRS as the Fellowship maintains no membership
8 lists on the premises.

9 Considering that the IRS already had copies of these documents, and considering the costs involved with performing the raid,
10 not a mention how much the subsequent litigation is going to cost the IRS in terms of money and embarrassment, we just 11 cannot fathom why some IRS special agent would be dumb enough to cause the IRS all of the problems that this raid is going 12 to cause for them.

13 It may be that the raid was to be the "icing on the cake" to the indictment that never came down, and that someone forgot to 14 inform the Baltimore IRS to call off the raid. But regardless, it should be pointed out that the warrant only authorized the 15 seizure of property belonging to Mr. Kotmair, and not to the Fellowship. But Mr. Kotmair is only the fiduciary for the 16 association. He does not own the property.

17 Therefore, since the warrant specified only property belonging to John Kotmair, the Save-A-Patriot property that was taken,
18 was taken illegally, regardless of whether the warrant was justified or not.

19 Unfortunately, the travesty of justice doesn't stop there. At the same time as the raid on the office, agents forcibly entered
20 Mr. Kotmair's home with weapons drawn. His wife, Nancy, was in her nightgown and turned to get her bathrobe to open the 21 door after she heard the knocks, but agents immediately smashed the front door in with a sledge hammer before she could
22 get her bathrobe on. His son was asleep and awoke to find a shotgun close to his head.

23 Mrs. Kotmair was not even allowed to change clothes to put on something warmer. Instead, she was confined to a chair near 24 the broken front door with cold winter air coming in on her. After about an hour she was allowed to put on her bathrobe.
25 When she needed to use the bathroom a female agent would go with her and refused to leave for "her own protection" they
26 told her. She observed agents quarreling over what property they would take but was not allowed to be involved in their 27 determination of what was applicable property to be seized pursuant to the warrant.

28 Witnesses reported that the rude, arrogant, confrontation attitude of the fifty gun-waving IRS agents turned to confusion when 29 they were not met with angry or hostile "opponents". They were apparently given false information of what to expect, quite 30 possibly, to provoke an "incident" which could be used to justify the raid in the mind of the public.

31 A few of Mr. Kotmair's perfectly legal handguns were laid out on the ground and photographed as though to suggest that he 32 was some sort of drug king pin. Considering that John spent nearly a decade in the 1950's as a police officer in Baltimore,
33 Maryland, it would not be unusual for him to have a legal gun collection.

34 This was all part of the public spectacle to justify this travesty of justice, resulting from a faulty warrant and subsequent raid
35 that should have been called off, all because the IRS doesn't want John Kotmair helping innocent people whom the IRS wants 36 to destroy.

37 Both "raids" were certainly unnecessary expense that, by the time the matter is litigated, will cost the people of this country
38 millions of dollars. But the saddest part of this story is how innocent people are subjected to the threat of harm or even death
39 at the hands of uniformed bureaucrats whose mercenary employees justify their actions by saying, without any personal
40 conscience, "...we're just following orders."

41 The failure of the IRS to publicly defend their actions establishes the presumption that their activities are either unlawful or 42 that the agency incorrectly believes itself to be above the Law and under no obligation to the public.

43 The people certainly have the right to the truth and the government has the duty to respond to all inquiries regarding the truth,
44 as required in IRS Publication 1.

1 During the raid, the IRS broke federal laws by opening and reading sealed correspondence between the Fellowship and our
2 members, and took numerous computers, copy machines, fax machines, laser printers, file cabinets, etc. The IRS failed
3 completely in their effort to discredit the Fellowship and demoralize the staff.

4 A national alert for help went out and within days, money, new computers and other office equipment streamed into
5 headquarters. Ten days after the raid, the Fellowship was back in full operation, and membership swelled as a result of 6 solidarity on the part of patriotic Americans nationwide.

7 About nine months later, the IRS returned unannounced in a rental truck, dressed in plain clothes, and returned all of the 8 Fellowship's property with the exception of $60,000 stolen from a safe. Needless to say, the Fellowship has filed numerous 9 lawsuits against the IRS which are ongoing. That was in 1993.

10 Since that time enrollment has soared with members pouring in from across the country. One of our member, nationally
11 known talk radio personality Zoh Hieronimus, hosts her own ten-thousand watt radio talk show on Baltimore AM radio
12 station WCBM every weekday morning from 9AM to Noon.

13 Zoh covered the raid live on the air. Among numerous other guests, she has on many occasions interviews Fellowship founder
14 John Kotmair and other staffers on the air, beaming 10,000 watts of truth about the proper limited application of the income
15 and employment sections of the Internal Revenue Code directly into the beltway inside Washington, D.C.

16 We have knowledge that the IRS and other State and federal government officials are tuning in to Zoh. And for good reason!
17 She is ruthless at uncovering the truth about any issue she covers, and is an unusually gifted speaker. The Fellowship has 18 researched and developed legal defenses to protect the liberty and property of its members from those within the government
19 who would ignore the law, violate due process, and rob honest Americans.

20 I hate to use so strong a word as rob when speaking of the actions of a government I was raised to love and respect, but the 21 extortion of property from U.S. citizens through decades of deception and misinformation in clear violation of the written 22 Law can only be called what it really is--robbery.

23 Apparently the Supreme Court aggress. In the 1874 case, Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874), they said:

24 "To lay with one hand the power of government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it on 25 favoured individuals.. is none the less robbery because it is.. called taxation."

26 The "bottom line" is that the Save-A-Patriot Fellowship successfully withstood an IRS raid and then prevailed against the 27 IRS in Federal District Court's Judgment to t the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, Case No. 97-1303,
28 and on March 13th, 1997, filed with that Court a Motion for Dismissal of Appeal--with prejudice.

29 Since the day the Fellowship opened its doors on February 24, 1984, John B. Kotmair, Jr., Founder and Fiduciary, has never 30 withheld a dime in income or employment taxes from any of the approximately two dozen staffers who work at the 31 Fellowship's Maryland headquarters.

32 The IRS knows full well that there is no law that requires the withholding of such taxes from a U.S. citizen working and 33 living within the 50 union states. Furthermore, the IRS has never in nearly fourteen years made any attempt to levy on the 34 pay of any of the above staffers. If you want to be free, you have to live free.

35 Liberty works! End of Story!!

36 6.9.10 IRS has NO Delegated Authority to Impose Penalties or Levies or Seizures for Nonpayment of Subtitle A 37 Personal Income Taxes!

38 6.9.10.1 What Particular Type of Tax is Part 301 of Treasury Regulations?

39 Part 301 of the Regulations (26 C.F.R.) warrants a detailed explanation, because it is these Regulations that the IRS
40 fraudulently misapplies to Citizens of the 50 [nonfederal] states as their purported authority to charge interest and penalties
41 and seize property and levy compensation. All 301 Policies and Procedures cannot be and are not applicable to ALL subject 42 matters of taxes.

Note: A “cross reference” and the word “see,” in statutory construction, are used as a means of clarification only and have no legal applicability.

IMPORTANT!: A Part 301 Regulation, by itself, has no legal force to promulgate or implement Part 1, “Income Tax” provisions. A Part 301 Regulation is merely a cross reference added, in the interest of completeness, not as the lawful “authority.”

The 1939 and 1954 Title 26 Internal Revenue Codes for Income Taxes, which were never repealed and are the basis and nucleus of our current system of taxation , did not contain a Part 301! From 1939 until 1961, there was NO Part 301 “Procedure and Administration” outlining procedures for interest, penalties, property seizures, and levies! The preface to the 54 Regulations (February 16, 1954) states:

“This book [1954 Internal Revenue Code] contains rules and regulations constituting Parts 1 to 79 of Title 26...”

Following is a sample excerpt from the Table of Contents for the 1954 Regulations [26 C.F.R.]:

Table of Contents

Title 26:
Chapter I –Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury
(Parts 1-79).....3

[Note the conspicuous absence of Part 301!]

So where did Part 301 come from? Where was Part 301 in the 1954 Regs? The first time Part 301 mysteriously appeared was in a specially published 1961 edition of C.F.R. Title 26. The Preface to these Regulations solved the mystery of the origin of Part 301, stating:

“Title 27 (Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms), formerly included..Part 300 to the end...”

What Particular Types of Taxes were these “Procedures and Administrations” applicable to? Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms! Part 301 was NOT written for Title 26 Voluntary Income Taxes! These Part 300+ provisions carry severe penalties for noncompliance, because Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Tax is a “regulated” revenue taxable industry imposing a Mandatory Tax upon which criminal sanctions and property seizures could be imposed!

The “Publisher’s Note,” which was added to the first page of the 1954 microfiche of the CFR, after its publication, makes a reference to this suspicious alteration, stating:

“No Federal Register citation covering this change was discoverable.”

Again, the IRS cannot lawfully impose civil and criminal penalties on a voluntary tax because noncompliance is one of the options! That is why there is nowhere in the Regulations that a Part 1 Voluntary Tax cross references to a 301 Regulation applicable to penalties, interest, levies, seizure, or summons!

Any attempted enforcement by the IRS of a Code relating to voluntary tax, without a Part 1 Implementing Regulation, is a denial of due process for the American Citizen in violation of 26 C.F.R. §601.106!

6.9.10.2 Parallel Table of Authorities 26 C.F.R. to 26 U.S.C

The following is taken from the Parallel Table of Authorities in the back of the Title 26 Code of Federal Regulations [CFR]. It is a list of the ONLY Part 301 Regulations that derive their Authority for implementation from Title 26 USCS or 26 IRC [Income Taxes]. Note the conspicuous absence of any penalty, interest, levy or seizure for the Title 26 Voluntary Income Tax. Again, it is inconceivable that the Congress would legislate penalties for the individual income tax, since the supreme Court and the IRS have both substantiated that such a Tax is voluntary and NOT based upon distraint. It would be absurd to impose penalties for non-compliance, when such an option is what made the tax voluntary to begin with!

5 6.9.11 Service of Illegal Summons

6 It is quite common for the IRS to send out illegal summons in order to go on “fishing expeditions” in trying to uncover mud
7 to sling at a law-abiding Citizen. 26 U.S.C. §7603 governs the issuance of summons. The vast majority of IRS summons 8 are illegal and do not comply with the requirements of this section because:

- 9 • The summons did not identify the code section establishing a tax liability. It MUST do so to be enforceable. Since 10 there is no section in the I.R.C. that established a tax liability for Subtitles A through C, if the summons relates to 11 these taxes, it cannot be validly issued. You might want to ask the agent the following:

12 “In referring to an unspecified and alleged ‘tax liability’, does this refer to the tobacco tax liability contained in 13 Section 5703 (yes or no)?”

14 Ask the same question about sections 5005, 4374, and 4401(c) of the I.R.C. and then if the answer is no, ask:

15 “Then what section of the Internal Revenue Code establishes the liability for which this summons is being 16 issued?”

- 17 • The agent did not personally serve the person being summoned
- 18 • The agent did not specify the precise books and records being requested.

- The agent who issued them does not have a “Delegation Order” which allows him to issue the summons form.
- The wrong form or not form at all was used.
- The summons was not signed by the agent, or in most cases anyone.

If you receive a summons from an IRS that contains any of the above defects, then you have been illegally served and need not appear at the summons, but should notify the IRS of the defect in their notice promptly (usually within 10 days). For more information about summons, see:

6.9.12 IRS Publication 1: Taxpayer rights...Oh really?

IRS Publication 1, entitled Your Rights as a Taxpayer, is supposed to tell you what your rights are, but why doesn't the IRS title it "Your rights as an American regarding taxes?" Have you ever thought of that? Is the implication here that you have to pay money to the government to have rights? Under such circumstances, doesn't the government really just become a big mafia protection racket, where we pay money to keep them off our back and keep IRS computers from sending us automated anonymous and harassing letters? This is what we meant earlier in section 4.3.12 entitled "Government-instituted slavery using privileges", where we said that the government has illegally tried to turn rights into taxable privileges, and here that very reality is staring you right in the face if you are paying attention!

Think hard about this: If you are a "taxpayer", then by definition, you are liable for tax and we already know that you don't have any rights under those circumstances! We pointed this out earlier in section 3.12.1.21. The only reason you have any liberties at all as a "taxpayer" is because the government didn't take ALL of your income so you had enough left over after being raped to go out and have some fun. Let's face it: The whole bill of rights goes straight down the toilet when you are liable for any income taxes. The attitude of most passive "taxpayers", the people we call "sheeple", is:

"Go ahead and take [steal] whatever money you want, but please don't hit me!"

If the IRS replaced "Taxpayer" with "American" in their Publication 1, however, they would have to explain what law makes the average American liable for income tax and why you owe it to begin with. This question is a question the IRS knows they can't answer because there aren't any statutes in all of Subtitles A and C that make natural persons liable for income taxes. We even have a letter from a Congressman on Congressional letterhead stating this! Click here to view it \(http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Congressional/IncomeTaxLiability.pdf\). So instead the IRS deceptively names their publication using the word "Taxpayer" to keep attention off the real issues, which are jurisdiction and liability! Therefore, the audience this publication is written for are those people who already mistakenly believe they are liable. However, the only way you as a natural person can have rights is to not pay income taxes and not be liable for income taxes. The name of this publication is therefore an oxymoron if we ever saw one. It's like saying any of the following similarly self-contradictory oxymorons:

- Military intelligence
- Government organization
- Honest politician

Next time you call the IRS, ask them if they have a publication that tells people who don't believe they are liable what their rights are. You will probably be discarded like a hot potato by the agent once he finds out what you are up to!

Ironically, the State of California pulls the same trick with the word "taxpayer". Their Publication 70 "Your Rights as a Taxpayer" uses the same kind of sneaky word play to deceive and evade the truth.

6.9.13 Cover-Up of March 2004: IRS Removed List of Return Types Authorized for SFR from Internal Revenue Manual (I.R.M.), Section 5.1.11.6.8

The We The People Truth in Taxation Hearing held 27-28 February 2002 in Washington, D.C. had an area of inquiry, section 13, entitled: 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) Substitute for Returns. You can view that area of inquiry at:

<http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Section%2013.htm>

1 That area focused on IRS efforts at performing illegal Substitute for Returns against people who technically are not
2 “taxpayers”. Prior to that hearing, a group of 40 researchers, including former IRS agents, assembled evidence to be used at
3 the hearing. Among that evidence compiled for the hearing was an excerpt from section 5.1.11.6.8 of the IRS Internal
4 Revenue Manual, which is the manual that describes proper procedures for doing assessments within the IRS. You can view
5 that evidence at:

6 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Discovery/Deposition/Evidence/Q13.009c.pdf>

7 Below is what that section said, as demonstrated during the hearing:

8 5.1.11.6.8 (05-27-1999)
9 IRC 6020(b) Authority

10 1. The following returns may be prepared, signed and assessed under the authority of IRC 6020(b):

- 11 A. Form 940, Employer’s Annual Federal Unemployment Tax Return
- 12 B. Form 941, Employer’s Quarterly Federal Tax Return
- 13 C. Form 943, Employer’s Annual Tax Return for Agricultural Employees
- 14 D. Form 720, Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return
- 15 E. Form 2290, Heavy Vehicle Use Tax Return
- 16 F. Form CT-1, Employer’s Annual Railroad Retirement Tax Return
- 17 G. Form 1065, U.S. Return of Partnership Income.

18
19
20 2. Pursuant to IRM 1.2.2.97, Delegations of Authority, Order Number 182 (rev. 7), dated 5/5/1997, revenue
21 officers GS-09 and above, and Collection Support Function managers GS-09 and above, have the authority to 22 prepare and execute returns under IRC 6020(b).

23 We showed earlier in section 5.4.15 that the IRS has no legal authority to assess natural persons with a tax liability under
24 Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A. The above section of the Internal Revenue Manual clearly proves that conclusion. Notice
25 that the form 1040 is NOT listed as one of the forms that the IRS can do a Substitute for Return (SFR) on.

26 Following the hearings, the IRS apparently read these materials and starting in March 2004, they removed the above content
27 from section 5.1.11.6.8 of their Internal Revenue Manual. This evidence was so damning that the IRS apparently decided to
28 remove it from their website after we made a big public spectacle about it. Now that section is empty! Apparently, they 29 don’t want to be held accountable for obeying 26 U.S.C. §6020(b) and want to encourage their employees to improperly
30 administer that very important part of the Internal Revenue Code that allows the illegal flow of money to continue.

31 6.9.14 Cover-Up of Jan. 2002: IRS Removed the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM) from their Website Search Engine

32 Apparently frustrated by our website and dedicated patriots everywhere who have been reading the law and the IRS
33 publications to defend their legal and Constitutional rights to not pay direct taxes, the IRS completed redesigning their website
34 (<http://www.irs.gov>) to remove key portions from their search engine, thereby making it more difficult for patriots to find
35 help on important subjects and understand their responsibilities using the IRS website.

36 The most valuable portion of their website, the Internal Revenue Manual (IRM), was moved from the Tax Professional’s
37 Corner to the FOIA area of their website and conspicuously removed from their search engine. The FOIA area of most 38 government websites is reserved for things the government doesn’t want to disclose to people but has to anyway under the 39 Freedom Of Information Act (FOIA). The IRM is several thousand pages long and removing it from the website search
40 engine makes it extremely difficult and inconvenient for patriots and freedom advocates to locate relevant information and
41 properly comply with the Internal Revenue Code. We would be willing to bet that their internal intranet accessible only to 42 IRS employees has the document added to their search engine for more convenient use by its own employees. We’d
43 recommend doing an FOIA request to find this out to gather evidence to document this hypocritical scam. Please send us a 44 copy of your FOIA response from the IRS if you do so.

45 The IRS also deleted the area below telling where to file FOIA requests, as though they no longer want any!:

<http://www.irs.gov/prod/preview/foia/offices.html>

46 IRS: Is THIS what you call improving customer service and satisfaction and better meeting your mission statement, which 47 says(?):

1 "Provide America's taxpayers top quality service by helping them understand and meet their tax responsibilities
2 and by applying the tax law with integrity and fairness to all."

3 We'd say this strategic move conflicts with your mission statement and makes it more, not less difficult for people to
4 understand and meet their legal tax responsibilities! Instead, it simply makes them more dependent on your fraudulent IRS
5 publications and less able to understand the law.

6 Nice try, IRS, but we were ready for you when you pulled this stunt! Don't fret, patriots! If you want an indexed, searchable
7 version of the IRM as of Sept. 2001, you can go to our site below:

8 <http://famguardian.org/Publications/IRM-020311/0..i1=5&genericId=21023.00.html>

9 The search box is at the end of the table of contents. However, the search function only works on our home site and not on 10 our mirror sites.

11 6.9.15 Cover-Up of 2002: W-8 Certificate of Foreign Status Form Removed from the IRS Website December 2000 12 and replaced with W-8BEN

13 The IRS website, up until December of 2000, contained a copy of the form W-8 available for download. The form was simple
14 to use and could exempt you from both employment withholding and tax withholding of banks on accounts. After that date,
15 the form was removed, presumably because so many people were using the simple nonresident alien approach advocated in
16 this book and by other authors. Remember that nonresident aliens have no requirement to pay any income tax or file returns
17 if they have no income from inside the federal United States, which includes the District of Columbia, the federal territories,
18 and federal enclaves within states of the Union. Without a tax liability, nonresident aliens domiciled in the 50 Union states
19 don't have to file a tax return or provide any information about themselves to the IRS! How then does the IRS track these 20 people and find out about them so they can use their computers to harass them and extort money out of them? They deceive
21 them into thinking that they are required to file returns and pay tax, and that they are required to get a Taxpayer ID Number
22 or T.I.N. (as a substitute for a Social Security Number).

23 After December 2000, the IRS replaced the W-8 form with the W-8BEN form, and they did so, it would appear, to once again
24 to create a false presumption in the minds of most Americans, using the form itself, that even nonresident aliens are "liable"
25 to pay income tax and to file a return, which wasn't previously the case with the W-8 form. They did this at a time when 26 there were no changes in the laws that would add this new requirement and when a lot of people were using the W-8 forms.
27 Apparently, the IRS wanted to try, without legal authority we might add, to close the nonresident alien loophole being used
28 by so many patriots to exit the income tax system by modifying the IRS Forms. Once again, they did their dirty work using 29 sneaky definitions just like they did with the Internal Revenue Code. The instructions for the form define "beneficial owner"
30 as follows:

31 "Beneficial owner. For payments other than those for which a reduced rate of withholding is claimed under an 32 income tax treaty, the beneficial owner of income is generally the person who is required under U.S. tax
33 principles to include the income in gross income on a tax return...

34 The W-8BEN form clearly implies that even the nonresident alien in this case:

- 35 1. "Is required" to file a tax return;
- 36 2. "Is required" to show even foreign income on the tax return

37 We know from Non-Resident Non-Person Position, Form #05.020, Section 6.4 (entitled "Tax Liability and Responsibilities
38 of Nonresident Aliens") that these assertions aren't true and that nonresident aliens with no U.S.*/federal zone source income
39 clearly aren't liable for income tax, nor do they have "gross income", and they also aren't required to file a tax return. This 40 fact is abundantly confirmed by examining 26 U.S.C. §861(a)(3)(C)(i). The insidious and misleading changes in the W-
41 8BEN form, however, creates a false presumption that advantages the IRS! We must continually remember from our 42 discussion in section 3.19 (entitled "IRS Publications and Internal Revenue Manual (IRM)), however, that the IRS
43 publications are NOT to be relied upon to sustain a position and you are wasting your time to rely on them.

44 Not only are the instructions for the W-8 insidious and damaging to the freedoms of nonresident alien Sovereign Natural
45 Born Citizens, but the W-8BEN form itself is also misleading and creates a false presumption. The title is "Certificate of Foreign Status of Beneficial Owner for United States Tax Withholding”. This creates the impression that the withholding is occurring in the “United States”**/federal zone, which clearly isn’t the case in the 50 union states! Also be careful when filling in block 6, because it says “U.S. taxpayer identification number”. If you put ANYTHING in this box, then you are claiming you are a taxpayer, which you are not as a nonresident alien domiciled in the 50 union states.

6.9.16 Cover-Up of 1999: IRS CID Agent Joe Banister Terminated by IRS For Discovering The Truth About Voluntary Nature of Income Taxes!

The story below was taken from the personal testimony of Joe Banister given to me at the Freedom Rally held April 7, 2001 in Irvine hosted by the Freedom Law School (<http://www.livefreenow.com>). Joe also maintains his own website at:

<http://freedomabovefortune.com/>

Joe Banister has a BS degree in accounting and spent three years at KPMG Peat Marwick on their professional staff as a senior tax specialist and staff auditor. He went to work for the IRS in 1993 and was a licensed Certified Public Accountant. He enforced tax codes for the IRS, and quickly achieved high status and many awards within the government during his five year career with the IRS. Joe was an agent of the IRS Criminal Investigative Division in San Jose, CA for five years. In December 1996, he heard a talk show radio program with Geoff Metcalf in San Jose, and overheard Devvy Kidd being interviewed. She was claiming that the federal income tax was voluntary. Since Joe made his domiciled investigating criminal violations of the taxing statutes, he listened intently to the radio program. His life has never been the same since then!

Subsequently, Joe wrote Devvy and asked for some materials. He received a package in January 1997 from Devvy containing two books approximately 50 pages in length. The books were entitled Why a Bankrupt America and Blind Loyalty. The books were filled with very shocking claims about the United Nations, the federal income tax system, and the federal banking and monetary systems, among other topics. He read the books thoroughly and found a more detailed explanation of the allegations she made on the radio. There were three allegations that he found the most profound and unbelievable:

1. Allegation 1: Due to Limitations Imposed By The U.S. Constitution, Filing of Federal Income Tax Returns and Payment of Federal Income Tax Is Voluntary, Not Mandatory.
2. Allegation 2: The 16th Amendment To The U.S. Constitution, The Amendment Which Precipitated The Federal Income Tax, Was Never Legally Ratified.
3. Allegation 3: The U.S. Government Finances Its Operations Form the Unconstitutional Creation of Fiat Money, not with Revenue From Income Taxes.

Kidd’s allegations were so shocking to Mr. Banister and contrary to everything he had been taught that he spent many months simply thinking and meditating about what he had read. In the latter part of 1997, he read the book, The Creature From Jekyll Island, authored by G. Edward Griffin. Griffin’s book shared some of the same subject matter as Kidd’s books, which prompted Joe to pick Devvy’s books up a second time. During this second review, he noticed an unusual aspect about Kidd’s books that he had paid little attention to the first time through. Kidd had a practice of including telephone numbers of the people responsible for the evidence she provided. It was at this point that Joe realized he could simply telephone these men and make direct inquiries about the evidence supporting their allegations. In December 1997, Joe decided to contact them personally in order to determine the truth.

During the ensuing two years, Joe did his own research on his private time to try to verify the truth of the three allegations. Eventually, he convinced himself that Devvy’s claims were entirely true, and after two years of research, he submitted a preliminary report of his findings to his supervisor at the IRS. That supervisor forwarded the report up the chain. Joe asked his I.R.S. supervisor to help him refute the claims so he could have a clear conscience about continuing to work at the IRS. Instead of helping correct Joe in the error in his findings or set the record straight, his supervisor asked him to either desist or tender his resignation. Joe Banister decided to leave the IRS and quit on the anniversary of the signing of the 16th Amendment, February 25, 1999. He eventually joined the tax freedom movement! He also joined the We The People Foundation (<http://www.givemeliberty.org>) soon after his resignation and supported the efforts of employers to stop withholding. Part of his story was featured on a 60 Minutes II episode aired on CBS on April 2, 2001 in connection with a story entitled “Tax Revolt”. He was described as helping employers to legally stop income tax withholding of their employees. Joe defended the legal position of the employer during the 60 Minutes interview. He was very convincing. He has also been exposed to this book and I have personally met with him and obtained an autographed copy of his book about the illegality of the federal income tax. He is also a frequent speaker with the Freedom Law School and appears at their

1 annual Freedom Rallies, usually held in April of each year in Irvine, CA (contact Peymon Mottahedeh, the President, at

5 6.9.17 Cover-Up of 1995: Modified Regulations to Remove Pointers to Form 2555 for IRC Section 1 Liability for
6 Federal Income Tax

7 The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 requires that every form used by the federal government to collect information from
8 the public first be approved by the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB"). The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §602.101
9 contain a table listing the OMB-approved forms for each section of regulations. The regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1 are 10 entitled "Income tax on individuals," and correspond to 26 U.S.C. §1 (which imposes the "income tax"). Up until 1995, the 11 first line in this table identified Form 2555, "Foreign Earned Income," as the only approved form under 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.
12 In 1995, after many "tax resistance" groups had become aware of this, the listing for "1.1-1" was removed from the list, in
13 order to avoid "confusion," according to the Department of the Treasury. The process of applying for, and receiving OMB
14 approval for a form makes the possibility of an error extremely remote. The Department of the Treasury requested that Form
15 2555 be approved for 1.1-1, and the Office of Management and Budget approved it. When the entry drew too much attention,
16 it was removed. At present no forms are approved for use with 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1.

17 6.9.18 Cover-Up of 1993--HOT!!: IRS Removed References in IRS Publication 515 to Citizens Not Being Liable for 18 Tax and Confused New Language

19 A key piece of the puzzle that unraveled the IRS' Great Deception was formerly found in 26 C.F.R. §1.1441 and in IRS
20 Publication 515. Recall that we have been saying all along that foreign earned income is the only thing to be counted as 21 "gross income" for the purposes of 26 U.S.C. §861?

22 Call 1-800-TAX-FORM and request a copy of IRS Publication 515, titled "Withholding of Tax on Nonresident Aliens and 23 Foreign Entities". Now, you might look this up and ask yourself, "what on Earth does that have to do with me?"

24 Here's what. Inside Publication 515, there appears a statement the IRS hopes you never see. Under the main heading
25 "Withholding Exemptions and Reductions" and within the paragraph titled "Evidence of Residence", the IRS states in 26 speaking to the payer of income:

27 "If an individual gives you a written statement stating that he or she is a citizen or resident of the United States,
28 and you do not know otherwise, you do not have to withhold tax."

29 The 1994 version of Publication 515 varied somewhat. Instead of ending with "...you do not have to withhold tax", it 30 continues:

31 "...you do not have to withhold tax under the rules discussed in this publication. Instead, get Publication 15,
32 Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide."

33 Of course our friends at the IRS fail to clarify that Circular E, Employer's Tax Guide has to do with employment taxes under 34 subtitle C, and has nothing whatsoever to do with the withholding of income tax under subtitle A, the subject of Publication
35 515. Isn't that interesting?

36 Considering the deluge of recent requests from Patriotic Americans for a copy of Publication 515, do you suppose that 37 this creative suggestion to go get Circular E instead and read about employment taxes could have been added to misdirect
38 or confuse anyone?

39 Remember, the "S" in IRS stands for "Service"!

40 And what is the statement of citizenship? It's simply an affidavit, notarized and signed under penalties of perjury stating that
41 "I, John Doe, am a Citizen of the United States." It's that simple. So, the bottom line is that, according to the IRS, if you 42 agree a "Citizen or resident of the United States", the payer of your income does not have to withhold tax. Imagine that!

1 Now ask yourself this question: If a United States citizen every really were liable for tax withholding, why would the IRS
2 ever have printed this statement anywhere? Why would it even exist in writing?

3 It exists because the Law behind the Statement of Citizenship is 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-5 "Claiming to be a person not subject to 4 withholding", paragraph (a) of which states:

5 "For purposes of Chapter 3 of the Code, an individual's written statement that he or she is a citizen or resident
6 of the United States may be relied upon by the payer of the income as proof that such individual is a citizen or 7 resident of the United States."

8 And where is Chapter 3 of the Code? In Subtitle A, income tax. 1.1441-5, paragraph (c) states:

9 "The duplicate copy of each statement and form filed pursuant to this section shall be forwarded with a letter of 10 transmittal to Internal Revenue Service Center, Philadelphia PA 19255. The original statement shall be retained 11 by the withholding agent."

12 And why must the Statement of Citizenship be sent to Philadelphia, and not the local IRS office or regional service center?
13 Because Philadelphia is the IRS' international service center--the foreign service center, which makes perfect sense since the 14 income tax is a tax on foreign activity only!

15 The IRS Philadelphia office has never been known to reject a Statement of Citizenship from a withholding agent. It also does
16 not acknowledge receipt of the Statement of Citizenship, which confuses some people. The reason for this is simple. If the 17 statement were inaccurate or off-point, there would be a rebuttal from Philadelphia. Silence, in this case, is acceptance.

18 Because of a deluge of requests and attention focused on IRS Publication 515 and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-
19 5 by patriotic Americans who didn't want to have to pay or file income taxes legally in 1998, 26 C.F.R.
20 §1.1441-5 was rewritten in 1993!!! The cover-up expands! Instead, all we are left with is a confusing
21 pointer back to Circular E, the Employer's Tax Guide, and no mention of how to handle nonresident
22 aliens!! Apparently, the truth got just a little too close for comfort so the Great Deceiver bureaucrat
23 lawyers in Congress and at the IRS had to bury it a little deeper in legalese to confuse the scent for us
24 tax freedom hound dogs!! BARK, BARK!!! Sick-em!

25 6.9.19 Obfuscation of 2004: IRS Publication 519 added deceptive reference to "United States" to deceive and 26 confuse readers

27 IRS Publication 519, Starting in year 2004, introduced the following language to infer that the term "United States" as used
28 in the Internal Revenue Code, includes the 50 states of the Union for the purposes of jurisdiction to tax under Internal Revenue
29 Code, Subtitle A:

30 Substantial Presence Test

31 Example. You were physically present in the United States on 120 days in each of the years 2003, 2004, and 32 2006. To determine if you meet the substantial presence test for 2005, count the full 120 days of presence in 33 2006, 40 days in 2004 (1/3 of 130), and 20 days in 2003 (1/6 of 120). Because the total for the 30 year period is 34 180 days, you are not considered a resident under the substantial presence test for 2005.

35 "The term United States includes the following areas.

- 36 • "All 50 states and the District of Columbia."
- 37 • "The territorial waters of the United States"

38 [...]

39 "The term does not include U.S. possessions and territories or U.S. airspace."

40 [IRS Publication 519 (2005), p. 4

42 We have several points to make about the above reference:

1. The above cite was added to the publication in about 2004 in an apparent response to the content of this book, as a way to deceive the readers and stop the spread of the Non-Resident Non-Person Position.
2. The definition comes from an IRS Publication, which the IRS Internal Revenue Manual admits is UNTRUSTWORTHY and not guaranteed to be accurate:

"IRS Publications, issued by the National Office, explain the law in plain language for taxpayers and their advisors... While a good source of general information, publications should not be cited to sustain a position."

3. The text above is an EXAMPLE which does not infer or imply or specify the context in which it may suitably be used. There are actually THREE and not ONE context in which the term "United States" could be referring to or implied and only one of them is used in the above example, which is the third one listed below:
  - 3.1. The meaning of the term "United States" within the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A.
  - 3.2. The meaning of the term "United States" within ordinary speech, which most people associate with the COUNTRY to include states of the Union.
  - 3.3. The meaning of "United States" in the context of jurisdiction over aliens (not "citizens" or "nationals") temporarily present in the country "United States", which in this context includes all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

In the context of item 3.3 above, the U.S. Supreme Court has repeatedly affirmed the plenary power of Congress over aliens in this country, wherever they are located to include areas within the exclusive jurisdiction of states of the Union:

In accord with ancient principles of the international law of nation-states, the Court in The Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U.S. 581, 609 (1889), and in Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U.S. 698 (1893), held broadly, as the Government describes it, Brief for Appellants 20, that the power to exclude aliens is "inherent in sovereignty, necessary for maintaining normal international relations and defending the country against foreign encroachments and dangers - a power to be exercised exclusively by the political branches of government . . . ." Since that time, the Court's general reaffirmations of this principle have [408 U.S. 753, 766] been legion. 6 The Court without exception has sustained Congress' "plenary power to make rules for the admission of aliens and to exclude those who possess those characteristics which Congress has forbidden." Boutilier v. Immigration and Naturalization Service, 387 U.S. 118, 123 (1967). "[O]ver no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over" the admission of aliens. Oceanic Navigation Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U.S. 320, 339 (1909). [Kleindienst v. Mandel, 408 U.S. 753 (1972)]

While under our constitution and form of government the great mass of local matters is controlled by local authorities, the United States, in their relation to foreign countries and their subjects or citizens, are one nation, invested with powers which belong to independent nations, the exercise of which can be invoked for the maintenance of its absolute independence and security throughout its entire territory. The powers to declare war, make treaties, suppress insurrection, repel invasion, regulate foreign commerce, secure republican governments to the states, and admit subjects of other nations to citizenship, are all sovereign powers, restricted in their exercise only by the constitution itself and considerations of public policy and justice which control, more or less, the conduct of all civilized nations. As said by this court in the case of Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 413, speaking by the same great chief justice: "That the United States form, for many, and for most important purposes, a single nation, has not yet been denied. In war, we are one people. In making peace, we are one people. In all commercial regulations, we are one and the same people. In many other respects, the American people are one; and the government which is alone capable of controlling and managing their interests in all these respects is the government of the Union. It is their government, and in that character they have no other. America has chosen to [130 U.S. 581, 605] be in many respects, and to many purposes, a nation; and for all these purposes her government is complete; to all these objects, it is competent. The people have declared that in the exercise of all powers given for these objects it is supreme. It can, then, in effecting these objects, legitimately control all individuals or governments within the American territory."

[. . .]

"The power of exclusion of foreigners being an incident of sovereignty belonging to the government of the United States as a part of those sovereign powers delegated by the constitution, the right to its exercise at any time when, in the judgment of the government, the interests of the country require it, cannot be granted away or restrained on behalf of any one. The powers of government are delegated in trust to the United States, and are incapable of transfer to any other parties. They cannot be abandoned or surrendered. Nor can their exercise be hampered, when needed for the public good, by any considerations of private interest. The exercise of these public trusts is not the subject of barter or contract."

[Chae Chan Ping v. U.S., 130 U.S. 581 \(1889\)]

Therefore, in regard to control over aliens present anywhere within the American confederation, the general government legislates over all the territory of the American Union, including those of the states. Consequently, for the purposes of determining “permanent residence” of aliens ONLY, the term “United States” as used in item 3 above must be interpreted to include the 50 states of the Union as the IRS indicates above. HOWEVER:

1. The Presence Test indicated does not refer to “citizens” or “nationals”. The Presence Test is found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(3\) and references ONLY “aliens” as defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(A\) and not “nonresident aliens” defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) or “citizens” defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(c). Therefore, an alien domiciled in a state of the Union could be a “resident” within the meaning of the presence test while neither a “citizen” nor a “national” would be considered a “resident” under the SAME test when located in the SAME place. Under the I.R.C., one cannot be a “resident” (which is an alien with a domicile) and either a “citizen” or a “national” at the same time. This is confirmed by the Law of Nations, which the Founding Fathers used to write the Constitution:

“Residents, as distinguished from citizens, are aliens who are permitted to take up a permanent abode in the country. Being bound to the society by reason of their dwelling in it, they are subject to its law so long as they remain there, and being protected by it, they must defend it, although they do not enjoy all the rights of citizens. They have only certain privileges which the law, or custom, gives them. Permanent residents are those who have been given the right of perpetual residence. They are a sort of citizens of a less privileged character, and are subject to the society without enjoying all its advantages. Their children succeed to their status; for the right of perpetual residence given them by the State passes to their children.”

[Law of Nations, Vattel, p. 87

SOURCE: <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/CitesByTopic/Resident-LawOfNations.pdf>]

2. Remember that the only context in which “residence” is defined or described anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code is in the context of “aliens”, and not in the context of either “citizens” or “nationals”. See 26 C.F.R. §1.871-2 and section 4 of the article below:

Why Domicile and Becoming a “Taxpayer” Require Your Consent, Form #05.002
<http://sedm.org/Forms/FormIndex.htm>

Therefore, a person who is a “national” but not a “citizen” and a “nonresident alien” can NOT have a “residence” as defined anywhere in the Internal Revenue Code.

3. For the purposes of determining tax liability and not residency of all persons, we must defer to the definition of “United States” found in 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10), which is limited to the District of Columbia and nowhere expanded in the Internal Revenue Code, Subtitle A to include any other place.

Based on the foregoing, we must conclude that the IRS’ statement above is a deception and a ruse intended to compel false presumption under the influence of CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD that will maximize the illegal flow of PLUNDER to the federal government. It is provided as an example and cannot mean the legal definition of “United States” used in the Internal Revenue Code. If they wish to imply that ALL THREE of the contexts in which the term “United States” could be used are the same, then they should say so and provide statutory and regulatory authority for saying so. Until then, we must defer to the definition of “United States” found within 26 U.S.C. §7701\(a\)\(9\) and (a)(10). This is a consequence of the following doctrine of the Supreme Court:

“Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid.”
[Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 297 (1904)]

6.9.20 Cover-Up of 2012: IRS removed exemption for withholding and reporting for “U.S. persons” on the W-9 form even though it is still in the regulations

2011 was the last year that the Form W-9 clearly showed the exemption for U.S. persons from withholding and reporting. That exemption from withholding and reporting is found in the regulations at 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d)(1) and TD8734 \(62 F.R. 53391, SEDM Exhibit #09.038\). Below is a snapshot of the form for that year:

(Applies to accounts maintained outside the U.S.)

Notice the block to the right says “(applies to accounts maintained outside the U.S.)”. 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d) currently provides an exemption for accounts WITHIN the U.S., and used to appear in that block, but was removed. By “U.S.,” we obviously mean that defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9) and (a)(10) and 4 U.S.C. §110(d), which means federal territory subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of Congress and not within the exclusive jurisdiction of any state of the Union.

If you want to be exempt on the current form, you have to check the “Other” block and write the following:

“Exempt payee. See 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(d). No withholding or reporting. See: <https://sedm.org/Forms/04-Tax/0-CorrErrInfoRtns/CorrErrInfoRtns.pdf>”

This scam is obviously designed to cause people who are NOT subject to the income tax when within the “United States” (federal zone) to pay anyway.

6.10 Department of State (DOS) Scandals Related to Income Taxes

We say earlier in section 2.8.13 that the federal courts commonly but erroneously “presume” that all people are “U.S. citizens” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 in order to illegally expand federal jurisdiction. Here is an example:

“Unless the defendant can prove he is not a citizen of the United States, the IRS has the right to inquire and determine a tax liability.”
[U.S. v. Slater, 545 Fed.Supp. 179,182 (1982).]

Therefore, it is very important to establish proof that you are not a statutory “national and citizen of the United States** at birth” under 8 U.S.C. §1401. Consequently, the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 in section

1 4.5.3.13 suggests that readers obtain what is called a “Certificate of non-citizen National Status” as certified proof that they
2 are not “U.S. citizens”, and we recommend using this as proof in any judicial proceeding. We also recommend getting
3 certified proof of your “non-citizen national status” into your IRS administrative record long before you involve yourself in
4 any judicial proceeding, so that the judge may not keep it out of evidence or out of view of the jury to prejudice your case.

5 Well, the government is catching on to this and obstructing justice by the following devious means. A number of our readers
6 have contacted us to report that they have attempted to obtain a “Certificate of non-citizen National Status” under the authority
7 of 8 U.S.C. §1452 as suggested in sections 4.5.3.13 and 5.6.12 in the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form
8 #10.005 and that the Secretary of State of the United States positively refuses his duty under this statute to issue the requested
9 certificate. The person we talked to indicated that now the Secretary of the State has posted a notice on their website indicating 10 that they have changed their policy and are no longer issuing such certificates, although they did not explain why. Here is 11 the notice:

12 http://travel.state.gov/noncit\_cert.html

13 There’s obviously a cover-up going on here folks. The slaves have figured out how to remove their legal chains and leave
14 the federal plantation, so our crooked government is blocking their exit by depriving them of the evidence needed to prove
15 that they are not “U.S. citizens” under the Internal Revenue Code. There is still a way to force the Secretary of State to do
16 his duty under 8 U.S.C. §1452 by providing the requested certificate, but it takes a separate lawsuit in a federal court to do
17 so, and that lawsuit is called a “writ of mandamus”. A writ of mandamus is simply a request that the court compel a public
18 servant to perform his duty under the law. Not only that, but the conspiracy against rights surrounding the citizenship issue
19 gets MUCH worse.

20 If you read the above link to the Department of State website, you will find out that the Department of State recommends that
21 for those people who want a “Certificate of non-Citizen National Status” under 8 U.S.C. §1452, they should get a U.S.
22 Passport instead. There is a big problem with that, because the passport simply says “citizen/national” rather than identifying
23 which of the two types of citizens that you are. That doesn’t provide the requisite proof that you are a “national” under 8
24 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B). It’s certified, but it doesn’t distinguish in the way you need at a tax trial.

25 To find a way around this political roadblock to emancipation, we applied for a U.S. Passport as they recommended.
26 However, before we did, we amended the DS-11 application form electronically so as to indicate that both of our parents and
27 our spouse are “nationals” rather than “U.S. citizens” in blocks 14, 15, and 16. This removes the incorrect presumption on 28 the form. We also filled out the form without a Slave Surveillance Number and turned it in. The clerk didn’t even pause, but 29 processed the application and gave us a passport a few hours later. When we came to pick up the passport, we asked the clerk
30 if we could have a copy of the approved DS-11 application form and we asked to have it certified. We wanted it certified so
31 that we could use it as evidence admissible in court of our true status as a “non-resident on-persons” and “nationals” under 8
32 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21). Guess what? Here is what the clerk told us, which is more foot dragging and really surprised us:

33 “It is our policy NOT to provide copies of the application form. If you want a certified copy, then the only way
34 you can get it is through a Privacy Act request.”

35 To make things worse, we asked WHY they have this requirement and from what legal authority it derives, and we got evasive
36 comments back. Therefore, we have written a Privacy Act request that you can reuse which demands a copy of the approved
37 DS-11 Passport Application form from the Department of State, along with several other key documents. You can find that 38 document either in section 3.6.13 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005. That form is also 39 available online below:

40 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Forms/Emancipation/DOSFOIA-Non-CertDS11.htm>

41 One of our readers who attempted to procure the Certificate of “non-citizen National Status” by mail using the form provided
42 in section 5.6.12 of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 also received the following letter back
43 from the Department of State in response to his correspondence:

44 <http://famguardian.org/TaxFreedom/Evidence/Citizenship/dos-AmCitizenResponse.pdf>

1 Based on the crooked behavior of the Department of State in this instance, the government obviously doesn't want to
2 cooperate with people in obtaining proof of their true citizenship status. They know that if the word gets out that this works,
3 and everyone does it, we will have a country of "nontaxpayers" and "nonresident aliens" as we clearly show in section 5.6.13
4 and following! He.. he...he! Scumbags!

5 6.11 Department of Justice (DOJ) Scandals Related to Income Taxes

6 *"Evil men do not understand justice,
7 But those who seek the Lord understand all."
8 [Prov. 28:5, Bible, NKJV]*

9 *"He who justifies the wicked, and he who condemns the just,
10 Both of them alike are an abomination to the Lord."
11 [Prov. 17:15, Bible, NKJV]*

12
13 As we established in section 5.4.21, the Department of Justice has NO delegated authority to prosecute IRC Subtitle A Income
14 Tax Crimes. Below are some examples of some of the illegal and unethical things they have done in the absence of that 15 authority.

16 6.11.1 Prosecution of Dr. Phil Roberts: "Political Tax Prisoner"

17 In the opening of this book, section 1.9 entitled "Political 'Tax' Prisoners" talked about an unfortunate victim of legal abuse
18 by the Department of Justice (DOJ) named Dr. Phil Roberts. Phil is a respected member of the community, a physician, and 19 an intelligent and principled man. We have summarized his case (Federal District Court in Fort Smith, Arkansas, case # 00-
20 20018-001) in that section using information provided by his attorney and relatives. We also have the entire transcript (over
21 700 pages!) of his criminal tax trial posted on our website for you to read (<http://famguardian.org>, look in Tax Freedom and 22 then under the heading "Case Studies"). The transcript and the Trial Notes are instructive educational aids for you to learn
23 how many different constitutional rights of Dr. Roberts were arrogantly and illegally violated by the Department of Justice
24 conspiring with the judge of that court. It is obvious that many laws were violated, and below are just a few of the violations:

- 25 1. Department of Justice:
- 26 1.1. Taking of property not based on law (26 C.F.R. §601.106(f)(1).
  - 27 1.2. Retaliating against a witness, victim, or informant (18 U.S.C. §1513)
  - 28 1.3. Blackmail (18 U.S.C. §873).
  - 29 1.4. Extortion (18 U.S.C. §872)
- 30 2. Judge:
- 31 2.1. Federally protected rights being violated (18 U.S.C. §245)
  - 32 2.2. Conspiracy against rights (18 U.S.C. §241).
  - 33 2.3. Conflict of interest (28 U.S.C. §455).

34 In the year 2000, Dr. Phil Roberts was prosecuted and eventually imprisoned for willful failure to file under 26 U.S.C. §7203,
35 after he took the IRS to court on three different occasions because they kept harassing him about filing his tax return but
36 refused to produce any evidence or a legal basis why they thought he had any tax liability whatsoever. Among the incredible
37 treachery foisted upon him by the judge, we are told, was the following, reported directly to us by his attorney, Oscar Stilley
38 and appearing in the trial transcript itself:

- 39 1. Tried to deny Dr. Roberts the right to counsel of his choice because the judge didn't like his attorney.
- 40 2. Would not allow his attorney to cross-examine prospective jurists during voir dire (his attorney told us this on the phone).
- 41 3. Slipped three pre-selected jurists into the courtroom at the last minute.
- 42 4. Rigged the drawing box for selecting jurists.
- 43 5. Judge kept the instructions he gave to the jury OFF THE RECORD (so he couldn't be prosecuted for jury tampering).
44 See items 69 and 247.
- 45 6. At his arraignment, the court allowed Dr. Roberts to be forced by the DOJ in front of the jury, to sign his tax return (like 46 making Jesus carry his cross before they nailed him to it). All along, they knew he had refused to sign his return, but not
47 to submit it, because he wanted to be made aware what specific law made him liable to pay income tax! How can you
48 prosecute someone for wanting an answer to that question and being stonewalled all the way up to trial by the IRS, who 49 refused to answer the question?
- 50 7. Judge would not allow any laws to be discussed in front of the jury. (item 35).

- 1 8. Would not allow Dr. Roberts to demand or expect the DOJ to produce the law he violated.
- 2 9. Told his attorney that his license would be revoked if he tried to discuss the law because the ability to practice law was
- 3 a “privilege” granted by the court (see item 232).
- 4 10. Refused to allow Dr. Roberts to discuss the legal basis for his reasonable cause belief that he had no income tax liability.
- 5 Ignored repeated requests from his counsel throughout the trial to discuss the Internal revenue Code (a violation of his
- 6 Sixth Amendment rights).
- 7 11. Overruled most of the defense’s objections and almost none of the Department of Justice’s.
- 8 12. Insisted that the defense tell him the questions he wanted to ask of witnesses in a sidebar BEFORE he actually asked
- 9 them.
- 10 13. Ignored Dr. Robert’s Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself by filing a tax return.

11 And the punishment for exercising his First Amendment right to not talk to his government, his Fifth Amendment right to
12 not incriminate himself by not filing a tax return was a prison sentence of about 1 year and a half. Remember that we said
13 that what makes something a right is that the exercise of the right cannot be penalized, regulated, or punished in any way
14 when one freely chooses to exercise the right. Do we really have any rights with such a prejudicial and conspiratorial court
15 system and a Department of Justice that instead of defending criminals, makes us ALL into criminals for exercising our 16 constitutional rights? Below are some of the ridiculous statements made by the judge during the trial, all of which you can
17 read yourself on our website in the actual trial transcript. The following Trial Notes were prepared by Dr. Roberts’ brother,
18 Robert Roberts, to summarize the over 700 pages of transcript on the case. This transcript is very effective at showing that
19 there is indeed a judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax, and that the judge was conspiring with the DOJ to make an
20 example out of Dr. Roberts. They wanted to get him into jail so they could use the fear factor to continue intimidating other
21 citizens to continue “volunteering” to pay taxes for which they weren’t liable. The numbers in the left margin come from the 22 Trial Notes, and are there so we can refer to specific comments afterward:

- 4 122. Court sustains prosecution’s objection to Jones-Stites being required to testify in court for the defense stating: “I’m

6 available to the Eighth Circuit when you appeal this matter.” P289, 10-14
- 7 124. Defense asks the court if the witness admits to selective prosecution against the defendant and the court interjects

9 ask her?” P292, 4-6
- 10 131. Under cross examination, the defense asks her, Jefferee Bolen, if she has ever seen the law that requires you to file

33 can be appealed...” P358, 11-18

27 21-22

29 loudly. P540, 11-13
- 30 199. Court continues to insist, at sidebar, that the defense must present all of its Exhibit list for approval/ disapproval by

40 already discussed time and time again, Sir.” P628, 10-12
- 41 221. Defense questions to the witness (defendant) with regards to discussions he had with a Magistrate judge are 42 interrupted by the court and the court tells the defense counsel three (3) times “... and we're not going there, Mr.
43 Stillely. ...” P629, 22-23
- 44 “... You're not to go there, Mr. Stillely.” P630, 1
- 45
- 46 “... You're not to go there, Mr. Stillely. Ask another question, sir, if you have another 47 question.” P630, 3-4
- 48 222. Defense counsel asks the defendant (witness) if he has ever filed a lawsuit in order to get a declaratory judgment
49 as to his rights and duties under the law. Objected to and sustained by the court. The court then instructs the 50 defense counsel, “Don't argue with me in front of the jury, Mr. Stillely. If you need to argue, come forward,
51 but we've already resolved that.” P622, 22-25 & P633, 7-9
- 52 223. Court states that if it hadn't ruled previously, with regard to bringing up the lawsuits filed by the defendant, that,
53 “Well, if I didn't, I am now. I am telling you it is sustained on nothing concerning any civil lawsuits he may 54 have filed. That's improper. And I'm going to prohibit you from asking any question about it, and your 55 record is about as clear as it can be. ...” P634, 18-23

- 1 224. Court asks the defense counsel, “... Are you getting -- making any progress in getting him off the stand?” He
2 is referring to the defendant who is testifying in his own behalf. P635, 6-7
- 3 225. When the defense responds that he hasn’t gotten there yet, the court responds, “Well, you may not ever get there
4 if you keep asking questions about that have already been -- you know, about issues that have already been
5 resolved.” P635, 10-12
- 6 226. The prosecution’s cross examination of the defendant appear to be irrelevant and most of the questions concern the 7 years outside of the years in question, 1993 and 1994. Defense objections are overruled by the court. P643 - P675
8 (all)
- 9 229. Court interrupts the defendants testimony in order to limit it. The prosecution had raised no objection. P682,

- 12 232. At sidebar, the Court tells the defense counsel, “... This is the most improper-- this is the worst conduct I’ve 13 ever seen of a lawyer, Mr. Stilley. ...” “... (W)e’re going to visit this further at length, Mr. Stilley. The 14 practice of law, sir, is a privilege, especially in Federal Court. You’re close to 15 losing that privilege in this court, Mr. Stilley.” P685, 5-11
- 16 234. At sidebar, the defense counsel asks again if he can ask questions regarding the defendants attempts to get a 17 declaratory judgment to ascertain his responsibilities and is told by the Court, “Absolutely not, N O T, period.”
18
- 19 The defense states that he objects highly and the court responds, “Fine. I want you to object as highly as you
20 need to be, but what else do you have?” P687, 1-6
- 21 235. Court demands, at sidebar, that the defense tell the court where else it’s going. P688, 3-4
- 22 236. At sidebar, the defense explains that many people disagree about matters of tax law without being kooks. The 23 Court responds, “Mr. Stilley, you have -- you’re not going there, sir. What else?” P688, 18-22
- 24 237. At sidebar still, the court asks the defense if that is going to be its last question. The defense answers no and the 25 court responds, “Well, it very well could be, unless you tell me what they are. Now, the jury has been waiting
26 over there for about five minutes and they’re getting impatient and so am I, Mr. Stilley.” P699, 19-25
- 27 238. Court continues to deny the defense’s proposed questions at the sidebar stating, “That’s improper. He’s not to do
28 that.” “I’m not going to permit it. What else you got?” P690,6 &12-13
- 29 240. Court states that it believes that the jury has been abused. P700, 12
- 30 241. Defense tells the Court that it objects to any instruction to the jury with regard to income until it is defined. Court
31 notes the objection and overrules it. P706, 21-25
- 32 242. Court states, absent the jury, that regarding willfulness, “... I don’t know what the law is. I’m going to go look 33 it up.” P716, 20-21
- 34 243. Court states that closing arguments are just that, arguments. Court states, “... I don’t ever like to interrupt 35 closing arguments...” P718, 2-7
- 36 244. Defense is giving its closing argument and asks if there is a law that requires a single person under the age of 65 to 37 make a Federal income tax return for 1994. Prosecution objects and the court sustains the objection stating, “ ...
38 You are not to argue the law, Mr. Stilley.” P739, 14-19
- 39 245. When the prosecution makes its closing argument and the defense objects to statements made by the prosecution,
40 the Court overrules the objection stating, “It’s overruled. This is closing arguments. Be seated, sir.” P748,
41 9-15
- 42 246. Defense objects again and the court overrules the objection stating, “ You’re overruled. Sit down, sir.” P748, 43 22-24
- 44 247. JURY INSTRUCTIONS FROM THE COURT ARE NOT TRANSCRIBED INTO THE TRIAL TRANSCRIPT.

53 After reading item 232, I wonder why ANYONE would want to hire an attorney to represent them in a trial in Federal Court!
54 What a farce!! That’s why this document places such an emphasis on helping to develop in you the skills to masterfully
55 litigate your own case—so you can tell the tax emperor he has no clothes without having your livelihood and your ability to

1 earn a living threatened by a covetous so-called judge with a criminal conflict of interest in violation of 18 U.S.C. §208, 28
2 U.S.C. §144, and 28 U.S.C. §455!

3 Throughout the trial, the judge emphasized that they couldn't talk about the law. What the hell else are courts and the lawyers
4 in them supposed to talk about...hearsay and what we think the law says?(!) All that's left if the judge manipulates and
5 abuses the jury and the law isn't discussed is a kangaroo court that's on a witch hunt to convict and burn the defendant, which
6 is precisely what they did in this case! What a miscarriage and abuse of justice if I ever saw one! The judge, by refusing to
7 discuss the law, has violated the Sixth Amendment because he has made it impossible for a defendant to clearly know what
8 the law says and what the charges against him are—instead, the court devolved into a subjective exercise of whatever the 9 judge thinks the law says or wants the law to say! We are supposed to be a society of laws and not of men but this judge has 10 made sure it is the other way around. This kind of tyranny MUST be stopped!

11 The court stated in item 240 that the "jury has been abused". That's right, and you know who abused them?.. THE JUDGE!
12 And his abuse of them led to an involuntary abuse of Dr. Phil Roberts by the jury! Do we live in a mobocracy, I mean
13 democracy, or a republic? Fire the bastard and strip him of his federal retirement and benefits for plundering the citizenry!
14 THIEF! Now we know why judges wear black robes,.. because they are the executioner in most federal tax trials. When you
15 go into federal court as the defendant, you have TWO prosecutors: The Judge and the U.S. attorney. The deck is stacked 16 against you.

17 6.11.2 Fraud On The Court: Demjanuk v. Petrovsky, 10 F.3d. 338

18 If any reader doubts that officials of the United States government, even U.S. attorneys in the United States Department of 19 Justice, are capable of perpetrating "fraud on the court" by engaging in "misconduct," the case of Demjanuk v. Petrovsky,
20 10 F.3d. 338 (6th Cir.1993) should remove that doubt. Mr. Demjanuk was wrongly identified as "Ivan the Terrible" and 21 charged with murdering thousands of Jews during WW2. The appellate court found that some U.S. attorneys committed 22 "fraud on the court" and "engaged in prosecutorial misconduct by failing to disclose to the courts and to the petitioner
23 [Demjanuk] exculpatory information in their possession during litigation culminating in extradition proceedings, which led 24 to the petitioner's forced departure from the United States and trial on capital charges in the State of Israel." The record shows
25 that "no fewer than eight government attorneys worked on the Demjanuk denaturalization case...." The "exculpatory
26 information" that U.S. attorneys possessed but failed to reveal to the courts (that heard and ruled on Demjanuk's 27 denaturalization and extradition proceedings) and to Demjanuk's attorneys was reasonable evidence that Demjanuk was not
28 the man that the U.S. attorneys claimed him to be, "Ivan the Terrible."

29 As readers may recall, Mr. Demjanuk was extradited to Israel where he was found guilty of the "mass murder of Jews" and 30 sentenced to hang. But the persistent search for truth and justice by Mr. Demjanuk's attorneys and his son-in-law through 31 discovery requests and Freedom of Information Act requests and litigation finally paid off. Fortunately for Mr. Demjanuk,
32 upon appeal of his death sentence the Supreme Court of Israel learned from the withheld documents and statements of guards
33 at Treblinka that "clearly identified" Ivan Marchenko--not John Demjanuk--as "Ivan the Terrible." It is significant that it was 34 the Supreme Court of Israel and not an American court that ultimately saved the life of John Demjanuk. The Demjanuk case
35 proves that some U.S. attorneys had little interest in learning the true identity of a man they were prosecuting for mass murder
36 or the attainment of justice when Demjanuk's life was assumed to be at risk. Shamefully, such attorneys' apparent, chief
37 interest is in obtaining convictions and "winning" cases. It would be interesting to know if the U.S. attorneys who perpetrated
38 fraud on the court in the Demjanuk case were punished and if the U.S. Department of Justice still employs any of them. With 39 such grave, egregious and unethical misconduct as was practiced in Demjanuk by U.S. attorneys who swore to uphold the 40 law, there is small wonder why so many Americans have come to have so little faith in this country's judiciary system.

46 Is the fleeting fantasy of those who seek death.
47 The violence of the wicked will destroy them,
48 Because they refuse to do justice."
49 [Prov. 21:6-7, Bible, NKJV]

50

3 "And you shalt take no bribe, for a bribe blinds the discerning and perverts the words of the righteous." [Exodus

5 "Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison."
6 [Henry David Thoreau]

7 In 1789 Thomas Jefferson warned that the federal judiciary, if given too much power, might ruin our REPUBLIC, and destroy
8 our RIGHTS! Based on the content of the following subsections and the behavior of the IRS, we believe the very tyrannical
9 situation that Thomas Jefferson warned us about below has come true!

10 "The new Constitution has secured these [individual rights] in the Executive and Legislative departments: but 11 not in the Judiciary. It should have established trials by the people themselves, that is to say, by jury."

12 "The Judiciary of the United States is the subtle corps of sappers and miners constantly working under ground
13 to undermine the foundations of our confederated fabric." (1820)

14 "...the Federal Judiciary; an irresponsible body (for impeachment is scarcely a scarecrow), working like gravity
15 by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step like a thief, over
16 the field of jurisdiction, until all shall be usurped from the States, and the government of all be consolidated into 17 one....when all government ... in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power,
18 it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another and will become as venal and 19 oppressive as the government from which we separated." (1821)

20 "The opinion which gives to the judges the right to decide what laws are constitutional and what not, not only for 21 themselves in their own sphere of action, but for the legislative and executive also in their spheres, would make 22 the judiciary a despotic branch.

23 "...judges should be withdrawn from the bench whose erroneous biases are leading to dissolution. It may, indeed,
24 injure them in fame or fortune; but it saves the Republic..."

25 The U.S. Supreme Court described succinctly how the government most often acts unconstitutionally and illegally, and we
26 should heed and learn from their description below:

27 "It may be that it...is the obnoxious thing in its mildest and least repulsive form; but illegitimate and
28 unconstitutional practices get their first footing in that way; namely, by silent approaches and slight deviations
29 from legal modes of procedure. This can only be obviated by adhering to the rule that constitutional provisions
30 for the security of person and property should be liberally construed. A close and literal construction deprives
31 them of half their efficacy, and leads to gradual depreciation of the right, as if it consisted more in sound than in
32 substance. It is the duty of the courts to be watchful for the constitutional rights of the citizens, and against any 33 stealthy encroachments thereon. Their motto should be obsta principalis." [Mr. Justice Brewer, dissenting,
34 quoting Mr. Justice Bradley in boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616, 29 L.Ed. 746, 6 Sup.Ct.Rep. 524"
35 [Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906) ]

36 It is therefore the job of the courts to be watchful over our liberties and to act as a check and balance against unconstitutional
37 acts by either the Executive or Legislative branches of government. This is a fiduciary duty they have for the citizens and 38 inhabitants they serve within their jurisdiction. We'll let you be the judge in this section of how well they have fulfilled that 39 duty.

40 Whole books have been written just about judicial conspiracy and tyranny. We have tried to narrow the scope of this section
41 to summarize the picture for you only within the context of the income tax. If you would like to dig deeper into this subject 42 of judicial tyranny, the best book we have found is:

46 6.12.1 Abuse of "Case Law"<sup>399</sup>

1 In any court of law, an understanding of the legal relationship between statutory law and case law (i.e. court decisions) is
2 crucial. The following U.S. Supreme Court case of Consumer Products Safety v. GTE Sylvania, 447 U.S. 102, establishes
3 that the statute takes precedence over the case law backing the statute:

4 "We begin with the familiar canon of statutory construction that the starting point for interpreting a statute is the
5 language of the statute itself. Absent a clearly expressed legislative intention to the contrary, the language must 6 ordinarily be regarded as conclusive.

7 So if and only if there is doubt about the meaning of the statute is there a need to refer to case law to resolve the controversy.
8 This is especially true of the Supreme Law of the Land, which is the Constitution. In actual practice, however, corrupt judges
9 and the federal courts where they occupy the bench commonly subvert this requirement in order to expand federal fiscal and
10 monetary power, and in the process, conspire against the rights of Americans in illegally enforcing a voluntary tax, the 11 Subtitles A through C personal income tax. To give you an example, take the case of Griffith v. C.I.R., 598 F. Supp. 405,
12 where one Charles Griffith attempted to prevent the IRS from illegally seizing his assets without due process in order to 13 collect a $500 penalty that had been assessed against him for allegedly filing a false W-4. As stated in that court decision:

14 "According to plaintiff's complaint, on September 3, 1982, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) sent plaintiff a
15 letter claiming that his W-4 did not meet the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code Sec. 3402 and informing 16 him that his employer be directed to disregard [notice the court did not say "ordered" to] the W-4 form and
17 withhold monies from his paycheck as if he were single and claiming one (1) withholding allowance. By letter
18 dated September 14, 1982, plaintiff informed the IRS of his reasons for completing the W-4 in alleged illegal
19 manner. However, the IRS notified his employer to proceed withholding as if plaintiff were single...and was 20 assessed a penalty of five hundred dollars ($500) under 26 U.S.C. §6682(a).

21 Note that the court suggests that Griffith completed his W-4 in an "allegedly illegal manner." How exactly does one complete
22 an IRS Form W-4 in an "illegal manner"? Did Griffith hit the personnel clerk over the head with a hammer, strip the clothes
23 off and then complete his W-4 on her naked body? And if it were completed in an "allegedly illegal manner," why wasn't 24 he arrested? It is clear that Griffith's W-4 did "meet the requirements of Section 3402." Griffith obviously knew (as you 25 also know) that he was not liable for income taxes, and so probably claimed "exempt" in accordance with 26 U.S.C. §3402(n).
26 Note that the court states that the "plaintiff informed the IRS of his reasons for completing the form." So why didn't the 27 court state those reasons in its decision, since Section 6682 only applies when such reasons are not "reasonable"? But not
28 only did the court refuse to consider whether Griffith's reasons were "reasonable," it refused to even mention them! I wonder
29 why? Who, therefore, decided that Griffith "reasons" were not "reasonable"? An IRS cleaning lady?

30 In finding against Griffith the DISHonorable Judge White wrote:

31 Plaintiff's claim that the manner of collection of the penalty violates his Fifth Amendment rights is without merit.
32 He has attempted to show that the government cannot prevail in the collection of the penalty because to do so
33 prior to a hearing would deprive him of his Fifth Amendment constitutional rights. Case law dictates
34 otherwise...The power of the government to levy is essential to the self assessment tax system because it
35 encourages voluntary compliance.

36 So the court, in deciding to allow the IRS to seize Griffith's property without any hearing whatsoever, admits that it does so
37 on the basis of what "case law dictates"—never mind what the statute itself "dictates" or what the Constitution "dictates",
38 which the judge took an oath "to support and defend"! Section 6682 only allows the penalty if there is no "reasonable basis"
39 for the claim, which the court here refuses to even consider!

40 It should also be pointed out in this case that Griffith represented himself against the government as a pro per. He undoubtedly 41 believed he could do so, since he was convinced (and rightly so) that he had several statutes, the Constitution, and logic all
42 on his side. But he learned (as we all do sooner or later), that these often do not count much in federal court because of the 43 massive corruption and outright tyranny that exists there. Incidentally, did you happen to get the feeling when you read the 44 above, that you were reading right out of Alice in Wonderland?

45 Clearly, Griffith's argument is not only "not without merit"; it is legally correct. But federal judges can easily dispatch such 46 arguments by labeling them "frivolous" or stating they are "without merit" and not explaining the basis for that determination.
47 This leaves the average pro per litigant, not to mention most attorneys, without any recourse except to shake their head and 48 file a lawsuit for breach of fiduciary duty and corruption against the judge.

49 6.12.2 The Federal Mafia Courts Stole Your Seventh Amendment Right to Trial by Jury!

1 The Federal Mafia Courts stole your Seventh Amendment right to trial by jury. Here is what the Seventh Amendment says
2 about the right of trial by jury:

3 *In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall
4 be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than* 5 according to the rules of the common law.
6 [Seventh Amendment]

7 And here is what the U.S. Constitution, Article 3, Section 2, Clause 3 says about the right of trial by jury:

8 “The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the*
9 State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall 10 be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.”
11 [Article III, Section 2, Clause 3, U.S. Constitution]

12 Here is what the tyrants in the Fifth Circuit court of federal appeals said about your Seventh Amendment right to jury trial in 13 the case of Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978) in relation to a civil tax trial held in U.S. Tax
14 Court:

15 *Taxpayers also assert they were denied their Seventh Amendment right to trial by jury before the Tax Court. The 16 Seventh Amendment preserves the right to jury trial "in suits at common law." Since there was no right of 17 action at common law against a sovereign, enforceable by jury trial or otherwise, there is no constitutional
18 right to a jury trial in a suit against the United States. See 9 C. Wright & A. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure*
19 § 2314, at 68-69 (1971). Thus, there is a right to a jury trial in actions against the United States only if a statute
20 so provides. Congress has not so provided when the taxpayer elects not to pay the assessment and sue for a
21 redetermination in the Tax Court. For a taxpayer to obtain a trial by jury, he must pay the tax allegedly owed
22 and sue for a refund in district court. 28 U.S.C. §§ 2402 and 1346(a)(1). The law is therefore clear that a taxpayer
23 who elects to bring his suit in the Tax Court has no right, statutory or constitutional, to a trial by jury. Phillips v.
24 Commissioner, 283 U.S. 589, 599 n. 9, 51 S.Ct. 608, 75 L.Ed. 1289 (1931); Wickwire v. Reinecke, 275 U.S. 101,
25 105-106, 48 S.Ct. 43, 72 L.Ed. 184 (1927); Dorl v. Commissioner, 507 F.2d. 406, 407 (2d Cir. 1974) (holding it
26 "elementary that there is no right to a jury trial in the Tax Court.")
27 [Mathes v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 576 F.2d. 70 (1978)]

28 Therefore, we only get a trial by jury when litigating against the U.S. government for wrongful taking of taxes if
29 Congress gives its permission by statute! Do you think they will ever do that? Fat chance! The Constitution no longer
30 guarantees a trial by jury if the matter being litigated is taxes and the litigant is suing the federal government. We have the 31 wranglings of corrupt judges like the one above to thank for that. Such abuses directly contradict the U.S. Constitution, which
32 states:

33 Article 1, Section 9, Clause 8: “No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding
34 any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present,
35 Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince or foreign State.”

36 In this case, the Title of Nobility is “Sovereign”! Here’s what the definition of Nobility is, right from Black’s Law Dictionary,
37 Sixth Edition, p. 1047:

38 “In English law, a division of the people, comprehending dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts, and barons. These
39 *had anciently duties annexed to their respective honors. They are created either by writ, i.e., by royal summons
40 to attend the house of peers, or by letters patent, i.e., by royal grant of any dignity and degree of peerage; and 41 they enjoy many privileges exclusive of their senatorial capacity. Since 1963 no new hereditary ennoblements*
42 have been created.”
43 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1047]

44 In the above case, the “royal decree” creating the “Title of Nobility” is a judgment by the courts, and the “exclusive privilege”
45 granted to the government (by itself, which by the way is a conflict of interest) is that of:

- 46 1. Not being directly accountable to a jury or the people it is elected to represent like everyone else for its wrongdoing
47 2. Not being able to be sued by the real sovereigns (the people) without its own consent.

48 “While sovereign powers are delegated to ... the government, sovereignty itself remains with the people.”
49 [Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, page 370]

Hypocrisy and lawlessness! With the above startling realizations in mind, do you think it is EVER possible to guarantee a fair trial or a balance of power if you are litigating against the IRS or the federal government in their own federal court? Absolute power corrupts absolutely, and there is no better example of that philosophy in action than in the federal courts. The deck in federal court is obviously stacked, which explains why so many irrational and unconstitutional rulings occur in the context of income tax litigation in the federal courts. Another thing that this section ought to convince you of is that it is more productive in a federal court to go after the individual government officials involved for corruption, fraud, and extortion under the color of office than it is to go after the government. If they violate the law, they can be held personally liable, and because you are not suing a sovereign, the United States Government, you can be assured your right to a Trial by Jury.

Do you STILL think we live in a free country? Our government is no different than having a monarch with absolute power to do whatever it wants with sovereign immunity from prosecution for wrongdoing granted by our corrupt federal courts!

6.12.3 You Cannot Obtain Declaratory Judgments in Federal Income Tax Trials Held in Federal Courts

Your wonderful Congress legislated away your right to obtain a Declaratory judgment in a federal income tax trial. A declaratory judgment is one where there are no disputes over fact and the only relief sought is a declaration of status or rights of the plaintiff under law. No jury trial occurs and the court (judge) makes the declaration of status or right by motion and without a trial. An example might be a declaration of your status by the court as a nonresident alien, a person not liable for federal income tax, etc.

Congress knows that people don't like to pay taxes and that they will be likely to litigate to protect their Constitutional rights, so they put a statutory roadblock in front of patriots who use Constitutional rights to avoid paying taxes and who want to litigate to get a declaratory judgment identifying them as persons not liable for income taxes. This roadblock guarantees that those who don't know what they are doing will lose in federal court, especially in cases where issues of status as a nonresident alien or personal liability for tax are asserted. That roadblock is 28 U.S.C. §2201 as follows, and it prevents federal courts from declaring the rights or status of a plaintiff to remedy a wrong related to taxes or illegal taking of taxes by the federal government in a federal court:

*United States Code
TITLE 28 - JUDICIARY AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE
PART VI - PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS
CHAPTER 151 - DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS
Sec. 2201. Creation of remedy*

(a) In a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes other than actions brought under section 7428 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a proceeding under section 505 or 1146 of title 11, or in any civil action involving an antidumping or countervailing duty proceeding regarding a class or kind of merchandise of a free trade area country (as defined in section 516A(f)(10) of the Tariff Act of 1930), as determined by the administering authority, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such.

(b) For limitations on actions brought with respect to drug patents see section 505 or 512 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

What this means is that a federal court can't issue a declaratory judgment relating to federal taxes or declare your rights or status (e.g. the Bill of Rights, and the first ten Amendments to the U.S. Constitution) or the status of its own jurisdiction to hear your case with respect to federal income taxes. So in other words, declaratory judgments based on lack of jurisdiction or based on citizenship or assertion of constitutional rights cannot be decided in federal court solely by a judge! Such cases must be heard in state court or a common law court!

When you think about this statute, it actually makes sense. The statute doesn't allow a federal judge to solely decide rights or jurisdiction or citizenship status on a federal income issue because it would present a conflict of interest that would not serve the interests of justice and would violate 28 U.S.C. 455. Why? Because the judge's paycheck comes from the matter he is deciding on! Do you think he is going to rule in favor of the Citizen by saying he doesn't have to pay income taxes? The Congress therefore required an outside entity, such as a state court, to decide on issues of status. Don't be discouraged by the above, however. There is a way around this statutory trap. Below is the way around the roadblock:

1 While income tax arguments are barred under this rule - actions proving lack of citizenship, domicile, and residence are
2 specifically allowed. The issue is not income tax but jurisdiction over the person. Lack of jurisdiction is proved by FRCP
3 Rule 44 and 44.1 - You go to the proper jurisdiction to resolve the matter by taking the following steps:

- 4 1. Acquire domicile and residence in a common law jurisdiction.
- 5 2. File notice in the clerk's office in state and federal courts.
- 6 3. Argue this in Federal court using as evidence the filings filed at common law, state court and federal courts.
- 7 4. Appeal at common law under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60 last line "by independent action".

8 You are then not arguing jurisdiction in front of that court - you are using evidence to prove that jurisdiction already exists
9 in another court. Read 28 U.S.C. §2201 and it states that it must be argued in the proper manner - and that is by not letting 10 the US court decide that issue - go to common law and plead condition precedent under FRCP rule 8.(The citizenship was 11 already decided before the action began).

12 This argument is in agreement with all of the cites herein and the argument that dual citizenship can exist. State law tells you
13 the procedure for noticing the state courts that you have acquired a new residence and domicile.

14 6.12.4 The Changing Definition of "Direct, Indirect, and Excise Taxes"

15 "Dishonest scales are an abomination to the Lord, but a just weight is His delight."
16 [Prov. 11:1, Bible, NKJV]

17 "Judicial verbicide is calculated to convert the Constitution into a worthless scrap of paper and to replace our 18 government of laws with a judicial oligarchy."
19 [Senator Sam Ervin, during Watergate hearing]

20 "By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil."
21 [Prov. 16:6, Bible, NKJV]

22 *"Thus says the Lord: 'Execute judgment in the morning; and deliver him who is plundered illegally by the IRS
23 out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go forth like fire and burn so that no one can quench it, because of 24 the evil of your doings.'
25 [Jeremiah 21:12, Bible, NKJV]

26 The purpose of this section is to provide evidence to support the conclusion that there is a conspiracy of massive proportions
27 by the federal judiciary to defend and uphold federal income taxes. We hinted at the existence of this conspiracy in section
28 5.6.11.9 entitled "Why Hasn't the 861 Issue Been Challenged in Court Already?". Now we will prove the existence of this 29 conspiracy by researching actual cases and by reading from judgments of the federal courts at various levels over the years.

30 Because the judiciary is authorized by the Constitution to "legislate", federal judges and the legal profession have crafted a
31 different approach to support and expand the operation of the federal income tax. It's called "redefining the meaning of 32 words". Over time, they have redefined such words as "direct tax", "excise tax", and "indirect tax" to expand the applicability
33 of federal taxes and, by implication, the jurisdiction of the federal government to tax its citizens. Our own ignorance of the 34 concept of "stare decisis", also called "precedent", and our lack of attentiveness to their transgressions through the political
35 process has allowed them to get away with this devious fraud. We will therefore take a look at how the definitions of these
36 terms have evolved and have been "optimized" over the years by federal judges as a way to maximize illegal government
37 revenues from income taxes. This notion of changing the definition of words is not new. Instead, it is just another devious
38 trick that covetous lawyers use to enslave us by hiding and obfuscating the truth over time. Instead of using language as a
39 way to empower and free people and respect their liberties, lawyers abuse words as a way to trick, enslave, confuse, and 40 control people. We talked about this devious approach in section 2.11.3, entitled "How to Teach Your Child About Politics",
41 when we said:

42 "When your child has matured sufficiently to understand how the judicial system works, set a bedtime for him
43 and then send him to bed an hour early. When he tearfully accuses you of breaking the rules, explain that you
44 made the rules and you can interpret them in any way that seems appropriate to you, according to changing
45 conditions. This will prepare him for the Supreme Court's concept of the U.S. Constitution as a "living document."

46 [...]

This brings me to the most important child-rearing technique of all: lying. Lie to your child constantly. Teach him that words mean nothing - or rather that the meanings of words are continually 'evolving', and may be tomorrow the opposite of what they are today.

Some readers may object that this is a poor way to raise a child. A few may even call it child abuse. But that's the whole point: Child abuse is the best preparation for adult life under our form of GOVERNMENT."

If the above quote doesn't make the judicial conspiracy, I don't know what does! The below humorous anecdote carries this violation of due process to its extreme, and isn't too far from the truth!:

NEW RULES FOR LAW

SMUCKWAP NEWSERVICE, Washington: The Supreme Court ruled today that judges can do whatever the hell they want. In a landmark case, Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, the justices handed down their inestimable judgment that since lawyers in general and judges in particular are such fine examples of humanity, not to mention smart enough to get through law school, judges can do whatever they please.

"The Rule of Law has ended," proclaimed Supreme Court Justice Arrogant B. Astart, "and the Rule of Judges begins!"

Turning their shiny black backs on the rest of America, the justices decided to toss out two hundred years of Constitutional law and indeed, to rid themselves completely of having to heed the Constitution.

"The law is what we say it is," said Justice Whiney I. Diot. "It has been this way for some time now, but with Black-Robed Lawyers vs. Everyone Else, we are coming out of our judicial closet. No more arguments will be allowed from anyone, and we don't want to hear any more of your complaining about your rights. In fact, any mention of so-called rights will guarantee you 100 years, hard labor."

Justice K. Rupt Assin concurred in his opinion that "judicial oligarchy has now fully come into its place in American history and will be fully enforced by an iron rule of law, and remember, law is whatever we say it is."

The Center for People Who Want to Leave This Country Because It Is Beginning to Look Too Much Like Nazi Germany analyzed the justices' decision.

"Judges now legally can put anyone in prison for any reason they want, for as long as they want," states the analysis. "Judges can also put jurors in prison for 'obstructing justice' and for anything else, including not handing the judge whatever money they may have on them at the time. Jurors who don't behave exactly as the judge desired have been persecuted in the past, but "now they can receive prison terms much longer than their own lifespan added to the lifespan(s) of the defendant(s) in any trial.

The report also mentioned the justices' decision that anyone who says anything disagreeable in their courtroom can be immediately arrested and jailed, their property confiscated, and their spouses and children taken as "wards" of the court under the justices own personal pleasure ... or... supervision.

The concept of separation of powers was addressed in the Center's report on the decision.

"There is no separation of powers," it reads, "when not only all the justices are lawyers, so are all Congressmen and the President, his wife, his cabinet, the entire Department of Justice, most lobbyists and almost everyone else in Washington, D.C."

When questioned about what effect the decision would have on all Americans, the spokesman for the Center said, "I can't be certain. I suspect that emigration rather than immigration will become a major concern. Those Americans who are lawyers will be fine, for the most part. No one will ever again show up for jury duty. But if we thought we had an overcrowded prison problem before, we're in for a *major* shock!"

Another way the federal judiciary has conspired with Congress to usurp such arbitrary and unconstitutional authority over time has been for Congress to write the laws in a deliberately vague way in order to leave a lot of undue discretion to the courts to interpret and misapply and broaden the applicability of these laws. Here are the two main ways this has deliberately been done in the case of the tax codes:

- 1. Title 26 of the U.S. Codes, which are written by Congress, don't clearly define "income." Does it mean "profit"? Does it mean "wage"? What about "sources" of income? If it means profit, then we must deduct from our wages the cost of sustaining our life, which includes food, clothing, housing, insurance, etc., since we must view ourselves as producers of labor for sale, which is not free but involves a cost to sustain and maintain the ability to provide that labor.

2. The purpose of the laws is to clearly define or to limit the authority of the government and to define precisely and unambiguously which actions are criminal. Congress has written the tax codes in such a way that they do not satisfy this requirement, but instead expand and enlarge the authority of the federal government to tax in a way that can't be completely defined or even understood by the common man. They have done this by deliberately monkeying with the definition of the word "includes" found in 26 U.S.C. §7701(c). This word in normal usage is a term of limitation, but as we showed in section 3.12.1.8, Congress has used it as a term of enlargement, as if to say:

"The Internal Revenue Code laws aren't a limiting factor and do not bound or define the authority of Congress to tax. Instead, these laws mean whatever the judge says they mean at the time, which can arbitrarily change over time without explanation or justification. Our powers to tax are unlimited and beyond your ability to comprehend or understand and beyond our obligation to explain to you. We don't care if this violates the Fifth, Sixth, and Tenth Amendments and your due process rights. Always remember that WE'RE the government and WE are in complete control and the ONLY ones who are sovereign or empowered or who know what the laws that we write really say! We don't work for you, YOU are OUR financial slaves and YOU will do exactly and only what you are told to do by our chief priests in the federal courts, who are the only ones qualified to interpret the law, who we appoint, and who can only hold office as long as they do exactly what we tell them to do by keeping tax dollars they extort from you under duress flowing into our Treasury.

And by the way, your lawyer can't help you in challenging our sovereign authority to tax because we license him to practice law both in this state and in this court and if he in any way questions or threatens our authority to tax or our jurisdiction, we will simply pull his license and blacklist him with the IRS, and he will therefore cease to be able to earn a living and be subject to the same kind of financial terrorism, harassment, and intimidation that you are undergoing. You can't win this war, my friend, because our power is absolute and we will squash you like a bug if you don't 'voluntarily comply'! Nevertheless, you can do whatever you want because we live in a 'free' country and you are a free man, and we are here to benevolently protect that freedom. The minute you start complaining about losing that freedom, then we'll turn your 'rights' into government 'privileges' and charge you an additional tax to have these privileges upheld and respected in our courts."

You will note that a remedy is suggested for this kind of government arrogance, legal abuse, and terrorism in section 4.5, of the Sovereignty Forms and Instructions Manual, Form #10.005 when we talk about "What would it take for the IRS and the US Congress to 'come clean'" by saying that Congress needs to reform their definition of the word "includes", which even they don't use in a consistent fashion in the case of 26 U.S.C. §61, which says in part:

(a) General definition - ... gross income means all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) the following items:

Isn't that interesting? If 26 U.S.C. §7701 (c) indeed says the word "includes" is not a limiting term, then why do the shyster lawyers in Congress and the IRS need to use the phrase "including (but not limited to)"? I'll tell you why, because they don't want you to understand what the law really means or know what you are expected to do, but would rather see you terrorized into submission to whatever it is their arbitrary whims dictate. This legal terrorism and the fear it generates is foisted upon us with our own extorted tax dollars by lawyers in the Department of (In)Justice and the courts in the process of illegally enforcing (no Delegation of Authority orders to the DOJ to support litigation of voluntary income taxes) laws that are so vague that they violate the "void for vagueness" criteria we described in section 5.12.3, entitled "Why the 'Void for Vagueness Doctrine' Should be Invoked By The Courts to Render the Internal Revenue Code Unconstitutional in Total". This has to be one of the biggest frauds and scams in history and the tyranny won't end until We The People remedy this most basic violation of our right to due process guaranteed by the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. We must do this first at the ballot box, then the jury box, and finally with the cartridge box (guns) if need be to coerce the government to respect our Constitutional rights!

6.12.4.1 Definition of terms and legal framework

Recall from Chapters 3 and 5 that we spent a lot of time talking about "direct taxes" and "excise taxes" and the relationship between the two. Another synonym for an excise tax is "privilege tax". In particular, we compared and contrasted these two types of taxes in section 5.1.2, which we will not repeat here. Understanding the relationship between these two types of taxes is foundational to understanding why income taxes are unconstitutional as they are implemented by the IRS, and why they are upheld by the federal district/circuit courts in some cases. We also talked about the five types of constitutional taxes in section 5.1

Much of the deliberately-induced confusion created in the courts results from the rather basic misunderstanding in most people's minds over the term "United States". We talked this issue in sections 4.7 entitled "The Three 'United States'" and section 3.12.1.23 entitled "'United States' (in 26 U.S.C. §7701)". You have to remember that the judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax can only be upheld and spread if the courts avoid discussing the true definition of this term within the meaning of 26 Title U.S.C. and the nature of the limited application of the income tax to federal/U.S.** (federal zone) citizens). Within the I.R.C, the term "United States**" actually means the "federal zone", which includes the District of Columbia and the federal territories and possessions within the contiguous 50 union states, but not the 50 sovereign states themselves. The courts, however, don't want your average sovereign natural born Citizen of the 50 union states knowing that the federal income tax only applies within the federal zone to people who claim to be U.S.** citizens, so they have done things in their rulings such as:

1. Not mention or confuse the U.S. citizenship or residency status of the defendant. The most famous case of this was the case of Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), in which Frank Brushaber claimed to be a Sovereign naturalized citizen of the New York Republic (state) and NOT a U.S./federal citizen. The government tried to confuse his status as a nonresident alien for tax purposes by claiming that he was a French immigrant who never obtained state citizenship.
2. Avoid discussing jurisdictional issues. For instance, ignoring claims by a Citizen that the U.S. government lacks jurisdiction to prosecute a Citizen for not paying income taxes.
3. Make cases won by the Citizen rather than the IRS unpublished so other Citizens don't find out the most effective tactics to litigate the income tax issues.

In this section, we will trace several U.S. supreme and appellate court cases to show that primarily the federal appellate and district the courts have established a new and changing definition for these terms that conflicts both with the original definition of the terms used by the founding fathers, the rulings of the Supreme Court, and with the modern-day definition that the "common man" understands of these terms. We will show how they have done this on their own accord and without any authority derived from the Constitution, congress, the rulings of the supreme Court, or the law itself. We will show that the definitions of the terms "direct" and "excise" taxes over time has been slowly modified by the courts in such a way that revenues from income taxes for the federal government have not only been increased, but MAXIMIZED. We will show that this approach violates the important concept of "stare decisis" that is foundational to our republic and our whole legal system. We will show that this behavior by the courts is consistent with their alleged role as part of the "federal mafia", whose mission is to expand the plunder and extortion of the property of private citizens in disregard of the U.S. Constitution. Simply by changing the definitions and interpretation of these two terms in their judgments, the federal courts have, in effect, "legislated" by setting new precedents, to uphold and expand the federal income tax system.

So let's start with a definition of the terms "stare decisis" and "precedent":

STARE DECISIS: Lat: to abide by, or adhere to, decided cases. Policy of courts to stand by precedent and not to disturb settled point. Neff v. George, 364 Ill. 306, 4 N.E.2d. 388, 390, 391. Doctrine that, when court has once laid down a principle of law as applicable to a certain state of facts, it will adhere to that principle, and apply it to all future cases, where facts are substantially the same; regardless of whether the parties and property are the same. Horne v. Moody, Tex.Civ.App., 146 S.W.2d. 505, 509, 510. Under doctrine a deliberate or solemn decision of court made after argument on question of law fairly arising in the case, and necessary to its determination, is an authority, or binding precedent in the same court, or in other courts of equal or lower rank in subsequent cases where the very point is again in controversy. State v. Mellenberger, 163 Or. 233, 95 P.2d. 709, 719, 720. Doctrine is one of policy, grounded on theory that security and certainty require that accepted and established legal principle, under which rights may accrue, be recognized and followed, though later found to be not legally sound, but whether previous holding of court shall be adhered to, modified, or overruled is within court's discretion under circumstances of case before it. Otter Tail Power Co. v. Von Bank, 72 N.D. 497, 8 N.W.2d. 599, 607. Under doctrine, when point of law has been settled by decision, it forms precedent which is not afterwards to be departed from, and, while it should ordinarily be strictly adhered to, there are occasions when departure is rendered necessary to vindicate plain, obvious principles of law and remedy continued injustice. The doctrine is not ordinarily departed from where decision is of long-standing and rights have been acquired under it, unless considerations of public policy demand it. Colonial Trust Co. v. Flanagan, 344 Pa. 556, 25 A.2d. 728, 729. The doctrine is limited to actual determinations in respect to litigated and necessarily decided questions, and is not applicable to dicta or obiter dicta. See also Precedent,; Res (Res judicata) [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1406]

PRECEDENT: An adjudged case or decision of a court, considered as furnishing an example or authority for an identical or similar case afterwards arising or a similar question of law. Courts attempt to decide cases on the basis of principles established in prior cases. Prior cases which are close in facts or legal principles to the

1 case under consideration are called precedents. A rule of law established for the first time by a court for a
2 particular type of case and thereafter referred to in deciding similar cases. See also Stare decisis.

3 A course of conduct once followed which may serve as a guide for future conduct. See Custom and usage; Habit.

5 [Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1176]

6 From these definitions, we can see that stare decisis and precedent are very important aspects of law that constrain what the 7 federal courts can do. Together, they establish that cases must follow precedents unless there is a compelling reason not to,
8 and that the reasons for overruling past precedents ought to be clearly explained so that the lower courts will understand how
9 to apply the new paradigm.

10 Now let's move to the words themselves. We'll start off by examining the definition of "excise tax" found in Merriam
11 Webster's Dictionary of Law<sup>400</sup>:

12 ['ek-'sɪz, -'sɪs]

13 1: a tax levied on the manufacture, sale, or consumption of a commodity
14 (compare income tax, property tax)

15 2: any of various taxes on privileges often assessed in the form of a license or other fee
16 (see also Article I of the Constitution)
17 (compare direct tax)

18
19 [emphasis added]

20 Similarly, Barron's Law dictionary defines "excise" as follows:

21 "Broadly, "any kind of tax which is not directly on property or the rents or incomes from real estate." 4A. 2d
22 861, 862. "An inland impost upon articles of manufacture or sale and also upon licenses to pursue certain trades,
23 or to deal in certain commodities." 184 U.S. 608, 617. It is imposed directly and without assessment and is 24 measured by amount of business done and other means. 161 So. 735, 738. See tax [EXCISE TAX]<sup>401</sup>

25 "a federal tax imposed upon the purchase of certain items. See excise."

26 Excise taxes are commonly referred to as "indirect" taxes within the meaning of the U.S. Constitution (see section 5.1 for 27 further details). From the preceding discussion, it ought to be clear that excise taxes apply to businesses involved in trade
28 and the amount of tax is to be determined by any measure related to activity that the legislature determines. For instance, the 29 (fraudulently ratified) 16th Amendment allows excise taxes to be measured by income, but does NOT allow for direct taxes
30 without apportionment as ruled in the case of Stanton v. Baltic Mining (240 U.S. 103), 1916. In particular, the court said in 31 that case that the 16th Amendment merely:

32 "...prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of 33 the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..."

34 A good definition of "excise taxes" is found in the Supreme Court case of Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911):

35 "Excises are taxes laid upon the manufacture, sale or consumption of commodities within the country, upon
36 licenses to pursue certain occupations and upon corporate privileges; the requirement to pay such taxes involves 37 the exercise of the privilege and if business is not done in the manner described no tax is payable...it is the 38 privilege which is the subject of the tax and not the mere buying, selling or handling of goods."
39 [Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)]

40 The Supreme Court case of Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124 (1929) provides another good definition of the operation of 41 "excise taxes":

42 "While taxes levied upon or collected from persons because of their general ownership of property may be taken
43 to be direct, Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673; Id., 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912,
44 this court has consistently held, almost from the foundation of the government, that a tax imposed upon a
45 particular use of property or the exercise of a single power over property incidental to ownership, is an excise

9 It is a tax laid only upon the exercise of a single one of those powers incident to ownership, the power to give the
10 property owned to another. Under this statute all the other rights and powers which collectively constitute [280
11 U.S. 124, 137] property or ownership may be fully enjoyed free of the tax. So far as the constitutional power to 12 tax is concerned, it would be difficult to state any intelligible distinction, founded either in reason or upon
13 practical considerations of weight, between a tax upon the exercise of the power to give property inter vivos and 14 the disposition of it by legacy, upheld in Knowlton v. Moore, supra, the succession tax in Scholey v. Rew, supra,
15 the tax upon the manufacture and sale of colored oleomargarine in McCray v. United States, supra, the tax upon
16 sales of grain upon an exchange in Nicol v. Ames, supra, the tax upon sales of shares of stock in Thomas v. United
17 States, supra, the tax upon the use of foreign built yachts in Billings v. United States, supra, the tax upon the use
18 of carriages in Hylton v. United States, supra; compare Veazie Bank v. Fenno, supra, 545 of 8 Wall.; Thomas v.
19 United States, supra, 370 of 192 U. S., 24 S.Ct. 305.

20 It is true that in each of these cases the tax was imposed upon the exercise of one of the numerous rights of 21 property, but each is clearly distinguishable from a tax which falls upon the owner merely because he is owner,
22 regardless of the use of disposition made of his property. See Billings v. United States, supra; cf. Pierce v. United 23 States, 232 U.S. 290, 34 S.Ct. 427. The persistence of this distinction and the justification for it rest upon the
24 historic fact that taxes of this type were not understood to be direct taxes when the Constitution was adopted and,
25 as well, upon the reluctance of this court to enlarge by construction, limitations upon the sovereign power of 26 taxation by article I, 8, so vital to the maintenance of the national government. Nicol v. Ames, supra, 514, 515 of 27 173 U. S., 19, S.Ct. 522."

28 Merriam Webster's Dictionary of Law defines "direct tax" as follows<sup>402</sup>:

29 "a tax imposed on a taxpayer himself or herself or on his or her property
30 (compare excise)"

31 The Supreme Court did a good job describing "direct taxes" in the case of Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 75 U.S. 533 (1869):

32 "This review shows that personal property, contracts, occupations, and the like, have never been regarded by 33 Congress as proper subjects of direct tax.

34 ...

35 It may be rightly affirmed, therefore, that in the practical construction of the Constitution by Congress, direct 36 taxes have been limited to taxes on land and appurtenances, and taxes on polls, or capitation taxes."

37 We believe that these are good definitions that are consistent with the wishes of the founding fathers.

38 6.12.4.2 The Early Supreme Court View of Direct vs. Indirect/Excise Taxes Prior to Passage of the 16th
39 Amendment 1913

40 With the legal definitions complete, let's examine the historical background for the subject of direct and indirect/excise taxes
41 by the Supreme Court prior to the (fraudulent) passage of the 16th Amendment. We'll start off with the case of Pacific Ins.
42 Co. v. Soule, 74 U.S. 433 (1868), which is a very good reference on the definition of "direct taxes" and "indirect taxes":

43 The ordinary test of the difference between direct and indirect taxes, is whether the tax falls ultimately on the 44 tax-payer, or whether, through the tax-payer, it falls ultimately on the consumer. If it falls ultimately on the 45 tax-payer, then it is direct in its nature, as in the case of poll taxes and land taxes. If, on the contrary, it falls
46 ultimately on the consumer, then it is an indirect tax.

47 Such is the test, as laid down by all writers on the subject. Adam Smith, who was the great and universally received
48 authority on political economy, in the day when the Federal Constitution was framed, sets forth a tax on a person's 49 revenue to be a direct tax. 5 Mill,6 Say,7 J. R. McCulloch,8 Lieber,9 among political economists, do the same in specific [74 U.S. 433, 438] language. Mr. Justice Bouvier, in his learned Law Dictionary, defines a capitation tax, 'A poll tax; an imposition which is yearly laid on each person according to his estate and ability.'

Indeed, it is obvious that an income tax, levied on the profits of any business, does not fall ultimately on the consumer or patron of that business, in any other sense than that in which a poll tax or land tax may be said ultimately to fall, or be charged over by the payer of those taxes upon the persons with whom and for whom they do business, or to whom they rent their lands. The refinement which would argue otherwise, abolishes the whole distinction, and under it all taxes may be regarded as direct or indirect, at pleasure.

But, if the distinction is recognized (and it must be, for the Constitution makes it), then it follows, that an income tax is, and always heretofore has been, regarded as being a direct tax, as much so as a poll tax or as a land tax. If it be a direct tax, then the Constitution is imperative that it shall be apportioned.

If it be argued that an income tax cannot be apportioned, then, it cannot be levied; for only such direct taxes can be levied as can be apportioned.

But an income tax can be apportioned as easily as any other direct tax: first, by determining the amount to be raised from incomes throughout the United States, and then by ascertaining the proportion to be paid by the people of each State. An income tax, in the matter of its apportionment, is not embarrassed by any other difficulties than those which grow out of apportionment, in the admitted cases of poll taxes and land taxes."

According to the Supreme Court, there can be only these type types of taxes: direct or indirect/excises:

"And although there may have been from time to time intimations that there might be some tax which was not a direct tax nor included under the words "duties, imposts and excises," such a tax has yet remained undiscovered, not withstanding the stress of particular circumstances has invited thorough investigation into sources of revenue."
[Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 158 U.S. 601 (1895), 557, Thomas v. United States (1903) 192 u.s. 363, 370]

6.12.4.3 Common Manifestations of the Judicial Conspiracy

This section summarizes the common elements of the judicial conspiracy to uphold the federal income tax. Below are a list of some of the more common tactics used by the courts following the passage of the 16th Amendment to prejudice any litigation that would undermine the income tax. These are things that you should be watching vigilantly for and loudly blowing the whistle when you see them:

1. Political moves:

- 1.1. Congress making federal judgeships into political appointees instead of elected offices. This causes the judges to be more partial toward their political benefactors than they are in favor of citizens or the law.
- 1.2. Congress or presidents appointing judges who will participate actively in the judicial conspiracy to uphold the federal income tax.
- 1.3. Congress or presidents appointing judges who aren't confrontational (YES men) and who are unlikely to make any rulings that would have big political implications, like overthrowing illegal and fraudulent income taxes.

2. Counsel:

- 2.1. Refusing to allow the counsel of the Citizen to represent him in the court because of his views about taxes, but at the same time, pretending like it is due to his lack of a license to practice law in a particular federal court or jurisdiction.
- 2.2. Only granting pro-tem (temporary) judgeships (during the absence of the normal judge, during vacation, for instance) to lawyers who are in favor of the income tax, so that they have more authority and leverage against lawyers who are against in any case.

3. Jury selection:

- 3.1. Including a "mole" or planted individual (perhaps a lawyer who is a tax advocate) on the jury who is outspoken and biased against the Citizen and biased in favor of income taxes. This most often happens when the government or judge "slips" new candidates of the government's choosing into the courtroom at the last minute during jury selection or voir dire. This is what happened to Dr. Phil Roberts failure to file case, for instance, and it biased his case and led to a unfair criminal prosecution. Visit our website if you like, to learn about this despicable miscarriage of justice that happened in his case.
- 3.2. When it comes time to draw names out of a box to select jurists, the box will be populated (rigged) outside the courtroom by the government and the judge will not allow either the defense or prosecution to examine the contents of the box prior to drawing names. For all they know, the unbiased or better-informed jurists or the ones who have

1 been convicted of tax crimes, are removed from the box. Dr. Phil Robert's attorney, Oscar Stilley, thinks this is
2 what happened in Dr. Phil Robert's case.

3 3.3. Not allowing the counsel (threatening with contempt) of the Citizen who is contesting the taxes to interview or 4 question the prospective jurors or the government's lawyers. Cross-examination allows biases to be uncovered.
5 This is what happened in Dr. Phil Robert's case.

6 3.4. Asking the prospective jurists to reveal their social security number prior to jury selection and investigating their
7 tax payment history. Then, only choosing jurists who have a history of paying taxes and who would be more likely 8 to get indignant about people who either don't file or don't pay income taxes, even if they aren't obligated to.
9 Having the jurists social security numbers also affords the IRS an opportunity to harass and audit them if they don't 10 rule in the government's favor.

11 4. During Trial:

12 4.1. Hiding the nature of the citizenship and residency of the accused. Remember that according to Downes v. Bidwell,
13 182 U.S. 244 (1901), citizens of the District of Columbia or the Federal Zone have no constitutional rights. The 14 court won't make it clear what the citizenship and residency of the accused is so that they can make it appear that 15 all citizens are liable to pay income taxes on all income. Go back to section 4.11 for a clarification of citizenship
16 issues

17 4.2. Fining or punishing litigants who raise issues about which the court doesn't want to address, such as:

18 4.2.1. Fraudulent ratification of the 16th Amendment ($5,000 fine currently in some federal courts for filing claims 19 regarding this issue).

20 4.2.2. Fifth Amendment issues related to taxes (putting litigants in jail for failure to file).

21 4.2.3. Government conspiracy claims related to taxation filed by citizens.

22 4.2.4. Claiming a case deals with frivolous issues when in fact it doesn't and then forcing the litigant to pay the 23 attorney fees of the government to defend against this.

24 4.2.5. Assessing the fines or fees without a due process hearing, which violates the Fifth and 14th Amendments.

25 4.3. Judges granting the IRS' frequent motion in most tax cases to dismiss a valid filing by a tax protester. This has the 26 effect of censoring the litigant and violating his First Amendment rights.

27 4.4. Not allowing (threatening with contempt) the Citizen or his counsel to discuss or reveal the law regarding income
28 taxes. Instead, trying to convince them that they must follow the judge's orders and interpretation of the law, rather 29 than revealing the actual law and letting the jurists decide both the facts and the law for themselves. This gives the 30 judge far more power than he should have.

31 4.5. Holding pro per litigants to the same standards as attorneys, which is illegal.

32 4.6. Delaying the judgment for controversial issues. For instance, in the case of William T. Conklin vs. IRS, case no. 89
33 N 1514 in the Tenth Circuit, a famous tax protester sued the government because he thought his fifth amendment
34 rights were being violated by being compelled to file and sign a tax return under penalty of perjury and thereby be 35 a witness against himself. The judge (Judge Nottingham) took SEVEN YEARS to reach a decision, because he 36 had such a difficult time reconciling the constitutional issues involved! He was probably hoping he could put it off
37 so he would retire first! The judge deviously chose to censor this judgment by making it unpublished so the truth
38 wouldn't leak out. Nevertheless, the judge also sanctioned Mr. Conklin $6,000 by making him pay the IRS' legal 39 fees, and without the ability to even litigate or challenge the fees. This he may have done to discourage him from 40 litigating further.

41 5. After trial:

42 5.1. Making cases dealing with controversial aspects of federal income taxes "unpublished". This means that after there
43 is a judgment on a controversial tax case that exposes fraud or wrongdoing of the government, the federal judge
44 ensures that the findings aren't available in most federal case databases or indexes and copies can only be obtained
45 by writing directly to the clerk of the specific court where the case was heard, and the reproduction is costly and 46 long delays in obtaining the documents are commonplace. This amounts to censorship, in violation of the First
47 Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which says that we have a right to speak freely and to petition the government
48 for redress of grievances. This would also imply that we have a right not to have our court case regarding income
49 taxes be censored or discriminated against from publication based on our views or the tax issues we are litigating.
50 For instance, a notable tax freedom fighter, William Conklin, filed at least six different federal cases against the 51 IRS and won several of them. The focus of his cases was related to the unconstitutionality of being compelled in 52 the process of filing income tax returns to be a witness against oneself in violation of the 5th amendment. In the 53 majority of his cases, the judges refused to publish his cases. For instance, the case of Conklin vs. United States of 54 America, No. 94-1213 in the Tenth circuit, was unpublished. This kind of censorship is unconscionable!

55 6.12.4.4 Judicial Conspiracy Following Passage of 16th Amendment in 1913

1 With the definitions and historical legal background prior to the passage of the 16th Amendment (in 1913) fresh in our minds,
2 we'll now try to start answering some questions:

- 3 1. How did taxes on businesses as excise/indirect taxes which fall on the consumer evolve into direct taxes on the labor of 4 individuals (which are property) after the passage of the 16th Amendment?
- 5 2. How does the court justify a deviation from precedents already established by the U.S. Supreme Court in a way that is 6 consistent with the U.S. Constitution?
- 7 3. How did the courts distort the interpretation of the law to expand the reach of the income tax to become direct taxes on 8 citizens living outside of the federal zone (how did they "get away with it")?

9 To answer these questions, we have to look at later cases and see how the courts redefined "excise taxes" or "indirect taxes",
10 since the following case firmly established that taxes on income allowed under the 16th Amendment are limited to indirect or
11 excise taxes:

12 "..[The 16th Amendment] .prohibited the ... power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being 13 *taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged..." [in describing Brushaber v. Union Pacific
14 Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1 (1916), 17-19]
15 [Stanton v. Baltic Mining, 240 U.S. 103]

16 Most of error and distortion in the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, and the judicial conspiracy to protect and expand
17 the income tax, it turns out, comes not from the U.S. Supreme Court, but from the federal appellate/circuit courts immediately
18 below the Supreme Court. Indirectly, the Supreme Court has contributed to the misdirected verdicts of the circuit courts by 19 refusing to hear (not granting a "writ of certiorari") to cases which relate to direct income taxes on individuals. Most of that 20 distortion, we argue, came after the passage of the 16th Amendment, and results from a misapplication and misunderstanding
21 of the Internal Revenue Code by the circuit courts. It also results indirectly from voters adopting the socialist policies
22 instituted by President Franklin D. Roosevelt during his long term in office.

23 We'll start the exposition by examining the case of Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920):

24 "After further consideration, we adhere to that view and accordingly hold that the Sixteenth Amendment does not
25 authorize or support the tax in question. " [A direct tax on salary income of a federal judge]

26 This case quite clearly shows that a direct tax on the income of a federal judge is unconstitutional. The case was then
27 subsequently overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939). However, the Supreme 28 Court in that case declined to address whether the tax on income of federal judges was a "direct" or an "indirect" tax or the
29 nature of its constitutionality relative to the 16th Amendment, and therefore they skirted entirely the issue of whether taxes on 30 income of citizens could or should be included in "gross income". Instead, by fiat, the justices simply said without any real
31 legal analysis of facts, that the tax was constitutional because everyone regarded it as "unpopular". This, of course was a
32 cop-out and there was a long dissenting opinion that advocated a more rational view that is more consistent with this 33 document. Here's an excerpt from the findings of the court in that O'Malley case:

34 "However, the meaning which Evans v. Gore, supra, imputed to the history which explains Article III, 1 was 35 contrary to the way in which it was read by other English-speaking courts.<sup>403</sup> The decision met wide and steadily
36 growing disfavor from legal scholarship and professional opinion. Evans v. Gore, supra, itself was rejected by 37 most of the courts before whom the matter came after that decision<sup>404</sup>"

38 This decision, it is to be noted, occurred during a period of depression and recovery from depression, in which Franklin
39 Roosevelt was pushing his socialist "Social Security" agenda. President Roosevelt held office for three terms, or 12 years.
40 During that time, FDR wanted to ramrod his socialist agenda (Social Security, the Federal Reserve, Income Taxes, outlawing 41 of ownership of gold coin, forced use of paper money) through Congress and the courts and get it firmly entrenched in our 42 system of government before he left office. Therefore, FDR had to "stack" the Supreme Court by doubling its size from six
43 to twelve justices. We talked about this in section 6.1 and even quoted FDR's own words about the "supreme court packing
44 plan" in our analysis. This was unprecedented in American history and he was able to do it successfully because the 45 Constitution didn't specify the size of the Supreme Court! The court that made the ruling above was therefore a "rigged"
46 court. This ruling was the beginning of a long string of unfavorable rulings at the federal appellate level that would eventually mean the spread of the unconstitutional fraud we know today as the income tax. We'll now examine some of these circuit court cases. If you examine Supreme Court cases following Evens vs. Gore and search for the word "direct tax" and "excise tax", you will find nothing that relates to income taxes on citizens domiciled in the 50 union states. Consequently, when the IRS wants to defend the validity of the income tax, it usually cites Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad as its precedent.

It is very important to note a fact that in the Brushaber decision, the person subject to tax was a nonresident alien principal, who was receiving income from a railroad through a trustee, rather than directly. Treasury decision 2313, which was published just after this decision was rendered, reveals this:

"..it is hereby held that income accruing to nonresident aliens in the form of interest...and dividends .is subject to the income tax imposed by the act of October 3, 1913. The responsible heads, agents, or representatives of nonresident aliens...shall make a full and complete return of the income therefrom on...Form 1040..."

So there you have it. The Treasury Department stated that you are to file Form 1040 on behalf of your "nonresident alien principal". So don't forget to do that next April 15th! This is a fact the IRS doesn't like to discuss, for obvious reasons!

6.12.4.5 The Federal District/Circuit Court Conspiracy to Protect the Income Tax

Recall that the Supreme Court declared in Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103 (1916) that the only constitutional income taxes were excise taxes. The federal circuit/appellate courts, following the passage of the 16th Amendment in 1913, and the Supreme Court decisions that followed, suddenly got very creative in their definitions of "excise tax" in order to fit a square peg into a round hole made by the 16th Amendment. This was encouraged by the fact that the Supreme Court refused to hear cases involving direct taxes on income (looked the other way). Such cases are referred to as "cert denied". However, it is an important principal of law that the fact that a cert was denied is NOT necessarily an affirmation of a particular federal circuit court ruling by the Supreme Court. This lack of attentiveness by the Supreme Court in not correcting errors by the circuit courts gave the circuit and district courts carte blanche authority to do anything they wanted and to ignore the constitution entirely relative to income taxes. The result was a broadened application of income taxes to what should have been excepted subjects, like Americans living outside the federal United States but inside the United States of America. We'll examine some of these cases to show you how the courts "legislated" the income tax by redefining the word "excise", and in some cases also boldly claiming, quite wrongfully, that the 16th Amendment authorized "direct income taxes without apportionment" (see the case of U.S. v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, 1990, mentioned in section 6.4.5). In all cases, we emphasize that the devious tactics mentioned in section 6.12.4.3 "Common Manifestations of the Judicial Conspiracy" apply.

The first case we want to look at is Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 8/28/1962:

A direct tax is a tax on real or personal property, imposed solely by reason of its being owned by the taxpayer. A tax on the income from such property, such as a tax on rents or the interest on bonds, is also considered a direct tax, being basically a tax upon the ownership of property.<sup>405</sup> Yet, from the early days of the Republic, a tax upon the exercise of only some of the rights adhering to ownership, such as upon the use of property<sup>406</sup> or upon its transfer,<sup>407</sup> has been considered an indirect tax, not subject to the requirement of apportionment. The present tax falls into this latter category, being a tax upon the receipt of money and not upon its ownership.

*This tax is similar to others held to be indirect. In the case which on its facts most nearly resembles the present one, Scholey v. Rew, 90 U.S. (23 Wall.) 331, 346-348, 23 L.Ed. 99 (1875), the Supreme Court upheld a federal death tax, placed upon persons receiving real property from a deceased under a will or by intestate succession, against the claim that the tax was an unapportioned direct tax on property. In that case, as in the present, the tax was borne directly by the recipient, but was held to be merely upon the transfer of property. The Scholey case was by name reaffirmed in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U.S. 41, 78-83, 20 S.Ct. 742, 44 L.Ed. 969 (1900), and by implication in New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U.S. 345, 349, 41 S.Ct. 506, 75 L.Ed. 963 (1921), both cases upholding federal estate taxes imposed, not upon the beneficiary but upon the decedent's estate. A tax upon the donor of an inter vivos gift was held to be an indirect tax in Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U.S. 124, 135-138, 50 S.Ct. 46, 74 L.Ed. 226 (1929). If a tax on giving property is indirect, so would be a tax on receiving it, regardless of its source. That no distinction may be drawn between giving and receiving was pointed out in Fernandez v. Wiener, 326 U.S. 340, 352-355, 361-362, 66 S.Ct. 178, 90 L.Ed. 116 (1945), where the Supreme Court upheld as an indirect tax the federal estate tax on community property at the death of one spouse: "If the gift of property may be taxed, we cannot say that there is any want of constitutional power to tax the receipt of it, whether as a*

1 result of inheritance [citation omitted] or otherwise, whatever name may be given to the tax * * *. Receipt in
 2 possession and enjoyment is as much a taxable occasion within the reach of the federal taxing power as the
 3 enjoyment of any other incident of property."<sup>408</sup>

4 While the distinctions drawn in these cases may seem artificial, the necessity for making them stems from the
 5 structure of the Constitution itself, which distinguishes between direct and indirect taxes. The Supreme Court has 6 restricted the definition of direct taxes to the above-enumerated well-defined categories, and we have no warrant
 7 to expand them to others.

8 Even if we were to assume that the tax upon Simmons is direct, it comes within the Sixteenth Amendment, which 9 relieved direct taxes upon income from the apportionment requirement. We need look no further than the two
 10 most recent Supreme Court cases in this area. In Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348
 11 U.S. 426, 75 S.Ct. 473, 99 L.Ed. 483 (1955), the Court upheld the inclusion in gross income of money received
 12 by the taxpayers as punitive damages, stating that "[here] we have instances of undeniable accessions to wealth,
 13 clearly realized, and over which the taxpayers have complete dominion." 348 U.S. at 431, 75 S.Ct. at 477. This
 14 test was specifically reaffirmed in James v. United States, 366 U.S. 213, 81 S.Ct. 1052, 6 L.Ed.2d. 246 (1961),
 15 where the Court considered the taxability of embezzled money. The plunder was held to be income solely because 16 it came into the taxpayer's possession and control and despite the fact that he had no right to it and indeed was
 17 under a legal obligation to return it to its rightful owner. This obligation to repay was deemed irrelevant, for a
 18 gain "constitutes taxable income when its recipient has such control over it that, as a practical matter, he derives
 19 readily realizable economic value from it."<sup>409</sup> As is apparent from the quoted statements, and as illustrated by 20 the diverse factual situations in these cases, it is the status in the recipient's hands of the money being taxed which 21 is the crucial factor, while the source of the money is not relevant.

22 The above case of Simmons v. United States taxed receipt of income (which in this case was a gift) by a citizen not related
 23 to the conduct of a business or trade, as an occasion for an excise/indirect tax. But we know that this violates the definition
 24 of an excise tax in Flint v. Stone Tracy (220 U.S. 107) and the other definitions of excise tax stated earlier. Interestingly,
 25 they didn't label the tax on the gift as an excise tax, but that is the only way it can be classified, based on our discussion in
 26 section 5.1, where we talked about the legal types of federal taxes. Why didn't the court label the tax an excise? Because 27 then they would have to talk about Flint v. Stone Tracy and relate the event being taxed to a business transaction involving 28 sale and manufacture of commodities. Since this case didn't involve the sale or manufacture of commodities, then the court
 29 couldn't uphold the tax! The case also ignores the following other issues and considerations, which are very relevant to the 30 issue of taxation:

- 31 1. Whether the income received was a result of interstate commerce or foreign commerce, as per Article I, Sections 8, 32 Clauses 1 and 3 of the Constitution, which constrain Congress' power to taxing foreign and interstate commerce.
 33 These are the only taxable "sources" allowed by the Constitution. It would appear that the income in question in 34 this case here didn't cross state boundaries, and yet the issue was never addressed, because if it was, the government's 35 ability to impose the tax would be eliminated.
- 36 2. Whether the tax was on a Citizen of the 50 union states from income earned within the state. If it was, then 26
 37 U.S.C. §862 and the source become relevant to whether the income received was taxable. If the court had addressed 38 this issue, then once again the court would not have been able to uphold the tax.
- 39 3. What "privilege" was being taxed that related to the indirect or excise tax upheld by the court. (see Flint v. Stone 40 Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)). According to Flint, "...it is the privilege which is the subject of the tax and not the 41 mere buying, selling or handling of goods". Once again, if this issue was considered, the court would not have been 42 able to uphold the tax.
- 43 4. Whether income beneficially received by Simmons was related to "the manufacture, sale, or consumption of 44 commodities within the country" as per Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U.S. 107 (1911)). This issue is clearly very
 45 relevant to the imposition of an alleged excise tax, and yet it was ignored by the court. If the court had addressed 46 this issue, it also would not be able to sustain the indirect/excise tax being imposed.

47 Next, we look at the case of United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990):

48 Dickstein's motion to dismiss advanced the hackneyed tax protester refrain that federal criminal jurisdiction only
 49 extends to the District of Columbia, United States territorial possessions and ceded territories. Dickstein's

<sup>408</sup> 326 U.S. at 353, 66 S.Ct. at 185. Analogous too are cases holding that a tax on the gross receipts of a business is an indirect tax, but, being a tax on business, this is more like the traditional excise tax, expressly treated by the Constitution as not direct. Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397, 410-413, 24 S.Ct. 376, 48 L.Ed. 496 (1904); Stanton v. Baltic Mining Co., 240 U.S. 103, 114, 36 S.Ct. 278, 60 L.Ed. 546 (1916) (alternate holding); Penn
Mut. Indem. Co. v. Commissioner, 277 F.2d. 16, 18-20 (3d Cir. 1960), affirming 32 T.C. 653 (1959).

memorandum blithely ignored 18 U.S.C. § 3231 which explicitly vests federal district courts with jurisdiction over "all offenses against the laws of the United States." Dickstein also conveniently ignored article I, section 8 of the United States Constitution which empowers Congress to create, define and punish crimes, irrespective of where they are committed. See United States v. Worrall, 2 U.S. (2 Dall.) 384, 393, 1 L.Ed. 426, 28 F.Cas. 774 (1798) (Chase, J.). Article I, section 8 and the sixteenth amendment also empower Congress to create and provide for the administration of an income tax; the statute under which defendant was charged and convicted, 28 U.S.C. § 7201, plainly falls within that authority. Efforts to argue that federal jurisdiction does not encompass prosecutions for federal tax evasion have been rejected as either "silly" or "frivolous" by a myriad of courts throughout the nation. See, e.g., United States v. Dawes, 874 F.2d. 746, 750 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 920, 107 L.Ed.2d. 264, 110 S.Ct. 284 (1989), overruled on other grounds, 895 F.2d. 1581 (10th Cir. 1990); United States v. Tedder, 787 F.2d. 540, 542 (10th Cir. 1986); United States v. Amon, 669 F.2d. 1351, 1355 (10th Cir. 1981); United States v. Brown, 600 F.2d. 248, 259 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 917, 100 S.Ct. 233, 62 L.Ed.2d. 172 (1979); Cheek, 882 F.2d. at 1270; United States v. Ward, 833 F.2d. 1538, 1539 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1022, 108 S.Ct. 1576, 99 L.Ed.2d. 891 (1988); United States v. Koliboski, 732 F.2d. 1328, 1329-30 (7th Cir. 1984); United States v. Evans, 717 F.2d. 1334, 1334 (11th Cir. 1983); United States v. Drefke, 707 F.2d. 978, 981 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 942, 78 L.Ed.2d. 321, 104 S.Ct. 359 (1983); United States v. Spurgeon, 671 F.2d. 1198, 1199 (8th Cir. 1982); O'Brien v. United States, 51 F.2d. 193, 196, 10 A.F.T.R. (P-H) 223 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 284 U.S. 673, 52 S.Ct. 129, 76 L.Ed. 569 (1931). In the face of this uniform authority, it defies credulity to argue that the district court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the government's case against defendant.

Dickstein's argument that the sixteenth amendment does not authorize a direct, non-apportioned tax on United States citizens similarly is devoid of any arguable basis in law. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit recently noted "the patent absurdity and frivolity of such a proposition." In re Becraft, 885 F.2d. 547, 548 (9th Cir. 1989). For seventy-five years, the Supreme Court has recognized that the sixteenth amendment authorizes a direct non-apportioned tax upon United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves, see Brushaber v. Union Pac. R.R., 240 U.S. 1, 12-19, 60 L.Ed. 493, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916); efforts to argue otherwise have been sanctioned as frivolous, see, e.g., Becraft, 885 F.2d. at 549 (Fed. R. App. P. 38 sanctions for raising frivolous sixteenth amendment argument in petition for rehearing); Lovell v. United States, 755 F.2d. 517, 519-20 (7th Cir. 1984) (Fed. R. App. P. 38 sanctions imposed on pro se litigants raising frivolous sixteenth amendment contentions). Dickstein's contention that defendant was not an "individual" under the Internal Revenue Code also is frivolous. See Dawes, 874 F.2d. at 750-51; United States v. Studley, 783 F.2d. 934, 937 (9th Cir. 1986); United States v. Rice, 659 F.2d. 524, 528 (5th Cir. Unit A 1981). His disregard of governing legal precedent is further portrayed by his reference to the "alleged ratification" of the sixteenth amendment in the face of uniform contrary authority. See, e.g., Miller v. United States, 868 F.2d. 236, 241 (7th Cir. 1989); United States v. Sitka, 845 F.2d. 43, 46-47 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 827, 102 L.Ed.2d. 54, 109 S.Ct. 77 (1988); United States v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438, 1440-41 (9th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1036, 93 L.Ed.2d. 840, 107 S.Ct. 888 (1987); Sisk v. Commissioner, 791 F.2d. 58, 60-61 (6th Cir. 1986); see generally United States v. Stillhammer, 706 F.2d. 1072, 1077-78 (10th Cir. 1983). Argument reflecting such contemptuous disregard for established legal authority has no place within this circuit. [United States v. Collins, 920 F.2d. 619, (10th Cir. 11/27/1990)]

This case is quoted by the IRS as a reference in our Tax Protester Rebuttal on our website at <http://famguardian.org/>. This ruling has the following MAJOR and BLATANT defects:

1. It ignores the ruling of Stanton v. Baltic Mining, in referring to the Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R., case, that income taxes are only constitutional as excise taxes, and not direct taxes:

"that the provisions of the Sixteenth Amendment conferred no new power of taxation but simply prohibited the previous complete and plenary power of income taxation possessed by Congress from the beginning from being taken out of the category of indirect taxation to which it inherently belonged and being placed in the category of direct taxation"

Instead, the U.S. v. Collins ruling says that:

"...the Supreme Court has recognized that the sixteenth amendment authorizes a direct non-apportioned tax upon United States citizens throughout the nation, not just in federal enclaves" and yet only cites ONE Supreme Court case, Brushaber, which clearly doesn't sustain their position. This is a very bad precedent and bad law indeed! Brushaber claims that income taxes are constitutional as "excise taxes" only, not "direct taxes". Where did the court get such nonsense? I contend that in this case they were just mad at the attorney, Dickstein, and were behaving irrationally. That was why they sanctioned him and dismissed him from the court.

2. Completely ignores the fact that in the Brushaber case, the appellant was acting as an agent for a nonresident alien, and NOT a citizen! But in the case of U.S. v. Collins, the appellant was a citizen, not a nonresident alien. This is a completely different situation.

3. In addition, it ignores all the issues, errors, and omissions we raised in the above case of Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 8/28/1962.

The last case we want to look at is U.S. v. Melton, 86 F.3d. 1153, ruling on May 22, 1996. This case dealt with brothers who owned a painting business and who evaded payment of income taxes by various highly creative means, including use of cash and avoiding banks, using gold coins, and setting up foreign corporations. It's a fascinating case that has just about every major tax evasion and protester element in it. We'd highly recommend reading it. Below is an excerpt from the court's ruling:

"While courts may have offered differing views of the income tax over time, the United States Supreme Court has consistently interpreted the federal income tax for 80 years. Since 1916, the Court has construed the tax as an indirect tax authorized under Article I, Section 8, Clause 1 of the U.S. Constitution, as amended by the Sixteenth Amendment. See Brushaber v. Union Pacific R.R. Co., 240 U.S. 1, 11, 16-19, 60 L.Ed. 493, 36 S.Ct. 236 (1916). Federal courts have all agreed that wages or compensation for services constitute income and that individuals receiving income are subject to the federal income tax--regardless of its nature. See, e.g., Brushaber, 240 U.S. at 17; United States v. Sloan, 939 F.2d. 499, 500-01 (7th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1060, 117 L.Ed.2d. 110, 112 S.Ct. 940 (1992); Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, 167-68 (4th Cir. 1962). In short, the debate over whether the income tax is an excise tax or a direct tax is irrelevant to the obligation of citizens to pay taxes and file returns. Simmons, 308 F.2d. at 166 n.21 (stating that "it has been clearly established that the labels used do not determine the extent of the taxing power").

Furthermore, the duty to file returns and pay income taxes is clear. Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code imposes a federal tax on the taxable income of every individual. 26 U.S.C. §1. Section 63 defines "taxable income" as gross income minus allowable deductions. 26 U.S.C. §63. Section 61 states that "gross income means all income from whatever source derived," including compensation for services. 26 U.S.C. §61. Sections 6001 and 6011 provide that a person must keep records and file a tax return for any tax for which he is liable. 26 U.S.C. §§ 6001 & 6011. Finally, section 6012 provides that every individual having gross income that equals or exceeds the exemption amount in a taxable year shall file an income tax return. 26 U.S.C. §6012. The duty to pay federal income taxes therefore is "manifest on the face of the statutes, without any resort to IRS rules, forms or regulations." United States v. Bowers, 920 F.2d. 220, 222 (4th Cir. 1990). The rarely recognized proposition that, "where the law is vague or highly debatable, a defendant--actually or imputedly--lacks the requisite intent to violate it," Mallas, 762 F.2d. at 363 (quoting United States v. Critzer, 498 F.2d. 1160, 1162 (4th Cir. 1974)), simply does not apply here.

Once again, this Appellate court ruling ignores all the same issues referenced earlier in Simmons v. United States. It ignores constitutional issues such as Article I, Section 8, Clauses 1 and 3, which constrain the Congress' taxing power to foreign and interstate commerce, and their relation to 26 U.S.C. §861 and the 26 C.F.R. §1.861-1 through 26 C.F.R. §1.861-14. It does not attempt to identify whether the income derives from a taxable "source". It doesn't relate the income to an occasion that is appropriate to an excise, such as the sale or manufacture of commodities involving interstate or foreign commerce. This is clearly a glaring error in logic and legal analysis, and yet it is allowed to stand because of a federal judicial conspiracy to uphold the income tax!

There are many, many other cases we could discuss, but they all follow the same pattern of the two indicated above. In the interest of conserving space, we won't show any others here.

Following the expansion of the definition of "excise taxes" by the circuit courts documented above, a number of cases were heard by the federal appellate courts dealing directly with the constitutionality of the income taxes and the nature of being a "direct tax". In each case, the court unfavorably "rubber stamped" the result without dealing with the constitutional issues of direct vs. indirect taxes. They also failed to address the nature of the parties allegedly subject to the tax, such as whether they were citizens domiciled in the 50 union states, nonresident aliens, or citizens living overseas. This simply clouded the application of the income taxes even further for the average Citizen, which we believe was clearly their intent. Here are two examples of such abuse by the federal appellate courts:

1. Ficalora v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 751 F.2d. 85 (12/13/1984).
2. Charczuk v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 771 F.2d. 471 (8/29/1985).

We'll first provide the ruling in the case of Charczuk v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue (771 F.2d. 471), because the arguments of the "taxpayer" not only were rejected by the court, but the court also sanction of attorney fees against the appellant. Below is an excerpt from that case:

Paul E. Charczuk and Victoria Charczuk jointly filed a Form 1040 for the taxable year 1977 reflecting income of $4,763.00. This amount was entered on the line for "business income" rather than on the line for "wages, salaries, tips and other employee compensation." Attached to the taxpayers' return were seven Form W-2 Wage and Tax Statements showing that the taxpayers received wages during 1977 totaling $12,276.00. Also attached was a Schedule C for each taxpayer claiming a "net profit" of $2,668.00 for Paul Charczuk and $2,095.00 for Victoria Charczuk.<sup>410</sup> On June 9, 1980, the Commissioner sent taxpayers a notice of deficiency informing them that they owed $1,148.00 in taxes for 1977 based on disallowance of all expenses claimed on Schedule C for lack of verification. Subsequently, the taxpayers petitioned the Tax Court for a redetermination of the deficiency. In those proceedings the taxpayers did not attempt to challenge the Commissioner's determination by presenting evidence in support of their claimed deductions, but rather argued that the income tax itself was invalid as a matter of law. The Tax Court granted summary judgment in favor of the Commissioner. T.C. Memo. 1983-433. Taxpayers appeal from this judgment claiming the Tax Court misconstrued their arguments against the income tax and that its decision was contrary to law and "illogical." We affirm.

It takes little consideration to determine that the arguments presented by taxpayers with respect to these issues are meritless and unreasonable. However, to forestall taxpayers' patently false claim that "the issues in this case have never been addressed and answered by any Federal Article III Court" we will quote at length from the opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Ficalora v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 751 F.2d. 85 (1984), cert. denied 471 U.S. 1005, 105 S.Ct. 1869, 85 L.Ed.2d. 162 (1985), which involved taxpayers who were represented by the same Thomas J. Carley who represents the taxpayers in the instant appeal. The quoted text which follows reveals that the Second Circuit in Ficalora was responding to arguments substantially identical to those taxpayers advance in this case.

I. Constitutional Authority to Impose An Income Tax on Individuals

We first address ourselves to the appellant's contention that neither the United States Congress nor the United States Tax Court possess the constitutional authority to impose on him an income tax for the taxable year 1980. Appellant argues that an income tax is a "direct" tax and that Congress does not possess the constitutional authority to impose a "direct" tax on him, since such a tax has not been apportioned among the several States of the Union. In support of his argument, appellant cites Article 1, Section 9, clause 4 of the United States Constitution which provides that:

"No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken."

He also relies on the case of Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 157 U.S. 429, 15 S.Ct. 673, 39 L.Ed. 759 (initial decision), 158 U.S. 601, 15 S.Ct. 912, 39 L.Ed. 1108 (decision on rehearing) (1895), wherein the United States Supreme Court held that a tax upon income from real and personal property is invalid in the absence of apportionment.

In making his argument that Congress lacks constitutional authority to impose a tax on wages without apportionment among the States, the appellant has chosen to ignore the precise holding of the Court in Pollock, as well as the development of constitutional law in this area over the last ninety years. While ruling that a tax upon income from real and personal property is invalid in the absence of apportionment, the Supreme Court explicitly stated that taxes on income from one's employment are not direct taxes and are not subject to the necessity of apportionment. Pollock v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 158 U.S. at 635, 15 S.Ct. at 919. Furthermore, the Sixteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, enacted in 1913, provides that:

"The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on income, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Finally, in the case of New York, ex rel. Cohn v. Graves, 300 U.S. 308, 57 S.Ct. 466, 81 L.Ed. 666 (1937), the Supreme Court in effect overruled Pollock, and in so doing rendered the Sixteenth Amendment unnecessary, when it sustained New York's income tax on income derived from real property :n New Jersey. Id. at 314-15, 57 S.Ct. at 468-69. Hence, there is no question but that Congress has the constitutional authority to impose an income tax upon the appellant.

II. Statutory Authority to Impose an Income Tax on Individuals and Definition of Taxable Income

The appellant contends that "[n]owhere in any of the Statutes of the United States is there any section of law making any individual liable to pay a tax or excise on 'taxable income.'" . . . The essence of the appellant's argument is that 26 U.S.C. §1 does not impose a tax on any individual for any stated period of time; rather, it imposes a tax on an undefined: "taxable income".

<sup>410</sup> Each Schedule C (entitled Profit or (Loss) from Business or Profession (Sole Proprietorship)) gave the taxpayers' name, address, social security number and the amount claimed as "net profit." To the right of the area for deductions on both schedules was the instruction "See Form-21." A "Form-21" was attached for Paul Charczuk which detailed various "subtractions" for taxes, rent, subsistence, interest, auto, telephone, utilities, supplies, dues and subscriptions from "receipts" of $6,676.00. No "Form-21" or similar explanation of calculations was attached for Victoria Charczuk.

Section 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (26 U.S.C.) (hereinafter the Code) provides in plain, clear and precise language that "there is hereby imposed on the taxable income or every individual . . . a tax determined in accordance with" tables set-out later in the statute. In equally clear language, Section 63 of the Code defines taxable income as "gross income, minus the deductions allowed by this chapter . . .", gross income, in turn, is defined in Section 61 of the Code as "all income from whatever source derived, including (but not limited to) . . . : (1) Compensation for services . . .". Despite the appellant's attempted contorted construction of the statutory scheme, we find that it coherently and forthrightly imposes upon the appellant a tax upon his income for the year 1980.

This appeal is frivolous. Pursuant to Rule 38 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure, we impose on the appellants double the costs of the Commissioner.

[...]

When the costs incurred by this Court and respondent are taken into consideration, the maximum damages authorized by the statute ($500) do not begin to indemnify the United States for the expenses which petitioner's frivolous action has occasioned. Considering the waste of limited judicial and administrative resources caused by petitioner's action, even the maximum damages authorized by Congress are wholly inadequate to compensate the United States and its other taxpayers. These costs must eventually be borne by all of the citizens who honestly and fairly participate in our tax collection system. * * * (Sydnes v. Commissioner, [74 T.C. 864, 872-873 (1980), aff'd. 647 F.2d. 813 (8th Cir. 1981)].)

Courts are in no way obligated to tolerate arguments that thoroughly defy common sense. Such conduct is permissible in our society for the very young, those attempting to make a joke or, occasionally, philosophers, but it cannot be allowed of one engaged in the serious work of a practicing attorney appearing before a court of law. Mr. Carley's conduct in this suit has been a paradigm of unreasonable behavior, and it has been exceedingly vexatious as that term is understood by the Supreme Court. See Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC, 434 U.S. 412, 421, 54 L.Ed.2d. 648, 98 S.Ct. 694 (1978). (In a case arising under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Court stipulated that "the term 'vexatious' in no way implies that the plaintiff's subjective bad faith is a necessary prerequisite to a fee award against him."). Given the continued character of Mr. Carley's intransigence, justice requires that he and his clients bear the full weight of the sanctions allowed by law so that the government, and ultimately all law abiding taxpayers, will not be taxed with the expense of opposing meritless contentions such as his.

Accordingly, the decision of the Tax Court is affirmed and Paul E. Charczuk and Victoria Charczuk are ordered to pay the government double its costs on appeal. In addition, the government is ordered to submit within twenty (20) days to the court clerk, and to Thomas J. Carley, an appropriate accounting of all expenses (other than costs of the appeal) and attorneys' fees it has reasonably incurred as a result of this appeal. Thomas J. Carley may file with the court clerk a challenge to the government's accounting within ten (10) days of the government's filing only with regard to whether the expenses and fees were in fact incurred on this appeal. Upon approval of the government's accounting or any part of it by the court, Thomas J. Carley will be ordered to personally pay to the government the entire amount approved.<sup>411</sup>

You will note that the court ignored all of the same issues we raised with the cases of Simmons v. United States, 308 F.2d. 160, and U.S. v. Melton, 86 F.3d. 1153. They readily identified the receipt of income as other than a "direct tax", which means that it must be an "indirect tax". The only legitimate and constitutional type of indirect tax that it could be, as authorized by the 16th Amendment, is an "excise tax". But guess what, the court didn't mention a word about excise taxes or their applicability only to businesses. The subject of this case, however, was not a business, but a natural person. We refer you again to section 5.1 and following entitled "Introduction to Federal Taxation".

We hope that this section has served to emphasize the basic problem with the Internal Revenue Code that Congress is not willing to address:

1. The laws are unnecessarily complex, mainly because they have to be so carefully crafted to conceal the real truth that most citizens domiciled in the 50 union states with only domestic income DON'T owe tax.

<sup>411</sup> Courts imposing sanctions on an attorney under § 1927 must "afford the attorney all appropriate protections of due process available under the law." House Conf. Rep. No. 96-1234, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. 8, reprinted in 1980 U.S. Code Cong. & Ad. News 2781, 2783. At oral argument in this case, Mr. Carley was offered an opportunity to explain why sanctions should not be imposed against him personally. This satisfies any right he may have had to a hearing on the matter. Cf. McConnell v. Critchlow, 661 F.2d. 116, 119 (9th Cir. 1981).

2. Even most judges don't really understand the Internal Revenue Code and don't agree with each other on their interpretation. See section 3.20.1 "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws" for more interesting reading on this subject.
3. The complexity and uncertainty of the Internal Revenue Code contributes significantly to a violation of "due process" discussed in this and section 3.20.1 "Uncertainty of the Federal Tax Laws". The first principle of due process is that the laws are written to be clear and unambiguous enough that they can consistently be interpreted and applied by citizens and the courts. An unclear law also violates the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution.

6.12.4.6 State Court Rulings

The State courts have held that the income tax is a direct property tax. This is revealed by the following cases:

See Eliasberg Bros. Mercantile Co. v. Grimes, 204 Ala. 492, 86 So. 56, 58 (1920); State v. Pinder, 108 A. 43, 45 (Del. 1919); Bachrach v. Nelson, 349 Ill. 579, 182 N.E. 909 (1932); Opinion of the Justices, 220 Mass. 613, 108 N.E. 570 (1915); Trefry v. Putnam, 227 Mass. 522, 116 N.E. 904 (1917); Maguire v. Tax Comm. of Commonwealth, 230 Mass. 503, 120 N.E. 162, 166 (1918); Hart v. Tax Comm., 240 Mass. 37, 132 N.E. 621 (1921); In re Ponzi, 6 F.2d. 324 (D.Mass. 1925); Kennedy v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 256 Mass. 426, 152 N.E. 747 (1926); In re Opinion of the Justices, 266 Mass. 583, 165 N.E. 900, 902 (1929); Hutchins v. Comm. of Corps. & Taxation, 272 Mass. 422, 172 N.E. 605, 608 (1930); Bryant v. Comm. of Corps. & Tax'n., 291 Mass. 498, 197 N.E. 509 (1935); Culliton v. Chase, 174 Wash. 363, 25 P.2d. 81, 82 (1933); Jensen v. Henneford, 185 Wash. 209, 53 P.2d. 607 (1936); State ex rel Manitowoc Gas Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 161 Wis. 111, 152 N.W. 848, 850 (1915); and State ex rel Sallie F. Moon Co. v. Wisconsin Tax Comm., 166 Wis. 287, 163 N.W. 639, 640 (1917).

There appears to be no dispute about the plain requirements of the Constitution that direct taxes must be apportioned and that indirect/excise taxes must be uniform. Likewise as shown above, there is a line of decisional authority regarding the generally accepted proposition that income is property.

6.12.5 2003: Federal Court Bans Irwin Schiff's Federal Mafia Tax Book

Below is an article about a ban on this country's most famous anti-tax book published by the most famous tax protester at the time, Irwin Schiff. The article was published by the We the People Foundation for Constitutional Education and distributed via email on June 30, 2003.

Judge Bans Schiff Book on Income Tax

1st Amendment Thrashed to Buy the Tax More Time New York Times: More Deception

On Monday, June 16, Federal District Court Judge Lloyd D. George issued a preliminary injunction banning the sale and distribution of Irwin Schiff's book about the income tax titled, "The Federal Mafia: How The Government Illegally Imposes And Unlawfully Collects Income Taxes And How Americans Can Fight Back."

Schiff's book, which is a personal and legal examination of the income tax fraud, and includes extensive, and specific quotations and analyses of Internal Revenue Code and Supreme Court rulings on the tax, was banned even though the Department of Justice (which bears the burden of proof) presented no evidence and no witnesses at the April 11th preliminary injunction hearing. Click Here to read the first portion of the censored book (.pdf).

1 In short, Judge George banned Schiff's book as "false commercial speech" without any specific analysis or any in-court
2 evidentiary examination establishing the "falsity" of Schiff's actual speech and by blithely ignoring the substantial body of
3 established Supreme Court constitutional law protecting free expression and publication.

4 With only an unsubstantiated claim of criminal speech asserted by a government witness (via a written declaration), Judge
5 George summarily dismissed the content of Schiff's book as "largely autobiographical, containing in large part Schiff's anti-
6 tax and anti-government diatribes and theories." Of course, it appears to be lost on the court that this is the exact type of 7 speech protected by the First Amendment and -- even when intertwined with "commercial" speech -- requires the highest
8 level of examination and legal justification to censor.

9 Allen Lichtenstein, general counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union in Nevada, said he looked forward to arguing the 10 case before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Schiff said he had done nothing wrong and would appeal. "We argued that 11 the book is not commercial speech, cannot be banned as false commercial speech and does not meet any other criteria for 12 censorship," Lichtenstein said.

13 On Tuesday June 17, The New York Times ran an article authored by David Cay Johnston about the Schiff injunction.
14 According to Schiff, Johnston makes two knowingly false statements distorting the perceived nature of the proceedings.
15 Schiff has demanded a formal retraction from the New York Times.

16 Johnston wrote, "At the court hearing, Mr. Schiff fired his lawyer after she said that she could not argue his tax claims because 17 they lacked merit." In his demand letter to the Times, Schiff points out that the transcript from the hearing makes it explicitly 18 clear that Schiff's attorney was not characterizing Schiff's legal assertions as false or lacking in any way, but instead that she 19 was effectively prohibited by the court from even raising the issues in defense of Schiff under fear and threat of court sanction.

20 Analysis of the Order

21 To reach his contorted legal conclusions and to issue the preliminary injunction in favor of the IRS, Judge George ruled,
22 without any evidentiary examination or cross-examination, to conclude that Schiff's speech is false.

23 With this in mind, please note on page 4 of the Order there are five distinct, separate legal elements listed for the government
24 to successfully assert a claim for an injunction related to an "abusive tax shelter."

25 In his order however, the judge conveniently "combines" his analysis of the critical second and third statutory elements, (i.e., 26 relating to making actual "false and fraudulent statements" and the defendant's "reason to know" about their falsity) together
27 within section "B" of the Order, thereby clouding the court's grossly inadequate treatment in establishing the truth or falsity
28 of Schiff's actual speech.

29 While Section "B" contains much ado concerning Irwin's past criminal tax convictions, his failed federal appeals and Schiff's
30 extensive knowledge and expertise in Internal revenue Code, precious few words are wasted establishing the actual falsity of 31 Schiff's speech. In fact, most of the relevant language concerning the court's finding of falsity merely lists District Court
32 decisions of other victims of the IRS's nationwide attack on speech. The Court is in effect stating, "All these other people
33 had false speech concerning abusive tax shelters so Schiff's speech is too."

34 In short, to enable the government's full and unfettered dismissal of the very significant First Amendment issues raised
35 subsequently by the ACLU, Judge George quickly reaches the judicial conclusion of the "falsity" of Schiff's speech (relative 36 to abusive tax shelters) by grossly mischaracterizing Schiff's legal assertions within the context of several Supreme Court
37 cases cited that are only tangentially related to the core legal issues raised in Schiff's actual speech.

38 Example: The Court cites the 1916 Brushaber case which addressed the "right of Congress to impose income tax" [sic]. In 39 fact, Brushaber was acting as a withholding agent for a foreign corporate entity operating inside the US and was in fact, under 40 US law, liable in that capacity. This issue is not the issue raised by Schiff in the Federal Mafia.

41 According to Schiff's Federal Mafia material - if Brushaber was a natural citizen of living and working in the 50 states, his
42 personal wages would in fact be non-taxable because they don't meet the constitutional definition of "income" as defined by 43 the Supreme Court (i.e., a corporate profit or gain). It is Supreme Court decisions such as these cited in Schiff's Mafia (and 44 therefore, his alleged tax "scheme") that the Court has blindly ignored in its legal analysis.

1 The bottom line: Nowhere is there a direct rebuttal or examination of the specific legal assertions advanced by Schiff
2 in either his speech or his book. Every subsequent aspect contained in the Court's injunction is rationalized, and squarely
3 erected, upon this defective judicial premise.

4 In reality, Schiff's "abusive tax scam" is merely a detailed discussion and analysis of Internal Revenue Code, the Constitution,
5 and US Supreme Court decisions, coupled with detailed instructions on how average Americans can implement the logical
6 conclusions and reasonable inferences of those legal facts to protect their property and their rights.

7 The IRS, DOJ and now the US District Court, have failed to provide ANY specific, substantive rebuttal to ANY of the specific
8 elements of Schiff's speech - even though these elements contain the nexus of the falsity or truth of his speech, and thereby
9 are at the heart of determining the legality or criminality of the alleged "abusive tax scheme". To fail to directly address the 10 content and alleged falsity of the speech is a clear violation of due process.

11 Armed with this defective and patently self-serving judicial conclusion, the Court then begins to rebut the 1st Amendment
12 free speech issues raised in the ACLU's amicus briefs.

13 (Note: The 1st Amendment discussion begins on page 13 of the order)

14 Commercial Speech

15 Judge George summarily concludes not only that The Federal Mafia is non-protected "false" commercial speech because the 16 book is sold for money and it contains false information that might be of "selfish" economic benefit to the audience (or Schiff)
17 -- but that it should be banned because it advertises other Schiff products that naturally lead to the same alleged tax "scam."
18 I.e., as false commercial advertising, the book should be banned.

19 The judge, citing the 9th Circuit Estate Preservation case, makes the implicit point that Schiff, outside this injunction, is free
20 to continue to give tax planning advice as long as it is "legitimate" as (quote) "every honest and qualified tax consultant 21 knows."

22 Judge George, having concluded that the book constitutes "core commercial speech," (i.e. "advertising, plain and simple")
23 dismisses the tightly interwoven political content and far reaching political implications of Schiff's work and instead focuses
24 on establishing that Schiff's book is simply a contrived "soup" of false advertising and an embedded "abusive tax scheme," 25 which, of course, enjoys no protection.

26 Incitement of Imminent Lawless Acts

27 At the beginning of the section dealing with the "Incitement of Imminent Lawless Acts" (page 26) Judge George cites the 28 Brandenburg v. Ohio Supreme Court case where the court upheld that even speech advocating the violation of law was 29 protected, as long as the speech did not "incite imminent unlawful acts".

30 The Brandenburg case is the modern day constitutional litmus test for the legal banning of speech. Below is the definition of 31 the word "imminent".

32 Imminent \Im"mi**nent*\, Imminent: it is the strongest -- it denotes that something is ready to fall or happen on 33 the instant; as, in imminent danger of one's life.

34 1. Threatening to occur immediately; near at hand; impending; -- said especially of misfortune or peril. ``In 35 danger imminent." (Source: Webster's Revised Unabridged Dictionary, © 1996, 1998 MICRA, 36 Inc.)

37 Having already sidestepped the issue of whether filing a "zero return" constitutes an unlawful act, Judge George haphazardly,
38 and improperly, dismisses the crucial Brandenburg "test" as inappropriate in Schiff's case because the speech in Schiff's book
39 "incorporates the (tax) scheme" thereby implying that Schiff's speech is the actual crime and therefore that this test need not 40 be applied.

41 The entire nature of the Supreme Court's Brandenburg litmus test revolves around the direct incitement of "imminent" lawless
42 behavior - i.e., in the case of Brandenburg (and its supporting case citations) imminent VIOLENT behavior. (Brandenburg

1 was a Klansman engaged in inflammatory, racist speech. His speech was upheld as constitutional because he merely
2 advocated the breaking of the law.)

3 Judge George takes license in citing several sympathetic Court decisions, while choosing to ignore the direct guidance of the 4 Supreme Court regarding this crucial legal test necessary to ban speech.

5 In short, the Court makes no attempt to establish how reading a book containing a legal analysis and instructions on how to
6 file a tax return could result in anything resembling "imminent" activity of ANY type - whether lawful or not. The judge
7 seems content - as the other District tax case judges seem to be - of tolerating a mere logical relationship between this
8 "unlawful" speech and a subsequent "criminal act." With that linkage established, the "imminence" element to banning
9 speech is cleanly dismissed out of hand.

10 By this court's logic, anyone who wrote a "how-to" book containing any information that was subsequently used in a crime -
11 no matter how far removed from the alleged proximate cause -- and regardless of whether the speech was false or not - could 12 be held liable for his/her speech or writings.

13 Illegal Acts

14 In the last section of the injunction order, the judge cements his previous conclusion of the false, (and thereby criminal),
15 nature of Schiff's speech by citing a handful of free speech cases involving bomb makers, illegal drug manufacturers and "hit-
16 men" that purport to, by example and association, show how speech that leads directly to and induces specific criminal
17 conduct is not protected.

18 Of course unlike exploding a bomb or killing another human being -- which are reasonably understood to be plainly criminal
19 acts - the filing of a tax return per instructions and legal advice of a court-acknowledged tax expert that specifically and 20 plainly cites decisions of the Supreme Court and the Internal Revenue Code itself is much harder to comprehend as an overt 21 criminal act.

22 Conclusion

23 The legal arguments and carefully selected lower level court cases cited by Judge George throughout the Order clearly appear
24 strained in their effort to support a justifiable ban of Schiff's book and appear to set the stage for the Ninth Circuit to deny an
25 appeal from Schiff. The clearly protected political content of the book is outright ignored. It is obvious that the government
26 has found Schiff's speech (and many other tax "protestors") intolerable simply because the speech conveys details of the 27 income tax fraud and that they have provided methods on how to effectively contravene its effects.

28 To be sure, the banning of speech through restraining orders and like vehicles are extraordinary remedies that can be
29 implemented without a trial by jury, were designed to temporarily protect rights, property and the public tranquility at risk
30 until other legal remedies could be effected. They were never intended for the purposes of suppressing, or otherwise
31 circumventing, rightful, lawful public debates and discussions about the tax codes or the abuses of government power.

32 The extraordinary remedy of enjoining speech was never intended to replace the proper processes of due process and the 33 enforcement of laws as executed via indictments, prosecution and the judicial appeal process. The delegated and strictly 34 limited legal authority of our government to collect taxes DOES NOT, and CANNOT, ever trump the sovereign People's 35 right to free speech.

36 That the judiciary would openly sanction the use of these extraordinary legal remedies and affirmatively deny Schiff his 37 constitutionally protected right to speech while the government - for 13 years - has had the ability and resources to openly
38 pursue Schiff with full, public criminal charges for his allegedly unlawful acts - AND HAS NOT -- should not be
39 tolerated. That our media would ignore -- and even unquestioningly facilitate -- this carnage on our Constitution is deplorable.

40 In the pivotal case New York Times Co. v. Sullivan (1964), Justice Brandeis, is cited from his concurring opinion in Whitney
41 v. California, 274 U.S. 357, 375-376 restating the rationale behind free speech:

42 "Those who won our independence believed . . . that public discussion is a political duty, and that this should be
43 a fundamental principle of the American government. They recognized the risks to which all human institutions
44 are subject. But they knew that order cannot be secured merely through fear of punishment for its infraction; that

1 it is hazardous to discourage thought, hope and imagination; that fear breeds repression; that repression breeds
2 hate; that hate menaces stable government; that the path of safety lies in the opportunity to discuss freely supposed
3 grievances and proposed remedies, and that the fitting remedy for evil counsels is good ones. Believing in the 4 power of reason as applied through public discussion, they eschewed silence coerced by law--the argument of 5 force in its worst form. Recognizing the occasional tyrannies of governing majorities, they amended the 6 Constitution so that free speech and assembly should be guaranteed." [emphasis added]

7 Will the People silently endure these abuses? We shall see.

8 "The liberties of a people never were, nor ever will be, secure, when the transactions of their rulers may be 9 concealed from them."
10 [Patrick Henry]

11 "We are not afraid to entrust the American people with unpleasant facts, foreign ideas, alien philosophies, and 12 competitive values. For a nation that is afraid to let its people judge the truth and falsehood in an open market is 13 a nation that is afraid of its people."

15 6.12.6 2002: Definition for "Acts of Congress" removed from Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure

16 The definition of the term "acts of Congress" was formerly an especially good means to demonstrate the very limited territorial
17 jurisdiction of the United States Courts. One place to look for that definition was in Rule 54(c) of the Federal Rules of 18 Criminal Procedure. We quoted this rule in chapters 4 and 11 of this book as a means to demonstrate the very limited
19 jurisdiction of the federal government starting in mid 2002.

20 Rule 54\(c\) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure (prior to Dec. 2002)

21 "Act of Congress" includes any act of Congress locally applicable to and in force in the District of Columbia,
22 in Puerto Rico, in a territory or in an insular possession."

23 Subsequently in Dec. 2002, the Federal Judiciary rewrote the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure and took the contents of 24 Rule 54 and moved it to Rule 1 of the Rules. They then removed the definition of "acts of Congress" from the definitions.
25 Below is the explanation of what they did, from the notes under Rule 1:

26 NOTES OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON RULES - 2002 AMENDMENT

27 Rule 1 is entirely revised and expanded to incorporate Rule 54, which deals with the application of the rules.
28 Consistent with the title of the existing rule, the Committee believed that a statement of the scope of the rules
29 should be placed at the beginning to show readers which proceedings are governed by these rules. The Committee
30 also revised the rule to incorporate the definitions found in Rule 54(c) as a new Rule 1(b).

31 ...

32 Rule 1(b) is composed of material currently located in Rule 54(c), with several exceptions. First, the reference
33 to an "Act of Congress" has been deleted from the restyled rules; instead the rules use the self-explanatory term
34 "federal statute." Second, the language concerning demurrers, pleas in abatement, etc., has been deleted as being
35 anachronistic. Third, the definitions of "civil action" and "district court" have been deleted. Fourth, the term
36 "attorney for the government" has been expanded to include reference to those attorneys who may serve as special
37 or independent counsel under applicable federal statutes. The term "attorney for the government" contemplates 38 an attorney of record in the case.

39 [See <http://www.law.cornell.edu/rules/frcrmp/NRule1.htm>]

40 Black's Law Dictionary doesn't define the term nor could we find any other definition that was as clear as the one above, but 41 now, like all the other good leads that freedom fighters have discovered, the truth has once again been covered up and
42 obscured by your deceitful public "servants" in order to perpetuate the illusion that they have more authority than the 43 Constitution gives them. Write both your Congressman and the United States Committee on the Judiciary to complain at:

45 6.12.7 1992: William Conklin v. United States

In this section, we'll discuss some of the incredible chicanery and legal trickery that was pulled by the federal courts in conspiring with the IRS in misapplying the Internal Revenue Code to extort and oppress of the rights of a specific Citizen, William Conklin. Bill is a famous tax resistance advocate who wrote a fascinating book called Why No One is Required to File Tax Returns: Reforming Tax Laws Using Our Fifth Amendment Rights.<sup>412</sup> He runs a great website found at:

<http://www.anti-irs.com/>

Bill used his Fifth Amendment rights exclusively to litigate not having to file federal income tax returns. On his website and in his book, he largely ignores the 861/source issue that is one of the two themes of this document. He has a lot of very good and persuasive arguments about the Fifth Amendment, and he deadlocked the federal district courts on the income tax issue for over five years because of some of the very serious constitutional questions he raised that the courts refused to deal with and delayed ruling on! On his website, he states that he has won against the IRS seven times! Here are some of his cases:

1. Church of World Peace, Inc. v IRS, 715 F.2d. 492
2. United States v. Church of World Peace, 775 F.2d. 265
3. United States v Church of World Peace, 878 F.2d. 1281
4. Conklin v. United States, 812 F.2d. 1318
5. Conklin v. C.I.R., 897 F.2d. 1032
6. Tavery v. United States, 897 F.2d. 1027
7. Tavery v. United States, 897 F.2d. 1027, Civ. No. 87-Z-180 (1987), USDC Colorado

For at least the past ten years, Bill has challenged everyone by offering at least $50,000 to the first person who can show him how he can file an income tax return without violating his Fifth Amendment right to not incriminate himself! Every time he publishes a new version of his book, he ups the ante! To date, no one, including famous Hollywood criminal lawyers like Melvin Belli, has been able to satisfy his challenge! He has more than adequately made his point that direct income taxes violate the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution on this basis alone! But this wasn't enough, he took the issue all the way up to the Supreme Court. It was a hot potato for the Supreme Court so they denied his right to litigate the issue there (violation of the First Amendment right of free speech and of ability to petition the government for redress of grievances), which was another way of saying:

"We don't want to argue with you and we know you are right, and if people hear the truth about, we're in trouble!"

He had to appeal to the Supreme Court because the federal district court, after a 5-year delay reaching a verdict (!), ruled against him on the surface, but proved his point indirectly!

We don't have room here to discuss all of his cases, but here is a quote from Judge Nottingham in Bill's case of Conklin v. United States, 812 F.2d. 1318, which he said in open court on August 27, 1992. Remember, the issue was Bill Conklin litigating to defend his right not to be compelled to incriminate himself by filing or signing an income tax return, and he filed a tax return he wouldn't sign and then litigated his right not to have to pay the $500 frivolous return penalty assessed by the IRS:

"And one of the fatal things that I—or things that you are overlooking—I will not say it is fatal, although it appears to me it may be fatal—is when you do not sign a return, the reason that the tax collection system is frustrated is because you are not signing under the penalty of perjury. I mean, if everybody could do what you did, the tax collection system would collapse, which you know I am sure some people would argue is not a bad result. But it is not one that I am in a position to bring about."<sup>413</sup>

Are you starting to see the picture? Judge Nottingham knows it is unconstitutional but his bigger concern is that he doesn't want to undermine the tax system because his job would be threatened! According to 28 U.S.C. §134(a), federal judges must be on "good behavior" in order to hold office, and can be removed from office on bad behavior. Could it be that in this case, declaring income taxes unconstitutional might be described by the Congress, who would impeach him, as being "bad behavior"? WE THINK SO!!!

1 We'd also like to repeat some of Bill's own words from his book:

2 Notice that the judge basically told me that I could not possibly win because I would overturn the federal tax
3 system. Of course, that was the point of my lawsuit to begin with!

4 After thinking about the case for five years(!), he decided to rule against me. He took the position that the Fifth
5 Amendment does not apply to tax returns because the Fifth Amendment applies only to "compelled testimony."
6 In other words, the Fifth Amendment only applies to information that individuals are required to give to the 7 government.

8 Since I had argued that the Fifth Amendment applies to tax returns because I felt that their filing was compelled
9 by the penal provisions of the law, it is clear that Judge Nottingham took the position that individuals are not
10 required to give information to the government on the 1040 returns (or, in other words, he was talking like the 11 IRS talks by saying that filing is "voluntary"), and that is why the Fifth Amendment cannot be applied.

12 The Court Rules in Opposition to the U.S. Supreme Court

13 Judge Nottingham had to rule directly against the position of the Supreme Court in Garner vs. U.S., supra.
14 Remember, the Garner Court took the position that information on tax returns is "compelled testimony" for 15 purposes of the Fifth Amendment.

16 Furthermore, Judge Nottingham also accused me of taking a blanket Fifth Amendment position, even though I
17 certainly had not done that. In fact, I had completely filled out the return and provided supporting documentation
18 and paid the tax that I voluntarily self-assessed. The Supreme Court took the position that if an individual so
19 much as even admits to having books and records, he waives the Fifth Amendment protections of his rights
20 because the Fifth Amendment does not apply to documents, it only applies to testimony.<sup>414</sup> Judge Nottingham
21 also ruled that "Plaintiff has wholly failed to persuade me that truthful completion of the IRS Form 1040 or any 22 related forms would tend to incriminate him."

23 The Judge Answers a Question I Did Not Ask

24 The judge answered a question that I did not ask. How could the judge know if a piece of information would
25 incriminate me? There is no way either of us could know that! But I was not arguing that I might incriminate
26 myself. I was arguing that I could not be required to waive my Fifth Amendment protections of my rights. As a
27 layman, there is no way I could be presumed to know if a piece of information would be incriminating or not. His 28 opinion duly impressed me again as to how tricky the courts can be in their "Alice in Wonderland" language.

29 I appealed the case to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Tenth Circuit upheld the lower Court and thus
30 also took a position exactly opposite to the position taken by the Supreme Court in the Garner case. The circuit
31 court judges held that information on a tax return is not compelled, and the judges also accused me of taking a
32 blanket Fifth Amendment position even though I had answered all the questions.

33 I could not believe it! It was as if the court had not even looked at my return! Then the Tenth Circuit Court sent
34 the case back to the lower court for any further recommendations by Judge Nottingham. The government seized
35 the opportunity to ask Judge Nottingham to order me to pay the amount it estimated it had cost the IRS in attorney
36 time to respond to my complaint. I was amazed when the attorneys for the IRS submitted a $6,000 bill for their
37 time! I was really flabbergasted when Judge Nottingham assessed me the entire amount—this for raising the 38 "frivolous" argument of law that individuals are required to waive their Fifth Amendment rights when they file 39 tax returns!

40 For me, the judge's actions underscored the unfair bias of the courts against someone who is challenging the 41 incongruities of our income tax laws. Think about the contradictions in this scenario: The judge was saying that
42 this was an obviously frivolous issue—an issue that even I, a layman, would immediately realize could quickly be
43 defeated. Yet when the government submitted a $6,000 bill for the time that it required for two professional 44 attorneys to defeat my position, the judge accepted their bill and the many hours it represented without question,
45 and considered it appropriate to pass it along to me in its entirety!

46 I Appeal to the Supreme Court

47 I guess I should have been grateful that the judge did not add his time to my bill, too. It took him five years to 48 evaluate my "easily understood as frivolous even by the layman" argument! Of course, I appealed once again,
49 this time on the issue of the newly-imposed $6,000 worth of sanctions. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court was too
50 busy with other far more important issues. It decided to not even consider my objection to the $6,000 sanction.

Putting aside my outrageous $6,000 fine, do you now understand why the IRS continually refers to the filing of tax returns as voluntary? The IRS knows that if it stated that an individual is required to file tax returns, a Fifth Amendment confrontation would be created, so the IRS enforces the idea that tax returns are indirectly required. The IRS requires you to volunteer, and then punishes you if you chose not to volunteer. (Did I just hear you say that you feel like Alice in Wonderland, trying to tie the Queen down to fixed definitions of words?)

His book is really fascinating and we highly recommend it! You can order it from his website. After you read his book, you will probably be as mad as I was at the IRS. Reading his book was one of many reasons I became so committed to writing this book! His book didn't tell enough of the story and I felt people needed to hear "the rest of the story", as Paul Harvey likes to say.

Among some of the many unethical, immoral, and frivolous tactics the IRS and the courts used against Bill in litigating his case were:

1. The judge hearing the case had a conflict of interest with eliminating the income tax and refused to recuse himself or address the issue of recusing himself for cause.
2. The IRS requested and the court agreed to sanction Mr. Conklin with significant legal fees for defending his rights (a violation of his First Amendment right of free speech and his right to petition the government for redress of grievances). This, in effect, amounts to penalizing someone for the exercise of a right, which we said and the Supreme Court has also said, is unconstitutional.
3. The federal court refused to publish his cases, which is to say that they wouldn't allow his cases to go into the case law databases so other people could read about them. This is another First Amendment violation.
4. The court delayed ruling on the case for five years without explanation!
5. They accused Mr. Conklin of litigating frivolous issues. Unbelievable!
6. They overruled the Supreme Court!
7. The Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal (denied his writ), which was a death sentence for him.

Now do you understand the "judicial conspiracy to protect the income tax" that we are talking about? It's pathetic and disgusting!! Judge Nottingham should have been criminally prosecuted for his conduct (and his obvious conflict of interest) in this case with all the claims listed in section 5.8 of the Tax Fraud Prevention Manual, Form #06.008 (entitled "Basis for Claims/Redress Against the Government Involving Wrongful Taking of Taxes")!

6.12.8 1986: 16th Amendment: U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)

"[Defendant] Stahl's claim that ratification of the 16th Amendment was fraudulently certified constitutes a political question because we could not undertake independent resolution of this issue without expressing lack of respect due coordinate branches of government...."
[U.S. v. Stahl, 792 F.2d. 1438 (1986)]

This case was a major scandal for the Federal appellate court. The defendant Stahl presented credible evidence that the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was fraudulently claimed to have been ratified by the Secretary of State, Philander Knox, in 1913. The court refused to deal with the issue and ignored all the evidence presented. Instead, they said it wasn't their business to deal with the issue. Congress said the same thing. This leads to the conclusion that there is a federal judicial (as well as a Congressional) conspiracy to protect the income tax.

6.12.9 1938: O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277<sup>415</sup>

The judges' actions with regard to their own salaries provide the evidence that they cooperated with those in the legislative and executive branches of government. Their conduct is evidence of concealing the illegal kickback program. The executive and legislative branches of government must now depend on Federal judges to keep the illegal kickback programs as a source of income to the U.S. Treasury.

Had the Federal judges fought the legal issue of their basic rights as an employee the Act of 1862 would have fallen and the "individual income tax" as enforced today would not exist. There is no lawful way it can be deemed that a Federal Government employee agrees in advance to an employment agreement where the conditions of the kickback changes at the discretion of Congress or anyone else. Treaties cannot be broken. This results in the kickback being legal in part, and in part

1 illegal. The kickback a Federal Government employee agrees to when he/she first takes a job with the Federal Government
2 is legal, but, when changes unilaterally made by Congress create a higher kickback the portion which constitutes the change
3 is illegal. The illegal portion is a debt obligation which the Federal Government employee is forced to discharge. Being
4 forced to pay a debt obligation constitutes involuntary servitude. You cannot agree in advance to involuntarily serve the
5 Federal Government (or anyone else). To force someone to do so is to ignore the laws under the First, Fifth, and Thirteenth
6 Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

7 To show that the Federal Supreme Court Justices actually cooperated with the legislative and executive branches of
8 government in bringing the President and judges taking office after June 6, 1932, under the Federal kickback program, even 9 though they avoided impairment of their own employment contracts, let's look at what they said in 1938 when they used
10 Supreme Court Chief Justice Taney's 1863 letter to the Secretary of the Treasury. Following are several excerpts from the 11 Taney letter as used in O'Malley v. Woodrough, 307 U.S. 277 (1939):

12 At page 288. The Act in question, as you interpret it, diminishes the compensation of every judge three percent,
13 and if it can be diminished to that extent by the name of a tax, it may in the same way be reduced from time to 14 time at the pleasure of the legislature.

15 The justices know the law requires equal treatment. They know the U.S. Constitution prohibits the diminishment of 16 everyone's compensation for services by any means other than an agreement entered into on a voluntary basis prior to
17 employment. They also know Art. III, Sec. 1, which prohibits the diminishment of compensation of Federal judges, was 18 placed into the Constitution of the United States to keep the employment agreements of Federal judges separate from other
19 Federal Government employment agreements so that all Federal judges could answer any legal question regarding labor
20 contracts other than their own with objectivity in mind. They are no longer capable of reviewing violations of Federal 21 employment agreements or any issue with regard to the Federal kickback program as a disinterested third party, making their
22 participation divisive and their opinions, extended as case law, oppressive upon persons who are not Federal Government
23 employees.

24 Though those who constructed the U.S. Constitution probably did not anticipate a Federal kickback program, the Supreme
25 Court Justices in 1862 understood section 86 for what it was and chose to act only to prevent their own employment agreement
26 from being impaired. They could have made their contracts "from time to time at the pleasure of the legislation." BY the 27 statement of Justice Taney in 1863, it also can be assumed justifiably that the Justices knew of the plan of Congress to force
28 it on the balance of society by belief. For this belief to be established and sustained, the cooperation of Federal judges was 29 required and gained. This is documented by their conduct and recorded opinions.

30 The "income" kickback program changes at the pleasure of Congress. And, as we now know, all persons (whether working 31 in the private sector or for a government entity) have been forced into the Federal Government's illegal kickback program.

32 O'Mally opinion at pg. 288:

33 The Judiciary is one of the three great departments of the government created and established by the Constitution.
34 Its duties and powers are specifically set forth, and are of a character that requires it to be perfectly independent
35 of the two other departments, and in order to place it beyond the reach and above even the suspicion of any such 36 influence, the power to reduce their compensation is expressly withheld from Congress, and excepted from their 37 powers of legislation.

38 Note that they avoided using the term "powers of taxation." The justices knew the legislation they were discussing was not 39 a "tax" (direct or indirect).

40 The Judiciary's independence would have been secured had they objected to the law on the legal issue of civil rights that
41 apply to all in society, namely the violation of the Fifth Amendment by illegal, unilateral impairment of existing employment
42 contracts through a forced debt obligation which results in the deprivation of property without due process of law. Also, the 43 Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is violated when no choice is provided--when a person is deprived of freedom of 44 expression as to the changes in his employment agreement.

45 Congressmen, most being lawyers, knew they had no lawful right to use the power of their elected position to arrange for
46 the deprivation of property under the pretense of law; and the IRS and all other Federal Government employees are on notice
47 as to what is includible and what is not includible in "gross income" by the I.R. Code and Regulations. To control the property
48 of natural persons not includible in "gross income" through the force of undue influence not only violates the Constitution
49 and laws of the United States but those of the states as well. The enforcement of the debt obligation created in this fashion

1 is prohibited by civil rights laws and brings up questions of conspiracy with intent to defraud (subjects that will be discussed
2 later). For now, back to Justice Taney's letter discussed in the O'Malley opinion.

3 At pg. 288. "Language could not be more plain than that used in the Constitution. It is moreover one of its most
4 important and essential provisions. For the articles which limit the powers of the legislative and executive
5 branches of the government, and those which provide safeguards for the protection of the citizen in his person
6 and property would be of little value without a judiciary to uphold and maintain them, which was free from every
7 influence, direct or indirect, that might be possibility in times of political excitement warp their judgments."

8 Here the Chief Justice Taney admitted, and subsequent Justices concur, that they knew their duty was to protect the citizen
9 in his person and property. Still, they chose to ignore that duty and protect only their own person and property. By choice,
10 they indirectly stated that they person and property of all other Federal Government employees was not entitled to protection
11 from such deprivation.

12 When the Justices did not fight the 1862 law on the primary civil rights legal issue, they permitted illegal impairment of all
13 other Federal Government employment contracts and permitted debt obligations to be forced upon all Federal Government
14 employees but themselves. These Supreme Court Justices proved their judgment could be influenced and controlled by 15 people in the other branches of government, and they paved the way for the cooperation between all Federal judges and 16 employees of the IRS, the Justice Department, and members of Congress. By the continued conduct of cooperation in 17 concealing the illegal nature of the kickback program, U.S. judges provide evidence that they chose NOT to uphold their duty
18 as the branch of government created as a check and balance on the executive and legislative branches of government. Their 19 duty is to assume that government under the law exists.

20 Getting back to the O'Malley opinion, pages 288-289, we see Justice Taney's letter said:

21 Having been honored with the highest judicial station under the Constitution, I feel it to be more especially my
22 duty to uphold and maintain the constitutional rights of that department of the government, and not by any
23 act or word of mine, leave it to be supposed that I acquiesce in a measure that displaces it from the independent
24 position assigned it by the statesmen who framed the Constitution; and in order to guard against any such
25 inference, I present to you this respectful but firm and decided remonstrance against the authority you have
26 exercised under this act of Congress, and requires you to place this protest upon the public files of your office as 27 the evidence that I have done everything in my power to preserve and maintain the Judicial Department in 28 the position and rank in the government which the Constitution has assigned to it. [emphasis added]

29 Here the Federal Judges state they are concerned with upholding the Constitutional "rights" of the Judicial Department. A
30 government entity does not have rights--it has duties. Hence, to protect such rights is a subjective position which violates the 31 judges' duty to be objective.

32 Those who accept jobs with the government have the duty to uphold the rights of all under the laws of the Constitution of the 33 United States. Federal judges would have complied with their duty if they had fought for their contractual rights on the 34 general civil rights that all persons have, rather than claim a special privilege status, they would have upheld their personal
35 rights and secured the rights of all others at the same time. Hence, they did not do everything in their power to maintain the 36 independence of the Judicial branch of government. Indeed, they did everything in their power to ultimately make the other
37 branches of government dependent on them.

38 These Justices set the standard for all Federal judges. To this day Federal judges compromise their independence when they 39 permit the use of U.S. courtrooms for the illegal enforcement of the IRS service (the imposition of illegal kickback programs 40 upon persons in society).

41 Continuing with what the O'Malley Court said at pg. 289:

42 The letter of the Chief Justice was not answered and, at his request, the Court, May 10, 1863, ordered the letter
43 entered on its records. In 1869, the Secretary of the Treasury requested the opinion of Attorney General Ebenezer
44 Rockwood Hoar as to the constitutionality of the Act construed to extend to judges' salaries. He rendered an
45 opinion in substantial accord with the views expressed in Chief Justice Taney's protest. 13 Op.A.G. 161.
46 Accordingly, the tax on the compensation of the President and or judges was discontinued and the amounts 47 therefore collected from them were refunded--some through administrative channels; others through action of 48 the court of claims and ensuing appropriations of Congress. See Wayne v. U.S., 26 C.Cls. 274, 290; 27 Stat.
49 306.

1 The U.S. judges' compensation for the performance of personal services, just like all other employees, is not subject to a law
2 which impairs the obligation of the agreement of employment. However, as a result of Justice Taney's letter, you can see that
3 the U.S. judges were placed in a class, among citizens, above all others. Their right not to be forced to accept an obligation
4 that does not exist in law, or by employment agreement, was observed. Violation of the civil rights of all other Federal
5 Government employees was permitted to stand, and the U.S. judges actively participated in these violations by concealment.

6 By claiming and receiving special status, Federal judges provided power that was implied and used by the IRS that does not
7 exist under law. The limit of IRS power is to administer to the return of income disbursed to Federal Government employees
8 as a result of their employment agreement.

9 Only through false belief can IRS employees continue to force their will upon all natural persons (Federal Government 10 employees as well as persons working in the private sector and for other governmental entities) by imposing conditions based 11 upon vague laws passed by Congress. Vague laws are enacted because lawyers in our society permit their use by not 12 challenging them.

13 At pages 289, 290 the O'Malley court went on to say:

14 In 1889, Mr. Justice Miller, a member of the Court since 1862 said:

15 "The constitution of the United States has placed several limitations upon the general power [of taxation],
16 and...some of them are implied. One of its provisions is that neither the President of the United States (Art. II, 17 Sec. 1), nor a judge of the Supreme or inferior courts (Art. III, Sec. 1), shall have his salary diminished during 18 the period for which he shall have been elected, or during his continuance in office. It is very clear that when
19 Congress, during the late [Civil] war, levied an income tax, and placed it as well upon the salaries of the 20 President and the judges of the courts as those of other people, that it was a diminution of them to just that 21 extent." [emphasis added]

22 These judges had a duty to declare the law unconstitutional instead of arranging for special privileges. Constitutional
23 restrictions made it equally unlawful for the compensation of all Federal Government employees to be diminished under the 24 pretense of law when it was in fact a unilateral employment agreement change. The conduct of the Federal judges was taken
25 by Congress and the IRS to imply they had power to pave the way for the illegal Federal kickback programs manifested
26 through the filing of a "U.S. Individual Income Tax Returns." The O'Malley case was decided by the Supreme Court in 27 1938, four years before the enactment of the Victory Tax which was used to infer that an "income tax" had been imposed 28 upon the compensation everyone receives in exchange for their labor.

29 The intent of the Federal judges to cooperate with the legislative and executive branches of government in 1862 to start the 30 Federal kickback programs was just as clear by their conduct as is the conduct of Federal judges today. Today, the intent of 31 the Federal judges is to cooperate in perpetuating the false belief that the IRS has uninhibited power over a person's liberty
32 and property. Though maliciously unlawful, the results of that power is real. The evidence is in the fear of the IRS which 33 exists among the U.S. public.

34 The I.R. Code provides the full extent of the IRS power. It is notice to IRS employees and judges of just what is and what is 35 not includible in "gross income" under Subtitle A of the I.R. Code, and will be revealed to you. While most IRS employees
36 hold jobs so limited in scope they would not be cognizant of their illegal activities, Federal judges and lawyers have no
37 excuse. U.S. judges have placed themselves in a "Catch 22" situation. If they allow a Federal Court to be misused in order
38 to force an illegal kickback on property not includible in "gross income" or aid in depriving persons of their liberty by misuse
39 of laws, they are acting illegally. If they claim ignorance of who is subject to the I.R. Code laws and what property is 40 includible in "gross income," they are admitting they do not know the law. Either way they confess they are not competent 41 to retain their jobs.

42 6.12.10 1924: Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501<sup>416</sup>

43 When Congress passed section 213 of the Revenue Act of 1918, Federal judges were not willing to be made a party to the 44 Federal Government's kickback schemes and avoided impairment of their employment contracts by using their judicial power
45 [see Evans v. Gore, 253 U.S. 245 (1920) and Miles v. Graham, 268 U.S. 501 (1924)], expressed in opinions. In the Miles v.
46 Graham, at page 509, the Justices said of the 1918 Act:

1 ...No judge is required to pay a definite percentage of his salary, but all are commanded to return, as a part of
2 "gross income", the compensation received as such" from the United States. From the "gross income" various
3 deductions and credits are allowed, as for interest paid, contributions or gifts made, personal exemptions varying
4 with family relations, etc., and upon the net result assessment is made. The plain purpose was to require all
5 judges to return their compensation as an item of "gross income," and to tax this as other salaries. This is
6 forbidden by the Constitution.

7 In this opinion, the Justices were describing the return of income, or kickback, and its enforcement with regard to existing
8 employment agreements. The statement made that this is forbidden by the Constitution was certainly correct, the Justices
9 just neglected to say in positive, direct and clear language that it actually applied to all Federal government
10 employees. Treating all salaries in this manner, including that of the judges, is "forbidden by the Constitution."

11 The Justices again claimed only the exemption of their salaries from this statute because of special status during their term of 12 office. In stating the kickback is not a fixed amount, but an amount that depends upon the deductions and credits allowed,
13 they confirmed the prediction of Justice Taney in his letter of 1863 that the compensation agreed to "may in the same way"
14 [under the pretence of law] "be reduced from time to time at the pleasure of the legislature..."

15 6.12.11 1915: Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad, 240 U.S. 1<sup>417</sup>

16 The power of the IRS is restricted to the U.S. Government's income that is from within the employment agreement between 17 the Federal Government and its employee. People NOT employed by the Federal Government are not required to include
18 the gross income they earn for personal services in "gross income" under the I.R. Code. Doing so on a "U.S. Individual 19 Income Tax Return" does not make income not includible in gross income under subtitle A of the I.R. Code includible in the 20 legal kickback program. The U.S. Government is powerless to lawfully lay and collect a kickback on such income in the 21 name of "tax." You have the right to surrender control of your personal income, but no IRS scheme can lawfully collect it
22 without your cooperation.

23 By section 7701\(a\)\(31\), Congress placed the burden upon the IRS, the Justice Department, and the U.S. judges not to include
24 income that is not includible in gross income under subtitle "A". All Federal Government employees are on notice that
25 property which is foreign to the U.S. Government is not includible in "gross income" under the I.R. Code. This notice places
26 a duty on the Federal Government employees to be certain only income belonging to the U.S. Government is returned.

27 Sec. 7701\(a\)\(31\). Foreign estate or trust. The terms "foreign estate" and "foreign trust" mean an estate or trust,
28 as the case may be, the income of which from sources without the United States which is not effectively
29 connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includible in gross income
30 under subtitle A." [emphasis added]

31 One's conduct produces income when employed with a source of income. The material element is the identity of the 32 employer. In the U.S. Codes the term, "without the United States" means without the U.S. Government, and "within the 33 United States" means within the U.S. Government. One's conduct cannot be effectively connected with the performance of 34 personal services with a place, only a source of income can pay one. The place or geography is immaterial. The U.S. Codes
35 identify geographical boundaries with the term "outside" or "inside" the United States. Congress shows intent to control us
36 by use of vagueness when such similar phrases are used to express entirely different meanings.

37 By virtue of the definition of "foreign estate or trust," the burden, the duty, is upon Federal Government employees not to 38 include income that is not includible. However, the conduct of the Federal Government employees causes the burden to be
39 switched to each person to defend life, liberty, and property (including labor). Only with knowledge can one place the burden
40 where it belongs--on the Federal Government employees.

41 The point being made now is that only when one has entered into an employment agreement within the U.S. Government is 42 remuneration for personal services "effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States."

43 Any income not effectively connected with a trade or business within the U.S. Government contains no kickback due to the 44 U.S. Government because it is not includible in "gross income" under subtitle A of the I.R. Code. To force a kickback on 45 income that is not includible in "gross income" is to tax such income directly, making it mandatory for the U.S. Government
46 to observe the constitutional restrictions on direct taxation.

In 1915 the Supreme Court recognized the effect enforcement would have in converting what is called "income tax" into a direct tax when they said:

Brushaber v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., 240 U.S. 1, 16, 17 (1915)

Moreover, in addition, the conclusion reached in the Pollock Case did not in any degree involve holding that income taxes generically and necessarily came within the class of direct taxes on property, but, on the contrary, recognized the fact that taxation on income was in its nature an excise entitled to be enforced as such unless and until it was concluded that to enforce it would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard form and consider substance alone,...." [emphasis added]

The justices in the Brushaber case basically agreed with the justices in the 1895 Pollock case that generically the "taxation on income was in its nature an excise," meaning all excise taxes are in their nature a tax on income. This is exactly what I was getting at earlier when describing the power of everyone to tax income and that a tax is only direct when there is no choice with regard to becoming effected by it. The justices of both the Pollock and Brushaber cases knew taxation was not the true issue of the "income tax" enacted by Congress. The true issue being the effect on a person's labor when to enforce income tax on property "would amount to accomplishing the result which the requirement as to apportionment of direct taxation was adopted to prevent, in which case the duty would arise to disregard the form and consider substance." This statement indicates that if the issue were properly presented, the U.S. Courts would have to acknowledge that the kickback in the name of Federal "income tax" is legally enforceable only on income received as a result of an employment agreement within the U.S. Government as the U.S. Government has the right to enforce the return of its own income. All other income is NOT INCLUDIBLE IN GROSS INCOME UNDER SUBTITLE A OF THE I.R. CODE and the IRS has no jurisdiction over such property. With the IRS jurisdiction restricted to U.S. Government property it is legally impossible for them to sustain any action in court (civil or criminal) with regard to any other property.

6.12.12 Conclusions

For all the above reasons and using the examples cited in this section, it is clear that there has been a significant contribution of the judiciary to protecting and expanding the operation of the income tax and make it apply to subjects it was never intended, in violation of the U.S. Constitution and of the several rights of citizens. That makes federal judges who participate candidates for prosecution under the following criminal laws, all of which carry heavy penalties:

1. They are part of a "continuing financial crimes enterprise" (18 U.S.C. §225)
2. Extortionists who "entice citizens into peonage" to the IRS (see 18 U.S.C. §1581; Thirteenth Amendment; 197 U.S. 207, 215 (slavery for indebtedness).
3. Are the subject of a massive conflict of interest (see 28 U.S.C. §455).
4. Are perpetrators of fraud (see 18 U.S.C. §1018).
5. Are committing blackmail by threatening prison time and fines (see 18 U.S.C. §873).
6. Are criminally encouraging the IRS to mail threatening communications (see 18 U.S.C. §876).
7. Are involved in extortion (see 18 U.S.C. §872)
8. Are encroaching on federally and constitutionally protected rights to property and liberty and the pursuit of happiness (see 18 U.S.C. §245)
9. Are involved in "a conspiracy against rights" (see 18 U.S.C. §241)
10. Are "Engaging in monetary transactions in property derived from specified unlawful activity" (see 18 U.S.C. §1957)

6.13 Legal Profession Scandals

"[T]he tax code is the single greatest source of lobbying activity in Washington." -- Rep. Richard K. Armev, R-Texas

"An old preacher was dying. He sent a message for his IRS agent and his Lawyer (both church members), to come to his home. When they arrived, they were ushered up to his bedroom. As they entered the room, the preacher held out his hands and motioned for them to sit on each side of the bed. The preacher grasped their hands, sighed contentedly, smiled and stared at the ceiling. For a time, no one said anything. Both the IRS agent and Lawyer were touched and flattered that the old preacher would ask them to be with him during his final moment. They were also puzzled because the preacher had never given any indication that he particularly liked either one of them.

1 Finally, the Lawyer asked, "Preacher, why did you ask the two of us to come?"

2 The old preacher mustered up some strength, then said weakly, "Jesus died between two thieves, and that's how
3 I want to go, too."

4 6.13.1 Legal Dictionary Definitions for "United States"

5 We looked at five different legal dictionaries and a Collegiate dictionary for the term "United States". Here is a list of the 6 legal dictionaries we examined:

- 7 1. Bouvier's Law Dictionary, Revised Sixth Edition, 1856.
- 8 2. Law Dictionary, Barron's, Copyright 1996, ISBN 0-8120-3096-6.
- 9 3. Merriam-Webster's Dictionary of Law, Copyright 1996. (<http://dictionary.lp.findlaw.com/>)
- 10 4. Black's Law Dictionary, Seventh Edition, Copyright 1999, ISBN 0-314-24130-2.
- 11 5. Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, Copyright 1990, ISBN 0-314-76271-X.

12 Interestingly, only ONE of these dictionaries identified the definition of the legal term "United States", and this edition was 13 out of print after 1999! Recall that we said in section 3.12.1.23 that the definition of "United States" is a very important key
14 to understanding the trick that Congress has played on the American people with the income tax. Even more interesting is 15 that the Sixth Edition of Black's Law Dictionary was the only one of the above which properly and completely defined the 16 term "United States", and even that definition was removed from the Seventh Edition of the same dictionary by the publisher,
17 in an apparent effort to further conceal the truth about the limited jurisdiction of our federal government. If the average
18 American understood that there are actually THREE independent definitions for the term "United States" as ruled by the 19 united states supreme Court in Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, 324 U.S. 652 (1945), then a lot more people we believe would 20 better understand the very limited application of the federal and state income tax statutes. If they understood that the term
21 used in the Internal Revenue Code for "United States" actually means the District of Columbia, then they would understand
22 that they are NOT residents of the [federal] United States**, but instead are residents of the United States of America. This 23 is the foundation of the idea that the IRC is "special law". As we pointed out in section 1.11.3 entitled "How Come my 24 Accountant or Tax Attorney Doesn't Know This", it seems quite clear to us that there are very good reasons why your attorney
25 would claim he didn't know this. Here is a summary of just a few of those reasons:

- 26 1. Lawyers make money by litigating rather than settling.
- 27 2. The way to encourage litigation is to put the most assets and property possible at legal risk, or at least to fool people into 28 thinking they are at risk.
- 29 3. There are two main ways to get the average person to put their assets at legal risk:
  - 30 3.1. Getting a marriage license from the state. Notice we didn't say getting married, because you can get married 31 without a marriage license from the state, and instead have a prenuptial agreement and a private wedding where the 32 priest doesn't sign any kind of marriage license.
  - 33 3.2. Owing taxes to the government, who incidentally own the courts and love to use their own home turf to steal and 34 extort tax money out of the average citizen.
- 35 4. Lawyers therefore have a financial interest to make you believe that your assets are at risk by making you think that you 36 owe income taxes.
- 37 5. If no one owed income taxes, we would need probably 1/2 as many lawyers (and accountants) as we have now and the 38 few that remained would charge less for their services because they would be in far less demand. The following fields 39 of law would see drastic cuts:
  - 40 5.1. Probate attorneys.
  - 41 5.2. Tax attorneys.
  - 42 5.3. Legislators and legislative analysts.
- 43 6. Can you see why the American Bar Association and most lawyers wouldn't want to put the definition of "United States"
44 in any of the legal dictionaries?

45 We would venture to say that probably 70% of attorneys, after you tell them the correct definition of "United States", would 46 claim that they didn't know the proper legal definition or even what the supreme Court said was the definition. Lawyers are 47 just as fallible as the rest of us. We would also venture to say that even the ones who do know the correct definition and who 48 are familiar with the supreme Court's definition of the term would never admit to it because it would undermine their 49 profession! Furthermore, about the same percentage of attorneys don't know that most Americans actually have dual 50 citizenship (federal and state), and what the rights are of each type of citizen.

1 After we examined four contemporary legal dictionaries in vain for a definition of the term “United States”, then we went to
2 Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, 1983, Merriam-Webster, p. 1291 and found the following definition:

3 “United States (1617) a federation of states esp. when forming a nation in a usu. specified territory (advocating
4 a United States of Europe).”

5 Even the non-legal college dictionary doesn’t properly define the term “United States”! Is it any wonder that most Americans
6 don’t even know what it means and are deceived into paying income taxes because of their ignorance(?) ...they couldn’t look
7 up the definition of the term even if they really wanted to know, which most of them don’t anyway! The only way to eliminate
8 this kind of ignorance is to either read this book or to look up the definition on the Internet by reading 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(9).
9 We encourage you to do both, or you will be victimized because of your own ignorance.

10 6.13.2 The Taxability of Wages and Income Derived from “Labor” Rather than “Profit” as Described in CLE 11 Materials

12 We looked through ten different student manuals and reference books addressing Federal Taxation at several law bookstores 13 and a law university bookstore for clarification and explanation of the taxability of the following:

- 14 1. Wages.
- 15 2. Labor.
- 16 3. Compensation for “personal services.”
- 17 4. Salaries.

18 Interestingly, NONE of the over ten federal taxation books and dictionaries and other Continuing Legal Education (CLE)
19 materials addressed ANY of the following:

- 20 1. Wages as “property”.
- 21 2. Income taxes only applying to “profit” and the nature of profit in the context of exchanging labor for wages.
- 22 3. The right to labor as a “common right” that cannot be infringed, regulated, or penalized by the government.
- 23 4. The relationship between graduated taxes on wages and slavery, or how such taxes might infringe on rights.

24 Several of the books had examples of how to apply the Internal Revenue Code to specific situations, but NONE of the 25 examples used receipt of wages as a taxable event. We can only conclude that this omission was a deliberate decision by 26 educators in the legal profession to conceal the dastardly truth about income taxes. We also have to assume that the most
27 popular way to conceal the truth is to NOT mention what is NOT taxable, and only to mention what IS taxable. Is it any 28 surprise then that we have a whole generation of tax attorneys out there who haven’t heard the truth because the very curricula
29 they rely on for their legal education excludes the whole truth? In such an environment, does the oath a lawyer would take if 30 he went on the witness stand mean anything?:

31 “I promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me God.”

32 If you researched the background of most lawyers, you’d find that they, like most doctors, overwhelmingly got into the 33 profession because of greed and that disproportionately few of them believe in “God”. They are too egotistical and self-
34 sufficient to believe in God or to have to depend on Him for anything. How can a lawyer tell the “whole truth” and not lie
35 taking the oath if he was never taught the “whole truth” to begin with and doesn’t believe in God anyway? Let’s face it, like
36 Satan, a majority of the members of the legal profession have misused the gifts that a Creator they don’t believe in has given
37 them, and never bothered to question the laws beyond what they were taught because it was so profitable to not question
38 authority. Perhaps this explains why early law schools in the late 17th Century in this country required a strong theological 39 background as a prerequisite to studying law. Very few, if any, universities have the same requirements for the study of law
40 these days.

41 6.14 Social Security Chronology<sup>418</sup>

42 When the Social Security Administration first began assigning social security numbers in 1935, SSN cards included the 43 statement "NOT FOR IDENTIFICATION" printed upon their face.

1 The card issued in 1964 contained that very statement while all cards issued today no longer do. Over the years a multitude
2 of new, unintended uses for SSNs have evolved. The result is that SSNs are now widely and routinely demanded for purposes
3 of routine identification. As a result, the SSN has now become a de facto National Identification Number.

4 The following will give you some idea of what the free Citizen who never applied for and therefore never received a social
5 security number is up against when dealing with state and federal bureaucrats.

6 It is obtained from a table prepared on January 13, 1998 by Sandy Cerato of the Social Security Administration's Office of
7 Legislation And Congressional Affairs and chronicles the implementation of the social security number for identification
8 purposes, although it was never originally intended as such.

9 Nowhere within the report does it breathe mention of the fact that an SSN is not required by law of a Citizen because nowhere
10 does any law require the Citizen to apply.

11 Table prepared (1/13/98) by Sandy Cerato of SSA's Office of Legislation & Congressional 12 Affairs

13 1935 The Social Security Act (P.L. 74-271) is enacted. It did not expressly mention the use
14 of SSNs, but it authorized the creation of some type of record keeping scheme. Treasury
15 Decision 4704, a Treasury regulation in 1936 which required the issuance of an account
16 number to each employee covered by the Social Security program. The Social Security
17 Board considered various numbering systems and ways (such as metal tags, etc.) by which 18 employees could indicate they had been issued a number

19 1936-1937 Approximately 30 million applications for SSNs were processed between 20 November 1936 and June 30, 1937.

21 1943 Executive Order 9397 (3 C.F.R. (1943-1948 Comp.) 283-284) required: All Federal 22 components to use the SSN "exclusively" whenever the component found it advisable to 23 set up a new identification system for individuals. The Social Security Board to cooperate
24 with Federal uses of the number by issuing and verifying numbers for other Federal 25 agencies

26 1961 The Civil Service Commission adopted the SSN as an official Federal employee
27 identifier. Internal Revenue Code Amendments (P.L. 87-397) required each taxpayer to 28 furnish identifying number for tax reporting.

29 1962 The Internal Revenue Service adopted the SSN as its official taxpayer identification 30 number.

31 1964 Treasury Department, via internal policy, required buyers of Series H savings bonds
32 to provide their SSNs.

33 1965 Internal Revenue Amendments (P.L. 89-384) enacted Medicare. It became necessary
34 for most individuals age 65 and older to have an SSN.

35 1966 The Veterans Administration began to use the SSN as the hospital admissions number 36 and for patient record keeping.

37 1967 The Department of Defense adopted the SSN in lieu of the military service number
38 for identifying Armed Forces personnel.

39 1970 Bank Records and Foreign Transactions Act (P.L. 91-508) required all banks, savings
40 and loan associations, credit unions and brokers/dealers in securities to obtain the SSNs of 41 all of their customers. Also, financial institutions were required to file a report with the 42 IRS, including the SSN of the customer, for any transaction involving more than $10,000.

1 1971 SSA task force report published which proposed that SSA take a "cautious and
2 conservative" position toward SSN use and do nothing to promote the use of the SSN as 3 an identifier. The report recommended that SSA use mass SSN enumeration in schools as 4 a long-range, cost-effective approach to tightening up the SSN system, and consider
5 cooperating with specific health, education and welfare uses of the SSN by State, local,
6 and other nonprofit organizations.

7 1972 Social Security Amendments of 1972 (P.L. 92-603): Required SSA to issue SSNs to 8 all legally admitted aliens at entry and of anyone receiving or applying for any benefit paid
9 for by Federal funds; Required SSA to obtain evidence to establish age, citizenship, or 10 alien status and identity. Authorized SSA to enumerate children at the time they first 11 entered school.

12 1973 Buyers of series E savings bonds are required by the Treasury Department to provide 13 their SSNs. Report of the HEW Secretary's Advisory Committee on Automated Personal 14 Data System concluded that the adoption of a universal identifier by this country was not
15 desirable; also found that the SSN was not suitable for such a purpose as it does not meet
16 the criteria of a universal identifier that distinguishes a person from all others.

17 1974 Privacy Act (P.L. 93-579) enacted effective September 27, 1975 to limit
18 governmental use of the SSN: Provided that no State or local government agency may 19 withhold a benefit from a person simply because the individual refuses to furnish his or her 20 SSN. Required that Federal, State and local agencies which request an individual to 21 disclose his/her SSN inform the individual if disclosure was mandatory or voluntary. (This 22 was the first mention of SSN use by local governments.)

23 1975 Social Services Amendments of 1974 (P.L. 93-647) provided that: disclosure of an
24 individual's SSN is a condition of eligibility for AFDC benefits; and Office of Child
25 Support enforcement Parent Locator Service may require disclosure of limited information
26 (including SSN and whereabouts) contained in SSA records.

27 1976 Tax Reform Act of 1976 (P.L. 94-455) included the following amendments to the 28 Social Security Act: To allow use by the States of the SSN in the administration of any tax, 29 general public assistance, driver's license or motor vehicle registration law within their 30 jurisdiction and to authorize the States to require individuals affected by such laws to 31 furnish their SSNs to the States; To make misuse of the SSN for any purpose a violation of 32 the Social Security Act; To make disclosure or compelling disclosure of the SSN of any 33 person a violation of the Social Security Act. To amend section 6109 of the Internal 34 Revenue Code to provide that the SSN be used as the tax identification number (TIN) for 35 all tax purposes. While the Treasury Department had been using the SSN as the TIN by 36 regulation since 1962, this law codified that requirement. Federal Advisory Committee on 37 False Identification recommended that penalties for misuse should be increased and 38 evidence requirements tightened; rejected the idea of national identifier and did not even 39 consider the SSN for such a purpose.

40 1977 Food Stamp Act of 1977 (P.L. 96-58) required disclosure of SSNs of all household
41 members as a condition of eligibility for participation in the food stamp program. Privacy
42 Protection Study Commission recommended that: No steps be taken towards developing 43 standard, universal label for individuals until safeguards and policies regarding permissible
44 uses and disclosures were proven effective; and Executive Order 9397 be amended so that 45 Federal agencies could no longer use it as legal authority to require disclosure of an 46 individual's SSN. (No action taken.) The Carter Administration proposed that the Social 47 Security card be one of the authorized documents by which an employer could be assured
48 that a job applicant could work in this country but also stated that the SSN card should not 49 become a national identity document.

50 1978 SSA required evidence of age, citizenship, and identity of all SSN applicants.

1 1981 Reagan Administration stated that it "is explicitly opposed to the creation of a national
2 identity card" but recognized the need for a means for employers to comply with the 3 employer sanctions provisions of its immigration reform legislation. Omnibus Budget
4 Reconciliation Act of 1981 (P.L. 97-35) required the disclosure of the SSNs of all adult
5 members in the household of children applying to the school lunch program. Social 6 Security Benefits Act (P.L. 97-123) Section 4 added alteration and forgery of a Social
7 Security card to the list of prohibited acts and increased the penalties for such acts. Section
8 6 required any Federal, State or local government agency to furnish the name and SSN of 9 prisoners convicted of a felony to the Secretary of HHS, to enforce suspension of disability
10 benefits to certain imprisoned felons. Department of Defense Authorization Act (P.L. 97-
11 86) required disclosure of the SSNs to the Selective Service System of all individuals 12 required to register for the draft.

13 1982 Debt Collection Act (P.L. 97-365) required that all applicants for loans under any 14 Federal loan program furnish their SSNs to the agency supplying the loan. All Social 15 Security cards issued to legal aliens not authorized to work within the United States were 16 annotated "NOT VALID FOR EMPLOYMENT" beginning in May.

17 1983 The Social Security Amendments of 1983 (P.L. 98-21) required that new and 18 replacement Social Security cards issued after October 30 be made of banknote paper and 19 (to the maximum extent practicable) not be subject to counterfeiting. The Interest and 20 Dividend Tax Compliance Act (P.L. 98-67) requires SSNs for all interest-bearing accounts 21 and provides a penalty of $50 for all individuals who fail to furnish a correct TIN (usually 22 the SSN).

23 1984 Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (P.L. 98-369) Amended the Social Security Act to 24 establish an income and eligibility verification system involving State agencies
25 administering the AFDC, Medicaid, unemployment compensation, the food stamp
26 programs, and State programs under a plan approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI of the 27 Act. States were permitted to require the SSN as a condition of eligibility for benefits under 28 any of these programs. Amended Section 6050I of the IRC to require that persons engaged
29 in a trade or business file a report (including SSNs) with the IRS for cash transactions over 30 $10,000. Amended Section 215 of the IRC to authorize the Secretary of HHS to publish
31 regulations that require a spouse paying alimony to furnish IRS with the taxpayer
32 identification number (i.e., the SSN) of the spouse receiving alimony payments.

33 1986 The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-603): Required the 34 Comptroller General to investigate technological changes that could reduce the potential
35 for counterfeiting Social Security cards; Provides that the Social Security card may be used
36 to establish the eligibility of a prospective employee for employment; and Required the 37 Secretary of HHS to undertake a study of the feasibility and costs of establishing an SSN
38 verification system Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99-514) requires individuals filing a tax
39 return due after December 31, 1987, to include the taxpayer identification number--usually 40 the SSN--of each dependent age 5 or older. Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986
41 (P.L. 99-750) authorized the Secretary of Transportation to require the use of the SSN on 42 commercial motor vehicle operators' licenses. Higher Education Amendments of 1986
43 (P.L. 99-498) required that student loan applicants submit their SSN as a condition of 44 eligibility.

45 1987 SSA initiated a demonstration project on August 17 in the state of New Mexico
46 enabling parents to obtain Social Security numbers for their newborn infants automatically
47 when the infant's birth is registered by the State. The program was expanded nationwide in 48 1989. Currently, all 50 union states participate in the program, as well as New York City, 49 Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico.

50 1988 Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 (P.L. 100-242) authorized the 51 Secretary of HUD to require disclosure of a person's SSN as a condition of eligibility for

1 any HUD program. The Family Support Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-485): Section 125 required,
2 beginning November 1, 1990, a State to obtain the SSNs of the parents when issuing a birth
3 certificate. Section 704(a) required individuals filing a tax return due after December 31,
4 1989, to include the taxpayer identification number--usually the SSN--of each dependent
5 age 2 or older. The Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-647):
6 Authorized a State and/or any blood donation facility to use SSNs to identify blood donors
7 (205(c)(2)(F)). Required that all title II beneficiaries either have or have applied for an SSN
8 in order to receive benefits. This provision became effective with dates of initial 9 entitlement of June 1989 or later. Beneficiaries who refused enumeration were entitled but 10 placed in suspense. Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 (P.L. 100-690) deleted the $5,000 and 11 $25,000 upper limits on fines that can be imposed for violations of section 208 of the Social 12 Security Act. The general limit of $250,000 for felonies in the U.S. Code now applied to 13 SSN violations under section 208 of the Social Security Act. Also, penalties for misuse of 14 SSNs apply as well in cases where the number is referred to by any other name (e.g., 15 taxpayer identification number (TIN)).

16 1989 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-239) required that the 17 National Student Loan Data System include, among other things, the names and SSNs of 18 borrowers. Child Nutrition and WIC Reauthorization Act of 1989 (P.L. 101-147) requires
19 the member of the household who applies for the school lunch program to provide the SSN
20 of the parent of the child for whom the application is made.

21 1990 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508): Section 7201
22 (Computer Matching and Privacy Protection Amendments of 1990) provided that no
23 adverse action may be taken against an individual receiving benefits as a result of a
24 matching program without verification of the information or notification of the individual
25 regarding the findings with time to contest. Section 8053, required an SSN for eligibility
26 for benefits from the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA). Section 11112, required that 27 individuals filing a tax return due after December 31, 1991, include the taxpayer
28 identification number--usually the SSN--of each dependent age 1 or older. Food and 29 Agricultural Resources Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-624), Section 1735: Required an SSN for 30 the officers of food and retail stores that redeem Food Stamps. Provided that SSNs
31 maintained as a result of any law enacted on or after October 1, 1990, will be confidential
32 and may not be disclosed.

33 1994 Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994 (P.L. 103-34 296): Section 304, authorized the use of the SSN for jury selection. Section 314, authorized 35 cross-matching of SSNs and Employer Identification Numbers maintained by the 36 Department of Agriculture with other Federal agencies for the purpose of investigating
37 both food stamp fraud and violations of other Federal laws. Section 318, authorized the use
38 of the SSN by the Department of Labor in administration of Federal workers' compensation
39 laws.

40 1996 Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-41 193) (Welfare Reform ): Section 111 required the Commissioner of Social Security to 42 develop and submit to Congress a prototype of a counterfeit-resistant Social Security card 43 that: is made of durable, tamper-resistant material (e.g., plastic); employs technologies that 44 provide security features (e.g., magnetic stripe); and provides individuals with reliable
45 proof of citizenship or legal resident alien status. Section 111 also required the 46 Commissioner of Social Security to study and report to Congress on different methods of 47 improving the Social Security card application process, including evaluation of the cost
48 and workload implications of issuing a counterfeit-resistant Social Security card for all
49 individuals and evaluation of the feasibility and cost implications of imposing a user fee
50 for replacement cards. Section 316 required HHS to transmit to SSA, for verification 51 purposes, certain information about individuals and employers maintained under the 52 Federal Parent Locator Service in an automated directory. SSA is required to verify the 53 accuracy of, correct, or supply to the extent possible, and report to HHS the name, SSN,

1 and birth date of individuals and the employer identification number of employers. SSA is
2 to be reimbursed by HHS for the cost of this verification service. This section also required
3 all Federal agencies (including SSA) to report quarterly the name and SSN of each
4 employee and the wages paid to the employee during the previous quarter. Section 317
5 provides that State child support enforcement procedures require the SSN of any applicant
6 for a professional license, commercial driver's license, occupational license, or marriage
7 license be recorded on the application. The SSN of any person subject to a divorce decree,
8 support order, or paternity determination or acknowledgement would have to be placed in 9 the pertinent records. SSNs are required on death certificates. Section 451 provides that, in 10 order to be eligible for the Earned Income Tax Credit, an individual must include on his or 11 her tax return an SSN which was not assigned solely for non-work purposes. Department
12 of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997 (P.L. 104-208) ( Division C (Illegal Immigration 13 Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996) (Immigration Reform): Sections 401-
14 404 provide for 3 specific employment verification pilot programs in which employers
15 would voluntarily participate. In general, the pilot programs would allow an employer to 16 confirm the identity and employment eligibility of the individual. SSA and the Immigration
17 and Naturalization Service (INS) would provide a secondary verification process to 18 confirm the validity of the information provided. SSA would compare the name and SSN
19 provided and advise whether the name and number match SSA records and whether the 20 SSN is valid for employment. Section 414 requires the Commissioner to report to Congress
21 every year, the aggregate number of SSNs issued to non-citizens not authorized to work,
22 but under which earnings were reported. Also requires the Commissioner to transmit to the 23 Attorney General a report on the extent to which SSNs and Social Security cards are used
24 by non-citizens for fraudulent purposes. Section 415 authorizes the Attorney General to 25 require any non-citizen to provide his or her SSN for purposes of inclusion in any record
26 maintained by the Attorney General or INS. Section 656 provide for improvements in 27 identification-related documents; i.e., birth certificates and driver's licenses. These sections 28 require publication of regulations which set standards, including security features and, in 29 the case of driver's licenses, require that an SSN appear on the license. Federal agencies 30 are precluded from accepting as proof of identity, documents which do not meet the 31 regulatory standards. Section 657 provides for the development of a prototype Social 32 Security card. The requirements are the same as in Section 111 of the Welfare reform
33 legislation (described above) with the exception that the Comptroller General is also to 34 study and report to Congress on different methods of improving the Social Security card
35 application process.

36 1997 Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1997 (P.L. 104-208) (Division C--Illegal 37 Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996) (Immigration Reform):
38 Sections 401-404 provide for 3 specific employment verification pilot programs in which 39 employers would voluntarily participate. In general, the pilot programs would allow an 40 employer to confirm the identity and employment eligibility of the individual. SSA and 41 INS would provide a secondary verification process to confirm the validity of the 42 information provided. SSA would compare the name and SSN provided and advise whether 43 the name and number match SSA records and whether the SSN is valid for employment.
44 Section 414 required the Commissioner of Social Security to report to Congress every year
45 the aggregate number of SSNs issued to non-citizens not authorized to work, but under 46 which earnings were reported. Also required the Commissioner of Social Security to 47 transmit to the Attorney General a report on the extent to which SSNs and Social Security
48 cards are used by non-citizens for fraudulent purposes. Section 415 authorized the Attorney
49 General to require any non-citizen to provide his or her SSN for purposes of inclusion in 50 any record maintained by the Attorney General or INS. Section 656 provided for 51 improvements in identification-related documents; i.e., birth certificates and drivers
52 licenses. These sections require publication of regulations which set uniform standards,
53 including security features, and, in the case of drivers licenses, require that an SSN appear
54 on the license. Federal agencies are precluded from accepting as proof of identity
55 documents which do not meet the regulatory standards. Section 657 provided for the 56 development of a prototype Social Security card. The requirements are the same as in

1 Section 111 of the Welfare reform legislation (described above) with the exception that the
2 Comptroller General is also to study and report to Congress on different methods of
3 improving the Social Security card application process. 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997
4 (P.L. 105-34) Section 1090 requires an applicant for an SSN under age 18 to provide
5 evidence of his or her parents' names and SSNs in addition to required evidence of age,
6 identity, and citizenship. Report to Congress on "Options for Enhancing the Social Security
7 Card" released on September 22, 1997.

8 Keep in mind that there is no authority under the Constitution for the government to require that a free Citizen number himself
9 or withhold services if he does not. Certainly the Citizen who chooses not to obtain and use a number or who later revokes
10 the application for the number as some have done faces a future of self-reliance and individual responsibility, with no help
11 from Uncle Sam.

12 6.15 Conclusion: The Duck Test

13 What can one make of this pattern of alterations that disguise the truth behind the law and this pattern of behavior throughout
14 the U.S. Government, including the Congress, the courts, the Treasury, and the IRS to misrepresent it? Is the income tax
15 operating as a hoax? Let's apply the "duck test":

16 "If it looks like a duck, waddles like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it must BE a duck!"

17 Thomas Jefferson said it better:

18 *"Single acts of tyranny may be ascribed to the accidental opinion of a day; but a series of oppressions, begun at 19 a distinguished period, and pursued unalterably through every change in ministers [administrations], too plainly
20 proves a deliberate systematic plan of reducing us to slavery."*

21 We assert that the evidence presented in this document is more than adequate proof that the income tax does not apply not 22 only to most Americans, but it doesn't apply to most "U.S. citizens" either! Has our detailed exposition raised doubt in your 23 mind about what the law says? Here is what the Supreme Court has said about doubt.

24 *"In the interpretation of statutes levying taxes it is the established rule not to...enlarge their operations so as to 25 embrace matters not specifically pointed out. In case of doubt they are construed most strongly against the 26 government, and in favor of the citizen."
27 [Gould v. Gould, 245 U.S. 151 (1917)]*

28 *"Keeping in mind the well-settled rule that the citizen is exempt from taxation unless the same is imposed by
29 clear and unequivocal language, and that where the construction of a tax law is doubtful, the doubt is to be
30 resolved in favor of those upon whom the tax is sought to be laid."
31 [Spreckels Sugar Refining Co. v. McClain, 192 U.S. 397 (1904)]*

32 Shouldn't these court rulings be applied to the income tax?

33 Because of Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution, Congress could not impose a tax on all income earned in the United States
34 of America. What Congress did instead was to impose a municipal tax within only the District of Columbia on matters which 35 they could tax (international and foreign commerce), and write the law in such a way that it would give the impression that
36 it also applied to the income of most Americans outside that jurisdiction and in the 50 union states. The Secretary of the 37 Treasury wrote corresponding regulations with a similar goal: to tell a truth while implying a lie. Despite a longstanding and
38 ongoing effort by some in government to confuse and obfuscate, the literal truth has remained in the law. Though it is a
39 complex process, the current statutes and regulations by themselves do reveal the limited application of the Internal Revenue
40 Code. The older statutes and regulations then add extensive reinforcement and clarity to the conclusions reached by 41 deciphering the current law. The historical documents also give ample evidence to justify an accusation, against the 42 legislators in Congress and the authors of the regulations at the Department of the Treasury, of intent to defraud the American 43 people of money not legally owed.

44 Aside from arguments about specific details, there is one giant hurdle for those who would still insist that most Americans
45 receive taxable income: what is the alternate conclusion that accounts for every citation in this document? There is extensive
46 documentation, not only in the current statutes and regulations, but throughout 87 years of statutory and regulatory history,
47 which supports the conclusions of this document. It would be absurd to claim that a tax was imposed on the income of most

1 Americans, and that by mistake or coincidence Congress and the Secretary put into the statutes and regulations such an
2 enormous amount of information, spanning nearly a century, which indicates that the tax applies only to those engaged in
3 international or foreign commerce. Quite simply, there is no conclusion other than the conclusion of this document which 4 explains all of the evidence.

5 QUESTION FOR DOUBTERS: Is there some other “interpretation” of the statutes and regulations which would show
6 domestic income of United States citizens as taxable, and also explain the meaning of all of the citations in this document?

8. DEFINITIONS

alien: A person born in a foreign country, who owes his allegiance to that country; one not a citizen or national of the country in which he is living. A RESIDENT ALIEN is a person admitted to permanent resident status in the country by the immigration authorities but who has not been granted citizenship.

An alien is a “person” within the meaning of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. 347 U.S. 522, 530. And alienage is treated as a “suspect” classification for purposes of equal protection analysis. For example, the Supreme Court has invalidated statuses that prevent aliens from entering a state’s civil service and from receiving educational benefits. But where a job is “bound up with the operation of the State as a governmental entity”—policemen and public school teachers, for example—states may exclude aliens. 441 U.S. 68, 73.<sup>1</sup>

burden of proof: A rule of evidence that makes a person prove a certain thing or the contrary will be assumed by the court. For example, in criminal trials, the prosecution has the burden of proving the accused guilty because innocence is presumed.

citizen of the United States: — defined in 8 U.S.C. §1401. In the context of federal statutes: Means a person born or naturalized in the federal United States (federal zone) and a subject citizen of Congress. Typically, the U.S. government allows “nationals”, who are persons born outside the federal zone and inside the 50 states to declare that they are “U.S. citizens” so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not “U.S. citizens” in the context of federal statutes as legally defined. “U.S. citizens” are possessors of statutory ‘civil’ rights and privileges granted by Congress and stipulated by statute, code or regulation, found mostly in 48 U.S.C. §1421b. In the context of the Constitution and the rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court: A “national of the United States” born in any one of the states of the Union and not on federal territory and defined under 8 U.S.C. §1408 .

claim: the assertion of a right to money or property; the aggregate of operative facts giving rise to a right enforceable in the courts. A claim must show the existence of a right, an injury, and a prayer for damages. In tax cases, this means that the petitioner who is litigating against wrongful taking of taxes must show a law or Constitutional right that has been violated in the process of illegally taking taxes, a harm or injury that is quantifiable because of that taking, such that the court can award damages against the IRS. Otherwise, the tax case will be dismissed without prejudice because it lacks merit. Naïve and inexperienced tax freedom advocates who represent themselves in court as pro se litigants quite commonly do not specify a claim upon which they can base their case and usually end up being assessed attorney fees and having their case dismissed by the courts.

coercion: “Compulsion; constraint; compelling by force or arms or threat. General Motors v. Belvins, D.C.Colo., 144 F.Supp. 381, 384. It may be actual, direct, or positive, as where physical force is used to compel act against one’s will, or implied, legal or constructive, as where one party is constrained by subjugation to another to do what his free will would refuse. As used in testamentary law, any pressure by which testator’s action is restrained against his free will in the execution of his testament. “Coercion” that vitiates confession can be mental as well as physical, and question is whether accused was deprived of his free choice to admit, deny, or refuse to answer. Garrity v. State of N.J., U.S.N.J., 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616, 618, 17 L.Ed.2d. 562.

A person is guilty of criminal coercion if, with purpose to unlawfully restrict another’s freedom of action to his detriment, he threatens to: (a) commit any criminal offense; or (b) accuse anyone of a criminal offense; or (c) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or to impair his credit or business repute; or (d) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action. Model Penal Code, §212.5.

color: “Pretense of official right to do an act made by one who has no such right. An act under color of office is an act of any officer who claims authority to do the act by reason of his own office when the office does not confer on him any such authority.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition]

color of office: “A claim or assumption of right to do an act by virtue of an office, made by a person who is legally destitute of such right.” Feller v. Gates, 40 Or. 543, 67 P. 416, 56 L.R.S. 630, 91 Am.St.Rep. 492. [Black’s Law Dictionary, 4th Edition]

common right: Right derivative from common law. Strother v. Lucas, 37 U.S. (12 Pet.) 410, 437, 9 L.Ed. 1137. Right peculiar to certain people is not a common right. Perdue v. Zoning Bd. Of Appeals of the City of Norwalk, 118 Conn. 174, 171 A. 26, 28. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition]

compel: The following definitions are offered for the word compel. These definitions bear directly on any arguments having to do with the exercise of 5th Amendment rights as it pertains to the filing of income tax returns :

Black’s Law Dictionary defines the word “compel” as follows:

“To urge forcefully, under extreme pressure. The word ‘compel’ as used in constitutional right to be free from being compelled in a criminal case to be a witness against one’s self means to be subjected to some coercion, fear, terror, inducement, trickery or threat—either physically or psychologically, blatantly or subtly; the hallmark of compulsion is the presence of some operative force producing an involuntary response. U.S. v. Escandar, C.A. Fla., 465 F.2d. 438, 442”

The Random House Dictionary of the English Language defines “compel” as follows:

“1. To force, drive, esp. to a course of action. 2. To secure or bring about by force. 3. To force to submit; subdue. 4. To overpower.”

definition: A description of a thing by its properties; an explanation of the meaning of a word or term. The process of stating the exact meaning of a word by means of other words. Such a description of the thing defined, including all essential elements and excluding all nonessential, as to distinguish it from all other things and classes.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 423] discovery: The term used to describe various methods for obtaining evidence in advance of trial, including such things as interrogatories, depositions and various motions to permit the inspection of documents etc.

distrain: the act or process of distraint, whereby a person (the DISTRAINOR), without prior court approval, seizes the personal property of another located upon the distrainor’s land in satisfaction of a claim, as a pledge for the performance of a duty, or in reparation of an injury. Where goods are seized in satisfaction of a claim, the distrainor can hold the goods until the claim is paid and, failing payment, may sell them in satisfaction. Originally, distress was a landlord’s remedy (see lien [LANDORD’S LIEN], 324 A.2d. 102, 104) and was distinguishable from attachment, which is a court-ordered seizure of goods or property. The persons whose goods are distrained upon has recourse against the wrongful distrainor in replevin.

Distrain has been superseded in most states of the United States by statutory provisions for debt collection, the enforcement of security interests, and landlord-tenant relations.

donation: A gift. A transfer of the title of property to one who receives it without paying for it. The act by which the owner of a thing voluntarily transfers the title and possession of the same from himself to another person, without any consideration. [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 487]

due process: administering of law through courts of justice in accordance with established and sanctioned legal principles and procedures, and with safeguards for the protection of individual rights. As determined by custom and law, due process has become a guarantee of civil as well as criminal rights. In the United States, the phrase due process first appears in the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1791. Because the amendment refers specifically to federal and not state actions, another amendment was necessary to include the states. This was accomplished by the 14th Amendment, ratified in 1868. Thus was established at both federal and state levels that no person "shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." The guarantee of due process requires that no person be deprived of life, liberty, or property without a fair and adequate process. In criminal proceedings this guarantee includes the fundamental aspects of a fair trial, including the right to adequate notice in advance of the trial, the right to counsel, the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, the right to refuse self-incriminating testimony, and the right to have all elements of the crime proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

duress: "Any unlawful threat or coercion used by a person to induce another to act (or to refrain from acting) in a manner he or she otherwise would not (or would). Subjecting person to improper pressure which overcomes his will and coerces him to comply with demand to which he would not yield if acting as free agent. Head v. Gadsden Civil Service Bd., Ala.Civ.App., 389 So.2d. 516, 519. Application of such pressure or constraint as compels man to go against his will, and takes away his free agency, destroying power of refusing to comply with unjust demands of another. Haumont v. Security State Bank, 220 Neb. 809, 374 N.W.2d. 2,6.

A contract entered into under duress by physical compulsion is void. Also, if a party's manifestation of assent to a contract is induced by an improper threat by the other party that leaves the victim no reasonable alternative, the contract is voidable by the victim. Restatement, Second, Contracts §§174, 175.

As a defense to a civil action, it must be pleaded affirmatively. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(c).

As an affirmative defense in criminal law, one who, under the pressure of an unlawful threat from another human being to harm him (or to harm a third person), commits what would otherwise be a crime may, under some circumstances, be justified in doing what he did and thus not be guilty of the crime in question. See Model Penal Code §2.09. See also Coercion; Economic duress; Extortion; Undue influence."

employee: (see 26 U.S.C. §3401(c)) For purposes of this chapter, the term "employee" includes an officer, employee, or elected official of the United States, a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing. The term "employee" also includes an officer of a corporation. Refer to section 3.6.1.1 for further explanation.

employer: (see 26 U.S.C. §3401(d)). For purposes of this chapter, the term "employer" means the person for whom an individual performs or performed any service, of whatever nature, as the employee of such person, except that -

(1) if the person for whom the individual performs or performed the services does not have control of the payment of the wages for such services, the term "employer" (except for purposes of subsection (a)) means the person having control of the payment of such wages, and

(2) in the case of a person paying wages on behalf of a nonresident alien individual, foreign partnership, or foreign corporation, not engaged in trade or business within the United States, the term "employer" (except for purposes of subsection (a)) means such person.

extortion under the color of office:

*"...Unlawful taking by any officer by color of his office, of any money or thing of value, that is not due to him, or more than is due or before it is due." 4 Bla.Comm. 141; Com. v. Saulsbury, 152 Pa. 554, 25 A. 610; U.S. v. Denver, D.C.N.C. 14 F. 595; Bush v. State, 19 Ariz. 195, 168 P. 508, 509... FOIA: The Freedom Of Information Act. FOIA is the secret key to unlock a vast amount of information, especially information about you. Thanks to this act, everyday citizens have access to records, files, and other information just for the asking. Of course you are required to use the proper format in your request, but extremely valuable information can be obtained by using this simple procedure that very few use. The IRS, for instance, keeps literally countless secret files on citizens (law-abiding or not) of the United States. Most folks would be interested in

1 knowing what kind of information is being kept on them by the government. By using FOIA, you can find out what
2 they know what they don't..... in addition to protecting yourself and building your case against them.

3 foreign country: IRS Publication 54 (2000), p. 12, defines this term as follows:

4 "A foreign country usually is any territory (including the air space and territorial waters) under the sovereignty
5 of a government other than that of the United States.... The term 'foreign country' does not include Puerto Rico,
6 Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, or U.S. possessions such as 7 American Samoa."

8 You will note that this definition is consistent with 26 U.S.C. §7701, which defines "United States" as the District
9 of Columbia and the States" and "State" as the District of Columbia. Another way of stating this is that the "U.S."
10 includes only the "federal zone" as used in the tax code and as described in section 4.7. With this definition in 11 mind, the 50 states of the United States of America are considered as foreign countries while any federal possession
12 or territory is considered part of the "federal zone".

13 Foreign government: "The government of the United States of America, as distinguished from the government of the several 14 states." (Black's Law Dictionary, 5th Edition; removed from the Sixth and Seventh Editions by a legal profession
15 that wants to hide the truth and sell you into slavery to the U.S. government by unlawfully extending the jurisdiction
16 for personal income taxes outside the federal zone.)

17 Foreign Laws: "The laws of a foreign country or sister state." (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition)

18 Foreign States: "Nations outside of the United States...Term may also refer to another state; i.e. a sister state. The term
19 'foreign nations', ...should be construed to mean all nations and states other than that in which the action is brought;
20 and hence, one state of the Union is foreign to another, in that sense." (Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition)

21 forum: Lat. A court of justice, or judicial tribunal; a place of jurisdiction; a place of litigation; an administrative body.
22 Particular place where judicial or administrative remedy is pursued. See also Venue. (Black's Law Dictionary, 23 Sixth Edition). The federal district, circuit, and Supreme courts and the "federal zone" constitute the forum within 24 which the government of the United States operates and exercises exclusive jurisdiction. In more limited cases, it
25 also has jurisdiction in criminal matters that involve multiple states.

26 income: Below is the definition, taken from the Supreme Court case of Eisner v. Macomber, 252 U.S. 189 (1920) and the 27 definition found in Bouvier's Law Dictionary:

28 'Income may be defined as the gain derived from capital, from labor, or from both combined,' provided it be
29 understood to include profit gained through a sale or conversion of capital assets, to which it was applied in the 30 Doyle Case, 247 U.S. 183, 185, 38 S.Sup.Ct. 467, 469 (62 L.Ed. 1054).

31 Internal Revenue Service: The current name of the "Bureau of Internal Revenue" (BIR) of Puerto Rico. The "Federal Alcohol
32 Administration" created on 8-29-1935, 49 Stat. 977; 27 U.S.C. §201, was abolished and absorbed in the BIR on 33 4-2-1940 by Reorganization Plan No. III of 1940, 5 F.R. (Federal Register) 2107, 54 Stat. 1232, set out in the 34 Appendix to Title 5, Government Organization and Employees. Department of the Treasury Order (TDO) 221 of 35 July 1, 1972, established the BATF and transferred to it the alcohol and functions of the Internal Revenue Service.
36 Public law 97-258 §5(b), Sept 13, 1982, 96 Stat. 1068, 1085 repealed §2 of the 1940 Reorganization Plan No III
37 and the first section of which enacted Title 31, Money and Finance. Reference: US Statues at Large and 27 U.S.C.
38 §201

39 levy, n: A seizure. The obtaining of money by legal process through seizure and sale of property; the raising of the money
40 for which an execution has been issued.

41 The process whereby a sheriff or other state official empowered by writ or other judicial directive actually 42 seizes, or otherwise brings within her control, a judgment debtor's property which is taken to secure or satisfy the 43 judgment.

In reference to taxation, the word may mean the legislative function and declaration of the subject and rate or amount of taxation. People v. Mahoney, 13 Cal.2d. 729, 91 P.2d. 1029; or the rate of taxation rather than the physical act of applying the rate to the property, Lowden v. Texas County Excise Board, 187 Okl. 365 103 P.2d. 98, 100; or the formal order, by proper authority declaring property subject to taxation at fixed rate at its assessed valuation, State v. Davis, 335 Mo. 159, 73 S.W.2d. 406, 407; or the ministerial function of assessing, listing and extending taxes, City of Plankinton v. Kieffer, 70 S.D. 329, 17 N.W.2d. 494, 495, 496; or the extension of the tax, Day v. Inland Steel Co., 185 Minn. 53, 239 N.W. 776, 777; or the doing of whatever is necessary in order to authorize the collector to collect the tax, Syracuse Trust Co. v. Board of Sup'rs of Oneida County, 13 N.Y.S.2d. 390, 394. When used in connection with authority to tax, denotes exercise of legislative function, whether state or local, determining that a tax shall be imposed and fixing amount, purpose and subject of the exaction. Carkonen v. Williams, 76 Wash.2d. 617, 458 P.2d. 280, 286. The qualified electors "levy" a tax when they vote to impose it.

lien: A claim, encumbrance, or charge on property for payment of some debt, obligation or duty. Sullins v. Sullins, 6 Wash.2d. 283, 396 P.2d. 886, 888. Qualified right of property which a creditor has in or over specific property of his debtor, as security for the debt or charge or for performance of some act. Right or claim against some interest in property created by law as an incident of contract. Right to enforce charge upon property of another for payment or satisfaction of debt or claim. Vaughan v. John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co., Tex.Civ.App., 61 S.W.2d. 189, 190. Right to retain property for payment of debt or demand. Bell v. Dennis, 43 N.M. 350, 93 P.2d. 1003, 1006. Security for a debt, duty or other obligation. Hurley v. Boston R. Holding Co., 315 Mass. 591, 54 N.E.2d. 183, 193. Tie that binds property to a debt or claim for its satisfaction. United States v. 1364.76875 Wine Gallons, More or Less, of Spirituous Liquors, D.C.Mo., 60 F.Supp. 389, 392. Liens are "property rights". In re Pennsylvania Central Brewing Co., C.C.A.Pa., 114 F.2d. 1010, 1013. The word "lien" is a generic term and, standing alone, includes liens acquired by contract or by operation of law. Egyptian Supply Co. v. Boyd, C.C.A.Ky., 117 F.2d. 608, 612.

A charge against or interest in property to secure payment of a debt or performance of an obligation. Bankruptcy Code §101.

Lien by operation of law. Where the law itself, without the stipulation of the parties, raises a lien, as an implication or legal consequence from the relation of the parties or the circumstances of their dealings. Liens of this species may arise either under the rules of common law or of equity or under a statute. In the first case they are called "common-law liens;" in the second, "equitable liens;" in the third, "statutory liens."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 922]

national: means a person born or naturalized outside the federal United States (federal zone) but inside the country United States and who is subject to the political but not legislative jurisdiction of the federal government at the time of birth as the Fourteenth Amendment (illegally ratified) requires. Synonymous with "American Citizen", "American National", "Natural Born Sovereign Citizen", or "nonresident alien". Typically, the U.S. government allows and even encourages "nationals" to incorrectly declare that they are "U.S. citizens" so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically, they are not "U.S. citizens" as legally defined. 8 U.S.C. §1452, and 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\) define who are "nationals". The following code section from 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\)\(B\) defines the type of "national" that most Americans born in the 50 union states outside of the federal zone qualify as. It is highlighted to bring attention to it:

TITLE 8 > CHAPTER 12 > SUBCHAPTER I > Sec. 1101.
Sec. 1101. - Definitions

(a) As used in this chapter -

(22) The term "national of the United States" means

(A) a citizen of the United States, or

(B) a person who, though not a citizen of the United States, owes permanent allegiance to the United States.

Note that the "United States" term as used in the above section refers to the federal United States, also called the "federal zone". 8 U.S.C. §1401 indicates that all "citizens and nationals of the United States" are also "nationals of the United States". 8 U.S.C. §1101\(a\)\(22\) indicates that not all "nationals" are also "U.S. citizens". Throughout this book, when we use the term "national", we mean either a "citizen, but not a national, of the United States" as described in 8 U.S.C. §1452 and 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B).

occupations of "common right": Any profession you can choose to do or undertake in private industry in any field or trade (even if its for the government) and which do not depend on the authority granted you as part of a political office, being either elected or appointed. Occupations that are not of common right are things you can only do as an officer or politician working for a government agency by virtue of the rights and privileges granted to you as a consequence of your election or appointment to that political office and the authority delegated to you by the law itself. See the case of Simms. v. Ahrens, 271 S.W. 720 for further details.

prima facie: On its face; not requiring further support to establish existence, validity, credibility, etc. An example of this would be an allegation or assertion made by the IRS against a citizen that is never refuted. Therefore, when any kind of assertion or allegation is made that is incorrect, it is important to deny the assertion or it will often be accepted as undisputed fact by the court.

illegal tax protester: A person who resists illegally the paying of appropriate taxes. As of January 1, 1999, the U.S. Congress has eliminated the ability of the IRS to designate a taxpayer as an "illegal tax protester". Here is a part of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 that talks about this (form the website at <http://www.irs.gov/>):

Background: The IRS designates individuals who meet certain criteria as "illegal tax protestors" in the IRS Master File. Congress was concerned that taxpayers may be unfairly stigmatized by a designation as an illegal tax protester.

C. Change(s):

1. The IRS shall not designate any more taxpayers as "illegal tax protesters." Removal of existing "illegal tax protester" designations from the individual master file is not required to begin before January 1, 1999.
2. IRS personnel must disregard any designation in a taxpayer's file ( i.e., revenue agents report or other paper records) as of the date of enactment.
3. As of the date of enactment, IRS personnel should not describe taxpayers in written documents as "illegal tax protesters."
4. The IRS may designate appropriate taxpayers as nonfilers. The IRS must remove the nonfiler designation once the taxpayer has filed valid tax returns for two consecutive years and paid all taxes shown on these returns.

D. Impact: The provision requires reprogramming master file databases.

Law: that which is laid down, ordained, or established. A rule or method according to which phenomenon or actions co-exist or follow each other. Law, in its generic sense, is a body of rules of action or conduct prescribed by the sovereign within a jurisdiction, and having binding legal force. United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co. v. Guenther, 281 U.S. 34, 50 S.Ct. 165, 74 L.Ed. 683. That which must be obeyed and followed by citizens subject to sanctions or legal consequences is a law. Law is a solemn expression of the will of the supreme power, which is the ultimate "sovereign", of the State. California Civil Code, §22. The "law" of a state is to be found in its statutory and constitutional enactments, as interpreted by its courts, and, in absence of statute law, in rulings of its courts. Dauer's Estate v. Zabel, 9 Mich.App. 176, 156 N.W.2d. 34, 37.

In the United States of America, the People, both collectively and individually are the "sovereigns" , according to the Supreme Court:

- Chisholm, Ex'r. v. Georgia, 2 Dall. (U.S.) 419, 1 L.Ed. 454, 457, 471, 472) (1794): "From the differences existing between feudal sovereignties and Government founded on compacts, it necessarily follows that their respective prerogatives must differ. Sovereignty is the right to govern; a nation or State-sovereign is the person or persons in whom that resides. In Europe the sovereignty is generally ascribed to the Prince; here it rests with the people; there, the sovereign actually administers the Government; here, never in a single instance; our Governors are the agents of the people, and at most stand in the same relation

1 to their sovereign, in which regents in Europe stand to their sovereigns. Their Princes have personal
 2 powers, dignities, and pre-eminences, our rulers have none but official; nor do they partake in the 3 sovereignty otherwise, or in any other capacity, than as private citizens."

- 4 • Juilliard v. Greenman, 110 U.S. 421 (1884): "There is no such thing as a power of inherent sovereignty in 5 the government of the United States...In this country sovereignty resides in the people, and Congress can
 6 exercise no power which they have not, by their Constitution entrusted [delegated] to it. All else is withheld."
- 7 • Perry v. U.S., 294 U.S. 330 (1935): "In the United States, sovereignty resides in the people...the Congress
 8 cannot invoke sovereign power of the People to override their will as thus declared."
- 9 • Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886): "Sovereignty itself is, of course, not subject to law, for it is the 10 author and source of law...While sovereign powers are delegated to...the government, sovereignty itself
 11 remains with the people."

12 Therefore, the People are the authors of the law as the "sovereign" or supreme power of the state. The law constitutes 13 essentially a binding written legal agreement or contract among the sovereigns to conduct their affairs according to
 14 some standard of conduct. The sovereign is never the proper subject or object of most laws, unless he violates the 15 contract and thereby injures the equal rights of other fellow sovereigns. Instead, the servants of the sovereign People
 16 working in government are the main object and subject of most civil laws, and laws are enacted mainly with the 17 purpose to delegate and confine the authority of public servants so that they do not injure or undermine the rights of 18 the true sovereigns, the People. Furthermore, only statutes which have been enacted into "positive law" are
 19 considered binding upon all persons within the jurisdiction of the law. The legislative notes under 1 U.S.C. §204
 20 indicate that the Internal Revenue Code is not "positive law", and therefore it can only be described as "special law"
 21 or "private international law" (contractual law) applying to specific persons. Subtitle A of the I.R.C., in fact, is 22 limited mainly to those engaged in a "trade or business" and who work for the U.S. government as Trustees. The 23 Internal Revenue Code cannot be described either as "law" or "positive law" unless and until:

- 24 1. The IRC is first enacted into "positive law" by a majority of the representatives of the sovereign People.
 25 This provides evidence that they voluntarily consented to enforcement actions required to implement the 26 law. Without such consent, no enforcement actions may be attempted, because according to the Declaration
 27 of Independence, all just powers of government derive from the consent of the governed.
- 28 2. Regulations must be written by the Treasury for the enforcement provisions of the enacted positive law, and 29 these regulations must be published in the Federal Register. This puts the public on notice of the 30 enforcement actions that will be attempted against them in enforcing the law, as required by the Fifth
 31 Amendment due process clauses.
- 32 3. The enforcement regulations are then incorporated into the Code of Federal Regulations, Title 26.
- 33 4. Delegation of authority orders are written for all the enforcement agents within the Internal Revenue Service 34 authorizing them to conduct enforcement actions.
- 35 5. The enforcement agents must be designated as enforcement agents by receiving a black enforcement Pocket
 36 Commission and being specially trained and commissioned as "public trust" employees.

37 Unless and until all of the above have occurred, the Internal Revenue Code, according to 1 U.S.C. §204 cannot be 38 described as "law" and can only be described as "prima facie evidence of law", which is simply "presumptive"
 39 evidence of law. That means that it may be rebutted. Since "presumption" causes prejudice and prejudice is 40 anathema to any legal proceeding and violates due process of law, then the Internal Revenue Code is not admissible
 41 as evidence of "law", which means that it does not furnish any evidence that the people ever consented to its 42 enforcement against them. Consequently, it is unenforceable. Until it becomes "positive law", it can only be 43 described as a "code", or a "statute", but not as "law".

44 pseudotaxes — a term identifying revenues to the U.S. government derived from Subtitles A and C of the Internal Revenue
 45 Code and collected from nonresident aliens who are not in fact and indeed: 1. Engaged in the excise taxable activity
 46 called a "trade or business", which is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(26) as "the functions of a public office"; 2.
 47 Have no income from the District of Columbia; 3. Do not have a domicile in the District of Columbia. For everyone
 48 meeting this criteria, the revenues collected under the authority of I.R.C. Subtitles A and C are not "taxes" as legally
 49 defined, but an unconstitutional abuse of federal taxing power. Public servants in the government love to call such 50 revenues "taxes" in order to deceive the people and lend undeserved dignity to the THEFT that enforcing such as 51 system against improper parties amounts to. This is covered in Great IRS Hoax sections 5.1.2 earlier.

resident: under the Internal Revenue Code, an “alien” who is domiciled within either the District of Columbia or the territories of the United States. This “individual” has a “res” that is “identified” within federal jurisdiction, which is limited under the Internal Revenue Code to the District of Columbia and territories or possessions of the United States identified in Title 48 of the U.S. Code. Federal territories are generally identified with the term “State” in the U.S. Code, while states of the Union are identified with a lower case “state” in the U.S. Code and are treated as “foreign states”. “Residents” live exclusively in federal “States” but not in “states” of the Union and therefore are not protected by the Bill of Rights within the Constitution as per Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U.S. 244 (1901). Pursuant to 26 C.F.R. §1.1441(c)(3)(i), an alien can be neither a “citizen” nor a “national” of the United States. The terms “alien”, “resident”, and “resident alien” are all synonymous in the Internal Revenue Code, as confirmed by 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1(a)(2)(ii) and 26 C.F.R. §1.1441-1(c)(3). “citizens of the United States” under 8 U.S.C. §1401 cannot legally be classified as “residents” under the Internal Revenue Code and are not authorized by the code to “elect” to be treated as one either. The reason is because the purpose of law is to protect, and a person cannot elect to lose their constitutional rights and protection, even if they want to! However, by filing an IRS form 1040 or 1040A, they in effect make this illegal election anyway, and the IRS looks the other way and does not prosecute such unintentional fraud because they benefit financially from it. The only way to avoid this election is to instead either file nothing or to file a 1040NR form instead of a 1040 or 1040A form. The rules for electing to be treated as a resident are found in IRS Publication 54: Tax Guide for U.S. Citizens and Resident Aliens Abroad. See Great IRS Hoax, Form #11.302, Section 4.10 for further definition of this term and the following sections for amplification: 5.5.3, 5.5.4, and 5.4.8.

special law: “One relating to particular persons or things; one made for individual cases or for particular places or districts; one operating upon a selected class, rather than upon the public generally. A private law. A law is “special” when it is different from others of the same general kind or designed for a particular purpose, or limited in range or confined to a prescribed field of action or operation. A “special law” relates to either particular persons, places, or things or to persons, places, or things which, though not particularized, are separated by any method of selection from the whole class to which the law might, but not such legislation, be applied. Utah Farm Bureau Ins. Co. v. Utah Ins. Guaranty Ass’n, Utah, 564 P.2d. 751, 754. A special law applies only to an individual or a number of individuals out of a single class similarly situated and affected, or to a special locality. Board of County Comm’rs of Lemhi County v. Swensen, Idaho, 80 Idaho 198, 327 P.2d. 361, 362. See also Private bill; Private law. Compare General law; Public Law.”
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1398]

The Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C., Subtitle A, Income Taxes, for instance, is special law that applies ONLY to the District of Columbia and federal territories over which the United States government exercises exclusive legislative jurisdiction, but not including nonfederal areas within the borders of the several states. The U.S. Government, however, has done a fine job making the tax code LOOK like it is general law. Most Congressmen know this, of course, and if you write them to ask if the I.R.C. is special law, they have been known to try to avoid answering or have given weasel-worded answers. See <http://www.supremelaw.org> and the case of People v. Boxer for more details on an example of this.

source of income: “Place where, or circumstances from which, income at issue is produced. Union Electric Co. v. Coale, 347 Mo. 175, 146 S.W.2d. 631, 635.” [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, page 1395]

State: in the context of federal statutes, federal court rulings, and this book means a federal State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Northern Marina Islands, and includes areas within the external boundaries of a state owned by or ceded to the United States of America. Federal “States” are defined in 4 U.S.C. §110(d) and 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(10). In the context of the U.S. Constitution only, “State” means a sovereign “state” as indicated below. The reason the constitution is different is because of who wrote it. The states wrote it so they are capitalized. Federal statutes are not written by the sovereign states so they use the lower case “state” to describe the sovereign 50 states, which are foreign and outside the territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. government.

“It is to be noted that the statute differentiates between States of the United States and foreign states by the use of a capital S for the word when applied to a State of the United States”
[Eisenberg v. Commercial Union Assurance Company, 189 F.Supp. 500 (1960)]

1 state: in the context of federal statutes, federal court rulings, and this book means a sovereign state of the Union of America
 2 under the Constitution for the United States of America 1789-1791. In the context of the U.S. Constitution only,
 3 “State” means a sovereign “state” as defined here. Below is a further clarification of the meaning of “states” as
 4 defined by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of O’Donoghue v. United States, 289 U.S. 516 (1933), where they
 5 define what is not a “state”:

6 After an exhaustive review of the prior decisions of this court relating to the matter, the following propositions,
 7 among others, were stated as being established:

8 '1. That the District of Columbia and the territories are not states within the judicial clause of the Constitution
 9 giving jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different states;

10 '2. That territories are not states within the meaning of Rev. St. 709, permitting writs of error from this court in 11 cases where the validity of a state statute is drawn in question;

12 '3. That the District of Columbia and the territories are states as that word is used in treaties with foreign 13 powers, with respect to the ownership, disposition, and inheritance of property;

14 '4. That the territories are not within the clause of the Constitution providing for the creation of a supreme court
 15 and such inferior courts as Congress may see fit to establish.'

16 Below is a summary of the meanings of “state” and “State” in the context of both federal and state laws:

18 So what the above table clearly shows is that the word “State” in the context of federal statutes and regulations
 19 means (not includes!) federal States only under Title 48 of the U.S. Code<sup>4</sup>, and these areas do not include any of 20 the 50 Union States. The word “state” in the context of federal statutes and regulations means one of the 50 union 21 states, which are “foreign sovereigns”, “foreign states”, and “foreign countries” with respect to the federal
 22 government as clearly explained later in section 5.2.11 of this book. In the context of the above, a “Union State”
 23 means one of the 50 states of the United States* (the country, not the federal United States**).

State Citizen/National: A biological person who was born in the country United States and who is treated as a citizen of every state of the Union under Article IV, Section 2, Clause 1 of the United States Constitution. This person owes allegiance to his state and obedience to its laws. In exchange for this allegiance, he is entitled to demand protection from the government and the laws and that state. A person need not

State national: A biological person who was born in any state of the Union and who is treated as a citizen of every state of the Union under Article IV, Section 2, Clause 1 of the United States Constitution. This person owes allegiance to his state and obedience to its laws. In exchange for this allegiance, he is entitled to demand protection from the government and the laws and that state. He is also treated as a “national of the United States” or a “non-citizen U.S. national”. “State nationals” are defined in 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(21), 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(B), 8 U.S.C. §1452, 8 U.S.C. §1408(2), and are indirectly referenced under The Law of Nations, Book I, Section 215.

Tax: A charge by the government on the income of an individual, corporation, or trust, as well as the value of an estate or gift. The objective in assessing the tax is to generate revenue to be used for the needs of the public.

A pecuniary [relating to money] burden laid upon individuals or property to support the government, and is a payment exacted by legislative authority. In re Mytinger, D.C.Tex., 31 F.Supp. 977,978, 979. Essential characteristics of a tax are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, exacted pursuant to legislative authority. Michigan Employment Sec. Commission v. Patt, 4 Mich.App. 228, 144 N.W.2d. 663, 665. Annual compensation paid to government for annual protection and for current support of government. Alabama Power Co. v. Federal Power Commission, C.C.A.5, 134 F.2d. 602, 608. A ratable portion of the produce of the property and labor of the individual citizens, taken by the nation, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, for the support of government, for the administration of the laws, and as the means of continuing in operation the various legitimate functions of the state. An enforced contribution of money or other property, assessed in accordance with some reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of a sovereign state on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purposes of defraying the public expenses.

*In a general sense, any contribution imposed by government upon individuals, for the use and service of the state, whether under the name of toll, tribute, tallage, gabel, impost, duty, custom, excise, subsidy, aid, supply, or other name. And in its essential characteristics is not a debt. City of Neward v. Jos. Hollander, Inc., 136 N.J.Eq. 539, 42 A.2d. 872, 875.
[Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1457]*

“taxes”, as legally defined, are a mandatory payment to the government exacted by operation of law which is not voluntary and which support only the government. If the monies paid can be used for wealth transfer or supporting private persons or organizations, then they do not qualify as “taxes”, according to the U.S. Supreme Court

To lay, with one hand, the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Nor is it taxation. ‘A tax,’ says Webster’s Dictionary, ‘is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by government for the use of the nation or State.’ ‘Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the Legislature upon persons or property to raise money for public purposes.’ Cooley, Const. Lim., 479.

*Coulter, J., in Northern Liberties v. St. John’s Church, 13 Pa.St., 104 says, very forcibly, ‘I think the common mind has everywhere taken in the understanding that taxes are a public imposition, levied by authority of the government for the purposes of carrying on the government in all its machinery and operations—that they are imposed for a public purpose.’ See, also Pray v. Northern Liberties, 31 Pa.St., 69; Matter of Mayor of N.Y., 11 Johns., 77; Camden v. Allen, 2 Dutch., 398; Sharpless v. Mayor, supra; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Ia., 47; Whiting v. Fond du Lac, supra.”
[Loan Association v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655 (1874)]*

“Taxes” which are paid voluntarily and/or which are spent on wealth transfer or to support private purposes are referred to as “donations”, and when their payment is enforced, they are called “extortion”.

Tax Class: A one digit number indicating the type of tax that a tax falls under. This number appears in the Individual Master File (IMF) maintained by the taxpayer. This number or digit is the third digit of the DLN, or Document Locator Number, assigned to each document that is entered in an Individual Master File. The Tax Class codes are as follows:

- 0 = IRAF
- 1 = Withholding and Social Security
- 2 = Individual Income Tax
- 3 = Corporate Income Tax
- 4 = Excise Tax
- 5 = Estate and Gift Tax
- 7 = CT-1
- 8 = FUTA

This number appears throughout the IRS' IMF file maintained on each individual, and it is also associated with specific forms of the Internal Revenue Service. Use of this code within the individual's IMF is described in IRS Publication 6209. Section 2 of Publication 6209 describes the association of specific IRS forms with Tax Class codes. You can order a copy of IRS Pub. 6209 from Freedom Law School at <http://www.livefreenow.com/>. Interestingly, NOWHERE in Publication 6209 are the simple Tax Class codes defined, even though they are used extensively in that document, and furthermore, at the bottom of every page, it says "FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY". This is double speak that really says the IRS doesn't want this book getting into the hands of tax freedom fighters, which is why they keep the "secret decoder ring" (the Tax Class Codes) separated from the code listing and in other innocuous publications no one seems to be able to get ahold of!

Below is a summary of the Tax Class codes for specific forms, derived directly from Section 2 of IRS Publication 6209. It ought to be clear examining the codes below that your employment tax authorized by the W-4 form is actually a gift or estate tax, and NOT an income tax, because it uses Tax Class 5!

Taxpayer: The term "taxpayer" means any person who is either liable to pay an any internal revenue tax or who isn't liable but "volunteers" to pay anyway. Read section 3.6.1.15 for further explanation.

United States:

"This term has several meanings. It may be merely the name of a sovereign occupying the position analogous to that of other sovereigns in family of nations, it may designate territory over which sovereignty of the United States extends, or it may be collective name of the states which are united by and under the Constitution. Hooven & Allison Co. v. Evatt, U.S. v. Ohio, 324 U.S. 652, 65 S.Ct. 870, 880, 89 L.Ed. 1252."
[Black's Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1533]

The term was conveniently removed from Black's Law Dictionary Seventh Edition by a legal profession that wants to hide the truth and sell you into slavery to the U.S. government by unlawfully extending the jurisdiction for

TITLE 26--INTERNAL REVENUE

CHAPTER I--INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

Sec. 1.911-2 Qualified individuals.

(g) United States. The term "United States" when used in a geographical sense includes any territory under the sovereignty of the United States. It includes the states, the District of Columbia, the possessions and territories of the United States, the territorial waters of the United States, the air space over the United States, and the seabed and subsoil of those submarine areas which are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources.

U.S. citizen: defined in 26 C.F.R. §1.1-1, 8 U.S.C. §1101(a)(22)(A), and 8 U.S.C. §1401. In the context of federal statutes:

Means a person born or naturalized in the federal United States (federal zone) and a subject citizen of Congress.

Typically, the U.S. government allows "U.S. nationals", who are persons born outside the federal zone and inside

1 the 50 states to declare that they are “U.S. citizens” so that they can volunteer to become completely subject to the 2 jurisdiction of the federal courts and become the proper subjects of the Internal Revenue Code, but technically,
3 they are not “U.S. citizens” as legally defined within nearly all federal legislation and statutes. “U.S. citizens” are
4 possessors of statutory ‘civil’ rights and privileges granted by Congress and stipulated by statute, code or regulation,
5 found mostly in 48 U.S.C. §1421b.

6 U.S. person: this term is defined in 26 U.S.C. §7701(a)(30) as follows:

7 TITLE 26 > Subtitle F > CHAPTER 79 > Sec. 7701.
8 Sec. 7701. - Definitions

9 (a)(30) United States person

10 The term "United States person" means -

11 (A) a citizen or resident of the United States,

12 (B) a domestic partnership,

13 (C) a domestic corporation,

14 (D) any estate (other than a foreign estate, within the meaning of paragraph (31)), and

15 (E) any trust if -

16 (i) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the trust,
17 and

18 (ii) one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of the trust.

19 voluntary:

20 “Unconstrained by interference; unimpelled by another’s influence; spontaneous; acting of oneself. Coker v.
21 State, 199 Ga. 20, 33 S.E.2d. 171, 174. Done by design or intention. Proceeding from the free and unrestrained
22 will of the person. Produced in or by an act of choice. Resulting from free choice, without compulsion or 23 solicitation. The word, especially in statutes, often implies knowledge of essential facts. Without valuable
24 consideration; gratuitous, as a voluntary conveyance. Also, having a merely nominal consideration; as, a voluntary 25 deed.”

26 [Black’s Law Dictionary, Sixth Edition, p. 1575]

27 voluntary compliance: An oxymoron meant to confuse taxpayers. Voluntary implies that it is not compelled and that there
28 is no punishment for not doing it. They add the word compliance as a way to confuse the citizens into thinking
29 that they have to do it and will be punished for not doing it. However, when used in the context of income taxes,
30 what it means is that you don't have to comply and don't have to volunteer to pay income taxes.
31
